Their churches look most impressive, not only because they're so beautifully built, but also because of their size. You see, as there are so few of them, they have to be capable of holding vast numbers of people. However, they're all rather dark, which is not, I'm told, a mistake on the part of the architects, but a matter of policy. The priests think that too much light tends to distract one's attention, whereas a sort of twilight helps one to collect one's thoughts, and intensifies religious feeling. Now this doesn't take the same form with everyone, though all its varieties lead by different routes, as it were, to the same destination: the worship of the Divine Being. For that reason, there's nothing to be seen or heard in their churches which can't equally well be applied to all religions. Any ceremonies which are peculiar to individual sects are performed privately at home, and public services are so arranged as not to detract in any way from these private ones.

On the same principle, their churches contain no visual representations of God, so that everyone's left free to imagine Him in whatever shape he chooses, according to which religion he thinks the best. Nor is God addressed by any special names there. He is simply called Mythras, a general term used by everybody to designate the Supreme Being, whoever He may be. Similarly, no prayers are said in which each member of the congregation cannot join without prejudice to his own particular creed.

At Ending Feasts they fast all day, and go to church in the evening, to thank God for bringing them safely to the end of the year or month in question. Next day, which is of course a Beginning Feast, they meet at church in the morning to pray for happiness and prosperity during the year or month which has just begun. But before going to church at an Ending Feast, wives kneel down at home before their husbands, and children before their parents, to confess all their sins of omission and commission, and ask to be forgiven. This gets rid of any little grudges that may have clouded the domestic atmosphere, so that everyone can attend divine service with an absolutely clear mind. To do so when one is feeling upset is thought positively blasphemous. For that reason, anyone who's conscious of feeling anger or resentment towards another person stays away from church until he's made it up, and purged himself of these unpleasant emotions, for fear of being promptly and severely punished otherwise.

As they enter the church, the men turn to the right and the women to the left, and the seating is so arranged that the males of each household are in front of the house-father, and the house-mother acts as a rearguard for the females. This ensures that everyone's conduct in public is watched by those who are responsible for his discipline at home. Here too they take great care to see that a young person always sits next to an older one—for if children are left to themselves they're apt to waste their time in church playing childish games, when they ought above all to be developing a sense of religious awe, the strongest, if not the only incentive to good behaviour.

They never sacrifice any animals, for they can't imagine a merciful God enjoying slaughter and bloodshed. They say God gave His creatures life, because He wanted them to live. But they do make certain burnt offerings—of incense and other aromatic substances, and of innumerable candles. Of course they realize that such things are no use to the Divine Being, but they see no harm in them as a form of tribute, and feel that these scents and lights and other elements of ritual somehow raise people's thoughts, and make them more eager to worship God.

The congregation is dressed in white, and the priest wears multi-coloured vestments, magnificent in workmanship and design, but made of quite cheap materials—for instead of being woven with gold thread, or encrusted with rare jewels, they're merely decorated with the feathers of various birds. On the other hand, their value as works of art is far greater than that of the richest material in the world. Besides, the feathers are arranged in special patterns which are said to symbolize certain divine truths, and the priests are careful to teach the meaning of these hieroglyphics, since they serve to remind worshippers of God's favours towards them, of their duty towards Him in return, and of their duty towards one another.

The moment the priest appears from the sanctuary wearing these vestments, everyone bows down to the ground in reverence, and there is deep silence throughout the building. The effect is so awe-inspiring that one almost seems to feel a divine presence. After a few minutes the priest gives a sign for the congregation to stand up. Then they sing hymns of praise to God, accompanied by musical instruments, which are generally quite different from anything to be seen in our part of the world. Most of these have a much sweeter tone than ours, though some of them simply won't bear comparison with European instruments. But in one respect they're undoubtedly far ahead of us. All their music, both vocal and instrumental, is wonderfully expressive of natural feelings. The sound is so well adapted to the sense that whether the theme is prayer or rejoicing, agitation or calm, sorrow or anger, the melodic line exactly represents the appropriate emotion. It therefore enters deeply into the hearer's consciousness, and has an extraordinarily stimulating effect.

The service ends with a set form of prayer repeated by both priests and congregation. It's worded in such a way that, while they're all saying it together, each person can apply it to himself. It goes something like this:

O God, I acknowledge Thee to be my creator, my governor, and the source of all good things. I thank Thee for all Thy blessings, but especially for letting me live in the happiest possible society, and practise what I hope is the truest religion. If I am wrong, and if some other religion or social system would be better and more acceptable to Thee, I pray Thee in Thy goodness to let me know it, for I am ready to follow wherever Thou shalt lead me. But if our system is indeed the best, and my religion the truest, then keep me faithful to both of them, and bring the rest of humanity to adopt the same way of life, and the same religious faith—unless the present variety of creeds is part of Thy inscrutable purpose. Grant me an easy death, when Thou takest me to Thyself. I do not presume to suggest whether it should be late or soon. But if it is Thy will, I would much rather come to Thee by a most painful death, than be kept too long away from Thee by the most pleasant of earthly lives.

After saying this prayer, they again bow down to the ground for a few moments, and then get up and go off to lunch. The rest of the day is spent in recreation and military training.

Well, that's the most accurate account I can give you of the Utopian Republic. To my mind, it's not only the best country in the world, but the only one that has any right to call itself a republic. Elsewhere, people are always talking about the public interest, but all they really care about is private property. In Utopia, where there's no private property, people take their duty to the public seriously. And both attitudes are perfectly reasonable.

In other 'republics' practically everyone knows that, if he doesn't look out for himself, he'll starve to death, however prosperous his country may be. He's therefore compelled to give his own interests priority over those of the public; that is, of other people. But in Utopia, where everything's under public ownership, no one has any fear of going short, as long as the public storehouses are full. Everyone gets a fair share, so there are never any poor men or beggars. Nobody owns anything, but everyone is rich—for what greater wealth can there be than cheerfulness, peace of mind, and freedom from anxiety? Instead of being worried about his food supply, upset by the plaintive demands of his wife, afraid of poverty for his son, and baffled by the problem of finding a dowry for his daughter, the Utopian can feel absolutely sure that he, his wife, his children, his grand-children, his great-grandchildren, his great-great-grandchildren, and as long a line of descendants as the proudest peer could wish to look forward to, will always have enough to eat and enough to make them happy. There's also the further point that those who are too old to work are just as well provided for as those who are still working.

Now, will anyone venture to compare these fair arrangements in Utopia with the so-called justice of other countries?—in which I'm damned if I can see the slightest trace of justice or fairness. For what sort of justice do you call this? People like aristocrats, goldsmiths, or money-lenders, who either do no work at all, or do work that's really not essential, are rewarded for their laziness or their unnecessary activities by a splendid life of luxury. But labourers, coachmen, carpenters, and farmhands, who never stop working like cart-horses, at jobs so essential that, if they did stop working, they'd bring any country to a standstill within twelve months—what happens to them? They get so little to eat, and have such a wretched time, that they'd be almost better off if they were cart-horses. Then, at least, they wouldn't work quite such long hours, their food wouldn't be very much worse, they'd enjoy it more, and they'd have no fears for the future. As it is, they're not only ground down by unrewarding toil in the present, but also worried to death by the prospect of a poverty-stricken old age—since their daily wages aren't enough to support them for one day, let alone leave anything over to be saved up for when they're old.

Can you see any fairness or gratitude in a social system which lavishes such great rewards on so-called noblemen, goldsmiths, and people like that, who are either totally unproductive or merely employed in producing luxury goods or entertainment, but makes no such kind provision for farm-hands, coal-heavers, labourers, carters, or carpenters, without whom society couldn't exist at all? And the climax of ingratitude comes when they're old and ill and completely destitute. Having taken advantage of them throughout the best years of their lives, society now forgets all the sleepless hours they've spent in its service, and repays them for all the vital work they've done, by letting them die in misery. What's more, the wretched earnings of the poor are daily whittled away by the rich, not only through private dishonesty, but through public legislation. As if it weren't unjust enough already that the man who contributes most to society should get the least in return, they make it even worse, and then arrange for injustice to be legally described as justice.

In fact, when I consider any social system that prevails in the modern world, I can't, so help me God, see it as anything but a conspiracy of the rich to advance their own interests under the pretext of organizing society. They think up all sorts of tricks and dodges, first for keeping safe their ill-gotten gains, and then for exploiting the poor by buying their labour as cheaply as possible. Once the rich have decided that these tricks and dodges shall be officially recognized by society—which includes the poor as well as the rich—they acquire the force of law. Thus an unscrupulous minority is led by its insatiable greed to monopolize what would have been enough to supply the needs of the whole population. And yet how much happier even these people would be in Utopia! There, with the simultaneous abolition of money and the passion for money, how many other social problems have been solved, how many crimes eradicated! For obviously the end of money means the end of all those types of criminal behaviour which daily punishments are powerless to check: fraud, theft, burglary, brawls, riots, disputes, rebellion, murder, treason, and black magic. And the moment money goes, you can also say good-bye to fear, tension, anxiety, overwork, and sleepless nights. Why, even poverty itself, the one problem that has always seemed to need money for its solution, would promptly disappear if money ceased to exist.

Let me try to make this point clearer. Just think back to one of the years when the harvest was bad, and thousands of people died of starvation. Well, I bet if you'd inspected every rich man's barn at the end of that lean period you'd have found enough corn to have saved all the lives that were lost through malnutrition and disease, and prevented anyone from suffering any ill effects whatever from the meanness of the weather and the soil. Everyone could so easily get enough to eat, if it weren't for that blessed nuisance, money. There you have a brilliant invention which was designed to make food more readily available. Actually it's the only thing that makes it unobtainable.

I'm sure that even the rich are well aware of all this, and realize how much better it would be to have everything one needed, than lots of things one didn't need—to be evacuated altogether from the danger area, than to dig oneself in behind a barricade of enormous wealth. And I've no doubt that either self-interest, or the authority of our Saviour Christ—Who was far too wise not to know what was best for us, and far too kind to recommend anything else—would have led the whole world to adopt the Utopian system long ago, if it weren't for that beastly root of all evils, pride. For pride's criterion of prosperity is not what you've got yourself, but what other people haven't got. Pride would refuse to set foot in paradise, if she thought there'd be no under-privileged classes there to gloat over and order about—nobody whose misery could serve as a foil to her own happiness, or whose poverty she could make harder to bear, by flaunting her own riches. Pride, like a hellish serpent gliding through human hearts—or, shall we say, like a sucking-fish that clings to the ship of state?—is always dragging us back, and obstructing our progress towards a better way of life.

But as this fault is too deeply ingrained in human nature to be easily eradicated, I'm glad that at least one country has managed to develop a system which I'd like to see universally adopted. The Utopian way of life provides not only the happiest basis for a civilized community, but also one which, in all human probability, will last for ever. They've eliminated the root-causes of ambition, political conflict, and everything like that. There's therefore no danger of internal dissension, the one thing that has destroyed so many impregnable towns. And as long as there's unity and sound administration at home, no matter how envious neighbouring kings may feel, they'll never be able to shake, let alone to shatter, the power of Utopia. They've tried to do so often enough in the past, but have always been beaten back.

While Raphael was telling us all this, I kept thinking of various objections. The laws and customs of that country seemed to me in many cases perfectly ridiculous. Quite apart from such things as their military tactics, religions, and forms of worship, there was the grand absurdity on which their whole society was based, communism minus money. Now this in itself would mean the end of the aristocracy, and consequently of all dignity, splendour, and majesty, which are generally supposed to be the real glories of any nation.

However, I could see that he was tired after talking so much, and I was not quite sure how tolerant he would be of any opinion that contradicted his own—especially when I remembered his sarcastic reference to the sort of person who is afraid of looking a fool if he cannot pick holes in other people's ideas. So I just made some polite remarks about the Utopian system, and thanked him for his interesting talk—after which I took his arm and led him in to supper, saying:

'Well, I must think it over. Then perhaps we can meet again and discuss it at greater length.'

I certainly hope we shall, some day. In the meantime I cannot agree with everything that he said, for all his undoubted learning and experience. But I freely admit that there are many features of the Utopian Republic which I should like—though I hardly expect—to see adopted in Europe.

THE SOCIAL CONTRACT

社会契约论

［法］让－雅克·卢梭　著

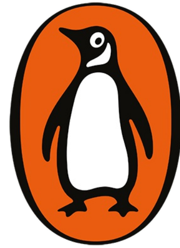
高黎平　译

中国出版集团
中译出版社

社会契约论

（法）让-雅克·卢梭/著

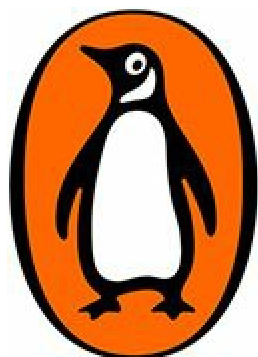
高黎平/译



企鹅图书 | PENGUIN BOOKS

UK | USA | Canada | Ireland | Australia
New Zealand | India | South Africa | North Asia

Penguin Books is part of the Penguin Random House group of companies whose addresses can be found at:
global.penguinrandomhouse.com.



www.penguin.com
Le Contrat Social first published 1762
This translation first published in Penguin Classics 1968
This edition published 2004

Taken from the Penguin Classics edition of The Social Contract, translated and edited by Maurice Cranston
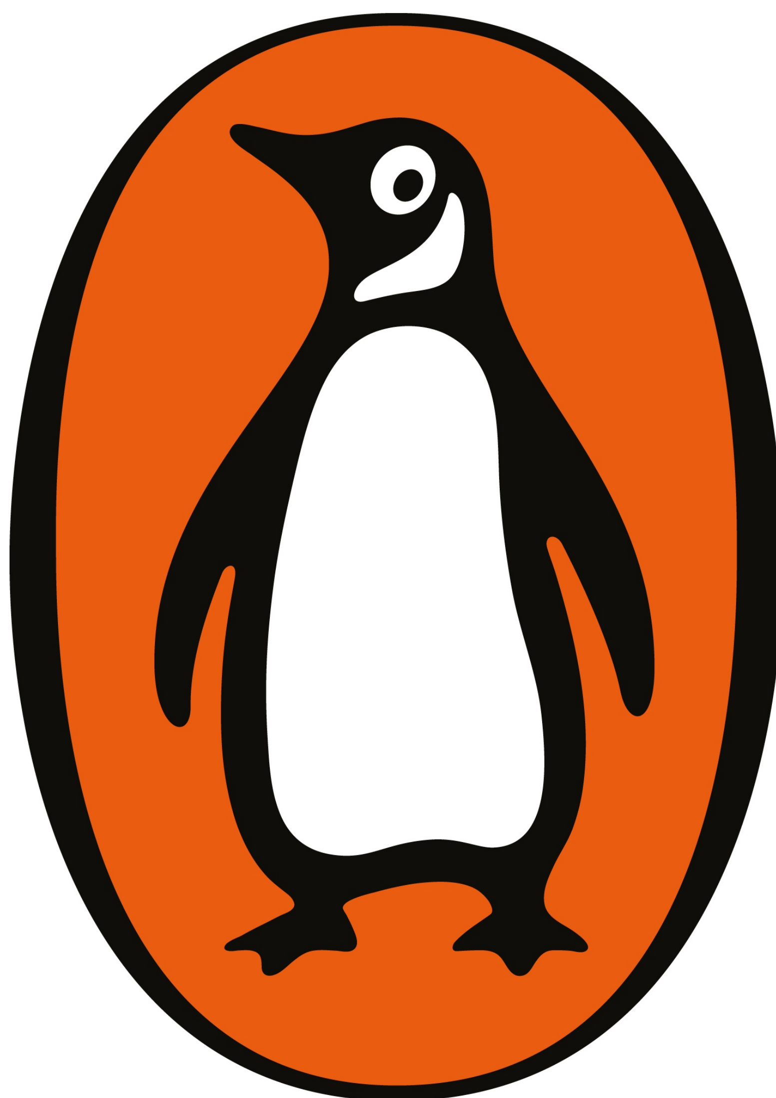
Set in Monotype Dante
Typeset by Rowland Phototypesetting Ltd, Bury St Edmunds, Suffolk

企鹅兰登电子书 | PENGUIN RANDOM HOUSE EBOOKS



目录

“伟大的思想”中文版序

企鹅“伟大的思想”系列丛书自2004年开始陆续面世，在英国、美国和德国均有出版。在英国出版品种最多，已付梓八十种，尚有二十种计划出版。该丛书在全球众多读者间，尤其是学生当中，普及了哲学和政治学，销量已远超二百万册。中文版“伟大的思想”的推出，是该系列的又一延续和发展，令人欢欣鼓舞。

推出这套丛书旨在让读者再次与一些伟大的非小说类经典著作面对面地交流。长久以来，此类书籍的出版都建立在这样一个假设之上——此类著作供学生课堂学习之用，因此需辅以导读、详尽的注释及参考书目等。此类版本无疑十分有用，但我想，如果某一版本能够重建托马斯·潘恩的《常识》或约翰·罗斯金的《艺术与人生》初版时的环境，为读者与作者营造更为亲密无间的氛围，使读者除了原作者及其自身的思考外没有其他参照，也许会更有吸引力。

但是，这一做法亦存在严重缺陷：每位作者的表述难免有难解或不可解之处，一些重要的背景知识或许也有所缺失。例如，读者对亨利·梭罗创作时的情形毫无头绪，也不了解该书的反响及影响。不过，这样做的优点也显而易见，最为显著的便是作者的初衷又一次受到重视——托马斯·潘恩的愤怒、查尔斯·达尔文的灵光、塞内加的隐逸。他们给许多国家的众多读者带来的生活影响难以估量，有的影响甚至长达几个世纪，几乎没有什么比阅读这些作家更令人拍案叫绝的了。倘若没有亚当·斯密或阿图尔·叔本华，将无法想象我们今天的世界。这些小书创作年代久远，但其中的话语彻底改变了我们的政治学、经济学、精神世界、社会规划和宗教信仰。

“伟大的思想”系列一直求新求变，地域不同，收录的作家亦不同。一些作家在中国或美国更受欢迎，而英国版“伟大的思想”收录的一些作家在其他国家和地区则鲜有人知。称其为“伟大的思想”，我们亦是慎之又慎。这些思想之所以伟大，在于其影响深远，但这并不意味着这些思想都是“好”思想，实际上一些书或可列入“坏”思想之列。丛书中收录的很多作家受到同样收录于该丛书的其他作家的巨大影响，例如，马塞尔·普鲁斯特承认受约翰·罗斯金影响很大，米歇尔·德·蒙田也承认深受塞内加影响。但也有些作家彼此憎恶，若发现彼此都被收录于同一丛书，一定会深感苦恼。至于他们思想的或“好”或“坏”，读者可自行判明。我们衷心希望，您可以享受阅读这些著作的乐趣。

“伟大的思想”出版者

西蒙·温德尔

导读

让-雅克·卢梭（Jean-Jacques Rousseau，1712—1778），法国著名的思想家、哲学家、政治家、教育家、文学家与音乐家，是欧洲启蒙运动的代表人物之一。卢梭出生于日内瓦一个清贫的家庭，自幼便多遭磨砺，不过爱好读书，涉猎广泛。三十岁时，卢梭移居巴黎，并相继结识了狄德罗（Denis Diderot，1713—1784）等“百科全书派”的代表人物，甚至应邀参与了《百科全书》的撰写工作。之后的两篇论文《论科学与艺术》和《论人类不平等的起源和基础》，使他在法国名声大噪，而《社会契约论》与《爱弥儿》的相继出版则更是把他推上了时代的风口浪尖。

卢梭是一个有着极其复杂性格的人，那种偏执、好斗、敏感、脆弱的性格要素使他渐渐成为一个不被大众认可的人，他甚至还深深得罪了曾经的好友们，如“百科全书派”一众人物与思想泰斗伏尔泰（Voltaire，1694—1778）等，同时，他“主权在民”的政治理念又与自然与法国当局的统治所不调和。所以在群起的声讨之中，卢梭开始了晚年颠沛流离、异常艰辛的流亡生涯，直到七十年代才被允许重回法国。1778年，时年六十六岁的卢梭在孤独与交困中走完了自己复杂的一生。法国大革命结束之后，卢梭被移葬先贤祠，这也是对他不凡成就的最高肯定。

卢梭完全称得上是一位“百科全书”式的人物。《社会契约论》的民权思想是“法国大革命”与“北美殖民地的独立运动”的奠基之石，《爱弥儿》中描绘的“性善论”教育系统在教育史上掀起了一场革命，猛烈讴歌爱情的小说《新爱洛伊斯》成为欧洲一时纸贵的文学读物，《忏悔录》开天辟地的自传式文体，他还为《百科全书》撰写音乐部分……

在卢梭生平活跃的十八世纪欧洲，“文艺复兴”运动种下的“人文主义”精神已然开花结果，中世纪神学彻底走下神坛，科学逐渐成为真理，人性的意义变得不言自明。在此基础上，以“理性”为基础概念的“启蒙运动”接连登场，社会上已更早地酝酿出一种“自由”与“平等”的氛围。法国，作为欧洲的中心，作为这股社会思潮的中心，更是人心思变、群情激昂，成为所有热爱自由的人心向往之的伟大国家。而卢梭亦是如此，自中年移居法国之后，不断探索、发现、升华，终于在1762年出版《社会契约论》这一部政治思想的集大成之作。

《社会契约论》是卢梭政治思想的代表作，处处体现着以社会契约精神为核心的民权思想，自问世以来即受到普罗大众的追捧，不仅点燃了之后轰轰烈烈的“法国大革命”之火，更鼓舞了世界各地人民对自由与民主的不懈追求，尤以北美殖民地独立运动为代表。书中首章首句“人生而自由，却无处不受枷锁的束缚”成为跨越时代的名言金句，一语道破契约社会的本质秩序。书中“主权在民”的思想为现代民主制度奠基。原作共四卷，第一卷论述了社会结构和社会契约，第二卷论述了主权及其权利，第三卷论述了政府及其运作方式，第四卷讨论了几种社会组织。“伟大的思想”系列收录《社会契约论》一书，希望读者能从中一窥卢梭伟大的政治思想。

“社会契约”的概念其实古已有之，而其中又以霍布斯（Thomas Hobbes，1588—1679）与洛克（John Locke，1632—1704）等两位英国政治家的理论为代表，不过卢梭的思想则与二位前辈不尽相同。卢梭认为人人生而自由平等，人们通过平等地放弃天然自由，转而获取平等的契约自由，这些订立的契约的集合便是国家的组成。人民才是国家的主人，而政府只是人民意志的执行者而已。当政府站在人民意志的对立面时，人民有权通过起义的方式推翻它。

如果说现代民权思想是一棵参天巨树，世人皆生活在其福荫之下，

那社会契约精神则是孕育这棵巨树的良土，由卢梭等先贤精心栽种，再经过世世代代无数先人的不懈奋斗与努力，血泪汗水的挥洒浇灌，终于茁壮而成，不容撼动。品读《社会契约论》，我们不仅能体会到缜密的思维方式，也能如临其境般置身于那段热血的岁月。民智如何走向开化，我们所处的现代契约社会从何处发端，又将去往何方，这一系列的问题，读者皆可从本书中找到满意的答案。

柴尔

第一卷

我写本文的意图是想思考，从人的现实情况与法律的可能情况来看，在政治社会中是否存在什么合法又可靠的政权法则。为探究这一目的，我必须始终努力将权利容许什么与利益规定什么结合起来，这样，正义与功利不致有所分歧。

我一开始并不试图证明主题的重要性。或许人们会问，我是一位君主还是一名立法者，从而要论述政治？我要回答：都不是。实际上，这正是我要讨论政治的理由。我若是一位君主或是一名立法者，就不应该在谈论本该做什么的问题上浪费时间，而应该当好我的君主或立法者，否则就保持沉默。

既然我生来是一个自由国家的公民，是主权国家的一员，无论我的呼声对公共事务的影响多么微弱，我所拥有的对公共事务的选举权赋予我研究它们的责任。无论何时，细想到各种政权，我就会欣喜地发现，我的研究总能给予我热爱自己国家政权的新理由。

第一章　第一卷的主题

人生而自由，却无处不受枷锁的束缚。那些自认为可以主宰他人的人，反而成为他人的奴隶。这种从主人到奴隶的角色转换是如何发生的呢？我不得而知。我们又如何能够使这种转换合法化呢？我相信我能够解答这个问题。

如果我只是考虑强权以及强权的种种后果，我会说：“只要一个人被迫顺从他人，并且顺从了，那么这个人做得对；但是，一旦他能够挣脱枷锁，并且挣脱了，那么他做得更对。既然一个人以与被剥夺自由一

样的权利重新获得自由，那么要么他有权寻回自由，要么当初人们无权剥夺他的自由。”然而，社会秩序是一种神圣的权利，是其他所有权利的基础。同时，由于它不是一种源于自然的权利，它必然建立在各种约定的基础之上。问题是要确定那些约定都是什么。可是，在切入这个问题之前，我必须对迄今为止我所谈的东西加以证实。

第二章　论原始社会

在所有社会中，最古老的、唯一自然的社会是家庭。然而，只有孩子们为了自身的生存需要父亲养育时，他们才倚赖于父亲。一旦没有了这种需要，父子关系就此了结。一旦孩子从对父亲的顺从中解脱出来，一旦父亲从对孩子的负担中解脱出来，双方都同样重获独立。假如他们继续保持父子关系，那么，这种情况就不再是一种自然的状态，而是他们自愿的选择，而家庭本身只是依靠契约得以维持。

这种共有的自由是人性的一种产物。人类的首要法则是维护自身的生存；人的首要关怀对象是自己。而人一旦到了具有理智的年龄，可以自行判断保存自我的最佳手段，那么他也就成了自己的主人。

因此，家庭或许可以被视为政治社会的原始模式：国家领袖是父亲的形象，人民就是孩子的形象，而所有生来自由平等的人，只有当他们在放弃自由中看到好处时，才会放弃其自由。唯一不同的是，在家庭中，父亲对孩子的爱从他给予他们的关心中得到回报，而在一个统治者对其臣民没有如此感情的国家里，统治者对发号施令的乐趣必然取代其对子民的爱。

格劳秀斯引用奴隶制度的例子并否认，一切人类政府都是为了被统治者的利益而建立的。他另具一格的推理方法总是为建立人权提供佐证。人们还可以采取另一种更能自圆其说的方法，但也不见得对暴君就更为有利。

因而，按格劳秀斯的说法，究竟是人类属于一百个人，还是这一百个人附属于人类，这是难以预测的，尽管在整本书中他似乎更倾向于前一种见解，而这也正是霍布斯的看法。这些作者向我们表明，人类就像被分成各种类别的牛群，每一支牛群都有一个首领，首领保护牛群只是因为想吃掉它们。

正如牧羊人的品性优于羊群的品性一样，那些人类的牧羊人——他们的统治者——的品性也优于人民的品性。据菲洛记载，卡里古拉皇帝就是这样类推的，并得出这样的结论：国王都是神明，或者说，人民都是畜牲。

卡里古拉的推理与霍布斯及格劳秀斯的推理相吻合。的确，亚里士多德在他们之前就曾说过，既然一些人生来是奴隶，而一些人生来是主人，那么，人根本不是生而平等的。

亚里士多德是对的，可他把结果误认为原因。任何在奴隶制下出生的人都为奴隶制而生——这话说得再贴切不过了。枷锁之下的奴隶失去了一切，甚至也失去了摆脱枷锁的渴望。他们热衷于被奴役，就像尤利西斯的伙伴们热衷于禽兽一般的生活一样。[1]因此，如果说有天生的奴隶，那只是因为世上早已有违背天性的奴隶。强权造就了第一批奴隶，而他们的懦弱使他们永世为奴。

我不曾谈论过亚当王或挪亚皇，也就是瓜分世界的三大君主之父，尽管有人以为在他们身上也能看出像萨士林儿子那样的行为。我希望读者会对这种谦逊的态度心存感激，因为既然我是那些或许排行老大的君主之一的直系，或许还是长房的后代，谁知如果考证起族谱来，我就不会发现自己是全人类合法的国王呢？不管怎样，没有人能否认亚当是世界之王，就像鲁滨逊是荒岛的主人一样——因为他是岛上唯一的居民。而这样一个帝国的巨大优势在于，君主能安享王位宝座，没有必要担心叛乱、战争或阴谋篡权。

第三章　论最强者的权利

最强者决非强大到足以自始至终做主人，除非他能将强力转化为权利，将顺从转化为义务。由此就得出了"最强者的权利"，这种权利听起来有些嘲讽，实际上已作为一种原则确定下来。但是，我们不需要让人解释一下这个名词吗？强力不过是一种物理力量，我不明白，强力的影响能够产生什么样的道德。屈服于强力是一种必要的行为，而不是一种意志的行为，它充其量只是一种谨慎的行为。在何种意义上它才算是一种义务呢？

我们不妨假设，这种所谓的权利是存在的。我认为，这种权利只能招致无法解释的混乱，因为一旦强力变成权利，因果关系便会倒置，而每一种强力都能征服另一种强力，那么前者继承了属于被征服者的权利。要是人们不服从却又不会受到惩罚，其不服从的行为就变得合法了。既然最强者始终是对的，那么唯一的问题就是如何成为最强者。可是，这种随强力的终止而消失的权利，又是怎样一种权利呢？假设强力驱使人们服从，那就没有必要根据义务而服从了，而假设强力不驱使人们服从，他们也就不再有服从的义务了。因而，"权利"一词并没有给强力增添什么东西；它在此毫无意义。

服从权力。如果这意味着屈服于强力的话，这条箴言虽好，却属多余；我想它绝不会遭到违背。我承认一切权力都来自上帝；可一切疾病也是上帝的旨意。那就意味着我们不能请医生看病吗？如果我在森林边上被一个强盗抢劫的话，强盗的勒索迫使我交出钱包。可假如我能以某种方式设法保住钱包而不让强盗抢走，那我从良心上依然得被迫交出钱包吧？毕竟，强盗手中的手枪无疑也是一种权力。

那么，确实必须承认的是，强力并不构成权利，而人们对合法的权力才有服从的义务。因而，仍然要回到我初始的问题上来。

第四章　论奴隶制

既然没人对自己的伙伴行使什么自然的权力，既然强力独自不赋予人们什么权利，人们当中的一切合法权力必然要建立在约定的基础上。

格劳秀斯说过："如果一个个体能转让其自由而成为主人的奴隶，那么整个民族为什么就不能转让其自由而成为国王的随从呢？"在这一评论中，有不少模棱两可的词需要加以解释。可就将我们自己的目光限制在"转让"这个问题上吧。转让是给予或出卖的意思。一个成为别人奴隶的人并没有给予自己什么，他出卖自己至少是为了个人的生存。那么，整个民族出卖自己又为了什么呢？国王远不能供养他的臣民，反而只能从臣民那里获得他自身的生活供养。按照拉伯雷的说法，要供养国王付出的不是一星半点。那么，臣民就应该为君主而献身，同时以国王接受其财产为条件吗？假设是这样，我就看不出他们还剩什么了。

有人会说，专制者向他的臣民保证国内安宁。这很好，可如果他的野心所引起的战争、他的难以餍足的贪求、他统治下的恶毒与羞辱，这一切对人们的迫害更有甚于人们内部的纠纷的话，那么人们从这里又得到什么呢？如果这份安宁对人民而言是一种苦难，人们在这里又得到什么呢？在地牢中会有安宁，可是那样的安宁足以使人们感到舒适吗？希腊人虽在独眼巨人的魔窟里安宁而居，可他们正等着被吃掉。

说一个人只讲奉献而不求任何回报，这是荒唐可笑、不可思议的。只因为如此行事的人都不理智，这样的行为便不合法理、毫无价值。说整个民族有过同样的行为，就等于幻想出一个疯癫之国，而疯癫是不能形成权利的。

纵然每个人能够转让自己，他也无法转让其孩子，因为他们生来是人，是自由的。他们的自由属于他们。除了他们自己，没人有权剥夺他们的自由。在他们到了具有理智的年龄之前，他们的父亲可以以他们的

名义，为了保护他们及其幸福而制定某些规则，可是却不能彻底无条件地出卖他们的自由，因为这种天赋权利总是与自然目标相矛盾的，它超出了父权的范围。因此，唯有在每一新生代能够接受或拒绝的情况下，专制的政府才是合法的，在这种情况下，这样的政府才不会专制。

放弃自由等于放弃作为人的特性——人的权利甚至是义务。对于放弃一切的人是无法给予补偿的。实际上，这种放弃与人性相悖，因为如果你剥夺了意志的一切自由，你就使一个人的行为失去一切道德上的意义。最终，任何规定一方绝对权威、规定另一方绝对服从的约定，都是无效且自相矛盾的。有权请求一切的人并不承担任何义务，这不是很明白的吗？难道这种既不等价又无交换的唯一条件，其本身不就包含着这种行为的无效性吗？我的奴隶有什么权利来反对我？假设他所拥有的一切都属于我，他的权利就是我的权利，那么，自己反对自己的权利，简直就是一派胡言。

格劳秀斯和其他人声称，他们从战争中引出了这种所谓的奴役权的另一个起源。他们认为，胜利者拥有杀死失败者的权利，而失败者可以用自由换取生命的延续——这种约定更为合法，因为这对双方都是有利的。

可是，这种所谓的杀死失败者的权利显然无法从战争状态中取得。唯独由于这一原因，生活在其原始独立条件下的人缺乏足够定期的交流，其结果不是和平状态就是战争状态，因而人们并非自然成为仇敌。正是对事情的冲突而不是人们之间的争论，才引发战争，而形成战争状态并不出自纯粹的个人关系，而只是出自所有权关系。一个人与另一个人之间的私人战争，既不存在于一个没有固定财产的自然状态之中，也不存在于一个一切都置于法律权威下的社会状态之中。

个人之间的斗殴、决斗或小冲突无法构建任何一种状态。至于法兰西国王路易九世的法令所允许的那些私人战争，以及上帝的和平所中止

的那些战争，都不过是封建政权的滥用——如果曾有过这样一种体制的话，这是一种不合理的体制，它不但违背了自然之法，也违背了一切健全的政权。

那么，战争不是人与人之间的关系，而是国与国之间的关系。在战争中，每个个体并不以人的身份，甚至也不以公民的身份，[2]而只以士兵的身份参战，他们偶然地成为敌人，他们这时并不作为国家的成员，而只作为国家的保卫者。总而言之，一国只能把另一国而非国人当作敌人，因为在具有不同内在性质的东西之间不存在真正的关系。

这一原则既符合一切时代所制定的法则，也符合一切文明民族的恒定惯例。宣战与其说是对臣民发出警告，倒不如说是对政权发出警告。假如外国人——不论他是一位君主、一个个体，还是一整个民族——抢劫、杀害或扣押另一个君主的臣民却没有向该君主宣战的话，他就不是敌人，而是强盗。即使在战争当中，要是一个正义的君主掠夺了敌人领土上所能掠夺的公众财产，他仍然要尊重臣民及其个人的财产，也要尊重自己的权利所依据的原则。既然战争的目标是征服敌对国，当士兵全副武装时，他们就有权杀死敌对国的守军。一旦放下武器向对方投降，他们就既不是敌对国的敌人，也不是敌对国的工具，他们只是再一次成为普通人，而敌对国再也无权夺去他们的生命。有时不杀死一兵一卒也可摧毁一个国家。战争不会产生不为目的所需的权利。这些原则既不是格劳秀斯的发明创造，也不是诗人笔下的凭空杜撰，它们源自事物的本性，建立在理性的基础之上。

征服权除了有最强者的法则之外，就没有什么其他基础。假设战争并不赋予征服者屠杀被征服者的人民的任何权利，那么这种他所不具有的权利，就不能用来证明奴役是正当的。只有当无法奴役敌人时，人们才有权杀死他们的敌人，这样，奴役权就不可能出自杀害权。让被征服者以其自由换取胜利者不法索取的生命，因而这是一场不公正的交易。

将生死权建立在奴役权基础上、将奴役权建立在生死权基础上的争论，是一场恶性循环的争论。

甚至假设存在这种可怕的屠杀权，那么战争的奴役，或被征服的民族不再有义务服从主人，除非他被迫服从主人。胜利者夺取受害者生命的等价物后，对受害者没有施恩。胜利者是以剥削受害者的方式，而不是以无利的方式消灭受害者。因此，胜利者与失败者之间的战争在继续，除以武力在失败者身上获得权力之外，胜利者决不能获取更多的权力。胜利者与失败者的相互关系是战争的结果，而战争权的使用意味着和平条约的不复存在。约定确实已经制定了，可那种约定完全终止不了战争，而是预示着战争的继续。

因而，不管我们怎样看待这一问题，奴役权是不存在的。之所以不存在，不仅是因为其无法被证实，而且也是因为其荒谬、无任何意义。“奴役”与“权利”这两个词相互矛盾，相互排斥。不论是人与人之间，还是人与整个民族之间，说：“我特此与你签订契约，该契约完全由你付出代价而完全有利于我，只要我高兴，我就遵守契约，而只要我高兴，你必须遵守契约。”这样的话岂不荒唐可笑。

第五章　论我们总该追溯到原始契约

即使我要承认迄今为止我反驳过的一切，可专制的斗士总不会有什么好结果。征服一大批人与统治一个社会之间将始终存在天壤之别。如果一个人接二连三地奴役许多单一的个体，不管数目有多大，在这里我只看到主人与奴隶，而根本看不到人民与其统治者。或许就存在一个集合体的关系，但肯定不是一个联合体的关系，因为他们既没有共同的利益，也不属于同一个政体。即使这样的一个人奴役了全球一半的人，他仍然只是一个个体，而他那总与他人截然不同的利益，只不过是个人利益而已。当他死去时，他所留下的帝国会分崩离析，就像一棵橡树被大火燃得精光，化为一堆灰烬一样。

格劳秀斯说过："一个民族可以将自身交给国王。"因此，依格劳秀斯的说法，在将自己奉献给国王之前，一个民族就是一个民族。这种奉献本身就是一种公民行为。它预示着公众的深思熟虑。因此，在考虑一个民族选择国王的行为之前，我们应该仔细审视一下民族之所以成为一个民族的行为，因为那种后者的行为必然先于前者，而这才是社会的真正基础。

实际上，如果不存在更早的约定的话，除非选举一致通过，不然，怎么会存在少数服从多数的义务呢？希望得到一个主人的一百人有什么权利代表不希望得到一个主人的十人投票呢？多数投票法本身以约定为依据，它意味着至少有一次全体一致的情况。

第六章　论社会公约

我设想人们达到这样一种状态：自然状态下，阻碍人们维持现状的力量已超过了每个个体在该状态下用以自保的力量。如果不改变其生存模式的话，那么原有状态将无法持续，人类必将消亡。

既然人们无法形成新的势力，那只好将那些早已存在的势力联合起来，并加以控制。他们能够保存自己的唯一方法是，在一个强大到足以克服任何抵抗的集体中联合起个体的力量，并在单一动力的驱动下朝着一个目标一致行动。

各种势力的联合只有依靠个体联合才能产生，但是，因为每个人自身的力量和自由又是其生存的首要手段，要是他自己不去冒险，不愿忽视对自己所应有的关怀，他又怎么能融合他人的力量呢？根据我现有的主题，这一难题可以用以下这句话来表达：

"如何找到一种以一切集体力量保护个人及其利益的联合方式，以这种方式，每个个体在与他人联合时，除听从自己外，无需服从他人，

依旧可以像以前那样自由自在？”这是社会契约所要解决的根本问题。

该契约的条款按行为的性质规定得如此严密，哪怕微小的修改都可能使其变得空洞无效。它们就是这样确定的，虽然可能从未在形式上加以说明，但是无论在哪里它们都是相同的，无论在哪里都是被默许认可的。这个社会公约一旦遇到破坏，每个人就会重新获得其原有权利，而在恢复其自然自由的同时，又会失去其用自然自由换来的公民自由。

这些关于联合的条款可以简化为一句话，即每个联合者自身及他对整个集体的权利的全盘转让。首先，由于每个个体完全交出自己，所以对大众来说条件都是一样的，正因为对于每个人的条件都相同，所以在没有个人利益的情况下，就不会有人想让这种条件成为别人的负担。

其次，既然这种转让是无保留的，联合体会尽可能完美无缺，而每个联合者就不会有什么要求了。因为假设个体保留了某些权利，个体与公众之间将缺乏更高的裁判权威，每个个体从某种意义上说便可以自行作出判断，因而很快就会要求在一切事务中自行作出判断。这样一来，自然状态就会继续下去，而联合体不可避免地变成暴政或是空话。

最后，既然每个人都把自己交给了大众，就等于没把自己交给任何人。既然从任何一种联合里，人们都可以获得与自己让渡给他人的同等的权利，那么他就重新获取其所失去的每样东西的等价物，并且在讨价还价之中，获取更多的权力以保存其所拥有的东西。

那么，如果从社会公约中删除一切不太重要的东西，我们就会发现社会公约可以简化为如下词句：“我们每个人在公意的最高指示下，将其个体及其一切力量都投入到集体中，并且作为一个整体，我们接纳作为整体不可分割的一部分的每一个成员。”

紧接着，这种联合行为产生一个道德的与集体的共同体，以代替每

个契约方的个人，该共同体由众多像与会的选举人那样的成员组成。通过这样的相同行为，共同体获得其团结且普遍的自我、生活和意志。因而，由所有其他人联合产生的公共人格过去被称为城市，[3]而现在被认为是共和国或政体。在被动情况下，它被称为国家；在主动情况下，它就是主权者；和自己的同类相比，它就是政权。至于联合者，他们集体被称为人民，而其中的个体作为主权权威的参与者，可称之为公民，也可称他们为臣民，因为他们已处于国家法律制度的管辖之下。不过，这些词汇常常混淆不清，每个词都可能被误解为另一个词。重要的是，在以确切的含义使用这些词时，要知道如何辨别它们。

第七章　论主权者

这一法则表明，联合行动包括社会与个体之间的相互规约，其结果是，在与自己制定的契约中，每个人都会发现自己承担着双重义务，第一，与个体相比，作为主权者主体的一员；第二，与主权者相比，作为国家公民的一员。但是在这里，民法上的准则却不适用，民法上写道：每个人并不受与自己的规约的约束，因为在对自己尽责和对个体作为整体一部分所涉及的某事尽责之间，存在着巨大的差别。

我必须补充说明的是，一次公众决策可能把一项义务强加给服从于主权者的臣民，由于两方面的原因每个人都能被理解，而相反的是，如此的决策并不可能把一项义务强加给主权者本身。由此，这必然违背了为主权者服务的政体的真正本性，因为主权者为自身制定其不能违反的法律。只有以唯一相同的关系来考虑，主权者才处在与自己订约的个人地位，这表明，既不存在也不可能存在任何把人民共同体捆绑起来作为一个主体的基本法，甚至是社会契约本身，也不可能做到这一点。这并不意味着，只要不违背该契约，整个主体就可以与其他国家订约，因为相对于国外势力而言，该政体只是一个简单的实体、个体而已。

不过，既然政体或主权者将其存在只归于契约的神圣性，那么甚至

在与外国势力制定的条约中，它也不能让自己承担任何损害这一初始行为的义务，例如，它无法将自己的一部分转让或呈送给另一个主权者。违背自己赖以生存的法令，必将自我毁灭。巧妇难为无米之炊啊。

因而，民众一联合起来就成为一个集体，要是不进攻这个集体，就没有人能够伤害到集体中的任何一员。要不是每个成员都受到攻击，仍然不太可能伤害到整体。因而，义务与自我利益同样强制契约双方互相援助。而同样的这些人应试图在这双重关系中，将与此相关的一切利益结合起来。

现在，由于主权者完全由构成主权者的个体组成，所以主权者没有也不能有任何对立于个体利益的利益。于是，主权者没有必要向臣民作种种保证，因为一个主体希望伤害其所有的成员，这是不可能的，而我们之后会看到，主体不能伤害任何一个特定的成员。主权者，正因为他是主权者，便永远是他应有的样子。

但是，这并非臣民与主权者之间关系的真实写照。不管他们的共同利益如何，除非主权者能找到确保臣民忠诚的方法，否则臣民都不愿意受其所负责任的约束，除非他们保证其忠诚的方法。

因为作为人的每个个体，都可能有个人意志，而这一意志对立或有别于他作为公民所具有的公意。他的个人利益可以大声呼吁，其呼声大大有别于公众利益的呼声。他绝对自然独立的生命，可能使他将其所要归于公共事业的东西，既看作无偿奉献，也看作损失，不过这种损失与他的沉重付出相比，不那么令人痛苦。试想一下，那个创建国家的非自然人只是一个虚构的实体（既然他不是一个人），他可能试图享受各种权利，而又不想对臣民尽什么义务。这种不公正的滋生势必引发政体的毁灭。

由此，为了使社会公约不至于成为一个空洞的法则，社会公约就要

在约定中默示——给予所有其他人以强力——任何拒绝服从公意的人都将由全体迫使其这样做，这除了必须迫使其获得自由之外，没有任何其他意思，因为这是在让每个公民献身国家时，保证他免于一切人身依附的必要条件，正是这一条件，才使政治机器设计成型，并使其正常运转，而政治机器本身将合法性赋予公民契约。没有这一条件，如此的契约肯定是荒唐可笑、专制残暴、易于被严重滥用的。

第八章　论公民社会

在从自然状态到公民社会的发展历程中，人类发生了惊人的变化。公民社会将作为行为准则的正义置于本能的位置，赋予其行为以其前所未有的道德品质。只有到那时，当义务的呼声已经取代了生理的冲动，权利取代了欲望，至今只想到自己的人才会发现自己被迫根据他人准则去行事，去求教自己的理智，而不去研究自我倾向。在公民社会中，虽然一个人转让了一些属于自然状态的利益，可是他却能获得更大利益作为回报。他的才能得到锻炼和发展，其思想得到拓展，其情操变得高尚，其整体精神得到提升，其结果是，如果在多种情况下滥用新的条件不会将自己降低到比出发点更糟糕的地步，他应该经常祈佑幸福的时光。这幸福的时光已使其脱离自然状态，也使其从一头愚笨的、受限制的畜牲变成了有智力的动物，乃至变成了人。

假定我们起草一份资产负债表，以便可以很容易地比较赢亏。对任何诱导他及其可获取的东西来说，一个人在社会契约中所亏损的东西是他的自然自由与绝对权利。他在社会契约中赢得的东西，是公民的自由及其所有物的财产权。如果想避免犯厚此薄彼的错误，我们必须清楚区分仅以个人力量为界限的自然自由，以及受限于公意的公民自由；我们还必须区分仅建立在强力或“最先占有权”基础上的享有权，以及必须倚赖法定所有权的财产权。

我还得补充一点，一个与公民社会往来的人，应该获得道德自由，

唯有道德自由才能使其成为自己的主人，因为奴隶制只受肉欲支配，而服从为自己制定的法律才是自由。然而，就这一主题我已经说过好多次，而“自由”一词的哲学含义并不是本主题所要论述的。

第九章　论财产权

集体的每个成员，在集体存在的瞬间就将当时情况下存在的自我——他自己及其所有资产，包括一切动产——交给了这个集体。这并不是说，这样一来，享有权在转手过程中改变其性质，变成主权者掌握的财产权。更准确地说，由于国家的资产与个体的那些资产比要大得无以言状，所以个人财产虽然不再合理合法——可不管怎样，在陌生人的眼里，公共财产其实比个人财产更安全，也更不可变更。因为在面对国家的公民时，国家变成了他们全部动产的主人，这有赖于社会契约，这是由于社会契约在国家内部充当所有其他权利的基础，面对其他国家时，本国只有源自个体的“最先占有权”。

“最先占有权”尽管比“最强者的权利”更为真实，可是直到创立了财产权才变成一种真正的权利。每个人对自己所需要的东西都拥有自然权利。但是，使一个人变成某一财产的所有者的积极行为，却把他排除在别的一切事物之外。他一旦得到自己的份额，必然将自己局限于那一份财产，也就更没有权利违背集体了。因而，我们明白，在自然状态下脆弱的“最先占有权”，在政治社会中却迫使每个公民尊重它。这种权利让人们意识到，属于别人的东西并不比属于他自己的东西来得少。

作为一条普遍的法则，为了证明对任何一块土地的最先占有权是正当的，我们必须满足下列条件：第一，土地必须尚未被任何其他人占有；第二，所有权者仅仅拥有他为生存所需要的土地；第三，他不是通过游手好闲的方式，而是通过实实在在耕地的方式取得享有权——这是在缺乏法定所有权时需要别人尊重的所有权的唯一标志。

的确可以说，试图把“最先占有权”变成人们的需要，并能操作得起来，这使其内涵得到最大限度地延伸。一个人真的能够避免给权利设定限制条件吗？一个人两脚踏上一片共用的土地，便马上声称这块土地归自己所有，这就足够了吗？以强力不让别人接近一会儿，以便剥夺他人永久的回归权，这就足够了吗？一个人或一个民族又怎么能够掠夺广袤的土地，拒其他民族于门外，除非是罪犯的霸占——由于这种行为劫掠了其余人的住所及自然给予他们共有的一切，那就足够了吗？当努涅斯·德·巴尔波亚站在海岸上，以卡斯提王权的名义占有了南太平洋和整个南美洲的时候，那就足以剥夺一切居住者，把世上所有的君主排除在外吗？假如是这样的话，这些仪式不断上演，枉然无益。天主教皇要是没离开皇室，可能会拥有全世界，除非后来帝国所在地区已属于别的君主。

我们会明白，私人土地被统一连片时，是怎样变成公共土地的；我们也会明白，主权者权利从臣民扩大到他们所占有的土地时，是怎样既涵盖财产权又涉及人的。这使那些土地所有者都变得更加依赖别人，然后把自己的实力变成了忠于他人的保证。古代君王似乎没有看到这一好处，因为他们自称波斯人或斯基泰人或马其顿人时，好像认为自己宁可是人们的统治者，而不是国家的主人。当今的君主更精明地称自己为法国国王，或西班牙国王，或英国国王等，他们以这种方式占有国土，那么也就拥有了国土上的居民。

社会契约所具有的唯一特点是：集体在接受个体动产，远非剥夺个体的财产。相反，集体只是保证个体对财产的合法享有权，这就将侵占变成了有效的权利，将享有变成了合法所有权。因此，每个所有者都被认为是公共财产的托管人，其权利就必须得到国家每个其他公民的尊重，并且受到集体力量的保护以抵御异乡人的侵犯。通过对公众有利并对他们更有利的让与，人们就已经获取了一切，可以说是他们已放弃的一切——这一似是而非的论点，很容易通过区分主权者所拥有的权利和

所有者对这一财产所拥有的权利加以解释，这一点可从下文了解。

还可能发生这样的事，人们在一无所有时，就已经开始联合了，在扩大土地并使其大到足以分给其所有者之后，他们开始共享土地，或者在他们中间交替地分配土地，不是平等分配就是由主权者决定按份额分配。不管所得物以什么方式安排，任何个体对自己财产的所有权都必须从属于集体对一切财产的所有权，因为要是没有了这一权利，就失去了社会契约的约束力，也失去了行使主权的有效力量。

我将以一种可作为整个社会制度基础的观点结束本章——第一卷：换句话说，社会公约决不可能破坏自然平等，恰恰相反，它将用一种道德上的合法平等代替自然可能强加给人的任何物质上的不平等，其结果是，不管在人力和智力方面如何不平等，人们依靠契约和权利都会变得平等。[4]

第二卷

第一章　论主权是不可转让的

迄今已建立的种种原则的首要也是最重大的结果在于，唯有公意才能按照已创建的国家想获得共同利益的目标来指导国家的各种力量。因为如果个人利益之间的冲突已使必要的公民社会得以建立的话，那些相同利益之间的和谐一致就会使公民社会的建立成为可能。正是那些不同利益的共同点才产生这种社会联系。假如没有了与个体利益相一致的契合点，那么可以想象，社会就不可能存在。因此社会就是必须在这共同利益的基础上进行治理。

那么我的论点是，主权不外乎公意的运作，因而决不能转让。主权者只是一个集体存在，因而不能由任何其他人代表，而只能由本人代表——权力可以由他人代表，意志却不能由他人代表。

实际上，个意与公意在某些点上相互一致不是不可能的，但至少这种一致不可能连续持久。因为个意本质上倾向于偏私，而公意则倾向于平等。甚至更不可思议的是，在个意与公意之间的和谐一致可以有保证，即使如此，这种保证还要一直继续下去，因为如此持久的和谐一致往往是碰巧产生的，而不是人为的结果。主权者可能会说："我现在想要的正是这个人想要的，或者至少是他说他想要的。"但是，没有一位主权者会说："这个人明天想要的，也是我想要的。"因为一个人希望在未来受到束缚，这是荒谬可笑的，而且说一个人希望同意与其利益相悖的观点，这是自相矛盾的。如果一个民族只是唯命是从，那么这个民族会因为这样的承诺而解体。因为一旦有了一位主人，就不再有主权，原有政体因而消亡。

这并不是说，如果主权者有反对的自由却没有这么做，领袖的命令也不能算是公意。在这种情况下，人民的沉默可视为人民的同意。这一点将在下文详细阐述。

第二章　论主权是不可分割的

正如主权是不可转让的，同样的道理，主权也是不可分割的，因为意志要么是公意，[5]要么不是。主权不是民族主体的意志，只是一部分人的意志。在前者中，主权宣布意志是主权国家与宪法法律的行为；而在后者中，主权宣布意志只是特定意志的表达，或者说是管理机构的行为，它充其量不过是一道法令。

然而，我们那些无法对主权原则分类的政治理论家们，将主权原则按其意图来分类。他们将主权原则分为权力与意志，即将其分为行政权与立法权，征税权、司法权与战争权，内政权与外交权。我们的理论家们时而将这些东西混为一谈，时而将它们割裂开来。他们把主权者变成一只空想的动物、一件用破布缝制的拼缀物，更确切地说，仿佛他们是用几个人的肢体来凑成一个人体的样子——其中一个人有眼，一个人有腿，而另一人则只有脚。据说，日本的江湖郎中可以当着旁观者把一个小孩切开，将身体的不同部位抛向空中，然后让这个小孩落下来，结果每一部位都有生命。这或多或少是我们的政治理论家玩弄的戏法——总之，他们用一种只配在露天市场上耍弄的手法肢解社会主体之后，再将碎片拼凑在一起。

这一错误出自没有形成主权者权威的正确概念，也出自仅仅把权威的派生产物误认为权威本身的各个部分。例如，宣战与媾和都被认为是主权行为，它们实际上并不是主权行为，因为这些行为都不构成法律，而只是法律的应用、决定该法律如何加以解释的特定行为——我给附在“法律”这个词上的思想下完定义之后，这一切就显而易见了。

如果我们以同样的方式仔细考察关于主权其他假定的分类法，我们应该会发现，无论何时我们认为主权被分类，我们都搞错了，因为被认为是主权的那一部分权利，实际上现已被证实只是从属于主权，预示着主权付诸实施的最高意志的存在。

当到了法律理论家该运用自己的原则来分别确定君主和人民的权利时，这种缺乏确切性的情况已大大模糊了他们自己所下的那些结论。读过格劳秀斯第一部作品中的第一卷第三、四章的读者都会明白，这位渊博的学者及其译者巴贝拉克是怎样陷入他们自己的诡辩论中的，他们担心不是说得太多就是说得太少（根据他们的偏见），也担心违背了他们需要调和的各种利益。格劳秀斯，一个在法兰西的流亡者，对自己的国家心怀不满，逃离本国，想追随路易十三，将自己的书献给路易十三，所以他不遗余力地剥夺各民族的一切权利，并千方百计地将那些权利奉献给君主。这肯定非常合巴贝拉克的胃口，巴贝拉克将自己翻译的格劳秀斯的译著献给英国国王乔治一世。然而，不幸的是，詹姆斯二世的被逐——巴贝拉克称之为一次“逊位”——迫使他把话说得明显有所保留、含糊其辞、模棱两可，以免暗示威廉三世是一个篡夺者。如果这两个作家采用了正确的原则，他们的所有困难就都烟消云散，他们的论点也就一致了。但可悲可叹的是，他们本该说出真理，并且只追随公民。真理不会给他们带来财富，而公民也不是授予他们大使、教授头衔和给之高薪厚俸的人。

第三章　论公意是否会出错

由我所论证的论题可见，公意总是正义的，并且总是趋向于公共利益。但这并不表明，公民的讨论总是有同样的正确性。我们总想得到对我们有利的东西，可我们总是辨别不出对我们有利的东西。人民决不会腐败，可他们常常误入歧途。而只有在这时，人民似乎愿意要不好的东西。

众意（一切个体想要的东西）与公意之间常常存在极大的差异。公意只研究公共利益，而众意则研究个人利益——确实只不过是个体欲望的总和。但是，如果我们从这些相同的意志中去掉互相抵销的加减数，那么剩下的总数依然是公意。[6]

当公民能够充分了解情况并展开讨论，而公民彼此之间有没有任何勾结时，许许多多的小分歧往往会产生公意，所作出的决策总会是正确的。但是，如果以牺牲大集体为代价而形成小团体，则每个小团体的意志对自己的成员来说成了公意，而对国家来说却成了个意。那么，我们可能会说，投票数不再与人数相等，而是与现有的组群相等了。分歧变少，结果是产生更少的公意。最终，当其中一个小团体变得很大，大到能够超过其余的小团体，其结果不再是许多小分歧的总和，而是只有一个唯一的分歧。到那时，就不存在公意，而那占上风的意见不过是个意而已。

因而，为了公意能够得到清楚的表达，国家中不应该存在各种派系，而每个公民应该只为自己做决定，这是绝对必要的[7]——这便是伟大的利库尔戈斯那独一无二的发明。可如果存在着各种派系，那就成倍增加它们的数量，并像梭伦、努玛和塞尔维乌斯所做的那样，防止它们中出现不平等。这些是能确保公意始终得到启迪、人们不会误入歧途的唯一预防措施。

第四章　论主权者权力的限度

如果国家或城邦，只是一个道德人格——由成员联盟构成其生命，如果它最担忧的东西是其生存，那它就需要具有普遍的强制力，以便以对整体最有利的方式推动并应对每一部分。正如大自然给予每个人以支配自己四肢的绝对力量一样，社会公约赋予政体以支配其所有成员的绝对权力。正是这相同的权力，在公意的指引下，才有了像我所说的主权的名称。

然而，除公众之外，我们还得考虑构成公众的个人，个人的生命和自由自然独立于公众之外。由此，我们必须清楚地区分公民与主权者各自的权利，[8]而且还必须将公民作为臣民所应尽的义务与他们作为人所应享受的自然权利区别开来。

我们承认，每个人可按社会公约转让其与集体有关的权力、动产和自由的；可还必须承认的是，唯有主权者才是上述关系的裁断者。

无论公民能够为国家作出什么样的贡献，只要主权者要求，他就应该去做；而主权者不能将对集体不必要的任何负担强加给臣民。事实上，主权者甚至不能有这样的意图，这与其说是依照凡事必有因的自然法则，倒不如说是依照推理的法则。

将我们与社会团体联结在一起的之所以是义务，只是因为它们是相互的。鉴于其性质如此，一个人在尽义务的过程中，要是不能同时为自己工作，就无法为其他人工作。公意总是正当合法的，所有人常常希望获得各自的幸福，只是大众将“各自”一词用在自己身上，在投票中都想着自己，这怎么可能呢？这表明，权利的平等及平等所产生公正的概念得自于每个人对自己的偏爱，因此也得自于同样的人性。这还表明，公意若要成为真正的公意，就必须在其目的和在其性质上都是普遍的。公意应该从公众为了公意延伸到公意适用于公众。当对准任何特别限定的目标时，公意就会失去其自然的公正——因为在判断陌生事物时，我们没有任何真正的公正原则来引导我们。

实际上，无论何时，在我们处理一件特定的事情或权利，且其未能按照事先的公约得到解决时，事情就会变得有争议。这是一种个人利益和公共利益针锋相对的冲突，我既看不到需要遵循的法律，也看不到作出裁判的仲裁者。这在如此有赖于公意决策的争论中，显得荒唐可笑，因为得出的结论只能有利于其中一方，而对另一方而言则认为这是一种不相同、不公平的，在如此情况下有失公正而犯过失的意志。于是，正

如个意无法代表公意，如果公意试图处理个体情况的话，也将改变其性质，它也就不能再作为公意对任何人或任何事作出裁决了。例如，雅典人在任命或罢免其领导人时，授荣誉予一个人，而惩罚另一个人，并且按照许多特别的规定，不加选择地行使行政的一切职能，那么，此时雅典人不再使明白无误的东西变成公意，不再像主权者那样做事，反而像行政官那样做事。所有这一切似乎与通常接受的观念并不一致，但是，请给我时间来详细说明我自己的观点。

从我迄今为止所说的来看，公意产生其公意性，与其说源自人们的选票数目，倒不如说源自人们结合在一起的共同利益——因为公意是一项制度，在这一制度下，每个人都必须服从他所施加给别人的相同条件。利益与正义之间这值得赞美的和谐一致性给予了社会讨论以公正性，但这种公正性在讨论个体事件时会立刻消失，因为不存在一种能够将判决方和争论方各自的判决结合统一起来的共同利益。

无论以哪种方式看待这件事，我们始终都要回到同样的结论：社会公约在公民中建立起平等，因为他们遵从相同的条件，也都必须享有相同的权利。因此，按照契约的性质，主权者的每一个行为，即公意的每一次真实的行动，同样约束或有利于所有公民，结果是主权者只认识到民族的整体，而不区分构成民族的任何成员之间的差异。那么，什么东西真正称得上是主权行为呢？它并不是高贵者与低贱者之间的契约，而是主体与其每个成员之间的契约。它是一种合法的契约，因为它的基础是社会契约；它是一份公正的契约，因为它对公众而言是共用的；它是一份有益的契约，因为除了共同利益外它别无所求；它也是一份持久的契约，因为它得到武力和最高权力的保障。只要臣民履行这样的契约，他们就不是顺从任何人而是顺从自己的意志。而要问主权者和公民的各自权利延伸多远，那就等于问这两类人共同履约的程度如何，也就是问每个人对全体及全体对每个人履约的程度如何。

由此可见，很显然，主权者的权力事实上是完全绝对的、神圣不可侵犯的，但它并不超越也不能超越公共契约的限制。因而，每个人都可以随心处置这些契约留给他的财富和自由。由此推断，主权者绝对没有将负担厚此薄彼地强加给臣民的权利，因为一旦发生这种情况，事情就会变成个人的事，主权者的权利对此不再奏效。

一旦承认这些差异，要断言个体会按照社会契约作出什么真正的放弃，明显变得不真实。的确，由于这种契约，他们发觉自己处在一种比以前更为优越的处境中。为谋取利益，他们用了不确定且不稳定的生命来交换更美好更安全的生命，而不是进行转让；他们用了自然的独立交换自由，也交换为享有自己的安全却伤害他人的权力；他们用了其可被战胜的权力交换社会联盟使其不可战胜的权利。他们抵押给国家的真正生命始终受到国家的保护；甚至当他们冒着生命危险保卫国家时，除了归还他们从国家那儿接受的东西外，还做了什么呢？除了他们不再经常做的事之外，在面临更大的危险时，在每个人不可避免地处在战争、冒生命危险保卫任何为维护生命而服务于自己的自然状态中，还做了什么呢？确实，所有人现在都必须在万一需要时为自己的国家而战，但是，至少每个人不再为自己而战。为了保障安全，我们只需要冒着在没有这种保障时每个人所必须独自面对的危险中的一部分，这难道不算是某种受益吗？

第五章　论生死权

有人会问，无权掌控自己生命的个体，怎么能将他们不曾拥有的权利转让给主权者？这个问题看起来似乎难以解答，只因为问题提得很糟糕。每个人都有权冒生命危险以保存生命。你听说过一个跳出窗口逃避火灾的人犯有自杀罪吗？一个人上船时知道有危险而死于暴风雨，能以此认定他自杀吗？

社会契约的目的是维护契约方。不论哪一方，想要达到目的，就要

有手段，而这种手段与一定的危险，乃至一定的牺牲是分不开的。无论谁想要以别人的生命代价来保全自己的性命，就必须在必要时为别人献身。现在作为公民，个人不再自行判断法律要求他冒的是哪种危险。而当君主对他说："你应该死，这对国家来说是有利的。"那么，他应该死，因为正是这样的条件让他得以安全生活至今，而且，他的生命不再是自然的赠物，而是国家给予他的一种有条件的礼物。

判处罪犯死刑可以用相同的方式来看待：正是为了避免自己成为杀人事件的被害人，如果一个人本身成了杀人犯，他才同意去死。在社会契约中一个人只会想到保住性命，而决不会想舍弃性命。我们绝不认为，任何契约方会从开始就设想自己被绞杀。

此外，每个罪犯都会触犯社会法律，按其行为被判为叛乱者、叛国者。他违反了国家法律，便不再是国家的一员。甚至于，他对国家发动战争。在这种情况下，国家存亡与其个人生存是不相容的，要么国亡，要么人死。而当这个罪人被处死时，他与其说是公民，倒不如说是敌人。审判和判决证明并且宣布他违反了社会契约，结果他再也不是这个国家的一员了。既然他接受了这样的成员资格，就其公民身份而言，就应该将其作为社会公约的违犯者驱逐出境，或者将其作为众矢之的处死。这样的敌人不是一个虚构的人，而是一个活生生的人，因此，战争权使杀人变得合法。

可有人会说，谴责一个罪犯是个体的行为。这我同意。接下来，这样的行为并不从属于主权者，谴责罪犯是主权者可赋予却不可自行运用的一项权利。我的所有想法都融会在一起，但我无法一下子描述清楚。

此外，频繁的惩罚是政权软弱或涣散的标志。不存在一个坏到一无是处的人。人不该被处以死刑，即使是以儆效尤，也不该如此。如果他对社会不构成危险，就应该放他一条生路。

至于赦免或免除一个法律判定有罪且法官已宣判的罪犯刑罚的权利，这只属于凌驾于法官和法律之上的那种人，即主权者。可即使是的话，这种权利也并非十分清晰，并且极少付诸实施。在一个管理良好的国家，极少有人受处罚，这不是因为有许多的赦免，而是因为极少有罪犯：而在一个日渐衰落的国家，大量犯罪的涌现才确保了罪犯不受惩罚。在古罗马共和国的统治下，元老院和执政官绝对都不想赦免罪犯，古罗马人也是如此，尽管他们有时取消了自己的判决。经常性的赦免标志着犯罪将很快不需要赦免，任何人都能明白那必然导致的结果。然而，我能感觉到我的心正在低语，并且正在阻止我下笔。让我们把对这些问题的讨论留给那些从不犯错因而无需赦免的公正的人吧！

第六章　论法律

我们已按社会公约赋予政体以生命和存在，而现在按立法赋予政体以运动和意志却成了问题，因为联合形成政体所依据的原始行为并不决定其为保存自身所要做的事。

事物的美好和井然有序皆源于其真正的本性，而与人类契约无关。一切的正义都来自那唯一的源泉——神，如果我们知道如何从这高贵的源泉中获取正义的话，我们就既不需要政权也不需要法律了。毋庸置疑，存在一种完全出自理性的普遍正义，但要认可那种正义，它就必须是互惠的。从人性上说，由于缺少自然的制裁，自然正义的法则便不适用于人间。其实，这样的法则只益于恶劣的人，却伤害了正直的人，因为正义的人尊重法则，而其他人却不以尊重法则作为回报。于是，就必须有契约和明确的法律，以此将权利和义务相结合，并将正义引向其目标。在一切事物都处于公共的自然状态下，我对那些我未曾许诺过的人并没有什么亏欠，并且我认识到，对我没用的那些东西只属于别人。但是，在一切权利依法而定的公民社会中，就不再是那样了。

然而，究竟什么是法律呢？如果我们根据形而上学的观点简单地给

法律下定义的话，我们就会继续谈论下去，却无法理解。即使我们能说出自然法则是什么，也仍旧无法理解国家法。

我已说过，公意不可能涉及任何特定的目标，因为这样的特定目标不是在国家之内，就是在国家之外。如果它是在国家之外，那么，一种与其无关的意志对其而言就不是公意；如果它是在国家之内，那么它将构成自然的一部分。因而，整体与部分就形成了一种关系，这其中包含两个独立的存在，一个是部分，一个是除掉这一部分后的整体。可是，除掉这一部分后的整体不再是一个整体，于是，只要这种关系存在的话，就没有整体而只有两个不平等的部分。由此可见，其中一方的意志从不是另一方的公意。

但是，当全体人民为全体人民制定规则时，就只考虑自身。而如果有什么关系出现的话，这种关系则存在于一种观点下的整体和另一种观点下的整体之间，全体不存在分裂。在此，制定规则就像制定规则的意志一样，是普遍的。这就是我称之为法律的行为。

当我说法律的对象总是普遍的时候，我的意思是，法律只考虑全体臣民及所有抽象行为，可它并不考虑任何个人或任何特定的行为。因而，法律可以规定应该存在有特权，但不可能指名将特权赋予某一个人；法律可以给公民划分多个等级，甚至确定各个等级的准入资格，但不可能指名把某某人列入某个等级之中；法律可以创建一个王室政权，并安排一个世袭继承人，但不可能选举一个君主或指定一个王室家庭——总之，涉及个体的职能并不在立法权的范畴之列。

根据这一观点，立刻就能发现，我们再也不用问由谁来制定法律，因为法律是公意行为；再也不用问君主是否可以凌驾于法律之上，因为君主只是国家的一部分；再也不用问法律是否可以是非正义的，因为没有人对自己是非正义的；再也不用问我们如何能做到既自由自在又受法律约束，因为法律不过是我们自己意愿的记录。

我们还能发现，既然法律将意志的普遍性与立法范畴的普遍性统一起来，任何人，不管是谁，依据自己的权力所要求的任何东西都不是法律，甚至主权者本身就某一特定目标所指令的东西也不是一条法律，而是一道法令，它不是主权的行为，而是政权的行为。

因此，我称任何有法可依的国家为“共和”，不论其宪法形式如何，因为只有到那时，公共利益才能得以统治，并且只有到那时，公共利益才是真实存在的东西。所有合法政府都是“共和的”。[9]我下面会解释政权是什么。

实际上，法律只是公民社会赖以存在的条件。既然人人都得服从法律，他们就应该是法律的制定者。制定社会规则的权利只属于构成社会的那些人；但是，他们如何运用法律呢？法律靠的是公共契约，还是突发的灵感？政体拥有一个宣布其意志的机构吗？谁将赋予法律以必要阐明条例和提前宣布条例的远见卓识呢？法律将如何在必要时宣布条例呢？一大群盲人常常不知想要什么，因为他们很少知道什么东西对其有用，他们怎么会独自承担像立法制度那样宏大而艰难的事业呢？人们自己总是很想得到好东西，可他们自己并非总能辨认出好东西。公意总是正当合法的，可引导公意的判断并非总是明智的。必须促使公意看事物的本质，而且有时也要看事物的表象；还必须为其指明所探索的美好之路，以便抵御个体欲望的诱惑；还必须赋予其对地点和时间的感知，以便其在眼前切实优势和未来隐患间加以权衡。个体看到好东西却拒绝了它，公众期望好东西却又看不到它。两者都同样需要加以引导。必须强迫个体使其意志服从其理性，必须教会公众识别其所期许的东西。这样的公众启迪将在社会团体中使理解与意志结合起来，使各个部分达到完美协调，使整体提升至拥有最大力量。为此，我们需要立法者。

第七章　论立法者

为了寻求最适合国家的社会法则，需要有一个能理解人之七情六欲

但本身无欲无求的高明智者。这个智者与我们的天性无关，却又对其了如指掌；他的幸福并不依赖于我们的幸福，然而他始终致力于为我们谋求福祉，且愿意在长久的时间里平静等待一份不知何日才会授予他的荣耀。他总是在年轻时劳动而在年老时享受劳动的果实。[10]人类总得需要神明给予其法律。

为了给公民或国王下定义，柏拉图曾在他的对话录《政治家》中，从哲学角度应用了与卡里古拉从经验主义角度所应用的相同推理。如果说伟大的君主很少出现是事实的话，一个伟大立法者的出现又该有多稀罕呢？毕竟，君主只需遵循立法者提供的模式即可。立法者是发明机器的工程师；而君主只不过是启动并操作机器的机械师。孟德斯鸠说过：在政治社会诞生之时，规范种种制度的是共和国领袖，而后来，造就共和国领袖的是种种制度。

无论是谁在建立民族的艰巨事业上冒险，要我们说，都必须准备改变人类的本性，将每个自身彻底完整而孤独的个体改变为更大整体的一部分，到那时，从某种意义上说，同样的个体会从这个整体得到自己的生命与存在。国家的缔造者必须削弱人的组织以强化国家，并用道德上的集体存在取代我们大家从自然那儿得到的物质上的独立存在。总之，每个人都必然要被剥夺去自己的权力，并被赋予对他来说是外部的、而在没有别人的帮助下却无法使用的种种权力。人们的自然权力越是接近灭绝或消灭，社会制度就越是强大和完美，因此，当每个公民若不与别人合作就绝对一事无成，且整体所获取的权力等于或大于个体中每个人的自然权力的总和时，我们便可以说，法律的制定已经达到尽善尽美的程度。

在一个国家里，立法者从各方面看都是非同寻常的存在。非同寻常既是指他的天赋，也是指他肩负着的、既非行政者也非主权者的职责。这种赋予共和国以宪法的职责在这宪法中却不占一席之地。这是一项与

帝权无关的、特别的、超然的职责，因为，正如指挥人的人没必要掌握法律一样，掌握法律的人也没必要指挥人。否则，当法律成了立法者感情的产物，不公正的判决便会层出不穷，并不可避免地损害立法者之事业的神圣性。

在利库尔戈斯为自己的国家制定法律时，他是以放弃自己君主之位的方式开始这项工作的。将制定城市法框架的任务授予异乡人原是大多数希腊城市的惯例。意大利现代的共和国往往仿效这个惯例。日内瓦共和国也是这样做的，并且发觉这种做法挺管用。[11]古罗马早在其最繁荣的年代便已显现暴政死灰复燃的迹象，而它后来的覆灭只有一个原因，那就是立法权和主权的合二为一。

然而，即使是古罗马的十大行政官，他们本身也从未以自己的权力霸占立法权。他们曾对公民说："我们对你们提出的东西，未经你们同意，都不可能成为法律。能制定出确保人民幸福之法律的，只有古罗马人自己。"

正是由于这个原因，制定法律的人既没必要也不应该拥有立法权，而且就算人民心甘情愿，也绝不可以任由他们将这一权利拱手相让，因为按照基本的契约，能约束个体的只有公意，如果没有举行公民的自由投票、让个体发表意见，个意与公意的相互一致便无法确保——这一点我已经说过，但它值得我重复论述。

于是，在立法者的工作中我们发现两件看起来似乎互相矛盾的事情——超越人权的任务及其不存在的行政权力。

还有一道难题值得一提。由于有成千上万个无法译成大众化习语的概念，那些坚持用自己的语言对凡夫俗子说话的圣人，肯定不为人所明白。一些普遍的观点及其生僻的用意同样超越了普通人群所理解的范围；在一些人眼里，只有为他们的利益服务的政策才是好的政策，他们

很难明白，优秀的法律对人施加的种种限制能带来益处。对一个刚建立起来的民族而言，若要求人人理解英明的政治原理，并遵守治国要领的基本法则，那就必须将因果倒置；也就是说，必须让作为社会制度产物的社会精神反过来支配制度的建设；而人也应该在法律出现之前就自发将自己变成法律的遵守者。出于以上这些原因，立法者既不能使用权力，也不能展开辩论，所以必须求助于另一制度的权威——不用暴力就能强迫他人、不用规劝就能说服他人的人。

正是这样，历史上各国的缔造者才不得不求助于神的调和，并将他们自己的智慧归功于神，因为只有当民众像顺从自然法则那样顺从国家的法律、认为人与城邦出自于同一造物主之手的时候，他们才能真正出于自己的意愿听人发话，并温顺地接受公众幸福必须被束缚的现实。

立法者就是使用了这样高妙的技巧，借神的嘴巴将自己的决策传达下去，并且不让普通民众察觉其中的原理，这样一来，神权便驱动了那些不相信由人制定的审慎决策的人。[12]但是，有一点要注意，不是人人都能让神开口说话，或是假扮神之旨意的解释者来获取民众的信任的。立法者必须彰显其灵魂之伟大，并证明自己的存在有如奇迹，因此有资格肩负使命。任何人都能用一些粗劣的手段来装神弄鬼、显示自己的与众不同，比如雕刻石碑、贿赂一名预言者、声称秘密接触过神学、训练一只小鸟在自己的耳边窃窃私语等。可以想象得出，一个会做这种事情的人，可能会聚集起一群蠢人，但他永远也创建不了一个帝国，那些不入流的小把戏只会随他一起消亡。毫无价值的伎俩也许能成为暂时的纽带，但只有智慧才能维系永久的联盟。至今仍流行的希伯来法律，以及以实玛利的后代使用的、统治了半个世界多达千年的的法律，现今依然显示出最初的制定者的伟大。即使傲慢的哲学家和目中无人的派别认为他们不过是走运的骗子，真正的政治家也能看得出谁拥有那只伟大之手，以及隐藏在千秋功业后面的强大智慧。

然而，通过以上的论述，我们并不能得出与瓦波顿一样的结论：宗教和政治都有着同样的目的。我们只能说，在国家成立之时，宗教充当了政治的工具。

第八章　论人民

正像建筑师初次安装建筑测量仪，以检验地面能否承载重量那样，明智的立法者一开始并不是制定对自己有利的法律，而是判定那些对法律感兴趣的人是否能支持法律。这样的推理导致柏拉图拒绝为阿卡迪亚人或塞伦人提供法律，因为他很清楚，那些富人无法容忍平等。克里特岛也提供了一个好法律和坏民众的例子，米洛斯人本身的恶习不改，即便引进法律也是无益。

这个世界已见证过成百上千个灿烂辉煌的民族，它们基本都没接受过好法律，甚至那些据说接受过好法律的民族，也可能只是在其历史上有过短暂的法治时期。民族[13]就像人一样，只有在其青年时期是可教的；随着年龄的增长，民族就变得积习难改。一旦习惯形成了，偏见根深蒂固，改造民族便成了危险而无果的事业；人们非但不会自发地消灭民族内的邪恶，还会全力阻碍他人来揭露自己的缺点，就像愚蠢胆怯的病人一看见医生就发抖那样。

我并不否认，正如某些痛苦搅乱人们的思想并消除人们对往事的记忆一样，在民族中也有某些重大的暴力事件或革命会对公民产生影响。不过，疾病只会使人遗忘，而历史留下的是清晰的恐惧感。在遭内战毁灭后，民族可以说是在一片废墟中再生，跨过了存亡之关隘，重新获得青春的活力。利库尔戈斯时代斯巴达人的经历是如此；塔尔昆之后古罗马的经历是如此；在近代世界驱逐专制君主之后，荷兰和瑞士的经历也是如此。

可是，这样的事件并不寻常：它们都是需要由国家特别机构加以解

释的例外情况。这种情况不可能第二次在同样的民族身上发生，因为虽然一个民族在仍未开化时可以使自己自由，但当这个民族的成员筋疲力尽时，它就无力抗争了。到那时，骚乱会导致覆灭，而且连革命也不能挽救这个民族的命运，其结果是锁链一旦被打破，民族就土崩瓦解、不复存在；之后，其所需要的便是一个主人，而不是一个解放者了。自由的人儿，请你们记住这句格言：自由可以获得，但决不可以重新获得。

民族与人一样，若要使其服从法律，必须等到成熟期；民族的成熟是不易被察觉的；一些事情做得太快，结果反而夭折。而且不同民族之间也有差别；有的民族从一开始就懂得约束自己，而有的民族即使延续千年也依然桀骜不驯。俄国人永远不会成为归顺的臣民，因为这个民族在还未成熟的时候就受到了强制性的统治。彼得大帝有模仿者的才能，但没有真正创造性的天资。他所做的一些事情是好的，可大多数时候他会误入歧途。他明白，他的人民尚未开化，可他并不明白自己的人民尚未为政权做好准备：在本应适当指导臣民的阶段，他却试图让他们文明起来。他努力将他们变成德国人或英国人，而不是变成俄国人。他敦促他们脱胎换骨，而不是以自然的方式成长。法国的家庭教师也是这样，这就是为什么他们训练出来的学生在童年时展露才华，成年后却大失风彩。俄罗斯帝国想征服欧洲，却反被征服。鞑靼人——俄罗斯帝国的邻居和臣民——则成为俄罗斯帝国乃至更广疆域的主人。依我之见，这场革命必将到来，欧洲所有国王都在齐心协力做工作以加快这一进程。

第九章　论人民（续）

自然已给一个发育健全的人设定了身高范围，出了这范围他不是巨人就是矮子。同样，国家体制若要达到最佳状态，也必须在规模上有所限制，这一规模既不能大到不好治理，也不能小到无法维护自身。一个政体有其力量的上限，通常来说，随着政体扩张，这一极限会愈来愈可望而不可及。而社会关系就如同皮筋，拉得越长，越容易松弛。所以，

若是以面积与实力所成的比例为标准，那么小国往往强于大国。

成百上千次的思考应该能证明这一结论的准确性。第一，大国幅员辽阔，偏远地区的行政工作不能顺畅进行，这就像物体放在杠杆长的那一端，就得花更大力气去抬动一样。由于领土扩张，政府在治理方面的任务也更加繁重了。每个城镇的居民都要为他们自己的管理机构支付运行费用；城镇所属的每个区同样设有政府，费用还是居民来出；到了省里，又有更高一级的管理机构，然后是再上面的政府、总督府或总督辖区。越是往上，民众越是得掏更多的钱来支付管理成本，而国家最高行政机构的花费更是成为了每个人必须肩负的重担。如此大量、层层叠叠的费用使得臣民精疲力竭。而且，这种分级的管理结构远没有达到其治理目的，相反，如果只有一个行政机构，民众的生活会轻松不少。事实上，庞大的管理体系消耗了太多资金，以至于几乎没有剩余的公共税收能用来应急，一旦有状况发生，国家便会在崩溃的边缘摇摇欲坠。

这还没完。在实施法律、避免骚乱、纠正恶习、防止偏远居民区发生暴动等方面，有问题的不仅仅是软弱无比、反应迟钝的政府，还有无动于衷的人民。他们对素未谋面的政府官员、疆域辽阔的祖国、千千万万形同陌路的同胞缺乏更多的热情。相同的法律并不适用于许多不同的省份，因为它们有着各自的风俗习惯和千差万别的气候，形式划一的管理是行不通的。然而，各地偏偏又处在相同的统治之下，若是施行不同的法律，只会在相互往来的民族中产生曲解，造成混淆；在这种情况下，若是不同族群混居并通婚，他们甚至会搞不清楚自己是否有权继承遗产。当众多对彼此毫无了解的人通过一个单一的最高管理机构聚集在同一地方，人才就会被埋没，德行就会被忽视，恶行也将得不到惩罚。政府官员事务繁多，自顾不暇，在小事上很少亲力亲为，因此，实际上在处理国家政务的是那些普通职员们。同时，官员们逃避职责或滥用权力也是必然现象，一个政府为了维护基本的权威，往往得想尽一切办法监督这些官员，不管他们身在多么偏远的地方。如果做到了这些，政府

便再没有什么余力去关心公民的幸福快乐了，而且若是受到攻击，它也毫无自我防御的能力。这个因其建制过于庞大而与国家规模不符的政府，将会在其自身的重压下崩溃，乃至灭亡。

另一方面，假如一个国家要有势力的话，它就必须为自己打下扎实的基础，以便能抵抗其必受的种种打击，并且能进行延续自身之存在的种种活动，因为所有民族都会产生一种离心力，凭着这种离心力，它们不断磨擦、互相抗击，都试图以牺牲邻国为代价，像笛卡儿的旋涡一样扩张自己的势力。因而，弱者总是处在被吞食的危险境地。的确，没有哪个民族能妥善地保护好自己，除非它与其他民族达成一种势均力敌的平衡。

这就向我们表明，扩张和收缩都自有其意义；实际上，要准确判断两者混合的比例、使国家顺风顺水地发展下去，其中的政治智慧不可小觑。一般地说，扩张是外部的、相对的，而收缩是内部的、绝对的，因此后者的意义更为重大。强健的组织是一个国家所期待的第一样东西，因为这种出自好政体的势力，比起大片领土所产生的资源更加可靠。

人们可能会补充说，已存在这样的国家，其政治结构要求它必须把征服作为国家体制的一部分；对它们来说，不停地扩张领土实属维护自身的无奈之举。或许，它们的人民也会暗中庆幸，毕竟国家的强大正是仰仗了征服的必要性。可是，这种必要性本身就是一个预兆，揭示了这些国家的最终命运——繁荣过后，便是崩塌。

第十章　论人民（再续）

衡量一个政体有两种方式，一是按其领土的广阔程度，二是按其人口的数量；如果国家想达到最佳规模的话，在这两个方面之间必须存在一定的平衡。公民创造国家，而土地滋养公民；因此，这种均衡要求国家以足够的土地养育人民，而人民的数量又刚好能为土地所承受。正是

在这种均衡之中，已知数量的人口得以产生最大限度的力量，因为如果拥有太多的土地，治理便成了沉重负担，国家的劳动力不足，且无力消耗过量的产品，这样很快就会引来别国的侵略；而另一方面，如果拥有的土地太少，国家便不得不依靠从邻国进口的东西来维持生存，这又必然发展成进攻别国的理由。任何须在商业与战争之间抉择的民族，实质上都是虚弱的；它不但依赖其邻国，还要靠运气来撑过难关，因此终究只能在动荡不安的局势中短暂存在。它不是去征服别国、结束自己的困境，就是被别国征服然后消亡。要么弱小到毫无威胁，要么强大到战无不胜，只有这两种手段能让它保全自己的自由。

由于物产的性质、气候的影响，由于不同地方的不同特征以及土地肥沃程度的差异，还由于居住在不同区域的人——有些鱼米之乡的居民格外节俭，也有些荒蛮之地的居民生活优渥——存在性格上的差异，一个国家无法在其国土面积和居民数量之间确定一个应有的、数学上的确切比例。并且，我们还应该将妇女的生育能力的强弱、不同土地的特点和宜居程度、立法者希望其制度能吸引的移民数量考虑在内。由此可见，立法者必须根据其预见而非所见作出决策，计算出与其说是现有人口的数量，不如说是人口必须自然达到的数量。最后，意外事件会导致数量众多的特殊情况，要求或允许少数人生活在似乎不必要的大面积的土地上。比如，耕作型山区农村——森林地和牧场——不需要太多的劳动力，由于那里的妇女通常拥有比平原妇女更强的生育能力，且陡峭山坡仅留下平地边缘角落能用来种植植物，这个地区的居民确实需要更广阔的土地。与此相反的是海边的情况，在那儿，人们会聚集在一个狭小的区域，甚至聚集在几乎贫瘠的沙石地当中，因为捕鱼可以弥补当地农业生产的诸多不足，且密集的聚落帮助人们更好地抵抗海盗；此外，他们还更易于以殖民的办法来减轻小面积国土的人口负担。

然而，还有一个创建民族的条件，即人们必须享有和平与富足。这一条件是其他条件所无法替代的，没有了它，所有的其余条件都归于无

效。这是因为，一个处在形成时期的国家期就像一个正在列阵的军团，抵抗力最弱，也最容易被摧毁。这段酝酿的时间危机四伏，比国家局势陷入混乱还要糟糕，因为此时每个人只考虑自身的处境，而不是共同的危险。如果在这紧要关头爆发一场战争，或是发生饥荒和骚乱的话，国家将不可避免地走向灭亡。

诚然，许多政体都是在这样的混乱中成功建立起来的，但是随后，这些政体自身却成了国家覆灭的原因。一个要颠覆国家的篡夺者，总是会选择在多事之秋利用民众的普遍恐慌来制定他们在冷静时决不愿意接受的法律。立法者之事业有别于暴君之事业的最明确的特点之一就是：为民族制定宪法的时机。

那么，哪些民族适合接受法律呢？我的回答是：一个已经与现有的某种联盟、利益或习俗紧密联系在一起，但还未正式被严密法律所束缚的民族；一个没有根深蒂固的风俗习惯或迷信的民族；一个不惧怕突然的入侵、不参与邻国的纷争也不畏惧任何邻国、能获得一国支援去抵抗另一国的民族；一个让内部每个成员都能为大家所知，且不强迫任何成员过度劳动民族；一个不依靠别国，也不被别国依靠的民族；[14]一个既不富裕也不贫穷，恰好能维持自己生存的民族；最后，一个将古代民族的凝聚力与现代民族的可塑性结合起来的民族。使立法者工作变得如此之难的，与其说是必须创建的东西，不如说是必须摧毁的东西；而使其成功变得如此稀罕的，则是自然之简单朴素与社会产生的需求的不相容性。把所有这些条件融为一体是有困难的。这就是为何体制完备又能生存下来的国家少之又少。

在欧洲还有一个适合接受法律的国家，它就是科西嘉岛。为了重获和捍卫其自由，这个无畏的民族展现出了无与伦比的英勇和忠诚，他们理应得到一些智者的指导，学习如何维护并延续这份自由。我有一个预感：这个小岛总有一天将让欧洲为之震动。

第十一章　论不同的法律制度

如果我们要问，那个造福全体人民、应该成为每种法律制度目标的最好的结果究竟是什么，我们会发现它有两个主要方面：自由与平等：之所以自由，是因为但凡个体不独立，国家主体的力量就会被大幅削弱；之所以平等，是因为它对自由的实现来说必不可少。

我已经解释过什么是公民自由；至于平等，这个词的意思绝不是说所有人都应拥有完全等量的权力与财富，而是说，权力不该成为任何暴力，而只有凭公正的权威与法律才能加以行使，同时，在财富方面，既不能让一个公民富得足以买下另一个公民，也不能让一个公民穷得被迫出卖自己。这反过来表明，地位较高者必须在财富和权力上有所节制，而地位较低者必须在贪婪和私欲上有所节制。[15]

有人会说，这样的平等完全是一个虚构的理论，它事实上并不存在。可就算恶习不可避免，难道我们不该至少尝试去抑制它吗？正因为环境的力量总是趋于破坏平等，我们才应该一如既往地用立法的力量去维护平等。

然而，一切制度的普遍目标必须在各国加以修正来满足当地的条件、适应相关民族的特性。正是根据这样的要素，一个国家才必须给每个民族制定专门的体制，这种体制在本质上或许不是最好的，但对那个采用它的国家来说应当是最好的。例如，你的国家土地贫瘠、一片荒芜吗？或者它的领土对居民来说太小了吗？那么，这个国家可以重点发展工业和手工业，并用工业品来交换短缺的天然资源。另一方面，假定你的国家拥有富饶的平原和肥沃的坡地，但优质的土地上却没有足够的人口，那么最好的解决办法就是集中精力搞好农业，增加人口，同时尽量避免居民进行工艺活动，因为此类工作不但会减少农村人口，还会让仅有的那些居民向少数城市中心聚集。[16]你的国家拥有便于船只停靠的宽阔海岸吗？那么，若是大量造船、发展贸易和航海业，你的国家即便

历史短暂，也能繁荣富强。如果你的国家运气没那么好，只有一条风急浪高、岩石嶙峋的海岸线，那么也不必强求，顺其自然、像原始人一样捕鱼为生即可。这样，你的生活将更平静，或许也将更好，而且你一定会觉得更加幸福。总之，除了那些为大家所共用的原则之外，每个民族都有其特殊的理由以自己的方式去接受这些原则，并且遵循适合自身的法律。因此，古代的希伯来人和近代的阿拉伯人把宗教当作主要目标，雅典人搞文学，迦太基人和提尔人搞贸易，罗得西亚人出海远航，斯巴达人打仗，而古罗马人注重公民道德建设。《论法的精神》一书的作者已经用几十个例子表明，立法者的艺术是怎样为各国的体制指明其各自的目标的。

要想国家的体制变得真正持久强大，就要对惯例和习俗进行仔细的考量，使自然与法律逐渐在各方面变得和谐。这时候，我们就可以说，法律不管维护、伴随和纠正何种事物，都是在遵循自然规律。然而，立法者也有可能搞错目标，建立与环境要求不一致的原则。当他的原则和环境背道而驰，比如一个倾向于奴役而另一个倾向于自由、一个倾向于财富而另一个倾向于人口增长、一个倾向于和平而另一个倾向于征战时，法律将不知不觉地被削弱，体制将退化，国家将一直处于动乱，直到被毁灭或改朝换代。到那时，不可征服的自然将重新建起自己的帝国。

第十二章　论法律的分类

为了使一切井然有序，也为了给公众带来最可行的法律形式，有各种各样需要考虑的关系。第一，整个政体对自身的作用，换句话说，就是整体与整体之间的关系，或主权者与国家之间的关系。而正如我们会看到的那样，这种大关系由是由许多两者之间的个体的小关系构成的。

制定这种关系的法律被称为政治法，也叫作基本法——只有那些明智的法律才担得起这个称号。因为，如果国家只有一种规范秩序的好办

法，那么制定这一办法的民族理应遵守它。但是，如果已建立的秩序不太好，那么这种阻碍人们获得幸福的法律又有什么基本性可言呢？而且，在任何情况下，一个民族都应有修改法律的自由，哪怕那条法律已经十分完美。毕竟，一个人无论做什么事，就算他是要伤害自己，别人也无权干涉。这对民族来说也是如此。

第二种关系是政体成员之间的关系，或个体与整体之间的关系。个体之间的关系应尽可能受制约，而个体与整体之间的关系应尽可能广泛。这是为了让每个公民既完全独立于其他公民，又十分依赖共和国——既然只有国家权力才能使其成员变得自由，这一结果总是以同样的手段获得，民法正是源自这第二种关系。

我们可能会考虑到人与法之间的第三种关系，即不服从法律和处罚之间的关系。刑法的制定就是以这一点为基础的，不过，与其说刑法是一种特殊法律，不如说它是所有法律背后的准则。

在这三类法律之外还有最为重要的第四类。它既不是雕在大理石上，也不是刻在黄铜上，而是铭记在公民的心坎上。它是一种构成国家真正宪法的法律；它每天都在凝聚力量，当其他法律变得陈旧或衰退时，它便会提供新的动力，或直接取而代之；它在其制度精神的鼓舞下维护国家，不知不觉地以习惯势力代替官方势力。我所说的这第四类法律，正是道德、风俗以及信仰：这一特性虽不为我们的政治理论家所知，却是所有其他法律成功的必要条件；伟大的立法者正是对此特性给予着秘密关注，尽管他们似乎将自己局限于法律详尽的条款，但这些条款只不过是拱顶的拱架，立法者清楚地知道，发展更为缓慢的道德最终将成为国家毫不动摇的基石。

在那些不同类型的法律中，唯有构成政体形式的政治法才与我的主题相关。

第三卷

在讲不同政府形式之前，让我们先来明确政府这个词的具体意思，该词至今尚未得到很好的解释。

第一章　政府总论

我必须提醒读者，本章应当仔细阅读，因为对于那些不想全神贯注的人，我是没有办法讲明白的。

每一种自由的行为都有两个使其发生的原因，一个是道德——确定这一行为的意志，另一个是身体——实施行为的体力。当我们走向一个目标时，首先是要想好该走哪条路，然后就是得确保我们的双脚能带着我们走到那儿。当一个瘫痪病人决心要跑步时，当一个健康的人决心不走时，两者都会停留在他们所在的位置。政体具有相同的两个动力——并且我们能在意志和体力之间作出相同的区分：前者为立法权；后者为行政权。要是两者不相一致，在这政体中就没有什么事能够或者应该做成。

我们已经明白，立法权属于且只属于公民。另一方面，从以上（第二卷第四章和第六章）所制定的原则不难看出，行政权不可能像立法权和主权那样属于一般人，因为行政权只在处于法律范畴之外的特定行动中实施，而既然主权仅有制定法律的职能，那这些行动也就自然不属于主权的范畴。

这样一来，公众力量便需要靠一个代理人才能集中起来，并公意的指导下实施行动。这个代理人是国家与主权者之间沟通的手段，就像一个个体需要灵魂与肉体的结合才能完整一样，公众也需要代理人的牵线

搭桥来发挥其应有的力量。这就是国家需要政府的原因之所在。某些时候，人们会因为分不清政府和主权者而产生误会，但其实对于主权者来说，政府扮演的完全是大臣一样的角色。

那么，什么是政府呢？政府就是臣民与主权者之间为了相互沟通建立起来的中间体，它的职责是行使法律，同时维护社会自由和政治自由。

这个主体的成员被称作行政官或国王，换句话说就是执政者，而整个主体又被冠以君主的名称。[17]因而，那些不承认人民服从统治者的行为是一种契约的理论家们是完全正确的。那种行为只不过是一种委任，也就是说，执政者只不过是被主权者雇佣、以其名义代行其权利罢了，而且主权者随时可以凭自己的意志限制、改变，然后再次赋予执政者这种权利。既然如此，这种权力的转让便与社会主体的性质不可兼容，而且也违背了社会联盟建立的初衷。

因此，我把“政府”或“最高行政”称作行政权的合法行使，而把“君主”或“行政官”称为负责管理机构的人或主体。

正是在政府中，我们才可能辨别出构成整体与整体之间、或主权者与国家之间相互关系的中间力量。这最后一个关系，可描述为一种几何意义上的连续，有着明确的两个端点，而政府的位置就是这个连续的中项。政府从主权者那儿接受其给予公民的敕令；如果想让国家处于完全平衡的状态，就必须对一切进行精确计算，最后得出一个等式——政府权力的二次方等于既是主权者、又是权力实施之对象的公民权力的二次方。

此外，这三个条件中的任何一个都不得被破坏，否则比例立刻会发生改变。不管是主权者试图统治、行政官试图立法还是臣民拒绝服从，秩序都将让位于混乱，权力和意志将停止步调一致的行动，解体的国家

不是陷入专制政治，就是陷入无政府状态。最后，由于两个极端之间只有一个几何学平均值，所以一个国家也只能有一种好的政府形式；但是，许许多多的事件可能会改变一个国家内部的种种关系，在这个基础上，除了不同的民族可以拥有各不相同的好政府，同一个民族也可能在多个时期拥有不同形式的好政府。

为了设法解说可能存在于这两个极端之间的种种关系，我将以人口数量为例，因为这是一种不难表达的比率。

假设一个国家由一万个公民组成。在这里，主权者只能被共同视为主体，而每个成员作为臣民必然被视为个体。因而，主权者与臣民的比率就是一万比一，那就是说，国家中每个成员只有万分之一的主权份额，尽管他自己是完全从属于主权者的。现在，假设这个民族的人口增加到十万。每个臣民的地位并没有改变，因为每个人与其他人一道平等地支撑起整个法律体系，而作为主权者，人们的投票份额减少到十万分之一，结果就是，一个人在法律制定方面的影响力也按比例骤减了。因而，当主权者与臣民的比率随公民数量而增大时，臣民依然还是单一的个体。由此可见，国家越扩大，自由就越减小。

当说到比率增加时，我是以一作为标准的。这样，数学意义上的比率越大，现实中的比率就越小，因为在前者中，根据数量考虑的比率是用商数来衡量的，而在后者中，根据相等考虑的比率是用相似值来衡量的。

个意与公意，即人们的道德与法律之间的比率越小，需要使用的压制力就越大。因此，要想维持一个好的政府，就应该让其力量与人口数量同步增长。

在人口比率中，既然国家的扩大意味着为官员提供更多的诱惑，以及更多滥用手中权力的机会，那么当政府管理公民的权力增大时，主权

者也需要有更大的权力来制约政府。我在此所说的并非绝对权力，而是国家不同成分的相对权力。

由这种双重关系可见，主权者、君主和公民之间的几何连续并不是一个任意的概念，而是政体性质的必然结果。由此还可见，既然公民在两个极端之间作为一而存在，那么每当连续的平方发生增减，连续本身同样会增减。中间项——即政府——也就随之改变。这就表明，不存在唯一绝对的政府形式，有多少大小不同的国家，就有多少不同类型的政府。

如果有人会对这种体系不以为然，并说：按照我的思路，想要建立一个好政府，即找到这个几何连续的中项，只需算出人口数的平方根即可。那么，我的回答是，我在此仅以数量为例；我所讲的比率不仅以人口数来衡量，而且更多地以无数原因并发产生的作用量来衡量；我得补充说明的是，虽然为了用三言两语表达自己的想法，我刚才借用过数学语言，但是我仍然意识到，数学的精确度完全表达不出精神层面的深刻考量。

包含政府在内的政体规模有多大，政府本身的规模就有多小。政府是一个被赋予某些功能的、像主权者那样积极却像国家那样被动的虚构人格，它可以再被细分为几种相似的关系，而新的比率由此产生。在每一种比率中，我们都可根据行政官的等级继续分析，直至我们取得唯一不可分割的中间项，也就是唯一的最高行政官为止，他可以被认为是分数数列和整数数列之间的“一”。

我们也可以不纠结这些复杂的概念，只把政府简单当作国家之内的一个新主体，它与公民和主权者都不相同，而且正好处于这两者的正中间。

这新旧两个主体之间存在着本质上的差异——国家就其本身而言是

存在的，而政府只有借助主权者才能存在。因而，君主的统治意志是或应该只是公意或法律；他的权力仅仅是公共权力的集中体现。一旦他决心以自己的权威施行某些绝对不受约束的行为，整个主体就会开始涣散。最后，如果君主拥有了比主权者更积极的个意，而且他为了贯彻这一个意而利用了手中的公众权力，以至于让两个主权者同时存在——一个是权利上的，另一个是事实上的——那么，联系社会的纽带便会即刻消失，政体也会随之瓦解。

即便如此，为了让政府本身拥有一个真实的、有别于国家的确切存在形式，也为了使它的全部成员能步调一致地依照政府设立的初衷提供服务，它必须有一个特定的“自我”、一种所有成员共有的觉悟、一种力量、一种倾向于延续自身的意志。如此特定的存在形式就需要有大会、内阁会议、审议权和决定权、头衔和专属于君主的特权，而且对于那些担当艰难任务的行政官，君主要用自己的特权给予他们相应的尊贵地位。难的是找到一种方法，在整体中妥善安排这个附属性的整体，使政府在自我调整的时候，不对总的国家体制造成影响。只有这样，政府用以维持其生存的自身力量，才能与保障国家之存续的公众力量区别开来。总而言之，国家应该始终准备为了公民牺牲政府，而不是为了政府牺牲公民。

再者，即使政府这个人造主体是另一个相似人造主体的产物，且它仅仅具有一种模仿的、附属的存在形式，但这并不妨碍它能以或多或少的活力和或快或慢的速度自由行动。同样，它的健康程度也完全由自身决定。最后，虽然政府不会直接走上与其设定好的种种目标相悖的道路，但根据其被构建起来的方式，政府确实有可能在不同程度上偏离那些目标。

正是这些差异促成了应当存在于政府与国家主体之间的多样化的关系，且这些使国家本身发生变化的关系都遵照种种偶然的、特定的比

率。因为，若不想让本质上最好的政府演变为最邪恶的政府，就必须让它与国家的关系保持在最优状态，从而弥补它所属政体的种种不足。

第二章　论不同政府形式的建制原则

既然我已经在国家与主权者之间做过区分，所以为了解释这些差异的一般原因，现在有必要在君主和政府之间也做一番区分。

行政官主体可能由或多或少的成员组成。我们已经知道，人口越是众多，人民的主权份额就越小。通过明显的类推，我们可以说，政府较之行政官也有同样的比率。

不论何时，政府的整体力量就是国家的力量，这一点是永远不会改变的；由此可见，政府为其成员消耗的力量越多，它用在全体公民身上的力量就越小。

所以行政官的数量越多，政府就显得越弱。由于这是一项基本原则，那就让我们努力把它弄得更清楚吧。

我们可在行政官个人身上辨别出三个本质上不同的意志。第一，他作为个体拥有的、只倾向于他个人利益的意志。第二，行政官的集体意志，这种意志只涉及君主的利益，可以被称为团体的意志，因为它与对政府来说是普遍的，而对包含政府在内的国家来说又是特殊的。第三，公民意志或主权者意志，这种意志不管是对作为整体的国家来说，还是对作为整体一部分的政府来说，都是普遍的。

在一个立法健全的体制中，个意或特殊意志是不该存在的，而政府自身的团体意志也应该处于非常次要的地位。这样一来，公意或主权者意志就永远起到主导作用，并且成为所有其他意志的唯一规范。

相反，在自然秩序中，这些不同的意志越是各行其道，他们就越是

活跃。因此，公意始终是最软弱的，而团体意志排列第二，特殊意志名列第一；结果，在政府内部，每个成员首先是个人的自我，其次是行政官，最后才是公民。这一排序正好与社会秩序所要求的相反。

这一点成立之后，让我们假设政府被掌握在单一个体的手中。那时，特殊意志与团体意志将完美地结合在一起，而团体意志也从而得以被提升到尽可能高的程度。既然已知权力的行使取决于意志，而政府的绝对权力总是不变的，那么我们就可以得出一个结论，即最具活力的政府就是一个人的政府。

然而，如果我们将条件替换，使政府和立法权威相结合，使君主成为主权者，使每个公民成为行政官——结果就是，与公意合并的团体意志变得与公意一样不活跃，只剩下特殊意志去指挥整个权力。而这样一个始终被同一个绝对力量所掌控的政府，势必只能拥有最少的相对力量和活力。

这些关系是无可争议的，而其他的思考也可以进一步补充证据。例如，我们清楚，每个在政府机构内的行政官肯定比每个在国家主体内的公民活跃。因此，政府行为比主权者行为更容易受到特殊意志的影响，因为每个行政官基本上都肩负着政府的某种特有职能，而公民作为个体却并不承担主权的任何职能。此外，国家扩张得越大，其真正的力量就增加得越多，尽管这两种增长不成一个固定的比例。然而，如果成倍增长的不是国家面积，而是行政官的数量的话，政府便无法从中获得任何实际的力量，毕竟政府力量就是国家力量，这两者总是完全相等的。所以，在其绝对或真正力量不可能增加的情况下，政府的行政官越多，它的相对力量或相对活力就越是减少。

而且，毋庸置疑的是，公众事务的处理速度会随着负责人的增加而下降。庞大的机构过于谨慎，不爱碰运气，往往会错失许多机会；他们花大量的时间深思熟虑，反而使思考的结果一文不值。

我刚刚说过，行政官成倍增加，政府就会涣散。我之前也提到，人口数量越多，对人施加的约束力也必须相应增大。由此可见，行政官与政府的比率应该跟臣民与主权者的比率相反；换句话说，国家扩张得越大，政府越得缩小自身的规模，从而让行政官数量按人口的增加成比例地减少。

我得补充一点，我在此谈的是政府的相对力量，而不是其行为特性。因为，反过来讲，行政官人数越多，他们的团体意志就越接近公意，而在唯一的行政官行使职权的情况下，唯一的的团体意志就像我所说的那样，只是一种特殊意志。所以，在一方面有所失，在另一方面就有所得；立法者的艺术就在于懂得如何确定这样的一个点：让始终在比率上背道而驰的政府力量与政府意志按最有利于国家的比率结合起来。

第三章　论政府的分类

从上一章我们了解到，为何要按组成政府的成员数量来区分政府的各种类型或各种形式；本章将继续阐明政府的分类如何进行的问题。

首先，主权者可能将政府交到全体公民或绝大多数人手中，使得作为行政官的公民比普通公民更多。这种政府形式就是民主制。

此外，主权者可能将政权限制在少数人手中，这样，普通公民就比行政官更多：这种政府形式就是贵族制。

再次，主权者可能将整个政府集中在唯一的一个行政官手中，所有其他人都从他那儿得到权力。这第三种政府的形式最为普遍，被称作君主制或王室政府。

应当注意的是，所有这些形式，或者至少前两种形式都可以增强或减弱其程度；它们具有相当明显的伸缩性。民主制可能包括所有人，但其实只要有一半以上的人数它就能成立。而贵族制既可以包括多达一半

的人，也可以局限于极少数人。即使是王室政府，在某种程度上也可能由人们分享。斯巴达按其宪法，通常有两个国王；而在维持统一的基础上，古罗马帝国以同时拥有过多达八个君主而闻名于世。因而，每一种政府形式总有与另一种政府形式重叠的地方。另外，很明确的一点是，政府虽然只有三种名称，但它实际上的形式却有许多种，就像国家拥有众多不同的公民一样。

再者，既然一个政府在某些方面能够将自己细分成几个独立的部分，并让这些部分以不同方式进行行政工作，那么这三种政府便可以结合起来，产生多个混合形式，而每种混合形式又可以与三种原有形式结合。

在每个历史朝代，人们都争论过这样一个问题："什么是政府的最佳形式？"然而，他们不明白，每一种可能存在的形式在某种情况下都是最佳的，但在另一种情况下又会变成最坏的。

假设在每个特定的国家，最高行政官数量都应与跟公民人数成反比，那么我们就会得出以下结果：一般地说，民主政府适于小国；贵族政府适于不大不小的国家；君主政府则适于大国。这一法则可以直接从我们的定理中得出；可是，我们怎么去计算那些可能出现的例外情况呢？

第四章　论民主制

制定法律的人比任何其他人都清楚法律应该如何实施与解释。这样看来，不可能有比行政权与立法权相结合更好的体制了；事实上，正是这种结合使政府的形式在某些方面变得不完善，因为本应该被分开的东西没有分开，而且，合为一体的君主与主权者只会造就一个徒有其表的政府。

让制定法律的人去执行法律，或者让公民共同体不关注普遍的观点而关注特殊的对象，都不是什么好事。在公共事务中，没有什么会比私利的影响更加危险了。立法者若追逐私利，就必将导致腐败，造成比政府滥用法律还要邪恶的后果。这种情况发生时，国家便会从自身的肌体内开始腐败，再进行改良也无济无事。一个从不滥用政府各种权力的民族，同样也不会滥用独立自主，而一个始终自我管理良好的民族，是无需由别人来管理的。

从严格意义上说，至今还未曾有过真正的民主制，而且将来也决不会有。管理人员比被管理人员还多，这是违背自然法则的。我们几乎无法想象所有人都永久地坐在大会席位上处理公务的情形，同时也很容易明白，我们不可能以此为目的成立委员会，除非连行政形式也一起改变。

我的确相信，人们可以制定这样一条原则：当政府的种种职能由若干委员会分别掌握时，那些拥有最少成员的委员会迟早会获得最大的权力。这不是出于别的原因，而是由调度事务的机制所导致的自然结果。

此外，民主形式的政府还需具备多少难以同时拥有的条件呢？第一，它必须要在一个非常小的国家，因此能迅速地将人们聚集在一起，而且使每个公民都很容易相互认识。第二，作风上要简朴，道德上要单纯，从而避免过多的事务和棘手的争论。第三，要竭力保持社会等级和财富的平等，若非如此，则权利和权威的平等也不会持久。第四，要尽量杜绝奢侈，因为奢侈要么是财富带来的结果，要么是人们视敛财为必要的动因。奢侈不但腐化富人，也腐化穷人；奢侈导致懒惰和虚荣之风盛行，也让一个国家失去所有公民，因为不管是拥有奴隶的人还是成为奴隶的人，全部都是观念的奴隶。

这就是为什么过去的一个著名作家主张将美德作为一个共和国的基本原则，因为没有美德，我前文所说的一切条件就不可能成立。然而，

就算天才如这位伟大的作家，他也没能分辨一些必要的区别，因此常常犯错，有时还令人费解。他无法明白，既然主权者的权威放之四海而皆准，那么同样的原理在每个健全的国家就都应占有一席之地——当然，或多或少也要考虑到该国的政府形式。

我们可以补充说，没有一个政府会像民主政府或人民政府那样，极易发生内战和自相残杀的冲突，因为没有哪个政府会如此坚定有力地趋向于改朝换代，也没有哪个政府需要那么多的警惕性和勇气以维护其不变的状态。正是在这种体制而非其他的情况下，公民必须用力量和忠诚武装自身，并且于每天的生活中发自内心地反复重温一位善良的巴拉丁[18]在波兰议会上曾说过的话："我愿自由而有危险，但不愿安宁而受奴役。"[19]

如果真的有一个天神之国，那它想必就是以民主的形式存在的。然而，如此完美的国家并不适合我们人类。

第五章　论贵族制

我们这里有两个截然不同的人造人格，即政府和主权者，所以也就有了两个公意，一个属于全体公民，另一个只属于行政官。因而，政府虽可随意制定其内部规章，但除非以主权者的名义，否则它决不能直接向公民传达意见。这一点我们必须牢记。

最初，社会都是由贵族治理的。家族的首领们组成小圈子商讨公共事务：年轻人则心甘情愿地服从经验的权威。因此，就有了宗师、长老、元老、长者等名称。北美洲的野蛮人现在仍然保留着这种治理方法，且卓有成效。

可是，当人为的的不平等渐渐胜过自然的不平等时，财富与权力[20]便显得比年龄更为重要了，因此，贵族社会开始实行选举。最后，

决定一个家族显赫与否的是父辈遗留给子辈的权力和附带的财产，于是一些家族就有了世袭政权的资格；到那时，年仅二十的年轻人也能当元老了。

如此，就有了三种贵族制，即自然的、选举的和世袭的。第一种类型只适合原始社会，而第三种类型是所有贵族制中最糟糕的一种。第二种类型最好，并且代表了贵族制这个词的真正含义。

贵族制的好处，不仅在于它能将主权者与政府区别开，还在于它可以对行政官进行挑选。在公民政府中，所有公民生来都是行政官，而在贵族制国家，只有少数人能被选举[21]成为行政官，这一方法使得诚实、明智、经验以及所有其他受人喜爱并尊重的理由成为了优质政府的进一步保证。

此外，集会的安排也将变得更加容易，方便人们进行细致的商议，在处理事务时更加有序、恪尽职守；在外人看来，比起身世平凡、人微言轻的无名之辈，德高望重的元老更能维护国家的声誉。

总之，如果我们能确定，最英明的人会为大众利益而非为一己之利治理国家的话，那么由这样的人来统治大众就是最佳最自然的安排。同时，一味地增设机构毫无益处，我们也不该雇两万人来完成一百个出色的人就能圆满完成的任务。不过，必须注意到的是，这样一来，共同利益就会渐渐不再只按公意来引导国家力量了；更不可避免的趋向是，一部分权力的执行将脱离法律的管控。

若考虑与政府形式相适宜的状况，那么国家的面积就不必太小，公民也不必非得那么单纯、那么正直，以至于就像在理想的民主制社会一样，法律的实施可以完全遵照公意。同时，国家也没必要大到足以让四处分散的地方行政长官自立门户、侵占主权，从追求独立渐渐发展成各霸一方。

可是，如果说比起公民政府，贵族制更不在意人们普遍的美德的话，它对一些特定的美德却要求更高，比如让富人懂得节制、让穷人学会满足，因为严格的平等不但在这里无法实现，甚至在斯巴达也是见所未见的。

此外，如果政府的这种形式牵涉到一些财富上的不平等，那么好的做法应该是把公共事务委托给那些能全心全意投身于此的人，而不是像亚里士多德所主张的那样委托给富人。作出这样的选择是有必要的，因为那会时不时提醒人们：人的功绩比财富更有资格得到优先考虑。

第六章　论君主制

到目前为止，我们一直把君主看作是一个集体的、人造的人格，他与法律的力量融为一体，并在国家中扮演行政权的受托人的角色。现在，若是我们把这个人格换成一个自然的、真正的人，即只有这个人能够依法行使这种权利，那么他就可以被称为君主或国王。

这正好与其他管理机构相反。在其他机构，集体集中体现为一个个体，而君主制是让一个个体代表整个集体，所以，君主的精神统一性同时又是物质统一性，使得其他制度用法律难以聚拢的力量，在这里却能自然而然地聚拢起来。

由此，公民的意志、君主的意志、国家的公众力量、政府的个体权力，所有这些都听从同一个行为者的调遣，所有机器杠杆都掌握在同一个人手中，所有行为都指向同一个目标，不存在什么相互对抗的矛盾。面对这样一种体制，我们再也想象不出有什么别的形式能使一个国家以更少的努力获得更多的成果。阿基米德静静地坐在海岸上，却能毫不费力地发动一艘巨轮，这就是一位身居斗室而管理广阔疆域的君主的理想形象。他必然十分熟悉治国之道，所以即使自身不动，也能使国家的一切有序运转。

但是，如果说君主制是最为朝气蓬勃的一种政府，那么它同时也是最容易让特殊意志压倒其他所有意志的政府。诚然，在君主制国家，各方都在朝着同样的目标努力，可那个目标并不是公众的幸福。另一方面，就连行政权力本身也持续不断地为国家带来危害。

国王们都想尽可能地巩固自己的地位，而人们的声音从远处传来：若想高枕无忧，最好办法是使自己得到公民的爱戴。这是一条很好的箴言，甚至在某些方面还是一条千真万确的箴言。不幸的是，这条箴言总在宫廷里遭到嘲笑。建立在民众拥护基础上的权力无疑是最强大的权力，不过也是不稳固的、暂时的权力；君主们绝不会对此心满意足。再好的国王，都会想要一边为所欲为，一边稳坐一国之主的位子；一个政治说教者很可能会对国王说：既然公民的力量就是国王的力量，那么国王的最大利益就是使得民族繁荣昌盛、人丁兴旺、外敌不敢来犯。可是，国王们其实都非常明白，这并非事实。对他们的个人利益来说，首要的就是，人民应该软弱、不幸且永远无力反抗。我承认，如果国王拥有的是一群完全顺从于他的臣民，那么他的个人利益自然也就要求他使公民变得强大，因为这样一来，他便能将公民的力量作为自己的力量，从而对邻国施威；可既然这只是一种次要的、从属的利益，而且既然公民的强大与顺从不可兼得，君主们总是优先采纳更能带来直接利益的主张。这就是塞缪尔极力向希伯来人强调的东西，也是马基雅维利很清楚地证明过的东西——他表面上是在指导国王，实际上是给人民上了重要的一课。马基雅维利的《君王论》是一部为共和论者而写的指南。[22]

通过对一般比率的讨论，我们已经知道，君主制只适合大国，而且当我们检验君主制本身时，这一点也十分明显。公共行政人员的数量越多，君主与臣民的比率就减少得越多、越接近相等，乃至在民主制中达到一比一，即完全相等。而随着政府的收缩，这一比率会越来越大，且在政权掌握于唯一一人手里的情况下达到最大限度。到那时，君主与公民之间存在太大的差距，国家便缺少团结的纽带。要想形成纽带，就必

须增加中间社会阶层，并以王公、大臣和贵族来填充。但是，这一切都不适合一个小国，因为它承受不了如此之多的社会阶级。

如果管好一个大国是有难度的，那要一个人单枪匹马管好大国就是难上加难了；每个人都知道，当一个国王找来许多副手治理国家时会发生什么情况。

一个使君主制始终不如共和制的关键而又不可避免的缺陷是，在共和国中，民众只会选择有知识、有能力的人来担任举足轻重的职位，而且这些人也会以相应的业绩来回报这份荣誉。相反，那些在君主制下加官进爵的人，几乎总是糊里糊涂的平庸之辈、身无长处的流氓和卑鄙的阴谋家，他们的小聪明只够让自己在宫廷里爬到高位，一旦履行起职务来，他们的无能便在公众面前暴露无遗。比起君主，公民更不经常在这样的选择中犯错。一个真正有才的人给王室当阁臣，几乎就像一个傻子在共和政府里当首相一样稀奇罕见。因此，如果在一个君主制国家中，碰巧有一位天生的明君出世，在一批糟糕到足以使巨轮倾覆的行政官中力挽狂澜、执掌事务之舵，那么每个人都会惊愕于他发展国家的能力，而他的统治也将在国史上开创一个新纪元。

君主制国家要想得到很好的治理，其领土大小和边界范围都应与统治者的才能成比例。征服一个国家比治理一个国家来得容易。一根手指在足够长的杠杆的帮助下可以撬动地球；可如果要一直撑住地球，一个人必须拥有一副大力神赫克里斯的肩膀。无论一个国家有多小，其君主的力量也几乎总是不足以顾及方方面面。而当两者地位颠倒，即国家对其统治者而言竟显得太小时，这个国家的治理肯定只会更差，因为这样一个统治者在高瞻远瞩时忽略了公民的利益；他过度使用自身强大能力给人民带来的不幸，可能比才能平平的统治者给人民带来的不幸还要多。同样，一个王国也需要根据各朝君主的能力来决定要扩张还是收缩。另一方面，共和国在选举元老院成员时已经基本确定了他们的水

平，所以国家在面积上就不必再有变动，而行政机构的运转也可以保持顺畅。

一人掌权的政府最显而易见的缺点，就是缺乏继承者之间的连续性，而在另两种体制中却存在着一条持续不断的纽带。当国王驾崩时，新国王必定要继位；在下一个统治者人选得到确定之前，有一段危险的间歇，国家往往要经历一场狂风暴雨。而且，在这样一种体制下，除非全体公民都能保持超乎寻常的公正无私和团结一致，否则贿赂和腐化的现象必将出现。要让一个已经买下国家的人到头来既不把它转手卖掉，也不向弱者收回强者从他那儿勒索走的黄金，基本是不可能的。在这样一种行政机构的管理下，迟早一切都会成为贪污腐败的交易筹码，同时，比起动荡的政权空白期，人们在国王统治的和平时期反而会过得更糟糕。

为了避免这种邪恶的境况，人们都做了什么呢？其中一种做法是指定某些家族来世袭王位，并且设立继承秩序，以避免国王的驾崩引发任何争端——换句话说，为了避免王位争夺和新王继位带来的不利，明智的政体选择接受表面的和平，他们宁可冒着由小孩、怪胎或傻瓜来担任统治者的风险，也不愿意为了选出一位好国王而发生纠纷。他们没有意识到，在将自己置于种这两难境地时，这其实是在为一种非常小的可能性孤注一掷。小但尼斯的父亲因其不光彩的行为而责备他："我给你树立过这样的榜样吗？"小但尼斯答道："啊！可您的父亲不是国王啊。"这是一句多么精辟的话语。

当一个人生来就是要被培养成统治者时，他周围的一切都会来争相剥夺他的正义感与理性。我们听说过，年轻的统治者历经磨难是为了更好地掌握治国的艺术，但根据现实情况来看，这种教育对他们似乎并没有什么好处。相反，他们还不如将服从的艺术作为学习的起点。史上已知最伟大的国王，都不是接受了从小到大的教育才成为统治者的，因为

统治是一门必须通过大量实践才能基本掌握的学问，而且比起发号施令，懂得顺从往往能帮助统治者更好地领悟其中的精髓。Nam utilissimus idem acbrevissimus bonarum malarumque rerum delectus, cogitare quid aut nolueris sub alio Principe aut volue-ris（因为区分好坏最有效最简便的方法是：如果当君主的不是自己而是别人，那就考虑一下自己想要什么，不想要什么）。[23]

这种缺乏连贯性的后果之一，便是王室政府的不稳定，这种政府时而由这个方针指导，时而由那个方针指导，一切都取决于在位国王或是替他执政的人们的个性。因此，这种政府无法长久地拥有一个固定的目标或连贯的政策，且这种不稳定的状况使得国家的准则和国家的方针也漂移不定。在其他政府形式中，由于统治者始终固定不变，这一缺陷便自然得以避免。因而，我们明白，如果通常在王室宫廷中有更多的狡诈，那么在元老院中就有更多的智慧，而共和国也能遵循更稳定、更有效的引导——这对每次管理层变革都意味着一次国家变革的君主制国家来说是不可能的——毕竟所有大臣和近乎所有国王都无一例外地要颠覆他们先辈的政策。

此外，这种缺乏连贯性还给保皇党政治思想家们常有的一种谬论提供了不实的依据，他们不仅把公民政府和家族政府作比较、把君主和一家之长作比较——我已经反驳过这种谬误——而且把治国的所有美德赋予一位国王，假定他已经是一位最优秀的统治者。若是这种假定成立，那么王室政府显然要比其他政府更优越，因为它无可争议是最强大的政府；要是它也有一个与公意相协调的团体意志的话，它必然也是最佳的政府。

可是，如果根据柏拉图的说法，一个天生的国王十分罕见的话，那天性与好运合二为一、使这样的人登基的可能性又有多大呢？而且，如果王室教育必然会腐化那些受教育者的话，我们又如何指望那些被培养

出来的继任者会成为明君呢？

将王室政府与有一个好国王的政府混为一谈，这是故意自欺欺人。要了解政府的这种形式究竟是什么，人们必须把平庸或邪恶君主统治下的政府也考虑在内，因为这些君主若非本身就昏庸无道，那他们就只能是因为王位才变成了这个样子。

的确，我们的作家们都注意到了以上这些困难，但是困难从未使他们处于进退两难的尴尬境地。他们说，毫无怨言地去服从是一剂良药。神愤怒时强行把坏国王给了我们，于是，必须将其作为一次神的惩罚来忍受。这个观点无疑是有启发性的；不过，我想比起政治理论书，它更适和被用来布道。若一个医生许诺奇迹会发生，而他的全部医术就是教病人训练耐性，对这样的医生我们还有什么话可说呢？

我们大家都知道，当一个政府不好时，我们不得不容忍这样一个坏政府；真正的问题是，我们如何去寻找一个好政府。

第七章　论混合政府

严格地说，一种形式简单的政府是生存不下去的。一个国家元首必须有属下的行政官；一个公民政府必须有一个首脑。因而，在行政权力的分配中，总是存在着从较大到较小的等级——其中的差异就在于，有时少数服从多数，有时多数服从少数。

有时，还存在一个平等的划分，要么像英国政府一样，各个组成部分相互依赖，要么像波兰的情况那样，每部分的权力都是独立而不完善的。后者的形式不是很好，因为这样一来，非但政府内部无法团结，整个国家也缺乏联系的纽带。那么哪一种政府更好？是简单形式的政府还是混合形式的政府呢？这是一个政治理论家们争论已久的问题，也是一个我本人在早先探讨政府的所有形式时就给过答案的问题。

就其本身来说，简单形式的政府是最好的，因为它的简单就是优点。但是，当行政权不完全依附于立法权，即当君主与主权者的比率大于公民与君主的比率时，这种不平衡就必须通过划分政府来加以矫正。因为到那时，政府的各个部分依旧对臣民有足够的权威，但零散的结构将使政府不再有力量与主权者相抗衡。

同样的不利还可以通过设立居间的行政官来避免，这些行政官与整个政权分隔开来，只起到平衡这两种权力的作用，并为维护双方的权利而提供服务。那么，这样一种政府就不是混合的，而是调和的。

与此相反的不利也可以用类似的方法加以补救；当政府太涣散时，可设立一些委员会使之集中化。在前一种情况下，划分政府是为了将其削弱；而在目前所说的这种情况下，加强政府才是主要目的。这是所有民主制的惯用做法。简单形式的政府既有可能极端强大，也有可能极端弱小，而混合形式则可以让政府维持一种适中的强度。

第八章　论所有政府形式并非适合所有国家

自由并非每种社会思潮的产物，因此不是每个民族都能获得自由的。人们对孟德斯鸠的这一理论思考得越多，就越会觉得其中蕴含着真理。同时，人们越是想要反驳这个理论，就会为它提供越多新的证据。

在世界上的每个政府中，公众人格都是只消费、不生产的。那么，它从哪儿得到其所消费的物质呢？是从其成员的劳动中得到的。正是私人生产的过剩保证了大众衣食的供给。由此可见，只有当成员的劳动生产所得比其自身所需要的多，公民国家才能生存下去。

可是，这种过剩在世界上的每个国家不尽相同。在一些国家是相当过剩，而在另一些国家是中等过剩；在一些国家是没有过剩，而在另一些国家是亏空。过剩的比例取决于气候的适宜与否、不同土地对应的劳

动种类、产品的性质、居民的力量、居民的消费水平以及其余各种各样的因素。

另外，并非所有政府都拥有相同的本性。一些政府比另一些政府更贪婪；它们之间的差异建立在以下的原则基础上——民众贡献的提供者和接受者之间的距离越远，造成的负担就越重。要衡量这种负担，不应看它的具体数量，而应该看它的回报最终落到生产者头上要经过多远的距离；如果这一流程运作得快捷且良好，那不管产出的要求是多是少，都没有关系；人们将一直富有，财政也将昌盛。相应地，就算人们给出得再少，若是一点回报都不返还给他们，那他们很快就会在不断的付出中将自己消耗殆尽；于是国家就永远富裕不起来，公民就永远赤贫。

这表明，公民与政府之间的距离越大，负税就变得越重，因此，人们的税金负担在民主社会最少，在贵族社会较多，而在君主国家则是三者中最多的。所以，君主制适宜于富国，贵族制适宜于那些富裕程度与领土大小适中的国家，而民主制则适宜于贫穷小国。

的确，人们思考得越多，对自由国与君主国之间存在差异的这个问题就认识得越深；在前者中，一切都为共同的利益所用；而在后者中，私人利益与公众利益则相互竞争，即一个要只能通过削弱另一个而增加。至于专制统治，它的目的从来不是使人民幸福，而是尽可能使他们过得悲惨，从而无力进行抗争。

于是，根据每个地区特有的自然因素，人们可以决定该地区所需要的政府形式；我们甚至还可以说出每个政府必须拥有什么样的居民。

有些地方一片荒芜，产出的物品抵偿不了所付出的劳动，所以人们不应该耕作，而应该放任不管，或者只让未开化的野人来居住。有些地方的生产所得只能勉强维持人们的生活，所以应该让缺乏教养的民族定居，因为政治社会不可能在那儿发展起来。有些地方条件尚可，适度的

劳动就能换来过剩的产品，所以应该让崇尚自由的民族居住。有些地方环境优越，少量的劳动就能带来丰厚回报，所以应该实行君主制，以便君主的奢侈生活可以消费掉臣民过剩的产品——因为由政府来吸收这些多余产品总好过它们被私人用来浪费。我知道有例外的情况，不过这些例外本身就证实了这一规则，即它们迟早都会产生种种变革，使得事物回到自然的秩序。

我们应当始终把一般法则与无法预测其结果的特殊原因区别开来。纵然整个南方由共和党人居住，而整个北方由专制国家占据，我们也依然可以说一个法则是正确的，即根据气候条件，专制适宜于气候炎热的国家，野蛮适宜于气候寒冷的国家，优良的制度适宜于气候温和的地区。我意识到，人们虽然肯定这个一般法则，但它的应用却可能遭到质疑；有人会说，气候十分寒冷的国家也有非常肥沃的土地，而气候十分炎热的国家也有非常贫瘠的土地。不过，只有那些不从全面的比率看情况的人才会对这一问题无从下手。正如我曾说过的那样，人们必须考虑到生产、力量、消费等因素，然后问题便会迎刃而解。

假设有两块大小相同的土地，一块生产五份产品，另一块生产十份产品。如果前者的居民消费掉四份，后者的居民消费掉九份的话，一个过剩五分之一，另一个过剩十分之一。这两种过剩的比率与其产量的比率是相反的，其结果是，生产五份产品的土地所显示的过剩是生产十份产品土地的两倍。

但是，这个两倍指的仅仅是过剩比例，而不是产品数量。我相信，任何人都不敢把寒冷国家的生产能力等同于炎热国家的生产能力。不过，让我们暂且假设这是相等的吧：例如，让我们两两比较一下英国和西西里岛、波兰和埃及。再往南有非洲和印度；再往北就什么都没有了。为了达到产品的同等，不同国家在农业技术方面需要作出怎样的改变呢？在西西里岛，简单地耙一耙土壤就足够了，而在英国，要解决问

题则需要付出多么大的努力啊！这就说明，需要更多人手才能获得一样多产品的地方，过剩必然更少。

除此之外，在炎热的国家，同样数量的人会消费更少的东西。炎热的气候要求人们变得饮食有度以保持健康——那些试图在炎热国家保持原有生活习惯的欧洲人都死于痢疾和胃病。沙尔丹说："与亚洲人相比，我们是食肉动物，是狼。一些人把波斯人的饮食有度归因于他们国家耕种的土地较少；可相反，我认为，他们国家之所以在食品方面不够丰富，是因为居民需求量较少。如果他们的节俭[他继续]是由土地不足导致的，那么应该只有穷人才吃得很少；但实际上，他们每个人都是这样；人们发现，王国上上下下所有人都一样节俭，并没有哪个省份的人根据土地的肥沃程度吃得更多或更少。他们对自己的生活方式颇感自豪，并且说：人们只须看他们的气色就会明白，他们的生活方式比其他国家的优越得多。的确，波斯人的面色都干干净净，他们的皮肤精致、细嫩又光滑，而依附于他们的亚美尼亚人，生活习惯和欧洲人一样，他们的皮肤就粗糙而易于长斑，身体也肥胖笨拙。"

人们离赤道越近，生活就越节俭。他们几乎不吃肉；大米、玉米、蒸粗麦粉、小米和木薯是他们的日常食品。在印度，有好几百万人一天的饮食费用都不到一便士。而在欧洲本土，我们注意到，北欧人的胃口和南欧人的明显不同。德国人的一顿晚饭，可以让一个西班牙人吃上八天。在人们胃口比较大的国家，消费也更加奢侈。在英国，奢侈表现为在餐桌上堆满各种肉食；而在意大利，人们只要有糖和鲜花就心满意足了。

服装的奢侈显示出同样的差异。在季节变化又快又明显的国家，人们拥有更为简单而优质的衣服；在人们穿衣只考虑外表的国家，人们更注重衣服的款式而非实用性，且衣服本身也成了一种奢侈品。在那不勒斯，你天天都会看到人们身穿绣金外套而不穿长统袜沿着普斯里普漫

步。那儿的建筑也是同样的风格；当人们不必担心气候问题时，他们就会注重建筑的宏伟壮丽。在巴黎或在伦敦，人们首先想居住得温暖舒适。在马德里，人们拥有华丽的会客室，但房子的整体质量却不怎么样，窗户都是关不上的，而卧室也像是耗子洞一般。

在炎热的国家，食物更加充足、种类丰富——这是第三种差异，它对第二种差异不能不产生影响。在意大利，人们为何吃很多的蔬菜呢？因为人们认为蔬菜好，有营养，且味道极其可口。而在法国，人们觉得蔬菜除了含水份外，根本就没有营养，在餐桌上算不了什么东西；即便如此，在蔬菜种植方面，法国人开垦的土地、耗费的其实并不比意大利人少。试验表明，巴巴利的小麦能产出更多面粉，因此优于法国的小麦；而法国的小麦又比北欧的小麦产量高。由此可以得出这样的结论：从赤道到地球极点，其间的各个地区都可以观察到类似的差异。产出同等数量的农产品，得到的食物却更少，这岂不是一个实实在在的劣势吗？

我可能得在所有这些思考中补上另一点。这一点源自这些思考，并且对它们也有所加强：炎热的国家比寒冷的国家需要更少的居民，但其物资却可以养活更多人——这就产生了有利于专制的双倍剩余。同样的人口，分布在越广阔的地区，叛乱就越困难，因为他们无法迅速秘密地集中起来，而政府总能轻而易举地看出这种企图，并且切断他们的交通。另一方面，越多人挤在一块，政府就越不容易侵占主权；民众首领在私人房间里商讨事务，就像政务院里的君主一样安全，而公共广场上的人群集结速度之快，堪比兵营里的部队。因而，广袤的领土有利于专制政府运筹于千里之外。在作为支点的防守战略据点的援助下，根据杠杆作用的原则，其势力因距离而增加。[24]

恰恰相反，公民的力量只有当集中起来时才是有效的；当公民的力量分散时，它就大幅衰减，正如撒在地上的火药只能一粒一粒地点燃。

因而，人口少的国家最适合暴政，就像野生动物只有在沙漠里才可称王。

第九章　论好政府的标志

因此，如果有谁提问，在绝对条件下什么是最好的政府，人们便无法给出答案，因为这个问题是不确定的；或者，我们也可以说，一个民族的绝对地位与相对地位有多少种可能存在的组合，这个问题的好答案就有多少个。

可是，如果问的是人们根据什么标志才能判断一个特定民族在治理方面的好坏，那就是另一码事了；作为一个实际的问题，这是可以回答的。

即便如此，人们还没有给出过确切的答案，因为每个人都会以自己的方式来回答这个问题。臣民珍视公共的安宁；公民珍视个体的自由——前者更喜欢财产安全，而后者则更喜欢人身安全；臣民认为最好的政府最苛刻，而公民则认为最好的政府最温和；前者要惩罚犯罪，而后者则要避免犯罪；臣民认为让邻国惧怕是一件好事，而公民则宁愿被邻国忽视；只要货币流通，前者就满足，而后者则要求人们必须有面包吃。那么，纵使各方能在诸如此类的问题上达成一致，我们就能更进一步地探讨吗？道德的尺度没有精确的衡量标准；即使我们认同了这些标志，我们又该如何认同其价值呢？

对我自己来说，我总感到惊讶的是，人们竟识别不出一个如此简单的标志，或者竟如此不诚实地否认这个标志。什么是一切政治团体的目标呢？这个目标就是保护其成员，让他们繁荣起来。什么又是他们被保护和得到繁荣的标志呢？是人口的数量。那么，就别再舍近求远，去找别的未经论证的证据了。由于所有其他条件都是平等的，所以要是没有像移民这样的外援，使公民人数增加最多的政府，必然是最好的政府。

而使公民减少、民族衰亡的政府就是最差的政府。统计学家们，这可是你们的工作了：请你们算一算、测一测、比一比吧。[25]

第十章　论政府的滥用职权及其衰退的趋势

就像特殊意志不断反对公意一样，政府也不断极力反对主权。这种努力越加大，体制向坏处转变得就越多。由于在这种情况下，没有明显的团体意志能够与君主意志相抗衡并达到一种平衡状态，所以君主意志迟早将不可避免地压制主权，破坏社会公约。这是政府固有的、无法回避的缺陷，这一缺陷从政体诞生之日起就无情地使其趋于毁灭，就像老年与死亡必然摧毁一个人的身体一样。

政府的衰退通常有两种方式——其本身的萎缩和国家的解体。

当政府成员人数从较多变为较少，即民主制转向贵族制，或贵族制转向王室政府时，政府就萎缩。这是政府发展的自然趋势。[26]如果成员人数从较少变为较多，政府可以说是松散了；但是，这样一种逆向发展是不可能的。

事实上，政府从来不会改变其形式，除非它消耗了太多能量以至于无法保持原有的状态。假如政府要一边扩大，一边使自身变得松散，它就必然会失去所有力量，更有可能直接消亡。因此，当政府开始松散时，一定要收拢并紧缩结构，因为不这样的话，依赖于政府的国家将陷于毁灭的境地。

国家的解体可能以两种方式发生。

第一，当君主不再依法治国而是侵占主权时，国家便解体。接着一个显著的变化就发生了，由于不是政府在收缩，而是国家在收缩——我的意思是，国家作为一个整体解体，并在其内部形成一个仅由原政府成员组成的国家，对其余人民来说，这个新国家只能是主人，是暴君。其

结果是，新政府一旦侵占主权，社会公约便遭到破坏。于是依照权利恢复其自然自由的所有普通公民，便被强迫——并不是由道德驱使地——顺从新政府。

当作为个体的政府成员分别侵占了只能由集体来行使的权力时，同样的情形也会发生，因为这同样违反了法律，而且还会产生更大的混乱。到那时候，可以说每位行政官都成了君主，而国家和政府一样处于四分五裂的状态，不是灭亡就是改变形式。

当国家解体时，政府滥用权力，不论是以什么样的形式，这种情况都可以称为无政府状态。更准确地说，民主政治退化为暴民政治，贵族政治退化为寡头政治，而且我还得补充说，王室政治退化为暴君政治，但最后这个词含糊不清，需要加以解释。

在通常理解的意思中，暴君就是凭借暴力而非正义和法律来治理国家的国王。但更严谨地说，暴君应该是指一个没有任何王室权利却将王室权力据为己有的人。这就是希腊人对“暴君”一词的理解。不管是一位好君主还是坏君主，只要他权力的来源是不合法的，希腊人就会说他是暴君。[27]因而，暴君和篡权者的意思是相同的。为了进行区别，我称王室权力篡夺者为“暴君”，称主权权力篡夺者为“专制君主”。暴君是一个违法干政却依法治国的人；而专制君主则是一个让自己凌驾于法律之上的人。所以，暴君不必是专制君主，而专制君主则永远是暴君。

第十一章　论政体的灭亡

制度健全的政府不可避免的趋势自然就是如此。既然斯巴达和古罗马都灭亡了，还有什么国家能期望永世长存呢？如果我们希望建立起一种持久的体制，那就别幻想让它永恒不朽。只有当我们既不去进行徒劳的尝试，也不因自己能够为人类之事业付出超人的耐力而沾沾自喜时，我们才会成功。

政体跟人的身体一样，一出生就开始走向死亡，其内部有着导致自身毁灭的种种原因。但是，这两种体质都有可能拥有一个特定强健程度的构成，而这种构成最为适合维持其或长或短的生命。一个人的身体组织是自然的产物，而国家的组织则是人为的产物；人对延长自身的寿命无能为力，但尽量给予国家可能拥有的最好组织来延长其生命，却是我们可以做到的事。最好的体制虽然也会走到尽头，但总归是比其他形式的体制终结得更晚，除非一些预料不到的危险在那之前降临。

政治生命的原则在于主权的权威。立法权是国家的心脏，而行政权是控制所有活动器官的头脑。头脑瘫痪了，个体会陷入痴呆状态，但仍然有可能活下去，可心脏一旦不起作用，人就会死亡。

国家能维持生存并不是借助法律，而是借助立法权。昨天的法律并不约束今天的行动，然而我们可以把沉默当作默许，将主权者有权废除但没有废除的法律视为可以继续生效的。主权者宣布过的一切意志——至少在主权者发布一道废除令之前，它们永远会是主权者的意志。

那么，为什么古代法律会博得那么多人的青睐呢？准确地说，就是因为它们的古老。我们应当相信，正是这种法律的卓越才使它们可以持续那么长时间；如果主权者不是一直都认为它们是有益的，它们肯定已经被废除过成百上千次了。这就是每个体制健全之国家的法律不但不会被削弱、反而不断获得新生力量的原因之所在；人们对古老之物有一种偏爱，因此它们会越来越受到尊敬；另一方面，若是法律随着时代的变化愈加软弱，那便说明这个国家已经不再有立法权，而且必将走向灭亡。

第十二章　论主权者权威如何维护

主权者只能借助法律而行动，因为他除了立法权以外没有任何其他权力。而既然法律就是公意的正当表达，那么主权者行动时还必须将公

民聚集到一起。把公民召集起来，可以说——简直就是幻想！在今天，这确实是一个幻想；可在两千年前其实不然。难道是人性发生了如此大的变化吗？

道德领域可能存在的界线并不像我们想象中一样狭隘；正是我们的弱点、恶习及其偏见才限制了它们的拓展。卑鄙的头脑不会去相信伟人；低贱的奴隶则嘲笑“自由”这个词。

根据我们过去的所作所为，让我们来考虑一下现在有什么是可以做的。古希腊共和国我就不谈了；不过在我看来，古罗马共和国是一个伟大的国家，罗马城也是一个伟大的城市。最后一次人口普查给出的数据是，古罗马有四十万武装人员，而整个帝国不算臣民、外国人、妇女、儿童和奴隶，总共有四百多万公民。

人们总是认为，把首都及其周边大量的人经常集中起来必然是一件难事。然而，古罗马人基本每周都有集会，甚至一周还可以集中好几次。他们不但行使主权，而且还行使一部分政权，比如处理某些事务、审理某些案件等。在集会中，全体人民都扮演行政官的角色，而且他们使用这一身份的时间和使用公民身份的时间是一样长的。

回顾各国最早的历史，我们注意到，大多数古代政府，甚至像马其顿和法兰克那样的君主政府，都有过类似的民众集会。不管怎样，一个不可争议的事实已经回答了我们的问题；在我看来，从实际情况推论可能存在的情况，是很符合逻辑的。

第十三章　论主权者权威如何维护（续）

集会的人们一旦认可一套法律，就等于是确定了国家的体制，但这是不够的；他们创建了一个永久性的政府，或者为行政官的选举制定了一劳永逸的方法，但还是不够。除预料不到的事情可能需要的特别集会

之外，还必须有固定的、周期性的、任何事都不可取消或中止的集会，使人们在指定日期依法正当地被召集在一起，而无需任何其他正式的召集手续。

但是，除这些按期举行的合法集会外，任何——只要不是由职责在身的行政官按规定形式召集的——公民集会，都应该被视作不合法的，而且其所做的一切决定都应该是无效的，因为召集集会的命令本身必须合法下达。

至于合法的集会应该以怎样的频率举行，这取决于无法预先规定准确规则的许多情况。我们只能说，通常政府拥有的权力越大，主权者就越应该经常举行集会。

有人会告诉我，这种集会可能对单个城市来说是有好处的，可如果国家有若干个城市，那又得怎么办呢？主权者的权力要进行分割吗？或者主权者应该集中在某一个城市，并使所有其他城市成为其附属吗？我的回答是，这样那样的事都不该做。首先，主权者权力只是一个单一的单位，分割就意味着将它摧毁。其次，一个城市同一个国家一样，不能合法地屈从于另一个城市，因为政体的本质在于自由与服从的结合，这样，“臣民”与“主权者”才是同义且相关的两个词，而它们的意思也就共同构成了“公民”。

我应当更进一步回答，要把一个国家中的若干个城市联合起来，这始终不是件好事。不论谁希望形成这样的联盟，都不能自以为能避免种种天然的负面影响。向那些只想要小国的人抱怨大国带来的祸害，是没有用的。可是，怎样给予小国足够的力量以抵抗大国，就像希腊城邦抵抗过波斯王，以及前不久荷兰和瑞士抵抗过奥地利王朝一样？

无论如何，假如国家无法被限定在合理的边境内，那么就只剩一种办法，即不设立固定的首都，而将政府所在地不断从一个地方迁移到另

一个地方，在各个城市轮流举行全国会议。

让人口均匀地分布在国土上，赋予每个人相同的权利，并且使每个地区同样富足、生机勃勃——只有这样，才会产生一个在力量和治理方面都尽善尽美的国家。请记住：城墙造得越雄伟，乡村的房屋就越破败。每当我在首都看到一幢在建的大楼，我心里都会想，我能看到整个农村遍地布满简陋的茅舍。

第十四章　论主权者权威如何维护（再续）

当人民作为主权者团体合法集会之时，政府的所有管辖权就不再起作用，其行政权也就中断。于是最卑贱的公民跟最高贵的行政官具有同样神圣不可侵犯的人格，因为既然被代表人全部在场，就再也不需要什么代表人了。古罗马各种集会上的骚乱，大多数都是因为人们不知道、不重视这条法则才发生的。在集会中，执政官只不过是人民的首领，保民官仅仅是人民的议长[28]，而元老院就什么都不是了。

在这种权力中断的间歇，君主将认识到——或者应该认识到——一个比他地位更高的存在，而这总是会使他警觉起来；人民的集会是政体的盾牌和政府的制动器，并且一直是首领的梦魇；所以，身居高位的人不余遗力地提出异议、问题、许诺，希望使公民转而反抗集会。如果公民贪图钱财、胆怯懦弱、热爱休息胜过热爱自由，他们就很容易在政府的这种长期攻势下服软。由于反对派势力不断增加，最终主权者的权威一落千丈而不复存在，于是大多数共和国纷纷崩溃，提前灭亡。

但是，在主权权威与专断政府之间，有时会插入一种我们现在必须论及的中间力量。

第十五章　论议员或代表

当公共服务不再是公民关注的主要对象，并且他们逐渐更乐于以资

金而非人力来提供服务时，国家就已接近毁灭。军队需要参战吗？他们可以给雇佣兵报酬，而自己呆在家里。人们需要参加集会吗？他们可以给议员报酬，而自己呆在家里。由于懒惰和金钱，这个国家最终将被士兵奴役、被官员出卖。

正是由于商业和手工业的兴旺，正是由于唯利是图、柔弱娇气、贪图安逸，原本由人提供的服务才转变为金钱交易。人们放弃一部分利益以增加舒适的休闲时间。就这样利用金钱吧！你很快就会为金钱所束缚。“钱财”这个词是奴隶的话语，土生土长的共和国公民都不会知道它。在一个真正的自由国家，公民们用自己的双手做每样事情，而用钱是办不了任何事的；他们非但不会花钱免除职责，反而会为了亲自履行义务而付出金钱。我完全不同意目前大众普遍接受的观念，反之，我认为，税收比义务服务更违背自由。

国家创建得越好，公务便越优先于公民心目中的私事。而且私事的数量会大大减少，因为整个公众幸福就代表大部分的个人幸福，于是，个体便没有太多需要追求的幸福了。在一个管理完善的国家，每个人都会赶去参加各种集会；而在一个管理不善的国家，没人愿意参加集会，而且连这样的念头都不会有，因为他们对大会上发生的事一点也不感兴趣。毕竟，正如他们所料，公意在那里并不占优势。归根结底，人们的注意力已经全都放在了家庭事务上，所以无暇参与集会。好法律使人制定出更好的法律；而坏法律则使人制定出更坏的法律。要是有人一谈到国事，就说：“这关我什么事？”到那时一个国家就算完了。

爱国心的冷却、私人利益的活动、国家的庞大、征服他人、滥用政权——所有这些都导致我们不得不在国家的各种集会中任命人民议员或人民代表作为权宜之计。他们被某些国家的人们公然称为第三阶层——把两个阶级的私有利益摆在前两位，而公共利益只占第三位。

主权不能被代表，就像主权不能被转让一样；主权的本质是公意，

而意志是不能由他人代表的——它要么是自己，要么就是另外一种东西，不存在中间的可能性。因而，人民议员不是也不可能是人民代表；他们只不过是办事员而已；他们无法最终决定任何事。人民未亲自认可的一切法律都是无效的，根本就不算什么法律。英国人认为自己是自由的；他们是大错特错了；他们只在选举议会议员的时候是自由的；议员一选出来，人民就遭受奴役，变得什么也不是了。在那短暂的自由时刻，英国人是如此充分地使用了自己的自由，所以他们之后失去自由也就不那么可惜了。

代表是一个近代的观念。它从封建政权——人类就是被这种邪恶荒唐的体制玷污了名声、剥夺了尊严的——中诞生，一直发展到今天。在共和国中，甚至在古代的君主制中，人民从来就没有什么代表，也没听说过代表这个词。值得注意的是，在古罗马，保民官的职责是如此神圣，以至于人们从未想过他们会不会篡夺人民的权力；同时，尽管有那么多的公民，但任何一次公民投票都没有出现过有人试图转让自己权力的情况。要知道，在格拉古时代，许多公民甚至得站在屋顶上投票，造成十分尴尬的局面。

在权利和自由就是一切的地方，没有人会怕麻烦。这些明智的人们会对每样东西给予公正的衡量；保民官不敢做的事，就让执法吏去做，而人们无需担心这些执法吏会企图越俎代庖。

即便如此，要解释保民官究竟如何代表人民，想一想政府是如何代表主权者就足够了。既然法律除了是公意的宣言之外什么都不是，那么显然在立法权上就不可能有人民的代表；不过，行政权，可能并且应该有这样的代表，因为行政权仅仅是行使法律的工具。由此得知，我们只要仔细观察，就会发现几乎没有什么国家拥有法律。无论如何，有一点是确凿无疑的，即没有任何行政权的保民官，决不可能以自己的职权来代表罗马人民，除非他篡夺了元老院的权力。

在希腊人当中，人民要做的一切都由他们自己来做；市场中经常举办集会。希腊人生活在温和的气候中；他们不具备贪婪的个性。奴隶负责干活，而希腊人整天要考虑的是他们的自由。如今，没了这些有利条件，同样的权利又怎么能维持呢？严酷的气候使得你们产生更多的需求；[29]公共场所一年中有六个月都无法举办集会；你们那发不出声音的舌头在露天说话都难以让人听清；比起你们的自由，你们更在乎自己的利益；你们觉得当奴隶也不比当穷人更可怕。

什么？自由只有依靠奴隶制才能维持吗？或许吧。自由与奴隶制两个极端碰到了一起。任何诞生于自然之外的事物都有其不利之处，而文明社会是所有这些事物中最为不利的。确实有一些如此不幸的情形，以致于人们只能牺牲别人的自由来维护自己的自由；而且只有当奴隶完全是奴隶时，公民才能完全自由。斯巴达的情况就是如此。至于你们这些现代人，你们没有奴隶，可你们自身就是奴隶；你们用自己的自由为奴隶的自由买单。你们认为这是一桩善事，并自吹自擂，但在我看来这只是徒劳；我从中看到的更多是懦弱，而不是仁慈。

我所说的这些并非想暗示奴隶的存在是必要的，或奴隶制的存在是合法的，因为我所证明过的与之恰恰相反。我只是想说明，自认为自由的现代人为何还要有代表、以及古代人为何不曾有代表的种种理由。无论如何，一个民族一旦接受了代表，它就不再自由，也不再存在了。

纵观一切之后，我认为主权者已经无法继续在我们之间行使自己的权利，除非我们是在一个非常小的共和国。可是，如果非常小，它会不会被别国征服呢？我的答案是，不会的。大民族的防御力量怎样才能与小国的自由政权及其良好的秩序结合在一起，我将在后面的文章中[30]对此加以说明。

第十六章　论政府的建制并不是一种契约

确立了立法权之后，就应该以同样的方式确立行政权，因为只由特殊行为操作的行政权与立法权迥然不同，且自然分离。设想，如果主权者拥有了行政权，那么法律与事实将被混淆，以致于人们再也不知道什么是法律、什么不是法律；由此，这种误入歧途的政体很快就会成为暴力的牺牲品，尽管政体设立的初衷就是要避免暴力。

所有公民按照社会契约一律平等，于是集体中的个体便集体的行动有决定权。原本，一个人是无权要求另一个人必须替自己做事的，但在这种情况下这一点却能成立。主权者在创建政府时赋予君主的，正是这种对政体生命和活动不可或缺的权利。

一些理论家主张，创建政府这种行为是人民与其自身指派的行政官之间的一项契约，即一项双方之间规定一方施令而另一方服从的契约。我确信，应当承认的是，这是一种奇特的契约方式。但是，让我们看一看这种理论是否站得住脚吧。

第一，最高权威不可转让，同样也是不可更改的；限制最高权威就等于破坏最高权威。让主权者设立一个比自身更高的存在，这是荒唐可笑、自相矛盾的，就好比一边使自己服从一个主人的命令，一边又要求回归到绝对的自由状态。

第二，我们很清楚，人们与这样那样的人签订契约总是一种特别行为。由此可见，这种契约既不可能是法律，也不可能是一种主权行为，所以它就是不合法的。

进一步讲，契约签订的各方只服从于自然法则，于是就不存在什么他们相互约束的保证——这与公民国家完全是对立的。既然大权在握的人最终总是做决定的那一方，这就像是在说，“契约”的意思是一个人告诉另一个人：“我把所有的财产给你，你可以随意决定要还给我多少。”

国家只有一种契约：联合体本身的契约，且它把所有其他契约排除在外。要想出一个不违背原始契约的公共契约，是绝无可能的。

第十七章　论政府的建制

那么，我们应该以什么概念来看待建立政府这一行为呢？我得先解释一下，这种行为是复杂的，或者说是由其他两种行为构成的，即法律的制定与法律的执行。

第一种行为使主权者规定，一个政府主体要以这样那样的形式建立起来；显然，这种行为就是一项法律。

第二种行为使人民任命行政官来管理已经建立好的政府。由于人民的任命是一种特殊行为，它就不是第二项法律，而只是第一项法律的后果，是政府的一种职能。

令人费解的是，在政府存在之前怎么就有了政府的行为，还有，仅仅是主权者或臣民的公民在某些情况下怎么会成为君主或行政官。

于是，正是在此处，我们得以再一次发现政体中的一个令人惊讶的特性，按照这一特性，政体调和了似乎相互矛盾的行动。由于这种调和是通过主权到民主制的突然转变来完成的，所以政体没有发生显而易见的变化。仅仅是出于一种整体与整体的新型关系，公民就变成了行政官，而且实现了从普遍行为到特殊行为、从法令到执行的过渡。

这种关系的变化并非是纸上谈兵的投机性理论；相反，我们每天都可以在英国议会找到这样的实例。在某些场合中，议会下院往往担任代表上、下议院的委员会，以便更好地商讨事务，这样，下院就一瞬间从主权之所在转变成了一个单纯的委员会，尽管它实际上依旧是原来的那个下院。于是，就出现了这样的情形：身为委员会的下院自己对自己作报告，声明自己刚刚成为了上下两院的委员会，并且以一个新名义再次

讨论它之前已经以旧名义所决定的事项。

正是由于这种民主政府特有的优势，它的建立只需要公意的一个简单行为。在此之后，如果这个临时政府的形式刚好是人们所需要的，那么它就会被沿用下去；如果不是，那么就以主权者的名义重新确立一个遵循法律的政府。这样一来，一切就都符合规定了。这也是唯一一种方式，能既不违背之前所说的原则，又以合法的方式创建政府。

第十八章　论预防篡夺政府权力的手段

综上所述，就可以得出符合第十六章内容的结论，即创建政府的行为不是一种契约，而是一项法律；行政权的持有者并不是人民的主人，而是人民的办事员；人民可以随心所欲地任命和开除他们；而对办事员来说，这不是要他们签订契约，是要他们服从；在履行国家赋予他们的职务时，他们只是在行应尽的义务，并没有谈条件的权利。

因而，当人民创建一个世袭政府时，无论它是家族世袭的君主制，还是特定公民阶层世袭的贵族制，那都不是真正的政府形式，而只是人民在出于自己的意愿另作安排之前给予管理机构的一个临时形式。

确实，如果真的要改变政府形式，那总是很危险的，人们决不应该去碰一个已经建立好的政府，除非它变得与公共利益水火不容；不过，如此的慎重只是政治的箴言，而不是法律的规则；同样，就像国家没有必要把军事权交给将军一样，它也没必要把公民权交给行政官。

还有一点是千真万确的。在此类情况下，为了正确区分合法的行为与煽动性的骚乱、区别全体人民的意志与派系的要求，人们再怎么小心谨慎地仔细观察也不为过。其中，人们尤其必须避免屈从于社会上有害的主张，除非是在法律的容许范围内。同时，正是在这一义务的履行中，君主才得了大好的机会，掌握了与人民相抗衡的力量，而且人民还

不能说他是篡夺了权力。因为对君主来说，当他看起来似乎只是在行使其权利时，其实就能轻而易举地扩大那些权利，并以公众安宁为托辞阻止为重建良好政府而策划的种种集会。通过这样一种方式，君主使人民难以打破一种沉默，或不得不承认一种特殊事态，这正是他的目的，因为接下来他便可以假定那些因害怕而一言不发的人都是他的支持者，并惩罚那些胆敢发言的人。古罗马的十人会议就是如此。最初他们当选时，规定的任期是一年。第二年，他们连任了。到了第三年，他们终于不再允许公民集会，以期用这种方式永久地保留其权利。世界上所有的政府，一旦有了公共力量作武装，迟早会通过这种简单的手段篡夺主权权威。

我已说到的那些周期性集会——尤其是那些不需要通过正式手续召集的集会——都是避免或延缓这种恶行的正确方法，因为君主若是阻止集会，就等于宣布自己是法律的违犯者和国家的敌人。

这些只以维护社会公约为目的的集会，应该以两个决不可取消且必须单独表决的提议为开场。

第一个提议："主权者期望保持现有的政府形式吗？"

第二个提议："人民期望那些目前负责管理机构的人继续当政吗？"

我相信我已经论证了一些东西，所以我在这里就以它们作为假设的前提：国家不存在任何不可废除的基本法，甚至也不存在不可废除的社会公约，因为如果所有公民聚集起来，一致决定终止这条公约，我们就必须认为它是被非常合法地终止的。格老秀斯确实也认为，每个公民都可以放弃其公民资格、从一个国家离开，并即刻恢复其自然的自由及本来拥有的财物。[31]这样看来，如果所有联合起来的公民甚至都不能做他们中的每个人单独能做的事，那肯定是荒谬可笑的。

第四卷

第一章　论公意是不可摧毁的

只要聚集在一起的几个人认为他们自己是一个整体，他们的意志就合而为一，为他们的共同生存和普遍幸福做考虑。这时，国家所有充满活力的力量都变得朝气蓬勃、单纯朴素；其原则也都变得清清楚楚；它的内部不存在不可兼容或相互冲突的利益；而且对所有具备常识的人来说，共同利益是如此显而易见。和平、团结和平等是政治之算计的敌人。正直朴素的人正因为他们的质朴而不会轻易受骗；花言巧语会使傻瓜上当，却打动不了他们，因为他们甚至比傻瓜还要不敏锐。当我们看到一群世上最幸福的人，看到一群农民在橡树下规划国家事务、作出明智决定时，难道不会情不自禁地瞧不起那些处心积虑使自身变得显赫、然而时常失算的精明国家吗？

治理有道的国家只需要少量的法律条文。如果某一天它需要颁布新法律，那么这种需要肯定已经被每个人意识到了。第一个提出颁布新法的人，只不过是说出每个人已经感觉到的东西；把人人都已经决意要做的事情变成法律，这既不是阴谋也不是雄辩问题，只要这个人能确定别人的想法都同他一样就可以了。

使理论家们误入岐途的是，由于他们只看到一开始就创建得很坏的国家，所以便认定这样的政体不可能长久。他们嘲笑大众都是愚钝之人，因为仅仅一个聪明的流氓或狡猾的雄辩家就能唆使巴黎人或伦敦人干出蠢事。但他们没有意识到，自己远远低估了人民的力量。克伦威尔差点被伯尔尼人关进监狱，波弗特公爵曾被日内瓦人监禁起来。

但是，当社会的纽带开始松懈，而国家变得衰弱时，当特殊利益初

现苗头、部分社会开始对总体社会施加影响时，共同利益就从内部变得腐败，并与其原本目标背道而驰；这时，投票不再是一致通过；公意不再是大家的意志；矛盾与争端出现；甚至最好的意见也会遭受许多阻挠、难以实行。

最后，处在覆灭边缘的国家只能以空洞虚幻的方式维护自身，人们心中的社会契约不复存在，而最自私的利益则洋洋得意地为自己套上公共利益的神圣名称。到那时，公意便沉默了：在隐秘动机的促使下，每个人作为公民再也不发表言论了，仿佛这个国家从未存在过；更有甚者，表面奉行法律，实则推出以私利为唯一目的的不公正政令。

那么，照这样发展下去，公意将消亡或腐化吗？不，公意总是不变的、坚定的、纯粹的，只不过有些时候它会屈服于压倒它的其他意志。每个要将私利从公共利益中分离出来的人都清楚地明白，他无法将两种利益彻底分开，但是，与他试图独占的那份个人利益相比，他需要承担的公共利益的损失就不算什么了。如果不涉及个人私利，那么他还是会像任何其他人一样迫切追求公共利益的。甚至在为了金钱而出卖其选票的时候，他也不是消灭了自身内在的公意，而是一时回避了它。他所犯的错误，在于改变了提问方式，而且还答非所问。所以，他的投票不是在表示：“这样做对国家是有益的。”而是在说：“若采纳这样那样的提议，某个特定的人或党派会从中受益。”由于这种原因，公众集会规则的制定目标便不仅是要支持公意，而更是要确保公意总是能被质疑，并总是能给出答复。

在此，我对任何人无法从公民身上剥夺掉的、每个主权行动中最简单的投票权有很多想谈的。另外还有关于发言权、建议权、分议权和讨论权的问题——政府向来小心确保只有本国成员拥有这些权利。然而，这些重要的主题需要单独论述，我无法将其一一收录于本书中。

第二章　论投票权

显然，根据上一章所说，管理公共事务的方式足以表明一个政体的道德品质和健康状况。在公众集会中，人们越是能协调一致，换句话说，公众意见越接近统一，公意就越占统治地位；反之，长期的争论、分歧和骚乱象征特殊利益的增加和国家的衰弱。

当国家体制包含有两种或若干种等级时，这一结论便不那么明显。比如，古罗马有贵族也有平民，而这些人的争论甚至在共和国的鼎盛时期也常常扰乱公民大会。可是，这并不能算是真正的例外情况，因为在古罗马，由于政体与生俱来的缺陷，国家相当于是分裂成了两个。上述结论不适用于整体国家，但对这两个部分来说却是准确的。事实上，即使在最动荡的年代，只要元老院不对他们加以干涉，公民们总是能将投票流程很平静地走完，并遵守少数服从多数原则。公民的利益只有一种；公民意志也只有一个。

但是，在循环的另一极端，即沦落到奴隶状态的公民再也没有自由或意志的时候，全体一致便会再次出现。这时，人们出于恐惧或讨好，对所有投票都只会表示赞成；公民已经不是在商讨问题，而是在表达崇拜或者暗自诅咒。在罗马皇帝的统治下，元老院就用这种可耻的方式对人民施加自己的意志的，而且有时候它会以一种荒诞的谨慎来做这件事。塔西佗讲过：在奥索的统治时期，元老们对维特里乌斯非常憎恨，但在咒骂他的时候却又小心留意，将自己的话语混入众人的吵闹中。这样，万一维特里乌斯有朝一日成为主人，他也无法辨别出他们每个人都说过些什么。

基于以上这些各种各样的考量，人们应该制定计票和比较不同意见的规则。这不但取决于公意被认知的难易程度，还取决于国家的盛衰程度。

世界上只有一种法律因其天性需要人们的一致赞成。那就是社会公约：因为公民联合是世界上最自愿的行为；每个人都是生来自由的，并

且都是自己的主人，若未经其同意，任何人都不得以任何借口使其屈从。断言奴隶的儿子天生是奴隶，这等于断言他天生就不是人。

然而，即使在社会公约制定时出现了反对意见，契约也并不会作废；它只不过是把反对派排除在外了；由此，反对派在公民当中成了外人。而在国家创建之后，居留便代表同意，人们居住在哪块领土上就要服从哪个主权。[32]

除了这种原始契约之外，投票中的多数派始终可以约束其余的人；这是契约本身产生的结果。然而，人们可能要问，一个人怎样才能获得自由，而不用被迫遵从他人的意志呢？投票中的少数派怎样才能做到既自由又服从于他们所不赞成的法律呢？

我的回答是，这个问题提得很糟糕。所有法律都已经被公民所同意。即使某些法律有违部分人的意志，即使人们违反任何一条法律都会受到惩罚，但这一前提始终是成立的。国家所有公民的长期意志就是公意；正是通过公意他们才成为公民，才变得自由。[33]当一条法律在公民大会上提出时，这并非是在问每个人批不批准，而是要看这条法律与代表他们意志的公意是否一致；每个人都会通过投票就这一问题提出意见，于是票数的统计就说明了公意。因此，当与我本人相反的意见占上风时，这仅仅表明，我犯了错误；我所认为的公意其实并不是公意。而且，如果我的个人意见竟然压倒了公意，那么这个结果其实是不符合我的意愿的，所以我也就不是一个自由人了。

诚然，这一结论的前提条件是，公意的所有特性能够在多数派中找到；若是公意的特性不存在于任何一方，那么不管人们采取什么主张，都是毫无自由可言的。

我在前些章节里就已经解释了特殊意志是如何在公众商讨中逐渐取代公意的，并且十分清楚地说明了有哪些可行的手段能够避免这种情

况。下面，我将重新回到这一主题。至于可以用来宣布公意的投票比例数，我也已经制定了种种原则来对它进行测算。一票之差会破坏双方相等；一票反对也会破坏全体一致；可是，在全体一致与双方相等之间，还有许多数字不等的比例，而根据政体的状况和需求，我们可以找到任何一种符合条件的适当比例。

确定这些比例时，可以遵照两条普遍的准则：第一，要决定的事情越重要越严肃，人们意见应该越接近全体一致；第二，问题要求决断得越快，对赞同票的比例要求就可以越低；在必须立刻作出决定时，只要一方比另一方多一票就可以了。第一条准则似乎更适宜于法律；第二条则更适宜于管理事务的派遣。无论如何，必须将这两条准则结合，我们才能确定多数派的适当比例。

第三章　论选举制

如我所述，君主和行政官的选举是一种纷繁复杂的活动，可以通过自愿或抽签两种方法进行筹备。这两种方法都曾在不同的共和国使用过，而在威尼斯共和国的执政者选举中，我们还可以看到两种方法被十分复杂地混和使用。孟德斯鸠说：“抽签选举是民主制的天性。”这我同意。可为何会是如此呢？他继续说：“抽签是一种选举法，这种办法不伤害任何人，还能让每个公民有一种服务国家的合理愿望。”不过，这些都不是充分的理由。

假如我们记得，行政官的选举是政府而不是主权的一项职能的话，我们就会明白，为何抽签法对民主制而言是自然的。这是因为，在民主制中，行政机构的活动越少，它就越能达到越好的状态。

在每个真正的民主制中，行政官并不是一种特权，而是一副沉重的担子，所以不管它落在谁的身上，都有失公平。唯独法律可以将这种担子强加给抽到签的人，因为在这种情况下，既然各种条件对大家都是平

等的，选择又不取决于任何人的意志，那么法律的普遍性就不会被哪个特殊作用所影响。

在贵族制中，君主选择君主，而政府靠自己的运作使自己永存不朽。所以，按个体意志进行选举，在这里是非常合适的。

威尼斯共和国执政者选举的例子非但不是对这种差异的否定，反而还对其有所加强：如此的混合形式正适宜于混合政府。认为威尼斯政府是真正的贵族制，那本来就是一种误解。与其说那里的人民在政府中不占一席之地，不如说真正能算威尼斯人民的其实是威尼斯贵族。贫穷的巴纳比人数量众多，他们是绝对当不了行政官的，即使是他们之中的显贵，也只不过是拥有一个阁下的空头衔、被允许出席大会议而已。而由于那个大会议的参与者跟我们的日内瓦众议会一样多，所以其中最杰出的议员也并不比我们普通公民有更多的特权。因此，若是不看两个共和国之间的悬殊差异，那么我们日内瓦的资产阶级分子就对应威尼斯的贵族；我们的本地人和居民对应威尼斯的公民和平民，而我们的农民对应威尼斯陆上的臣民。概而言之，除了威尼斯的面积大小之外，无论我们从什么观点来看这个共和国，它的政府都跟我们的一样，决不会是贵族制。区别仅仅在于，我们没有终身在职的首领，于是我们也不需要抽签。

在真正的民主制中，抽签几乎没什么不利之处，因为当所有人都既在天性和才能上平等，又在原则和财富上平等时，选中谁其实都是一样的。不过，正如我曾说过的，真正的民主制是不存在的。

当同时采用选举法和抽签法时，选举应该用在特殊人才的选择上，例如军事指挥。而对于需要常识、公正、正直品性的政治职位，抽签就足够了，因为在一个体制健全的国家，这样的品性在所有的公民的身上都能找到。

在君主制的统治下，抽签和选举都不会被采用。既然君主既是唯一的国王又是仅有的长官，那么其属下的任命都只能取决于他。当圣彼埃尔的神父建议增加法国国王的内阁阁臣，并通过投票选举成员时，他没有意识到他那时正在建议改变政权的形式。

我还想谈一谈投票和在公民大会的计票方法，但或许古罗马的政体历史能更好地说明我想提出的所有原则。深入地思考一下一个拥有二十万人的大会是如何处理公众事务和个人事务的，这对一个有头脑的读者来说想必并不在话下。

第四章　论古罗马公民大会

我们没有可信赖的古罗马早期历史记载，甚至大多数我们听说过的故事都可能只是传说。[34]事实上，一般各民族编年史中最有教育意义的部分就是他们的政体创建史，而这也是我们最缺少的部分。过去的经验每天都在告诉我们帝国大变革的种种原因，可是，由于现在不再有新的民族崛起，所以我们也就只能靠推测来解释过去的民族是怎么创建起来的。

我们已经发现了许多惯例，这起码可以表明：它们必然有一个源头。所以，如果有传说能追溯这个源头，或者得到最权威的支持和最理性的认可，那么我们就应该认为这样的传说是最真实可信的。在探究世上最自由最强大的民族如何行使他们的最高权力时，我试图遵循的原则就是如此。

古罗马创建之后，新生的共和国，即建国者队伍由三种人组成：奥尔本人、萨宾人和异乡人。他们以部族作为区分。每一个部族分为十个库里亚，每一个库里亚又细分为若干德库里亚，它们的首领分别叫库里昂和德库里昂。

此外，每个部族选出一百个特权市民或骑士， 他们组成的团体称为百人团。这表明，最初是军事上的需要产生了这些对城市来说没什么意义的分类。然而，就好像有一种伟大的本能引领着古罗马一般，这个小城用完全适合打造世界之都的体制开始了自己的发展。

可这种原始分类很快就产生了不利的后果。奥尔本人和萨宾人的部族保持原来的状态，而异乡人的部族则因人口增长不断扩大，不久，它容纳的成员就比其他两个部族合在一起还要多了。塞尔维乌斯为了纠正这个致命错误，决定改变分类的依据。他废除了旧的分类法，重新以每个部族占据的城市区域进行划分。他将原来的三个部族分为四个，使它们各自占领罗马的一个山岗，并以此为名。于是，他既纠正了现存的不平等，又预防了将来的不平等；为确保这种分类是按人而不是按区进行，他禁止居民在区域间搬迁，以避免不同部族的融合。

他还把自古以来就有的三个骑兵百人团增加了一倍，并额外编制了十二个团，不过它们都保留原有的名称；这是一种精明简单的手段，他用这种手段成功地将骑士主体与公民主体区分开来，而且不使后者抱怨。

在四个城市部族的基础上，塞尔维乌斯又按区域划分增加了十五个由乡村居民构成的乡村部族。此后，随着新部族陆续建立完毕，古罗马人最终被分为了三十五个部族，这一数目直到共和国终结都没有改变过。

城市部族与乡村部族之间的区别产生了一个值得注意的现象，它之所以特别，一方面是因为没有类似的先例，一方面也是因为古罗马的道德存续和帝国发展都要归功于它。肯定有人会想，一旦划分完成，城市部族必然很快将权力和荣誉垄断，并且迅速贬低乡村部族的地位。然而，实际发生的事情却恰恰相反。早期古罗马人对乡村生活的喜好众所周知。这种喜好源自于他们智慧的创立者，他不但将自由精神结合到乡

村劳动和兵役之中，还在某种意义上将手工业、贸易、阴谋算计、财富和奴隶制全部转移到了城市。

这样一来，既然所有杰出的罗马人都居住在乡村耕田种地，那么把乡村看作共和国中流砥柱的观点就变得非常普遍了。由于这种生活方式被大多数贵族所采用，大家便对它十分青睐；在众人眼里，乡下人朴素的劳动生活比古罗马资产阶级分子宽松空闲的城市生活更优越。而且，一个在城里不过是可怜的无产者的人，一旦下乡种地，就立刻成了受人尊重的公民。瓦戎说过，我们开明的祖先将乡村作为那些强健者和勇敢者的休养生息之地，使后者在战争期间保卫他们，在和平时期滋养他们。这话是很有道理的。普林尼也声明，乡村部族之所以受到尊敬，是因为那些居住其中的人；而当人们故意要羞辱一个胆怯者时，他就会被不留情面地送到城市部族里去。萨宾人阿皮乌斯·克劳底乌斯在罗马是一位显赫人物，他被授予各种荣誉，并作为乡村部族的一员为后人所铭记。这个乡村部族后来沿用了他家族的名字。最后，所有被释放的奴隶都加入了城市部族，而且他们永远也进不了乡村部族。毕竟，共和国上下没有任何一个先例是让被释放的奴隶来当行政官的，即便他们已经成了公民。

这种原则本来是很好的，但它被推行得太过火，所以最终发生了变化，实际上成了政体中被滥用的手段。

首先，由于监察官长期掌握将公民从一个部族转换到另一个部族的仲裁权，他们渐渐竟容许大多数人随意加入自己挑选的部族。这一让步肯定没有什么好处，它使审查制度失去了一种最大的能力。况且，既然大权在握的高贵者们都加入了乡村部族，而被释放的奴隶和普通人留在了城市部族中，那么部族就不再以地方或领地为基础了。大家混杂在一起，人们不查登记表就无法确定任何人的身份。这就是为什么部族这个词逐渐有了个人的而非地域的含义，更准确地说，逐渐变得徒有虚名。

还发生过这样的事：更接近市中心的城市部族由于距离优势，在公民大会中往往一家独大，而他们在接受了别有居心之人的贿赂之后，竟任其操纵投票，以卑鄙的方式出卖国家。

再来说说库里亚。由于创立者已在每个部族中成立了十个库里亚，所以当时城墙以内的全体古罗马人由三十个库里亚组成。每个库里亚都有自己的神殿、神祇、官员、祭司以及自己的各种节日，这些节日称为大路节，类似后来乡村部族举办的乡村节。

当塞尔维乌斯引入他的新分类法时，三十个库里亚无法平分为四个部族，于是他就没有进行划分；结果是，库里亚独立于部族，成了罗马的另一种分类方式。不过，在乡村部族或属于部族的人当中不存在有关库里亚的问题，因为部族已经成为纯粹的公民组织，且在引入了新的征兵体制后，罗穆卢斯的军事划分便没有什么意义了。这样一来，虽然每个公民都必然是某一部族的成员，但他们却往往不是库里亚的成员。

塞尔维乌斯还做了与前两种毫无关系的第三种分类，这种分类从其结果看是三者中最重要的。他既不以人也不以其住处，而是以财富将整个罗马的公民分成六类。其结果是，第一类挤满了富人；最后一类净是穷人；而中间一类为拥有中等财富的人。这六大类细分为一百九十三个团体，称为百人团。这些团体又有另外的分类方式：第一类占半数以上，而最后一类却只包括一个百人团。于是我们发现，人数最少的那一类拥有最多的百人团，而最后一类只作一个百人团的细分类来算，尽管它容纳罗马半数以上的居民。

为了不让人们察觉这种分类的后果，塞尔维乌斯以军事的形式掩饰它；他在第二类和第四类各放入了两个军队百人团。而且除了最后一类，他在其他每个类别中都做了老少之间的划分，换句话说，就是划分需服兵役的人与年纪太大不必服役的人；比起财富的区分，这种划分更有必要进行经常性的人口统计。最后，他还规定集会应在玛尔斯教场上

举行；所有那些兵役适龄者都应扛着武器参加集会。

他在最后一类的老少之间不做同样区分的理由只是，参军为国效力是一种荣誉，而属于这一类的人没有资格获得这种荣誉；一个人只有先拥有家园，才有保卫它的权力。虽然今天各个国家的军队里都有无数乞丐，但在士兵被视为自由保卫者的那个年代，大概每一个乞丐都会被古罗马人轻蔑地逐出军团。

然而，在最后一类中，还有对无产者和被称作“按人头计数”的人的区分。前者并非是完全没有地位，他们至少算是国家公民，甚至在国家万分急需时也可以当兵。但是，那些一无所有、只充当计算人数之用的人，就相当于是不存在的。直到马留乌斯的时代，他才第一个打破陈规，招收他们入伍。

在此，我们不讨论这第三种分类实际上是好是坏，可以确定的一点是，它之所以可行，正是因为早期古罗马人简朴的习惯、对农业的喜好，以及相应的对商业和敛财的蔑视。然而，与他们相反，现代民族往往贪得无厌、内心不安、要弄阴谋，且永远处在局势的变化和盛衰的循环中。有哪个这样的民族能够让这一体制持续二十年而不将整个国家颠覆呢？我们还应该记住一点，古罗马的人民和审查机构拥有足以纠正这种体制之弊端的道德力量，而且在当时，富人若是过度炫富自己的财产，就会被转到穷人的阶级中去。

了解了这些情况，我们便不难理解，为何人们总是只提到五种古罗马人的分类，而实际上却有六类。第六个类别极少受到关注，因为它既不为军队输送士兵，也不为玛尔斯教场[35]提供选民，于是在共和国中便几乎起不到任何实际作用。

古罗马人的不同分类就是如此。接下来，让我们来关心一下这些类别在各种集会中所产生的影响。那些合法召集的集会被称作公民大会，

它们通常在古罗马的公共会场或玛尔斯教场上举行，根据所采用的形式，它们可以分为库里亚大会、百人团大会和部族大会三个种类。库里亚大会和百人团大会分别由罗穆卢斯和塞尔维乌斯创立，而部族大会则由保民官发明。除了公民大会，没有任何其他地方能批准法律、选举行政官。由于每个公民至少是库里亚、百人团和部族三者之一的成员，所以他们所有人都拥有投票权，且在法律和事实上都是真正的主权者。

为了合法召集公民大会，并使其行动有法律约束力，必须满足三个条件：第一，召集集会的主体或行政官必须被授予必要的权威；第二，集会必须在法律规定的某一天举行；第三，必须有一个好的占卜的结果。

第一个条件的理由无需解释。第二个条件与政策相关，集会不可以在假日或集市日进行，因为那几天人人都去了罗马城里办事，没时间在广场上参加集会。第三个条件使元老院得以遏制一个自负且躁动的民族，并缓和保民官的激情，让他们不要再继续煽动人民——尽管保民官也有种种逃避审查的方式。

公民大会的作用并不仅仅是裁决法律和选举官员。由于政府最重要的那些职能都掌握在古罗马人民的手里，我们可以说，欧洲的命运就在那些集会上决定的。公共事务具有多样性，因此根据集会讨论的内容，公民大会采用过若干方式。

为了判断这些不同的方式，有必要将它们做一番比较。在建立库里亚的过程中，罗穆卢斯的打算是让元老院和公民处于平衡状态、互相防备，好让他本人同时对双方施加控制。在这样的精心筹划下，他赋予人民数量上的权威，用以平衡他留给贵族的权力与财富的权威。不过，按照君主制的精神，他仍然给了贵族极大的利益，因为他们可以用钱收买人心，从而使人民这一方不再具有人数上的优势。这种妙不可言的庇护人制度和受庇护人制度是政治和人道的杰作，没有这一制度，与共和国

精神如此对立的贵族制就无法存续。给予世界以这一崇高范例的荣誉应当独属于古罗马人；在这种制度中，权力从未被滥用，但至今还没有任何国家对其进行仿效。

库里亚的这种方式一直延续到塞尔维乌斯的统治时期，且由于人们通常认为塔尔昆的统治是建于非法基础之上的，所以古罗马王政时代的法令就被统称为库里亚法。

在共和国中，库里亚仍然被限制在那四个城市部族之内，并且仍然只包括罗马城内的居民，不管是对领导着贵族的元老院，还是对本身不是平民、但领导着较富有公民的保民官，它都提供不了什么便利。由此，库里亚陷入了不被信任的尴尬境地，它陷得如此之深，以致于需要由一整个公民大会去做的事情，他们只能交给三十个扈从去做。

百人团的分类对贵族制极为有利，因而人们最初不易看出，为何元老院始终不能在以百人团为名的公民大会中占优势，而审议会、监察官和其他行政官却借此名义当选。事实上，在构成全体罗马人六个类别的一百九十三个百人团中，第一分类有九十八个百人团。既然投票是以百人团来计数的，那么第一类的票数就比所有其他类别加起来还要多。当所有第一类的百人团抱成一团时，剩余的投票甚至都不用计算了。此时，由少数人决定的东西被看作是多数人的决议，并顺利通过了；于是我们可以说，在百人团大会中，事事都由金钱多少来决定，而不由选票多少来决定。

可是，这种过度的权力在两个方面得到了调节。第一，保民官和大多数平民通常都被归为富人那一阶级，因此他们抑制了贵族在第一类中的影响。

第二，百人团并不总是被召集起来按顺序或按等级投票，否则的话，投票就会永远从第一类开始；百人团是通过抽签选出来的。[36]先

让这个百人团进行选举，之后再在不同的日子召集其他百人团重新按等级顺序重复该项选举，通常结果都是一样的。于是，范例的权威便根据民主制的原则，不再属于等级，而属于偶然性。

这种惯例还有另一个好处；它意味着来自乡村的居民在数次选举之间，有时间亲自了解暂时被提名的候选人的优点，因而他们就不会在无知中投票。但是，借着加快投票程序的名头，这一惯例最终被废除了。两次选举还是被放在同一天进行。

严格地说，部族大会才是古罗马人的议会，它只能由保民官召集。保民官在这里被选举出来以后，又在同样的这个地方批准通过公民投票的结果。元老院不但在部族大会中没有地位，其成员甚至还被大会排斥在外。于是，他们就不得不服从那些在他们没有发言权的情况下被制定出来的法律，在这一点上，他们还不如最卑贱的公民来得自由。这种不公正在构想上是非常不妥当的，因为光凭这一点，就可以证明一个主体没有将它所有公民的意见考虑在内，所以它颁布的法律理应是无法成立的。所有贵族在出席大会的时候都只是单纯的个体，并不会对按人计数的投票产生巨大影响，因为在这里，最卑贱的无产者与首席元老享有同样的地位。

由此可知，除了由众多公民投票采用的不同方法产生的秩序之外，这几种方法本身也具有相当的重要性；每一种方法都会产生各种影响，这些影响与引导人们选择这种方法的观念息息相关。

我不想再深究细节，依照前文给出的解释，我们已经可以得出结论，即部族大会最有利于人民的政府；百人团大会最有利于贵族制。而在库里亚大会中，古罗马人民仅在人数上构成了大多数，这就有利于暴政的施行以及不光彩的恶行的滋生。正是出于这个原因，甚至连那些想要煽风点火的势力都尽量不参加库里亚大会，免得他们的野心暴露得过于彻底。毫无疑问，古罗马人的尊严只有在百人团大会上才能显示得淋

漓尽致；只有这样一种集会才是包括了所有人的。与其相反，库里亚大会把乡村部族排除在外，而部族大会又将元老院和贵族拒之门外。

古罗马人所使用的投票制就像他们的举止和道德一样简单，虽然比起斯巴达人来说还是要稍微复杂一点儿。每个人以口头表决的方式投票，然后由一个书记员将票数记下来；在每个部族中，多数派的决定等于本部族的投票结果，而多数部族的决定就等于全体人民的投票结果；库里亚和百人团也是如此。这种投票方式不失为一种好办法，但只有在参加投票的公民普遍诚实正直、耻于当众支持一种非正义的动机或一个无才无德的候选人的情况下，这种方式才行得通。所以，当人们变得腐败，且选票可以被任意买卖时，就应该采用秘密计票的方式，让贿选者无法确保他们的钱能买来选票，也让那些流氓无赖们由于无处抛售选票而不必沦为卖国贼。

我清楚，西塞罗是谴责这种方式的改变的，他还表示，这种改变得为共和国的衰败承担部分责任。虽然西塞罗在这方面的权威毋庸置疑，我却不能同意他的看法。相反，我认为正是因为此类改变做得还不够，才加速了国家的衰败。就像健康者的食物不合适给病人吃一样，人们也不该试图用适用于善良人民的法律来管理腐化的人民。没有什么会比威尼斯共和国的经久不衰更能证实这一原理了，这一政体之所以至今仍有痕迹存留，就是因为威尼斯的法律仅适用于坏人。

现在，罗马公民每个人都被分到了一张选票，他们可以在别人不知其意见的情况下把它投出去。同时，罗马人还为收牌、计票、监表等作出新的安排，但这并不表示那些被委以职责的官员们就可以不受到监督，相反，他们的忠诚会一直接受人们的质疑。最后，设计好的法令通告被大量散发，以防有人密谋和买卖选票，结果，法令的数目之多反而使其显得毫无效率。

在共和国的最后几年，古罗马人常常被迫求助于特别的权宜之计以

弥补法令的不足。有时，他们假借神意，故意制造一些奇迹，但那些手段只能使人民上当，并不能吓住人民的统治者。有时，大会被仓促召集，为的是让候选人来不及进行贿赂；有时，若人们被邪恶的一方引诱、即将作出错误的决策，一些变故就会突然发生，阻碍议案的通过。但是，野心勃勃的人最终还是使这一切努力落了空；在所有的事实中最令人难以置信的是：多亏那些古老的秩序规定，即使是在权力被如此滥用的年代，广大人民仍也能继续选举行政官、制定法律、判决案件、经营私事、管理公务，而且这些事做起来并不艰难，因为人民所掌握的资源和元老院几乎是一样多的。

第五章　论保民官制

当国体的不同部分之间无法达成一个精确的平衡，或者当无法控制的因素持续改变它们之间的关系时，一个特别的行政机构便被建立起来。它虽然独立于别的行政机构，却能使各种因素趋于平衡；在君主与人民、君主与主权者之间，它起到联系或从中协调的作用，而且，如有必要，这两种关系的协调也可以同步进行。

我称之为保民官制度的这个主体，是法律和立法权的监护人。它有时保护主权者以对抗政府，就像罗马的保民官所做的那样；有时支持政府以对抗人民，就像现今十人会议在威尼斯所做的一样；有时，它又在二者之间维持一种平衡，就像斯巴达的监察官所做的一样。

保民官制度并不是共和国体制的一部分，它既不该分享立法权，也不该分享行政权，可正是由于这种原因，保民官制度自身的权力才达到最大的极限，因为它虽然自身无所作为，却可以阻止他人作为。作为法律的保卫者，它比行使法律的君主和确立法的主权者更加神圣、更加令人崇拜。这一点十分清楚地体现在罗马的情形中，在罗马，傲慢的贵族总是鄙视所有人民，但却不得不在一位普通的人民官员面前点头哈腰，即使这个官员既无神职上的权威，又无法律上的权威。

保民官制度若是把控得高明，便是一个良好国体强有力的支柱，而一旦它拥有了超过其所必要的最底限度的权力，它就将颠覆一切。保民官制度本性上并不趋于软弱。只要它存在，它的力量就必定会比其应有的更强。

保民官制度原本的作用是充当行政权的协调员并保护法律，而当它侵占了这一权力并试图制定法律时，它就会退化为暴政。在斯巴达士气高涨的时候，监察官的巨大权力并不会带来什么危险，但只要国家出现了一点腐败的迹象，它就会大大加速这一进程。阿吉斯虽然被暴君们杀死，但他继承者最终完成了复仇；同样，监察官犯下的罪行和受到的惩罚也加速了共和国的崩溃。克利蒙特的时代结束后，斯巴达的辉煌便不复存在了。古罗马也是以同样的方式灭亡的，而且，虽然法律是为维护自由而制定的，但它却最终使保民官所拥有的过多权力落入了毁掉自由的君主之手。至于威尼斯的十人会议，那是一个血腥的法庭，这种法庭对贵族和人民同样有害；它决不是给予现已降格的法律以最高的保护，而只是为无人敢于揭露的隐秘恶行而服务。

像政府那样，保民官制度也会随其成员的增加而受到削弱。当古罗马人的保民官——原来是两个，后来增加到五个——试图再增加一倍时，元老院同意了，并自信可以利用一方控制另一方，这一招果然奏效。

阻止这样一个强大主体篡权的最好方法——尽管它是任何政府从未留意过的方法——就是不让保民官制度持久存在，并规定一个其应处于暂停期的时间间隔。这些时间间隔不宜太长，以免使人有机会滥用各种权利，为此，可以制定详细的法律，规定这一间隔可以在必要时被特别的职权所缩短。

这种方法对我来说没有什么缺点，因为既然保民官制度如我所述决不是国体的一部分，那么将它删去也必定不会有什么害处；我还认为这

种方法是非常灵验的，因为一个刚上任的行政官不会用他前任所拥有的权力，而只会用法律所赋予他的权力来执政。

第六章　论独裁制

法律的不变性妨碍法律适应于环境，所以它不但可能在某种情况下使法律变得腐败，还会在紧要关头导致国家的覆灭。法律所规定的正式程序往往进展缓慢，但很多时候局势并不容许它耗费这么长时间。有许多事是立法者无法预见的，而光是明白这一点，就是一种非常必要的预见了。

由于这种原因，人们不应试图使政治制度变得如此僵化，以致于让自己丧失了中止政治制度运行的能力。即便是斯巴达，有时也会让其法律处于休眠的状态。

然而，唯有最大的危险才值得人们去冒变更公共秩序的危险；法律神圣的权力决不应该被中止，除非国家正处于生死关头。在这些极为罕见但很容易就能理解的情况下，一道特别的法令会将公共安全托付给一位最靠得住的人物。托付方式有两种，具体的选择取决于紧急情况的性质。

如果只靠政府增加活动就足以排除危险，那么这种活动应该集中在政府的一两个成员手中。在这种情况下，并不是法律的权威被削减了，而只是行政方式发生了变更。然而，如果情况已经危险到连法律机器本身都成为了安全障碍，那么就必须任命一个人为最高首领，并赋予其压制一切的法律权力，同时暂时中止主权者的权力。在这种情况下，公意就不容置疑，因为很显然，人们主要关注的是国家的生死存亡。因而，中止立法权并非废止立法权，压制立法权的行政官也不能直接掌握这一权力；他控制立法权，却不是它的代表。他可以做其他任何事情，唯独不能立法。

古罗马元老院使用的是第一种方法，它根据一项神圣的程序将共和国安全委托给两位执政官；而当他们之一拥立一个独裁者掌权时，方法一变更为方法二。这种方法是古罗马从阿尔巴那里学到的。[37]

在共和国初期，古罗马人常常采用独裁的手段，因为国家的根基尚未稳固，光靠宪法是不足以维护自身的。然而，古罗马人的道德品质使得他们不必像其他国家那样进行诸多防范，人们既不担忧独裁者会滥用职权，也不担忧他会企图超限延长执政时间。相反，如此多的权力对那些行使权力的人来说倒成了一个负担，因为他们急急忙忙想使自己摆脱这些权力，仿佛将行使法律的权力握在手里是什么极其麻烦又危险的职责似的。

所以，这里的危险情况并不是权力的滥用，而是对权力的贬低。人们往往因此而谴责罗马共和国在早期对这种最高行政官制度的使用过于轻率。因为当权力被浪费在选举、献祭以及纯粹的形式化的事情中时，他们便有理由担心权力会在真正需要它施展力量的时候显得软弱无力，并且他们也会逐渐认为，独裁只是一种空洞的形式，其唯一作用便是让种种毫无用处的仪式显得煞有其事。

到共和国晚期，比以往慎重许多的古罗马人在实行独裁的过程中又变得十分吝啬，这一切是没什么理由的，就像他们同样解释不了为什么之前对权力如此放任一样。不难看出，他们的谨慎并没有确实的根据。当时，为了不让行政官拥有太大的权力，人们的对策是让首都处于较弱的地位；独裁者在某种情况下可以保护公众自由，却不能侵犯它；古罗马的镣铐不是在它内部铸成的，而是在军队之中；塞尔维乌斯无力抵抗苏拉和庞培无力抵抗恺撒这两件事清楚地表明，内部的权威在面临外部的力量是多么不堪一击。

这种偏差导致古罗马人犯下极大的错误。例如，在喀提林事件中，人们没能扶持一位独裁者上位。鉴于那次事件只关系到城市本身，或者

顶多还涉及意大利的几个省区，法律赋予独裁者的无限权力本该轻易粉碎那场阴谋，但事实上，若不是发生了一连串侥幸的意外事件，情况还会继续恶化。这种侥幸，恰恰是与古罗马人的谨慎最不相容的。

元老院不去任命独裁者，反而十分满意地将其所有权力交给执政官，这就导致西塞罗为进行有效的行动而不得不在关键时刻僭越了他的权限。并且，尽管在最初的喜悦之中，古罗马人赞成了他的举动，他也依然应当为其行为造成的后果负全责，包括公民因违反法律而受到的肉体伤害——这原本是一种不可能向独裁者提出的指责。然而，这位执政官的雄辩却为他扫清了一切障碍。他本人尽管是一个古罗马人，可是他爱自己的荣耀胜过爱自己的国家；他企图在国务中为自己获得一切荣誉，而不去寻求一种报国的合理合法手段。[38]因而，他被公正地誉为罗马的解放者，同时也作为古罗马法律的违犯者受到了应有的惩罚。不管他所描述的自己被流放的经历有多么辉煌，那也毫无疑问是在赎罪。

此外，无论这个重要的独裁者的任命是以什么方式被授予的，其任期都必须被限制为一个绝对不能延长的、较短的时间；在需要建立独裁制的紧急情况下，国家要么很快灭亡，要么很快脱离险境。一旦这种急需没有了，独裁不是变成暴政就是变得一文不值。在古罗马，这个期限是六个月，大多数独裁者会在期满之前辞职。假设这个期限可以被延长，那他们就可能在延长的基础上再作出调整，以进一步延长期限，就像原本任期一年的古罗马十大行政官那样。独裁者被给予的时间，只能刚好够他解决当前的问题，而不能让他有余地考虑更长远的计划。

第七章　论监察官制

正如公意是通过法律途径加以宣布的一样，公众的裁决是通过监察官来宣布的；公众的意见是一种法律，而监察官就是这种法律的执行者，而且，按照君主的模式，这种法律也只能应用在特殊情况中。

由此，监察官仲裁的决不是公众意见，它只是代言人；一旦脱离了这一点，其种种决策就空洞无效。

将民族的道德与其尊崇的对象分隔开来是徒劳无益的，因为两者都源自同样的原理，必然会相互混杂。对世上所有的民族来说，并不是天性，而是意见决定了他们对快乐的选择。若是改变人们的意见，他们的道德便将自动得到净化。人们总是喜爱好东西或他们认为好的东西，然而，正是由于这种判断，他们才会犯下错误；所以，应该对他们的判断加以调整。判断道德，就是判断荣誉的授予标准；判断荣誉的授予标准，就是把意见当作法律来看待。

一个民族的种种意见都来源于其自身的体制；尽管法律并不规定道德，但道德确实是因立法才产生的；当立法被弱化时，道德就堕落；而监察官的裁决势必完成不了法律尚未完成的任务。

由此可见，在维护道德方面，监察官制度可能有所作为，但是在恢复道德方面它却绝对无能为力。监察官制度应该建立在法律仍然充满活力的时候，因为活力一旦失去，一切就都无所指望；法律一旦不再具有力量，任何合法的东西也就不具有力量了。

监察官制度为了维护道德，不但要防止各种意见受到腐化、用明智的规划阻止它们偏离正道，有时还要在它们尚未成形时就对其加以固定。在法兰西王国，决斗中使用助手曾经是人们强烈支持的做法，但仅仅由于国王在法令中说了一句话——“至于那些胆怯到要找助手的人”——这种做法就被废止了。公共意见之所以能一下子被扭转过来，是因为有人对它进行了准确预判。可当同样的法令试图表明对抗决斗也是胆怯时——尽管这很有道理，但却与大众意见背道而驰——大众就会对此加以嘲笑，因为他们自己已经有了对这件事的判断。

我在其他地方说过，既然公众意见并不屈从于强制力，那么在已建

立起的代表公众意见的监察官制中就不该留下强制的痕迹。这种现代人完全不熟悉的技巧，古罗马人曾经运用得很好，而斯巴达人更是深谙此道。在此，我们只能对他们致以最高的敬意。

过去，有一个品行不好的人在斯巴达内阁会议上提出了一个很好的想法，监督官对他不屑一顾，却听取了一个善良公民提出的同样的意见。二者既没受到表扬，也没受到责备，然而这对后者来说是怎样的荣誉、对前者来说是怎样的耻辱啊；来自萨摩斯岛的几个醉鬼曾经弄脏监察官的席位，次日，就有公共布告允许萨摩斯岛居民今后可以做各种坏事。这种惩罚比真正的惩罚更为严厉。在斯巴达声明了什么是体面的、什么是不体面的之后，希腊便直接接受了这一判断标准。

第八章　论公民宗教

原始时期，人们没有国王，却有神祇。他们唯一的政权就是神权。他们像卡力古拉那样推理，因此便能得出正确的结论。在一个人决定接受自己的同类作为主人，并说服自己做此决定是有益处的之前，他需要一段较长的时间来调整他的感觉和观念。

每个政治社会都有其信奉的神。由这一事实可见，神跟民族是一样多的。两个互相疏远、几乎总是敌对的民族，不可能长期认同同一个主人，两支交战的军队也不可能服从同一个指挥官。因而，民族的互不相容就产生了如此之多的神，而且这反过来又产生了宗教层面和民间层面的不宽容。之后我便要解释，这两种不宽容必然是相同的。

古希腊人的幻想——他们是在野蛮人崇拜的诸神中找到自己的神祇的——源于他们的一种习惯，即把自己看作那些民族的自然主权者。可到了我们这个时代，若是还不懂得如何分辨各民族的神——不管是无法区别闪米族神、农神和克罗诺，还是把腓尼基人的邪神、希腊人的宙斯和古罗马人的朱庇特混为一谈——就未免过于可笑了；仿佛是在说，这

些拥有不同名称的幻想生命之间是有共通之处的！

可是，或许有人会问，为何那些国家在有自己的宗教礼拜和神祇且信奉异教的情况下没有发生宗教战争？我的回答是：这是由于这样一个真实的情况——每个拥有自己的信仰和自己的政权的国家，并不区分自己的神祇和法律。政治战争就是神学战争。每个神的职权是由不同民族的边界所决定的。一个民族的神无权超越其他民族的神。异教徒的神决不是嫉妒的，它们在彼此之间划分世界；甚至连摩西人和希伯莱人在论及以色列的神时也会采用这个观念。诚然，他们完全不在乎迦南人的神，迦南人是一个受排斥的民族，注定要毁灭，而他们将要占领迦南人的国家。但是，想一想他们是怎样谈论自己无法侵略的邻国民族的神的吧。耶弗他对阿摩尼特斯人说："属于你们的神基抹的东西难道不是你合法应得的东西吗？正如我们有权占领一块土地，只要我们善于征伐的神已经攻下了它。"[39]

但是，犹太人以前屈从于巴比伦君主，后来屈从于叙利亚君主，当他们试图坚定不移地承认自己的神祇，而不承认其他神祇时，这番拒绝就被视为一种向征服者发起的叛乱。我们在犹太人历史上所读到的那些迫害，正是因这个理由而发生的，而且在基督教诞生之前，我们没有找到其他这样的例子。[40]

既然每种宗教都如此唯一地依附于对它作出规定的国家法律，且既然除了征服就没有使人皈依宗教的手段，那么，唯有征服者才是传教士；既然改变信仰是被征服国家的法定义务之一，那么就有必要在布道使人皈依之前就进行征服。比起人类为了神而战，情况倒更像是荷马书中所说的那样，是诸神为了人类而战；每个民族都会向神祈求胜利，并偿还神以新的祭坛。古罗马人在拿下一座城池之前，都会拜请那儿的神放弃城池；他们之所以允许塔伦土姆人维护他们愤怒的神，是因为他们相信，别的神已经屈从于他们的神，并被迫向他们表示敬意。他们允许

被征服者保有自己的神，就好比是允许被征服者保有自己的法律。通常，这种宽容的唯一条件，就是被征服者必须向主神殿的朱庇特献上一顶王冠。

最后，随着帝国的扩张，古罗马人也传播了他们的信仰和神，而且他们还常常给予所有人同等的公民权利，从而将被征服者的宗教和神都纳入了自己的体系。这个庞大帝国的各民族逐渐发现自己拥有许多的神祇和信仰，而且各地的情况都差不多；这就是异教在当时世界成为了唯一宗教形式的原因。

正是在这些情况下，耶稣出现了，并在全球建立起一个精神王国；这个将神学体系与政治分离的王国，不但意味着国家已不是一个统一体，还造成了宗教内部的分裂，将信仰基督教的各民族置于无休无止的动荡之中。可是，既然另一世界王国的新观念从未被灌输到异教徒的头脑中，他们就始终把基督教徒视为真正的叛乱者，并且认为这些叛乱者披着虚情假意屈服的外衣，在力量薄弱时服从权威，但一有机会就会侵占这种权威、独立称霸。宗教迫害的原因便是如此。

异教徒所担忧的事真的发生了；那时一切都变了样；谦卑的基督教徒改变了他们的调子，并且在一个具有实体的首领的统治下，所谓另一世界的王国很快变成了这世上最暴力的专制。

然而，既然各位君主和各种公民法律依旧存在，这个双重权力的结果就只能是一场没完没了的司法冲突，这场冲突基督教国家不可能拥有任何一种好的政府制度，因为在这些国家，人们从来就不知道他们是该服从公民的统治者，还是该听从神父。

许多民族，甚至包括欧洲或其周边国家的民族，都曾试图维护或重新建立古代的制度，可它们都没有成功：基督精神已大获全胜。宗教崇拜一直保持着，或重新恢复了其独立于主权的地位，并且与国家没有必

要的联系。穆罕默德的观念是很合理的，他努力维护其政体的统一，而且只要在他的继任者哈里发的掌权期间，这一政体形式能够维持下去，从今以后它就是牢不可破的了，从某种程度上来说，它也会是一个很好的政体。然而，阿拉伯人后来变得富裕、有教养了，同时也更文雅、娇贵和软弱了，以至于被野蛮人征服；然后两权分割重新开始。即使与基督教徒相比，穆斯林之间的分裂更不明显，但它确实是存在的，阿里教派的这一现象尤为严重，而在像波斯那样的国家中，人们一直都会有分裂的感觉。

在我们当中，英国国王和沙皇已经自封为教会领袖了。然而这个称号并非使他们真正成为了教会的主人，倒更像是成了教会的大臣，而他们掌握的力量也只够保存教会，并不能让其作出改变；他们并不是立法者，而只是君主。无论牧师在哪里设立一个团体，[41]他在自己的机构中就是主人和立法者。因而，英国和俄国就有两种权力、两个主权者，和别的国家并没有区别。

在所有基督教作家中，哲学家霍布斯是唯一清楚地看出了其邪恶之处，并找到了根治方法的人，他敢于建议将鹰的两个头重新合并，彻底恢复政治统一，因为如果不统一，国家和政府就都无法健全。不过，他应该也已看出基督教的主导精神与其体制互不相容——君主利益总是高于国家利益。霍布斯体系招人憎恨的原因不在于它的可怕、虚假的部分，而恰恰在于其合理、真实的部分。[42]

我相信，如果用这个观点来分析历史事实，我们就不难反驳贝尔和华伯登相互对立的观念了，他们一个认为宗教对政体无益，一个认为基督教是政体的坚强后盾。通过阐述国家没有宗教作为基础就无法创建的道理，我们可以驳斥第一个观点；通过证明基督教法则对健全的国体其实不是有利而是有害，我们也可以驳斥第二个观点。为了使大家理解得更透彻，我想我只需把与主题有关的、特别含混不清的宗教观念说得更

明确一点即可。

从与社会的联系——不管是普通的还是特别的——来看，宗教可以分为两种：人类宗教和公民宗教。人类宗教没有神殿、祭坛或仪式，只受限于对至高无上神的内在忠诚和道德的外在义务，它是纯洁朴素的福音宗教、是真正的有神论，可以被称为神圣的自然法则。公民宗教是在一国之内建立起来的宗教；它让那个国家拥有自己的神祇，也就是特别的守护神；它有自己的教条、礼节和由法律规定的崇拜形式；对一个提倡这种宗教的国家来说，外在的一切都是异教的、不相容的、野蛮的；它只把人的权利与义务限定在祭坛一样狭窄的范围内。所有早期民族的宗教就是如此；我们可以给它取名为公民的或积极的神圣法则。

还有第三种更古怪的宗教，它们给予人们两套立法规则、两位统治者、两个祖国，让人们承担两种相互矛盾的义务，并且阻止人们同时具有教民与公民的身份。拉马斯人的宗教如此，日本人的宗教如此，天主基督教也如此。人们可以称其为牧师的宗教。它产生一种混合的、反社会的法律体系，这种体系没有名称。

从政治上看，这三种宗教每一种都有其缺陷。第三种宗教坏得如此明显，以至于一切对其坏处的证明都是在浪费时间。破坏社会统一的一切事物都是毫无价值的；使人自相矛盾的一切制度也是毫无价值的。

第二种宗教的优点在于它把拜神与守法相结合，而且，通过使公民崇拜祖国，它也教会了他们一点：为国家作贡献就是为守护神作贡献。这是一种君主即为唯一教主、行政官即为唯一牧师的神权政体。在这里，为自己国家而死的人就是殉道者；违法就是不虔诚；让罪人承受大众的诅咒就等于让神的怒火来裁决他：sacer esto（让神诅咒他去吧！）。

不过，这种宗教也是恶劣的；既然它依赖谬误和谎言，它就会欺骗

人们，使人们轻信、迷信；它在空洞的礼仪中将对神的真正崇拜掩盖起来。当它变得孤傲、残暴，并且使一个民族变得嗜血、偏狭时，它就更加恶劣了，不但让人们成天只顾谋杀和屠杀，还让他们相信杀害那些不接受其神明的人是一桩神圣的义举。这样一来，这个民族就陷入与其他所有民族对峙或交战的自然状态，它的自身安全于是毫无保障。

剩下的就只有人类宗教，也就是基督教。这里讲的不是如今的基督教，而是那种完全不同的的福音基督教。在这种神圣的、崇高的、真正的宗教的影响下，人们作为同一个神的孩子，把其他人视为兄弟姐妹，并且他们联结而成的那个社会自始至终都不会解体。

可是，这种宗教既没有与政体的特定联系，也不能让法律在原有的基础上增加任何权力，所以它就缺乏一种维系特别社会所必需的纽带。更有甚者：这种宗教非但不会使公民的内心依附于国家，反而会使他们与尘世的一切东西分离。我不知道还有什么会比这更加违反社会精神了。

有人说，一个真正基督教徒的民族总是可以建立人们所能想到的最完美无缺的社会。我只看出这个假设有一个大缺陷，即一个真正基督教徒的社会肯定不是一个人类社会。

我甚至还要说，这个想象的社会若有尽善尽美的一切，就决不会是最强大、最持久的。它的完美使它缺乏连结的纽带；其致命的缺陷就在于其极致的完美。

人人都要履行义务；人人都要服从法律；统治者要公正温和；行政官要诚实廉洁；士兵要藐视死亡；既不能虚荣也不能奢侈；这一切十分美好。不过，让我们再往下瞧一瞧吧！

基督教是一种地地道道精神上的宗教，它只涉及天堂的东西；基督

教徒的祖国并不属于这个世界。基督教徒履行其义务，这一点并不假，可他是抱着一种完全不在乎行为成功与否的态度在履行义务。假如他对自己没什么好责备的话，那这世上的一切是否顺利对他来说便无关紧要了。如果国家繁荣昌盛，他就几乎不敢享受公众的快乐，而是害怕他会因国家的荣耀而骄傲起来；如果国家灭亡，他就会祝福上帝对其子民施加的重压。

为了使社会得以太平、和谐得以保持，每个公民毫无例外都必须成为好的基督徒。假如不幸出现了一个野心勃勃的家伙、一个伪君子、一个谋反者，或者比如在他们当中出现了一个克伦威尔的话，那人一定会轻易地将他虔诚的同胞玩弄于股掌之中。因为基督的仁慈不容许我们动不动就把邻居往坏处想。当那人狡猾到掌握了利用别人的技巧，并成功窃取了一部分公共权威时，他就会得到无上荣誉；神的意志就要求人们对他尊敬；不久，他的权利越来越大，神的意志就要求人们服从他。就算他想滥用人们委托给他的权力，他也可以说是神在惩罚其子民。基督教徒会对驱逐篡夺者顾虑重重，因为那意味着妨碍大家的和睦相处，还要动用暴力，导致流血事件，而所有这些极不符合基督教的温和精神。一个人活在苦难的世间，是享受自由还是当个奴隶都无所谓，重要的只有上天堂这一件事，而听天由命正是升入天堂的方法之一。

假如爆发了一场对外战争，公民们会欣然上战场；他们当中没有人会想逃之夭夭；大家都会尽义务——不过他们不以胜利的激情来尽义务；比起如何打胜仗，他们更知道如何去献身。他们不在乎自己是胜利者还是失败者。上帝难道不比他们更清楚什么是必要的吗？可想而知，一个得意的、蛮横的、意气风发的敌人会从他们的斯多葛哲学中汲取到什么好处。找一个慷慨激昂、内心充满对荣誉和国家的热爱的民族，让基督徒去与他们对战吧；设想一下基督教共和国遇上斯巴达或古罗马，那些虔诚的基督教徒在发挥出他们的聪明才智之前就会被挫败、镇压和消灭；如果没有，那只是因为敌人对他们心怀鄙夷。

我自己认为，费比乌斯手下的士兵们遵循的是非常好的誓言；他们并不发誓要去征服他人，或是为国献身，而只是发誓要以凯旋的姿态归来，他们说到做到。而基督教徒从来不敢这样做；他们会以为这是在试探上帝。

不过，我在谈到基督教共和国时，就已经犯了一个错，因为这两个术语是相互矛盾的。基督教只宣扬奴性和顺从。它的精神对暴政太有利了，以致于专制政治想不得到好处都不行。真正的基督教徒就是要当奴隶的；他们对此很清楚，却毫不在乎；因为尘世的短暂生活在他们眼里太没有价值了。

有人说基督教军队很出色。我否认这种说法。给我展示一下这样的军队吧。据我所知，世上根本就没有这样的例子。人们可能会提到十字军东征。我不会否认十字军东征的英勇无畏，可我必须说，他们决不是基督教徒。他们是牧师的士兵，是教派的公民；他们为了教派的精神家园而战，而教派却以某种奇特的方式使这个精神家园落在了现实世界。严格地说，这个讨论又属于异教的主题了；因为既然福音书从不创立任何国教，那么在基督教徒当中便不可能有神圣的战争。

在异教徒君主的统治下，基督教徒士兵个个骁勇善战。所有基督徒作家都告诉我们这一点。我相信他们说的；但那些士兵正是为了抗击异教徒的荣誉才战斗。一旦君主们都成为基督教徒，这种对抗就会终止；一旦十字架将鹰驱赶出去，所有古罗马人的英勇无畏精神就会消失。

现在把政治考虑搁置一边，让我们回到关于权利的问题上来，再确定一下解决这个重要问题的种种原则。如我所说，社会公约给予主权者统治臣民的权利不能超过公共实用的界限。[43]臣民没有义务向主权者说明他们的信仰，除非那些信仰对共同体来说意义重大。有一点对国家非常关键，那就是每个公民都应该有一种使其热爱自己职责的宗教，但那种宗教的教条既不是为国家谋利，也不是为国家成员谋利，除非只要

那些教条涉及道德和义务，这些道德和义务就必然为每个以那种宗教为业者所履行。此外，每个人都可以依据自己的喜好持有意见，不必经主权者的审查，因为在另一个世界里，主权者显然没有任何力量；只要臣民在今生的生活中当好公民，他们后世的命运不管怎样都跟主权者无关。

因而，就有了一种纯粹为公民信仰的宣言，而主权者的职能就是确定条条框框。它们并非严格得像宗教的教条，而更像像社会良知的表达，没有这种良知，想成为一个好的公民或一个忠诚的臣民都是不可能的。[44]主权者不能强迫人人都得相信这些条条框框，但可以将任何不相信它们的人驱逐出境；驱逐的理由不是对神不敬，而是由于他是一个反社会的人，不能真诚热爱法律和正义，也不会在必要时为职责牺牲生命。如果有人已经公开接受了教条，他的行为却显示他并不相信它们，那么就把他处死吧，因为他犯下滔天大罪，即在法律面前撒谎的罪。

公民宗教的教条必须既简单又少量，表达精确，无需解释或评注。全能的、理智的、仁慈的、先知先觉神性的存在，来生，正义的快乐，惩罚罪人，社会契约和法律的圣洁——这些都是积极的教条。至于消极的教条，我把它们限于一条：不宽容。它属于我们已经拒绝的宗教之列。

依我看，那些区分政治的不宽容和神学的不宽容的人都错了。不宽容的这两种形式是不可分割的。我们无法与将堕入地狱的人和睦相处，爱他们就等于憎恨将要惩罚他们的神；我们若不挽救他们，就得折磨他们，这是一项责无旁贷的义务。无论神学的不宽容在哪里被应用，它必然造成某种政治的结果，[45]这时，主权者就不再是主权者了，即使是在世俗层面上；在这个阶段，牧师成为真实的主人，而君主只不过成了牧师的办事员。

由于现在没有也不再可能有一个唯一的国教，凡是对其他宗教宽容

的宗教，我们就必须宽容，只要它们的教条不含任何与公民的义务相对立的东西。然而，任何敢说“在教堂之外没有拯救”的人都应该从他的国家被驱逐出去，除非那个国家就是教会，并且君主就是主教。这样一种教条只有在神权政体中是好的；而在任何其他政体中却是有害的。据说，亨利四世接受天主教的那个理由，本该使所有诚实的人——特别是所有懂得思考的君主——都放弃天主教。

第九章　结论

在陈述了政治权利的真正原则，并且尝试在这些原则的基础上创建国家之后，我应该思考国家的对外关系，包括国际法、商业、战争权与征服权、公共法、联盟、谈判、条约等等，以此来结束我的研究。但是，所有这些都代表一个新主题，这个主题对才疏识浅的我来说显得太大了；我应该始终关注我力所能及的种种问题。

[1]见普鲁塔克的一篇题为《动物应用理性》的短论文。

[2]古罗马人比世上任何民族都更了解也更尊重战争权。在这方面，他们非常顾忌，以至于在一个公民未正式表示反抗敌人，并特别指名反抗某个敌人之前，不许作为志愿军服役。当小卡图最先参加波比里乌斯领导的军队改编时，老卡图就写信给波比里乌斯说，如果他仍然要他的儿子继续在他手下服役的话，就应让他重新进行一次战争宣誓。其理由是他儿子的第一次宣誓已经无效，儿子不能再扛枪杀敌。卡图还写信给儿子，警告他没有再宣誓就别参战。＜br/＞我知道，有人可能引用克鲁修姆之围和古罗马历史上的其他例子来反驳我，但我引用的是法律和惯例。没有哪个民族会比古罗马人更遵纪守法，也没有哪个民族会比古罗马人有如此完善的法律。

[3]当城镇与城市被认为是同一的东西，公民被认为跟市民一样时，这个名词的真正含义在近代几乎完全消失了。人们忘了，城镇是由房屋构成的，而只有市民才能构成城市。迦太基人曾为这一错误付出惨重的代价。我从未见过（公民）这个称号赋予任何君主统治下的臣民，即使对古代马其顿人或当今英国人也不行，尽管他们比其他民族都更接近自由。唯独法语以相似的意思来处理“公民”这个词，因为他们不知道这个词是什么意思，他们的不同词典已证明了这一点。如果真知道这词的含义，他们就要犯大逆不道的篡位罪了。事实上，他们用这个词表示社会地位，而不表示合法权利。当博丹要表达公民与市民时，他完全错误地张冠李戴。达朗贝先生没犯这个错误，并且在他的《日内瓦》一文里，正确区别我们城镇所发现的四个等级的人（或五个等级的人，如果算上异邦人的话），而其中两个等级的人组成共和国。就我所知，没有别的法国作家了解“公民”这个词的真正含义。

[4]在一个不良政府的统治下，这种平等只是一种表面现象，一种幻想。它只能使穷人继续处于悲惨的境地，使富人继续处在富有的地位。事实上，法律总是有益于拥有财产的人，而对一无所有的人却是有害的。由此可见，只有当大家都拥有一些东西而又无人拥有过多的东西时，这种社会状态才会对人有益。

[5]由于意志要成为公意，所以意志没必要总是全体一致，但必须把全部票数都计算在内。任何形式上的例外都会破坏其普遍性。

[6]阿冉松侯爵说过：“每种利益都有其不同的原则。两种利益之间的协调是由与第三种利益相对立而形成的。”他可能会补充说，所有利益的协调是由与个人利益相对立而形成的。如果没有不同利益的话，我们就几乎意识不到一种永远都碰不到障碍的共同利益。一切都将轻松自如地运转，政治也就不再是一种艺术了。

[7]马基雅维利说：“事实上，划分有时有害于一个共和国，有时则是有益的。害处是由派系派别造成的，而益处则是由没有派系派别的党派带来的。因此，既然一个国家的缔造者不可能预防敌意，至少他必须尽可能预防派系纠纷。”（见《佛罗伦萨史》第七卷）

[8]请细心的读者不要因为矛盾而急于责备我。由于语言贫乏，所以我无法避免用语上的矛盾，

不过等待吧。

[9]“共和的”这个词，我不仅理解贵族制或民主制，而且还大致理解在成为法律的公意指导下的任何政府。如果公意是合法的，政府就不能与主权者混为一谈，而只能是主权者的执政人，从而君主制也可以是共和制。这一点将在第三卷中加以说明。

[10]一个民族直到其国体开始衰退时才出名。我们不知道，在争相谈论希腊其他地方之前，莱格古士的国体给斯巴达人带来了多少世纪的幸福。

[11]把加尔文只当作是一位神学家的那些人，并没有意识到其天才的程度。他在我们充满智慧的法令汇编中起到很大的作用，这给他带来的莫大荣誉不亚于他的《基督教要义》。无论怎样的革命可能在我们的宗教信仰中发生，当对祖国和自由的热爱在我们心中没有泯灭时，那些宗教家们将永远以崇敬的心情缅怀这位伟人。

[12]马基雅维利在文中写道：“事实上，在任何国家从没有过任何不求助于上帝的特殊立法者；否则，法律便不为人所接受；一个智者知道许多有用的真理，而这些真理无法以像说服他人那样的一种方式加以示范。”（《论李维》第五卷第十一章）（原文为意大利语——译者注）

[13]（在1782年版中被修订为“大多数民族……”。——译者注）

[14]如果两个相邻的民族彼此依存，这种状况对一方是艰难而对另一方却是危险的。在这种情况下，任何聪明的民族都将尽快地让另一个民族从这种依附状态下摆脱出来。处于墨西哥帝国包围中的斯拉斯加拉共和国，不但不向墨西哥人购买食盐度日，甚至也不接受他们馈赠的食盐。聪明的斯拉斯加拉人看出隐藏在对方宽宏大量背后的阴谋诡计。他们维护了自己的自由，而这个封锁在大帝国领土内的小国最终成为帝国毁亡的原因。

[15]你希望国家具有凝聚力吗？那么就尽可能地消除贫富悬殊现象吧；不许有富豪，也不许有赤贫。这两个自然分化的阶级对公共幸福来说是同样致命的；一个阶级会产生暴政的支持者，而另一个阶级则会产生暴君。这两个阶级始终在做公共自由的交易：一个购买自由，另一个则出卖自由。

[16]阿冉松侯爵说过：“任何外贸部门对整个王国来说，都只不过带来一种虚幻的利益；它可以使一些人甚至一些城市发财致富，但是整个国家却一无所获，而且全体人民的生活也没有因此变得更好。”

[17]因此，在威尼斯人们仍称大议会为最尊敬的君主，即使当大公不出席的时候。

[18]波兹南侯爵，即波兰国王的父亲，洛林公爵。

[19]“我愿自由而有危险，但不愿安宁而受奴役。”

[20]很显然，对古人来说“贵族”这个词并不是指最好，而是指最强。

[21]最为重要的是，必须用法律来规定行政官的选举方式；因为如果这是委托给君主的意志，那就不可避免地会沦为世袭贵族制，就像威尼斯共和国和伯尔尼共和国曾发生过的那样。威尼斯长期以来就是一个衰败的国家，而伯尔尼则仅由于其元老院极其英明才得以生存——这一规则无一例外是很荣耀的，可也是很危险的。

[22]马基雅维利是个绅士，也是个良好公民；可因为他依附于梅狄奇家族，所以不得不在国人的压迫下把对自由的热爱伪装起来。他恰好选择了一位可恶的主人公，这就显示了他的秘密意图；而他的《君王论》一书的准则与他的《李维论》和《佛罗伦萨史》两书的准则之间相互对立，这种对立证明，这位深刻的政治思想家至今都只有一些肤浅的或曲解的读者。罗马教皇曾严禁这本书。我确信这一点，因为这本书描写得最直白的就是罗马宫廷。

[23]“因为辨别好坏最有效也是最简洁的方法，就是假如做国王的不是自己而是另一个人的话，想一想自己要什么，不要什么。”（见塔西佗《历史》，第一卷）

[24]这跟我在第二卷第九章论大国的劣势时所说的并不矛盾，因为前面我论述的是政府对其成员的权威，而这里的问题则是它对付臣民的势力。它分散各地的官员，作为它从远距离给公民施压的许多支点，可它却没有可以给官员施压的支点。因此，在一种情况下，杠杆过长便成了政府的软肋；而在另一种情况下，则又成了政府的力量。

[25]人们必须根据这同一条原则来判断，就人类繁荣而言，哪些是值得我们赞许的世纪。对于所目睹的工艺品和文学的繁荣，我们赞美得太多了，但却从未深究这些文化隐藏的目的，也未考虑它们致命的后果：“愚人称之为人道的，其实那已是奴役的开始。”难道在书中的那些箴言背后，我们就看不出促使作者们说的那些原始的私利吗？不，无论他们说些什么，一个国家尽管灿烂辉煌，可只要其人口减少，就绝不会真的是一切都好。一个诗人年薪十万里弗，这不足以说明他所处的就是历史长河中最好的时代。应该少考虑表面的平静和统治者的安宁，而更多地关注整个民族的幸福，特别是那些人口最多国家的幸福。冰雹可能毁坏一些国家的行政区，却很少造成饥荒。骚动和内战可能引起统治者的强烈恐慌，它们却并非民族真正的不幸；当谁是下一个暴君尚未定论时，公民至少有数月可以休养生息。他们的灾难和幸福都起于他们的持久状态。当大家仍处在枷锁的束缚时，一切都将衰败；只有在这时统治者才能任意摧残公民，当他们把国土沦为废墟时，他们会说和平到来了。当举国的争论搅动着法兰西王国时，当巴黎副主教怀揣匕首出席会议时，这并不妨碍法国公民在一种真正自由的安逸中享受幸福，生儿育女。古希腊是在最残酷的战争中达到繁盛的巅峰；虽然血流成河，可是整个国土上还是住满了人。马基雅维利说过：“看起来我们的共和国似乎就是在暗杀、流放与内战之中变得比以往任何时候都强大；公民的德行、道德与独立性起到的加强国家的作用，胜过一切争端引起的削弱作用。”一点点震荡倒会使人们的内在富有活力；真正能使种族繁荣昌盛的不是和平，而是自由。

[26]威尼斯共和国在其环礁湖中缓慢形成与发展，提供了这个过程一个值得注意的范例；一千二百多年之后，威尼斯人似乎仍处在1198年由西拉尔·康塞里奥开启的第二个阶段，这真令人惊讶。至于人们所责难的那些古代大公们，无论《威尼斯自由论》这本书怎么讲，都不是他们的主权者，这一点有据可循。＜br/＞肯定会有人引用罗马共和国的例子来反驳我，说罗马共和国

遵循了一个完全相反的时间顺序，它从君主制过渡到贵族制，再从贵族制过渡到民主制。可我却决不同意这种看法。＜br/＞罗穆鲁斯最初创建的是一个混合政府，这个混合政府迅速退化为一个专制政体。由于特殊原因，这个国家过早夭折，就像人们有时看到婴儿在未成年以前就死去一样。驱逐塔尔干王朝之日才是共和国真正诞生之时。但是罗马共和国起初并非采取一种固定的形式，因为罗马人尚未废除贵族制，只是半途而废。因为在所有合法管理机构中最糟糕的世袭贵族制仍然与民主制相冲突，所以政府的形式总是变幻不定，直到设立保民官时才固定下来（正如马基雅维利证明过的一样）；只有到那时才有了真正的政府和真正的民主制；事实上，到那时公民不仅是主权者，还是行政官和法官；元老院不过是一个从属的执政议会，用以调和与集中政权，而执政官本身——尽管他们是贵族、首席行政官、战时的绝对指挥官——在罗马不过是公民的议长罢了。＜br/＞从那时起，我们看得出来，罗马政府遵循其自然倾向并强烈地趋于贵族制。贵族制似乎是自我毁灭，因此也就不再处于贵族的主体内，像是在威尼斯和热那亚一样，而是处在由贵族和平民所组成的元老院的主体内，甚至处在——当保民官开始篡夺主动权时——保民官的主体内，因为名字是改变不了什么的，所以当公民有了代表他们治理国家的首领时，无论这些人有什么称号，这仍然是一个贵族制。＜br/＞贵族制的滥用造成了内战与三人执政的局面。苏拉、尤利西斯·恺撒、奥古斯都实际上相当于君主；最后，在提贝留乌斯的专制下，国家终于解体。那么，罗马的历史不是与我的原则不相符，而是肯定了我的原则。

[27]“凡是在一个习惯于自由的城市里永远当权的人，就会被人称为或视为暴君。”（见科尔奈利乌斯·尼波斯的《密蒂阿德传》）确实，亚里士多德（见《尼各马可伦理学》第八卷第十章）区分过暴君与国王，暴君是为自己的利益而统治，国王则只是为臣民的利益而统治；然而，所有的希腊作家通常都在另一层意思上使用“暴君”这个词，尤其像色诺芬所写的《希罗》那样；此外，根据亚里士多德的这一准则还可以得出：自从有了这个世界，还从未有过一个国王。

[28]这个词在此的用法有几分英国议会所具有的意思。纵然一切管辖权都已中止，这种职能之间的相似性还是会引起执政官与保民官之间的冲突的。

[29]要在寒冷的国家接受东方人的奢侈与温柔，就等于想给自己戴上枷锁，也就等于比东方人更不可避免地向这两者屈服。

[30]这就是我在本书剩余部分所要做的事，在论述对外关系中，我将要涉及到邦联制的主题。这是一个全新的主题，其原则还有待确定。

[31]这可以理解为：没有人可能为逃避职责而离开自己的国家，或者当国家需要他时为避免拯救自己的国家而离开。在这种情况下，逃跑一定是犯罪，该受惩罚；逃跑不一定是撤退，而一定是潜逃。

[32]这应该始终理解为仅指自由的国家，因为在别处家庭、财产、缺乏庇护、必需品以及暴力，这些都可能勉强使一个居民留在国内；到那时纯粹的居住不再表示他是同意契约还是违背契约。

[33]在热那亚，所有监狱的大门上和大帆船的锁链上，都可以看到“自由”这个词。把这个词当作座右铭来用真是美妙又恰当。其实，正是各国犯罪分子才妨碍公民得到自由。在一个所有这般人都在大帆船上的国家里，人们一定会享受到最完美的自由。

[34]“罗马”这个名字，据说出自罗穆鲁斯，其实是希腊语，意思是“力量”；“努玛”这个名字也是希腊语，意思是“法律”。罗马城最早的两位国王在其执政前就有了与他们所从事的事业极其有关的名字，这样的可能性有多大呢？

[35]我之所以说“玛尔斯教场”，是因为百人团大会在这里召开。至于集会的其他两种形式，人民在广场上或在别的地方开会，而“按人头计数”的人就具有跟一流公民同样的影响和权威。

[36]被这样抽中的百人团享有“优先权”，因为要求它第一个投票；这就是我们所用的“特权”这个词的由来。

[37]这一任命在夜间秘密进行，好像他们为把一个人凌驾于法律之上而感到羞耻。

[38]如果他提出任命一名独裁者，他原本对此并无把握，因为他既不敢毛遂自荐，也无法确定他的同僚会提他的名。

[39]‘Nonne ea quae possidet Chamos deus tuus, tibi jure debentur?’，这句话是拉丁文圣经的原文。贾立蔼神父将它译为：“你们难道不认为有权拥有属于你们的神基抹的东西吗？”我不知道希伯来原文写的是什么；可我注意到：在拉丁文中耶弗肯定地承认神基抹的权力，但是法语译文却增加了拉丁文本中所没有的“依你的说法”，从而削弱了原意。

[40]那场号称圣战的福西人的战争并不是一场宗教战争。其目的是要惩罚渎神者，而不是要使不信教者屈从，这显然没有争论的余地。

[41]应当注意到，把教士集中在一个团体中，这并不是很正式的集会（像法国的那样），倒更像是教会的圣餐。圣餐与开除教籍是教士们的社会契约；通过这个公约，他们始终既是人民的主人，又是国王的主人。所有一起沟通的牧师都是同胞公民，纵然他们身处地球的两极。这种发明成为政治的一大杰作。在异教的牧师当中未曾有过像这样的事，所以他们也就从未组织过教士团体。

[42]此外，请看格老秀斯1643年4月11日给他兄弟的一封信，从中可以看出，在《公民论》一书中这位学者赞许什么，反对什么。诚然，他看在作者优点的份上很宽容地原谅了作者的缺点；可并非人人都如此宽宏大度。

[43]阿冉松侯爵说过：“在共和国，每个人都可以完全自由地不做伤害别人的事。”这是一条不可更改的做人底线；人们无法更确切地表达这句话。尽管他的手稿并不为人所知，可是我一直无法否认有时引用他的手稿中时的愉快心情，以对这位卓越可钦的人物表示敬意，甚至作为首相，他还始终保持着一颗真正的公民之心，并且对本国政府持有一种公正、坚定的观点。

[44]恺撒在为卡提里那辩护时，曾试图确立一种灵魂死亡的教条。卡图和西塞罗在反驳这一教条时，根本就不想费功夫用哲学去论证；他们满意地指出：恺撒像一个坏公民那样在发言，并提出一种有害于国家的学说。罗马元老院要判决的正是这一点，而不是什么神学问题。

[45]例如，婚姻是一项公民契约，具有政治影响，没有了这项契约，社会本身想要生存下去是不可能的。现在让我们设想一下，在一个特定的国家，牧师居然获得婚姻许可权，而这种权利也是任何不宽容的宗教必然要争取的；他们就此在提高教会权威中取消君主的权威，那么君主所剩的只有牧师允许他拥有的臣民了，这不是很明显的吗？牧师可以根据人们是否接受这样那样的教义，承认或拒绝这样那样的婚姻，或者根据人们的虔诚程度，如果牧师精明地行事并坚定地执行，难道这不是明显地说，只有它才能适时处理继承、职位、公民等事务，甚至治理国家吗？因为全靠私生子组成的国家是不会长久生存下去的。可你们也许会说，我们可以号召现有的力量，发布命令，授予权利并占领教会财产。多么可怜的见解！如果牧师有一点点的常识——我不是说有一点点的勇气，它会任凭一切顺其自然；它可以安然地让别人去宣告，授权和接管，最终他还是主人。我以为，当你有把握获得整体时，放弃局部并不算作出很大的牺牲。

Jean-Jacques Rousseau

The Social Contract

TRANSLATED BY MAURICE CRANSTON

PENGUIN BOOKS — GREAT IDEAS

Contents

Book Ⅰ

MY purpose is to consider if, in political society, there can be any legitimate and sure principle of government, taking men as they are and laws as they might be. In this inquiry I shall try always to bring together what right permits with what interest prescribes so that justice and utility are in no way divided.

I start without seeking to prove the importance of my subject. I may be asked whether I am a prince or a legislator that I should be writing about politics. I answer no: and indeed that that is my reason for doing so. If I were a prince or a legislator I should not waste my time saying what ought to be done; I should do it or keep silent.

Born as I was the citizen of a free state and a member of its sovereign body, the very right to vote imposes on me the duty to instruct myself in public affairs, however little influence my voice may have in them. And whenever I reflect upon governments, I am happy to find that my studies always give me fresh reasons for admiring that of my own country.

CHAPTER 1
The subject of Book Ⅰ

MAN was born free, and he is everywhere in chains. Those who think themselves the masters of others are indeed greater slaves than they. How did this transformation come about? I do not know. How can it be made legitimate? That question I believe I can answer.

If I were to consider only force and the effects of force, I should say: 'So long as a people is constrained to obey, and obeys, it does well; but as soon as it can shake off the yoke, and shakes it off, it does better; for since it regains its freedom by the same right as that which removed it, a people is either justified in taking back its freedom, or there is no justifying those who took it away.' But the social order is a sacred right which serves as a basis for all other rights. And as it is not a natural right, it must be one founded on covenants. The problem is to determine what those covenants are. But before we pass on to that question, I must substantiate what I have so far said.

CHAPTER 2
The First Societies

THE oldest of all societies, and the only natural one, is that of the family; yet children remain tied to their father by nature only so long as they need him for their preservation. As soon as this need ends, the natural bond is dissolved. Once the children are freed from the obedience they owe their father, and the father is freed from his responsibilities towards them, both parties equally regain their independence. If they continue to remain united, it is no longer nature, but their own choice, which unites them; and the family as such is kept in being only by agreement.

This common liberty is a consequence of man's nature. Man's first law is to watch over his own preservation; his first care he owes to himself; and as soon as he reaches the age of reason, he becomes the only judge of the best means to preserve himself; he becomes his own master.

The family may therefore perhaps be seen as the first model of political societies: the head of the state bears the image of the father, the people the image of his children, and all, being born free and equal, surrender their freedom only when they see advantage in doing so. The only difference is that in the family, a father's love for his children repays him for the care he bestows on them, while in the state, where the ruler can have no such feeling for his people, the pleasure of commanding must take the place of love.

Grotius denies that all human government is established for the benefit of the governed, and he cites the example of slavery. His characteristic method of reasoning is always to offer fact as a proof of right.[1] It is possible to imagine a more logical method, but not one more favourable to tyrants.

According to Grotius, therefore, it is doubtful whether humanity belongs to a hundred men, or whether these hundred men belong to humanity, though he seems throughout his book to lean to the first of these views, which is also that of Hobbes. These authors show us the human race divided into herds of cattle, each with a master who preserves it only in order to devour its members.

Just as a shepherd possesses a nature superior to that of his flock, so do those shepherds of men, their rulers, have a nature superior to that of their people. Or so, we are told by Philo, the Emperor Caligula argued, concluding, reasonably enough on this same analogy, that kings were gods or alternatively that the people were animals.

The reasoning of Caligula coincides with that of Hobbes and Grotius. Indeed Aristotle, before any of them, said that men were not at all equal by nature, since some were born for slavery and others born to be masters.

Aristotle was right; but he mistook the effect for the cause. Anyone born in slavery is born for slavery—nothing is more certain. Slaves, in their bondage, lose everything, even the desire to be free. They love their servitude even as the companions of Ulysses loved their life as brutes.[2] But if there are slaves by nature, it is only because there has been slavery against nature. Force made the first slaves; and their cowardice perpetuates their slavery.

I have said nothing of the King Adam or of the Emperor Noah, father of the three great monarchs who shared out the universe between them, like the children of Saturn, with whom some authors have identified them. I hope my readers will be grateful for this moderation, for since I am directly descended from one of those princes, and perhaps in the eldest line, how do I know that if the deeds were checked, I might not find myself the legitimate king of the human race? However that may be, there is no gainsaying that Adam was the king of the world, as was Robinson Crusoe of his island, precisely because he was the sole inhabitant; and the great advantage of such an empire was that the monarch, secure upon his throne, had no occasion to fear rebellions, wars or conspirators.

CHAPTER 3
The Right of the Strongest

THE strongest man is never strong enough to be master all the time, unless he transforms force into right and obedience into duty. Hence 'the right of the strongest'—a 'right' that sounds like something intended ironically, but is actually laid down as a principle. But shall we never have this phrase explained? Force is a physical power; I do not see how its effects could produce morality. To yield to force is an act of necessity, not of will; it is at best an act of prudence. In what sense can it be a moral duty?

Let us grant, for a moment, that this so-called right exists. I suggest it can only produce a tissue of bewildering nonsense; for once might is made to be right, cause and effect are reversed, and every force which overcomes another force inherits the right which belonged to the vanquished. As soon as man can disobey with impunity, his disobedience becomes legitimate; and as the strongest is always right, the only problem is how to become the strongest. But what can be the validity of a right which perishes with the force on which it rests? If force compels obedience, there is no need to invoke a duty to obey, and if force ceases to compel obedience, there is no longer any obligation. Thus the word 'right' adds nothing to what is said by 'force'; it is meaningless.

'Obey those in power.' If this means 'yield to force' the precept is sound, but superfluous; it will never, I suggest, be violated. All power comes from God, I agree; but so does every disease, and no one forbids us to summon a physician. If I am held up by a robber at the edge of a wood, force compels me to hand over my purse. But if I could somehow contrive to keep the purse from him, would I still be obliged in conscience to surrender it? After all, the pistol in the robber's hand is undoubtedly a power.

Surely it must be admitted, then, that might does not make right, and that the duty of obedience is owed only to legitimate powers. Thus we are constantly led back to my original question.

CHAPTER 4
Slavery

SINCE no man has any natural authority over his fellows, and since force alone bestows no right, all legitimate authority among men must be based on covenants.

Grotius says: 'If an individual can alienate his freedom and become the slave of a master, why may not a whole people alienate its freedom and become the subject of a king?' In this remark there are several ambiguous words which call for explanation; but let us confine ourselves to one — to 'alienate'. To alienate is to give or sell. A man who becomes the slave of another does not give himself, he sells himself in return for at least a subsistence. But in return for what could a whole people be said to sell itself? A king, far from nourishing his subjects, draws his nourishment from them; and kings, according to Rabelais, need more than a little nourishment. Do subjects, then, give their persons to the king on condition that he will accept their property as well? If so, I fail to see what they have left to preserve.

It will be said that a despot gives his subjects the assurance of civil tranquillity. Very well, but what does it profit them, if those wars against other powers which result from a despot's ambition, if his insatiable greed, and the oppressive demands of his administration, cause more desolation than civil strife would cause? What do the people gain if their very condition of civil tranquillity is one of their hardships? There is peace in dungeons, but is that enough to make dungeons desirable? The Greeks lived in peace in the cave of Cyclops awaiting their turn to be devoured.

To speak of a man giving himself in return for nothing is to speak of what is absurd, unthinkable; such an action would be illegitimate, void, if only because no one who did it could be in his right mind. To say the same of a whole people is to conjure up a nation of lunatics; and right cannot rest on madness.

Even if each individual could alienate himself, he cannot alienate his children. For they are born men; they are born free; their liberty belongs to them; no one but they themselves has the right to dispose of it. Before they reach the years of discretion, their father may, in their name, make certain rules for their protection and their welfare, but he cannot give away their liberty irrevocably and unconditionally, for such a gift would be contrary to the ends of nature and an abuse of paternal right. Hence, an arbitrary government would be legitimate only if every new generation were able to accept or reject it, and in that case the government would cease to be arbitrary.

To renounce freedom is to renounce one's humanity, one's rights as a man and equally one's duties. There is no possible quid pro quo for one who renounces everything; indeed such renunciation is contrary to man's very nature; for if you take away all freedom of the will, you strip a man's actions of all moral significance. Finally, any covenant which stipulated absolute dominion for one party and absolute obedience for the other would be illogical and nugatory. Is it not evident that he who is entitled to demand everything owes nothing? And does not the single fact of there being no reciprocity, no mutual obligation, nullify the act? For what right can my slave have against me? If everything he has belongs to me, his right is my right, and it would be nonsense to speak of my having a right against myself.

Grotius and the rest claim to find in war another justification for the so-called right of slavery. They argue that the victor's having the right to kill the vanquished implies that the vanquished has the right to purchase his life at the expense of his liberty — a bargain thought to be the more legitimate because it is advantageous to both parties.

But it is clear that this so-called right to kill the vanquished cannot be derived from the state of war. For this reason alone, that men living in their primitive condition of independence have no intercourse regular enough to constitute either a state of peace or a state of war; and men are not naturally enemies. It is conflicts over things, not quarrels between men which constitute war, and the state of war cannot arise from mere personal relations, but only from property relations. Private wars between one man and another can exist neither in a state of nature, where there is no fixed property, nor in society, where everything is under the authority of law.

Private fights, duels, skirmishes, do not constitute any kind of state; and as for the private wars that were permitted by the ordinances of Louis IX, King of France, and suspended by the Peace of God, these were no more than an abuse of feudal government, an irrational system if there ever was one, and contrary both to natural justice and to all sound polity.

War, then, is not a relation between men, but between states; in war individuals are enemies wholly by chance, not as men, not even as citizens,[3] but only as soldiers; not as members of their country, but only as its defenders. In a word, a state can have as an enemy only another state, not men, because there can be no real relation between things possessing different intrinsic natures.

This principle conforms to the established rules of all times and to the constant practice of every political society. Declarations of war are warnings not so much to governments as to their subjects. The foreigner —whether he is a king, a private person or a whole people — who robs, kills or detains the subjects of another prince without first declaring war against that prince, is not an enemy but a brigand. Even in the midst of war, a just prince, seizing what he can of public property in the enemy's territory, nevertheless respects the persons and possessions of private individuals; he respects the principles on which his own rights are based. Since the aim of war is to subdue a hostile state, a combatant has the right to kill the defenders of that state while they are armed; but as soon as they lay down their arms and surrender, they cease to be either enemies or instruments of the enemy; they become simply men once more, and no one has any longer the right to take their lives. It is sometimes possible to destroy a state without killing a single one of its members, and war gives no right to inflict any more destruction than is necessary for victory. These principles were not invented by Grotius, nor are they founded on the authority of the poets; they are derived from the nature of things; they are based on reason.

The right of conquest has no other foundation than the law of the strongest. And if war gives the conqueror no right to massacre a conquered people, no such right can be invoked to justify their enslavement. Men have the right to kill their enemies only when they cannot enslave them, so the right of enslaving cannot be derived from the right to kill. It would therefore be an iniquitous barter to make the vanquished purchase with their liberty the lives over which the victor has no legitimate claim. An argument basing the right over life and death on the right to enslave, and the right to enslave on the right over life and death, is an argument trapped in a vicious circle.

Even if we assumed that this terrible right of massacre did exist, then slaves of war, or a conquered people, would be under no obligation to obey their master any further than they were forced to do so. By taking an equivalent of his victim's life, the victor shows him no favour; instead of destroying him unprofitably, he destroys him by exploiting him. Hence, far from the victor having acquired some further authority besides that of force over the vanquished, the state of war between them continues; their mutual relation is the effect of war, and the continuation of the rights of war implies that there has been no treaty of peace. An agreement has assuredly been made, but that agreement, far from ending the state of war, presupposes its continuation.

Thus, however we look at the question, the 'right' of slavery is seen to be void; void, not only because it cannot be justified, but also because it is nonsensical, because it has no meaning. The words 'slavery' and 'right' are contradictory, they cancel each other out. Whether as between one man and another, or between one man and a whole people, it would always be absurd to say: 'I hereby make a covenant with you which is wholly at your expense and wholly to my advantage; I will respect it so long as I please and you shall respect it so long as I wish.'

CHAPTER 5
That We Must Always Go Back To an Original Covenant

EVEN if I were to concede all that I have so far refuted, the champions of despotism would be no better off. There will always be a great differece between subduing a multitude and ruling a society. If one man successively enslaved many separate individuals, no matter how numerous, he and they would never bear the aspect of anything but a master and his slaves, not at all that of a people and their ruler; an aggregation, perhaps, but certainly not an association, for they would neither have a common good nor be a body politic. Even if such a man were to enslave half the world, he would remain a private individual, and his interest, always distinct from that of the others, would never be more than a personal interest. When he died, the empire he left would be scattered for lack of any bond of union, even as an oak crumbles and falls into a heap of ashes when fire has consumed it.

'A people,' says Grotius, 'may give itself to a king.' Therefore, according to Grotius a people is a people even before the gift to the king is made. The gift itself is a civil act; it presupposes public deliberation. Hence, before considering the act by which a people submits to a king, we ought to scrutinize the act by which people become a people, for that act, being necessarily antecedent to the other, is the real foundation of society.

In fact, if there were no earlier agreement, how, unless the election were unanimous, could there be any obligation on the minority to accept the decision of the majority? What right have the hundred who want to have a master to vote on behalf of the ten who do not? The law of majority-voting itself rests on an agreement, and implies that there has been on at least one occasion unanimity.

CHAPTER 6
The Social Pact

I ASSUME that men reach a point where the obstacles to their preservation in a state of nature prove greater than the strength that each man has to preserve himself in that state. Beyond this point, the primitive condition cannot endure, for then the human race will perish if it does not change its mode of existence.

Since men cannot create new forces, but merely combine and control those which already exist, the only way in which they can preserve themselves is by uniting their separate powers in a combination strong enough to overcome any resistance, uniting them so that their powers are directed by a single motive and act in concert.

Such a sum of forces can be produced only by the union of separate men, but as each man's own strength and liberty are the chief instruments of his preservation, how can he merge his with others' without putting himself in peril and neglecting the care he owes to himself? This difficulty, in terms of my present subject, may be expressed in these words:

'How to find a form of association which will defend the person and goods of each member with the collective force of all, and under which each individual, while uniting himself with the others, obeys no one but himself, and remains as free as before.' This is the fundamental problem to which the social contract holds the solution.

The articles of this contract are so precisely determined by the nature of the act, that the slightest modification must render them null and void; they are such that, though perhaps never formally stated, they are everywhere the same, everywhere tacitly admitted and recognized; and if ever the social pact is violated, every man regains his original rights and, recovering his natural freedom, loses that civil freedom for which he exchanged it.

These articles of association, rightly understood, are reducible to a single one, namely the total alienation by each associate of himself and all his rights to the whole community. Thus, in the first place, as every individual gives himself absolutely, the conditions are the same for all, and precisely because they are the same for all, it is in no one's interest to make the conditions onerous for others.

Secondly, since the alienation is unconditional, the union is as perfect as it can be, and no individual associate has any longer any rights to claim; for if rights were left to individuals, in the absence of any higher authority to judge between them and the public, each individual, being his own judge in some causes, would soon demand to be his own judge in all; and in this way the state of nature would be kept in being, and the association inevitably become either tyrannical or void.

Finally, since each man gives himself to all, he gives himself to no one; and since there is no associate over whom he does not gain the same rights as others gain over him, each man recovers the equivalent of everything he loses, and in the bargain he acquires more power to preserve what he has.

If, then, we eliminate from the social pact everything that is not essential to it, we find it comes down to this: 'Each one of us puts into the community his person and all his powers under the supreme direction of the general will; and as a body, we incorporate every member as an indivisible part of the whole.'

Immediately, in place of the individual person of each contracting party, this act of association creates an artificial and corporate body composed of as many members as there are voters in the assembly, and by this same act that body acquires its unity, its common ego, its life and its will. The public person thus formed by the union of all other persons was once called the city, [4] and is now known as the republic or the body politic. In its passive role it is called the state, when it plays an active role it is the sovereign; and when it is compared to others of its own kind, it is a power. Those who are associated in it take collectively the name of a people, and call themselves individually citizens, in that they share in the sovereign power, and subjects, in that they put themselves under the laws of the state. However, these words are often confused, each being mistaken for another; but the essential thing is to know how to recognize them when they are used in their precise sense.

CHAPTER 7
The Sovereign

THIS formula shows that the act of association consists of a reciprocal commitment between society and the individual, so that each person, in making a contract, as it were, with himself, finds himself doubly committed, first, as a member of the sovereign body in relation to individuals, and secondly as a member of the state in relation to the sovereign. Here there can be no invoking the principle of civil law which says that no man is bound by a contract with himself, for there is a great difference between having an obligation to oneself and having an obligation to something of which one is a member.

We must add that a public decision can impose an obligation on all the subjects towards the sovereign, by reason of the two aspects under which each can be seen, while, contrariwise, such decisions cannot impose an obligation on the sovereign towards itself; and hence it would be against the very nature of a political body for the sovereign to set over itself a law which it could not infringe. The sovereign, bearing only one single and identical aspect, is in the position of a private person making a contract with himself, which shows that there neither is, nor can be, any kind of fundamental law binding on the people as a body, not even the social contract itself. This does not mean that the whole body cannot incur obligations to other nations, so long as those obligations do not infringe the contract; for in relation to foreign powers, the body politic is a simple entity, an individual.

However, since the body politic, or sovereign, owes its being to the sanctity of the contract alone, it cannot commit itself, even in treaties with foreign powers, to anything that would derogate from the original act of association; it could not, for example, alienate a part of itself or submit to another sovereign. To violate the act which has given it existence would be to annihilate itself; and what is nothing can produce nothing.

As soon as the multitude is united thus in a single body, no one can injure any one of the members without attacking the whole, still less injure the whole without each member feeling it. Duty and self-interest thus equally oblige the two contracting parties to give each other mutual aid; and the same men should seek to bring together in this dual relationship, all the advantages that flow from it.

Now, as the sovereign is formed entirely of the individuals who compose it, it has not, nor could it have, any interest contrary to theirs; and so the sovereign has no need to give guarantees to the subjects, because it is impossible for a body to wish to hurt all of its members, and, as we shall see, it cannot hurt any particular member. The sovereign by the mere fact that it is, is always all that it ought to be.

But this is not true of the relation of subject to sovereign. Despite their common interest, subjects will not be bound by their commitment unless means are found to guarantee their fidelity.

For every individual as a man may have a private will contrary to, or different from, the general will that he has as a citizen. His private interest may speak with a very different voice from that of the public interest; his absolute and naturally independent existence may make him regard what he owes to the common cause as a gratuitous contribution, the loss of which would be less painful for others than the payment is onerous for him; and fancying that the artificial person which constitutes the state is a mere fictitious entity (since it is not a man), he might seek to enjoy the rights of a citizen without doing the duties of a subject. The growth of this kind of injustice would bring about the ruin of the body politic.

Hence, in order that the social pact shall not be an empty formula, it is tacitly implied in that commitment — which alone can give force to all others — that whoever refuses to obey the general will shall be constrained to do so by the whole body, which means nothing other than that he shall be forced to be free; for this is the necessary condition which, by giving each citizen to the nation, secures him against all personal dependence, it is the condition which shapes both the design and the working of the political machine, and which alone bestows justice on civil contracts — without it, such contracts would be absurd, tyrannical and liable to the grossest abuse.

CHAPTER 8
Civil Society

THE passing from the state of nature to the civil society produces a remarkable change in man; it puts justice as a rule of conduct in the place of instinct, and gives his actions the moral quality they previously lacked. It is only then, when the voice of duty has taken the place of physical impulse, and right that of desire, that man, who has hitherto thought only of himself, finds himself compelled to act on other principles, and to consult his reason rather than study his inclinations. And although in civil society man surrenders some of the advantages that belong to the state of nature, he gains in return far greater ones; his faculties are so exercised and developed, his mind is so enlarged, his sentiments so ennobled, and his whole spirit so elevated that, if the abuse of his new condition did not in many cases lower him to something worse than what he had left, he should constantly bless the happy hour that lifted him for ever from the state of nature and from a stupid, limited animal made a creature of intelligence and a man.

Suppose we draw up a balance sheet, so that the losses and gains may be readily compared. What man loses by the social contract is his natural liberty and the absolute right to anything that tempts him and that he can take; what he gains by the social contract is civil liberty and the legal right of property in what he possesses. If we are to avoid mistakes in weighing the one side against the other, we must clearly distinguish between natural liberty, which has no limit but the physical power of the individual concerned, and civil liberty, which is limited by the general will; and we must distinguish also between possession, which is based only on force or 'the right of the first occupant', and property, which must rest on a legal title.

We might also add that man acquires with civil society, moral freedom, which alone makes man the master of himself; for to be governed by appetite alone is slavery, while obedience to a law one prescribes to oneself is freedom. However, I have already said more than enough on this subject, and the philosophical meaning of the word 'freedom' is no part of my subject here.

CHAPTER 9
Of Property

EVERY member of the community gives himself to it at the moment it is brought into being just as he is — he himself, with all his resources, including all his goods. This is not to say that possession by this act changes its nature in changing hands and becomes property in the grasp of the sovereign; but rather, that as the resources of the nation are incomparably greater than those of an individual, public possession is in simple fact more secure and more irrevocable than private possession, without being any more legitimate — at any rate, in the eyes of foreigners; for the state, vis-à-vis its own members, becomes master of all their goods by virtue of the social contract, which serves, within the state, as the basis of all other rights; while vis-à-vis other nations, the state has only the 'right of the first occupant', which it derives from individuals.

The 'right of the first occupant', although more real than the 'right of the strongest', does not become a true right until the institution of property. Every man has a natural right to what he needs; but the positive act which makes a man the proprietor of any estate excludes him from everything else. His share having once been settled, he must confine himself to it, and he has no further right against the community. Thus we see how 'the right of the first occupant', weak as it is in the state of nature, compels in political society the respect of all men. What this right makes one aware of is less what belongs to others than what does not belong to oneself.

As a general rule, to justify the right of the first occupant to any piece of land whatever, the following conditions must obtain: first, that the land shall not already be inhabited by anyone else; secondly, that the claimant occupies no more than he needs for subsistence; thirdly, that he takes possession, not by an idle ceremony, but by actually working and cultivating the soil — the only sign of ownership which need be respected by other people in the absence of a legal title.

It can, indeed, be said that tying 'the right of the first occupant' to need and work is stretching it as far as it will go. Can one really avoid setting limits on the right? Is it enough to put one's feet on a piece of common land in order to claim it at once as one's own? Is it enough to have the power to keep other men off for one moment in order to deprive them of the right ever to return? How could a man or a people seize a vast territory and keep out the rest of the human race except by a criminal usurpation — since the action would rob the rest of mankind of the shelter and the food that nature has given them all in common? When Nunez Balbao stood on the shore and took possession of the southern seas and of South America in the name of the crown of Castille, was that enough to dispossess all the inhabitants and to exclude all the other princes of the world? If so, such idle ceremonies would have had no end; and the Catholic King might without leaving his royal chamber have taken possession of the whole universe, only excepting afterwards those parts of his empire already belonging to other princes.

We can see how the lands of private persons, when they are united and contiguous, become public territory; and how the right of sovereignty, extending from the subjects to the soil they occupy, covers both property and persons; it makes the owners all the more dependent, and turns their own strength into the guarantee of their fidelity. This advantage seems to have eluded the ancient monarchs, who, in calling themselves simply the King of the Persians or the Scythians or the Macedonians, appear to have regarded themselves rather as rulers of men than as masters of their countries. Monarchs of the present day call themselves more shrewdly the King of France, or of Spain, or of England and so on; in holding thus the land, they are very sure of holding the inhabitants.

What is unique about the alienation entailed by the social contract is that the community in accepting the goods of an individual is far from depriving him of them; on the contrary it simply assures him of their lawful possession; it changes usurpation into valid right and mere enjoyment into legal ownership. Since every owner is regarded as a trustee of the public property, his rights are respected by every other member of the state, and protected with its collective force against foreigners; men have, by a surrender which is advantageous to the public and still more to themselves, acquired, so to speak, all that they have given up — a paradox which is easily explained by the distinction between the rights which the soverign has and which the owner has over the same property, as will be seen later.

It may also happen that men begin to unite before they possess anything, and spreading over a territory large enough for them all, proceed to enjoy it in common, or, alternatively, divide it among themselves either equally or in shares determined by the sovereign. In whatever manner this acquisition is made, the right of any individual over his own estate is always subordinate to the right of the community over everything; for without this there would be neither strength in the social bond nor effective force in the exercise of sovereignty.

I shall end this chapter — and Book I — with an observation which might serve as a basis for the whole social system: namely, that the social pact, far from destroying natural equality, substitutes, on the contrary, a moral and lawful equality for whatever physical inequality that nature may have imposed on mankind; so that however unequal in strength and intelligence, men become equal by covenant and by right.[5]

Note

【1】 'Learned researches on public law are often only the history of ancient abuses, and one is misled when one gives oneself the trouble of studying them too closely.' Traité manuscrit des intérêts de la France avec ses voisins by the Marquis d'Argenson.

【2】 See a short treatise of Plutarch entitled: That Animals use Reason.

【3】 The Romans, who understood and respected the rights of war better than any other nation, carried their scruples on this subject so far that a citizen was forbidden to volunteer without engaging himself expressly against the enemy and against an enemy specifically named. When the legion in which the younger Cato fought his first campaign under Popilius was re-formed, the elder Cato wrote to Popilius saying that if he wished his son to continue to serve under him, he should administer a fresh military oath, on the grounds that his son's first oath was annulled, and that he could no longer bear arms against the enemy. Cato also wrote to his son warning him not to go into battle without first taking the oath.

I realize that the siege of Clusium and other incidents from Roman history may be quoted against me, but I am citing laws and customs. No nation has broken its own laws less frequently than the Romans, and no nation has ever had such excellent laws.

【4】 The real meaning of this word has been almost entirely lost in the modern world, when a town and a city are thought to be identical, and a citizen the same as a burgess. People forget that houses may make a town, while only citizens can make a city. The Carthaginians once paid dearly for this mistake. I have never read of the title cives being given to the subject of any prince, not even to the Macedonians in ancient times or the English today, in spite of their being closer to liberty than any other people. The French alone treat the same 'Citizen' with familiarity, and that is because they do not know what it means, as their Dictionaries prove; if they did know, they would be guilty, in usurping it, of lèse-majesté; as it is, they use the word to designate social status and not legal right. When Bodin wanted to speak of citizens and burgesses, he made the gross error of mistaking the one for the other. Monsieur d'Alembert avoids this mistake; and in his article on 'Geneva' he correctly distinguishes between the four orders of men (five, if aliens are included) which are found in our town, and of which only two compose the republic. No other French author to my knowledge has understood the real meaning of the word 'citizen'.

【5】 Under a bad government, this equality is only an appearance and an illusion; it serves only to keep the poor in their wretchedness and sustain the rich in their usurpation. In truth, laws are always useful to those with possessions and harmful to those who have nothing; from which it follows that the social state is advantageous to men only when all possess something and none has too much.

Book II

CHAPTER 1
That Sovereignty is Inalienable

THE first and most important consequence of the principles so far established is that the general will alone can direct the forces of the state in accordance with that end which the state has been established to achieve — the common good; for if conflict between private interests has made the setting up of civil societies necessary, harmony between those same interests has made it possible. It is what is common to those different interests which yields the social bond; if there were no point on which separate interests coincided, then society could not conceivably exist. And it is precisely on the basis of this common interest that society must be governed.

My argument, then, is that sovereignty, being nothing other than the exercise of the general will, can never be alienated; and that the sovereign, which is simply a collective being, cannot be represented by anyone but itself — power may be delegated, but the will cannot be.

For indeed while it is not impossible for a private will to coincide with the general will on some point or other, it is impossible for such a coincidence to be regular and enduring; for the private will inclines by its very nature towards partiality, and the general will towards equality. It is even more inconceivable that there could be a guarantee of harmony between the private and the general will, even if it were to continue always, for such lasting harmony would be the result of chance and not of design. The sovereign might say: 'What I want at present is precisely what this man wants, or at least what he says he wants'; but no sovereign could say: 'What this man is going to want tomorrow I too shall want', for it is absurd that anyone should wish to bind himself for the future, and it is a contradiction in terms to say that any human being should wish to consent to something that is the reverse of his own good. If a people promises simply and solely to obey, it dissolves itself by that very pledge; it ceases to be a people; for once there is a master, there is no longer a sovereign, and the body politic is therefore annihilated.

This is not to say that the commands of leaders may not pass for the general will if the sovereign, while free to oppose them, does not do so. In such a case the silence of the people permits the assumption that the people consents. This will be explained more fully in a later chapter.

CHAPTER 2
That Sovereignty is Indivisible

JUST as sovereignty is inalienable, it is for the same reason indivisible; for either the will is general[1] or it is not; either it is the will of the body of the people, or merely that of a part. In the first case, a declaration of will is an act of sovereignty and constitutes law; in the second case, it is only a declaration of a particular will or an act of administration, it is at best a mere decree.

Nevertheless, our political theorists, unable to divide the principle of sovereignty, divide it in its purpose; they divide it into power and will, divide it, that is, into executive and legislative, into the rights of levying taxation, administering justice and making war, into domestic jurisdiction and the power to deal with foreign governments. Sometimes our theorists confuse all the parts and sometimes they separate them. They make the sovereign a creature of fantasy, a patchwork of separate pieces, rather as if they were to construct a man of several bodies — one with eyes, one with legs, the other with feet and nothing else. It is said that Japanese mountebanks can cut up a child under the eyes of spectators, throw the different parts into the air, and then make the child come down, alive and all of a piece. This is more or less the trick that our political theorists perform —after dismembering the social body with a sleight of hand worthy of the fairground, they put the pieces together again anyhow.

The mistake comes from having no precise notion of what sovereign authority is, and from taking mere manifestations of authority for parts of the authority itself. For instance, the acts of declaring war and making peace have been regarded as acts of sovereignty, which they are not; for neither of these acts constitutes a law, but only an application of law, a particular act which determines how the law shall be interpreted — and all this will be obvious as soon as I have defined the idea which attaches to the word 'law'.

If we were to scrutinize in the same way the other supposed divisions of sovereignty, we should find that whenever we thought that sovereignty was divided, we had been mistaken, for the rights which are taken to be part of that sovereignty prove in fact to be subordinate to it, and presuppose the existence of a supreme will which they merely serve to put into effect.

This want of precision has obfuscated immeasurably the conclusions of our legal theorists when they have come to apply their own principles to determine the respective rights of kings and of peoples. Every reader of the third and fourth chapters of the first book of Grotius can see how that learned man and his translator, Barbeyrac, are trapped in their own sophisms, frightened of saying either too much or alternatively too little (according to their prejudices) and so offending the interests they wish to flatter. Grotius, a refugee in France, discontented with his own country and out to pay court to Louis XIII, to whom his book is dedicated, spares no pains to rob peoples of all their rights and to invest those rights, by every conceivable artifice, in kings. This would have been very much to the taste of Barbeyrac, who dedicated his translation of Grotius to the King of England, George Ⅰ. But unfortunately the expulsion of James Ⅱ — which Barbeyrac calls an 'abdication' — obliged him to speak with a marked reserve, to hesitate and equivocate, so as not to suggest that William Ⅲ was a usurper. If these two writers had adopted sound principles, all their difficulties would have vanished, and their arguments would have been logical; but then they would, alas for them, have told the truth and paid court only to the people. The truth brings no man a fortune; and it is not the people who hand out embassies, professorships and pensions.

CHAPTER 3
Whether the General Will Can Err

IT follows from what I have argued that the general will is always rightful and always tends to the public good; but it does not follows that the deliberations of the people are always equally right. We always want what is advantageous to us but we do not always discern it. The people is never corrupted, but it is often misled; and only then does it seem to will what is bad.

There is often a great difference between the will of all [what all individuals want] and the general will; the general will studies only the common interest while the will of all studies private interest, and is indeed no more than the sum of individual desires. But if we take away from these same wills, the pluses and minuses which cancel each other out, the balance which remains is the general will.[2]

From the deliberations of a people properly informed, and provided its members do not have any communication among themselves, the great number of small differences will always produce a general will and the decision will always be good. But if groups, sectional associations are formed at the expense of the larger association, the will of each of these groups will become general in relation to its own members and private in relation to the state; we might then say that there are no longer as many votes as there are men but only as many votes as there are groups. The differences become less numerous and yield a result less general. Finally, when one of these groups becomes so large that it can outweigh the rest, the result is no longer the sum of many small differences, but one great divisive difference; then there ceases to be a general will, and the opinion which prevails is no more than a private opinion.

Thus if the general will is to be clearly expressed, it is imperative that there should be no sectional associations in the state, and that every citizen should make up his own mind for himself[3] — such was the unique and sublime invention of the great Lycurgus. But if there are sectional associations, it is wise to multiply their number and to prevent inequality among them, as Solon, Numa and Servius did. These are the only precautions which can ensure that the general will is always enlightened and the people protected from error.

CHAPTER 4
The Limits of Sovereign Power

IF the state, or the nation, is nothing other than an artificial person the life of which consists in the union of its members and if the most important of its cares is its preservation, it needs to have a universal and compelling power to move and dispose of each part in whatever manner is beneficial to the whole. Just as nature gives each man an absolute power over all his own limbs, the social pact gives the body politic an absolute power over all its members; and it is this same power which, directed by the general will, bears, as I have said, the name of sovereignty.

However, we have to consider beside the public person those private persons who compose it, and whose life and liberty are naturally independent of it. Hence we have to distinguish clearly the respective rights of the citizen and of the sovereign,[4] and distinguish those duties which the citizens owe as subjects from the natural rights which they ought to enjoy as men.

We have agreed that each man alienates by the social pact only that part of his power, his goods and his liberty which is the concern of the community; but it must also be admitted that the sovereign alone is judge of what is of such concern.

Whatever services the citizen can render the state, he owes whenever the sovereign demands them; but the sovereign, on its side, may not impose on the subjects any burden which is not necessary to the community; the sovereign cannot, indeed, even will such a thing, since according to the law of reason no less than to the law of nature nothing is without a cause.

The commitments which bind us to the social body are obligatory only because they are mutual; and their nature is such that in fulfilling them a man cannot work for others without at the same time working for himself. How should it be that the general will is always rightful and that all men constantly wish the happiness of each but for the fact that there is no one who does not take that word 'each' to pertain to himself and in voting for all think of himself? This proves that the equality of rights and the notion of justice which it produces derive from the predilection which each man has for himself and hence from human nature as such. It also proves that the general will, to be truly what it is, must be general in its purpose as well as in its nature; that it should spring from all for it to apply to all; and that it loses its natural rectitude when it is directed towards any particular and circumscribed object — for in judging what is foreign to us, we have no sound principle of equity to guide us.

For, indeed, whenever we are dealing with a particular fact or right, on a matter which has not been settled by an earlier and general agreement, that question becomes contentious. It is a conflict in which private interests are ranged on one side and the public interest on the other; and I can see neither the law which is to be followed nor the judge who is to arbitrate. It would be absurd in such a dispute to rely on an express decision of the general will; for a decision could only be a conclusion in favour of one of the contending parties, and it would be regarded by the other party as an alien, partial will, a will liable in such circumstances to be unjust and so to fall into error. So we see that even as a private will cannot represent the general will, so too the general will changes its nature if it seeks to deal with an individual case; it cannot as a general will give a ruling concerning any one man or any one fact. When the people of Athens, for example, appointed or dismissed its leaders, awarding honours to one, inflicting penalties on another, and by a multitude of particular decrees indiscriminately exercised all the functions of an administration, then the people of Athens no longer had what is correctly understood as a general will and ceased to act as sovereign and acted instead as magistrate. All this may seem at variance with commonly accepted notions; but I must be given time to expound my own.

It should nevertheless be clear from what I have so far said that the general will derives its generality less from the number of voices than from the common interest which unites them — for the general will is an institution in which each necessarily submits himself to the same conditions which he imposes on others; this admirable harmony of interest and justice gives to social deliberations a quality of equity which disappears at once from the discussion of any individual dispute precisely because in these latter cases there is no common interest to unite and identify the decision of the judge with that of the contending parties.

Whichever way we look at it, we always return to the same conclusion: namely that the social pact establishes equality among the citizens in that they all pledge themselves under the same conditions and must all enjoy the same rights. Hence by the nature of the compact, every act of sovereignty, that is, every authentic act of the general will, binds or favours all the citizens equally, so that the sovereign recognizes only the whole body of the nation and makes no distinction between any of the members who compose it. What then is correctly to be called an act of sovereignty? It is not a covenant between a superior and an inferior, but a covenant of the body with each of its members. It is a legitimate covenant, because its basis is the social contract; an equitable one, because it is common to all; a useful one, because it can have no end but the common good; and it is a durable covenant because it is guaranteed by the armed forces and the supreme power. So long as the subjects submit to such covenants alone, they obey nobody but their own will; and to ask how far the respective rights of the sovereign and the citizen extend is to ask how far these two can pledge themselves together, each to all and all to each.

From this it is clear that the sovereign power, wholly absolute, wholly sacred, wholly inviolable as it is, does not go beyond and cannot go beyond the limits of the general covenants; and thus that every man can do what he pleases with such goods and such freedom as is left to him by these covenants; and from this it follows that the sovereign has never any right to impose greater burdens on one subject than on another, for whenever that happens the matter becomes private and is outside the sovereign's competence.

Granted these distinctions, it becomes manifestly false to assert that individuals make any real renunciation by the social contract; indeed, as a result of the contract they find themselves in a situation preferable in real terms to that which prevailed before; instead of an alienation, they have profitably exchanged an uncertain and precarious life for a better and more secure one; they have exchanged natural independence for freedom, the power to injure others for the enjoyment of their own security; they have exchanged their own strength which others might overcome for a right which the social union makes invincible. Their very lives, which they have pledged to the state, are always protected by it; and even when they risk their lives to defend the state, what more are they doing but giving back what they have received from the state? What are they doing that they would not do more often, and at greater peril, in the state of nature, where every man is inevitably at war and at the risk of his life, defends whatever serves him to maintain life? Assuredly, all must now fight in case of need for their country, but at least no one has any longer to fight for himself. And is there not something to be gained by running, for the sake of the guarantee of safety, a few of those risks we should each have to face alone if we were deprived of that assurance?

CHAPTER 5
The Right of Life and Death

IT will be asked how individuals, who have no right whatever to take their own lives, can transfer to the sovereign a right they do not possess. This question looks difficult to answer only because it is badly formulated. Every man has the right to risk his own life in order to preserve it. Has it ever been said that a man who leaps out of a window to escape from a fire is guilty of suicide? Would the same crime be imputed to a man who perishes in a storm on the grounds that he knew of the danger when he embarked?

The purpose of the social treaty is the preservation of the contracting parties. Whoever wills the end wills also the means, and certain risks, even certain casualties are inseparable from these means. Whoever wishes to preserve his own life at the expense of others must give his life for them when it is necessary. Now, as citizen, no man is judge any longer of the danger to which the law requires him to expose himself, and when the prince says to him: 'It is expedient for the state that you should die', then he should die, because it is only on such terms that he has lived in security as long as he has and also because his life is no longer the bounty of nature but a gift he has received conditionally from the state.

The death-penalty inflicted on criminals may be seen in much the same way: it is in order to avoid becoming the victim of a murderer that one consents to die if one becomes a murderer oneself. Far from taking one's life under the social treaty, one thinks only of assuring it, and we shall hardly suppose that any of the contracting parties contemplates being hanged.

Moreover, since every wrongdoer attacks the society's law, he becomes by his deed a rebel and a traitor to the nation; by violating its law, he ceases to be a member of it; indeed, he makes war against it. And in this case, the preservation of the state is incompatible with his preservation; one or the other must perish; and when the guilty man is put to death, it is less as a citizen than as an enemy. Trial and judgement are the proof and declaration that he has broken the social treaty, and is in consequence no longer a member of the state. And since he has accepted such membership, if only by his residence, he must either be banished into exile as a violator of the social pact or be put to death as a public enemy: such an enemy is not a fictitious person, but a man, and therefore the right of war makes it legitimate to kill him.

But, it will be said, the condemnation of a criminal is an individual act. Agreed; and it follows that such duties do not pertain to the sovereign; condemnation of criminals is a right the sovereign can confer but not exercise himself. All my ideas hold together, but I cannot elaborate them all at once.

In any case, frequent punishments are a sign of weakness or slackness in the government. There is no man so bad that he cannot be made good for something. No man should be put to death, even as an example, if he can be left to live without danger to society.

As for the right of pardon, or of exempting a guilty man from the penalty prescribed by law and imposed by a judge, this belongs only to that entity which is superior to both the judge and the law, namely the sovereign; but even this right is not entirely clear and it will be exercised very seldom. In a well-governed state few are punished, not because there are many pardons but because there are few criminals. In a decaying state the very multiplicity of crimes assures impunity. Under the Roman Republic neither the Senate nor the consuls ever attempted to pardon criminals; nor did the people do so, though they sometimes revoked their own sentences. Frequent pardons signalize that crimes will soon need no pardon; and anyone can see what that must lead to. However, I can feel my heart whispering and restraining my pen; let us leave the discussion of these questions to the just man who has never erred and has therefore had no need of pardons.

CHAPTER 6
On Law

WE have given life and existence to the body politic by the social pact; now it is a matter of giving it movement and will by legislation. For the original act by which the body politic is formed and united does not determine what it shall do to preserve itself.

What is good and in conformity with order is such by the very nature of things and independently of human agreements. All justice comes from God, who alone is its source; and if only we knew how to receive it from that exalted fountain, we should need neither governments nor laws. There is undoubtedly a universal justice which springs from reason alone, but if that justice is to be acknowledged as such it must be reciprocal. Humanly speaking, the laws of natural justice, lacking any natural sanction, are unavailing among men. In fact, such laws merely benefit the wicked and injure the just, since the just respect them while others do not do so in return. So there must be covenants and positive laws to unite rights with duties and to direct justice to its object. In the state of nature, where everything is common, I owe nothing to those to whom I have promised nothing, and I recognize as belonging to others only those things that are of no use to me. But this is no longer the case in civil society, where all rights are determined by law.

Yet what, in the last analysis, is law? If we simply try to define it in terms of metaphysical ideas, we shall go on talking without reaching any understanding; and when we have said what natural law is, we shall still not know what the law of the state is.

I have already said that the general will cannot relate to any particular object. For such a particular object is either within the state or outside the state. If it is outside, then a will which is alien to it is not general with regard to it: if the object is within the state, it forms a part of the state. Thus there comes into being a relationship between the whole and the part which involves two separate entities, the part being one, and the whole, less that particular part, being the other. But a whole less a particular part is no longer a whole; and so as long as this relationship exists there is no whole but only two unequal parts, from which it follows that the will of the one is no longer general with respect to the other.

But when the people as a whole makes rules for the people as a whole, it is dealing only with itself; and if any relationship emerges, it is between the entire body seen from one perspective and the same entire body seen from another, without any division whatever. Here the matter concerning which a rule is made is as general as the will which makes it. And this is the kind of act which I call a law.

When I say that the province of the law is always general, I mean that the law considers all subjects collectively and all actions in the abstract; it does not consider any individual man or any specific action. Thus the law may well lay down that there shall be privileges, but it may not nominate the persons who shall have those privileges; the law may establish several classes of citizen, and even specify the qualifications which shall give access to those several classes, but it may not say that this man or that shall be admitted; the law may set up a royal government and an hereditary succession, but it may not elect a king or choose a royal family — in a word, no function which deals with the individual falls within the province of the legislative power.

On this analysis, it is immediately clear that we can no longer ask who is to make laws, because laws are acts of the general will; no longer ask if the prince is above the law, because he is a part of the state; no longer ask if the law can be unjust, because no one is unjust to himself; and no longer ask how we can be both free and subject to laws, for the laws are but registers of what we ourselves desire.

It is also clear that since the law unites universality of will with universality of the field of legislation, anything that any man, no matter who, commands on his own authority is not a law; even what the sovereign itself commands with respect to a particular object is not a law but a decree, not an act of sovereignty but an act of government.

Any state which is ruled by law I call a 'republic', whatever the form of its constitution; for then, and then alone, does the public interest govern and then alone is the 'public thing' — the res publica — a reality. All legitimate government is 'republican'.[5] I shall explain later what government is.

Laws are really nothing other than the conditions on which civil society exists. A people, since it is subject to laws, ought to be the author of them. The right of laying down the rules of society belongs only to those who form the society; but how can they exercise it? Is it to be by common agreement, by a sudden inspiration? Has the body politic an organ to declare its will? Who is to give it the foresight necessary to formulate enactments and proclaim them in advance, and how is it to announce them in the hour of need? How can a blind multitude, which often does not know what it wants, because it seldom knows what is good for it, undertake by itself an enterprise as vast and difficult as a system of legislation? By themselves the people always will what is good, but by themselves they do not always discern it. The general will is always rightful, but the judgement which guides it is not always enlightened. It must be brought to see things as they are, and sometimes as they should be seen; it must be shown the good path which it is seeking, and secured against seduction by the desires of individuals; it must be given a sense of situation and season, so as to weigh immediate and tangible advantages against distant and hidden evils. Individuals see the good and reject it; the public desires the good but does not see it. Both equally need guidance. Individuals must be obliged to subordinate their will to their reason; the public must be taught to recognize what it desires. Such public enlightenment would produce a union of understanding and will in the social body, bring the parts into perfect harmony and lift the whole to its fullest strength. Hence the necessity of a lawgiver.

CHAPTER 7
The Lawgiver

To discover the rules of society that are best suited to nations, there would need to exist a superior intelligence, who could understand the passions of men without feeling any of them, who had no affinity with our nature but knew it to the full, whose happiness was independent of ours, but who would nevertheless make our happiness his concern, who would be content to wait in the fullness of time for a distant glory, and to labour in one age to enjoy the fruits in another.[6] Gods would be needed to give men laws.

The same reasoning which Caligula used empirically, Plato used philosophically in his dialogue The Statesman to reach a definition of civil or kingly man. But if it is true that great princes seldom appear, how much more rare must a great lawgiver be? A prince has only to follow a model which the lawgiver provides. The lawgiver is the engineer who invents the machine; the prince is merely the mechanic who sets it up and operates it. Montesquieu says that at the birth of political societies, it is the leaders of the republic who shape the institutions but that afterwards it is the institutions which shape the leaders of the republic.

Whoever ventures on the enterprise of setting up a people must be ready, shall we say, to change human nature, to transform each individual, who by himself is entirely complete and solitary, into a part of a much greater whole, from which that same individual will then receive, in a sense, his life and his being. The founder of nations must weaken the structure of man in order to fortify it, to replace the physical and independent existence we have all received from nature with a moral and communal existence. In a word each man must be stripped of his own powers, and given powers which are external to him, and which he cannot use without the help of others. The nearer men's natural powers are to extinction or annihilation, and the stronger and more lasting their acquired powers, the stronger and more perfect is the social institution. So much so, that if each citizen can do nothing whatever except through cooperation with others, and if the acquired power of the whole is equal to, or greater than, the sum of the natural powers of each of the individuals, then we can say that law-making has reached the highest point of perfection.

The lawgiver is, in every respect, an extraordinary man in the state. Extraordinary not only because of his genius, but equally because of his office, which is neither that of the government nor that of the sovereign. This office which gives the republic its constitution has no place in that constitution. It is a special and superior function which has nothing to do with empire over men; for just as he who has command over men must not have command over laws, neither must he who has command over laws have command over men; otherwise, the laws, being offspring of the legislator's passions, would often merely perpetuate his injustices, and partial judgements would inevitably vitiate the sanctity of his works.

When Lycurgus gave laws to his country, he began by abdicating his monarchical functions. It was the habit of most Greek cities to confer on foreigners the task of framing their laws. The modern republics of Italy have often copied this custom; the republic of Geneva did so, and found that it worked well.[7] Rome in its happiest age saw all the crimes of the Tyranny revived within its borders, and came near to perishing simply because it had put both the legislative authority and the sovereign power in the same hands.

And yet even the decemvirs themselves never arrogated the right to make any law on their own authority alone. 'Nothing we propose to you,' they said to the people, 'can become law without your consent. Romans, be yourselves the authors of the laws which are to ensure your happiness.'

Thus the man who frames the laws has not nor ought to have any legislative right, and the people itself cannot, even should it wish, strip itself of this untransferable right; for, according to the fundamental compact, it is only the general will which binds individuals and there can be no assurance that an individual will is in conformity with the general will until it has submitted to the free suffrage of the people — I have said this already, but it is worth repeating.

And so we find in the work of the lawgiver two things which look contradictory — a task which is beyond human powers and a non-existent authority for its execution.

There is another difficulty which deserves mention. Those sages who insist on speaking in their own language to the vulgar instead of in the vulgar language will not be understood. For there are thousands of ideas which cannot be translated into the popular idiom. Perspectives which are general and goals remote are alike beyond the range of the common herd; it is difficult for the individual, who has no taste for any scheme of government but that which serves his private interest, to appreciate the advantages to be derived from the lasting austerities which good laws impose. For a newly formed people to understand wise principles of politics and to follow the basic rules of statecraft, the effect would have to become the cause; the social spirit which must be the product of social institutions would have to preside over the setting up of those institutions; men would have to have already become before the advent of law that which they become as a result of law. And as the lawgiver can for these reasons employ neither force nor argument, he must have recourse to an authority of another order, one which can compel without violence and persuade without convincing.

It is this which has obliged the founders of nations throughout history to appeal to divine intervention and to attribute their own wisdom to the Gods; for then the people, feeling subject to the laws of the state as they are to those of nature, and detecting the same hand in the creation of both man and the nation, obey freely and bear with docility the yoke of the public welfare.

This sublime reasoning, which soars above the heads of the common people, is used by the lawgiver when he puts his own decisions into the mouth of the immortals, thus compelling by divine authority persons who cannot be moved by human prudence.[8] But it is not for every man to make the Gods speak, or to gain credence if he pretends to be an interpreter of the divine word. The lawgiver's great soul is the true miracle which must vindicate his mission. Any man can carve tablets of stone, or bribe an oracle, claim a secret intercourse with some divinity, train a bird to whisper in his ear, or discover some other vulgar means of imposing himself on the people. A man who can do such things may conceivably bring together a company of fools, but he will never establish an empire, and his bizarre creation will perish with him. Worthless tricks may set up transitory bonds, but only wisdom makes lasting ones. The Law of the Hebrews, which still lives, and that of the child of Ishmael which has ruled half the world for ten centuries, still proclaim today the greatness of the men who first enunciated them; and even though proud philosophy and the blind spirit of faction may regard them as nothing but lucky impostors, the true statesman sees, and admires in their institutions, the hand of that great and powerful genius which lies behind all lasting things.

Even so, we must not conclude from this, with Warburton, that religion and politics have the same purpose among men; it is simply that at the birth of nations, the one serves as the instrument of the other.

CHAPTER 8
The People

JUST as an architect who puts up a large building first surveys and tests the ground to see if it can bear the weight, so the wise lawgiver begins not by laying down laws good in themselves, but by finding out whether the people for whom the laws are intended is able to support them. Such reasoning led Plato to refuse to provide laws for the Arcadians or the Cyreneans, because he well knew that those peoples, being rich, would not tolerate equality. Crete, too, provides an example of good laws and bad men, for the people Milos tried to discipline were dominated by their vices.

The world has seen a thousand splendid nations that could not have accepted good laws, and even those that might have accepted them could have done so only for short periods of their long history. Nations,[9] like men, are teachable only in their youth; with age they become incorrigible. Once customs are established and prejudices rooted, reform is a dangerous and fruitless enterprise; a people cannot bear to see its evils touched, even if only to be eradicated; it is like a stupid, pusillanimous invalid who trembles at the sight of a physician.

I am not denying that just as certain afflictions unhinge men's minds and banish their memory of the past, so there are certain violent epochs or revolutions in states which have the same effect on peoples that personal crises may have on individuals; only instead of forgetting the past, they look back on it in horror, and then the state, after being consumed by civil war, is born again, so to speak, from its own ashes, and leaps from the arms of death to regain the vigour of youth. Such was the experience of Sparta at the time of Lycurgus, of Rome after the Tarquins, and, in the modern world, of Holland and Switzerland after the expulsion of the tyrants.

But such events are unusual; they are exceptional cases to be explained by the special constitution of the states concerned. It could not even happen twice to the same people; because although a people can make itself free while it is still uncivilized, it cannot do so when its civil energies are worn out. Disturbances may then destroy a civil society without a revolution being able to restore it, so that as soon as the chains are broken, the state falls apart and exists no longer; then what is needed is a master, not a liberator. Free peoples, remember this maxim: liberty can be gained, but never regained.

For nations, as for men, there is a time of maturity which they must reach before they are made subject to law; but the maturity of a people is not always easily recognized; and something done too soon will prove abortive. Peoples differ; one is amenable to discipline from the beginning; another is not, even after ten centuries. The Russians will never be effectively governed because the attempt to govern them was made too early. Peter the Great had the talent of a copyist; he had no true genius, which is creative and makes everything from nothing. Some of the things he did were sound; most were misguided. He saw that his people was uncivilized, but he did not see that it was unready for government; he sought to civilize his subjects when he ought rather to have drilled them. He tried to turn them into Germans or Englishmen instead of making them Russians. He urged his subjects to be what they were not and so prevented them from becoming what they might have been. This is just how a French tutor trains his pupil to shine for a brief moment in his childhood and then grow up into a nonentity. The Russian Empire would like to subjugate Europe and will find itself subjugated. The Tartars, its subjects or neighbours, will become its masters — and ours. Such a revolution seems to me inevitable. All the kings of Europe are labouring in concert to hasten its coming.

CHAPTER 9
The People: Continued

JUST as nature has set bounds to the stature of a well-formed man, outside which he is either a giant or a dwarf, so, in what concerns the best constitution for a state, there are limits to the size it can have if it is to be neither too large to be well governed nor too small to maintain itself. In the body politic there is a maximum of strength which must not be exceeded, and which is often fallen short of as a result of expansion. The more the social bond is stretched, the slacker it becomes; and in general a small state is relatively stronger for its size than a large one.

A thousand considerations bear witness to the truth of this. First, administration becomes more difficult over great distances, just as a weight becomes heavier at the end of a long lever. Government becomes more burdensome as its area is enlarged, for each town has its own administration, which the people pays for, and each region has its administration, which the people also pays for, then each province has one, and so on up to the greater governments, the satrapies, the viceroyalties, each costing more the higher they rise and always paid for by the unfortunate populace; and then on top of all comes the supreme administration, bearing down on everyone. Such a great number of charges added to charges continually exhausts the subjects; and far from being better governed by this hierarchy of orders, they are much worse off than they would be if they had only one administration over them. As it is, there is hardly any public revenue available for emergencies, and when the state is faced with such a need, it trembles on the verge of ruin.

Nor is this all. Not only is the government less vigorous and swift in enforcing respect for the law, in preventing nuisances, correcting abuses and thwarting any seditious movements that may arise in distant quarters, but at the same time the people has less affection for governors whom it never sees, for a homeland that seems as vast as the world, and for fellow-citizens who are mostly strangers. The same laws will not suit so many various provinces, which, with their different customs and contrasting climates, cannot tolerate the same form of government. Having different laws only creates misunderstanding and confusion among peoples who live under the same governors and are in continuous communication with one another; they intermingle and intermarry, but if different sets of rules prevail, they will not even know if what they call their patrimony is really their own. Talents are hidden, virtues are ignored and vices remain unpunished when such a multitude of men, who do not know one another, is brought together in the same place by one single seat of supreme administration. The governors have too much to do to see everything for themselves; their clerks rule the state. And the measures needed to maintain a general authority, which so many scattered officials try to evade or exploit, absorb all political attention, so none is left to study the people's happiness, and hardly any left for its defence in case of need. This body which is too big for its constitution collapses and perishes, crushed by its own weight.

On the other hand, a state if it is to have strength must give itself some solid foundation, so that it can resist the shocks that it is bound to experience and sustain the exertions that it must make to preserve itself; for all peoples generate a kind of centrifugal force, by which they brush continuously against one another, and they all attempt to expand at the expense of their neighbours, like the vortices of Descartes. Thus the weak are always in danger of being swallowed up, and indeed no people can well preserve itself except by achieving a kind of equilibrium with all the others which makes the pressure everywhere the same for all.

This shows us that there are reasons for expansion and reasons for contraction; and indeed it is not the least part of political wisdom to judge, as between the one and the other, the precise balance which is most conducive to the preservation of the state. In general one might say that any reasons for expansion, which are exterior and relative, ought to be less compelling than the reasons for contraction, which are internal and absolute. A strong and healthy constitution is the first thing to look for because the strength which comes from good government is more reliable than the resources which large territories yield.

One may add that there have been states whose political structure was such that the necessity of conquest was part of their very constitution, states which, in order to maintain themselves at all, were obliged to enlarge themselves unceasingly. Possibly they have congratulated themselves on this, as a fortunate necessity; but reflection on the same necessity must also have shown them that at the end of their greatness lay the inevitable moment of their fall.

CHAPTER 10
The People: Continued

THERE are two ways of measuring a body politic, by the extent of its territory and by the number of its people; and there must be a certain balance between these two dimensions if the state is to achieve its best size. Men make the state and the soil nourishes men; thus the right balance requires that there be land enough to feed the inhabitants and as many inhabitants as the land can feed. It is in this proportion that the maximum strength of a given number of persons is brought forth; for if there is too much territory, care of it is burdensome, cultivation inadequate and produce excessive; and this soon becomes the cause of defensive wars; while if, on the other hand, there is too little land, the state must live on what it can import at the discretion of its neighbours, and this soon becomes the cause of offensive wars. Any people which has to choose between commerce and war is essentially weak; it depends on its neighbours; it depends on contingencies; it will never have more than a short, uncertain existence; either it conquers and ends its predicament, or it is conquered and exists no more. It can safeguard itself in freedom only by means of littleness or bigness.

One cannot specify the exact mathematical proportion there should be between the area of the land and the number of inhabitants, because of the different characteristics of different places, differences in degrees of fertility, in the nature of the produce, in the effects of climate; and also because of the differences there are between the temperaments of men who inhabit the different territories, some consuming little in a fertile country and others living well off a frugal soil. Again we should have to consider the greater or lesser fecundity of the women, the distinctive features of the land, whether more or less favourable to population; the number of immigrants that the lawgiver might hope to attract by his institutions. From this it follows that he must make his decisions in the light not of what he sees, but of what he foresees, calculating not so much the number of the existing population as the number which the population must naturally reach. Finally, there are a thousand occasions when some particular accident of situation demands or allows the assimilation of more land than appears necessary. In a mountainous country, where the type of cultivation — woodland and pastures — requires less work, where the women are shown by experience to be more fecund than in the plains, and where the steep slopes of hills leave only a marginal degree of that flat land which alone can be relied on for vegetation, men will spread out more widely. The contrary is the case on the edge of the sea, where men will draw together in a small area, even among rocks and sands that are almost barren; for fishing can make up for much of the deficiency of agricultural produce; and being close together enables such men the better to resist pirates; and they can easily rid themselves by overseas settlement of any surplus population.

There is yet another condition for the institution of a people, one condition which no other can replace and without which all the rest are unavailing: a peace and plenty must be enjoyed; for the period of the formation of a state, like that of the lining up of a regiment, is the time when it is least capable of resistance and most open to destruction. A state can defend itself more effectively amid total chaos than during the time of fermentation, when everyone is thinking about his own position and not about the common danger. If there is a war, famine or sedition during this critical period, the state will inevitably be overthrown.

It is true that many governments have been set up during such disturbances, but then it is the governments themselves which destroy the state. Usurpers always choose troubled times to enact, in the atmosphere of general panic, laws which the public would never adopt when passions were cool. One of the surest ways of distinguishing the work of a lawgiver from that of a tyrant is to note the moment he chooses to give a people its constitution.

Which people, then, is fit to receive laws? I answer: a people which, finding itself already bound together by some union of origin, interest or convention, has not yet borne the yoke of law; a people without deep-rooted customs or superstitions; one which does not fear sudden invasion, and which, without intervening in the quarrels of its neighbours, can stand up to any of them, or secure the help of one to resist another; a people in which every member may be known to all; where there is no need to burden any man with more than he can bear; a people which can do without other peoples and which other peoples can do without;[10] one which is neither rich nor poor, but has enough to keep itself; and lastly one which combines the cohesion of an ancient people with the malleability of a new one. What makes the task of the lawgiver so difficult is less what has to be established than what has to be destroyed; and what makes success so rare is the impossibility of finding the simplicity of nature together with the needs that society creates. It is difficult to combine all these conditions; and that is why so few well-constituted states exist.

There is still one country in Europe which is fit to receive laws, and that is the island of Corsica. The valour and fidelity with which this brave people has recovered and defended its freedom entitle it to be taught by some wise man how to preserve that freedom. I have a presentiment that this little island will one day astonish Europe.

CHAPTER 11
Various Systems of Law

IF we enquire wherein lies precisely the greatest good of all, which ought to be the goal of every system of law, we shall find that it comes down to two main objects, freedom and equality: freedom because any individual dependence means that much strength withdrawn from the body of the state, and equality because freedom cannot survive without it.

I have already explained what civil freedom is; as for equality, this word must not be taken to imply that degrees of power and wealth should be absolutely the same for all, but rather that power shall stop short of violence and never be exercised except by virtue of authority and law, and, where wealth is concerned, that no citizen shall be rich enough to buy another and none so poor as to be forced to sell himself; this in turn implies that the more exalted persons need moderation in goods and influence and the humbler persons moderation in avarice and covetousness.[11]

Such equality, we shall be told, is a chimera of theory and could not exist in reality. But if abuse is inevitable, ought we not then at least to control it? Precisely because the force of circumstance tends always to destroy equality, the force of legislation ought always to tend to preserve it.

However, these general objectives of all institutions must be modified in each country to meet local conditions and suit the character of the people concerned. It is in the light of such factors that one must assign to each people the particular form of constitution which is best, not perhaps in itself, but for that state for which it is destined. For example, is your soil meagre and barren or the territory too narrow for its inhabitants? Then look to industry and crafts, so that manufactured goods may be exchanged for the natural resources that are lacking. Suppose, on the other hand, you have rich plains and fertile slopes, good land too little inhabited. Then concentrate on agriculture, to increase the population, and eschew artisanry, which invariably depopulates the countryside and brings the few inhabitants there are together in certain urban centres.[12] Have you a long and convenient coastline? Then fill the sea with ships, develop trade and navigation, and you will have a brilliant if short existence. Does the sea, along your shores, wash against almost inaccessible rocks? Then remain ichthyphagous barbarians; you will live more peacefully, better perhaps, and certainly more happily. In short, apart from those principles which are common to all, each people has its special reasons for adopting these principles in its own way and for having laws that are fitted to itself alone. Thus it was, in the past, that the Hebrews, and more recently the Arabs, took religion as their chief object, while the Athenians had literature, Carthage and Tyre trade, Rhodes seafaring, Sparta war, and Rome civic virtue. The author of L'Esprit des lois has shown with scores of examples how the art of the lawgiver directs the constitution towards each of its ends.

What makes the constitution of a state really strong and durable is such a close observance of conventions that natural relations and laws come to be in harmony on all points, so that the law, shall we say, seems only to ensure, accompany and correct what is natural. But if the lawgiver mistakes his object and builds on principles that differ from what is demanded by the circumstances; if his principle tends towards servitude while circumstances tend towards liberty, the one towards wealth and the other towards increased population, the one towards peace and the other towards conquest, then the laws will be weakened imperceptibly, the constitution will deteriorate, and the state will continue to be disturbed until it is finally destroyed or transformed, and invincible Nature regains her empire.

CHAPTER 12
Classification of Laws

FOR everything to be well ordered and the best possible form given to the republic, there are various relations to be considered. First, there is the action of the whole body politic on itself, that is to say, the relation of all with all, or of the sovereign with the state, and this relation, as we shall see, is made up of relations between intermediary bodies.

The laws which regulate this relation bear the name of Political Laws, and are also called Fundamental Laws — not unreasonably, if the laws are wise ones. For if in each state there is only one good way of regulating it, the people which has found that way ought to keep to it. But if the established order is bad, why should the laws which prevent its being good be regarded as fundamental? Besides, a people is in any case entirely at liberty to alter its laws, even its best laws; and if it chooses to do itself an injury, who has the right to prevent it from doing so?

The second relation is that of the members of the body politic among themselves, or of each with the entire body: their relations among themselves should be as limited, and relations with the entire body as extensive, as possible, in order that each citizen shall be at the same time perfectly independent of all his fellow citizens and excessively dependent on the republic — this result is always achieved by the same means, since it is the power of the state alone which makes the freedom of its members. It is from this second relationship that Civil Laws are born.

We may consider a third kind of relation between the person and the law, namely that of disobedience and its penalty. It is this which gives rises to the establishment of Criminal Laws, though at bottom these are less a specific kind of law than the sanction behind all laws.

To these three sorts of law must be added a fourth, the most important of all, which is inscribed neither on marble nor brass, but in the hearts of the citizens, a law which forms the true constitution of the state, a law which gathers new strength every day and which, when other laws age or wither away, reanimates or replaces them; a law which sustains a nation in the spirit of its institution and imperceptibly substitutes the force of habit for the force of authority. I refer to morals, customs and, above all, belief: this feature, unknown to our political theorists, is the one on which the success of all the other laws depends; it is the feature on which the great law-giver bestows his secret care, for though he seems to confine himself to detailed legal enactments, which are really only the arching of the vault, he knows that morals, which develop more slowly, ultimately become its immovable keystone.

Among these various classes of law, it is only Political Laws, which constitute the form of government, that are relevant to my subject.

Note

【1】 For the will to be general, it does not always have to be unanimous; but all the votes must be counted. Any formal exclusion destroys its universality.

【2】 'Every interest,' says the Marquis d'Argenson, 'has its different principles. Harmony between two interests is created by opposition to that of a third.' He might have added that the harmony of all interests is created by opposition to those of each. If there were no different interests, we should hardly be conscious of a common interest, as there would be no resistance to it; everything would run easily of its own accord, and politics would cease to be an art.

【3】 'Divisions,' says Machiavelli, 'sometimes injure and sometimes aid a republic. The injury is done by cabals and factions; the service is rendered by a party which maintains itself without cabals and factions. Since, therefore, it is impossible for the founder of a republic to provide against enmities, he must make the best provision he can against factions.' History of Florence, Book Ⅶ.

【4】 Please, attentive reader, do not hasten to accuse me of contradiction. I cannot avoid a contradiction of words, because of the poverty of language; but wait.

【5】 By this word I understand not only an aristocracy or democracy, but generally any government directed by the general will, which is law. If it is to be legitimate, the government must not be united with the sovereign, but must serve it as its ministry. So even a monarchy can be a republic. This will be clarified in Book Ⅲ.

【6】 A people does not become famous until its constitution begins to decline. We do not know for how many centuries the constitution of Lycurgus gave happiness to the Spartans before there was talk about them in the rest of Greece.

【7】 Those who think of Calvin merely as a theologian do not realize the extent of his genius. The codification of our wise edicts, in which he had a large share, does him as much credit as his Institutes. Whatever revolutions may take place in our church, the memory of that great man will not cease to be honoured among the adepts of that religion while the love of country and of liberty still lives among us.

【8】 'The truth is,' writes Machiavelli, 'that there has never been in any country an extraordinary legislator who has not invoked the deity; for otherwise his laws would not have been accepted. A wise man knows many useful truths which cannot be demonstrated in such a way as to convince other people.' (Discourses on Livy, Book Ⅴ, Chapter xi.) [In Italian in original. Trans.]

【9】 (Altered in Edition of 1782 to 'Most nations...' Trans.)

【10】 If two neighbouring peoples cannot do without one another the situation is hard for the one and dangerous for the other. Any wise nation, in such a case, will hasten to deliver the other from its dependence. The republic of Thlascala, an enclave within the Mexican Empire, preferred to do without salt rather than buy it from the Mexicans, rather even than take it from them when it was offered as a gift. The wise Thlascalians saw the trap concealed in the Mexican generosity. They kept their freedom; and their little state, locked within the territory of a great Empire, was in the end the instrument of that Empire's ruin.

【11】 Do you want coherence in the state? Then bring the two extremes as close together as possible; have neither very rich men nor beggars, for these two estates, naturally inseparable, are equally fatal to the common good; from the one class come friends of tyranny, from the other, tyrants. It is always these two classes which make commerce of the public freedom: the one buys, the other sells.

【12】 Any branch of foreign trade, says the Marquis d'Argenson, brings only an illusory advantage to the kingdom in general; it may enrich a few individuals, even a few big towns, but the nation as a whole gains nothing and the people is none the better for it.

Book Ⅲ

BEFORE speaking of the various forms of government, let us try to fix the precise meaning of this word, which has not hitherto been very well explained.

CHAPTER 1
Of Government in General

I MUST warn the reader that this chapter should be read with care, for I have not the skill to make myself clear to those who do not wish to concentrate their attention.

Every free action has two causes which concur to produce it, one moral — the will which determines the act, the other physical — the strength which executes it. When I walk towards an object, it is necessary first that I should resolve to go that way and secondly that my feet should carry me. When a paralytic resolves to run and when a fit man resolves not to move, both stay where they are. The body politic has the same two motive powers — and we can make the same distinction between will and strength, the former is legislative power and the latter executive power. Nothing can be, or should be, done in the body politic without the concurrence of both.

We have seen that the legislative power belongs, and can only belong, to the people. On the other hand, it is easy to see from principles established above [Book Ⅱ, Chapters 4 and 6] that executive power cannot belong to the generality of the people as legislative or sovereign, since executive power is exercised only in particular acts which are outside the province of law and therefore outside the province of the sovereign which can act only to make laws.

The public force thus needs its own agent to call it together and put it into action in accordance with the instructions of the general will, to serve also as a means of communication between the state and the sovereign, and in a sense to do for the public person what is done for the individual by the union of soul and body. This is the reason why the state needs a government, something often unhappily confused with the sovereign, but of which it is really only the minister.

What, then, is the government? An intermediary body established between the subjects and the sovereign for their mutual communication, a body charged with the execution of the laws and the maintenance of freedom, both civil and political.

The members of this body are called magistrates or kings, that is to say governors, and the whole body bears the name of prince.[1] Thus, those theorists who deny that the act by which a people submits itself to leaders is a contract are wholly correct. For that act is nothing other than a commission, a form of employment in which the governors, as simple officers of the sovereign, exercise in its name the power it has placed in their hands, a power which the sovereign can limit, modify and resume at pleasure, since the alienation of such a right would be incompatible with the nature of the social body and contrary to the purpose of the social union.

I therefore call 'government' or 'supreme administration' the legitimate exercise of the executive power, and I call 'prince' or 'magistrate' the man or the body charged with that administration.

It is in the government that we may discern those intermediary forces whose relations constitute those of all with all, or of the sovereign with the state. This last relation can be depicted as one between the first and last terms of a geometric progression, of which the geometric mean is the government. The government receives from the sovereign the orders which it gives to the people; and if the state is to be well balanced, it is necessary, all things being weighed, that the product of the power of the government multiplied by itself should equal the product or the power of the citizens who are sovereign in one sense and subjects in another.

Furthermore, no one of these three terms can be changed without destroying the ratio. If the sovereign seeks to govern, or if the magistrate seeks to legislate, or if the subjects refuse to obey, then order gives way to chaos, power and will cease to act in concert, and the state, disintegrating, will lapse either into despotism or into anarchy. Lastly, as there is only one geometrical mean between two extremes, there is only one good government possible for any state; but as a thousand events may change the relations within a nation, different governments may not only be good for different peoples, but good for the same people at different times.

To try to give some idea of the various relations which may exist between the two extremes, I shall take as an example the number of the people, as this is a relation easily expressed as a ratio.

Suppose the state is made up of ten thousand citizens. The sovereign can only be considered collectively and as a body, but every member as a subject has to be considered as an individual. Thus the sovereign is to the subject as ten thousand is to one, that is to say, each single member of the state has as his own share only a ten-thousandth part of the sovereign authority, although he submits himself entirely to it. Now if the people is increased to a hundred thousand men, the position of each subject is unaltered, for each bears equally with the rest the whole empire of the laws, while as sovereign his share of the suffrage is reduced to one hundred-thousandth, so that he has ten times less influence in the formulation of the laws. Hence, while the subject remains always one single individual, the ratio of sovereign to subject increases according to the number of citizens. Whence it follows that the more the state is enlarged, the more freedom is diminished.

When I say that the ratio increases, I mean that it is farther removed from unity. So the greater ratio in the mathematical sense, the smaller the relationship in the popular sense; for in the former, the ratio, considered according to this, is measured by the quotient, whereas in the latter, the relationship, considered according to identity, is judged by similarity.

The smaller the relationship between the particular wills and the general will, that is, between the people's morals and the law, the more repressive force will have to be employed. Hence, for the government to be good, its strength must be increased to the extent that the people is more numerous.

In proportion as the enlargement of the state means offering the holders of public authority more temptations and more opportunities to abuse their power, it follows that the more power the government needs to control the people, the more power the sovereign needs, in its turn, to control the government. I am speaking here not of an absolute power, but of the relative power of the different elements in the state.

It follows from this dual relationship that the geometric progression between sovereign, prince and people is by no means an arbitrary idea, but a necessary consequence of the nature of the body politic. It follows further that one of the terms, namely the people as subject, is represented by unity, every time the square of the ratio is increased or diminished, the simple ratio increases or diminishes in the same way, and the middle term, the government, is in consequence changed. This shows that there is no one unique and absolute constitution of government, but that there may be as many different kinds of government as there are states of different sizes.

If anyone, wishing to ridicule this system, suggested that in order to find this geometrical mean and construct the body of the government one need only on my view take the square root of the number of the people, I should reply that I am here using numbers only as an example; and the ratios of which I speak are not measured merely by the number of men but more generally by the amount of activity, which results from the concurrence of innumerable causes; I should add that although I have borrowed momentarily for the sake of expressing myself in fewer words, the language of mathematics, I am still well aware that mathematical precision has no place in moral calculations.

The government is in small what the body politic (which includes it) is in large. It is a fictitious person endowed with certain faculties, active like the sovereign, passive like the state; and it can be broken down into similar relations; in consequence these relations yield a new ratio; and within each we can continue the process of analysis according to the order of the magistracies until we reach a single indivisible middle term, that is, a single chief or supreme magistrate, who may be shown at the centre of this geometrical progression, as the unifying term between the series of fractions and the series of whole numbers.

Without burdening ourselves with such a multiplication of terms, let us simply consider the government as a new body within the state, distinct from both people and sovereign and intermediary between the two.

There is this essential difference between the two bodies — the state exists in itself while the government exists only through the sovereign. Thus the dominant will of the prince is, or ought to be, only the general will or the law, and his force nothing other than the public force concentrated in his hands; as soon as he resolves to perform on his own authority some absolute and independent act, the union of all begins to slacken. And if in the end it comes about that the prince has a particular will more active than that of the sovereign, and if, to enforce obedience to this particular will, he uses the public force which is in his hands, with the result that there are, so to speak, two sovereigns, one de jure and the other de facto, then the social bond vanishes at once and the body politic is dissolved.

Even so, for the body of the government to have an existence, a real life distinct from the body of the state, and for all its members to be able to act in concert and serve the purpose for which the government has been set up, it must have a particular ego, a consciousness common to its members, a force, a will of its own tending to its preservation. Such a particular existence implies assemblies, councils, a power to deliberate and determine rights, titles, and privileges which belongs exclusively to the prince, and which should make the position of the magistrate the more honourable in proportion to the extent to which it is the more arduous. The difficulty is to find a method of ordering this subordinate whole within the greater whole, so that it does not weaken the general constitution while strengthening its own, and so that its private force, designed for its own preservation, shall always be distinct from the public force, designed for the preservation of the state; in short, so that it will always be ready to sacrifice the government to the people and not the people to the government.

Moreover, even though the artificial body of the government is the work of another equally artificial body, and even though it has only a kind of borrowed and subordinate life, this does not prevent its being able to act with greater or less vigour and speed, and enjoying, so to speak, a health that may be more robust or less. Lastly, without departing directly from the purposes for which it has been set up, it may deviate from them in varying degrees according to the manner in which it has been constituted.

It is all these differences which give rise to the various relations that ought to exist between the government and the body of the state, in accordance with the fortuitous and particular relations by which this same state is changed. For often the government which is in itself the best becomes the most evil unless its relations with the state are modified to meet the defects of the body politic to which it belongs.

CHAPTER 2
The Constitutive Principle of the Different Forms of Government

To explain the general reason for these differences, it is necessary to distinguish here between the prince and the government, as I have already distinguished between the state and the sovereign.

The body of the magistrates may be composed of a greater or lesser number of members. We have already observed that the ratio of sovereign to subjects is greater to the extent that the people are more numerous, and by an obvious analogy we can say the same of the government in relation to the magistrates.

As the total power of the government is at all times that of the state, it never varies; and from this it follows that the more force the government exerts over its own members, the less there remains for it to use over the whole people.

Hence the more numerous the magistrates, the weaker the government. As this principle is fundamental, let us try to make it clearer.

We may distinguish in the person of the magistrate three essentially different wills. First, there is the will which belongs to him as an individual, and tends only to his personal advantage. Secondly, there is the collective will of the magistrates; this is concerned only with the advantage of the prince, and might be called the corporate will, since it is general vis-à-vis the government and particular vis-à-vis the state of which the government is a part. Thirdly, there is the will of the people or the sovereign will, which is general both with regard to the state considered as a whole and with regard to the government considered as part of the whole.

In a perfect system of legislation, the individual or particular will would be nonexistent, the government's own corporate will very subordinate, and the general or sovereign will therefore always dominant and always the sole regulator of all the others.

In the order of nature, on the contrary, these different wills become the more active the more they are self-centred. Hence, the general will is always the weakest, the corporate will takes second place, and the particular will comes first of all; so much so, that within the government, each member is primarily a private self, secondly a magistrate, and thirdly a citizen. This sequence is exactly the reverse of what the social order demands.

That being so, let us suppose that the government is in the hands of a single individual. Then the particular will and the corporate will will be perfectly united, and the corporate will accordingly raised to its highest possible degree of intensity. Now, since the exercise of power depends on the degree of will, and since the absolute power of the government is invariable, it follows that the most active government is that of one man.

If, on the other hand, we combine the government and the legislative authority, make the prince the sovereign, and each citizen a magistrate — then the corporate will, being merged in the general will, will be no more active than the general will, and so leave the particular will to command the totality of power. Thus the government, having always the same absolute strength, will be left with a minimum of relative strength and activity.

These relations are indisputable, and other considerations add further confirmation. It is clear, for example, that each magistrate is more active within the body of the government than is each citizen within the body of the state, and hence that the particular will has more influence over the acts of the government than it has over those of the sovereign, for every magistrate is nearly always entrusted with some distinct function of government, while no citizen, taken singly, has any distinct function of sovereignty. Besides, the more the state expands, the more its real strength is increased, though not in proportion to its expansion; but if the state remains the same size, the magistrates can be multiplied without the government gaining thereby any real strength, since its strength is that of the state, which is always the same. In this way the relative strength or activity of the government diminishes without there being any possibility of its absolute or real power increasing.

Again, there is no doubt that the dispatch of public business becomes slower in proportion as there are more persons responsible for it; attaching too much importance to prudence, large bodies attach too little to luck; they miss opportunities, and they deliberate so long that they lose the profits of deliberation.

I have just shown that the government slackens to the extent that the magistrates are multiplied, and I showed earlier that the more numerous the people, the more the repressive force must increase. From this it follows that the ratio of magistrates to government should be the inverse of the ratio of subjects to sovereign; that is to say, the more the state is enlarged, the more the government must reduce its ranks, so that the number of magistrates diminishes in proportion to the increase of the people.

I should add that I am speaking here of the relative strength of the government and not the quality of its behaviour; for, on the contrary, the more numerous the magistrates, the closer their corporate will approaches the general will, while under a single magistrate that same corporate will is, as I have said, only a particular will. Thus there is lost on the one side what could be gained on the other; and the art of the lawgiver is to know how to settle the point at which the strength and the will of the government, which always stand in inverse ratio, can be combined in the proportion most beneficial to the state.

CHAPTER 3
Classification of Governments

IN the preceding chapter we saw why the different types or forms of government are distinguished according to the number of members who compose them; it remains to be seen in the present chapter how this classification is made.

First, the sovereign may put the government in the hands of the whole people, or of the greater part of the people, so that there are more citizen-magistrates than there are ordinary private citizens. This form of government is known as democracy.

Alternatively, the sovereign may confine the government to the hands of a few, so that there are more ordinary citizens than there are magistrates: this form of government is called aristocracy.

Yet again, the sovereign may concentrate the entire government in the hands of one single magistrate, from whom all the others will derive their power. This third form of government is the most common, and is called monarchy or royal government.

It should be noticed that all these forms, or at any rate the first two, can be had in greater or lesser degrees; they have a fairly marked elasticity. Democracy may include all the people or it may be limited so as to include only half. Aristocracy in its turn may extend to half the people or be limited to the smallest possible number. Even royal government can to some extent be shared. Sparta had always two kings according to its constitution, and the Roman Empire is known to have had as many as eight Emperors at once without it being true to say that the Empire was divided. Thus there is always a point at which each form of government overlaps the next form; and it is clear that although government has only three names, it is actually open to as many variations of form as the state has citizens.

Moreover, since a government is able in certain respects to divide itself into separate parts, one administered in one way and the other in another way, the three forms of government may be combined to yield a multitude of mixed forms, each of which it can multiply by the three simple forms.

Throughout the ages men have debated the question 'What is the best form of government?', and yet they have failed to see that each of the possible forms is the best in some cases and the worst in others.

If in each particular state the number of supreme magistrates should be in inverse ratio to the number of citizens, it follows that, in general, democratic government suits small states, aristocratic government suits states of intermediate size and monarchy suits large states. This rule follows directly from our axiom; but how are we to calculate the multitude of particular circumstances which may offer exceptions to the rule?

CHAPTER 4
Democracy

HE who makes the law knows better than anyone how it should be executed and interpreted. So it might seem that there could be no better constitution than one which united the executive power with the legislative; in fact, this very union makes that form of government deficient in certain respects, for things which ought to be kept apart are not, and the prince and the sovereign being the same person constitute, so to speak, a government without government.

It is not good that he who makes the law should execute it or that the body of the people should turn its attention away from general perspectives and give it to particular objects. Nothing is more dangerous in public affairs than the influence of private interests, and the abuse of the law by the government is a lesser evil than that corruption of the legislator which inevitably results from the pursuit of private interests. When this happens, the state is corrupted in its very substance and no reform is possible. A people which never misused the powers of government would never misuse independence, and a people which always governed itself well would not need to be governed.

In the strict sense of the term, there has never been a true democracy, and there never will be. It is contrary to the natural order that the greater number should govern and the smaller number be governed. One can hardly imagine that all the people would sit permanently in an assembly to deal with public affairs; and one can easily see that they could not appoint commissions for that purpose without the form of administration changing.

I believe indeed that one can lay down as an axiom that when the functions of government are divided between several commissions, those with the fewest members acquire sooner or later the greatest authority, if only because the facility of dispatching business leads naturally in that direction.

Besides, how many things that are difficult to have at the same time does the democratic form of government not presuppose? First, a very small state, where the people may be readily assembled and where each citizen may easily know all the others. Secondly, a great simplicity of manners and morals, to prevent excessive business and thorny discussions. Thirdly, a large measure of equality in social rank and fortune, without which equality in rights and authority will not last long. Finally, little or no luxury; for luxury is either the effect of riches or it makes riches necessary; it corrupts both the rich and the poor; it surrenders the country to indolence and vanity; it deprives the state of all its citizens by making some the slaves of others and all the slaves of opinion.

This is why a celebrated author has made virtue the cardinal principle of a republic; for all the conditions that I have named cannot prevail without virtue. But this same great genius, having failed to make the necessary distinctions, was often wrong and sometimes obscure, and failed to see that since the sovereign authority is everywhere the same, the same principles should have a place in every well-constituted state, though to a greater or lesser extent, assuredly, according to the form of the government.

We may add that there is no government so liable to civil war and internecine strife as is democracy or popular government, for there is none which has so powerful and constant a tendency to change to another form or which demands so much vigilance and courage to maintain it unchanged. It is under this constitution, more than others, that the citizen must be armed with strength and fidelity, and repeat from the bottom of his heart every day of his life the words a virtuous Palatine[2] once spoke in the Diet of Poland: 'Malo periculosam libertatem quam quietum servitium.'[3]

If there were a nation of Gods, it would govern itself democratically. A government so perfect is not suited to men.

CHAPTER 5
Aristocracy

WE have here two distinct artificial persons, namely the government and the sovereign, and therefore two general wills, one belonging to all the citizens, and the other to members of the administration only. Thus, although the government may regulate its interior discipline as it pleases, it can never speak to the people except in the name of the sovereign, that is, in the name of the people itself — something that must never be forgotten.

The first societies were governed aristocratically. The heads of families deliberated on public business among themselves; the young people yielded willingly to the authority of experience. Hence the names of priests, elders, the senate, gerontes. The savages of North America still retain today this method of government, and they are very well governed.

But to the extent that artificial inequality came to prevail over natural inequality, riches and power[4] came to be preferred to age, and aristocracy became elective. Lastly, the bequeathing of power together with property by fathers to their children made families patrician and so made government hereditary; and then there appeared senators aged twenty.

There are thus three types of aristocracy, natural, elective and hereditary. The first is suited only to primitive peoples; the third is the worst of all governments; the second is the best, and this is aristocracy in the true sense of the word.

Aristocracy has not only the advantage of distinguishing between the sovereign and the government, it has also the advantage of selecting its magistrates. Under popular government all the citizens are born magistrates, while this other system limits itself to a small number of magistrates, every one of whom is elected,[5] a method which makes honesty, sagacity, experience and all the other grounds of popular preference and esteem further guarantees of wise government.

Besides, assemblies can be more easily arranged, business can be better discussed and be dispatched with more order and diligence; the credit of the state is better upheld in the eyes of foreigners by venerable senators than it is by an unknown and despised multitude.

In a word, it is the best and most natural arrangement for the wisest to govern the multitude, if we are sure that they will govern it for its advantage and not for their own. One ought never to multiply devices uselessly, or employ twenty thousand men to do what a hundred picked men could do much better. But it must be noted that the corporate interest begins at this point to direct the forces of the state less strictly in accordance with the general will, and that a further inevitable tendency is for a part of the executive power to escape the control of law.

As for the circumstances which suit this form of government, it is not necessary to have the state so small or the people so simple and upright that the execution of the law follows directly from the public will, as is the case in a good democracy. Nor must the nation be so large that the magistrates, being widely scattered, have to take upon themselves some of the powers of the sovereign, each in his own region; and so begin by making themselves independent and end by becoming masters.

But if aristocracy calls for rather fewer virtues than does popular government, it still calls for virtues of its own, such as moderation among the rich and contentment among the poor; for it seems that strict equality would be out of place; it was not observed even in Sparta.

Moreover, if this form of government involves a certain inequality of wealth, it is good that the administration of public affairs be entrusted to those who can best give all their time to it, and not, as Aristotle asserted, so that the rich should always be chosen. On the contrary, it is necessary that an opposite choice should occasionally teach people that merit is a more important qualification than riches for preferment.

CHAPTER 6
Monarchy

So far we have considered the prince as a collective and artificial person, unified by the force of the law and acting as trustee of executive power in the state. We have now to consider that power being held in the hands of a natural person, a real man, one having the sole right to exercise it according to the law. Such a man is known as a monarch or king.

Contrary to the other administrations, where a collective being represents an individual, in this one an individual represents a collective being; so that the moral unity which constitutes the prince is at the same time a physical unity, bringing together naturally those faculties which the law brings together with such difficulty in the other forms of administration.

Thus the will of the people and the will of the prince, the public force of the state and the individual power of the government, all respond to the same mover; all the levers of the machine are in the same hands; all act towards the same end; there are no conflicting movements to counteract one another, and we cannot imagine any constitution where more action would be produced by less effort. Archimedes sitting quietly on the shore and effortlessly launching a large ship is the model of a skilful monarch governing his vast kingdom from his chamber and making everything move while he himself seems motionless.

But if there is no government more vigorous than monarchy, there is also none where the particular will has more command, and more easily dominates the other wills. Everything moves towards the same end, it is true, but that end is not the public happiness; and the very strength of the administration operates continuously to the disadvantage of the state.

Kings want to be absolute, and from afar men cry out to them that the best way of becoming absolute is to make themselves loved by their people. This is a fine precept; and even in some respects a very true one. Unfortunately, it will always be laughed at in courts. The power which rests on the love of the people is undoubtedly the greatest, but is precarious and provisional; and princes will never be satisfied with it. The best kings want to be able to be bad if they feel like it without ceasing to be masters; a political sermonizer may well tell kings that since the people's force is the king's force, a king's best interest is to have the people flourishing, numerous and formidable; but kings know very well that this is not true. Their personal interest is primarily that the people should be weak, wretched and never able to resist them. I admit that if the subjects were always perfectly submissive, then it would be to the interest of the prince for the people to be strong, so that the people's strength, being also the prince's strength, would make him feared by his neighbours; but since this is only a secondary and subordinate advantage, and since strength is incompatible with submissiveness, it is natural that princes always prefer the doctrine that is more immediately useful to them. This is what Samuel put forcefully to the Hebrews, and what Machiavelli has proved very clearly — under the pretence of instructing kings, he has taught important lessons to the people. Machiavelli's Prince is a handbook for republicans.[6]

We have seen from the discussion of general proportions that monarchy is suited only to large states, and we find this again when we examine monarchy in itself. The more numerous the public administrators, the more the ratio between prince and subjects diminishes and approaches parity, coming to a point where the ratio is one to one, or equality itself, in democracy. This same ratio is greater to the extent that the government contracts, and reaches its maximum when the government is in the hands of a single man. Then there is too great a distance between the prince and the people and the state lacks bonds of union. For such bonds to be formed there must be intermediary ranks, with princelings, grandees, and a nobility to fill them. But all this is unsuited to a small state, which would be ruined by so many social orders.

But if it is difficult for a large state to be well governed, it is still more difficult for it to be well governed by a single man; and everyone knows what happens when a king rules through deputies.

An essential and inevitable defect, which will always make monarchical government inferior to republican government, is that whereas in republics the popular choice almost always elevates to the highest places only enlightened and capable men, who fill their office with honour, those who rise under monarchies are nearly always muddled little minds, petty knaves and intriguers with small talents which enable them to rise to high places in courts, but which betray their ineptitude to the public as soon as they are appointed. The people is much less often mistaken in such choices than is a prince, and a man of real merit is almost as rare in a royal ministry as a fool at the head of a republican government. Thus, when by some happy chance a born ruler takes the helm of affairs in a monarchy that is almost wrecked by swarms of egregious administrators, then everyone is amazed at the resources he discovers, and his reign marks an epoch in the history of the country.

For a monarchy to be well governed, its size and extent ought to be proportionate to the talents of those who govern. It is easier to conquer than to administer. With enough leverage, a finger could overturn the world; but to support the world, one must have the shoulders of Hercules. However small the state may be, princes are almost always inadequate. When, on the other hand, it happens that the state is too small for its ruler, a very rare thing, then it is even worse governed, because such a ruler, in following his own broad vision, forgets the people's interest; and he makes them no less miserable by the misuse of his superabundant abilities than a mediocre ruler would make them through the defects of an insufficient talent. It is as if kingdoms ought, so to speak, to expand or contract with each successive reign, according to the capacity of the prince. In a republic, on the other hand, where the talents of the senate are of a more settled measure, the state can have fixed boundaries without the administration working any less well.

The most perceptible disadvantage of government by one man is the lack of that continuity of succession which provides an uninterrupted bond of union in the other two systems. When a king dies, another is needed; elections leave a dangerous interval; they are stormy; and unless the citizens have more disinterestedness and integrity than is usual under such governments, there will be bribery and corruption. It is difficult for one to whom the state has been sold not to sell it in his turn, and recover from the weak the gold which the strong have extorted from him. Sooner or later, under such an administration everything becomes venal; and the peace which is then enjoyed under kings is worse than the disturbances of interregnums.

What has been done to prevent this evil? Thrones have been made hereditary in certain families, and an order of succession thus set up to prevent any dispute on the death of the king — that is to say, by substituting for the disadvantages of elections, the disadvantages of regencies, apparent peace has been preferred to wise administration, and the risk of having children or monsters or imbeciles for rulers preferred to having to dispute the choice of a good king. People do not realize that in exposing themselves to the hazards of these alternatives, they are gambling against all the odds. It was a very shrewd remark that the young Dionysus made to his father, when his father, reproaching him for a dishonourable action, said: 'Did I set you such an example?' 'Ah,' replied the son, 'your father was not a king.'

When someone is brought up to command others, everything conspires to rob him of justice and reason. Great pains are taken, we are told, to teach young princes the art of ruling; but it does not appear that this education does them any good. It would be better to begin by teaching them the art of obeying. The greatest kings known to history were not among those brought up to rule, for ruling is a science that is least well mastered by too much practice; it is one a man learns better in obeying than in commanding. Nam utilissimus idem ac brevissimus bonarum malarumque rerum delectus, cogitare quid aut nolueris sub alio Principe aut volueris.[7]

One consequence of this lack of coherence is the instability of royal government, which, being sometimes directed according to one plan and sometimes according to another, depending on the personality of the king who rules, or of those who rule for him, cannot long have a fixed objective or a consistent policy; this unsettledness makes the state drift from principle to principle, and from project to project, a defect not found in those forms of government where the prince is always the same. Thus we see that, in general, if there is more cunning in a royal court, there is more wisdom in a republican senate, and that republics have a more stable and effective guidance — something which cannot obtain where every revolution in the administration means a revolution in the state — for it is the universal rule of all ministers and nearly all kings to reverse the policy of their predecessors.

This same lack of cohesion gives the lie to a fallacy which is very common among royalist political thinkers, that is, not only of comparing civil government to household government and the prince to the father of a family

— a fallacy I have already refuted — but also of generously attributing to a royal ruler all the virtues he has need of, and always assuming that the prince is everything he should be. With the help of these assumptions, royal government becomes manifestly preferable to all other kinds, because it is incontestably the strongest, and needs only a corporate will more in harmony with the general will to be also the best form of government.

But if, according to Plato, a born king is a very rare being — how often do Nature and Fortune combine to enthrone such a man? And if a royal education necessarily corrupts those who receive it, what must be expected of a succession of men brought up to rule?

It is deliberate self-deception to confuse royal government with the government of a good king. To understand what this form of government is inherently, one must consider it as it is under mediocre or evil princes, for either princes will be such when they accede to the throne or such is what occupying the throne will make them.

Although these difficulties do not escape our authors, they have never been in the least embarrassed by them. The remedy, they say, is to obey without a murmur. God in his wrath inflicts bad kings on us, so they must be endured as a divine punishment. This argument is undoubtedly edifying; but I fancy it is more suited to the pulpit than to a book of political theory. What would be said about a physician who promised miracles, and whose whole art was to teach the sick to practise patience?

We all know that we have to put up with a bad government when it is bad; the problem is to find a good government.

CHAPTER 7
Mixed Forms of Government

STRICTLY speaking, no government of a simple form exists. A single head of state has to have subordinate magistrates; a people's government must have a head. Thus in the division of executive power there is always a gradation from the larger number to the smaller — with this difference, that sometimes the many submit to the few, and sometimes the few submit to the many.

Sometimes there is an equal division, either when the constitutive parts are mutually dependent, as in the government of England, or when the authority of each part is independent but imperfect, as in the case of Poland. This latter form is bad, because there is no unity in the government, and the state lacks bonds of union. Which is better: a simple form of government or a mixed one? This is a question much debated by political theorists, and one to which I myself must give the answer I gave earlier about all forms of government.

In itself, the simple form of government is the best, precisely because it is simple. But when the executive power is not sufficiently subordinate to the legislative — that is to say, when the ratio of prince to sovereign is greater than that of people to prince — this lack of proportion has to be remedied by dividing the government, for then all the diverse elements of the government will have no less authority over the subjects, but their separation will make them less powerful against the sovereign.

The same disadvantage can also be prevented by establishing intermediate magistrates who, separated from the government altogether, serve only to balance the two powers, and uphold their respective rights. Then the government is not mixed, it is tempered.

The opposite disadvantage can be remedied by similar means; and when the government is too slack, commissions can be set up to give it concentration. In the first case, the government is divided in order to weaken it; in the second, in order to strengthen it. This is the practice of all democracies. The maximum of strength and of weakness are equally found in the simple forms of government, whereas the mixed forms provide a moderate degree of strength.

CHAPTER 8
That All Forms of Government Do Not Suit All Countries

FREEDOM is not a fruit of every climate, and it is not therefore within the capacity of every people. The more one reflects on this doctrine of Montesquieu, the more one is conscious of its truth. And the more often it is challenged, the more opportunities are given to establish it with new evidence.

In every government in the world, the public person consumes but does not produce anything. Whence does it obtain the substance it consumes? From the labour of its members. It is the surplus of private production which furnishes public subsistence. From this it follows that the civil state can subsist only if men's work yields more than they themselves need.

But this surplus is not the same in every country of the world. In some it is substantial, in others middling, in some nil, in others a deficit. The proportion depends on the fertility of the climate, on the kind of labour which the soil requires, on the nature of its products, on the strength of the inhabitants, and on the degree of consumption that is necessary for them, and on various other factors which go to make up the whole proportion.

In addition, all governments do not have the same nature; some are more voracious than others; and their differences are based on this next principle — that the further public contributions are from their source, the more burdensome they are. This burden should not be measured by the quantity of the contributions exacted, but by the distance they have to go to return to the hands from which they come; when this circulation is rapid and well established, it does not matter whether much or little is paid; the people will always be rich and finances will flourish. Correspondingly, however little the people gives, when that little does not return to it, it soon exhausts itself in continuous payments; the state is never rich and the people is always penurious.

This demonstrates that the greater the distance between the people and the government, the more onerous the taxes become; so that in a democracy the people is least burdened, in an aristocracy more burdened, and in a monarchy it bears the greatest weight of all. Monarchy is thus suited only to opulent nations, aristocracy to those of moderate wealth and size, and democracy to small and poor countries.

Indeed, the more one reflects, the more one recognizes that in this matter there are differences between free states and monarchies: in the former everything is used for the common advantage, while in the latter, private power and public power are competitive, and the one is increased only by weakening the other. As for despotism, instead of governing the subjects in order to make them happy, it makes them miserable in order to govern them.

Thus in every climate there are natural factors on the basis of which one can determine the form of government to which that climate leads; and we can even say what sort of inhabitants each must have.

Mean and sterile places, where the product does not repay the labour, must remain uncultivated and deserted, or peopled only by savages. Places which yield only the bare necessities of men's lives must be inhabited by barbarous peoples, since no political society is possible. Places where the surplus of product over labour is moderate are suited to free peoples. Places where an abundant and fertile soil gives a lavish return for little labour will want monarchical government, so that the luxury of the prince may consume the surplus of the product of the subjects — for it is better that this surplus should be absorbed by the government than dissipated by private persons. There are exceptions, I know, but these exceptions themselves confirm the rule, in that sooner or later they produce revolutions which put things back into the order of nature.

We must always distinguish general laws from particular causes which can modify their effect. If all the South were covered with republics and all the North with despotic states, it would still be true that, in terms of climate, despotism suits hot countries, barbarism cold countries, and that a good polity suits temperate regions. I realize that this general rule may be admitted and its application disputed; it could be argued that there are very fertile cold countries and very barren southern ones. But this is a difficulty only for those who fail to see the thing in all its ramifications. One must, as I have already said, consider the factors of production, strength, consumption and so on.

Suppose there are two equal territories, one yielding five units, the other ten. If the inhabitants of the former consume four and those of the latter nine, the surplus of the one will be one-fifth and of the other one-tenth. The ratio of these two surpluses will then be the inverse of that of their products, so that the territory yielding five units will show a surplus double that of the territory yielding ten.

But there is no question of a double product, and I do not believe anyone could venture to equate the fertility of a cold country with that of a hot country. But let us assume such equality; let us, for example, compare England and Sicily, Poland and Egypt. Farther south there will be Africa and India; farther north, there will be nothing. What differences in agricultural technique will be needed to achieve this equality of product? In Sicily, it is enough simply to scratch the soil, while in England, how much effort is needed to work it! Now where more hands are required to obtain the same product, the surplus is necessarily less.

Note a further point, that the same number of men consume much less in hot countries. The climate requires a man to be abstemious to keep fit — and Europeans who try to live in hot countries as they live at home die of dysentry and stomach disorders. 'We,' says Chardin, 'are carnivorous beasts, wolves, compared to the Asians. Some attribute the abstemiousness of the Persians to the fact that their country is less cultivated; but I, on the contrary, believe that their country is less rich in foodstuffs because the inhabitants need less. If their frugality [he continues] were the effect of the poverty of the soil, it would be the poor alone who ate little; in fact everybody does; and instead of finding people eating less or more in each province according to the fertility of the land, one finds the same frugality throughout the kingdom. They are very proud of their way of life, and say that one has only to look at their complexions to see how superior their way is to that of other nations. And indeed, the complexion of the Persians is clear, their skin is fair, delicate and smooth, while that of the Armenians, their subjects who live in the European manner, is rough and blotchy, and their bodies are fat and heavy.'

The closer men are to the equator, the more frugally they live. They eat hardly any meat; rice, maize, couscous, millet and cassava are their daily food. In India there are millions of men whose food costs less than a penny a day. In Europe itself we notice a marked difference of appetite between the peoples of the north and those of the south. A Spaniard could live eight days on the dinner of a German. In countries where men are more gluttonous, luxury is turned towards the things men consume. In England, it shows itself in tables loaded with meats; in Italy one is regaled on sugar and flowers.

Luxury in clothing reveals similar differences. In countries where the changes of season are swift and violent, people have better and simpler clothes; in countries where they dress only for appearance, people care more for show than utility, and clothes themselves are a luxury. In Naples you will see men strolling daily along the Posillipo in gold-embroidered jackets and no hose. It is the same thing with buildings; people attach importance to magnificence when they have nothing to fear from the climate. In Paris or London people want to be housed warmly and comfortably. In Madrid, they have superb reception rooms, but no windows that close and their bedrooms are like rat holes.

Foodstuffs are more substantial and richer in hot countries — this is a third difference and it does not fail to influence the second. Why does one eat so many vegetables in Italy? Because they are good, nourishing and of excellent flavour. In France, where they get nothing but water, they are not at all nourishing, and count for nothing at the table; but even so they take up no less ground and cost just as much to cultivate. Experiment has shown that the wheats of Barbary, otherwise inferior to those of France, yield much more flour; and that the French wheats, in turn, yield more than those of the North. From this one can deduce that a similar gradation may be observed along a line from the equator to the pole. Now is it not a tangible disadvantage to have a smaller amount of nourishment in an equal quantity of produce?

To all these various considerations, I may add another which flows from, and which reinforces them, that is, that hot countries need fewer inhabitants than cold countries, and can feed more — which provides a double surplus to the advantage of despotism. The wider the area that is occupied by the same number of people, the more difficult revolts become; for the inhabitants cannot get together quickly and secretly, while it is always easy for the government to discover plots and to cut communications. On the other hand, the more a numerous people is packed together, the less easily can the government infringe on the sovereign; popular leaders deliberate as securely in their private rooms as the prince in his council, and the crowd gathers as swiftly in the public squares as the troops in their barracks. It is thus to the advantage of tyrannical government to act over great distances. With the aid of strongpoints to serve as fulcra, its strength increases with distance, on the principle of leverage.[8]

The strength of the people, on the contrary, is effective only if it is concentrated; it evaporates and is lost when it is dispersed, just as gunpowder scattered on the ground ignites only grain by grain. The least populous countries are thus the most fitted to tyranny; wild beasts reign only in deserts.

CHAPTER 9
The Signs of a Good Government

WHEN, therefore, one asks what in absolute terms is the best government, one is asking a question which is unanswerable because it is indeterminate; or alternatively one might say that there are as many good answers as there are possible combinations in the absolute and relative positions of peoples.

But if it is asked by what signs one can tell whether a given people is well or badly governed, that is another matter; and as a question of fact it could be answered.

Even so, it is not really answered, because everyone will want to answer it in his own way. Subjects prize public tranquillity; citizens the freedom of the individual — the former prefer security of possessions, the latter security of person; subjects think the best government is the most severe, citizens that it is the mildest; the former want crimes to be punished, the latter want them prevented; subjects think it is a good thing to be feared by their neighbours, citizens prefer to be ignored by them; the former are satisfied so long as money circulates, the latter demand that the people shall have bread. But even if there were agreement on these and suchlike points, should we be any more advanced? Moral dimensions have no precise standard of measurement; even if we could agree about signs, how should we agree on their value?

For myself, I am always astonished that people should fail to recognize so simple a sign, or be so insincere as not to accept it as such. What is the object of any political association? It is the protection and the prosperity of its members. And what is the surest evidence that they are so protected and prosperous? The numbers of their population. Then do not look beyond this much debated evidence. All other things being equal, the government under which, without external aids like naturalization and immigration, the citizens increase and multiply most, is infallibly the best government. That under which the people diminishes and wastes away is the worst. Statisticians, this is your problem: count, measure, compare.[9]

CHAPTER 10
The Abuse of Government and its Tendency to Degenerate

JusT as the particular will acts unceasingly against the general will, so does the government continually exert itself against the sovereign. And the more this exertion increases, the more the constitution changes for the worse, and, as in this case there is no distinct corporate will to resist the will of the prince and so to balance it, sooner or later it is inevitable that the prince will oppress the sovereign and break the social treaty. This is the inherent and inescapable defect which, from the birth of the political body, tends relentlessly to destroy it, just as old age and death destroy the body of a man.

There are two common ways by which a government degenerates — when it itself contracts and when the state dissolves.

The government contracts when its members pass from a greater to a smaller number, that is, from democracy to aristocracy, or from aristocracy to royal government. This is its natural tendency.[10] If it were to move in the other direction from a smaller number to a greater, the government might be said to slacken; but such an inverse progression is impossible.

For indeed, a government never changes its form unless its exhausted energies are too feeble to maintain its original form. If it slackened while expanding, its strength would be absolutely null, and it would be even less likely to survive. It must therefore wind up and tighten the mechanism as it begins to slacken, for otherwise the state which depends on it will fall into ruin.

The dissolution of the state may take place in two ways.

First it takes place when the prince ceases to administer the state according to the law and usurps the sovereign power. Then a remarkable change occurs; for it is not the government but the state which contracts — by which I mean that the state as a whole is dissolved and another is formed inside it, one composed only of members of the government and having no significance for the rest of the people except that of a master and a tyrant, so that the moment the government usurps sovereignty, the social pact is broken, and all the ordinary citizens, recovering by right their natural freedom, are compelled by force, but not morally obliged, to obey.

The same situation occurs when the members of the government separately usurp the power which they ought only to exercise as a body; for this is no less an infraction of the law, and it produces an even greater disorder. For then there are, so to speak, as many princes as there are magistrates, and the state being no less divided than the government, perishes or changes its form.

When the state is dissolved, the abuse of government, whatever it may be, takes the general name of anarchy. More precisely democracy degenerates into ochlocracy, aristocracy into oligarchy, and I would add that royal government degenerates into tyranny, except that this last word is ambiguous and requires explanation.

In the commonly understood sense, a tyrant is a king who governs by force and without regard to justice and the law. In the exact sense, a tyrant is an individual who arrogates to himself royal authority without having any right to it. It is thus that the Greeks understood the word 'tyrant'. They applied it indiscriminately to good and bad princes whenever their authority was not legitimate.[11] Thus tyrant and usurper are perfectly syonymous words. To give different names to different things, I call a usurper of royal authority a 'tyrant' and the usurper of the sovereign power a 'despot'. The tyrant is one who intrudes, contrary to law, to govern according to the law; the despot is one who puts himself above the law. Thus the tyrant need not be a despot, but a despot is always a tyrant.

CHAPTER 11
The Death of the Body Politic

SUCH is the natural and inevitable tendency of the best constituted governments. If Sparta and Rome perished, what state can hope to last for ever? If we wish, then, to set up a lasting constitution, let us not dream of making it eternal. We can succeed only if we avoid attempting the impossible and flattering ourselves that we can give to the work of man a durability that does not belong to human things.

The body politic, no less than the body of a man, begins to die as soon as it is born, and bears within itself the causes of its own destruction. Either kind of body may have a constitution of greater or less robustness, fitted to preserve it for a longer or shorter time. The constitution of a man is the work of nature; that of the state is the work of artifice. It is not within the capacity of men to prolong their own lives, but it is within the capacity of men to prolong the life of the state as far as possible by giving it the best constitution it can have. And although even the best constitution will come to an end, it will do so later than any other, unless some unforeseen hazard fells it before its time.

The principle of political life dwells in the sovereign authority. The legislative power is the heart of the state, the executive power is the brain, which sets all the parts in motion. The brain may become paralysed and the individual still live. A man can be an imbecile and survive, but as soon as his heart stops functioning, the creature is dead.

It is not through the law that the state keeps alive; it is through the legislative power. Yesterday's law is not binding today, but silence gives a presumption of tacit consent and the sovereign is taken to confirm in perpetuity the laws it does not abrogate while it has power to abrogate them. Everything which it has once declared to be its will, it wills always — at least until it issues a revocation.

Why then do ancient laws command so much respect? Precisely because they are ancient. We must believe that it is only the excellence of such laws that has enabled them to last so long; if the sovereign had not continually recognized them as salutary, they would have been revoked a thousand times. This is why the laws, far from growing weaker, constantly gain new strength in every well-constituted state; the prejudice in favour of antiquity makes them every day more revered; in those cases, on the other hand, where the laws become weaker with age, this shows that there is no longer any legislative power and that the state is dead.

CHAPTER 12

How the Sovereign Authority Maintains Itself

THE sovereign, having no other force than the legislative power, acts only through the laws, and since the laws are nothing other than authentic acts of the general will, the sovereign can act only when the people is assembled. The people assembled, it will be said — what an illusion! It is indeed an illusion today; but two thousand years ago it was not. Has human nature so much changed?

The boundaries of the possible in the moral realm are less narrow than we think; it is our own weaknesses, our vices and our prejudices that limit them. Base minds do not believe in great men; low slaves jeer in mockery at the word 'freedom'.

In the light of what has been done, let us consider what can be done. I shall not speak of the ancient republics of Greece; but the Roman Republic was, it seems to me, a large state and the town of Rome a large town: the last census gave four hundred thousand men in Rome carrying arms, and the last census calculation under the Empire more than four million citizens without counting subjects, foreigners, women, children or slaves.

One would suppose that it must have been difficult to bring together frequently the numerous people of the capital and its surroundings. In fact, very few weeks passed without the Roman people being assembled, even several times in one week. This people not only exercised the rights of sovereignty, but also a part of the government. It dealt with certain business; it tried certain cases; and the entire people in the public assemblies enacted the role of magistrate almost as often as that of citizen.

Looking back to the earliest history of nations, we notice that the majority of ancient governments, even monarchical ones like those of the Macedonians and the Franks, had similar assemblies. In any case, the one indisputable fact I have cited answers our question; it seems to me good logic to reason from the actual to the possible.

CHAPTER 13
The Same — Continued

IT is not enough that the assembled people should have once determined the constitution of the state by giving sanction to a body of laws; it is not enough that it should set up a perpetual government, or that it should have provided once and for all for the election of magistrates. In addition to the extraordinary assemblies that unforeseen events may necessitate, there must be fixed and periodic assemblies which nothing can abolish or prorogue, so that on the appointed day the people is rightfully summoned by the law itself without any further formal convocation being needed.

But apart from these assemblies which are lawful by their date alone, any assembly of the people which has not been summoned by the magistrate appointed for that duty and according to the prescribed form must be held to be unlawful, and everything it does must be void, for the order to assemble should itself emanate from the law.

As to whether legitimate assemblies should be more or less frequent, this depends on so many circumstances that one cannot lay down in advance any precise rules. One can only say that in general the more strength the government has, the more frequently the sovereign should meet in assemblies.

This, I shall be told, may be good for one single town, but what is to be done if the state consists of several towns? Is the sovereign authority to be divided? Or should it be concentrated in one single town holding the others as subject? I answer that neither the one thing nor the other should be done. In the first place, the sovereign authority is simply one single unit; it cannot be divided without being destroyed. In the second place, a town cannot legitimately be subject to another any more than a nation may be, because the essence of the political body lies in the union of freedom and obedience so that the words 'subject' and 'sovereign' are identical correlatives, the meaning of which is brought together in the single word 'citizen'.

I should answer further that it is always an evil to unite several towns in one nation, and whoever wishes to form such a union should not flatter himself that the natural disadvantages can be avoided. It is no use complaining about the evils of a large state to someone who wants only small ones. But how are small states to be given enough strength to resist large states, as the Greek cities once resisted a great king and as, more recently, Holland and Switzerland resisted the House of Austria?

Nevertheless, if the state cannot be limited to reasonable boundaries, there remains one remedy, and that is to have no fixed capital, but to move the seat of government from one place to another and to assemble the estates of the country in each in turn.

People the territory evenly, extend the same rights to everyone, carry the same abundance and life into every quarter — it is by these means that the state will become at once the strongest and the best governed that is possible. Remember that the walls of towns are made only from the debris of rural houses. Every time I see a mansion being built in the capital I fancy I can see the whole countryside covered with hovels.

CHAPTER 14
The Same — Continued

THE moment the people is lawfully assembled as a sovereign body all jurisdiction of the government ceases; the executive power is suspended, and the person of the humblest citizen is as sacred and inviolable as that of the highest magistrate, for in the presence of the represented there is no longer any representation. Most of the disturbances which took place in the Roman assemblies were the result of this rule being either unknown or neglected. The consuls were no more than the presidents of the people; the tribunes were mere speakers;[12] the senate was nothing at all.

These intervals of suspension, when the prince recognizes — or ought to recognize — who is superior, are always alarming for princes; and the assemblies of the people, which are the shield of the body politic and the brake on the government, have always been the nightmare of magistrates; hence the latter spare no effort in raising objections, problems, promises to turn the citizens against assemblies. When the citizens are avaricious, cowardly, pusillanimous, and love repose more than freedom, they do not hold out against the redoubled efforts of the government. It is thus that, as the opposing force increases continuously, the sovereign authority atrophies in the end and the majority of republics fall and perish before their time.

But between the sovereign authority and arbitrary government there is sometimes interposed an intermediate power of which we must now speak.

CHAPTER 15
Deputies or Representatives

As soon as public service ceases to be the main concern of the citizens and they come to prefer to serve the state with their purse rather than their person, the state is already close to ruin. Are troops needed to march to war? They pay mercenaries and stay at home. Is it time to go to an assembly? They pay deputies and stay at home. Thanks to laziness and money, they end up with soldiers to enslave the country and deputies to sell it.

It is the bustle of commerce and the crafts, it is the avid thirst for profit, it is effeminacy and the love of comfort that commute personal service for money. Men give up a part of their profits so as to increase the rest at their ease. Use money thus, and you will soon have chains. The word 'finance' is the word of a slave; it is unknown in the true republic. In a genuinely free state, the citizens do everything with their own hands and nothing by means of money; far from paying for exemption from their duties, they would pay to discharge them in person. I am very far from sharing received ideas: I believe that compulsory service is less contrary to liberty than is taxation.

The better the state is constituted, the more does public business take precedence over private in the minds of the citizens. There is indeed much less private business, because the sum of the public happiness furnishes a larger proportion of each individual's happiness, so there remains less for him to seek on his own. In a well-regulated nation, every man hastens to the assemblies; under a bad government, no one wants to take a step to go to them, because no one feels the least interest in what is done there, since it is predictable that the general will will not be dominant, and, in short, because domestic concerns absorb all the individual's attention. Good laws lead men to make better ones; bad laws lead to worse. As soon as someone says of the business of the state — 'What does it matter to me?' — then the state must be reckoned lost.

The cooling-off of patriotism, the activity of private interest, the vastness of states, conquests, the abuse of government — all these have suggested the expedient of having deputies or representatives of the people in the assemblies of the nation. This is what in certain countries they dare to call the third estate — the private interest of two classes being there given first and second place, and the public interest only third place.

Sovereignty cannot be represented, for the same reason that it cannot be alienated; its essence is the general will, and will cannot be represented — either it is the general will or it is something else; there is no intermediate possibility. Thus the people's deputies are not, and could not be, its representatives; they are merely its agents; and they cannot decide anything finally. Any law which the people has not ratified in person is void; it is not law at all. The English people believes itself to be free; it is gravely mistaken; it is free only during the election of Members of Parliament; as soon as the Members are elected, the people is enslaved; it is nothing. In the brief moments of its freedom, the English people makes such a use of that freedom that it deserves to lose it.

The idea of representation is a modern one. It comes to us from feudal government, from that iniquitous and absurd system under which the human race is degraded and which dishonours the name of man. In the republics and even in the monarchies of the ancient world, the people never had representatives; the very word was unknown. It is remarkable in the case of Rome, where the tribunes were so sacred, that no one ever imagined that they might usurp the functions of the people; and in the midst of such a great multitude, they never attempted to pass on their own authority a single plebiscit-@ium. One can judge, however, the embarrassment the crowd sometimes caused from what happened at the time of the Gracchi, when a great part of the citizens voted from the rooftops.

Where rights and freedom are everything, inconveniences are nothing. Among these wise people, everything was given its just measure; the lictors were allowed to do what the tribunes would not have dared to do; the people were not afraid that their lictors would wish to represent them.

To explain how, even so, the tribunes did represent the people, it is enough to consider how the government represents the sovereign. Since the law is nothing other than a declaration of the general will, it is clear that there cannot be representation of the people in the legislative power; but there may and should be such representation in the executive power, which is only the instrument for applying the law. This indicates that if we look carefully, we shall find that very few nations have laws. However that may be, it is certain that the tribunes, having no part of the executive power, could never represent the Roman people by the rights of their own office, but only by usurping those of the senate.

Among the Greeks, all that the people had to do, it did itself; it was continuously assembled in the market place. The Greek people lived in a mild climate; it was not at all avaricious; slaves did the work; its chief concern was its freedom. Without the same advantages, how can the same rights be preserved? Your harsher climate creates more necessities;[13] six months of the year the public places are uninhabitable; your muted tongues cannot make themselves heard in the open air; you care more for your profits than your freedom; and you fear slavery less than you fear poverty.

What? Is freedom to be maintained only with the support of slavery?

Perhaps. The two extremes meet. Everything outside nature has its disadvantages, civil society more than all the rest. There are some situations so unfortunate that one can preserve one's freedom only at the expense of the freedom of someone else; and the citizen can be perfectly free only if the slave is absolutely a slave. Such was the situation of Sparta. You peoples of the modern world, you have no slaves, but you are slaves yourselves; you pay for their liberty with your own. It is in vain that you boast of this preference; I see more cowardice than humanity in it.

I do not mean by all this to suggest that slaves are necessary or that the right of slavery is legitimate, for I have proved the contrary. I simply state the reasons why peoples of the modern world, believing themselves to be free, have representatives, and why peoples of the ancient world did not. However that may be, the moment a people adopts representatives it is no longer free; it no longer exists.

All things carefully considered, I do not see how it will be possible henceforth among people like us for the sovereign to maintain the exercise of its rights unless the republic is very small. But if it is very small, will it not be subjugated? No. I shall show later[14] how the defensive strength of a large people can be combined with the free government and good order of a small state.

CHAPTER 16

That the Institution of the Government is not a Contract

ONCE the legislative power is well established, it remains to establish similarly the executive power; for the latter, which operates only by particular acts, is essentially different from the former, and is naturally separate from it. If it were possible for the sovereign, considered as such, to have the executive power, then the de jure and the de facto would be so confused that people would no longer know what was law and what was not; and the body politic, thus perverted, would soon fall prey to that very violence it was instituted to prevent.

The citizens being all equal by the social contract, all may prescribe what all must do, instead of nobody having a right to demand that another shall do what he does not do himself. For it is precisely this right, indispensable for giving life and movement to the body politic, that the sovereign gives to the prince in instituting the government.

Several theorists have claimed that this act of institution is a contract between the people and the magistrates it sets over itself, a contract which stipulates between the two parties the conditions under which the one undertakes to command and the other to obey. It will be admitted, I am sure, that this is a strange way of contracting. But let us see if the theory is tenable.

First, the supreme authority can no more be modified than it can be alienated; to limit it is to destroy it. It is absurd and self-contradictory that the sovereign should give itself a superior; to undertake to obey a master would be to return to absolute freedom.

Furthermore, it is clear that this contract of the people with such or such persons would be a particular act. From this it follows that this contract could not be a law, or an act of sovereignty, and hence that it would be illegitimate.

We see further that the contracting parties would, between themselves, be subject only to natural law, and so without any guarantee of their reciprocal commitments — and this is wholly contrary to the civil state. Since the man who has force in his hand is always the master of what shall be done, this is like giving the name of 'contract' to the act of a man who says to another: 'I give you all my property on condition that you give me back what you please.'

There is only one contract in the state: that of the association itself, and this excludes all others. One cannot imagine any public contract that would not be a violation of the original contract.

CHAPTER 17
The Institution of the Government

IN what conceptual terms then should we think of the act by which the government is instituted? I shall explain first that this act is complex, or composed of two others, namely the establishment of the law and the execution of the law.

By the first, the sovereign enacts that there shall be a body of government established with such or such form; and it is clear that this act is a law.

By the second, the people names the magistrates who are to be invested with the government thus established. Since this nomination is a particular act, it is not a second law, but simply a sequel to the first and a function of government.

The difficulty is to understand how there can be an act of government before the government exists, and how the people, which is only sovereign or subject, can in certain circumstances become prince or magistrate.

Now it is here once more that the body politic reveals one of those astonishing properties by which it reconciles operations that seem to be contradictory. For this operation is accomplished by the sudden transformation of the sovereignty into democracy in such a way that without undergoing any visible change, and simply through a new relation of all to all, the citizens become magistrates and pass from general acts to particular acts, and from the law to its execution.

This change of relation is not a construction of speculative theory without example in practice; it happens every day in the English parliament, where the lower House on certain occasions transforms itself into a committee of the whole House the better to discuss affairs, and so becomes a simple committee of that sovereign court which it was itself a moment before; then later it reports to itself, in its capacity of House of Commons, on what it has just settled as a committee of the whole House, and again debates under one name what it has already decided under another.

It is the advantage peculiar to democratic government that it can be established in fact by a simple act of the general will. After this, the provisional government remains in office if such is the form adopted, or there is established in the name of the sovereign whatever government is prescribed by the law; and everything is then in order. It is not possible to institute the government in any other legitimate manner, without abandoning the principles established in earlier chapters.

CHAPTER 18
Means of Preventing the Usurpation of Government

FROM these explanations, it follows, in confirmation of Chapter 16, that the act which institutes the government is not a contract but a law, and that the holders of the executive power are not the people's masters but its officers; and that the people can appoint them and dismiss them as it pleases; and that there is no question of their contracting, but of obeying; and that in discharging the functions which the state imposes on them, they are only doing their duty as citizens, without having any sort of right to argue terms.

Thus when it happens that the people institutes a hereditary government, whether monarchical in one family, or aristocratic in a class of citizens, it does not enter into any undertaking; hereditary government is simply a provisional form that it gives to the administration until such time as it pleases to arrange it differently.

It is true that such changes are always dangerous, and that one should never touch an established government unless it has become incompatible with the public welfare; but such circumspection is a precept of politics and not a rule of law; and the state is no more bound to leave civil authority to its magistrates than military authority to its generals.

It is true again that in such cases one cannot observe with too great care all the formalities required to distinguish a correct and legitimate act from a seditious tumult, and the will of a whole people from the clamour of a faction. It is here above all that one must avoid yielding to socially harmful claims any more than is required by the strict application of the law; and it is from this obligation too that the prince derives a great opportunity of holding his power in defiance of the people, without it being possible to say that he has usurped it. For while appearing to exercise only his rights it is very easy for him to enlarge those rights and to prevent, on the pretext of public tranquillity, assemblies designed to re-establish good government; thus he exploits the silence which he prevents men breaking, and the irregularities which he makes them commit, to assume in his own favour the tacit consent of those whose mouths are closed by fear and to punish those who dare to speak. It was thus that the decemvirs, having been first elected for one year, and then continued for another, tried to retain their power in perpetuity, by no longer allowing the comitia to assemble. And it is by this simple means that all the governments of the world, once armed with the public force, sooner or later usurp the sovereign authority.

The periodic assemblies of which I have already spoken are the right means to prevent or postpone this evil, above all those assemblies where no formal convocation is needed; for then the prince cannot prevent their meeting without openly proclaiming himself a violator of the laws and an enemy of the state.

At the opening of these assemblies, of which the only purpose is the maintenance of the social treaty, two motions should be put, motions which may never be annulled and which must be voted separately:

The first: 'Does it please the sovereign to maintain the present form of government?'

The second: 'Does it please the people to leave the administration to those at present charged with it?'

I assume here what I believe I have demonstrated, namely, that there is not in the state any fundamental law which may not be revoked, not even the social pact; for if all the citizens assemble to end this pact by a common accord, one cannot doubt that it is very legitimately ended. Grotius indeed thinks that each citizen may renounce his membership of the state, and recover his natural liberty and his goods on withdrawing from the country.【15】 And it would be absurd if all the citizens united could not do what each of them separately can do.

Note

【1】 Thus in Venice the ruling college is called the Most Serene Prince even when the Doge is not present.

【2】 The Palatine of Posen, father of the King of Poland and Duke of Lorraine.

【3】 Better freedom with danger than peace with slavery.'

【4】 It is clear that the word Optimates, for the ancients, did not mean the best but the strongest.

【5】 It is of the utmost importance that the law should regulate the procedure of election of magistrates, for if this is left to the will of the prince, there will be no avoiding a decline into hereditary aristocracy, as happened in the Republics of Venice and Berne. The first of these two states has long since fallen into decay, while the other preserves itself only by the extreme wisdom of its senate — a very honourable and very dangerous exception to the rule.

【6】 Machiavelli was a gentleman and a good citizen; but being attached to the house of Medici, he was forced during the oppression of his country to disguise his love of liberty. The very choice of an execrable hero reveals his secret intention, and the antithesis between his principles in his book The Prince and those in his Discourses on Livy and The History of Florence proves that this profound political thinker has so far had only superficial or corrupted readers. The Pope's court strictly prohibited his book, which I can well believe, since that was the Court he depicts most plainly.

【7】 'The best as well as the shortest way to find out what is good and what is bad is to consider what you would have wished to happen if someone other than yourself had been Prince.' (Tacitus, History, Book Ⅰ.)

【8】 This does not contradict what I said in Book Ⅱ, Chapter 9, about the disadvantages of a large state, for there I was dealing with the authority of the government over its own members, and here it is a question of the government's strength over the subjects. Its scattered members serve it as so many fulcra to exert pressure on the people from a distance, but it has no such fulcrum to exert pressure on its own members. Thus in the one case the length of the lever is its weakness; in the other, its strength.

【9】 One must judge on the same principle the centuries that merit preference in respect of the prosperity of the human race. People have too much admired those that have witnessed a flourishing of crafts and letters without penetrating the secret purpose of their culture, and without considering its fatal consequences, idque apud imperitos humanitas vocabatur, cum pars servitutis esset. Shall we never see behind the precepts of books the crude self-interest which prompts the authors to speak? No, whatever they may say, when, notwithstanding its brilliance, a country is depopulated, it is simply not true that all is going well; and it is not enough for a poet to have an income of 100,000 livres for his century to be the best of all. It is less important to consider the apparent repose and tranquillity of rulers than the wellbeing of whole nations and above all of the most populous states. A hailstorm may devastate a few cantons, but it rarely causes famine. Riots and civil wars may greatly alarm rulers, but they are not the true misfortunes of peoples, who can at least have a few months' respite during the quarrels as to who is to be the next tyrant. Their calamities and their happiness both arise from their permanent condition. When all remain supine under the yoke, it is then that everything decays, it is then that the rulers can destroy them at their ease, ubi solitudinem faciunt pacem appellant. When the quarrels of the state disturbed the kingdom of France, and the Coadjutor of Paris attended the Parlement with a dagger in his pocket, this did not prevent the French people living happily and multiplying in a free and decent ease. In ancient times, Greece flourished at the height of the cruellest wars; blood flowed in torrents, but the whole country was thickly populated. 'It appeared,' says Machiavelli, 'that in the midst of murder, proscription and civil wars, our republic became stronger than ever; the civil virtue of the citizens, their morals, and their independence, served more effectively to strengthen it than all their dissensions may have done to weaken it.' A little disturbance gives vigour to the soul, and what really makes the species prosper is not peace but freedom.

【10】 The slow formation and progress of the Republic of Venice in its lagoons provides a notable example of this progression; and it is really astonishing that after more than twelve hundred years, the Venetians seem still to be at the second stage, which began with the Serrar di Consiglio in 1198. As for the ancient Doges, for whom the Venetians are reproached, whatever may be said by the squittinio della libertà veneta, there is proof that the Doges were not their sovereigns.

People will not fail to quote against me the case of the Roman Republic, which is said to have followed a reverse sequence, from monarchy to aristocracy and from aristocracy to democracy. But I am very far from sharing this opinion.

The first constitution of Romulus was a mixed government, which promptly degenerated into a despotism. For special reasons, the state perished before its time, just as one sometimes sees an infant die before reaching the age of maturity. The expulsion of the Tarquins was the real moment of the birth of the Republic. But it did not at first assume a fixed form, because the failure to abolish the patriciate left the task half-finished. For the hereditary aristocracy, which is the worst of all legitimate administrations, remained in conflict with democracy, and the form of government, continuously uncertain and wavering, was not fixed (as Machiavelli has proved) until the establishment of the tribunes; only then was there a true government and a true democracy. For indeed the people then was not only sovereign, but also magistrate and judge; and the senate was no more than a subordinate commission to temper and concentrate the government, while the consuls themselves — in spite of their being patricians, chief magistrates and absolute commanders in war — were never more in Rome than presidents of the people.

From that time, the government was seen to follow its natural inclination, and tend strongly towards aristocracy. The patriciate having as it were abolished itself, the aristocracy was no longer seated in the body of the patricians, as in Venice and Genoa, but in the body of the senate composed of patricians and plebeians, even in the body of the tribunes, when they began to usurp the active power. For words do not alter things, and when the people have chiefs who govern on their behalf, this is still an aristocracy no matter what name those persons bear.

The abuse of aristocracy gave birth to civil war and the triumvirate. Sulla, Julius Caesar and Augustus became in fact as good as monarchs, and finally under the despotism of Tiberius the state was dissolved. Roman history, then, does not belie my principle: it confirms it.

【11】 'Omnes enim et habentur et dicuntur Tyranni qui potestate utuntur perpetua, in ea Civitate quae libertate usa est.' ('For all are thought and called tyrants who exercise perpetual power in a city accustomed to freedom.' Cornelius Nepos, Life of Miltiades.) It is true that Aristotle (Nicomachean Ethics, Ⅷ, 10) distinguishes between a tyrant and a king, saying the former governs for his own advantage while the latter governs only for the advantage of his subjects; but in addition to the fact that in general all the Greek authors used the word 'tyrant' in another sense, as we see above all in the Hiero of Xenophon, it would follow from Aristotle's criterion, that there had never yet been a single king since the beginning of the world.

【12】 The word is used here somewhat in the sense it has in the English parliament. The resemblance between these functions would have caused conflict between the Consuls and the Tribunes, even if all jurisdiction had been suspended.

【13】 To adopt in cold countries the luxury and softness of the orientals is to ask to have their chains, to make submission even more inevitable than theirs.

【14】 This is what I intended to do in the remaining part of this work, when, in dealing with foreign relations, I should have come to the subject of confederations. This subject is entirely new, and its principles have yet to be established.

【15】 It being understood that none may leave the country to evade his duty, or avoid saving his country when it needs him. In such a case, flight would be criminal and punishable; it would not be withdrawal but desertion.

Book Ⅳ

CHAPTER 1
That the General Will is Indestructible

So long as several men assembled together consider themselves a single body, they have only one will, which is directed towards their common preservation and general well-being. Then all the animating forces of the state are vigorous and simple; its principles are clear and luminous; it has no incompatible or conflicting interests; the common good makes itself so manifestly evident that only common sense is needed to discern it. Peace, unity, equality are enemies of political sophistication. Upright and simple men are difficult to deceive precisely because of their simplicity; strategems and clever arguments do not prevail upon them; they are not indeed subtle enough to be dupes. When we see among the happiest people in the world bands of peasants regulating the affairs of state under an oak tree, and always acting wisely, can we help feeling a certain contempt for the refinements of other nations, which employ so much skill and mystery to make themselves at once illustrious and wretched?

A state thus governed needs very few laws, and whenever there is a need to promulgate new ones, that need is universally seen. The first man to propose such a law is only giving voice to what everyone already feels, and there is no question either of intrigues or of eloquence to secure the enactment of what each has already resolved to do as soon as he is sure that all the others will do likewise.

What misleads theorists is that, as a result of looking only at states which are badly constituted from the beginning, they are struck by the impossibility of maintaining such a régime there. They laugh at the thought of all the follies that a clever knave or a sly orator could persuade the people of Paris or London to commit. They do not realize that Cromwell would have been put to forced labour by the people of Berne, and the Duc de Beaufort imprisoned by the Genevese.

However, when the social tie begins to slacken and the state to weaken, when particular interests begin to make themselves felt and sectional societies begin to exert an influence over the greater society, the common interest becomes corrupted and meets opposition; voting is no longer unanimous; the general will is no longer the will of all; contradictions and disputes arise; and even the best opinion is not allowed to prevail unchallenged.

In the end, when the state, on the brink of ruin, can maintain itself only in an empty and illusory form, when the social bond is broken in every heart, when the meanest interest impudently flaunts the sacred name of the public good, then the general will is silenced: everyone, animated by secret motives, ceases to speak as a citizen any more than as if the state had never existed; and the people enacts in the guise of laws iniquitous decrees which have private interests as their only end.

Does it follow from this that the general will is annihilated or corrupted? No, that is always unchanging, incorruptible and pure, but it is subordinated to other wills which prevail over it. Each man, in detaching his interest from the common interest, sees clearly that he cannot separate it entirely, but his share of the public evil seems to him to be nothing compared to the exclusive good he seeks to make his own. Where his private good is not concerned, he wills the general good in his own interest as eagerly as anyone else. Even in selling his vote for money, he does not extinguish the general will in himself; he evades it. The fault he commits is to change the form of the question, and to answer something different from what is asked him; so that instead of saying, with his vote, 'It is advantageous to the state', he says, 'It is advantageous to this man or to that party that such or such a proposal should be adopted.' For this reason the sensible rule for regulating public assemblies is one intended not so much to uphold the general will there as to ensure that it is always questioned and always responds.

I might say a great deal here about the simple right of voting in every act of sovereignty, a right of which nothing can deprive citizens, and also about the right of speaking, proposing, dividing and debating — a right which the government always takes great care to assign only to its own members — but this important subject would require a separate treatise, and I cannot put everything in this one.

CHAPTER 2
The Suffrage

IT will be evident from what has been said in the preceding chapter that the manner in which public affairs are conducted gives a sufficiently accurate indication of the moral character and the state of health of the body politic. The greater harmony that reigns in the public assemblies, the more, in other words, that public opinion approaches unanimity, the more the general will is dominant; whereas long debates, dissensions and disturbances bespeak the ascendance of particular interests and the decline of the state.

This will seem less evident when two or several orders enter into the constitution, as in Rome with its patricians and plebeians, whose quarrels often disturbed the comitia even in the finest days of the Republic; but this exception to the rule is more apparent than real, for in Rome, as a result of an inherent defect in the body politic, there were, in a manner of speaking, two states in one, and what is not true of both together is true of each separately. And, indeed, even in the most tumultuous times, the plebiscites of the people always proceeded peacefully when the senate did not interfere, and votes were given with large majorities. The citizens having only one interest, the people had only one will.

At the other extreme of the cycle, unanimity reappears. This is when the citizens, lapsed into servitude, have no longer either freedom or will. Then fear and flattery change voting into acclamation; people no longer deliberate, they worship or they curse. Such was the shameful manner in which the senate gave voice to its opinions under the emperors. Sometimes it did so with absurd precautions. Tacitus mentions that under Otho, the senators covered Vitellius with execrations, but took care at the same time to make a deafening noise, so that Vitellius would not be able to distinguish what each one of them had said, lest he should ever by any chance become master.

These various considerations suggest the principles by which the counting of votes and the comparing of opinions should be arranged, depending on whether the general will is more or less easy to recognize, and on whether the state is more or less in decline.

There is only one law which by its nature requires unanimous assent. This is the social pact: for the civil association is the most voluntary act in the world; every man having been born free and master of himself, no one else may under any pretext whatever subject him without his consent. To assert that the son of a slave is born a slave is to assert that he is not born a man.

If, then, there are opposing voices at the time when the social pact is made, this opposition does not invalidate the contract; it merely excludes the dissentients; they are foreigners among the citizens. After the state is instituted, residence implies consent: to inhabit the territory is to submit to the sovereign.[1]

Apart from this original contract, the votes of the greatest number always bind the rest; and this is a consequence of the contract itself. Yet it may be asked how a man can be at once free and forced to conform to wills which are not his own. How can the opposing minority be both free and subject to laws to which they have not consented?

I answer that the question is badly formulated. The citizen consents to all the laws, even to those that are passed against his will, and even to those which punish him when he dares to break any one of them. The constant will of all the members of the state is the general will; it is through it that they are citizens and free.[2] When a law is proposed in the people's assembly, what is asked of them is not precisely whether they approve of the proposition or reject it, but whether it is in conformity with the general will which is theirs; each by giving his vote gives his opinion on this question, and the counting of votes yields a declaration of the general will. When, therefore, the opinion contrary to my own prevails, this proves only that I have made a mistake, and that what I believed to be the general will was not so. If my particular opinion had prevailed against the general will, I should have done something other than what I had willed, and then I should not have been free.

This presupposes, it is true, that all the characteristics of the general will are still to be found in the majority; when these cease to be there, no matter what position men adopt, there is no longer any freedom.

When I showed earlier in this essay how particular wills come to take the place of the general will in public deliberations, I made sufficiently clear what practical means may prevent that abuse, and I shall return to this subject later. As for the proportional number of votes required to declare the general will, I have also set forth the principles by which that number can be determined. A difference of a single vote destroys an equal division; a single opposing voice destroys unanimity; but between unanimity and an equal division there are numerous unequal divisions, and the desired proportion can be fixed at any of these points in accordance with the condition and on the needs of the body politic.

Two general maxims may serve to determine these ratios: the first, that the more important and serious the matter to be decided, the closer should the opinion which is to prevail approach unanimity; the second, the swifter the decision the question demands, the smaller the prescribed majority may be allowed to become; and in decisions which have to be given immediately, a majority of one must suffice. The first of these maxims might seem to be more suited to the enactment of laws, the second to the dispatch of administrative business. At all events, it is by a combination of the two maxims that we can determine the right size for the majority that is to decide on any question.

CHAPTER 3
Elections

ELECTIONS of the prince and magistrates, which are, as I have said, complex acts, can be arranged in two ways, by choice or by lot. Both means have been employed in different republics, and a very complicated mixture of the two can still be seen in the election of the Doge of Venice. 'Election by lot,' says Montesquieu, 'is natural to democracy.' I agree. But why is this so? 'Drawing lots,' he continues, 'is a method of election that wounds no one and gives every citizen a reasonable hope of serving his country.' But these are not good reasons.

If we remember that the election of magistrates is a function of government and not of sovereignty, we shall see why the method of lot is natural to democracy, where the administration is all the better in proportion as its acts are fewer.

In every true democracy, magistrature is not a privilege but a heavy responsibility, so that it cannot justly be imposed on one man rather than another. The law alone can impose this burden on the man to whom the lot falls. For in this case, since the conditions are equal for all and the choice does not depend on any human will, the universality of the law is not distorted by any particular application.

In an aristocracy the prince chooses the prince, the government perpetuates itself by its own actions; and then election by choice is appropriate.

The example of the election of the Doge of Venice, far from undermining this distinction, confirms it: such a mixed form suits a mixed government. It is a mistake to regard the government of Venice as a genuine aristocracy. For while the Venetian people has no part in the government, the Venetian nobility is itself a people. A multitude of poor Barnabites never comes near any magistrature, and its nobility rests on the empty title of Excellency and the right to attend the Great Council. And since this Great Council is as numerous as our General Council in Geneva, its illustrious members have no more privileges than our plain citizens. Hence there is no doubt that, apart from the extreme disparity between the two republics, the bourgeoisie of Geneva corresponds precisely to the patriciate of Venice; our natives and inhabitants correspond to the townsmen and the people of Venice, and our peasants to their subjects on the mainland; to sum up, from whatever point of view the Venetian Republic is considered, apart from its size, its government is no more aristocratic than our own. The whole difference lies in the fact that we have no head of state who holds office for life, and so we have not the same need for the method of election by lot.

Election by lot would have few disadvantages in a true democracy, for where all men were equal in character and talent as well as in principles and fortune, it would hardly matter who was chosen. But as I have already said, no true democracy exists.

When election by choice and election by lot are both employed, choice should be used to fill places that call for special skills, such as military commands, and lot for those where common sense, justice and integrity are enough, as in the case of political offices, for in a well-constituted state, such qualities are found among all the citizens.

Under monarchical government, neither election by lot nor election by choice has any place. Since the monarch is by right the sole prince and only magistrate, the choice of his lieutenants belongs to him alone. When the Abbé de St Pierre proposed to increase the Councils of the King of France and have their members elected by ballot, he did not realize that he was proposing to change the form of government!

I have yet to speak of the method of voting and collecting votes in the people's assembly, but perhaps the history of the Roman system would serve to demonstrate more forcefully all the principles that I might myself set forth. It will not be beneath the dignity of a thoughtful reader to consider in some detail how public and private business was conducted in an assembly of two hundred thousand men.

CHAPTER 4
The Roman Comitia

WE have no trustworthy records of the early history of Rome, and there is every likelihood that most of the tales we are told are fables;[3] indeed, in general, that most instructive part of the annals of peoples, which is the history of their institution, is the part we most lack. Experience teaches us daily the causes of revolutions in empires, but as peoples are no longer instituted, we have nothing better than conjecture to explain how they were once instituted.

The customs that we find established show at least that such customs must have had an origin. Traditions that recall these origins, that are supported by the best authorities, and confirmed by the best reasons, should pass for the most certain. Such are the principles I have tried to follow in enquiring how the freest and strongest people of the world exercised its supreme power.

After the foundation of Rome, the new-born Republic — that is, the founder's army, made up of Albans, Sabines and foreigners — was divided into three classes, which acquired by this division the name of tribes. Each of these tribes was further divided into ten curiae, and each curia subdivided into decuriae, with chiefs named curiones and decuriones placed at their head.

In addition to this, there was drawn from each tribe a body of a hundred equites or knights, called a century, which indicates that these divisions, hardly necessary in a city, were in the first place purely military. But it seems that an instinct for greatness led this little town of Rome to provide itself from the outset with a system well suited to the capital of the world.

However, this original division soon had one disadvantageous consequence. The tribes of Albans and Sabines remained constant, while the tribe of foreigners grew continuously as more foreigners were recruited, and it soon contained more members than the other two tribes combined. The remedy that Servius found for this dangerous fault was to alter the basis of the division, and in place of the racial distinction, which he abolished, he introduced one based on the district of the town occupied by each of the tribes. Instead of three tribes, he set up four, each occupying one of the hills of Rome and bearing its name. Thus he both corrected an existing inequality and forestalled any future inequality; and to ensure that the division should be one of men and not of places, he forbade the inhabitants of one district to move to another, and so prevented the races from merging together.

He also doubled the three original centuries of equites and added twelve new ones, but he let them keep their former names — a shrewd and simple means by which he succeeded in distinguishing the body of knights from that of the people without making the latter complain.

To these four urban tribes, Servius added fifteen others which were called rustic tribes, because they were formed of inhabitants of the country, arranged in so many cantons. Afterwards as many new tribes were formed, and the Roman people found itself divided into thirty-five tribes, a number which remained unchanged until the end of the Republic.

This distinction between tribes of the town and tribes of the country had one consequence worth noting since there is no other instance of it, and since Rome was indebted to it both for the preservation of her morals and for the growth of her empire. It might have been thought that the urban tribes would have soon monopolized the power and the honours and have been quick to diminish the standing of the rustic tribes. What happened was the contrary. The taste of the early Romans for a country life is well known. This taste came from their wise founder, who made freedom go together with rural labour and military service and, in a manner of speaking, relegated crafts, trades, intrigue, wealth and slavery to the city.

Since all the illustrious men in Rome thus lived in the country and cultivated the land, it became customary to look to the country for the mainstays of the Republic. And as this way of life was that of the most noble patricians, it was honoured by everyone; the simple and laborious life of villagers was preferred to the loose and idle life of the Roman bourgeois, and a man who would have been nothing but a miserable proletarian in the town became as a tiller of the soil a respected citizen. It was not without reason, says Varro, that our magnanimous ancestors established in the village the nursery of those robust and valiant men who defended them in time of war and nourished them in time of peace. Pliny states positively that the rustic tribes were honoured because of the men who belonged to them, and that whenever it was intended to degrade a coward, he was transferred in disgrace to one of the urban tribes. When Appius Claudius, the Sabine, came to set himself up in Rome, he was loaded with honours and inscribed as a member of a rustic tribe which afterwards took the name of his family. Finally, all the freed men joined the urban and never the rustic tribes, and throughout the Republic there was not a single example of any one of these freed men acceding to any magistrature, even though he had become a citizen.

This principle was excellent; but it was pushed so far that it finally produced an alteration, and certainly an abuse in the political system.

First, the censors, having long arrogated to themselves the right arbitrarily to transfer citizens from one tribe to another, allowed most men to enrol in the tribe of their choice, a concession which certainly did no good and which deprived the censorship of one of its great advantages. Moreover, the exalted and powerful men all had themselves enrolled in the rustic tribes, and the freed men remained with the common people in the urban tribes, so that the tribes generally ceased to have any local or territorial bases, and all were so muddled together that it was no longer possible to identify anyone without consulting the register; and this is why the word tribe came to have a personal instead of a territorial meaning, or rather came to be virtually fictitious.

It also came about that the urban tribes, being closer to the centre, often found themselves the strongest group in the comitia, and sold the state to such as deigned to buy the votes of the rabble who composed that assembly.

As for the curiae, since the founder had created ten in each tribe, the whole of the Roman people, at that time enclosed within the walls of the city, was composed of thirty curiae, each with its own temples, its Gods, its officials, its priests and its festivals called compitalia, which resembled the Paganalia later held by the rustic tribes.

When Servius introduced his new division, this number of thirty could not be divided equally between his four tribes, and he did not wish to alter it; in conse quence, the curiae, becoming independent of the tribes, formed another category of inhabitants of Rome. But there was no question of curiae in the rustic tribes or among the people who belonged to them; for after the tribes had become a purely civil institution, and another system introduced for the levying of troops, the military divisions of Romulus proved superfluous. Thus, although each citizen was enrolled in a tribe, there were many who were not members of a curia.

Servius made yet a third division, which had nothing to do with the first two, and which became by reason of its consequences the most important of all. He distributed the whole Roman people into six classes, arranged neither on a personal nor on a residential basis, but according to wealth; so that the first classes were filled with the rich, the last with the poor, and the intermediate classes with men of moderate fortunes. These six classes were subdivided into 193 other bodies called centuries, and these bodies were so distributed that the first class accounted for more than half of them, and the last class for a single one only. Thus it came about that the class with the fewest number of men had the greatest number of centuries, while the last whole class counted only as one single subdivision, although it contained more than half the inhabitants of Rome.

In order that the people should less well perceive the consequences of this division, Servius disguised it in a military form; he put into the second class two centuries of armourers and into the fourth class two centuries of weapon-makers. In each class, except the last, he differentiated between young and old, that is to say, between those liable to bear arms and those legally exempt on grounds of age; and this distinction, more than that of wealth, made it necessary to hold frequent censuses. Finally he prescribed that the assembly should be held in the Campus Martius, and that all those of military age should attend bearing arms.

The reason he did not make the same differentiation between young and old in the last class is simply that the common people who belonged to it did not have the honour of bearing arms in the service of their country; only those who owned hearths had the right to defend them. Among the countless hordes of beggars who ornament the armies of kings today there is perhaps none who would not have been expelled with disdain from a Roman cohort in the days when soldiers were the defenders of liberty.

In the last class, however, a distinction was made between proletarians and those who were called capite censi. The former, not wholly reduced to nothing, at least gave citizens to the state, even sometimes soldiers in times of pressing need. But those who possessed nothing whatever, and could be reckoned only by the counting of heads, were considered to be nonentities, and Marius was the first who condescended to enrol them.

Without deciding here whether this third classification was good or bad in itself, one can, I think, safely say that it was practicable only because of the simple habits of the early Romans, their taste for agriculture, and their contempt alike for commerce and for the pursuit of profit. Where is the modern people, whose devouring greed, unsettled hearts, intrigue, continual movement and constant reversals of fortune would have allowed such a system to last for twenty years without overturning the whole state? It should also be remembered that the morals of the Roman people and the office of censorship had the strength to correct the evils of this system, and that a rich man could find himself relegated to the class of the poor for making too ostentatious a display of his wealth.

From all this it is easy to understand why more than five Roman classes are hardly ever mentioned, even though there were actually six. The sixth, which provided neither soldiers for the army nor voters for the Campus

Martius[4] and had therefore virtually no function in the Republic, was seldom given any thought.

Such were the different divisions of the Roman people. Let us now consider the effect the divisions had in the assemblies. The assemblies which were lawfully convened were called comitia, and generally met in the Roman forum or in the Campus Martius; they were distinguished as comitia curiata, comitia centuriata and comitia tributa, according to which form was employed. The comitia curiata was founded by Romulus, the comitia centuriata by Servius, and the comitia tributa originated in the tribunes of the people. No law was sanctioned and no magistrate elected except in the comitia, and as there was no citizen who was not enrolled in a curia, century or tribe, it follows that no citizen was excluded from the right to vote, and that the Roman people was truly sovereign, both in law and in fact.

For the comitia to be legally convened and for its decisions to have the force of law, three conditions had to be observed: first, the body or the magistrate convening the assembly had to be vested with the necessary authority; secondly, the assembly had to be held on one of the days permitted by law; thirdly, the auguries had to be favourable.

The reason for the first of these rules needs no explanation. The second was a matter of policy; the assembly was not allowed to meet on holidays or market days, because the country people, who came to Rome to do business, did not have time to spend the day in the forum. The third rule enabled the Senate to keep a restraining hand on a proud and restless people and temper the ardour of seditious tribunes — although the latter found more than one way of evading this check.

Laws and the election of chiefs were not the only matters submitted to the judgement of the comitia. Since the Roman people had usurped the most important functions of government, one could say that the fate of Europe was determined in those assemblies. The variety of public business explains the several forms which the comitia took, according to the matters which had to be decided.

To judge these various forms it is necessary only to compare them. Romulus, in establishing the curiae, aimed to balance the Senate against the people and balance the people against the Senate, while himself dominating both alike. Under this arrangement he gave the people all the authority of numbers to balance the authority of power and wealth which he left to the patricians. But true to the spirit of monarchy, he nevertheless gave the great advantage to the patricians, in that they could buy clients to influence numerical majorities. This admirable institution of patrons and clients was a masterpiece of politics and humanity, without which the patriciate, so contrary to the spirit of the Republic, could not have survived. To Rome alone belongs the honour of giving the world this noble example, from which no abuse has ever come, but which has never been followed elsewhere.

This same form of curiae continued under the kings up to Servius, and as the reign of the last of the Tarquins was not held to be legitimate, the royal laws were generally known by the name of leges curiatae.

Under the Republic, the curiae, which were still limited to the four urban tribes, and still included only the population of Rome, pleased neither the Senate, which led the patricians, nor the tribunes who, in spite of being plebeian, led the more moneyed citizens. Thus the curiae fell into discredit, fell so low indeed that their thirty lictors met to do what the comitia curiae should have done.

The division into centuries was so favourable to the aristocracy that it is not at first easy to see why the Senate did not always carry the day in the comitia which bore that name, and by which the consuls, censors and other cural magistrates were elected. For indeed, of the 193 centuries which formed the six classes of the entire Roman people, the first class contained ninety-eight, and since votes were counted by centuries only, this first class had a majority over all the others. When all these centuries were in agreement, the rest of the votes were not even counted; and what had been decided by a minority passed for a decision of the multitude; so it can be said that in the centuriate assemblies matters were decided by majorities of money rather than of votes.

But this excessive power was tempered in two ways. First, the tribunes ordinarily, and a large number of plebeians always, were in a class with the rich, and balanced the influence of the patricians in the first class.

Secondly, the centuries were not always summoned to vote in their order or rank, which would have meant beginning with the first class; instead, a century was chosen by lot[5] and that century alone went on to elect, after which the other centuries were convened on a different day by order of rank to repeat the election, and generally they confirmed it. Thus the authority of example was taken away from rank and given to chance, according to the principle of democracy.

This custom had yet another advantage; it meant that the citizens from the country had time between the elections to inform themselves of the merits of the candidates provisionally nominated, and therefore did not vote in ignorance. But under the pretext of speeding up procedure this custom was finally abolished, and both elections were held on the same day.

The comitia tributa was, strictly speaking, the council of the Roman people. It could be convened only by the tribunes; it was the assembly where the tribunes were elected and it was there that they passed their plebiscites. Not only had the Senate no status in the assembly, but no senator had even the right to attend, and being thus forced to submit to laws in the enactment of which they had no voice, the senators were to that extent less free than the humblest citizen. This injustice was altogether ill conceived, and alone sufficed to invalidate the decrees of a body to which all its members were not admitted. Had all the patricians attended the comitia, according to their rights as citizens, they would not, as simple individuals, have had any great influence on a vote taken by enumerating heads, and in which the humblest proletarian would count for as much as the prince of the Senate.

Thus, it will be seen that besides the order which emerged from the various systems of collecting the votes of so vast a people, these several methods were not in themselves insignificant, but that each had effects connected with the opinions that led to its being chosen.

Without going further into long details, it emerges from the explanation already given, that the comitia tributa was the assembly most favourable to popular government and the comitia centuriata to aristocracy. In the case of the comitia curiata, where the populace of Rome alone formed the majority, their tendency to favour tyranny and evil designs led them to fall into disrepute, so that even the seditious elements avoided these assemblies lest their presence should arouse suspicion concerning their conspiracies. There is no doubt that the whole majesty of the Roman people was to be seen only in the comitia centuriata; this alone was a full assembly, for the comitia curiata excluded the rustic tribes and the comitia tributa excluded the Senate and patricians.

The system of voting used by the Romans was as simple as were their manners and morals, if less simple than that of Sparta. Each man gave his vote by word of mouth, and a clerk recorded it; the majority of individual votes in each tribe determined the decision of that tribe, the majority of tribal votes the decision of the people; and the same thing was done in the curiae and centuriae. This was a good method so long as honesty prevailed among the citizens and everyone was ashamed to give his vote in public to an unjust cause or an unworthy candidate. But when the people grew corrupt and votes were bought, it became expedient for the ballot to be cast in secret, so that the buyers of votes might be restrained by mistrust of the sellers, and scoundrels given the chance of not being traitors also.

I am aware that Cicero condemns this change of method, and holds it partly responsible for the ruin of the Republic. But while I am mindful of the weight which the authority of Cicero ought to bear, I do not agree with him. On the contrary, I think that it was by having too few such changes that the ruin of the state was accelerated. For just as the diet of healthy people is unsuited to the sick, so one should not try to give to a corrupt people the same laws as those which suit a virtuous people. Nothing does more to bear out this principle than the long life of the Republic of Venice, which still retains a simulacrum of existence solely because its laws are uniquely suited to wicked men.

Now the Roman citizens had tablets distributed among them, so that each might cast his vote without anyone's knowing his opinion. New arrangements were also devised for the collection of tablets, the counting of votes, the comparison of numbers, and so forth. This did not prevent the officers entrusted with these functions from being suspected of dishonesty. Finally, edicts designed to prevent intrigue and the buying and selling of votes were passed in such numbers that their very multiplicity proclaims their ineffectiveness.

Towards the last years of the Republic, the Romans were often forced to resort to extraordinary expedients to make up for the inadequacy of the law. Sometimes miracles were invoked, but this device, if it could impose on the people, did not overawe those who ruled them. Sometimes assemblies were hurriedly convened, before candidates had time to pay out their bribes; sometimes a whole session was taken up with filibustering, when it was seen that the people had been seduced and was about to make a wrong decision. But ambition in the end overcame all obstacles; and the most incredible fact of all is that so numerous a people, in the midst of so many abuses, still continued, thanks to its ancient rules of order, to elect magistrates, to enact laws, to judge cases and to conduct private and public business with almost as much facility as the Senate itself might have commanded.

A wisely tempered tribunate is the strongest buttress of a good constitution, but if it has the least degree of power beyond what is necessary, it will overthrow everything. It is not by its nature prone to weakness, and if it is anything at all, it will never be less than it ought to be.

It degenerates into tyranny when it usurps the executive power of which it is only the moderator, and when it tries to make the laws it ought only to protect. The enormous power of the Ephors, which represented no danger so long as Sparta preserved its morale, sped corruption once corruption began. The blood of Agis shed by the tyrants was avenged by his successor; the crimes and the punishments of the Ephors equally hastened the collapse of the Republic, and after Cleomenes, Sparta was nothing. Rome perished in the same way, and the excessive power which the tribunes usurped by degrees finally served, with the aid of laws made to defend liberty, to protect the very emperors who destroyed liberty. As for the Council of Ten in Venice, it is a tribunal of blood, which is baneful as much to the patricians as to the people, and which, far from giving supreme protection to the law, serves only, now that the law has been debased, for the striking of stealthy blows that none dare look upon.

A tribunate, like a government, is weakened by the multiplication of its members. When the tribunes of the Roman people, originally two, then five, sought to double their number, the Senate gave its consent, confident of using one part to check the others; and this it did not fail to effect.

The best method of preventing the usurpations of such a formidable body — though it is a method which no government has ever yet employed — would be not to make the tribunate permanent but to prescribe the intervals during which it should remain suspended. These intervals, which should not be so great as to give abuses time to take root, could be specified by law in such a manner that in case of need they might be shortened by an extraordinary commission.

This method appears to me to have no disadvantages, for since, as I have said, the tribunate is in no sense a part of the constitution, it can be removed without detriment to it; this also seems to me an efficacious method, since a newly established magistrate would not enter office with the power that his predecessors had, but only with that given him by law.

CHAPTER 6
Dictatorship

THE inflexibility of the laws, which prevents them from bending to circumstances, may in certain cases make them injurious, and bring about in a time of crisis the ruin of the state. The ordered and slow procedures of legal formalities require a measure of time that circumstances do not always afford. There may be a thousand eventualities which the lawgiver has not foreseen, and it is a very necessary part of foresight to know that one cannot foresee everything.

For this reason, one should not seek to make political institutions so rigid that one is deprived of the power to suspend their operation. Even Sparta allowed its laws at times to lie dormant.

But it is only the greatest emergency that can counterweigh the dangers of tampering with the public order; and the sacred power of the laws should never be suspended except when the safety of the fatherland is at stake. In these rare and obvious cases, the public security is provided for by a special act making that security the responsibility of the person who is most worthy. This responsibility may be assigned in two ways, according to the nature of the emergency.

If increasing the activity of the government is adequate to counteract the danger, then this activity should be concentrated in the hands of one or two members of the government. In this case, it is not the authority of the laws which is being diminished, but only the form of the administration. But if the danger is such that the apparatus of law is itself an obstacle to safety, then a supreme head must be nominated with power to silence all the laws and temporarily suspend the sovereign authority. In such a case the general will is indubitable; for it is clear that the prime concern of the people is that the state shall not perish. Thus the suspension of the legislative authority does not abolish it; the magistrate who silences it cannot speak for it; he dominates it, without having the power to represent it; he can do everything, except make laws.

The first of these two methods was used by the Roman Senate when, according to a hallowed formula, it entrusted the consuls with the safety of the Republic; the second was used when one of the two consuls nominated a dictator[6] — a device that Rome had learned from Alba.

At the beginning of the Republic, the Romans often resorted to dictatorship, because conditions were not yet sufficiently settled for the state to maintain itself by the strength of its constitution. The people's moral character made unnecessary at that time many of the precautions which might have been needed at other times, so men did not fear that a dictator would abuse his position or that he would attempt to prolong his office beyond its term. It seemed, on the contrary, that so much power was a burden to those who wielded it; for they hastened to divest themselves of it, as if standing in the place of the laws made it altogether too onerous and perilous an office.

So it is not because there was a danger of its being abused, but because there was a danger of its being degraded that one condemns the imprudent employment of this supreme magistrature in the early days of the Republic. For while it was wasted on elections, dedications and purely formal things, there was reason to fear that it would become less forceful when it was really needed, and that the people would come to regard dictatorship as an empty title used only to give dignity to idle ceremonies.

Towards the end of the Republic, the Romans, becoming more circumspect, were as sparing in their use of dictatorship as they had once been prodigal, and with as little reason. It was easy to see that their fears were ill founded, and that the weakness of the capital was at that time its protection against the magistrates it had in its midst, that a dictator could in certain cases defend the public freedom without ever being able to invade it, and that the fetters of Rome were not forged in Rome itself, but in the Roman armies; the weak resistance that Marius offered Sulla, and Pompey Caesar, showed plainly what could be expected of internal authority faced with external force.

This mistake led the Romans to commit great wrongs. There was, for example, their failure to nominate a dictator in the Catilina affair; for since this was a matter which concerned only the city itself, or at most some Italian province, the unlimited authority which the law gave a dictator would have facilitated the ready crushing of that conspiracy, which was in fact suppressed only by a concurrence of lucky accidents, such as human prudence could never have expected.

Instead of naming a dictator, the Senate was content to transmit all its powers to the consuls, as a result of which Cicero, in order to act effectively, was obliged to exceed his powers on a crucial point; and though, in a first transport of joy, the Romans approved of his conduct, it was not without justice that he was afterwards asked to account for the blood of citizens shed in violation of the laws — a reproach which could not have been addressed to a dictator. But the consul's eloquence carried everything before him, and he himself, though a Roman, loved his own glory better than his country; and instead of seeking a lawful and certain means of serving the state, he sought all the honour of the affair for himself.[7] Thus he was justly honoured as the liberator of Rome, and no less justly punished as the violator of Roman laws. However splendid his recall from exile may have been, it was undoubtedly an act of pardon.

For the rest, in whatever manner this important commission of dictatorship is conferred, it is imperative to limit its duration to one short term that can never be prolonged; in the emergencies which call for its institution, the state is soon lost or saved, and once the urgent need is over, dictatorship becomes either tyrannical or useless. In Rome, where the term was of six months, most of the dictators abdicated before that time had expired. If the term had been longer, they might have been tempted to prolong it still further, like the decemvirs, who held office for a year. The dictator, having only the time to meet the need which had prompted his appointment, had none in which to meditate on further projects.

CHAPTER 7
The Censorial Tribunal

JUST as the general will is declared by the law, so is the public judgement declared by the censorial office; public opinion is that form of law of which the censor is the minister, and which he, on the model of the prince, merely applies to particular cases.

Far, then, from the censorial tribunal being the arbiter of the people's opinion, it is only the spokesman; and as soon as it departs from this, its decisions are void and without effect.

It is useless to separate the morals of a nation from the objects of its esteem; for both spring from the same principle and both necessarily merge together. Among all the peoples of the world, it is not nature but opinion which governs the choice of their pleasures. Reform the opinions of men, and their morals will be purified of themselves. Men always love what is good or what they think is good, but it is in their judgement that they err; hence it is their judgement that has to be regulated. To judge morals is to judge what is honoured; to judge what is honoured, is to look to opinion as law.

The opinions of a people spring from its constitution; although the law does not regulate morals, it is legislation that gives birth to morals; when legislation weakens, morals degenerate; and then the rulings of the censors will not accomplish what the law has failed to achieve.

From this it follows that the censorial office may be useful in preserving morals, but never in restoring morals. Set up censors while the laws are still vigorous; for as soon as the vigour is lost, everything is hopeless; nothing legitimate has any force once the laws have force no longer.

The censorial office sustains morals by preventing opinions from being corrupted, by preserving their integrity with wise rulings, and sometimes even by settling points on which opinion is uncertain. The use of seconds in duels, carried to an impassioned extreme in the kingdom of France, was abolished by a single edict of the King: 'as for those who are cowardly enough to name seconds'. This judgement anticipated that of the public, and settled it with one stroke. But when the same edicts sought to declare that it was also cowardice to fight duels — which is very true, but at variance with popular opinion — the public scoffed at this decision on a matter about which its mind was made up.

I have said elsewhere that since public opinion is not subject to constraint, there should be no vestige of constraint in the tribunal established to represent it. We cannot too greatly admire the skill with which this device, entirely alien to the moderns, was put into effect by the Romans and even better by the Lacedaemonians.

Once when a man of bad character put forward a good idea in the council of Sparta, the Ephors, ignoring him, had the same thing proposed by a virtuous citizen. What an honour for the one, what a disgrace for the other; yet neither praise nor blame was given to either. Certain drunkards from Samos once defiled the tribunal of the Ephors; the following day the Samians were given permission by public edict to be filthy. An actual punishment would have been less severe than such a form of impunity. When Sparta has pronounced on what is and what is not decent, Greece does not dispute its judgements.

CHAPTER 8
The Civil Religion

AT first men had no kings but the Gods, and their only government was theocratic. They reasoned like Caligula, and in the circumstances they reasoned rightly. A prolonged modification of feelings and ideas was needed before man could make up his mind to accept one of his own kind as master, and to persuade himself that in doing so he had done well.

From this single fact, that a God was placed at the head of every political society, it follows that there were as many Gods as peoples. Two peoples alien to one another, and nearly always enemies, could not long recognize the same master: two armies going into battle could not obey the same commander. Thus national divisions produced polytheism, and this in turn produced religious and civil intolerance, which are naturally the same, as I shall explain later.

The fanciful idea of the Greeks that they had discovered their own Gods being worshipped by barbarian peoples originated in the Greek habit of regarding themselves as the natural sovereigns of those same peoples. But in our own times, it is a ludicrous parody of learning which studies the identity of the Gods of different nations, as if Moloch, Saturn and Chronos could be the same God, as if the Baal of the Phoenicians, the Zeus of the Greeks, and the Jupiter of the Romans could be identical; as if there could be anything in common between chimerical beings with different names!

But if it is asked why under paganism, when each state had its own religious cult and its own Gods, there were no wars of religion, I answer that it was due to this very fact that each state, having its own faith as well as its own government, did not distinguish between its Gods and its laws. Political war was just as much theological war; the provinces of the Gods were determined, so to speak, by the frontiers of nations. The God of one people had no rights over other peoples. The Gods of the Pagans were in no sense jealous Gods; they divided the empire of the world between them; even Moses and the Hebrew people sometimes countenanced this idea by speaking of the God of Israel. It is true that they did not recognize the Gods of the Canaanites, a proscribed people who were doomed to destruction, and whose country they were to occupy; but consider how they spoke of the divinities of neighbouring peoples, whom they were forbidden to attack: 'Is not the possession of that which belongs to Chamos your God lawfully your due?' says Jephthah to the Ammonites. 'By the same title we possess the lands which our conquering God has taken.'[8]

But when the Jews, subject to the Kings of Babylon, and afterwards to the Kings of Syria, stubbornly sought to recognize no other God but their own, this refusal was regarded as a rebellion against their conquerors, and it brought on the Jews those persecutions of which we read in their history, and of which we find no other example before the coming of Christianity.[9]

Since each religion was thus attached exclusively to the laws of the state which prescribed it, and since there was no means of converting people except by subduing them, the only missionaries were conquerors; and since the obligation to change faith was part of the law of conquest, it was necessary to conquer before preaching conversion. Far from men fighting for the Gods, it was, as in Homer, the Gods who fought for men; each people asked its own God for victory, and paid for it with new altars. The Romans, before taking a town, called upon its Gods to abandon it; when they allowed the Tarentines to keep their angry Gods, it was in the belief that those Gods were subject to their own and obliged to pay them homage. They let the vanquished keep their own Gods just as they let them keep their own laws. A crown dedicated to Jupiter of the Capitol was often the only tribute they exacted.

In the end, when the Romans had spread their faith and their Gods with their empire, and often themselves adopted those of the vanquished in giving all and sundry the rights of citizenship, the peoples of this vast empire gradually found themselves with a multitude of Gods and faiths, which were everywhere almost the same; and this is how paganism became one and the same religion throughout the known world.

It was in these circumstances that Jesus came to establish a spiritual kingdom on earth; this kingdom, by separating the theological system from the political, meant that the state ceased to be a unity, and it caused those intestine divisions which have never ceased to disturb Christian peoples. Now as this new idea of a kingdom of another world could never have entered the minds of pagans, they always regarded the Christians as true rebels who, under the cloak of hypocritical submission, only awaited the moment to make themselves independent and supreme, and cunningly to usurp that authority which they made a show of respecting while they were weak. Such was the cause of the persecutions.

What the pagans feared did indeed happen; then everything altered its countenance; the humble Christians changed their tune and soon the so-called kingdom of the other world was seen to become, under a visible ruler, the most violent despotism of this world.

However, since princes and civil laws continued to exist, the consequence of this dual power has been an endless conflict of jurisdiction, which has made any kind of good polity impossible in Christian states, where men have never known whether they ought to obey the civil ruler or the priest.

Many peoples, even in Europe or nearby, have tried to preserve or re-establish the ancient system, but without success: the spirit of Christianity has won completely. The religious cult has always kept, or recovered, its independence of the sovereign, and has lacked its necessary connexion with the state. Mahomet had very sound opinions, taking care to give unity to his political system, and for as long as the form of his government endured under the caliphs who succeeded him, the government was undivided and, to that extent, good. But the Arabs, in becoming prosperous, cultured, polite, effeminate and soft, were subjugated by the barbarians; then the division between the two powers was started afresh, and even though the division is less apparent among the Moslems than among the Christians, it nevertheless exists, above all in the sect of Ali and in states like Persia where it has never ceased to make itself felt.

Among us, the Kings of England have established themselves as heads of the church and the Czars have done the same. But with this title they have made themselves not so much masters as ministers, and have acquired not so much the right to change the church as the power to preserve it; they are not legislators, they are only princes. Wherever the clergy constitutes a body,[10] it is master and legislator in its own house. Thus there are two powers, two sovereigns, in England and in Russia, just as there are elsewhere.

Of all Christian authors, the philosopher Hobbes is the only one who saw clearly both the evil and the remedy, and who dared to propose reuniting the two heads of the eagle and fully restoring that political unity without which neither the state nor the government will ever be well constituted. But he should have seen that the dominant spirit of Christianity was incompatible with his system, and that the interest of the prince will always be stronger than that of the state. It is not so much the horrible and false parts of Hobbes's system that have made it hated, but the parts which are just and true.[11]

I believe that if the historical facts were analysed from this point of view, we could easily refute the opposing beliefs of both Bayle and Warburton, the one holding that no religion is useful to the body politic, the other that Christianity is its best support. We could refute the first by showing that no state has ever been founded without religion as its base; and we could refute the second by showing that the Christian law is at bottom more injurious than serviceable to a robust constitution of the state. For this to be clearly understood, I think I have only to give a little more precision to the exceedingly vague idea of religion, as it bears upon my subject.

Religion, considered in connexion with societies, whether general or particular, can be divided into two categories, the religion of the man and the religion of the citizen. The first, without temples, altars or rituals, and limited to inward devotion to the supreme God and the eternal obligations of morality, is the pure and simple religion of the Gospel, the true theism, and might be called the divine natural law. The religion of the citizen is the religion established in a single country; it gives that country its Gods and its special tutelary deities; it has its dogmas, its rituals, its external forms of worship laid down by law; and to the one nation which practises this religion, everything outside is infidel, alien, barbarous; and it extends the rights and duties of man only so far as it extends its altars. Such were the religions of all the early peoples; and we might give it the name of civil or positive divine law.

There is a third and more curious kind of religion, which, giving men two legislative orders, two rulers, two homelands, puts them under two contradictory obligations, and prevents their being at the same time both churchmen and citizens. Such is the religion of the Lamas, such is that of the Japanese, and such is Catholic Christianity. One might call this the religion of the priest. It produces a kind of mixed and anti-social system of law which has no name.

From the political point of view, each of these three kinds of religion has its defects. The third kind is so manifestly bad that the pleasure of demonstrating its badness would be a waste of time. Everything that destroys social unity is worthless; and all institutions that set man at odds with himself are worthless.

The second kind of religion is good in that it joins divine worship to a love of the law, and that in making the homeland the object of the citizens' adoration, it teaches them that the service of the state is the service of the tutelary God. This is a kind of theocracy, in which there can be no pontiff other than the prince, and no priests except the magistrates. Then to die for one's country is to become a martyr, to break the law to be impious, and to subject a guilty man to public execration is to hand him over to the wrath of God: sacer esto.

But this kind of religion is also bad; since it is based on error and lies, it deceives men, and makes them credulous and superstitious; it buries the true worship of God in empty ceremonials. It is bad, again, when it becomes exclusive and tyrannical, and makes a people bloodthirsty and intolerant, so that men breathe only murder and massacre, and believe they are doing a holy deed in killing those who do not accept their Gods. This puts the people concerned into a natural state of war with all others, and this is something destructive of its own security.

There remains the religion of humanity, or Christianity, not the Christianity of today, but that of the Gospel, which is altogether different. Under this holy, sublime and true religion, men, as children of the same God, look on all others as brothers, and the society which unites them is not even dissolved by death.

But this religion, having no specific connexion with the body politic, leaves the law with only the force the law itself possesses, adding nothing to it; and hence one of the chief bonds necessary for holding any particular society together is lacking. Nor is this all: for far from attaching the hearts of the citizens to the state, this religion detaches them from it as from all other things of this world; and I know of nothing more contrary to the social spirit.

It is said that a people of true Christians would form the most perfect society imaginable. I see but one great flaw in this hypothesis, namely that a society of true Christians would not be a society of men.

I would even say that this imagined society, with all its perfection, would be neither the strongest nor the most durable. Being perfect, it would be without bonds of union; its ruinous defect would lie in its very perfection.

Everyone would do his duty; the people would obey the law; the rulers would be just and moderate; the magistrates would be honest and incorruptible; the soldiers would scorn death; there would be neither vanity nor luxury; and all that is very fine. But let us look further.

Christianity is a wholly spiritual religion, concerned solely with the things of heaven; the Christian's homeland is not of this world. The Christian does his duty, it is true, but he does it with profound indifference towards the good or ill success of his deeds. Provided that he has nothing to reproach himself for, it does not matter to him whether all goes well or badly here on earth. If the state prospers, he hardly dares to enjoy the public happiness; he fears lest he become proud of his country's glory; if the state perishes, he blesses the hand of God that weighs heavily on His people.

For such a society to be peaceful and for harmony to prevail, every citizen without exception would have to be an equally good Christian. If, unhappily, there should appear one ambitious man, one hypocrite, one Catilina, for example, or one Cromwell among them, that man would readily exploit his pious compatriots. Christian charity does not allow us readily to think ill of our neighbours. When a man is cunning enough to master the art of imposing on others, and gains a part of the public authority, there, behold, is a man who is given honours; and God wills that he be respected; soon, we see a man of power, and God wills that he be obeyed. Suppose he abuses the power of which he is the trustee? Then he is the scourge with which God chastises his children. Christians would have scruples about expelling the usurper; for that would mean disturbing the public peace, using violence, shedding blood, and all this accords ill with Christian mildness. And after all what does it matter whether one is free or a slave in this vale of tears? The essential thing is to go to paradise, and resignation is but one more means to that end.

Suppose a foreign war breaks out. The citizens will march without reluctance to war; no one among them will think of flight; all will do their duty — but they will do it without passion for victory; they know better how to die than to conquer. It does not matter to them whether they are victors or vanquished. Does not providence know better than they what is needful? One can imagine what advantage a proud, impetuous and passionate enemy would draw from their stoicism. Set them at war against a generous people whose hearts are devoured by an ardent love of glory and their country; imagine your Christian republic confronted by Sparta or Rome, and your pious Christians will be beaten, crushed, destroyed before they have time to collect their wits, or they will owe their salvation only to the contempt which their enemy feels for them.

I myself think it was an excellent oath that was taken by the soldiers of Fabius; they did not swear to conquer or die, but to return as conquerors, and they kept their word. Christians would never have dared to do this; they would have felt that it was tempting God.

But I err in speaking of a Christian republic; for each of these terms contradicts the other. Christianity preaches only servitude and submission. Its spirit is too favourable to tyranny for tyranny not to take advantage of it. True Christians are made to be slaves; they know it and they hardly care; this short life has too little value in their eyes.

It is said that Christian troops are excellent. I deny it. Show me these Christian troops. Personally I know of none. You may mention the crusades. But without disputing the valour of the crusaders, I shall say that they were far from being Christians. They were soldiers of the priests. They were citizens of the Church; they were fighting for its spiritual homeland, which it had in some strange way made temporal. Strictly speaking, this comes under the heading of paganism; for since the Gospel never sets up any national religion, holy war is impossible among Christians.

Under the pagan Emperors, Christian soldiers were brave. All the Christian authors tell us this, and I believe them; but those soldiers were competing for honour against pagan troops. Once the Emperors became Christian, this emulation ceased; and once the cross had driven out the eagle, all Roman valour disappeared.

But leaving aside considerations of politics, let us return to those of right; and settle the principles which govern this important question. The right which the social pact gives the sovereign over the subjects does not, as I have said, go beyond the boundaries of public utility.[12] Subjects have no duty to account to the sovereign for their beliefs except when those beliefs are important to the community. Now it is very important to the state that each citizen should have a religion which makes him love his duty, but the dogmas of that religion are of interest neither to the state nor its members, except in so far as those dogmas concern morals and the duties which everyone who professes that religion is bound to perform towards others. Moreover, everyone may hold whatever opinions he pleases, without the sovereign having any business to take cognizance of them. For the sovereign has no competence in the other world; whatever may be the fate of the subjects in the life to come, it is nothing to do with the sovereign, so long as they are good citizens in this life.

There is thus a profession of faith which is purely civil and of which it is the sovereign's function to determine the articles, not strictly as religious dogmas, but as expressions of social conscience, without which it is impossible to be either a good citizen or a loyal subject.[13] Without being able to oblige anyone to believe these articles, the sovereign can banish from the state anyone who does not believe them; banish him not for impiety but as an anti-social being, as one unable sincerely to love law and justice, or to sacrifice, if need be, his life to his duty. If anyone, after having publicly acknowledged these same dogmas, behaves as if he did not believe in them, then let him be put to death, for he has committed the greatest crime, that of lying before the law.

The dogmas of the civil religion must be simple and few in number, expressed precisely and without explanations or commentaries. The existence of an omnipotent, intelligent, benevolent divinity that foresees and provides; the life to come; the happiness of the just; the punishment of sinners; the sanctity of the social contract and the law — these are the positive dogmas.

As for the negative dogmas, I would limit them to a single one: no intolerance. Intolerance is something which belongs to the religions we have rejected.

In my opinion, those who distinguish between civil and theological intolerance are mistaken. These two forms of intolerance are inseparable. It is impossible to live in peace with people one believes to be damned; to love them would be to hate the God who punishes them; it is an absolute duty either to redeem or to torture them. Wherever theological intolerance is admitted, it is bound to have some civil consequences,【14】 and when it does so, the sovereign is no longer sovereign, even in the temporal sphere; at this stage the priests become the real masters, and kings are only their officers.

Now that there is not, and can no longer be, an exclusive national religion, all religions which themselves tolerate others must be tolerated, provided only that their dogmas contain nothing contrary to the duties of the citizen. But anyone who dares to say 'Outside the church there is no salvation' should be expelled from the state, unless the state is the church and the prince the pontiff. Such a dogma is good only in a theocratic government; in any other, it is pernicious. The reason for which Henri Ⅳ is said to have embraced the Catholic religion is one which should make all honest men abandon it, above all any prince who knows how to reason.

CHAPTER 9
Conclusion

AFTER setting out the true principles of political right, and trying to establish the state on the basis of those principles, I should complete my study by considering the foreign relations of the state, including international law, commerce, the rights of war and conquest, public law, leagues, negotiations, treaties and so forth. But all this would represent a new subject too vast for my weak vision; and I ought always to keep my eyes fixed on matters more within my range.

Note

【1】 This should always be understood to refer only to free states, for elsewhere family, property, lack of asylum, necessity or violence may keep an inhabitant in the country unwillingly, and then his mere residence no longer implies consent either to the contract or to the violation of the contract.

【2】 In Genoa the word Libertas may be seen on the doors of all the prisons and on the fetters of the galleys. This use of the motto is excellent and just. In fact, it is only the malefactors of all states who prevent the citizens from being free. In a country where all such people were in the galleys, the most perfect liberty would be enjoyed.

【3】 The name 'Rome', which is said to derive from Romulus, is really Greek, and it means force; the name 'Numa' is also Greek, and it means law. Is it very probable that the first two kings of that city should have borne before they reigned names so clearly related to what they did?

【4】 I say 'Campus Martius' because this was where the comitia centuriata met. In the other two forms of assembly, the people met in the forum or elsewhere, and then the capite censi had as much influence and authority as the leading citizens.

【5】 The century thus drawn was called praerogativa because it was the first required to cast its vote; and this is the origin of our word 'prerogative'.

【6】 This nomination took place by night and in secret, as if they were ashamed to put a man above the law.

【7】 He could not have been sure of this if he had proposed appointing a dictator, for he did not dare to name himself, and he could not be sure that his colleagues would name him.

【8】 Nonne ea quae possidet Chamos deus tuus, tibi jure debentur? Such is the text of the Vulgate. Father de Carrières translates it thus: 'Do you not believe that you have a right to possess that which belongs to your God Chamos?' I do not know the bearing of the Hebrew text, but I notice that in the Vulgate, Jephthah positively recognizes the rights of the God Chamos, and that the French translation weakens this recognition by adding an 'according to you' which is not in the Latin.

【9】 It is clear beyond dispute that the Phocian war, called the Holy War, was not a war of religion. Its object was to punish sacrilege, and not to make unbelievers submit.

【10】 It should be noted that it is not so much the formal assemblies, like those of France, which bind the clergy together in a body, but rather the communion of churches. Communion and excommunication are the social compact of the clergy, one through which they will always be masters of both peoples and kings. All the priests who communicate together are fellow citizens, even though they are at opposite ends of the earth. This invention is a masterpiece of politics. There was nothing like it among the pagan priests; hence they never constituted a body of clergy.

【11】 See, among other things, in a letter of Grotius to his brother dated 11 April 1643, what that learned man approved of and what he disapproved of in Hobbes's De Cive. It is true that, being inclined to indulgence, he forgives that author the good points for the sake of the bad, but not everyone is so merciful.

【12】 'In the republic,' says the M(arquis) d'A(rgenson), 'everyone is perfectly free to do what does not injure others.' Here is the invariable boundary; one could not express it more exactly. I have not been able to deny myself the pleasure of quoting sometimes from this manuscript, although it is not known to the public, in order to pay homage to the memory of an illustrious and honourable man, who, even as a Minister of State, kept the heart of a true citizen, together with just and sound opinions on the government of his country.

【13】 Caesar pleading for Catilina tried to establish the dogma of the mortality of the soul. Cato and Cicero, to refute it, did not waste time with philosophy; they were content to show that Caesar was speaking like a bad citizen and advancing a doctrine that was injurious to the state. And this was what the Senate had to give judgement on, not any question of theology.

【14】 Marriage, for example, being a civil contract, has civil consequences without which it would be impossible for society itself to subsist. Let us suppose that in a given country the clergy reached the point of gaining the sole right of permitting marriage, a right which it is bound to usurp under any intolerant religion. Is it not then clear that in making the authority of the church supreme in this matter, it will nullify that of the prince, who will then have no subjects other than those the clergy allow him to have? Enable priests to decide whether to marry people according to their assent to this or that doctrine, their assent to this or that formula, or according to their being more or less devout, then is it not clear that if the clergy acts shrewdly and holds firm, it will in time alone dispose of inheritances, offices, the citizens and the state itself, since the latter could not endure if composed only of bastards? But, you may say, men will call upon the temporal power, issue summonses and warrants, seize church properties. What a sorry sight! If the clergy has even a little, I do not say courage, but common sense, it will allow everything to go its own way; it will quietly let the summonses, the warrants and seizures take place and still end up as master. It is no great sacrifice, I feel, to give up a part when you are sure of securing the whole.

HUMAN HAPPINESS

人类幸福

［法］布莱士·帕斯卡　著

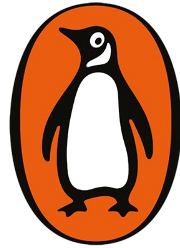
蒋晓宁　译

中国出版集团
中译出版社

人类幸福

（法）布莱士·帕斯卡/著

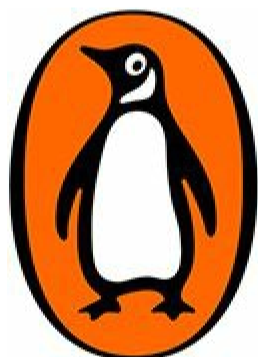
蒋晓宁/译



企鹅图书 | PENGUIN BOOKS

UK | USA | Canada | Ireland | Australia
New Zealand | India | South Africa | North Asia

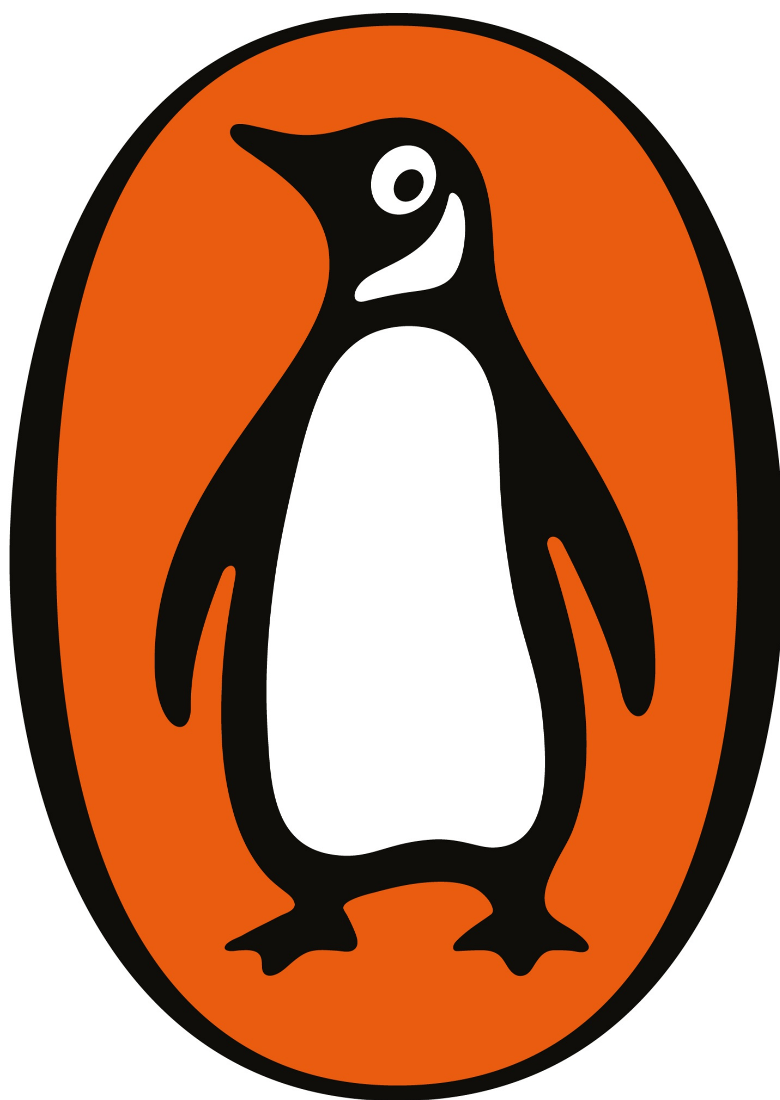
Penguin Books is part of the Penguin Random House group of companies whose addresses can be found at:
global.penguinrandomhouse.com.



www.penguin.com
This translation first published as a Penguin Classic 1966
Revised edition first published 1995
This selection first published 2008

Set by Rowland Phototypesetting Ltd, Bury St Edmunds, Suffolk

企鹅兰登电子书 | PENGUIN RANDOM HOUSE EBOOKS



目录

“伟大的思想”中文版序

企鹅“伟大的思想”系列丛书自2004年开始陆续面世，在英国、美国和德国均有出版。在英国出版品种最多，已付梓八十种，尚有二十种计划出版。该丛书在全球众多读者间，尤其是学生当中，普及了哲学和政治学，销量已远超二百万册。中文版“伟大的思想”的推出，是该系列的又一延续和发展，令人欢欣鼓舞。

推出这套丛书旨在让读者再次与一些伟大的非小说类经典著作面对面地交流。长久以来，此类书籍的出版都建立在这样一个假设之上——此类著作供学生课堂学习之用，因此需辅以导读、详尽的注释及参考书目等。此类版本无疑十分有用，但我想，如果某一版本能够重建托马斯·潘恩的《常识》或约翰·罗斯金的《艺术与人生》初版时的环境，为读者与作者营造更为亲密无间的氛围，使读者除了原作者及其自身的思考外没有其他参照，也许会更有吸引力。

但是，这一做法亦存在严重缺陷：每位作者的表述难免有难解或不可解之处，一些重要的背景知识或许也有所缺失。例如，读者对亨利·梭罗创作时的情形毫无头绪，也不了解该书的反响及影响。不过，这样做的优点也显而易见，最为显著的便是作者的初衷又一次受到重视——托马斯·潘恩的愤怒、查尔斯·达尔文的灵光、塞内加的隐逸。他们给许多国家的众多读者带来的生活影响难以估量，有的影响甚至长达几个世纪，几乎没有什么比阅读这些作家更令人拍案叫绝的了。倘若没有亚当·斯密或阿图尔·叔本华，将无法想象我们今天的世界。这些小书创作年代久远，但其中的话语彻底改变了我们的政治学、经济学、精神世界、社会规划和宗教信仰。

“伟大的思想”系列一直求新求变，地域不同，收录的作家亦不同。一些作家在中国或美国更受欢迎，而英国版“伟大的思想”收录的一些作家在其他国家和地区则鲜有人知。称其为“伟大的思想”，我们亦是慎之又慎。这些思想之所以伟大，在于其影响深远，但这并不意味着这些思想都是“好”思想，实际上一些书或可列入“坏”思想之列。丛书中收录的很多作家受到同样收录于该丛书的其他作家的巨大影响，例如，马塞尔·普鲁斯特承认受约翰·罗斯金影响很大，米歇尔·德·蒙田也承认深受塞内加影响。但也有些作家彼此憎恶，若发现彼此都被收录于同一丛书，一定会深感苦恼。至于他们思想的或“好”或“坏”，读者可自行判明。我们衷心希望，您可以享受阅读这些著作的乐趣。

“伟大的思想”出版者

西蒙·温德尔

导读

布莱士·帕斯卡（Blaise　Pascal，1623—1662），生于法国城镇克莱蒙费朗（Clermont-Ferrand），神学家、哲学家、数学家、物理学家、化学家、音乐家、教育家、气象学家。帕斯卡早年从事自然科学研究，在数学、物理学等领域都取得了重要的成就，如在数学上提出“帕斯卡定理”、发现“帕斯卡三角”等，同时，帕斯卡也是早期概率学的创始人之一，他在和著名的“业余数学家”费马的书信往来中讨论了相关问题；而在物理学领域，帕斯卡发现了关于流体传递压力的“帕斯卡定律”，并改进了托里拆利的大气压实验，澄清了压强和真空的概念，后人为纪念其功绩，用他的名字“帕斯卡”来命名压强单位。帕斯卡晚年专注于神学和哲学领域的文学创作，代表作有《致外省人书》《思想录》（未完成）等。

《人类幸福》节选自帕斯卡的散文集《思想录》，书中汇总了帕斯卡的近千条箴言与短篇散文，这些文字记述了帕斯卡对于人性、宗教以及人与神之间关系的思考。帕斯卡的文字简洁明了、富有深意，振聋发聩的名言“人是一根会思想的芦苇”即出自本书。这些文字长则千字余，短则只言片语，章节与章节间并未按主题划分，只有部分章节前会标明本段探讨的主题，但更多的则是天马行空般的畅所欲言，帕斯卡个人的思想主张也在这些碎片化的文字中隐隐放射出来。作为法国思想家蒙田的拥趸，帕斯卡的思想也受到其怀疑主义的影响，而在神学领域，帕斯卡则是杨森主义的忠实信徒，认为人类具有原罪，不被上帝选择者穷极一生也无法自赎，这种思想在帕斯卡的字里行间可见一斑，如其所说，“人的伟大在于他知道自己可悲”，贪欲、狂妄、蔑视、憎恶，这些在我们眼中用来描述罪行的贬义词语，却被帕斯卡屡屡用在对人类天性的描述中，尽管帕斯卡的措辞看起来稍显消极，但其本人却并非一个完

全的悲观主义者，他对于人性与社会，更多的是持一种客观的态度来进行解构，无论是平民或贵胄，抑或是幸福与悲伤，帕斯卡都使用一种冷冰冰的，不掺杂个人感情的方式来进行评断。同时，怀疑主义也在一定程度上影响了帕斯卡对于事物的判断与分析，“矛盾”或者说“两面性”，是其文字的主题之一，他用许多篇目表达了他对于人类认知程度、社会秩序、道德准则以及人性的怀疑，许多事物在帕斯卡的眼中或是一个状态中的两个极端，或是一种矛盾体达到的稳态，“生命仅处于半路，在我们和天堂或地狱之间，是世界上最脆弱的东西”，诚如其言，“正直的人，认为自己是罪人，罪人，以为自己是正直的”“骄傲的人，你自身是一个怎样的悖论！”。

帕斯卡同时对于耶稣和宗教的话题着墨颇多。而作为一个坚定的有神论者，帕斯卡在叙述这个问题时则与谈论人性相反，稍显出个人的激情与狂热来，帕斯卡认为无神论者是“应当被怜悯的，但以此为傲者应当被痛骂”“人从神恩而造，对上帝心向往之，分享他的神性，没有神恩，他将被视为田野之诸兽”，在帕斯卡的眼中，与带有原罪的人类站在对立两面的上帝则是至上的存在，“世界上只有三种人：发现了上帝，并侍奉他的人；忙于寻觅他，但还没有寻觅到的人；活着，但既不寻觅也没有寻觅到的人。第一类人合乎情理而幸福，中间一类人不幸福但合乎情理，最后一类人愚蠢而不幸福”，倘若将其笔墨间的“上帝”二字换为“真理”的话，这句话读起来似乎也仍然流畅无阻，可见在帕斯卡的心中，上帝就等于真理，《福音书》中所记载的耶稣在他的心中也是绝对的神圣与美德的象征，在其笔下的多处描写中都不难看出他对耶稣牺牲精神的歌颂，“他从这荣耀中得到了什么好处？没有人享有过如此巨大的荣耀，也没有人蒙受过更大的耻辱。这一切荣耀归我们受用，是我们能够认识他，而他自己却没有享受过一丝一毫”。受长期神学研究的影响，帕斯卡的许多行文风格中也可以看到圣经的影子，他的遣词排句有种如神谕般的讳莫如深，一些箴言如“鹦鹉擦拭嘴巴，即使已经很干净”“如果雷电袭击低洼的地方，等等，诗人和只能争论这类事情的民

众得不到证据”等，都带有一种耐人寻味的神秘感，难以在阅读之初就找到帕斯卡真正的寓意。

《人类幸福》一书的另一个特色在于其内容的普适性。尽管帕斯卡在文中只记录了关于人性与神的思考，但我们从中可以看到的却不止这些，这些文字就像一根树枝，如果我们顺着树枝看下去，便会首先领略到整个树干，紧接着，我们便可以经由这树干，看到无数繁茂的枝叶，这些树干中最粗壮的一座，便是其辩证的思维模式，即从一个事物的两面性去看待它，并从一个状态的两种极端来看待其中现象的存在形式，帕斯卡正是借此来分析人性以及各种社会现象的因果。尽管帕斯卡对于无神论者和非基督教徒的观点有些许偏颇，但如果跳脱出宗教的设定，而如前文所说，将上帝看作是真理的化身，那么我们其实看到的是帕斯卡对于真理的追求，和对拒绝追求真理者的鄙夷，这些看似受信仰限制的言论其实也体现了其思想的普适性，无论是帕斯卡对于人性，还是对历史和社会的评断，今天看来依然毫不过时，阅读帕斯卡的这些文章与箴言，我们也往往会从原本的旨意中咀嚼出意想不到的味道，获得远超出字面理解的感悟与收获。

石凯文

本选集中每个思想片段的编码

同企鹅经典系列版编码

人类幸福

21　太年轻会影响人的判断，太老也一样。

考虑欠周或者过虑，都会使人固执己见，痴迷不悟。

完成一项工作，马上去审视，我们仍然深陷其中；太久，又断了线索。

这就像欣赏离得太远或太近的画。唯有那么一个不可分割的点，是合适的位置。

其他的点，要么太近或太远，要么太高或太低。在绘画中，这个点取决于透视原理，那么就真理和道德而言，这个点又取决于什么？

22　苍蝇很强大，能战胜我们，麻痹我们的大脑，吞噬我们的肌体。

23　科学的无助。苦恼之际，自然科学知识无法安慰我对道德观的无知，而道德观方面的知识却可以安慰我对自然科学的无知。

24　人类的境况。反复无常，厌倦无聊，焦躁不安。

25　君王出行总是伴以侍卫、鼓乐、臣仆，以及所有其他随身用具，这种情景使人敬畏之情油然而生，因此，即使他们独处时的神态，也足以令臣民们满怀敬畏。这是因为，我们的大脑无法将君王本人和总是陪伴君王的随从区分开来。世人不知这是习惯使然，却相信是来自某种自然的力量，因此，有俗语道：“神相刻在脸上。”

26　建立王权的基础是臣民的理性和愚昧，尤其是他们的愚昧。世间最伟大、最重要的事物皆建立在臣民软弱无能的基础上。这是可以牢牢把握的根基，因为没有什么能比臣民的软弱无能更牢靠了。完全建立于理性之上的事物，比如对智慧的崇尚，根基不牢。

30　我们不会选择船上出身最高贵的人做船长。

31　我们只是城市的过客，不会顾及留在那里的声誉，但要待上一段时间就会在意。这一段时间是多长呢？它同我们虚荣琐碎的生活成正比。

33　最令我惊异的是，世人不惊异于自己的无能。我们行为严肃，人人遵循内心的意愿，但不是因为这样做真正有益，符合风气，而好像人人都确切地知道什么是理性，什么是品行正直。我们不断地失望，荒唐的谦卑使我们自责，却不将此归咎于我们总是引以为豪的本领。周围有相当一部分人不是怀疑论者，他们表明，人可以发表最极端的见解，既然他确信人不是生来无能而是天生智慧，这对维护怀疑论的声望倒是件好事。

36　谁看不到世界的空虚，谁就是空虚的人。那么，除了喧哗、消遣、憧憬未来的年轻人，还有谁看不到世界的空虚？

但不消遣的话，他们会无聊得要命。他们感到自己无足轻重，却不了解这种状态。这是因为，人一旦被迫反省，没有消遣，马上会沮丧得不堪忍受，这种感觉糟糕透顶。

42　有多少王国对我们一无所知！

43　琐事让人感到宽慰，因为琐事能使人感到烦恼。

44　想象。想象是人的主要天赋，因为人是谬误和谎言高手，如果

不总是这样的话，欺骗性就更强；因为如果想象是判断谎言的绝对可靠标准的话，它也是判断真理的绝对可靠标准。然而，由于它总是虚假的，显示不出品质如何，因此给真理和谎言打上相同的印记。

我不是在谈论傻瓜，而是在谈论聪明绝顶之人，他们的想象富于感染力。理性的反对无济于事，不能决定事物的价值。

这股傲慢的力量阻碍、支配它的敌人理性，乐意到处显示它的势力，证实了人具有第二天性。想象拥有快乐的人和不快乐的人，患病的人和健康的人，也拥有富人和穷人；它使我们相信、怀疑、否定理性；它麻痹感官，又唤醒它们；它款待傻瓜，也款待贤能，它让宾客心满意足，而理性永远望尘莫及，这让我们无比恼火。善于想象的人比小心谨慎、理智地愉悦自己的人对自己更满意。他们神态傲慢，睥睨他人，辩论时胆大自信，而别人却羞怯犹疑；他们神采飞扬，常常能赢得听众的有利裁决，因为具有想象的智慧的人能赢得具有同样素质的法官的好感。想象力不会使傻瓜变得聪明，但能使他们高兴，理性就相反，只能让朋友沮丧：一个令朋友荣耀，另一个使他们蒙羞。

谁来分配声望？谁使我们尊敬他人、工作、法律、伟人？除了想象力，还能有谁？没有它的恩准，世上的财富就微不足道。那位地方法官一大把年纪让大家肃然起敬，你难道能不说他是在纯粹、高度的理性支配下，是在公正但不拘细枝末叶地断案吗？而照顾小节只会得罪弱者的想象力。看看他去听布道时虔诚、热忱的样子，流露出的仁爱之情更显得他判案公正，他正怀着值得效仿的崇敬心情等待布道开始。如果布道者出现时带着一副天生嘶哑的嗓音、一张奇怪的面孔，胡须被理发师刮得马马虎虎，恰好又衣冠不整，那么我敢打赌，不管他宣讲什么真理，我们的元老院议员都无法板着脸。

把世界上最伟大的哲学家放到一块木板上，木板比实际需要的要宽一些；如果脚下是峭壁，虽然理性可能使他相信自己是安全的，但想象

仍会占上风。很多人只需想一下这个情景都会脸色发白，浑身冒汗。

我不想罗列出想象力的所有效果。谁都知道，看到猫或老鼠，听到煤块刺耳的爆裂声，等等，够使理智失常的。说话的腔调能影响最明智的人，能影响一篇演讲或一首诗的效果。

爱或憎改变正义的面目。如果辩护律师事先拿到了优厚的报酬，他会觉得自己辩护的诉讼案更合理。他的举止充满魄力，法官们被这种表面的东西所蒙蔽，觉得他的诉讼更正当。随风倒的理性多么荒唐！我应该列出人的几乎全部行为，除了想象，没有什么能让他激动，因为理性不得不屈服，明智地采纳人类的想象力在每个转折关头草率订立的原则。一味执着于追随理性的人会证明自己是傻瓜。既然理性这样合人心意，我们必须从早到晚工作，以得到想象中的好处，然后，睡眠消除了理性带来的疲劳，一觉醒来，神清气爽，我们要马上跳起身来，去追寻这个世界统治者的幽灵，忍受它制造的印象。这是错误的渊源，但不是唯一的一个。

让这两股力量结盟是对的，虽然在这种和平态势下想象占有很大优势，但在对立状态下它占有更绝对的优势。理性永远不会彻底战胜想象，相反的情况倒是常见。

我们的地方法官们表明他们深谙这一奥秘，他们的红色法袍、他们像毛绒绒的猫咪一样蜷缩在里面的白貂皮、他们端坐判案的法庭、鸢尾花旗帜[1]，所有这些，庄严的场面必不可少。如果医生不穿大褂，不骑骡子，如果满腹经纶的博士不戴方帽，不穿四倍于合适尺寸的肥大袍子，他们永远也不会蒙骗世人，而世人觉得他们这种样子真实可信，无法抗拒。如果他们拥有纯粹的公正，如果医生掌握真正的医术，他们就不必戴方帽；庄严的科学本身就会赢得尊敬。但是，因为只掌握想象的科学，他们只能借助这些无用的装备来激发想象，这才是他们真正关心的东西，实际上，这也正是他们如何赢得尊敬的东西。

唯有士兵不用这种方式掩饰自己，因为他们更具有实质性的作用；他们用武力证实自己，其他人却用外在的样子证明自己。

这就是为什么国王从来不设法掩饰自己。他们不必用非同寻常的衣装打扮自己，以显示身份，不过，他们有侍卫和伤痕累累的老兵保护。这支武装队伍的人员只有双手和力量是属于他们自己的，有鼓号在行进队伍的最前列奏响，还有千军万马在四周围绕，这千军万马够使最坚毅的人发抖。他们身上没有官阶佩饰，只是散发出一股威力。看到土耳其皇帝住在富丽堂皇的宫殿里，有四万禁卫军把守，还觉得他跟其他人一样，这需要多么强健的理智。

只要看到律师戴着帽子，穿着长袍，就尽可以相信其能力。

想象决定一切；它创造美丽、正义、幸福这些世界上最美好的东西。我非常想读那本意大利语的书，但我只看得懂书名，*Dell’opinione regina del mondo*仅这书名就比几本书都有价值。我不了解这本书，但支持书里的观点，不论里面有什么样的邪恶。

这样的情况或多或少都是这种骗人的本领导致的结果，显然别有用心地赋予我们这种本领，让我们必犯错误。我们还有很多犯错误的其他信念。

不仅长期存有的印象误导我们；新奇事物也具有相同的魔力，所以才产生了辩论，人们要么谴责对方追随儿时的假象，要么谴责对方草率地追随新的印象。如果谁发现了中庸之道，那就让他出来证明吧。任何信念，不管有多自然，即使儿时就埋在心底，也可能会被当成教育或感官造成的假象。

他们说：“因为你自幼相信，如果看不到盒子里的东西，里面就是空的。你相信真空可能存在。这只是感官的幻觉，被习惯强化，要由科

学来更正。”其他人则说：“学校里教你没有真空这种东西，你违背了常识；在产生错误印象之前，这一点明白无误，现在，要回到你最初的状态才能更正这种印象。”那么究竟谁骗了你，是感官还是教育？

我们还有一种针对疾病的错误信念，它妨碍我们判断和感觉。如果重病确实危及健康，我毫不怀疑，不那么重的病对健康的危害程度可以相应减小。

自身利益是另一个使我们情愿盲目的绝好工具。世上最公正的人，也不容许他判自己的案子。我知道一种人，为避免偏袒自己的危险，适得其反地倒向极不公正的一边。想让一个原本合理的诉讼案败诉，最保险的办法是将它委托给近亲打理。正义和真理是两个微妙的点，我们粗糙的工具无法精确地量到。就算能碰得着，也会把点弄得模糊，处处量到虚假，而不是真相。

那么，人类对真理没有确切的信念，对虚伪倒是有几个极好的信念。现在让我们来看看有多少。

然而，犯错误最荒唐的信念是感性和理性之间的争斗。

46　虚荣。爱的因与果。克利奥佩特拉[2]。

47　我们从来不活在当下。我们回忆过去；我们预见未来，好像嫌它来得太慢，催它快些；或者回忆过去，好像要留住它飞逝的时光。我们愚蠢得在不属于自己的时光里徜徉，不理会唯一属于我们的一刻。我们枉然地向往逝去的时光，又盲目地逃离唯一存在的一刻。这样，当下往往使我们痛楚。把它丢到视线以外是因为它使我们忧伤；觉得它令人愉悦就会惋惜地看着它消逝。我们设法给予它未来的支持，思量如何安排无法掌控的事情，安排到一个我们从没有把握企及的时间。

让我们每个人审视一下自己的想法；他会发现，他只关心过去和未

来。我们几乎从不考虑当下，真正考虑的时候，也只是看看它对未来的计划有什么帮助。当下从来不是我们的目标。过去和当下是我们的工具，只有未来是我们的目标。因此，我们从没有真正生活过，只是渴望生活，而且，既然我们总是计划如何快乐，就必然不会。

49　在我看来，恺撒[3]用征服世界取悦自己时，年事已高，这种消遣对奥古斯都[4]和亚历山大[5]还可以；他们是年轻人，不那么容易被遏制。恺撒应该表现得更为成熟一些。

53　人类向禽兽屈服，甚至崇拜禽兽，真是无耻之尤。

54　反复无常。事物的性质多样，心灵的意向纷呈。这是因为呈送给心灵的都不是简单的事情，心灵也从不简单地凡事劳神。这就是为什么同一件事情，可以让我们发笑，也可以使我们哭泣。55*反复无常*。我们以为摆弄人就像摆弄一架普通的风琴。他确实是架风琴，但离奇、变换、不定。只会弹奏普通风琴的人，永远不会在这架风琴上弹出和谐的曲调。你得知道琴键在哪里。

56　一件事情，可以让我们快活，出了差错时，也可以让我们烦恼，这令人郁闷。成千上万的事情都可能，也确实经常碰到这种情况。事情顺利时愉快，不顺利时也不烦恼，能发现这个奥秘的人就是找到了诀窍。这是一种恒动。

57　太自由不好。

应有尽有不好。

58　专制在于妄图统治一切，无视秩序。

强壮的人、标致的人、聪明的人、虔诚的人，在这些人所处的各个不同领域里，每个人都只是他自己房间的主人，不涉及其他地方。有时

他们相遇，强壮的人和英俊的人便相互争夺优势。这很愚蠢，因为他们拥有不同的优势。他们彼此不了解，又错误地妄图到处统治。不能这样做，即使是力量：它在学术界就行不通，因为它只能统治表面行为。——因此，这些论点是错误的……

专制。专制在于妄图以一种方式获得只能以另一种方式获得的东西。我们为不同的功绩支付不同的代价；我们肯定喜欢魅力，害怕力量，相信知识。

为获得这些功绩必须付出代价，拒绝付出是错误的，要求获得其他功绩也是错误的。因此，下面这些论点是错误、专横的："我漂亮，所以你要怕我。我强壮，所以你要爱我。我……"同样认为："他不强壮，所以我不尊敬他。他不聪明，所以我不怕他。"也是错误、专横的。

65　多样性。神学是一门科学，但同时又是多少门科学？人是一种物质，但如果将其解剖，他又是什么？头颅、心脏、腹部、血管、每一根血管、每一节血管、血、血的汁液？

一个市镇或一道风景，从远处看是一个市镇或一道风景，但待走近就变成了房舍、树木、瓦片、树叶、小草、蚂蚁、蚂蚁的腿等，无穷无尽。所有这些都包含在"风景"这个词里。

68　我短暂的一生会溶入其前后的无边岁月——像对一位只逗留了一日的客人的回忆——我看到自己占有的狭小空间被广袤无垠的空间吞没，而我对这空间一无所知，空间对我也是如此，每当想到这些时，我便会恐惧，且惊诧地看到自己在这里，而不是那里；我没有理由在这里，而不是那里，没有理由是这时，而不是那时。是谁把我放置在这里？是谁的旨意和行动，把此时、此地分配给了我？

69　悲惨。约伯[6]和所罗门[7]。

70　如果我们处于真正幸福的状态，就不必回避考虑它。

71　对立性。骄傲抵消了所有的悲惨境遇；人类要么藏起它们，要么展示它们，并为自己意识到这种悲惨境遇而自豪。

72　人要了解自己，即使这样做无助于发现真理，但至少有助于经营自己的日子，这样做很妥帖。

73　反复无常的原因是，人认识到眼前的快乐是虚假的，同时还有一个原因是，他认识不到不存在的快乐是虚幻的。

77　骄傲。好奇心只不过是虚荣心。我们通常只是为了有谈资才想了解点什么；换句话说，如果不是想谈论海的话，就不会作海上旅行，这只不过是因为热衷于向别人描述而去见识点什么。

78　对人的描述。依赖、独立的欲望、需求。

79　放弃痴迷上的东西很累人。一个人家庭生活美满，但只要碰到一个赏心悦目的女人，或是去赌博，快活五六天，再回到先前的日子时，他会满心遗憾。这样的事情每天都有。

80　尊敬意味着：让自己退场。这可能看起来毫无意义，但很有道理，因为这等于说：如果你需要，我当然应该让自己退场，因为你不退出的时候，我才这样做；另外，尊敬是用来彰显伟人的。如果尊敬意味着坐在扶手椅上，那是向所有人表示尊敬，也就无法显示区别。我们让自己退场后，就凸显出区别来了。

81　唯一能被普遍接受的法则，在日常事务中是一国之法，在其他事务中是大多数人的意愿。为什么会这样？因为其中蕴含着权力问题。

这就是为什么君王由于另有权力来源，不听从多数大臣的意见。

毫无疑问，平均占有财富是公平的，但是，人无法让权势服从权利，就只好让权利服从权势。因为不能强化公平，就只好让势力公平化。这样，权利和权势共处，天下太平，这是至善。

82　智慧将我们带回童年，除非你变回幼童。

83　世界是个事物的好裁判，因为它处于一种天然的蒙昧状态，人类确实处于这种状态。知识有两极，两极可以相遇。一极是每个人出生时那种纯粹、天然的蒙昧状态；另一极是才智之士领略了人类整个知识范畴后达到的境界，但达到后却发现自己一无所知，回到了出发时的蒙昧状态，然而这是一种明智的蒙昧，一种自知之明。有的人停在半路，他们脱离了天生的蒙昧，但并没有达到另一极；他们对一些必须掌握的知识略知一二，却装作什么都懂。他们让世界烦恼，把一切都弄错。

平庸的人和比他们聪明的人构成世界的趋势；前者鄙视世界，也被世界鄙视。他们的判断有失公允，而世界对他们的判断却公正无误。

84　笛卡尔。总之我们一定会说："那是数字和运动的结果。"因为事实就是这样，但说出它们究竟是什么，并把机器装配起来，就显得可笑了，这样做没有意义，靠不住，也很辛苦。即使真的是这样，整个哲学也不值得我们付出哪怕一小时的努力。

86　论真正的公允。我们不再拥有，如果有，也不应该像一个人应该遵守一国习俗那样，把它当作公正原则来接受。

这就是为什么找不到权利的时候，我们会找到权势。

87　大法官神情庄重，身着精致长袍，因为他的职位是虚幻的；国王就用不着这样，他享有权力，用不着想象。法官、医生，等等，除了享有想象力，其他一无所有。

88　是能力的结果，而不是习惯，因为富有独创性的人很少。大多数人只会亦步亦趋，并拒绝认可那些希望自己的独创性得到认可的人。如果这些人坚持要别人认可，又看不起没有独创性的人，别人就会给他们安上可笑的骂名嘲弄他们，甚至施以拳脚。因此，不要傲气夺人，偷偷地沾沾自喜吧。

94　人民的忠告。最大的祸害是内讧。

如果要奖励优点的话，必然会带来祸害，因为人人都会申明自己值得奖励。如果傻瓜生来就有继承权，带来的祸害就没有那么可怕，也未必要怕。

95　人民的忠告。优雅不仅仅是虚荣，因为它能表明很多人在为你效劳。你的头发表明你有仆人，有香水制作者，等等，领饰、配线、镶边，等等，表明……很多人服侍一个人，并不仅仅意味着肤浅的炫耀或穿着。

雇佣的人手越多，就越有权力。优雅是展示权力的手段。

98　为什么跛脚的人不会惹怒我们，而蹩脚的头脑却会？因为跛脚的人承认我们是昂首挺胸走路，而蹩脚的头脑却说瘸着走路的是我们。不过，我们应该为此感到遗憾，而不是生气。

埃皮克提图[8]问得更深刻：为什么有人说我们头痛时，我们不生气，可当有人说我们的论点或选择有问题时，我们却会生气？

99　原因是我们确信自己不头痛，不跛脚，但不敢确定是否作出了正确的选择。由于我们只对自己掌握的证据有把握，当别人掌握的证据得出相反结论的时候，我们便犹豫不决，措手不及。当有一千人嘲笑我们的选择时，情况就更是如此，因为我们应该更看重自己的判断，而不是众人的，但这样做需要胆识，所以很难。对于跛脚的人从来没有观点

上的冲突。

人就是这样：如果反复跟他说他是个傻瓜，他就相信。这样说多了，他就会说服自己相信。这是因为，人独处时在内心跟自己对话，所以有必要恰当地控制这种对话。有害的交流败坏风度。我们必须尽可能远离沉默，只在内心谈论上帝。因为我们知道上帝是真实的，所以能说服自己相信这一点。

103　权利、权势。追随权利正确无疑，追随权势确有必要。

没有权势的权利无助，没有权利的权势专横。

没有权势的权利要经受挑战，因为恶人总是无处不在。没有权利的权势要遭受指责。因此，我们必须将权利和权势结合在一起，为着这个目的，我们将权利铸进权势，或将权势铸进权利。

权利易受争论，权势易被认可，所以没有争论的余地。因此，权利不可能变成权势，因为权势会挑战权利，宣称权利不公正而自己是公正的。

由此而来，无法将权利铸进权势，我们就把权势铸进了权利。

104　生为贵族享有多么优越的地位，它赋予一个十八岁的人身份、认可和尊敬，而别人五十岁之前都可能无法赢得。这意味着他毫不费力地赢得三十年的领先优势。

105　如果在狩猎时，动物理智地作出了凭本能才能做的事，理智地说出了凭本能才能说的话，或者警告同伴错过或发现了猎物，它当然接着就会谈起对它影响更大的话题，比如它会说：“咬段这根绳子，它弄疼我了，我够不着。”

106　伟大。因果关系表明，人因为自己的贪欲创造出这么杰出的秩序，有多么伟大。

107　鹦鹉擦拭嘴巴，即使已经很干净。

108　我们身体的哪个部位能体会到快乐？是手、胳膊、肌肉，还是血液？显然是一种非物质的东西。

109　反对怀疑论。很奇怪，我们不把问题弄得模糊不清，便无法下定义；我们总是没完没了地纠缠在这些问题上。我们假设，每个人都以相同的方式推测这些问题，但这是无端的假设，因为不能得到证明。我确实看到大家在一些相同的场合使用某些词句；每当两个人看到一个物体移动位置时，都会用相同的词句表达看到的现象，每个人都会说，那个物体移动了。这种用词的一致性导致人们断言说，思想也具有一致性，但这种断言根本没有说服力，虽然奇怪的是，情况确实如此，因为我们知道，不同的假设经常得出相同的结论。

至少这足以把问题弄得模糊不清，虽然没有完全遮挡住自然之光，而在这些问题上自然之光倒能提供确定性。柏拉图主义者会为此打赌，但这会使光线更暗，惹怒教条主义者，把荣耀归于怀疑论者的小集团，它代表含混不清的模糊和费解的晦涩，我们的疑虑无法遮挡住其中的所有光亮，就像自然之光不能驱散所有黑暗。

110　我们不仅仅凭借理性掌握真理，也凭借心灵。正是凭借后者，我们才掌握了第一原理；理性与此无关，只是枉然地驳斥这些原理。除了这一点，怀疑论者没有其他攻击的目标，只是漫无目标地白费力气。我们知道自己不是在做梦，但可能无法理智地证明这一点；我们的无能除了证明理性的无能，别的什么也证明不了，也证明不了我们所掌握的全部知识的不确定性，而且这种不确定性会一直存在下去。关于第一原理的知识，如空间、时间、物体的运动、数量，正如其他凭借理

性获得的知识一样可靠，正是基于这些凭借心灵和本能获得的知识，理性才得以使用和建立论据。心灵感到，存在三维空间，存在一个无穷数列；理性接着证明，没有两个平方数，其中的一个是另一个的两倍。原理感觉到了，命题证明了，双方都得到了肯定，虽然是通过不同手段。如果理性在同意接受来自于心灵的第一原理以前，要求先证明它们，这既毫无意义，又荒谬可笑。如同心灵在同意接受所有命题以前，要求获得经过理性证明的关于命题的直觉知识，一样荒谬可笑。

我们的无能因此只效力于谦卑的理由，可它却想做万物的判官，但又不能驳倒我们的确凿事实。好像只有通过理性才能学习知识！对于上帝，则恰恰相反，我们从来不需要理性，我们凭直觉和感觉了解一切！但是大自然拒绝赋予我们这样的福祉，它赐予我们的这类知识微不足道；其他一切知识都要凭理性去获取。

这就是为什么有些人很幸运，因为上帝感动了他们的心，赋予其宗教信仰，使他们感到完全有理由信从上帝。而对那些没有信仰的人，我们只能通过推理让其获得信仰，直到上帝感化了他们，赋予其信仰；不为上帝感化而获得的信仰只是世俗的，对救赎毫无用处。

111　我诚然可以想象一个人没有手，没有脚，或没有头，因为只有经验告诉我们，头比脚更重要。但我无法想象一个人没有思想，那他将是一块石头或一个动物。

112　本能和理性，两种天性的标志。

113　思想的芦苇。我无须从空间寻求人的尊严，而是寻求我思想的秩序。拥有土地对我毫无益处。凭借空间，宇宙会像对一个微粒那样掌握我，吞噬我；凭借思想，我却可以掌握宇宙。

114　人的伟大在于他知道自己可悲：一棵树不知道自己可悲。

因此，知道自己可悲，这本身就可悲，但知道自己可悲，是伟大的。

115　灵魂的非物质性。当哲学家压抑了自己的激情时，是什么物质取得了这个效果？

116　所有这些悲惨的例子证明了他的伟大。这是一个圣明的主的悲惨，一个被废黜的王的悲惨。

117　人的伟大。人的伟大是如此之明显，甚至可以从他的悲惨推断出来，因为在动物身上是天性的东西，在人身上便称作悲惨，承认这一点的话，如果如今人的天性同动物的一样，他一定已经从曾经所处的更高境界堕落了。

除了被废黜的君主，谁真的会为自己不在王位而闷闷不乐？有谁认为保罗·哀米利乌斯[9]为自己不是执政官而不快吗？相反，人人认为他很高兴自己曾经担任这一职务，因为这个职务不是永久的。人们认为珀修斯[10]被废黜时很不高兴，因为王位是永久的，对他能够忍受不在王位的生活感到惊讶。谁会为只有一张嘴而不高兴？谁不会为只有一只眼睛而不高兴？也许从来没有人为自己没有三只眼睛而苦恼，但一只眼睛也没有的人就无以慰藉了。

118　人的伟大，甚至在于他的贪欲。他以此建立了如此杰出的体系，从而树立起真正仁爱的形象。

119　对立性。（在展示了人是如何邪恶、如何伟大以后。）现在，让人来判断自己的价值，让他自爱，因为他天生具有行善的能力；但这不是他爱自身的卑劣的理由。让他鄙视自己，因为他仍然缺乏这种能力；但这不是他鄙视这种本能的理由。让他恨自己，让他爱自己；他本身具有掌握真理，保持幸福的能力，但他并不拥有恒久不变，或令人

满意的真理。

因此，我应当激起人寻求真理的欲望，明白自己的知识如何被情绪蒙上了阴影，从而随时准备抛弃情绪，追随真理，无论在何处找到它。我想让他讨厌自身的贪欲，因为贪欲会替他做主，这样，他抉择时就不会被贪欲蒙蔽，而一旦作出抉择，也不会被贪欲妨碍。

120　我们如此狂妄，我们要全世界知道自己，甚至是那些在我们身后才来到世上的人。周围几个人的溢美之词就能让我们心满意足，这就是我们的虚荣心。

121　太明确地向人解释他如何等同于动物而不指出他的伟大之处，这是危险的；过多地说他的伟大之处，而不指出他的卑劣，这也是危险的。两种情况都不让他了解，就更危险；而两种情况都向他表明，则最为重要。

不能让人相信，他要么等同于动物，要么等同于天使；也不能让他认为，自己既不等同于动物，也不等同于天使；但他必须知道，自己既等同于动物，又等同于天使。

122　伟大和可悲。由于可悲和伟大可以互为推断出来，有些人更倾向于得出这样的结论，即人是可悲的，因为他用自己的伟大证明了这一点。而另一些人则用可悲的证据得出更中肯的结论，即人是伟大的。一方称作伟大性的证明，在另一方只不过是推断可悲的论据，因为堕落得越深，就越是可悲；反之亦然。在无休无止的循环中，一个紧跟另一个，因为可以肯定的是，人的洞见越来越深刻，所以他发现自身同时存在着可悲和伟大之处。总之，人知道自己可悲，因而，他是可悲的，因为事实如此。而正因为他知道这一点，他是真正伟大的。

123　对立性。蔑视我们的存在，无谓的死亡，憎恨我们的存在。

124　对立性。人天生轻信、怀疑、羞怯、大胆。

125　天然的信念，除了说它是习惯性的信念，还能意味着什么？对于儿童，是从父辈那里继承下来的习惯性信念，如同笼中捕兽。

习惯的改变，会产生不同的天然信念，这可由经验证明。如果存在一些习惯所不能根除的信念，就会存在其他既是习惯性的，又是非天然的信念，天性或新习惯都无法将其根除。这一切都取决于一个人的性情。

126　父辈唯恐子女天然的爱心会泯灭。那么，这种可泯灭的天性是什么？

习惯是第二天性，可以摧毁第一天性。但什么是天性？为什么习惯不是天生的？恐怕天性本身不过是第一习惯，就像习惯是第二天性一样。

127　人的天性，可以用两种方式考虑：要么以他的结局来考虑，那他就是伟大的，不可媲美的；要么以大众的品评来考虑，因为马和狗的天性是大众根据其奔跑和驱赶陌生人的能力来评判的，这样的话，人是下贱又邪恶的。这两种方式导致了不同的看法，引起了哲学家之间的争论，因为个人都否认别人的假说。

有人说：“人不是为这种结局而生的，因为他的所作所为辜负了这种结局。”其他人说：“人的行为如此卑鄙，他离这种结局相去甚远。”

128　有两样东西教导人什么是他的全部天性：本能和经验。

129　行业。思想。一切为一个整体，又变化万千。

人的天性中又有多少种天性！有多少种职业！多么偶然，多么平

淡，大家听到赞许便选择了职业。善于转向的脚跟。

130　如果他颂扬自己，我便鄙视他。

如果他鄙视自己，我便颂扬他。

我不断地否定他，直到他明白自己是一个怪物，不可理喻。

131　怀疑论者最有力的论点，暂且不提次要的论点，就是，除了能肯定这些信念是通过某种天生的直觉获得的，我们无法肯定这些信念真实可靠（信仰和神启除外）。现在这种天生的直觉没有提供令人信服的证据，证明这些信念真实可靠。除了信仰，还不能确定人是由一个仁慈的上帝创造的，还是由一个恶魔创造的，或者只是出于偶然。这样的话，根据我们的由来，这些固有的信念究竟是正确的，还是错误的，还是含糊不定，总是一个疑问。

此外，除信仰以外，没有人可以肯定他是睡着还是醒着，因为我们入眠时，我们也同样坚信我们像现在一样醒着。正如我们经常梦到我们在做梦，一个梦里又套着另一个梦，有没有可能我们的前半生不过是一场梦，其他的梦移植在里面，当我们死后，才能从中醒来呢？有没有可能在这场持续的梦境里，我们对真理和美德准则的掌握，会像在平常的睡眠里掌握得那么少呢？所有这些时间和生命的流逝、所有这些我们能感觉得到的各式各样的身体、令我们激动的种种想法，都可能只不过是幻觉，如同时间的流逝，和梦境里虚无的魅影。我们认为，我们看见了空间、形状、物体的运动，我们感觉到时间在流逝，我们计量它的流逝，事实上，我们的行为像醒着的时候一样。结果，因为前半生在睡眠中度过，我们自己承认，除了表面现象，我们对真理茫然不知，因为所有的直觉都是那段时间里的幻觉。有谁知道我们的后半生不过又是一觉，虽然自己认为是醒着，同第一觉稍有区别，睡着以后，一个个梦移植上去，然后从中醒来，虽然自己以为还睡着？又有谁会怀疑，如果我

们和别人一起做梦，大家的梦又碰巧相同，这倒是常事，如果醒来时孤单一人，我们会觉得事情颠三倒四？

这些就是各方的要点，暂且不提那些次要的论点，比如那些怀疑论者用来反对习惯、教育和当地习俗等的影响的论点，怀疑论呼一小口气就能将其推翻，虽然这种影响说服了大多数普通人，但这些人的信条是建立在这种虚假的基础之上的。你只需看看怀疑论者的书；如果你没有被彻底说服，很快就会了，也许会被过分说。

我暂且停在教条主义者唯一的可取之处，即，平心而论，我们不能怀疑天然的信念。

怀疑论者对此的简短答复是，我们由来的不确定性，必然导致我们天性的不确定性。教条主义者自从世界的开端就一直在试图回应这一说法。

（若有人想获得更多的有关怀疑论者的情况，应该去读读他们的书；他很快就会被说服，也许会被过分说服。）

这意味着人们之间的公开战争，其中每个人都必须采取立场，要么站在教条主义一边，要么站在怀疑论者一边，因为谁想象他能保持中立的话，就是一个出类拔萃的怀疑论者。这种中立性就是他们那个小集团的本质。只要不反对他们，就是他们的坚定支持者，这正是他们的优势所在。他们甚至不顾自己的利益，中立，冷漠，不再评判任何事情，包括他们自己。

那么，在这种事态下人应该何去何从？去怀疑一切，怀疑他是否醒着，是否被挤压或被焚烧？怀疑他是否在怀疑，怀疑他是否存在？

没有人会这么过分，而且我坚持认为，从来没有十足真诚的怀疑论者。是天性支撑着无可奈何的理性，防止它太失控，误入歧途。

另外，他会说他确实拥有真理，可稍有压力就不能证明自己的说法，而被迫放弃吗？

那么，人是个什么样的怪物啊！多么奇异、多么可恶、多么混乱、多么自相矛盾、多么惊心动魄！万物的判官、软弱的小人、真理的宝库、怀疑和谬误的巢穴、宇宙的荣耀和糟粕！

谁来解除这个困惑？这当然是教条主义和怀疑论望尘莫及的，是所有人类哲学望尘莫及的。人类超越了人类的理性范围。那么就让我们向怀疑论者所一贯倡导的让步，他们认为真理超出了我们力所能及的范围，是无法企及的目标，真理不是尘世的居民，它以天堂为家，躺在上帝的膝上，只有当它取悦上帝时，上帝才揭示它，让我们了解它。让我们从尚未创造出的真理和真理的化身来了解自己的真实天性吧。

如果凭借理性寻求真理，我们就无法回避这三个学派中的任何一个。没有沉闷的天性，你就不能做一个怀疑论者，或柏拉图主义者；不背叛理性，你就不能做一个教者。

天性使柏拉图主义者和怀疑论者困惑，理性使教条主义者困惑。那么，凭借天然的理性探寻自己的真实情况的你，作为人，会怎么样？你不能回避这三个学派中的一个，也不可能在三者中任何一个里面生存。

那么就知道了，骄傲的人，你自身是一个什么样的悖论。谦卑吧，无能的理性！沉默吧，软弱的天性！要明白人无限地超越人类的理性范围，要倾听你的主人讲述你的真实情况，你对此一无所知。

倾听上帝的声音吧。

人的境况具有双重性，这难道不像白昼一样清晰明了吗？问题是，如果人从未堕落过，他会清白无辜、心安理得地享有真理和幸福，而且，如果人除了堕落没有做过别的，他就不懂得什么是真理，什么是幸

福。因为我们这么不幸福（而且如果我们的境况中没有伟大的因素的话，我们应该没有这么不幸福），我们便懂得什么是幸福，但没法得到它。我们觉察得到真理的形象，但除了谎言我们一无所有，对真理我们不是绝对无知，也不是绝对了解；因此，很显然，我们曾经拥有一定程度的完美，又不幸地从中堕落。

那么，让我们设想，人的境况具有双重性。让我们设想，人类无限地超越人类的理性范围，而没有信仰相助，他仍将认为自己是不可揣测的，因为谁也看不到，除非我们认识到人类的双重性，不然我们将仍旧对自己的真相一无所知，无可奈何？

然而，令人惊骇的是，没有远离我们知识领域的奥秘，没有罪恶转嫁说，我们对自己就一无所知。

毫无疑问，能让我们的理性震惊的莫过于说，始祖的罪行牵连了后人，而他们离原罪那么遥远，似乎不可能是同犯。这个罪恶的渊源在我们看来不仅是不可能的，诚然也是最不公正的。因为在一个小孩子存在之前六千年犯下的罪行中，他的角色微不足道，也根本无法行使自己的意愿，却把他罚入永久的地狱，还有什么比这更有悖于我们可怜的正义规则？没有什么比这更粗野地震惊我们，然而，恰恰因为这个谜，这个最令人费解的谜，我们仍然令自己费解。我们的境况纠缠成一个结，给抛进那个深渊，结果，在不存在这个谜的情况下揣摩人，比人自己揣摩这个谜更难。

这表明，上帝希望我们无法理解因存在而面临的重重困难，所以才把那个结藏得那么高，或者更准确地说，藏得那么低，使我们无法够得到。因此，我们真正了解自己，不是凭借理性骄傲的活动，而是凭借它简单的顺从。

这些基本事实牢固地树立在神圣不可侵犯的宗教权威之上，告诫我

们，确实存在着两个同样永恒不变的真理。一个是人被创造出来，或者说，他沐浴着神的恩典，高高地屹立于整个自然之上，生而仰望上帝，共享他的神性；另一个是人从第一状态堕落，陷于罪恶之中，变成了野兽。这两个命题同样确定无疑。

《圣经》在一些地方公开宣布了这一点：喜悦归于人子——我要将我的灵浇灌凡有血气的——你们是神；而在另一些地方却说：凡有血气的尽都如草——人如死亡的畜类一样——我心里说，这乃为世人的缘故。

这清楚地表明，人从神恩而造，对上帝心向往之，分享他的神性，没有神恩，他将被视为田野之诸兽。

136　消遣。有时，当我开始思考人从事的各种活动，在宫廷里或争战中面临的危险和麻烦，由此引起的诸多争吵和狂怒，狂妄而常为邪恶的野心等。我就常说，人不快乐的唯一原因是他不知道如何安静地待在屋里。一个人如果一生富足，就不会离家去航海；如果懂得享受居家生活，就不会去围攻什么堡垒；如果能消受得了城里的生活，终其一生，人们都不会付出那么大的代价去买军职，而只会寻机赌博消遣，找人做伴，因为不喜欢待在家里。

但寻找引起所有不快乐的具体原因后，仔细想想，既然我了解大概的原因，我发现了一个非常切实的理由，人对自己软弱的凡人境况存有天然的不满，这境况太悲惨，认真地思索一下，便觉得无以慰藉。

想象你喜欢的任何情形，总括你可能得到的所有祝福，称王仍然是世上最美妙的事情；但是，如果你想象，一个人拥有这个地位带来的一切好处，却没办法消遣，只能苦思冥想自己生为何人，这种虚伪的福气让他过不下去；他必将开始考虑面临的所有威胁、犯上作乱的可能，最后要考虑不可避免的死亡和疾病，结果是，如果被剥夺了所谓的消遣，

他就不快乐，实在是比他最卑微的臣民还不快乐，而他们是可以享受运动和消遣的。

因此，唯一对人有好处的，是不去思索自己生为何人，方式可以是要么谋一份差事，权且忘掉这个问题；要么用新奇、惬意的嗜好让自己忙碌起来，比如赌博、狩猎、观看饶有趣味的表演，简而言之，是用消遣的方式。

这就是为什么人如此热衷于赌博和女性朋友圈子、战争和要职。这并不是说它们真正给人带来了幸福，也没有任何人指望真正的幸福在于拥有赌博赢来的钱，或猎获的野兔：谁也不会将其当作礼物。人们想要的，不是会使人想起自己不幸境况的惬意平静的生活，不是战争的危险，也不是工作的负担，而是鼓动自己停止思考，娱乐自己。这就是为什么我们喜欢狩猎胜过捕获。

这就是为什么人如此喜欢热闹；这就是为什么监禁的惩罚如此可怕；这就是为什么独处的快乐如此不可理喻。事实上，这就是为国王最大的快乐，因为人们总是试图让他消遣，让他尽情欢乐。围绕在国王身边的人唯一想做的就是让他消遣，不让他想到自己，因为尽管身为国王，一想到自己便会闷闷不乐。

这就是人为获得幸福而作的全部谋划；从哲学的观点考虑这种谋划的人坚持认为，人整天追逐野兔，但它却又不是自己想买的东西，实在是不理智。持有这种看法的人对我们的天性了解太少。野兔本身不会让我们免于思考死亡和苦难这些令人苦恼的话题，但狩猎本身却有这样的作用。因此，当有人建议皮拉斯[11]休息时，他也一直在努力争取休息，却很难做到。[12]

让一个人去休息，如同让他愉快地生活。这意味着建议他享受一种充分快乐的状态，在其中悠闲地思考，有苦恼。这意味着不了解人的天

性。

因此，人们回避休息胜过回避其他事情，因为他们生来明白自己是怎么回事；为找麻烦，他什么都可做。

那么，责怪他们就不对了；他们寻求刺激没有错——如果只是为消遣。麻烦的是，他们寻求刺激，好像一旦寻求的东西到手，就不会不由衷地快乐。这就是为什么有理由说他们的寻求是枉然的。所有这一切表明，无论是批评者还是被批评者，他们都不了解人的真正天性。

人们因急切追求永远无法满足自己的东西而受到责备时，如果认真地考虑一下，最恰当的回答应该是，他们只不过是在寻求一份激烈的、充满活力的工作，以占据自己的头脑，这就是为什么他们选择的目标足以诱惑自己，能怂恿自己热切地追求。他们的对手找不到答案，（名利，炫耀的乐趣。舞蹈，考虑好往哪里放脚。）

而他们也不那样回答，因为他们不了解自己。他们不知道，自己最需要的是狩猎，而不是捕获的猎物。贵族诚然知道，狩猎是一项伟大的运动，是王者的运动，但他的猎人没有这种感受。他们设想，如果能获得某项任命，过后就可以享受休息了，他们没有意识到天性的疯狂和贪婪。当他们真正需要的不过是活动的时候，却以为自己真心希望休息。

他们有一种秘密本能，驱使他们寻找外部的消遣和工作，这是挥之不去的苦难感带来的结果。他们还有一种秘密本能，源自天性中的伟大，他们会告诉自己，唯一真正的幸福在于休息而不是神经兴奋。这两个对立的本能搞乱藏在灵魂深处的计划，使得他们用活动的方式寻求休息，而又使得他们总是设想，一旦克服了某些明显的困难，能打开房门欢迎休息时，错失的满足感自然会到。

我们的日子都是这样度过的：我们挣扎着克服某些障碍以寻求休

息，一旦克服了，休息却显得无法忍受，因为它招致无聊。我们必须摆脱它，去渴望兴奋。

我们不考虑当下，也不考虑可能来临的苦难，而且即使我们在各方面都感到很安全，无聊也不会不从我们内心深处浮出——那是它自然扎根的地方，然后毒害我们的整个大脑。

人真是不高兴，即使没有理由也会感到百无聊赖，这是他天然的性情所致；他也真是不可救药，即使有一千零一个基本的理由让他无聊，哪怕最微不足道的事情，比如用台球杆推动一只球，也足以让他消愁解闷。

你会说："但是，他做这些的目的究竟是什么？"正因为这样做了，他明天才能向朋友们夸耀，说自己比别人打得好。同样，其他人在书房里埋头苦干，这样就可以向学者证明，他们解决了一些迄今无法解决的代数问题。许多人在我看来也一样愚蠢，他们甘冒最大的风险，这样过后就可以自诩，攻下了某个要塞。还有一些人疲于奔命，观察上面这些现象，不是为变得更明智，只是为表明他们认识那些人。这些人是地段上最大的傻瓜，因为他们明白自己在做什么，但是人人都看得出来，如果他们也明白的话，别人就不会再愚蠢下去了。

假设一个人每天赌一点小钱日子就不会乏味。如果每天早上给他一笔钱，这笔钱的数目是他当天会赢到的，但前提是他不去赌博，那你会令他闷闷不乐。或许可以这样辩解，他想要的是赌博的乐趣，而不是赢到的钱。那么就让他玩，但不赢什么，可是这样就激不起他的兴趣，会让他感到无聊，因此他想要的不仅是娱乐。让人三心二意、不能兴奋起来的娱乐会使人变得无聊。他需要刺激，他必须哄骗自己去想象：放弃赌博得到的礼物自己并不想要，而赌博赢到了才会开心。他必须为自己的爱好设定某个目标，然后为这个既定目标激起欲望、愤怒、恐惧，像小孩子涂抹出一副面孔，却吓着自己。

这就是为什么，一个人数月前失去了独子，今早又因为诉讼案和与人争吵而烦躁郁闷，可这会儿他的思绪全然不在丧子之痛。不要惊讶；他的注意力都集中在野猪将向哪个方向逃跑，他的狗已经猛烈地追逐了六个小时。这就是他所需要的。虽然一个人可能悲伤不已，但如果你能说服他做点什么来消遣一下，做的过程中他会很快乐；虽然一个人可能心情舒畅，但如果没有消遣，没有让他沉醉的激情或娱乐去摆脱无聊，他很快就会闷闷不乐。没有消遣就没有快乐；有了消遣就没有悲伤。这就是构成达官显贵快乐的东西，因为有一大批人为其提供消遣，而且他们有能力保持这种状态。

请不要误会。做总监、大法官、首席法官，其中很多人每天早上从各地赶来，不留出一个小时考虑自己，这除了说明他们享有地位，还意味着什么？而一旦失宠，被贬到乡下的房子里，没有财富享用，也没有仆人伺候，无法满足其需要，这时他们必然凄惨、沮丧，因为没有人阻止他们想到自己的惨境。

139　消遣。人自幼便有责任照应自己的荣誉、自己的财产、自己的朋友，甚至朋友的财产和荣誉，他们担负着履行职责、参加语言培训和运动的重任，并要自己懂得，如果他们或他们朋友的身体、荣誉、财产不是一切正常的话，自己就决不会快乐。他们还要懂得，只要有一件事出了差错，自己就会不快乐。因此，他们背负着责任和义务，从每天的第一刻起就开始烦恼。你会说，这个让人快乐的办法实在是奇怪；能想出更高明的办法让人不快乐吗？不然人又能做什么？你只需消除他所有的牵挂，这样他们就会看到自己，想想自己是谁、从何处来、往何处去。这就是为什么人不能太忙碌、太苦恼，这就是为什么当他们有空闲从纷繁的事物中解脱出来的时候，会有人建议他们花些时间去消遣和参加体育活动，总是让自己忙碌着。

人心是多么虚伪而险恶！

148　没有信仰的人不懂得至善，也不懂得公正。

所有人都谋求幸福，概莫能外。虽然使用的手段不同，他们都朝着这一目标努力。之所以一些人去征战，一些人却没有，其实是出于相同的愿望，只不过是用两种不同的方式表达。不是为了这个目标，愿望一小步都不肯挪动。这就是每个人采取每项行动的动机，包括那些绞死自己的人。

然而，多年以来，没有一个没有信仰的人能达到那个目标，那个人人都在不断瞄准的目标。所有人都怨声载道：王子、臣民、贵族、平民、老人、青年，精壮的、虚弱的、有学问的、无知的、健康的、生病的，在每一个国度、在每一时刻、在所有年龄段、在所有情形下。

一项持续已久、从没有停顿或变化的试验应该能说服我们相信，我们无法凭自己的努力达到至善。不过能说服我们的实例很少。没有两个例子相像得连微妙的区别都不存在，而正是这一点让我们猜想，我们的期望这次不会落空，不像上次。因此，现实从没有满足我们，经验却欺骗了我们，引导我们从一个不幸走向另一个不幸，直到死亡来临，那是终极的、永恒的高潮。

这种渴望，这种无助，除了宣布人曾经拥有真正的幸福，而现在只剩下其空空的脚印和踪迹，还有什么可宣布的？他徒劳地试图用周围的一切填补空虚，从不存在的东西里寻求从存在的东西里寻求不到的补救办法，虽然一切都爱莫能助，因为这无底的深渊只能用一个无限、永恒不变的东西填补；换句话说，就是用上帝本人。

只有上帝是人的至善，而奇怪的事实是，自从人抛弃了他，还没有发现大自然中有什么东西接替了他的位置：星辰、天空、地球、化学元素、植物、白菜、韭菜、动物、昆虫、牛、蛇、发热、瘟疫、战争、饥荒、堕落、通奸、乱伦。自从失去了他的至善，人能够从任何东西里，

甚至从他的自我毁灭里，发现他的至善，虽然这同时有悖于上帝、理性和天性。

有的人从权威中求善，有的求之于脑力研究和知识，有的求之于欢愉。

还有一些人，确实更接近至善，他们发现，人人所期盼的这个众所周知的善不可能存在于任何一个特定的物体中，因为这个物体只能由一个人独占，一旦共享，拥有者对缺失部分的哀伤，大于他对独占部分的满足。他们意识到，至善应该是这样的：它可以同时被大家拥有，不会因此而缩小，也没人嫉妒，没有人因失去它而违反自己的意愿。他们的理由是，人有这种愿望是自然的，因为所有的人必然能感觉到至善，人不能没有它，他们因此得出结论……

151　依赖伙伴的陪伴是荒唐的，跟我们自己一样可悲，无可救药；他们不会帮助我们，我们将孤独地死去。

那么，我们必须孑身一人那样去行动。如果是这样，我们会去建造精巧的房子等吗？我们应该毫不迟疑地去寻求真理。不过如果我们拒绝的话，就表明我们对人的声望的尊敬，胜过对追求真理的尊敬。

152　生命仅处于半路，在我们和天堂或地狱之间，是世界上最脆弱的东西。

153　除了十年的自爱（因为下的赌注为十年），你究竟许诺我什么了，那么努力地讨好都没用，更不要说那些痛苦了？

155　心灵

本能

信念。

156　怜悯那些正在寻觅的无神论者，是因为他们不够快乐吗？痛骂那些以此夸耀的人。

157　无神论显示精神力量，但只限于某种程度。

158　选择的时候，你必须甘愿麻烦而寻求真理，因为没有尊奉真正的原则就死去，你将迷失自己。你说：“但是，如果他要我尊奉他，他会给我留下一些迹象昭示他的旨意。”他是这样做的，你却没有理会。那么就去寻找吧；非常值得。

159　如果我们应该放弃自己一周的生命，就应该放弃一年。

160　世界上只有三种人：发现了上帝，并侍奉他的人；忙于寻觅他，但还没有寻觅到的人；活着，但既不寻觅也没有寻觅到的人。第一类人合乎情理而幸福，最后一类人愚蠢而不幸福，中间一类人不幸福但合乎情理。

161　无神论者应该谈论十分明确的事情。现在还不十分明确说灵魂是物质的。

162　以怜悯不信者开始；他们的状况足以使自己不幸福。

他们不应该遭到辱骂，除非对他们有好处，但实际上有害。

163　囚禁在牢里的人不知道对他的判决是否已宣布，只有一个小时的时间弄清楚，而一旦知道已经判决了，一个小时也足以把它推翻。如果他不利用那一小时弄清楚是否判决已宣布，却去打牌，那就太不正常了。

因此，如果人，……，就违背了所有天性。这拖累了上帝之手。

因此，这是那些寻求证明上帝存在的人的热情，也是不寻求他的人的愚昧。

164　*开始。牢狱。*我同意不必深究哥白尼的意见。而是这样：

了解灵魂可朽还是不朽，这影响我们一生。

165　剧的最后一幕很血腥，不过其余部分还不错。他们把泥土撒到你头上，这样就永远结束了。

166　我们把东西挡在面前，以防自己看到深渊，然后又懵头懵脑地跳进去。

193　*偏见导致谬误。*可悲的是看到大家争论手段，却从不争论结局。人人都考虑如何在事业上出人头地，但到了选择职业或国家的时候，却是命运为我们做主。

真是可怜，看到这么多的土耳其人、异教徒、不信从者追随着父辈的脚印，只是因为他们在成长过程中就相信这是最好的道路。这就是为什么我们每个人选择了锁匠、军人等作为自己的职业。

这就是为什么野蛮人不在乎普罗旺斯。

194　为什么要把我的知识、身高、寿命的限度设在一百年，而不是一千年？自然为什么把一切造就成这样，因为没有一个中数比另一个更引人注目，可是在没有更多的理由去选择一个中数而不选择另一个的时候，却从所有的无穷数里选择了这个，而不是那个？

195　*每样一点点。*因为我们不可能成为全才，知道应该知道的每样事情的全部，所以必须每样事情知道一点，因为每一样事情都知道一些，远远胜过知道一些事情的每一样。这种通才是最好的。两方面都做

得到，那就更好，但是，如果要选择的话，就这样选择。世人都知道这一点，也是这样做的，因为世人常常是优秀的裁判。

196　某种癖好使我讨厌声音沙哑的人，或一边吃东西一边喷气的人。癖好举足轻重。这对我们有什么好处？我们放纵癖好是因为它是天生的吗？不，是因为我们抗拒癖好。

197　想证明人类的虚荣心，最好的办法是考虑爱情的因与果，因为整个世界可以因它而改变。克利奥佩特拉的鼻子。

198　每当我看到人盲目和悲惨的处境，每当我探究整个无言的世界和没有光明的人，他好像被遗失在宇宙的这个角落，不知道是谁把他放置在那里，他来做什么，死后会怎么样，对这些一无所知，每当这时，我就感慨得惊恐，如同人在睡梦里被送到某个可怕的荒岛，醒来后倍感迷惘，走投无路。于是，我感到惊讶，如此悲惨的境地竟不能逼人绝望。我看到周围的人处境跟我一样。我问他们，是否比我更了解情况，他们说不是。然后，这些茫然可怜的人儿环顾四周，被一些东西吸引，接着便沉溺于其中。至于我，就从未沉于这种东西，而且，考虑到极有可能存在着我所看不见的东西，我曾尝试弄清楚上帝是否留下过任何踪迹。

我看到一些宗教之间发生冲突，因此，除了一种宗教，其余的都是假的。每个宗教都希望人们信从自己的权威，并威胁不信从者。我不相信他们的说法。任何人都可以这样说。任何人都可以自称为先知，但我发现了基督教，寻到了它的预言，不是所有人都有这种预言的能力。

199　人的失衡。这是我们从纯粹的知识中得出的。如果它不正确，人就不具备真理；如果正确，他就有充分的理由感到羞耻；这两种情况下他都要谦卑。

而且，由于他不相信这个知识就不能生存，在对自然进行更广泛的探究之前，我希望他认真、从容地考虑一下自然，而且也看看他自己，把自己和自然作个比较，再判断两者之间是否存在着均衡。

让人深思整个大自然丰富崇高的伟大，让他把目光掠过身边微不足道的物体；让他注目凝视那耀眼的光芒，它像点亮的灯盏，永远照耀着整个宇宙，让他把地球看作一个小点，由这颗恒星划出的巨大轨道衬托下的一颗微粒，这让他惊讶地看到，由在苍穹中运行的众多恒星划出的轨道衬托下，这个巨大的轨道只不过是其中最微小的一个点。如果我们就此收住目光，那就放开想象吧；趁大自然还没有厌倦创造，想象一下她能创造出什么产物，连想象力也会疲惫。整个可见的世界只是大自然宽广怀抱里一个觉察不到的点点。没有什么想象可以接近它；没有必要将概念延伸到可想象的空间以外，我们只消将现实世界比作原子。自然是个无边无际的球体，其中心无处不在，圆周不见踪迹。总之，它是展示上帝全能的最伟大的可见标志，我们的想象会迷失于这个想法中。

让人回头思索自己本身，把自己与存在的物体相比较；让他暂且认为自己迷失了，让他从自己寄居的这个小小牢笼里，我指的是宇宙，学会以其应有的价值接受地球、地球的疆域、地球的城邦、地球的房舍，以及他自己。

人在苍穹中的角色是什么？

为了再向他展示一个同样令其震惊的奇观，让他探究已知的最微小的东西。让一只螨虫向他展示自己小小身躯里小得无与伦比的各个部分——带关节的腿、腿里的血管、血管里的血、血里的汁液、汁液里的血滴，血滴里的水汽；让他继续把这些东西分割下去，直到想象力穷尽，并让最后一样物质作为我们讨论的话题。他也许会认为这是自然界最最细微的物质。

我想向他展示一个新的深渊。我不仅想向他描绘这个可见的宇宙，还要描绘包含在这个微小原子里可以想象的广袤自然的一切。让他看到有众多无边的宇宙，每个都有自己的苍穹、自己的行星、自己的地球，比例和可见世界里的相同，那个地球上有各种动物，最后是螨虫，从这些螨虫身上得出和第一只一样的结果；从其他螨虫身上也发现了同样的东西，无穷无尽，他将迷失在这些奇迹中，惊异于它们的细微，像惊异于其他物体的广阔。谁能不惊诧，我们的身体，片刻之前在一个宇宙里还感觉不到，因为它处在一个整体的怀抱里，细微得让人感觉不到，现在，同无法企及的虚无相比，它却应该是一个巨人、一个世界，或者说一个整体？用这样的方式思索自身的人会被自己吓着，而且，看到自然赋予他的质量将他维系在无限和虚无这两个深渊之间，他将面对这奇迹发抖。我相信，随着好奇心变成赞叹，他将更倾向于默默地思考，而不是带着假设去探究这些奇迹。

人在自然中的角色究竟是什么？与无限相比，是一种虚无，与虚无相比，是一个整体，是一切和虚无之间的中间点，无限地远离认识的极限；事情的结局和本源不可企及，深藏于无法破解的秘密之中。

看不到他出自于其中的虚无，也看不到他淹没于其中。

那么，除了感知些微中间状态的表象，而永远没有希望知道其本源或结局，他还有什么可为？一切出自虚无，归于无限。谁能懂得这些惊人的过程？只有奇迹的创造者，没有他人。

由于没有考虑到这些无限性，人们贸然承诺探索自然，好像他们和大自然之间存在着某种均衡。

奇怪的是，他们被一个像自己探究的对象一样无限的假设激励着，想了解事物的本源，然后从那里出发继续去探究一切。毫无疑问，没有无限的假设，或没有像自然一样无限的能力，就发现不了这个计划。

我们认识得更清楚时，我们就会理解，既然自然雕刻出自己及其所有产物的创造者的形象，它们就几乎都拥有大自然的双重无限性。因此，我们看到，各门科学都具有无限的研究范围，因为，以数学为例，谁能怀疑数学阐释无限命题的无限性？科学的无限性也体现于其原则的多重性和细微性，因为任何人都可以看到，那些应该是终极的东西，却不能自圆其说，而要依赖其他学说，其他学说又依赖其他学说，因此永远也没有结局。

在理性看来是终极的东西我们才将其看作是终极的，如同对物质的东西，由于我们的感官感觉不到一个点以外的东西，我们便称其为不可分割的点，虽然根据其性质是可以无限分割下去的。

科学的这两个无限性当中，范围的无限广阔更为明显，这就是为什么几乎没有人声称他们无所不知。“我要论及一切。”德谟克利特[13]常常这样说。

但是无限的细微却难以觉察。哲学家们却很轻率地声明已经达到了细微的程度，而这正是他们犯错误之处。那些人们熟悉的标题便来源于此，像《事物的原则》《哲学原理》等，这些题目实在是自命不凡，虽然看起来不像《可知的一切》这个言过其实的题目一样。

我们自然相信，我们掌握事物核心的能力比掌握其外表要大，世界的可见程度显然比我们所见的要大。由于从我们来看，比小的东西大，我们便认为自己更有能力驾驭它们，然而，企及虚无需要的能力并不比企及整体需要的小。无论哪种情况下，都需要一种无限的能力，而且在我看来，任何人理解了事物的终极原则，就会成功地领会无限。一个依赖于另一个，由一个通向另一个。这些极端从相反的方向接触，会合，它们相会于上帝，也只有相会于上帝。

那么，让我们来认识自身的局限。我们是某物，但不是万物。我们

的自身存在对我们隐瞒了来自于虚无的第一原理的知识，我们自身存在的渺小使我们的视线无法触及无限性。

我们的智慧在智力序列中所处的顺序，等同于我们的身体在整个自然领域中所处的位置。

因为各方面的局限，我们发现这一个反映在我们各项能力上的两个极端间的中间状态。我们的感官感觉不到极端；喧哗过度使人耳聩，光线太亮令人目眩；太远或太近，都看不清楚；论据过长或过短都含糊不清，真理过多让我们困惑。我知道有人弄不懂为什么零减四等于零。第一原理对我们来说太过直白；太多的快乐导致苦恼；乐曲里和弦太多惹人心烦，过分的好意使我们恼怒；我们希望能超额偿还债务。好意在能偿还的条件下才受欢迎。太过分时，感激变成了仇恨。

我们感觉不到极度的热，也感觉不到极度的冷。过度的高品质并不好，让人觉察不到；我们再也感觉不到，反而受罪。太年轻和太老都影响思考；学识太多和太少也一样。

总之，极端好像不为我们存在，我们也不为极端存在；极端逃离了我们，或者我们逃离了极端。

这就是我们的真实状态。它使得我们无法获得确凿的知识，也无法绝对地无知。我们漂浮在一个范围广阔的中间状态里，总是行踪不定，给吹来吹去；每当我们认为有个固定的点可以抓住安身时，它却转身离开我们。我们跟上去，它就躲避我们，挣脱我们的抓握，永远逃离我们。没有什么因我们而一成不变。这就是我们的自然状态，但最有悖于我们的意愿。我们热切地希望找到一个坚固的立足点，一个终极、持久的基座，在上面建立一个直达无限的高塔，但我们的基座整个塌陷，大地裂开，变为深渊。

那么，让我们不追求确定也不追求稳定；我们的理性总是被表象的不一致所欺骗。没有什么可以确定两个无限之间的有限，因为这两个无限包含有限，又回避有限。

一旦清楚地认识到这一点，我觉得每个人就可以安静地停留在一种状态里，就是大自然把我们安置于其中的状态。既然分配给我们的中间站总是远离极端，如果别人对事物的理解略高一筹又有何妨？如果他是这样，而且理解得更深刻一点，他不是仍然无限地远离目标吗？我们融入永恒的生命即使延长十年，不也是同样短暂吗？

从这些无限性的角度来看，所有的有限都地位平等，于是我认为没有理由把想象力放于其中的一个而不是另一个之上。仅仅把我们自己同有限相比较就令人痛苦。

如果人探究自己，他将看到自己是多么无力取得进展。部分怎么可能知道整体？也许他会渴望至少知道跟自己有关的那些部分，然而，世界的各部分紧密相连，我觉得不可能只知道一部分，而不知道其他或整体。

例如，一个人和他已知事物之间的关系。他需要容纳他的空间、他存活的时间、生存的动机、构成他的元素、滋养他的温度和食物、呼吸的空气。他看得见光线，感觉得到身体，总之一切都与他有关。因此要了解人，一个人必须知道他为什么要靠空气生存，要了解空气，一个人必须知道它与人的生命有怎样的关系，等等。

没有空气，火焰就不能燃烧，所以，想了解一样，就必须了解另一样。

因此，既然一切事物都既是结果，也是原因，既是接受援助的，也是提供援助的，既是间接的，也是直接的，将一个链条上最远、最迥异

的东西无形中自然地联结在一起，相互支持，那么，我认为不了解整体就不可能了解各个部分，如同不了解各个部分就不了解整体。

事物本身的永恒，或存在于上帝的永恒，一定仍然使我们惊奇，贯穿短暂的一生。

大自然固定、始终如一的不动性，相比我们自身的不断变化，一定会产生同样的效果。

我们之所以无法完全地认识事物是因为它们本身简单，而我们却是由两个不同、对立的性质构成的，即灵魂和肉体。这是因为，我们能推理的那个部分，除了是精神的，不可能是别的，即使它被宣布为完全是肉体的，而这会更加妨碍我们了解事物，因为，说物质了解自己，没有比这更不可思议的。我们不可能知道它如何了解自己。

因此，如果我们完全是物质的，我们就一无所知，而且，如果我们是由精神和物质构成的，我们就不能完全了解那些仅仅是精神的，或仅仅是肉体的东西。

这就是为什么几乎所有的哲学家都混淆了对事物的看法。他们从精神的角度谈论物质的东西。从物质的角度谈论精神的东西，因为他们敢于断言，肉体趋向于堕落，追求自己的核心，逃离毁灭，害怕空虚，有自己的爱好、同情、反感等一切只跟精神有关的东西。谈到精神时，他们认为精神处于一个地方，有从一个地方运动到另一个地方的属性，然而这些东西只跟肉体有关。

我们不接受这些事物纯正的概念，却用我们自己的品质给它们涂上色彩，把我们混合而成的自我存在刻印在所考虑的简单事物上。

看见我们把精神和物质混为一谈，谁能不认为这种混合体对我们来说其实有多么清晰明了？然而这正是我们最不了解的事物；人对自己来

说是自然界最伟大的奇迹，因为他无法想象肉体为何物，更无法想象精神为何物，最无法想象肉体何以能联结到精神上。这是他最大的难题，然而这却是他的自身存在。精神何以寄居到肉体上，这是人所无法理解的，然而这正是人的构成。

最后，为完成对我们自身无能的证明，我就以对这两个问题的考虑结束……

200　人只是棵芦苇，自然界中最脆弱的东西，但却是棵思想的芦苇。整个宇宙没有必要挥拳将其粉碎：蒸汽、水滴就足以将其扼杀。即使宇宙要将其粉碎，它仍然比刽子手高贵，因为它知道自己行将死去，知道宇宙比它强大，然而宇宙对这些却毫不知情。

因此，我们所有的尊严都在于思想。正是思想，我们要依靠其复兴，而不是依靠空间和时间，因为我们永远无法将其填补。那么让我们力求深思熟虑，这是基本的道德原则。

201　无限空间的永恒沉默让我充满恐惧。

202　尽管放心；你并不求它来自于你本身，正相反，你要以对自己无所求的方式去求它。

271　耶稣的所作所为是教人爱自己，教人知晓自己是奴仆、盲人、患者，悲苦不幸、罪孽深重，教人知晓他必须传播福音，启迪心灵，洗清罪过，治愈病痛，教人知晓他的痛苦和十字架上的殉难，他们会悔过自新，追随自己，这样他的教导便会如愿以偿。

273　那些难以信从的人寻找借口，说犹太人不信从。他们说："如果是那么清晰的话，他们为什么不信从？"他们几乎想让自己信从，这样他们就不会因犹太人拒绝信从的例子而断了皈依的念头，然而，正是他们的拒绝才成全了我们的信念。如果他们站在我们的立场，我们就不

会这么心甘情愿地信从；那样的话，我们应该找个更好的借口。

让犹太人喜欢预言，仇视应验，这是件非常好的事情。

281　永恒。这个宗教信仰在于，相信人类已经从荣耀和与神交流的状态堕落到暗淡无光、悔过自新、与神疏远的地步，但此生之后，我们会蒙应许的弥赛亚而再生，这信仰一直存在于世。

一切均已消逝，只有让万物蒙恩的信仰永世长存。

在世界初期，人受引诱犯下各种罪行，但有像以诺、拉麦等那样的圣人，他们自世界开端便耐心祈盼应许给他们的基督。诺亚看透了人的邪恶，他用自己的美德拯救世界，对他所预示的弥赛亚满怀希望。亚伯拉罕蒙上帝展示弥赛亚的奥秘，从远处欢呼，那时他正被偶像崇拜者包围。以撒和雅各的时代，世人彼此憎恶，但这些圣人坚守信念，雅各临终前停下给孩子的祝福，满怀喜悦地呼喊："主啊，我祈盼着你应许的救世主。"

埃及人盛行偶像崇拜和魔术，即使是上帝的子民也被他们的做法冲昏了头脑。然而，摩西和其他人仰望到埃及人无法看到的上帝，并尊奉他，期待着他为他们准备的永恒的礼物。

其次，希腊人和拉丁人顶礼膜拜假神。诗人发明了一百门神学，哲学家将其划分成一千个教派。然而，在犹太人的内心，总是有上帝的选民预言弥赛亚的降临，只有他们获此晓谕。他终于在时机成熟之际降临，从那以后，我们经历了频繁的分裂和异端邪说、众多国家的倾覆、纷繁的变化，而教会对他的尊奉从没有停止。这个宗教肇始就饱受攻击，却得以生存下来，这足以显示其美妙绝伦的神圣。它无数次面临毁灭，每一次都有上帝昭显非凡的力量，挽救其于彻底毁灭的边缘。它没有向专制统治者卑躬屈膝却延续了下来，这足以让世人惊奇；这是因为

在一个尚存的国度里，法律有时要向需求让步，这不足为怪，但是……（见《蒙田》中圈出的部分）

284　唯一违背天性、违背常识、违背我们欢悦的宗教，是唯一永存的那个。

308　肉体和精神间的无限距离，象征着精神和仁慈之间更无限的距离，因为仁慈是超自然的。

伟大所具有的全部辉煌，都不足以供给那些追求精神的人们所需的光亮。

智力佼佼者的伟大对君王、富人、将领来说是看不见的，因为后者的伟大属于肉体意义上的。

智慧的伟大，如果不是来自神明，便一无是处，肉体的人或心智非凡的人看不到它。这三者是性质不同的三个秩序。

伟大的天才自有自己的力量、自己的辉煌、自己的伟大、自己的胜利和自己的荣耀，他们不需要肉体的伟大，因为肉体的伟大与他们毫不相干。他们由精神而不是眼睛认可，这对他们足矣。

圣人自有圣人的力量、圣人的辉煌、圣人的胜利、圣人的荣耀，不需要肉体的或心智的伟大，这与他们毫不相干，因为这既不增加什么，也不减少什么。他们由上帝和他的使者而不是肉体或好奇心认可。上帝对他们足矣。

阿基米德即便令人费解也让人心怀崇敬。他从未在有形的战场作战，但他的发现丰富了每一个心灵。他照亮了人心！

耶稣既不富有，也没有外在的学识，但自有其圣洁的秩序。他没有

发明创造，也不实行君主统治，但他谦逊、耐心，对神明虔诚，令魔鬼畏惧，又纯洁无瑕。在感知智慧的心灵里，他的降临是多么伟大、辉煌、壮丽的盛况！

阿基米德用不着在其数学专著里扮演王子的角色，虽然他就是王子。

我们的主耶稣基督用不着以王者的身份，闪耀着他神圣统治的光辉降临，而千真万确，他是披载着自己秩序的辉煌降临人间。

为耶稣的卑微而震惊，实在荒唐，好像他的卑微同他的降临彰显的伟大为同一秩序。

如果我们考虑到他的伟大彰显于他的一生、他的激情、他的默默无闻、他的死、他选择使徒的方式、使徒对他的遗弃、他的秘密复活，以及一切的一切之中，我们没有理由为一种毫不相干的卑微感到震惊。能认识到这一点就了不起。

但有些人只能欣赏肉体的伟大，好像不存在精神的伟大。而其他人只钦佩精神的伟大，好像不存在更加无限崇高的智慧的伟大。

所有的肉体、苍穹、星辰、地球和它上面的王国，都比不上一点点精神，因为精神了解它们，也了解自己，而肉体却一无所知。

把所有的肉体放在一起，把所有的精神放在一起，创造出的产物也不值得仁慈产生一丝冲动。这是一个无限至高无上的秩序。

用所有的肉体也不能创造出一丝思想。这是不可能的，这是一个不同的秩序。用所有的肉体和精神也无法让真正的仁慈产生一丝冲动。这是不可能的，这是一个不同的、超自然的秩序。

310　耶稣基督存在的证明。认为使徒是恶棍的假设实在是荒诞不经。顺着这个假设一直想下去，设想这十二个人在耶稣遇难后聚会，密谋对外宣称他复活了，这意味着向一切权势发起进攻。人心容易因浮躁、变化、承诺、贿赂产生动摇，这简直不可思议。其中一个使徒在这些诱惑下只好否定自己的过去，或因可能的监禁、折磨和死亡而作出更过分的举动，使徒们会迷惘失落。顺着这个假设一直想下去。

332　预言。如果一个人写了本书，预言耶稣降临的时间和方式，而且耶稣的降临应验了这些预言，其意义将无限深远。

它的意义也远不止于此。在四千年的岁月里，人一代又一代，始终如一地预言着同一个降临，这是整个民族的宣言，在其生存的四千年岁月里，在一个身体上验证他们的信念，而且无论什么样的威胁和迫害，他们都百折不挠。其深远意义有着不同的秩序。

335　对耶稣最有力的证据是预言。上帝为这些预言作了最好的安排，因为预言的应验是个奇迹，从教会诞生直到最终都是如此。因此，在一千六百年的时间里，上帝哺育了先知，在此后的四百年岁月里，他将预言传播给所有犹太人，他们把预言带到世界的每一个角落。这是为耶稣诞生所作的准备，而且，由于他的福音必由举世仰望，预言不仅让人信奉福音，还要把这些预言传遍全世界，让全世界都信奉福音。

351　基督教很奇怪；它要人认识到自己有多么卑鄙，甚至是恶毒，它要人希望能像神明一样行事。如果没有这个制衡，得意会让人沦入可怕的虚荣，自卑会让人陷入可怕的低贱。

352　苦难让人绝望。

得意让人自负。

耶稣化身成人是用所求的救赎的伟大，向世人显示他苦难的伟大。

356　就服从性来说，一个士兵和一个天主教加尔都西会教士有什么区别？他们都顺从、依赖、隐忍于苦行，但是，士兵始终渴望成为自己的主人，却从未实现这一愿望。即使是将领和王子也始终都是奴仆，依赖于他人，但他一直渴望着，始终努力实现这一目标，而教士则发誓要永远依赖。因此，他们都处于永久的被奴役地位，这始终是他们的共同命运，不过，一个总是抱有希望，另一个却从没有一丝念头。373我们必须只爱上帝，只恨自己。

如果脚从来不知道它属于身体，有身体可以依赖，如果它只知道自己，只爱自己，如果它后来知道自己其实属于身体，并依赖身体，它将为过去的岁月感到多么遗憾，多么羞愧啊，因为身体为它注入了生命，它却对其毫无用处；如果身体拒绝它，割掉它，像脚把自己从身体上割断，它将不复存在！它该如何祈求把自己保留下来！它该如何顺从地让掌管身体的意愿来统治自己，甚至必要的话可以接受截肢！不然的话，它就不是其中的一员，因为每个成员都必须为主体而心甘情愿地消亡，因为一切都为主体而生。

378　他们说："如果我看到了神迹，我就会皈依主。"他们何以这么肯定会做自己不懂的事情？他们设想，这种皈依在于对上帝的尊崇，像他们勾画的那样，如同一种交流或对话。真正的皈依在于面对万能的神的自我毁灭，为这个神我们经常争论不休，而他完全有权在任何时候摧毁我们，也在于承认没有他我们将一事无成，而且除了失宠于他，我们不配得到任何东西。真正的皈依在于知晓神和我们之间的对抗不可调和，而没有调解者，就没有我们和他的交流。

392　象征。上帝希望为自己创造一个神圣的民族，与所有其他民族区别开来，将他们从敌人手中解救出来，将他们带到一个休憩的处所。上帝许诺了这一切，并由其先知预言他降临的时间和方式。为坚定他各个时代的选民的信念，他向他们昭示了这一切会是怎样一番景象，

他向他们保证他有拯救他们的力量和意愿，然后才离开。上帝创造人类时亚当可以为此作证，他得到应许，一位女子会诞生出救世主。

离上帝创世不久，世人还不会忘怀上帝如何创造他们，自己如何堕落；当见过亚当的人不在人世时，上帝便派来了挪亚，他用神迹彰显他救世的力量和意愿，从而拯救了挪亚，淹没了整个世界，并让那位感孕的女子诞生出他许诺的人子。

这个奇迹足以让他的选民更加坚定地期盼那一天的到来。

世人对那场洪水还记忆犹新。当挪亚还活着时，上帝向亚伯拉罕许诺；当闪还活着时，上帝派来了摩西……

403　悲惨。所罗门和约伯最懂得人的苦难，也作了最好的诠释：

一个是最幸福的人，一个是最不幸福的人；一个凭经验懂得享乐的空虚，另一个了解痛苦的现实。

412　人的疯狂如此不可避免，不疯也等于疯狂地扭动疯狂。

414　悲惨。唯一能慰藉我们苦难境况的是消遣，然而，这才是我们最大的苦难，因为它最能阻止我们思索自己，无形中把我们引向毁灭。我们会厌倦消遣，迫使我们寻求更可靠的手段去逃避。消遣会消磨时间，使我们在不知不觉中走向死亡。

418　无限——虚无。我们的灵魂给投进身体，它在那里发现了数量、时间、尺度；它将这一切理性化，称其为天生的，或必要的，除此以外，它不相信任何东西。

把单一添加到无限，无限丝毫不会增加，就像把一英尺添加到无限的长度上：有限消逝于无限之中，成为纯粹的虚无。因此，这就像我们

的心智之于上帝，我们的公义之于神的公义。我们的公义和神的公义之间，正像单一和无限之间，并没有多么大的不对称。

上帝的公义一定像他的慈悲情怀一样宽广无边。如今，他对被诅咒之人的公义，我们对此的惊诧，就不及他对他的选民的慈悲情怀了。

我们知道存在着无穷，却无从了解它的本质，正如我们知道，说数字是有限的，这不是事实。因此，确实存在一个无穷数，但我们不知道它是什么。说它是偶数，不对，说它是奇数，不对，因为增加一个单位，也不会改变其性质。然而，它是一个数字，每个数字不是偶数就是奇数。（的确，这适用于每一个有穷数。）

因此，我们可以清楚地知道神的存在，却无从知道他是怎么回事。

看到存在这么多真实的事情，本身却并不确切，难道就不存在真正的真理吗？

因此，我们知道存在着有限，也了解它的本质，因为我们自己也是有限的，在空间延伸。

我们知道存在着无限，却不了解它的本质，因为虽然它也延伸，但不像我们，它无可限量。

我们既不知道是否存在上帝，也不了解他的本质，因为他既不延伸，也无可限量。

我们凭信念相信他的存在，凭荣耀了解他的本质。

现在，我已经证明，很有可能知道存在某个东西，但不了解其本质。

现在让我们借着自然之光讲话。

如果有上帝，他就无限地超出我们的理解范围，因为他的不可分割和无可限量说明他与我们无关。因此，我们无从了解他是怎么回事，或他是否存在。既然如此，谁还敢来试图回答这个问题？当然不是我们，与他无关的人。

那么，谁还会谴责基督徒无法对自己的信仰作出理智的解释，扬言他们不是出于理智信仰一个宗教？他们宣布，向世人阐释这样的信仰是愚蠢之举，然后你抱怨说，他们无从证明这一点。如果他们真的证明了，反倒说明他们没有信用。没有证据才表明他们不是没有理由。“是的，尽管这能给人们提供借口信仰这样的宗教，并为受到的无理指责开脱，可并不能为接受信仰的人开脱。”那么就让我们来考察一下这个问题，让我们说：“上帝存在，或者不存在。”然而我们应该倾向于哪个观点？理性不能判定这个问题。无限的混乱将我们隔开。在这个无穷距离的尽头，一枚硬币在旋转，然后会正面朝上，或反面朝上地落下来。你将赌什么？理性不能驱使你选择任何一面，也不能证明选择任何一面是错的。

那么，就不要谴责有所选择的人做错了事，因为你对此一无所知。“不，我谴责他们，不是因为他们作出了这样的选择，而是不管作任何选择，因为，虽然一个选择正面，另一个同样错了，他们确实都错了：稳妥起见，什么都别赌。”

是的，但你必须赌。没有任何选择，你已经作出承诺。那么你会选择哪一面呢？让我们来看一下：既然必须作出选择，让我们来看看哪个带来的好处最小。你会失去两样东西：真与善；有两样东西可做赌注：你的理性和你的意愿，你的知识和你的幸福；你的天性想避免两件事情：错误和悲惨。既然你必然要选择，选择一个而不是另一个，就不会冒犯你的理性。这一点已经确定无疑，但你的幸福呢？让我们权衡一下选正面赌上帝存在的得失。我们估计一下这两种情况：如果赢了，你将

赢得一切；如果输了，你什么也不会损失。那么，就不要犹豫，赌他存在。“太好了。是的，我必须下赌注，但也许我押得太多了。”让我们看看：既然是一个得失参半的机会，如果你敢以一个生命赌两个生命，这个赌注仍然可以下，但假设你能赢得三个生命呢？

你将不得不赌（因为你必然要赌），而一旦要赌，不在一场输赢机会参半的赌博里拿自己的生命冒险，去赌三个生命，你就是不明智的。生命和幸福是永恒的。这样的话，尽管无限的机会中只有一个偏爱你，以一个生命赌两个，仍然是对的；因为不得不赌，而在那场赌博的无数次机会里，只有一次对你有利，可一旦赢了，赢得的无限幸福的生命又是无限的，在这种情况下，如果拒绝以一个生命去赌三个，你就错了。这里，因为赢得无限幸福的生命是无限的，一个赢的机会对应有限输的机会，所以你押上的赌注是有限的。这样，就没有选择的余地；哪里有无限，不是无限输的机会对应一个赢的机会，哪里就没有犹豫的余地，你必须押上一切。因此，既然你必然要赌，你却贮藏生命，不拿它去赌一个无限的收益，就像蒙受的损失可能等于零一样，如果是这样的话，你就是宣布放弃理性。

因为不能说：还不确定你是否能赢，你肯定在冒险，而且在你所冒风险的确定性和你所赢得收益的不确定性之间，存在着无限的距离，这距离使你确定地押作赌注的有限利益等于你不确定得的益。并非如此，每一个赌徒都押上一个确定的赌注，去赢得一个不确定的利益，但他是在押上确定的有限赌注，去赢得不确定的有限收益，这不违背理性。确定的赌注和不确定的收益之间不存在无限的距离：情况不是这样。确实，在赢的确定性和输的确定性之间，存在着无限的距离，但赢的不确定性和押上的赌注的确定性之间的比例，同赢或输相对应的机会是对称的。因此，一方面的机会等同于另一方面时，你输赢的机会相等。在这种情况下，你押上的赌注的确定性，等于你会赢得的收益的不确定性；它们之间绝没有无限远的距离。在一场赌博中，当赌注有限，输赢机会

参半，而且会赢得无限的奖赏时，我们的辩论便有着无限深远的意义。

这已成定论，而且如果人能获得真理的话，这便是真理。

“我忏悔，我承认，但确实没办法看到底牌吗？”——“有。有《圣经》和其他东西，等等”——“是的，但我的手被捆住，我的嘴被封住；我被迫打赌，没有自由；我被驱赶着；我天生就是这样，没法信从。你要我怎么样呢？”——“这是事实，但你至少要明白，如果你不能信从，那是情绪在作怪，既然理性没法逼你信从。那么就集中精力逐渐消除这股情绪，而不是成倍地放大上帝存在的证明，以说服自己信从。你想寻求信仰，但不知道路在何方。你想治愈没有信仰的病痛，而且寻求治疗的方法：向那些曾经像你一样被束缚，现在却押上了一切的人学习吧。这些人知道你要走的路，他们的苦恼已经被治愈，也正是你想治愈的苦恼：沿着他们的路走下去吧。他们蘸了圣水，做了弥撒，等等，所作所为看起来真的是信从了。这会使你十分自然地信从，会使你更顺服。”——“但这正是我害怕的。”——“为什么？难道会失去什么吗？只是指给你那条路，这确实会抑制你的情绪，因为情绪已成为你的巨大障碍……”

“那么，选择这条道路究竟对你何害之有？你会忠诚、可靠、谦逊、感恩、多结善果，是一个诚挚、真正的朋友……的确，你将无法享受害人的欢乐，无法享受荣耀及安逸的生活，但你不会获得其他东西吗？

“我来告诉你，你今生就将获益，在这条道路上每迈出一步，你都会看到收益是如此确定无疑，赌注是如此无足轻重，最终你会发现，你赌的东西确切而无限，而你什么也没有付出。”

“这些话让我充满了喜乐！——”

“如果我的话让你心悦诚服，你要知道这些话出自这样一个人之口，他始终在跪求一个无限而不可分割的生命，向他交付出自己的生命，而且为了你好，为了他的荣耀，而可能把你的生命也交付给他：卑贱者由此获得了力量。”

427　[反对冷漠]让他们至少在攻击这个宗教之前了解它究竟怎样。如果这个宗教自诩清楚地看到了上帝及其存在的清晰而明显的证据，那么反对者说在这个世界看不到他存在的明显证据，这样反对很有效。但是，正相反，这个宗教认为，人处于黑暗之中，远离上帝；而上帝把自己隐匿起来，不让人了解他，在《圣经》里他就将自己称为：Deus absconditus[隐匿的上帝]；总之，如果这个宗教同样努力去证明两个事实：上帝在教会中确定了明显的标志，这样，真诚地寻求他的人才会认出他；他依然把标志隐藏起来，只有一心寻求他的人才会察觉到他，那么，人们并不像自己表白的那样关心寻求真理，却抗议没有把迹象显示给他们，这样做有什么意义？他们发现自己处于这种幽晦之中，又利用幽晦反对教会，而这幽晦恰恰使教会坚持的一样东西得到承认，而不会影响到其他，从而使这个宗教得到确认，而远远谈不上证明它是谬误。

为了全力攻击真理，他们会抗议说，他们竭尽全力，到处寻求它，甚至是在教会提供的训导里，但遍寻不到。如果这样说的话，他们就确实是在攻击基督教的某一个主张了。我希望在此表明，通情达理的人不会这样讲话。我甚至敢说，从来没有人这样说过。我们十分清楚人们在这种思想框架下如何行事。他们认为自己付出了巨大努力去学习，可实际上却只花了几个小时阅读经书，向神职人员询问问题，了解信仰的真相，之后，他们就声称，他们在书里，在人群中寻找，但都没有找到。可我的确应该对他们说我常说的话：这种漫不经心是不能容忍的。这不是某个陌生人微不足道的兴趣导致行为的问题：这是我们自己的问题，我们所有人的问题。

灵魂永生，这一点对我们意义极其重大，影响极其深远，一个人要完全失去感觉才会不关注对其真相的了解。我们的行动和思想遵循的路径特别不同，因此，根据能否有希望获得永恒的祝福，凭感觉和判断行事的唯一可行方法就是根据这一点决定我们的路径，这应当是我们的最终目标。

因此，我们主要关心的以及我们的主要职责是，寻求神明对这一问题的启示，我们所有的行为也依赖于此。这就是为什么在那些不信从的人当中，我把两种人完全区分开：一种是竭尽全力去探寻的人；一种是活着，但不给自己找麻烦，或不思考的人。

一些人真诚地哀叹自己的疑虑，将它视为最大的不幸，但又不努力摆脱它，把寻求当作主要的、最严肃的事情。对这些人，除了怀有怜悯，我没有其他感觉。

一些人了此一生，却从未想过寻找生活的最终目标，他们在自身找不到信仰之光，也不屑到别处寻找，也不深究一下，人们接受这个观点是出于轻信和幼稚，还是因为这个观点虽然本身幽晦，其基础却牢不可破：对这些人，我持有完全不同的看法。

对他们自己、他们的永恒、他们的一切都处于危险之中的问题漠不关心，这让我愤怒，远过于怜悯，也让我震惊、恐惧、难以置信。这并非出于我精神信仰的虔诚热情，我的意思恰恰相反，人类的利益和自尊原则就应该使我们产生这种感情。因此，我们只要具有最不开化者的见识就可以了。

人的一生没有真正、确切的满足，一切欢悦毫无价值，烦闷苦恼无边无际，最后一点是，死亡每时每刻都威胁着我们，数年之后就会确定无疑地到来，我们面临无法逃避的骇人选择，要么毁灭，要么陷入永恒的悲惨。认识到上面这些，不需要具有伟大高尚的灵魂。

没有比这更真实，或更可怕的。让我们权且大胆地面对：那就是最后的结局，它等待着世上最杰出的生命。让我们仔细想想这些问题，然后问，是不是毫无疑问，我们今生所做的唯一善事就是盼望来生，我们快乐是因为我们接近来生，而且，就像就一些人而言，前面没有更多的忧愁等着，是因为他们十分确定永恒的存在，就另一些人而言，前面没有幸福等着，是因为他们没有得到暗示。

存有这样的疑虑确实是一大罪恶，但有疑虑而去寻求答案，至少是履行不可推卸的义务；因此怀疑者不寻求答案，同时也就不会幸福，就是错误的。如果他还公开宣称自己平静满足，甚至因此寻欢作乐，满足虚荣心，我就找不到任何辞藻来描述如此放肆的东西了。

何以产生这样的感受？除了期待无可奈何的悲惨结局，其他无可期待，还有什么理由能找到欢乐？为什么让虚荣陷入不可逾越的黑暗？一个理性的人又如何能这样辩解？

“我不知道是谁把我投放到这个世界，不知道世界是什么，也不知道我自己是谁。我简直一无所知。我不知道我的肉体是什么，我的感官是什么，或者我的灵魂是什么，甚至不了解在考虑我讲话的那部分，它反映一切，也反映自身，但对它自己了解的程度，不及对其他的了解。

“我看到宇宙可怕的空间将我包围起来，我发现我附着在这个广袤苍穹的一角，却不知道为什么把我放置于此地，而不是彼地，或者为什么把我短暂的生命分配到先我而往，继我而来的无边岁月中的此刻，而不是其他时刻。我只看到周围的无限，它吞没了我，像吞没一个原子，或一个瞬间飞逝的影子。我只知道我行将死去，但对无法回避的死亡，我知之甚少。

“正如不知道我从哪里来，我也不知道我要到哪里去。我所知道的是，当我离开这个世界的时候，我将永远陷入虚无，或落入愤怒的上帝

手中，但我不知道这两个状态中哪个是我永恒的归宿。这就是我的状态，软弱而不确定。我从所有这一切中得出的结论是，别想探究什么会来临，就这样了此一生。我的疑惑也许会得到某种启示，但我不想自找麻烦，也没有费半点努力去寻找；然后，因为我嘲笑那些人向这个目标努力，——不论他们多么确定，最后都会绝望，而不是空虚——我自己则无忧无虑地得过且过，预见不到会面临一件大事，结果让自己软绵绵地走向死亡，不知道我将来在永恒里是个什么样子。”

谁愿意自己的朋友这样辩解？有谁会选择他做知己？谁会在逆境中向他求助？生活中他能有什么用处？

与这么不理智的人为敌，真是宗教的荣耀：他们的攻击对我们构成的威胁微不足道，相反，恰恰有助于证明宗教的真相。对基督教的信仰几乎完全在于证明这两样东西：人性的腐败和基督的救赎。现在，我坚持认为，如果他们不用圣洁的行为证明救赎的真相，至少是以这么不人性的态度完美地证明了人性的腐败。

就人来说，状态无比重要：永恒无比可怕。因此，有人不理会丧失自我，不理会面临永恒悲惨的危险，这是违反天性的。在所有其他事情上，他们则大不相同：他们担心区区小事，能预见到和感觉到这种小事；那个人为失去官职，或为丢失所谓的面子，而日日夜夜愤怒、绝望，就是他，明明知道将在死亡中失去一切，却没有一丝一毫的焦虑或感伤。看到一个人，还有他的心，对微不足道的事情如此敏感，对极端伟大的事物如此奇怪地麻木，真是可怕。这是一种不可思议的魔力，是一种被无限的力量支配着的超自然的迟钝。

人性一定经历过一种奇怪的逆转，才使人为处于某种状态而得意洋洋，而一个人竟该处于这种状态，简直是不可思议。经验告诉我，很多人都喜欢这样，如果我们不知道有关的人大部分都在装腔作势，不是他们真实的样子，这倒不可思议了。这些人听说，言行放肆是礼貌的举

止。这就是他们所谓的摆脱枷锁，是他们正试图效仿的样子，但是，让他们知道用这种方式获取声名是错误的，这并不困难。即使凡夫俗子都不用这种方式沽名钓誉，因为他们处事理智，知道成功的唯一途径是要显得真诚、可靠、明智，可以给朋友帮上忙，因为出于天性，人都喜欢别人能为其所用。听到有人说他已经摆脱了枷锁，说他不相信有上帝在监视自己的行动，说他是自己行为的唯一主人，准备为自己的行为负责而不靠别人，听到这些对我们有什么好处？他以为这样做，从此以后就赢得了我们的充分信任，使我们今生一有需求便期待他的安慰、忠告、帮助？他们告诉我们，而且是以一种得意洋洋、津津乐道的腔调说的，我们的灵魂不过是一阵风、一缕烟，他们以为告诉我们这些会给我们带来极大的快乐吗？这是快乐地诉说的事情吗？正相反，这是世界上最大的悲哀，要伤心地诉说的吗？

如果他们认真想一想，就会发现这样做其实是误入歧途，违背良知，有碍体面，无论如何离自己追求的礼貌举动相距甚远，本来更有可能将有意追随他们的人改造过来，而不是使其堕落。确实，让他们形容一下致使自己怀疑宗教的感受和理由：他们的话拙劣而空洞，劝你相信却适得其反。正如有一天有人得体地对他们说："如果你一直那样说服我，你真的会让我皈依主呢。"他说得没错，看到自己跟那么卑劣的人有同感，谁能不退而避之？

因此，装腔作势的人如果强行压抑自己的天性，让自己成为最傲慢的人，确实会不幸福。如果因为不能看清真相而内心苦闷，他们就不应该装出另外一副面孔：承认这一点并不羞耻。除了没有信仰，其他的没有什么好羞愧的。没有认识到不信上帝就不幸福，这是精神极端软弱最确定的标志；不期盼永恒的许诺会实现，这是邪恶之心最确定的标志；厚颜无耻地与上帝对峙，这是最怯懦的表现。那么就让他们把这种对神不敬的罪名，留给那些粗野得能够竭尽不敬之能事的人；如果不能做基督徒，让他们至少做个体面人；简单地说，让他们承认只有两种人合乎

情理：一种人尽心尽力地侍奉上帝，因为他们认识他；另一种人尽心尽力地寻觅他，因为他们不认识他。

至于那些活着，但既不知道他，也不寻觅他的人，他们认为只值得麻烦自己稍作尝试，也就根本不屑去麻烦别人，而且，要想不鄙视这些鄙视宗教的人，不抛弃他们，而任其愚蠢，这个宗教要倾其所有怜悯才能做到。一方面，宗教要求我们，要在他们的有生之年始终尊重他们，要相信他们会得到神启的恩典，相信在短时间内他们可能会比我们更有信仰；另一方面，现在蒙蔽他们的也可能会蒙蔽我们自己。因此，把我们想要的，也赋予他们，呼吁他们怜悯自己，至少向前迈出几步努力寻求光明。让他们花几个小时研读，否则会把时间浪费在其他事情上：他们可能会不情愿于此，但有可能会发现点什么，至少不会损失太多。对那些精诚寻求，真正渴望寻求到真理的人，我希望他们如愿以偿，信服于我在这里收集的，表明这一宗教是如此神圣的证据，或多或少地按照这个顺序……

429　这就是我所看到并困惑我的东西。我环顾四周，看到的都是黑暗。除了怀疑和焦虑，我从大自然一无所获。如果没看到神祇的迹象，我会作出相反的决定：如果造物主的迹象处处可见，我会安然信主。因为看到太多要否定的东西，而看不到足够可以肯定的东西，所以我的境况令人同情，我千百次地渴望，如果有神明维系着大自然，大自然会毫不含糊地将神明宣布出来，如果大自然显示的迹象都是骗人的，则应该彻底清除；大自然应该要么畅所欲言，要么一言不发，这样我就知道何去何从。相反，处于这种不知道自己是谁，也不知道自己应该做什么的状态，我对自己的境况和职责都一无所知。为追求至善，我用整个身心去认识至善：为永恒付出的代价不会过高。

我羡慕那些忠心耿耿的人漠然地活着，不好好享用馈赠，如果是我就会别有他用。

430　其他人没有意识到，人是最优秀的生物。一些人充分意识到他的优秀有多么真实，把软弱怯懦、忘恩负义当作人卑微的天然情感；而另一些人，充分意识到这种卑微有多么真实，傲慢地嘲讽人天生的伟大情怀。

一些人说："抬起头来看上帝，看看他，你与他相似，他把你创造出来崇拜他。你可以把自己造就得像他一样：如果你想追寻他，你就会因智慧和他平等。"——"昂起头，自由的人。"埃皮克提图[14]说。

其他人则说："低下头来看地面，你是蛆虫，再看看那些禽兽，你与它们为伍。"

那么，人究竟是什么？人会等同于上帝，还是等同于禽兽？多么可怕的距离！那么，人究竟应是什么？谁能不从这一切看出，人已经迷失了，从原来的位置堕落了，他在急切地寻找原来的位置，但再也找不回去了？那么，谁能把他引领到原处？最伟大的人都无可奈何。

434　设想一下，一些人戴着镣铐，已经被判处死刑，每天都有一些人在其他人的注视下死去；留下来的从同伴那里看到了自己的命运，他们面面相觑，充满悲伤和绝望，等待着轮到自己。这是人类状况的反映。

450　真正的宗教信仰会教人什么是伟大和悲惨，会激发自尊与自卑，热爱与憎恨。

470　人最卑鄙的特点是沽名钓誉，但也正是这一点，最清楚地表明了他的卓越。无论他在这个世界上拥有什么样的财富，享有什么样的健康或必不可少的安逸，都不及他享受同类的赞誉带来的满足感。他高度重视人的理性，不管在这个世界上拥有什么样的特权，如果不能同时在人的理性上占有优越的地位，他就不幸福。这是世界上最好的位置，

没有任何东西可以使他偏离这一愿望，这是人内心最无法改变的品质。

有些人极端鄙视人类，把人看作禽兽，但仍然希望得到他们的敬佩和信任，感受同自己背道而驰，因为他们的天性无比强势，能更有力地说服他们相信人的伟大，胜过理性说服他们相信自己的卑劣。

474　当创世记开始隐入往昔，上帝提供了一个近代史学家，并责成整个民族保管这本书，这样，这本书就是世界上最权威的历史，所有的人都可以从中学习必须掌握的知识，也只能从这本书学习。

477　傲慢是一切形式的苦难的平衡力和解毒剂。这里有一个怪物，犯了明显的过失。他从原来的位置堕落到这里，急切地想寻找回去。所有人都在做这件事。让我们看看谁找到了。

480　在所有的宗教中真诚都必不可少：真正的异教徒，真正的犹太人，真正的基督徒。

499　什么人曾经拥有更大的荣耀？

整个犹太民族在他降临前预言他。外邦人在他降临后尊崇他。

外邦人和犹太人都把他作为自己的中心。然而，什么人曾经享有这么小的荣耀？

在三十三年的生命中，他三十年没有露面，三年被视为骗子。祭司和当权者排斥他，最亲近的人鄙视他，最终他因被一门徒背叛，被另一个门徒否认，被所有人抛弃而死去。

他从这荣耀中得到了什么好处？没有人享有过如此巨大的荣耀，也没有人蒙受过更大的耻辱。这一切荣耀归我们受用，使我们能够认识他，而他自己却没有享受过一丝一毫。

505　权威性。道听途说远远不是信仰的标准，只有把自己放入一种似乎闻所未闻的状态才能相信。

内心认同，符合自己而不是他人的理智，才能相信。

信仰至关重要。

一百个异义都有可能是对的。

如果年代久远是信仰的标准，那么古人就没有标准。

如果要依据普遍赞同的标准，那么如果人死了呢……

惩罚罪人：错误。

虚假的谦逊，傲慢。

揭露真相。

你在浪费时间，一个人要么相信，要么否定，要么怀疑。

那么我们就没有标准了吗？

动物做事时，我们可以判断他们是否做得好，对人就没有评判的标准了吗？

否定、相信和怀疑之于人，像奔跑之于马。

510　人愈聪明，就愈多地发现有独创性的人。普通人看不到人与人之间的差异。

511　正确的思维有不同的形式，有些人遵守事物的特定顺序，如果按其他顺序的话，就会误入歧途。

有些人从少量原理中得出正确的结论，这是正确思维方式的一种。

还有人从涉及大量原理的事物中得出正确的结论。

例如，一些人很好地掌握了水的性质，其中涉及很少几个原理，但其结论是如此微妙，只有极为精准的头脑才能得出这些结论。这些人可能都不是大数学家，因为数学包含了大量原理，而且一个人的智力可能是这样的，它可以轻易、正确地掌握少数几个原理，但对涉及众多原理的事物却一筹莫展。

因此，有两种才智：一种迅速地从原理中得出深刻的结论，这是精准的头脑；另一种可以把握大量原理，并将其区分开来，这是数学头脑。第一种是功能强大而又精准的头脑，第二种显示出才智的广度。现在，很可能是二者不可兼得的状态，因为一个头脑可能是功能强大而思路狭窄，也可能是思路宽广而功能弱小。

513　数学。直觉。真正的雄辩没有时间雄辩，真正的道德标准没有时间遵守道德标准。换言之，判断的道德标准没有时间判断任意发挥的心智的道德标准。

判断建立在本能之上，就像知识建立在心智之上。直觉充当判断的角色，数学充当心智的角色。

没有时间从事哲学的人是真正的哲学家。

517　如果圣奥古斯丁[15]出现在今天，像他的现代捍卫者那样仅享有一点点权力，他将一事无成。上帝有效地统治他的教会，把他早早地派来，并赋予他权力。

518　怀疑论。——极度聪明被谴责为愚蠢得极度缺乏聪明；只有适度才恰如其分。这是大多数人的规则，谁偏离了这一点，有任何极端

的倾向，就会受到攻击。我不会很别扭，非常同意给放在中间，但拒绝在底端，不是因为它在最下面，而是因为那是终结，因为我也同样会拒绝被在顶部。放弃中庸就是放弃人性。

人类灵魂的伟大在于懂得如何保持这个方向；伟大并不意味着偏离这个方向，而是保持在这个方向上。

526　作恶容易；作恶有无数的形式，而行善几乎是独一无二的。某种恶行很难发现，就像善行一样，由于这个缘故，这种特定的恶行往往冒充善行。确实，做这种恶需要具有异常伟大的灵魂，就像达到至善一样。

532　怀疑论。我会在此让我的思绪见诸笔端，因为思绪涌来了，而且也许并非呈一种毫无目的的混乱状态。这是真正的秩序，总是杂乱无章地显示我的目的。

我如果按顺序写下去，题目就太荣幸了，因为我在设法证明它是无法享受顺序的。

533　我们总是想象柏拉图、亚里士多德身着长长的袍服，其实他们跟普通的体面人一样，也会跟朋友谈笑风生。他们撰写《法律篇》和《政治学》用以消遣，以此为乐。这是他们生活中最没有哲理、最不严肃的一部分：最富有哲理的部分是生活简单，不小题大做。

如果撰写政治著作，他们仿佛是在为疯人院制订规章制度。

如果他们假装把它当成真正的要事来处理，这是因为他们知道，正在与之对话的疯子相信自己是帝王。他们迁就这些信念，以便使疯子冷静下来，又尽可能少受伤害。

535　一些恶习通过其他恶习纠缠我们，把主干除掉，它们就会像

树枝一样散落下来。

540　所有的好格言都已存在于世：我们只是不加以运用。

例如，没有人怀疑，为保卫共同利益，应该拿生命冒险，许多人都是这样做的，但不是为宗教信仰。

人与人之间必然存在着不平等，的确如此；但是，一旦准许这种现象存在，大门不仅向最有权威的规则敞开，也向最有权威的专制敞开。

有必要稍微放松一下精神，却为极度过分敞开了大门。

让我们给限度下个定义。事物没有界限，法律试图强行设定一些，但精神不能忍受。

542　思绪随意来，随意去。没有器具可以捕获或拥有它们。

一个思绪逃走了：我试图将它见诸文字：可是我却写道，它逃离了我。

545　“凡世界上的事，都是肉体的欲望、眼目的欲望，或今生的骄傲。”悲惨的境况是受诅咒之地，被这三条火河侵蚀，而远非灌溉！岸边的人有福了，因为不受火河浸泡，不被洪流卷走，他们坐着，而不是站着，处于低又安全的位置，在河边稳固不动。他们不会在火光中起身，而是平静地休息后，向他伸出手，由他扶起，昂首挺胸，沉稳坚定地站在耶路撒冷神圣的门廊前，骄傲不能把他们打垮；不过，他们哭泣，不是因为看到急流卷走终将腐朽消亡的东西，而是因为想起他们心爱的家园，天堂般的耶路撒冷，在流离失所的漫长岁月里，他们常常想念它。

551　想象以奇怪的夸张把微小的物体放大，直到满足我们的灵

魂，又以大胆的傲慢把伟大的事物缩小到自己的大小，就像谈及上帝时那样。

561　他们说，日食、月食是灾难的征兆，因为灾难频繁，足以证明对厄运的预测准确；但如果他们说，日食、月食是好运的征兆，他们往往是错的。他们只将好运归于罕见的天体现象，所以预测很少有误。

562　只有两种人：正直的人，认为自己是罪人；罪人，认为自己是正直的。

577　如果不孤注一掷的话，对宗教就什么也别做，因为对它还不确定。我们碰了多少次运气啊：航海，征战。我认为，觉得它不确定，就什么也别做。宗教所具有的可确定之处，多于我们活到明天会见到的东西。

虽然不能肯定我们明天还能看得见，但可以肯定，我们有可能看不见。对于宗教，我们不能这样说。不能肯定它是真的，但谁敢说，可以肯定它有可能不是真的？

现在，当我们为明天而努力，去碰运气时，所作所为顺理成章，因为我们应该根据已经证实的概率法则去冒险。

圣奥古斯丁看到，我们在海上冒险，在征战中冒险，等等，——但他没有见过概率法则，证明我们应该冒险。蒙田看到，糊涂的头脑会惹怒我们，习惯可以为所欲为，但他不知其原因。

这些人都只看到结果，没有看到原因。他们与发现了原因的人相比，就像只有眼睛的人同有头脑的人相比，因为在某种程度上结果可以为感官所感觉到，而原因只能由头脑觉察到。尽管头脑可以看到这些结果，这种头脑同能看到原因的头脑相比，就像肉体的感官有可能同头脑相比。

585　在人性间的某种关系中存在某种形式的或强或弱的魅力和审美倾向，以及让我们感到惬意的某种东西。

一切符合这一形式的东西都吸引我们，它可能是一座房舍、一首歌曲、一次演讲、一首诗歌、一篇散文、一位女子、鸟类、河流、树木、房间、衣物等。

一切不符合这个形式的东西都会使有品位的人不悦。

基于这种美好的形式，一首歌和一座房舍之间存在着一种确切的关系，因为两者各代表一种形式，虽然是各自的方式；同样，基于拙劣的形式，事物也同样存在着一种确切的关系。并不是只有一种拙劣的形式，其实其数是数不清的，但是，以十四行诗为例，每一首拙劣的十四行诗，不管它以什么样的错误形式写就，都酷似一位女子照着这一形式装扮自己。

理解一首拙劣的十四行诗如何荒谬，再好不过的办法是，考虑一下其特点和形式，然后想象套在这种形式里的一位女子或一座房舍。

595　除非我们知道自己骄傲自大、充满野心、贪欲横流、虚弱无能、悲惨可怜和不仁不义，不然就真的是瞎了眼睛。如果有人知道这一切，还不希望被拯救，还有什么可说的？

那么我们又怎能不崇敬对人的缺陷了如指掌的宗教？除了渴望一个千真万确的宗教，因为它许诺了我们所渴求的救赎，我们还能渴望什么？

607　象征。救世主、天父、献身者、献祭、食物、国王、智者、立法者、受折磨的人、穷人，注定要诞生出一个民族，由他引领和哺育，并带到乐土。

620　人显然是为思考而生。他所有的尊严和价值就在于思考；他全部的义务就是像他应该的那样去思考。现在，思想的顺序从我们自己开始，从我们的造物主和我们的结局开始。

如今世人都在考虑些什么？从来没有别的，只是舞蹈、弹琴、唱歌、作诗、跑马挑圈，等等，还有搏斗、称王，却不思索做一个国王或一个人意味着什么。

622　厌倦。人处于完全的休息状态，没有激情、没有工作、没有消遣、没有努力，会忍无可忍。

然后，他就会面对无足轻重、孤独、无能、依赖、无助、空虚。

接着，立刻由灵魂深处生出无聊、沮丧、抑郁、懊恼、愤恨、绝望。

623　活在世上但不试图弄懂自己是怎么回事，如果这是非天然的盲目的话，那么过着罪恶的生活，同时又信奉上帝，就是可怕的盲目。

627　虚荣顽固地扎根于人的内心，一个士兵，一个随军杂役，一个厨师，或一个搬运工都会自夸，期待有人崇拜，甚至哲学家也期待拥有崇拜者；用文字反对哲学家的人，想享有写得好的声望，读的人想享有读过的声望，也许我本人写了这些文字，也想获得同样的东西，也许我的读者……

631　寻求至善却毫无结果，弄得疲惫憔悴，这是件好事，这样就可以向救世主伸出双手。

632　人对琐碎小事的敏感和对最伟大事物的漠然，是怪异混乱的标志。

633　尽管满目的苦难打动了我们，扼住了我们的喉咙，我们却具有一种无法抑制的本能，让自己振作起来。

634　人生最重要的是选择职业，它取决于机遇。是习惯的势力造就了泥瓦匠、士兵、屋顶建筑工。他们说：“他是个很好的屋顶建筑工。”谈到士兵时他们说：“他们疯了。”而相反，其他人则说：“战争的伟大无可比拟，其他人毫无价值。”幼年时听到对这些职业的溢美之词，就把其他职业排除在外，我们便这样选择了职业。因为我们天生热爱美德，憎恨愚蠢；某些字眼起决定性作用，只是我们运用这些字眼时出了问题。

习惯极其强大，天性只造就了人，而我们自己则造就了各式各样的人和各种各样的情况。

一些地区出泥瓦匠，一些地区出士兵，毫无疑问，天性是不尽一致的：是习惯造成了这种情况，因为它支配天性，但有时天性会战胜习惯，让人服从本能，无论是什么样的习惯，好的或坏的。

638　我们健康时想知道，如果生病了该怎么办。生病时，我们兴高采烈地服药；疾病帮我们解决了问题。我们不再怀有对消遣和远足的激情和欲望，因为消遣和远足只跟健康的身体有关，同生病时的危机不协调。天性激发出的激情和欲望是符合我们目前状态的。是我们自己的担心，而不是天性扰乱了我们，因为担心将我们现在所处的状态同我们不处于其中的状态所具有的激情联结在一起。

649　蒙田。蒙田本身具有的优点，别人要费尽周折才能具备。如果有人警告过他，他小题大做，谈论自己过多的话，他本身具有的缺点——我指的是除品行以外的——本可以在瞬间得到改正。

668　每个人对自己都意味着一切，因为一旦他死了，对他来说一

切都消逝了。这就是为什么我们每个人都认为他对每个人意味着一切。我们不要根据自己而要根据人性的标准判断人性。

674　我们不以自己的力量，而是凭两个对立的罪恶之间的抗衡保持美德，正如我们在两股相向的逆风吹动下能保持直立。除掉一种罪恶，我们便跌入另一种罪恶。

685　荣耀。动物不互相钦佩。马匹不佩服它的伙伴。这并不是说它们不互相竞赛，而是这样没有意义，因为回到马厩时，更笨重的那匹马不会由于那个缘故把自己的燕麦让给别人的马，像人希望他人对自己那样。对它们来说，美德是它对自己的奖赏。

688　什么是自我？

一个人走到窗口看路过的人，如果我路过，我能说他是去看我吗？不，因为他没有特别地想到我。如果有人因一位女子的美貌而爱她呢，他爱她吗？不，因为天花会破坏她的美貌虽然不会毁掉她本人，这会结束他对她的爱情。

如果有人因为我的判断力或记忆力爱我，他们真的爱我吗？我，我本身？不，因为我可能会失去这些素质而不会失去我自己。如果这个自我既不在肉体上也不在灵魂里，它到底在哪里？除了爱这些素质，一个人怎么能爱躯体或灵魂，因为素质并不构成自我，而且是会消失的？我们会抽象地爱人的灵魂的实质，无论它包含什么样的素质吗？这是不可能的，这将是错误的。因此，我们永远不会爱任何人，而只爱素质。

让我们停止嘲笑那些因得到任命和官职而感到荣耀的人，因为除了借来的素质，我们从来没有爱过任何人。

693　世人认为最安逸的生活条件，在上帝看来最为艰苦；反之亦然。世人认为宗教生活最为艰苦，因为在上帝看来没有比它更安逸的事

情。按照凡夫俗子的生活方式，享受高官或财富最为安逸，什么艰苦也比不过按上帝的方式生活，因为毫无兴趣，也不以此为乐。

696　别让人说我的话没有什么新意；素材的布局是新的。打网球时，双方使用同一个球，但其中一个人打得更好。

马上就会有人告诉我说，我用的是旧词。同样的想法但布局不同不会形成新的论据，正像同样的文字但布局不同却会形成新的想法！

697　生活放荡的人告诉规矩的人，说他们违背了天性，而认为自己遵循天性；这就像船上的人认为，岸上的人在移动。不管在何处，对一件事情的说法也是这样：我们需要一个固定的点来判断说法。港湾是船上乘客的裁判，但道德的港湾在哪里？

699　当所有的东西在同时移动，就显得没有什么在动，就像在船上。当每个人都在走向堕落时，就看不出有人在走向堕落，但如果有人站住，就会显出别人倏忽而过，自己就成了固定的点。

709　我们对自己知之甚少，许多人身体健康却以为自己快要死了，而许多人濒临死亡，没有感觉到自己马上就要发热或长脓，却以为自己身体健康。

711　力量。缘何要服从大多数人？是不是因为他们更正确？否，是因为他们更强大。

缘何要遵循远古的律法和主张？是不是因为它们最健全？否，是因为它们独一无二，没有争论的余地。

712　一天有人告诉我，他忏悔后觉得快乐，充满自信。别人告诉我，他仍然恐惧。我的反应是，这两种感受合起来可以造就一个好人，因为他们当中的一个如果不具备另一种感受的话，就会缺失什么。同样

的情况也常常发生在其他相关联的事物上。

739　如今真理是如此模糊不定，谎言是如此确定无疑，除非我们热爱真理，不然永远都认不出它的面目。

740　懦夫了解真理，但只是在对自己有好处时才坚持真理，不然就放弃它。

741　加法机产生的效果比动物的任何行为都更接近思想，但它没有理由断言，会像动物一样有意愿。

742　即使他们说的不影响大家的利益，也不能肯定地推断他们没有说谎，因为有些人只是为说谎而说谎。

743　怒海行船，但肯定不会丧生，是可以乐在其中的。这就像教会受到迫害那样的情况。

744　我们不了解事情真相时，有个常出错的问题供人琢磨也是件好事，比如，月亮造成的季节变化、病情的发展，等等。因为人的主要毛病是，对无法了解的事物抱有无尽的好奇心，与其无谓地好奇，还不如犯错误。

746　事实上，无论是约瑟夫[16]、塔西佗[17]，还是其他历史学家，都没有谈及耶稣基督。

这绝不是反对他，相反，是对他有利。可以肯定，耶稣基督存在，他的宗教引起了轰动，所以很明显，他们是故意不提，或者他们提到了，但隐瞒或篡改了真相。

749　有一种判断，就是没有人不把自己凌驾于世人之上，没有人不希望自己好、自己永远幸福、永远生存下去超过希望世人如此。这种

判断实在是歪曲事实。

750　克伦威尔想摧毁整个基督教世界，要不是一粒小小的砂子窜进他的膀胱，他就推翻王室，建立了自己长久的强权政治；甚至罗马也将在他的脚下颤栗。而他正是死于这粒砂子，家人蒙羞，天下太平，君主复位。

751　习惯于凭感觉判断的人对涉及推理的问题全然不知。因为他们想一眼就看清问题，而不习惯于探寻原则。其他人就相反，习惯于从原则进行推理，对涉及感觉的问题毫不了解，因为他们探寻原则，不能一眼就看清问题。

752　两种人使一切等同，如节假日和工作日，基督徒和牧师，他们自身的所有罪孽。由此，有人得出结论说，对牧师不好的，对基督徒也不好；而另一些人得出结论说，对基督徒不错的，对牧师也是许可的。

753　当奥古斯都听说希律王处死的两岁以下儿童中有自己的儿子时，他说，做希律王的猪胜过做他的儿子。（麦克洛比乌斯[18]的《农神节》，第二卷，第四章）

754　第一度：被责怪做得不好或被赞扬做得好。第二度：不受赞扬也不受责怪。

755　他制造出一个假神。

令人恶心。

756　思想。人所有的尊严都在于他的思想，但这个思想是什么？多么愚蠢！

那么思想从本质看，是令人赞叹的，不可媲美的。它一定是具有离奇的缺陷才应受到蔑视，但它确实有缺陷，这真是可笑之至。由于本质它是多么伟大，由于缺陷它又是多么卑微啊。

757　流失。感觉到一个人拥有的全都流失掉了，真是匪夷所思。

758　光明。黑暗。如果没有明显的真理的迹象，就会有太多的黑暗。真理令人赞叹的一个标志是，它始终存在于有形的教会和会众之间。教会里只有一种主张的话，就有更多的光明。一直存在的那个是真正的宗教，因为真正的一直存在，从没有存在过假的。

759　思想构成了人的伟大。

764　所有大型的消遣都有害于基督徒的生活，但在世人发明的所有消遣形式中，剧场最为可怕。那里自然、巧妙地上演着激情，从而唤醒、激发出我们内心的激情，特别是爱的激情；尤其是当它表现贞洁和美德时。因为它表现得越纯洁，就越能打动纯洁的灵魂，所以它热烈的气氛吸引着我们的自尊，使它立即产生一种欲望，想制造出生动的表演所产生的效果。与此同时，我们的良心适应了我们所看到的无可指责的感情，因为这感情消除了纯洁心灵的恐惧，他们想象以爱去爱别人，纯洁之心就不会受到伤害，是慎重之举。

因此，当我们离开剧场时，心里充满了爱情的美好和甜蜜，内心相信自己的纯洁，完全准备好接受爱的第一次感觉，或者寻找机会，在别人的内心唤起这样的感觉，这样我们就可以享受到在剧场里观看到的、精心表演的那种欢悦和牺牲。

765　如果雷电袭击低洼的地方，等等，诗人和只能争论这类事情的民众得不到证据。

767　因为公爵、国王和地方法官的头衔是真实而必要的（因为权

力统治一切），所以它们存在于任何时代，任何地方，如果仅仅是心血来潮才册封出这样或那样的人，头衔没有一贯性，也就容易变异。

768　理性的命令必须服从，胜过服从主人的命令，因为不服从这个命令的话，会令我们不快，但如果不服从另一个的话，则是愚蠢的。

773　只是竞技本身，而不是胜利吸引我们。

我们喜欢看动物搏斗，而不是将一方征服后的胜利。除了最终的胜利，我们还希望看到什么？一旦决出胜负，我们就看够了。赌博和追求真理也是这样。我们希望看到辩论中不同的意见互相冲突，但一旦发现了真理，我们还会对它作一番深思吗？绝对不会。如果要享受真理，就必须看到它在辩论中产生。感情也一样，看到两种对立的感情发生碰撞是种愉悦，而当一方声称自己处于优势时，就变得残忍了。

我们从来不设法获得什么东西，而是追求过程。因此，剧场里无遮无拦的幸福场景不好看，好不过极度而无奈的痛苦，或冷酷的爱情，或野蛮的行径。

802　时间治愈痛苦，平息争吵，因为我们在变化。我们已不再是原来的自己；既不是冒犯者，也不是被冒犯者。这就好像一个人惹怒了一个民族，两代以后回来拜访他们。他们仍然是法兰西人，但已是不同的法兰西人。

803　如果我们每天夜里做同样的梦，梦会像我们每天看到的物体那样影响我们。如果一个工匠能每晚十二个小时梦到他是国王，我相信他会像一个国王每晚十二个小时梦到他是个工匠那样高兴。

如果我们每晚梦到被敌人追杀，为这些幻象所困扰，白天又做其他事情，就像旅行时的情况，我们会像确有其事似地受罪，会害怕去睡觉，因为害怕醒来时真的会遭遇不测。实际上这种梦魇带来的痛苦，几

乎和现实带来的一样。

因为梦各不相同，而且即使在同一个梦中梦境也会变化，因为连续性的原因，梦中看到的东西比醒着时看到的影响要小一些。除极少数情况以外，这种连续性并非连续、平稳得没有变化，只是变化得不那么突然，就像在旅途中，我们说："这就像一场梦。"因为人生就是一场梦，但似乎没有那么多变。

804　难道说，人承认原罪是因为他们说公义已经离开了这个世界？没有人称得上幸福，直到他死去。这是否意味着他们知道，永恒、绝对的幸福从死亡开始？

805　了解一个人的主要兴趣，就可以取悦他，但人的喜好可能有悖于自己的利益，这个利益是他自己概念中的利益，这个怪事令人不安。

806　我们不满意自己的生活，想过一种想象的、别人眼里的生活，所以就设法制造一种印象。我们不断地努力美化和维护想象中的自我，而忽视了真实的自我。如果我们冷静、大方或忠诚可靠的话，就渴望别人知道，这样就能将这些美德同我们的其他自我联系起来；我们想让美德脱离真正的自我，使之与其他自我统一起来。如果能赢得勇敢的声望，需要做懦夫我们也兴高采烈。这清楚地表明，我们的自我是多么微不足道，它会因为缺失了一样，就不满足于另一样，常常拿一个换另一个！因为不为挽救荣誉而死的人，就不会声名远扬。

808　有三种方法信从：理性、习惯、灵感。基督教本身就具有理性。基督教不承认不是因灵感而信从的人为其真正的孩子。这并不是说它排斥理性和习惯，恰恰相反，但我们必须接受那些证据，通过习惯坚定自己对它的信心，同时因蒙羞而获得灵感，只有这样，才能产生真正、有益的效果。免得基督的十字架毫无意义。

812　福音书的风格在许多方面都引人注目，其中包括从没有抨击过基督的刽子手和他的敌人。因为历史学家的著作从没有抨击过犹大[19]、彼拉多[20]或任何犹太人。

如果福音书显示出作者的这种克制，以及这种优秀品质的其他众多特点，如果他们写出来只是为了引起别人注意，而自己不作这样评论的话，不会没有朋友为他们说话。正是由于他们不虚伪，不偏激，才没有引来任何评论。我相信，这样的事情有很多以前都没有评论过。这表明这件事干得有多妙。

813　出于良知作恶，会作得充分而愉快。

814　我们滥用自己的感情，就像滥用自己的思想。

我们的思想和感情是我们交往的人训练的，也被我们交往的人滥用，我们交往的好人或坏人分别训练或滥用我们的思想和感情。因此，重要的是能够作出正确的选择，使我们对其进行训练，而不是滥用。除非这种选择能力已经被训练出来，而不是被滥用，否则我们作不出这种选择。这是个恶性循环，但任何人都能有幸逃脱。

815　普通人有能力不去考虑自己不想考虑的事。“不要考虑那些有关弥赛亚的段落。”犹太人对儿子说。我们自己人也经常这样，这就是虚伪的宗教是如何保存下来的，就大多数人而言，即使真正的宗教也是这样。

但是有些人无力阻止自己思考，越是被禁止，就越要思考。这些人摆脱了虚伪的宗教，甚至真正的宗教，除非能找到确凿的论据。

816　他们说：“如果我有信仰的话，我会很快放弃寻欢作乐的生活。”但是我告诉你：“如果放弃寻欢作乐的生活，你很快就会有信仰。现在，由你决定是否开始。如果我可以给你信仰，我会给的。但我不

能，也不能证实你说的是真的，不过你可以轻而易举地放弃寻欢作乐，证实我是否在说真话。”

817　无可否认；人必须承认，基督教蕴含惊心动魄的东西。他们会说：“这是因为你出身于基督教家庭。”远非如此；我态度强硬地反对这个理由，因为害怕被偏见腐蚀。纵然我出身于基督教家庭，我仍然情不自禁地感到惊心动魄。

937　我们因爱好而做事的时候，便忘记了责任。例如，如果喜欢一本书，我们就会读这本书，而这时我们本应该做别的事情。但要记住我们的责任，无非是要决定做我们不喜欢的事情；这样我们就有借口做别的事情，从而也就记住了责任。

938　福音书中用于形容病态灵魂的是患病的肌体。由于一个肌体不能生出那么多的病症，用以恰当形容病态的灵魂，就需要有多个肌体，因此，我们看到聋子、哑巴、瞎子、瘫子、麻风病患者、魔鬼附体的人。所有这些都一起给放到病态的灵魂里。

939　“仆人不知道主人做什么”，因为主人只告诉他要做什么，而不告诉他目的。这就是他为什么盲目地服从，又往往与目的背道而驰。但是耶稣基督向我们晓谕了目的。

而你却破坏了那个目的。

940　耶稣不想以不公义的形式被处死，因为死于公义之手远比死于不公义的反抗更蒙羞。

[1]法国波旁王室鸢尾花国旗。——译者注

[2]克利奥佩特拉（Cleopatra），古埃及艳后，公元前69年10月—公元前30年8月12日，古埃及托勒密王朝的最后一任法老。——译者注

[3]盖乌斯·尤利乌斯·恺撒（Gaius Julius Caesar），公元前100年7月13日—公元前44年3月15日，或称恺撒大帝，罗马共和国末期杰出的军事统帅、政治家。曾征服高卢全境（大约是现在的法国），袭击日耳曼和不列颠。——译者注

[4]原名盖·屋大维·图里努斯（Gaius Julius Caesar Octavianus），公元前63年9月23日—公元14年8月19日，又名奥古斯都（Augustus），是恺撒大帝的甥孙和养子、罗马帝国的开国君主，统治罗马四十三年。曾出兵消灭了古埃及的托勒密王朝。——译者注

[5]马其顿国王亚历山大三世（Alexander III of Macedon），公元前356年7月22日—公元前323年6月10日，他维持了以马其顿为领导的统一的希腊诸城邦，并征服了波斯及其他亚洲王国，直至攻击到印度，被认为是历史上重要的军事家之一。——译者注

[6]约伯（Job），《旧约全书·约伯记》中的主角，被描述为一个受祝福的人，行为正直。由于撒旦指控约伯只为了物质利益才侍奉上帝，于是上帝一步步撤去保护，容许撒旦夺去约伯的财富、子女、健康。约伯受难，但保持了忠诚，没有诅咒上帝。上帝后来对约伯加倍祝福，使他晚景昌盛。——译者注

[7]所罗门（Solomon），根据《旧约全书·列王记》记载，是古以色列国王大卫之子，王国的第三任君主，以智慧著称；因崇信多神，偏离上帝，耶和华向他发怒，导致他死后叛乱爆发，王国分裂为北方的以色列王国和南方的犹大王国。——译者注

[8]埃皮克提图（Epictetus），公元前一世纪时的希腊斯多噶派哲学家、教师。——译者注

[9]保罗·哀米利乌斯（Paulus Emilius），公元前182年和公元前168年曾两度任罗马执政官，第二任时击败马其顿王珀修斯。——译者注

[10]珀修斯（Perseus），马其顿末代国王，公元前179年至公元前168年在位，公元前168年被保罗·哀米利乌斯击败，被俘。——译者注

[11]皮拉斯（Pyrrhus），公元前318—公元前272年，伊庇鲁斯国王（公元前306—公元前301年，公元前297—公元前272年），Molosso国王（公元前297—公元前272年），马其顿国王（公元前288—公元前284年，公元前273—公元前272年），罗马称霸亚平宁半岛的主要敌人之一，一生为王位征战。——译者注

[12]有人让皮拉斯说出计划征服世界的理由，据说他回答道：他的最终目的是心满意足地休息，但要在实现了征服的梦想以后。

[13]德谟克利特（Democritus），约公元前460—公元前370年，古希腊哲学家。——译者注

[14]埃皮克提图（Epictetus），公元前一世纪时的希腊斯多噶派哲学家、教师。——译者注

[15]圣奥古斯丁（Aurelius Augustinus），354年11月13日—430年8月28日，古罗马帝国时期基督教思想家，欧洲中世纪基督教神学、教父哲学的重要代表人物。——译者注

[16]约瑟夫（Josephus），耶稣时期犹太最著名的历史学家、犹太教徒。——译者注

[17]普布里乌斯·克奈里乌斯·塔西佗（Publius Cornelius Tacitus，50—120），古代罗马最伟大的历史学家、古罗马元老院议员。——译者注

[18]麦克洛比乌斯（Ambrosius Theodosius Macrobius），五世纪罗马文法家、新柏拉图主义哲学家。——译者注

[19]犹大（Judas），《圣经》中耶稣的十二门徒之一，他出卖了耶稣。——译者注

[20]彼拉多（Pilate），《圣经》中下令处死耶稣的犹太总督。——译者注

Contents

Human Happiness

PENGUIN BOOKS—GREAT IDEAS

Human Happiness

Blaise Pascal
1623-1662

Blaise Pascal

Human Happiness

TRANSLATED BY A. J. KRAILSHEIMER

PENGUIN BOOKS—GREAT IDEAS

In this selection of extracts the numbering system for theindividual pensées is that used in the Penguin Classics edition.

21 If we are too young our judgement is impaired, just as it is if we are too old.

Thinking too little about things or thinking too much both make us obstinate and fanatical.

If we look at our work immediately after completing it, we are still too involved; if too long afterwards, we cannot pick up the thread again.

It is like looking at pictures which are too near or too far away. There is just one indivisible point which is the right place.

Others are too near, too far, too high, or too low. In painting the rules of perspective decide it, but how will it be decided when it comes to truth and morality?

22 Flies are so mighty that they win battles, paralyse our minds, eat up our bodies.

23 Vanity of science. Knowledge of physical science will not console me for ignorance of morality in time of affliction, but knowledge of morality will always console me for ignorance of physical science.

24 Man's condition. Inconstancy, boredom, anxiety.

25 The fact that kings are habitually seen in the company of guards, drums, officers and all the things which prompt automatic responses of respect and fear has the result that, when they are sometimes alone and unaccompanied, their features are enough to strike respect and fear into their subjects, because we make no mental distinction between their person and the retinue with which they are normally seen to be associated. And the world, which does not know that this is the effect of habit, believes it to derive from some natural force, hence such sayings as: 'The character of divinity is stamped on his features.'

26 The power of kings is founded on the reason and the folly of the people, but especially on their folly. The greatest and most important thing in the world is founded on weakness. This is a remarkably sure foundation, for nothing is surer than that the people will be weak. Anything founded on sound reason is very ill-founded, like respect for wisdom.

30 We do not choose as captain of a ship the most highly born of those aboard.

31 We do not care about our reputation in towns where we are only passing through. But when we have to stay some time we do care. How much time does it take? A time proportionate to our vain and paltry existence.

33 What amazes me most is to see that everyone is not amazed at his own weakness. We behave seriously, and everyone follows his calling, not because it is really a good thing to do so, in accordance with fashion, but as if everyone knew for certain where reason and justice lie. We are constantly disappointed and an absurd humility makes us blame ourselves and not the skill we always boast of having. But it is a good thing for the reputation of scepticism that there are so many people about who are not sceptics, to show that man is quite capable of the most extravagant opinions, since he is capable of believing that he is not naturally and inevitably weak, but is, on the contrary, naturally wise.

36 Anyone who does not see the vanity of the world is very vain himself. So who does not see it, apart from young people whose lives are all noise, diversions, and thoughts for the future?

But take away their diversion and you will see them bored to extinction. Then they feel their nullity without recognizing it, for nothing could be more wretched than to be intolerably depressed as soon as one is reduced to introspection with no means of diversion.

42 How many kingdoms know nothing of us!

43 A trifle consoles us because a trifle upsets us.

44 Imagination. It is the dominant faculty in man, master of error and falsehood, all the more deceptive for not being invariably so; for it would be an infallible criterion of truth if it were infallibly that of lies. Since, however, it is usually false, it gives no indication of its quality, setting the same mark on true and false alike.

I am not speaking of fools, but of the wisest men, amongst whom imagination is best entitled to persuade. Reason may object in vain, it cannot fix the price of things.

This arrogant force, which checks and dominates its enemy, reason, for the pleasure of showing off the power it has in every sphere, has established a second nature in man. Imagination has its happy and unhappy men, its sick and well, its rich and poor; it makes us believe, doubt, deny reason; it deadens the senses, it arouses them; it has its fools and sages, and nothing annoys us more than to see it satisfy its guests more fully and completely than reason ever could. Those who are clever in imagination are far more pleased with themselves than prudent men could reasonably be. They look down on people with a lofty air; they are bold and confident in argument, where others are timid and unsure, and their cheerful demeanour often wins the verdict of their listeners, for those whose wisdom is imaginary enjoy the favour of judges similarly qualified. Imagination cannot make fools wise, but it makes them happy, as against reason, which only makes its friends wretched: one covers them with glory, the other with shame.

Who dispenses reputation? Who makes us respect and revere persons, works, laws, the great? Who but this faculty of imagination? All the riches of the earth are inadequate without its approval. Would you not say that this magistrate, whose venerable age commands universal respect, is ruled by pure, sublime reason, and judges things as they really are, without paying heed to the trivial circumstances which offend only the imagination of weaker men? See him go to hear a sermon in a spirit of pious zeal, the soundness of his judgement strengthened by the ardour of his charity, ready to listen with exemplary respect. If, when the preacher appears, it turns out that nature has given him a hoarse voice and an odd sort of face, that his barber has shaved him badly and he happens not to be too clean either, then, whatever great truths he may announce, I wager that our senator will not be able to keep a straight face.

Put the world's greatest philosopher on a plank that is wider than need be: if there is a precipice below, although his reason may convince him that he is safe, his imagination will prevail. Many could not even stand the thought of it without going pale and breaking into sweat.

I do not intend to list all the effects of imagination. Everyone knows that the sight of cats, or rats, the crunching of a coal, etc., is enough to unhinge reason. The tone of voice influences the wisest of us and alters the force of a speech or a poem.

Love or hate alters the face of justice. An advocate who has been well paid in advance will find the cause he is pleading all the more just. The boldness of his bearing will make it seem all the better to the judges, taken in by appearances. How absurd is reason, the sport of every wind! I should list almost all the actions of men, who hardly stir except when jolted by imagination. For reason has had to yield, and at its wisest adopts those principles which human imagination has rashly introduced at every turn. Anyone who chose to follow reason alone would have proved himself a fool. We must, since reason so pleases, work all day for benefits recognized as imaginary, and, when sleep has refreshed us from the toils of our reason, we must at once jump up to pursue the phantoms and endure the impressions created by this ruler of the world. Here is one of the principles of error, but not the only one.

Man has been quite right to make these two powers into allies, although in this peace imagination enjoys an extensive advantage; for in conflict its advantage is more complete. Reason never wholly overcomes imagination, while the contrary is quite common.

Our magistrates have shown themselves well aware of this mystery. Their red robes, the ermine in which they swaddle themselves like furry cats, the law-courts where they sit in judgement, the fleurs de lys, all this august panoply was very necessary. If physicians did not have long gowns and mules, if learned doctors did not wear square caps and robes four times too large, they would never have deceived the world, which finds such an authentic display irresistible. If they possessed true justice, and if physicians possessed the true art of healing, they would not need square caps; the majesty of such sciences would command respect in itself. But, as they only possess imaginary science, they have to resort to these vain devices in order to strike the imagination, which is their real concern, and this, in fact, is how they win respect.

Soldiers are the only ones who do not disguise themselves in this way, because their role is really more essential; they establish themselves by force, the others by masquerade.

That is why our kings have not attempted to disguise themselves. They have not dressed up in extraordinary clothes to show what they are, but they have themselves escorted by guards, scarred veterans. These armed troops whose hands and strength are theirs alone, the drums and trumpets that march before them, and these legions which surround them make the most resolute tremble.

They do not wear the trappings, they simply have the power. It would take reason at its most refined to see the Grand Turk, surrounded in his superb seraglio by 40,000 janissaries, as a man like any other.

We have only to see a lawyer in cap and gown to form a favourable opinion of his competence.

Imagination decides everything: it creates beauty, justice and happiness, which is the world's supreme good. I should dearly like to see the Italian book, of which I know only the title, worth many books in itself, Dell’opinione regina del mondo. Without knowing the book, I support its views, apart from any evil it may contain.

Such, more or less, are the effects of this deceptive faculty, apparently given to us for the specific purpose of leading us inevitably into error. We have plenty of other principles of error.

Longstanding impressions are not the only ones that can mislead us; the charms of novelty have the same power. Hence all the debate among men, who accuse each other either of following the false impressions of childhood or of rashly pursuing new ones. If anyone has found the golden mean, let him appear and prove it. Any principle, however natural it may be, even implanted in childhood, may be treated as a false impression either of education or of the senses.

'Because,' they say, 'you have believed since you were a child that a box was empty when you could not see anything in it, you believed that a vacuum could exist. This is just an illusion of your senses, strengthened by habit, and it must be corrected by science.' Others say: 'When you were taught at school that there is no such thing as a vacuum, your common sense was corrupted; it was quite clear about it before being given the wrong impression, and now it must be corrected by reverting to your original state.' Who then is the deceiver, the senses or education?

We have another principle of error in illnesses, which impair our judgement and sense. If serious illnesses do considerable harm, I have no doubt that the less serious ones have a proportionate effect.

Our own interest is another wonderful instrument for blinding us agreeably. The fairest man in the world is not allowed to be judge in his own cause. I know of men who, to avoid the danger of partiality in their own favour, have leaned over to the opposite extreme of injustice. The surest way to lose a perfectly just case was to get close relatives to commend it to them.

Justice and truths are two points so fine that our instruments are too blunt to touch them exactly. If they do make contact, they blunt the point and press all round on the false rather than the true.

Man, then, is so happily constituted that he has no exact principle of truth, and several excellent ones of falsehood. Let us now see how many.

But the most absurd cause of his errors is the war between the senses and the reason.

46 Vanity. The cause and effect of love. Cleopatra.

47 We never keep to the present. We recall the past; we anticipate the future as if we found it too slow in coming and were trying to hurry it up, or we recall the past as if to stay its too rapid flight. We are so unwise that we wander about in times that do not belong to us, and do not think of the only one that does; so vain that we dream of times that are not and blindly flee the only one that is. The fact is that the present usually hurts. We thrust it out of sight because it distresses us, and if we find it enjoyable, we are sorry to see it slip away. We try to give it the support of the future, and think how we are going to arrange things over which we have no control for a time we can never be sure of reaching.

Let each of us examine his thoughts; he will find them wholly concerned with the past or the future. We almost never think of the present, and if we do think of it, it is only to see what light it throws on our plans for the future. The present is never our end. The past and the present are our means, the future alone our end. Thus we never actually live, but hope to live, and since we are always planning how to be happy, it is inevitable that we should never be so.

49 Caesar was too old, it seems to me, to go off and amuse himself conquering the world. Such a pastime was all right for Augustus and Alexander; they were young men, not easily held in check, but Caesar ought to have been more mature.

53 Man is vile enough to bow down to beasts and even worship them.

54 Inconstancy. Things have various qualities and the soul various tendencies, for nothing presented to the soul is simple, and the soul never applies itself simply to any subject. That is why the same thing makes us laugh and cry.

55 Inconstancy. We think playing upon man is like playing upon an ordinary organ. It is indeed an organ, but strange, shifting and changeable. Those who only know how to play an ordinary organ would never be in tune on this one. You have to know where the keys are.

56 We are so unhappy that we can only enjoy something which we should be annoyed to see go wrong, and that can and does constantly happen to thousands of things. Anyone who found the secret of rejoicing when things go well without being annoyed when they go badly would have found the point. It is perpetual motion.

57 It is not good to be too free.
It is not good to have all one needs.

58 Tyranny consists in the desire to dominate everything regardless of order.

In the various departments for men of strength, beauty, sense and piety, each man is master in his own house but nowhere else. Sometimes they meet and the strong and the handsome contend for mastery, but this is idiotic because their mastery is of different kinds. They do not understand each other and their mistake lies in wanting to rule everywhere. Nothing can do that, not even strength: it is of no effect in the learned world and only governs external actions. -So these arguments are false...

Tyranny. Tyranny is wanting to have by one means what can only be had by another. We pay different dues to different kinds of merit; we must love charm, fear strength, believe in knowledge.

These dues must be paid. It is wrong to refuse them and wrong to demand any others. So these arguments are false and tyrannical: 'I am handsome, so you must fear me. I am strong, so you must love me, I am...' In the same way it is false and tyrannical to say: 'He is not strong, so I will not respect him. He is not clever, so I will not fear him.'

65 Diversity. Theology is a science, but at the same time how many sciences? A man is a substance, but if you dissect him, what is he? Head, heart, stomach, veins, each vein, each bit of vein, blood, each humour of blood?

A town or a landscape from afar off is a town and a landscape, but as one approaches it becomes houses, trees, tiles, leaves, grass, ants, ants' legs, and so on ad infinitum. All that is comprehended in the word 'landscape'.

68 When I consider the brief span of my life absorbed into the eternity which comes before and after - as the remembrance of a guest that tarrieth but a day - the small space I occupy and which I see swallowed up in the infinite immensity of spaces of which I know nothing and which know nothing of me, I take fright and am amazed to see myself here rather than there: there is no reason for me to be here rather than there, now rather than then. Who put me here? By whose command and act were this time and place allotted to me?

69 Wretchedness. Job and Solomon.

70 If our condition were truly happy we should not need to divert ourselves from thinking about it.

71 Contradictions. Pride counterbalances all these miseries; man either hides or displays them, and glories in his awareness of them.

72 One must know oneself. Even if that does not help in finding truth, at least it helps in running one's life, and nothing is more proper.

73 What causes inconstancy is the realization that present pleasures are false, together with the failure to realize that absent pleasures are vain.

77 Pride. Curiosity is only vanity. We usually only want to know something so that we can talk about it; in other words, we would never travel by sea if it meant never talking about it, and for the sheer pleasure of seeing things we could never hope to describe to others.

78 Description of man. Dependence, desire for independence, needs.

79 How tiresome it is to give up pursuits to which we have become attached. A man enjoying a happy home-life has only to see a woman who attracts him, or spend five or six pleasant days gambling, and he will be very sorry to go back to what he was doing before. It happens every day.

80 Respect means: put yourself out. That may look pointless, but it is quite right, because it amounts to saying: I should certainly put myself out if you needed it, because I do so when you do not; besides, respect serves to distinguish the great. If respect meant sitting in an armchair we should be showing everyone respect and then there would be no way of marking distinction, but we make the distinction quite clear by putting ourselves out.

81 The only universal rules are the law of the land in everyday matters and the will of the majority in others. How is that? Because of the power implied.

That is why kings, who have another source of power, do not follow the majority of their ministers.

Equality of possessions is no doubt right, but, as men could not make might obey right, they have made right obey might. As they could not fortify justice they have justified force, so that right and might live together and peace reigns, the sovereign good.

82 Wisdom leads us back to childhood. Except ye become as little children.

83 The world is a good judge of things, because it is in the state of natural ignorance where man really belongs. Knowledge has two extremes which meet; one is the pure natural ignorance of every man at birth, the other is the extreme reached by great minds who run through the whole range of human knowledge, only to find that they know nothing and come back to the same ignorance from which they set out, but it is a wise ignorance which knows itself. Those who stand half-way have put their natural ignorance behind them without yet attaining the other; they have some smattering of adequate knowledge and pretend to understand everything. They upset the world and get everything wrong.

Ordinary people and clever people make up the run of the world; the former despise it and are despised in their turn. All their judgements are wrong and the world judges them rightly.

84 Descartes. In general terms one must say: 'That is the result of figure and motion,' because it is true, but to name them and assemble the machine is quite ridiculous. It is pointless, uncertain, and arduous. Even if it were true we do not think that the whole of philosophy would be worth an hour's effort.

86 Of true justice. We no longer have any. If we had, we should not accept it as a rule of justice that one should follow the customs of one's country.

That is why we have found might when we could not find right.

87 The chancellor is a grave man, dressed in fine robes because his position is false; not so the king. He enjoys power, and has no use for imagination. Judges, doctors, etc., enjoy nothing but imagination.

88 It is the effect of power, not of custom, for those capable of originality are rare. Those who are strongest in numbers only want to follow, and refuse recognition to those who seek it for their originality. If they persist in wanting recognition and despising those who are not original, the others will call them ridiculous names and may even beat them. So do not be conceited about your subtlety, or keep your satisfaction to yourself.

94 Sound opinions of the people. The greatest of evils is civil war.

It is bound to come if people want to reward merit, because everyone will claim to be meritorious. The evil to be feared if the succession falls by right of birth to a fool is neither so great nor so certain.

95 Sound opinions of the people. It is not mere vanity to be elegant, because it shows that a lot of people are working for you. Your hair shows that you have a valet, a perfumer, etc., bands, thread, braid, etc., show ... It means more than superficial show or mere accoutrement to have many hands in one's service.

The more hands one employs the more powerful one is. Elegance is a means of showing one's power.

98 How is it that a lame man does not annoy us while a lame mind does? Because a lame man recognizes that we are walking straight, while a lame mind says that it is we who are limping. But for that we should feel sorry rather than angry.

Epictetus goes much further when he asks: Why do we not lose our temper if someone tells us that we have a headache, while we do lose it if someone says there is anything wrong with our arguments or our choice?

99 The reason for that is that we are quite certain that we have not got a headache, and are not limping, but we are not so sure we are making the right choice. Consequently, since the only thing that makes us sure is the evidence available to us, we hesitate and are taken aback when the evidence available to someone else makes him see just the opposite. All the more so when a thousand other people scoff at our choice, because we are obliged to prefer our judgement to that of so many others, and that is a bold and difficult thing to do. There is never such a clash of views over a lame man.

Man is so made that if he is told often enough that he is a fool he believes it. By telling himself so often enough he convinces himself, because when he is alone he carries on an inner dialogue with himself which it is important to keep under proper control. Evil communications corrupt good manners. We must keep silence as far as we can and only talk to ourselves about God, whom we know to be true, and thus convince ourselves that he is.

103 Right, might. It is right to follow the right, it is necessary to follow the mighty.

Right without might is helpless, might without right is tyrannical.

Right without might is challenged, because there are always evil men about. Might without right is denounced. We must therefore combine right and might, and to that end make right into might or might into right.

Right is open to dispute, might is easily recognized and beyond dispute. Therefore right could not be made mighty because might challenged right, calling it unjust and itself claiming to be just.

Being thus unable to make right into might, we have made might into right.

104 What a great advantage to be of noble birth, since it gives a man of eighteen the standing, recognition and respect that another man might not earn before he was fifty. That means winning thirty years' start with no effort.

105 If an animal did rationally what it does by instinct, and if it spoke rationally what it speaks by instinct when hunting, or warning its fellows that the prey has been lost or found, it would certainly go on to talk about matters which affect it more seriously, and it would say, for instance: 'Bite through this cord; it is hurting me and I cannot reach it.'

106 Greatness. Causes and effects show the greatness of man in producing such excellent order from his own concupiscence.

107 The parrot wipes its beak although it is clean.

108 What part of us feels pleasure? Is it our hand, our arm, our flesh, or our blood? It must obviously be something immaterial.

109 Against Scepticism. It is odd that we cannot define these things without making them obscure; we talk about them all the time. We assume that everyone conceives of them in the same way, but that it is a quite gratuitous assumption, because we have no proof that it is so. I see indeed that we apply these words on the same occasions; every time two men see a body change its position they both use the same word to express what they have seen, each of them saying that the body has moved. Such conformity of application provides a strong presumption of conformity of thought, but it lacks the absolute force of total conviction, although the odds are that it is so, because we know that the same conclusions are often drawn from different assumptions.

That is enough to cloud the issue, to say the least, though it does not completely extinguish the natural light which provides us with certainty in such matters. The Platonists would have wagered on it, but that makes the light dimmer and upsets the dogmatists, to the glory of the sceptical clique which stands for ambiguous ambiguity, and a certain dubious obscurity from which our doubts cannot remove every bit of light any more than our natural light can dispel all the darkness.

110 We know the truth not only through our reason but also through our heart. It is through the latter that we know first principles, and reason, which has nothing to do with it, tries in vain to refute them. The sceptics have no other object than that, and they work at it to no purpose. We know that we are not dreaming, but, however unable we may be to prove it rationally, our inability proves nothing but the weakness of our reason, and not the uncertainty of all our knowledge, as they maintain. For knowledge of first principles, like space, time, motion, number, is as solid as any derived through reason, and it is on such knowledge, coming from the heart and instinct, that reason has to depend and base all its argument. The heart feels that there are three spatial dimensions and that there is an infinite series of numbers, and reason goes on to demonstrate that there are no two square numbers of which one is double the other. Principles are felt, propositions proved, and both with certainty though by different means. It is just as pointless and absurd for reason to demand proof of first principles from the heart before agreeing to accept them as it would be absurd for the heart to demand an intuition of all the propositions demonstrated by reason before agreeing to accept them.

Our inability must therefore serve only to humble reason, which would like to be the judge of everything, but not to confute our certainty. As if reason were the only way we could learn! Would to God, on the contrary, that we never needed it and knew everything by instinct and feeling! But nature has refused us this blessing, and has instead given us only very little knowledge of this kind; all other knowledge can be acquired only by reasoning.

That is why those to whom God has given religious faith by moving their hearts are very fortunate, and feel quite legitimately convinced, but to those who do not have it we can only give such faith through reasoning, until God gives it by moving their heart, without which faith is only human and useless for salvation.

111 I can certainly imagine a man without hands, feet, or head, for it is only experience that teaches us that the head is more necessary than the feet. But I cannot imagine a man without thought; he would be a stone or an animal.

112 Instinct and reason, signs of two natures.

113 Thinking reed. It is not in space that I must seek my human dignity, but in the ordering of my thought. It will do me no good to own land. Through space the universe grasps me and swallows me up like a speck; through thought I grasp it.

114 Man's greatness comes from knowing he is wretched: a tree does not know it is wretched.

Thus it is wretched to know that one is wretched, but there is greatness in knowing one is wretched.

115 Immateriality of the soul. When philosophers have subdued their passions, what material substance has managed to achieve this?

116 All these examples of wretchedness prove his greatness. It is the wretchedness of a great lord, the wretchedness of a dispossessed king.

117 Man's greatness. Man's greatness is so obvious that it can even be deduced from his wretchedness, for what is nature in animals we call wretchedness in man, thus recognizing that, if his nature is today like that of the animals, he must have fallen from some better state which was once his own.

Who indeed would think himself unhappy not to be king except one who had been dispossessed? Did anyone think Paulus Emilius was unhappy not to be consul? On the contrary, everyone thought he was happy to have been so once, because the office was not meant to be permanent. But people thought Perseus so unhappy at finding himself no longer king, because that was meant to be a permanent office, that they were surprised that he could bear to go on living. Who would think himself unhappy if he had only one mouth and who would not if he had only one eye? It has probably never occurred to anyone to be distressed at not having three eyes, but those who have none are inconsolable.

118 Man's greatness even in his concupiscence. He has managed to produce such a remarkable system from it and make it the image of true charity.

119 Contradictions. (After showing how vile and how great man is.) Let man now judge his own worth, let him love himself, for there is within him a nature capable of good; but that is no reason for him to love the vileness within himself. Let him despise himself because this capacity remains unfilled; but that is no reason for him to despise this natural capacity. Let him both hate and love himself; he has within him the capacity for knowing truth and being happy, but he possesses no truth which is either abiding or satisfactory.

I should therefore like to arouse in man the desire to find truth, to be ready, free from passion, to follow it wherever he may find it, realizing how far his knowledge is clouded by passions. I should like him to hate his concupiscence which automatically makes his decisions for him, so that it should not blind him when he makes his choice, nor hinder him once he has chosen.

120 We are so presumptuous that we should like to be known all over the world, even by people who will only come when we are no more. Such is our vanity that the good opinion of half a dozen of the people around us gives us pleasure and satisfaction.

121 It is dangerous to explain too clearly to man how like he is to the animals without pointing out his greatness. It is also dangerous to make too much of his greatness without his vileness. It is still more dangerous to leave him in ignorance of both, but it is most valuable to represent both to him.

Man must not be allowed to believe that he is equal either to animals or to angels, nor to be unaware of either, but he must know both.

122 Greatness and wretchedness. Since wretchedness and greatness can be concluded each from the other, some people have been more inclined to conclude that man is wretched for having used his greatness to prove it, while others have all the more cogently concluded he is great by basing their proof on wretchedness. Everything that could be said by one side as proof of greatness has only served as an argument for the others to conclude he is wretched, since the further one falls the more wretched one is, and vice versa. One has followed the other in an endless circle, for it is certain that as man's insight increases so he finds both wretchedness and greatness within himself. In a word man knows he is wretched. Thus he is wretched because he is so, but he is truly great because he knows it.

123 Contradictions. Contempt for our existence, dying for nothing, hatred of our existence.

124 Contradictions. Man is naturally credulous, incredulous, timid, bold.

125 What are our natural principles but habitual principles? In children it is the principles received from the habits of their fathers, like hunting in the case of animals.

A change of habit will produce different natural principles, as can be seen from experience, and if there are some principles which habit cannot eradicate, there are others both habitual and unnatural which neither nature nor a new habit can eradicate. It all depends on one's disposition.

126 Fathers are afraid that their children's natural love may be eradicated. What then is this nature which is liable to be eradicated?

Habit is a second nature that destroys the first. But what is nature? Why is habit not natural? I am very much afraid that nature itself is only a first habit, just as habit is a second nature.

127 Man's nature may be considered in two ways; either according to his end, and then he is great and beyond compare, or according to the masses, as the nature of horses and dogs is judged by the masses from seeing how they run or ward off strangers, and then man is abject and vile. These are the two approaches which provoke such divergent views and such argument among philosophers, because each denies the other's hypothesis.

One says: 'Man was not born for this end, because everything he does belies it.' The other says: 'He is falling far short of his end when he acts so basely.'

128 Two things teach man about his whole nature: instinct and experience.

129 Trade. Thoughts. All is one, all is diversity.

How many natures lie in human nature! How many occupations! How fortuitously in the ordinary way each of us takes up the one that he has heard others praise. A well-turned heel.

130 If he exalts himself, I humble him.

If he humbles himself, I exalt him.

And I go on contradicting him
Until he understands
That he is a monster that passes all understanding.

131 The strongest of the sceptics' arguments, to say nothing of minor points, is that we cannot be sure that these principles are true (faith and revelation apart) except through some natural intuition. Now this natural intuition affords no convincing proof that they are true. There is no certainty, apart from faith, as to whether man was created by a good God, an evil demon, or just by chance, and so it is a matter of doubt, depending on our origin, whether these innate principles are true, false or uncertain.

Moreover, no one can be sure, apart from faith, whether he is sleeping or waking, because when we are asleep we are just as firmly convinced that we are awake as we are now. As we often dream we are dreaming, piling up one dream on another, is it not possible that this half of our life is itself just a dream, on to which the others are grafted, and from which we shall awake when we die? That while it lasts we are as little in possession of the principles of truth and goodness as during normal sleep? All this passage of time, of life, all these different bodies which we feel, the different thoughts which stir us, may be no more than illusions like the passage of time and vain phantoms of our dreams. We think we are seeing space, shape, movement, we feel time pass, we measure it, in fact we behave just as we do when we are awake. As a result, since half our life is spent in sleep, on our own admission and despite appearances we have no idea of the truth because all our intuitions are simply illusions during that time. Who knows whether the other half of our lives, when we think we are awake, is not another sleep slightly different from the first, on to which our dreams are grafted as our sleep appears, and from which we awake when we think we are sleeping? And who can doubt that, if we dreamed in the company of others and our dreams happened to agree, which is common enough, and if we were alone when awake, we should think things had been turned upside-down?

These are the main points on each side, to say nothing of minor arguments, like those the sceptics direct against the influences of habit, education, local customs, and so on, which the slightest puff of scepticism overturns, though they convince the majority of ordinary people, who have only this vain basis for their dogmas. You have only to look at their books; if you are not sufficiently persuaded you soon will be, perhaps too much so.

I pause at the dogmatists' only strong point, which is that we cannot doubt natural principles if we speak sincerely and in all good faith.

To which the sceptics reply, in a word, that uncertainty as to our origin entails uncertainty as to our nature. The dogmatists have been trying to answer that ever since the world began.

(Anyone wanting ampler information about scepticism should look at their books; he will soon be persuaded, perhaps too much so.)

This means open war between men, in which everyone is obliged to take sides, either with the dogmatists or with the sceptics, because anyone who imagines he can stay neutral is a sceptic par excellence. This neutrality is the essence of their clique. Anyone who is not against them is their staunch supporter, and that is where their advantage appears. They are not even for themselves; they are neutral, indifferent, suspending judgment on everything, including themselves.

What then is man to do in this state of affairs? Is he to doubt everything, to doubt whether he is awake, whether he is being pinched or burned? Is he to doubt whether he is doubting, to doubt whether he exists?

No one can go that far, and I maintain that a perfectly genuine sceptic has never existed. Nature backs up helpless reason and stops it going so wildly astray.

Is he, on the other hand, to say that he is the certain possessor of truth, when at the slightest pressure he fails to prove his claim and is compelled to loose his grasp?

What sort of freak then is man! How novel, how monstrous, how chaotic, how paradoxical, how prodigious! Judge of all things, feeble earthworm, repository of truth, sink of doubt and error, glory and refuse of the universe!

Who will unravel such a tangle? This is certainly beyond dogmatism and scepticism, beyond all human philosophy. Man transcends man. Let us then concede to the sceptics what they have so often proclaimed, that truth lies beyond our scope and is an unattainable quarry, that it is no earthly denizen, but at home in heaven, lying in the lap of God, to be known only in so far as it pleases him to reveal it. Let us learn our true nature from the uncreated and incarnate truth.

If we seek truth through reason we cannot avoid one of these three sects. You cannot be a sceptic or a Platonist without stifling nature, you cannot be a dogmatist without turning your back on reason.

Nature confounds the sceptics and Platonists, and reason confounds the dogmatists. What then will become of you, man, seeking to discover your true condition through natural reason? You cannot avoid one of these three sects nor survive in any of them.

Know then, proud man, what a paradox you are to yourself. Be humble, impotent reason! Be silent, feeble nature! Learn that man infinitely transcends man, hear from your master your true condition, which is unknown to you.

Listen to God.

Is it not as clear as day that man's condition is dual? The point is that if man had never been corrupted, he would, in his innocence, confidently enjoy both truth and felicity, and, if man had never been anything but corrupt, he would have no idea either of truth or bliss. But unhappy as we are (and we should be less so if there were no element of greatness in our condition) we have an idea of happiness but we cannot attain it. We perceive an image of the truth and possess nothing but falsehood, being equally incapable of absolute ignorance and certain knowledge; so obvious is it that we once enjoyed a degree of perfection from which we have unhappily fallen.

Let us then conceive that man's condition is dual. Let us conceive that man infinitely transcends man, and that without the aid of faith he would remain inconceivable to himself, for who cannot see that unless we realize the duality of human nature we remain invincibly ignorant of the truth about ourselves?

It is, however, an astounding thing that the mystery furthest from our ken, that of the transmission of sin, should be something without which we can have no knowledge of ourselves.

Without doubt nothing is more shocking to our reason than to say that the sin of the first man has implicated in its guilt men so far from the original sin that they seem incapable of sharing it. This flow of guilt does not seem merely impossible to us, but indeed most unjust. What could be more contrary to the rules of our miserable justice than the eternal damnation of a child, incapable of will, for an act in which he seems to have so little part that it was actually committed 6,000 years before he existed? Certainly nothing jolts us more rudely than this doctrine, and yet, but for this mystery, the most incomprehensible of all, we remain incomprehensible to ourselves. The knot of our condition was twisted and turned in that abyss, so that it is harder to conceive of man without this mystery than for man to conceive of it himself.

This shows that God, in his desire to make the difficulties of our existence unintelligible to us, hid the knot so high, or more precisely, so low, that we were quite unable to reach it. Consequently it is not through the proud activity of our reason but through its simple submission that we can really know ourselves.

These fundamental facts, solidly established on the inviolable authority of religion, teach us that there are in faith two equally constant truths. One is that man in the state of his creation, or in the state of grace, is exalted above the whole of nature, made like unto God and sharing in his divinity. The other is that in the state of corruption and sin he has fallen from that first state and has become like the beasts. These two propositions are equally firm and certain.

Scripture openly declares this when it says in certain places: My delights were with the sons of men - I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh - Ye are gods, while saying in others: All flesh is grass - Man is like the beasts that perish - I said in my heart concerning the estate of the sons of men.

Whence it is clearly evident that man through grace is made like unto God and shares his divinity, and without grace he is treated like the beasts of the field.

136 Diversion. Sometimes, when I set to thinking about the various activities of men, the dangers and troubles which they face at Court, or in war, giving rise to so many quarrels and passions, daring and often wicked enterprises and so on, I have often said that the sole cause of man's unhappiness is that he does not know how to stay quietly in his room. A man wealthy enough for life's needs would never leave home to go to sea or besiege some fortress if he knew how to stay at home and enjoy it. Men would never spend so much on a commission in the army if they could bear living in town all their lives, and they only seek after the company and diversion of gambling because they do not enjoy staying at home.

But after closer thought, looking for the particular reasons for all our unhappiness now that I knew its general cause, I found one very cogent reason in the natural unhappiness of our feeble mortal condition, so wretched that nothing can console us when we really think about it.

Imagine any situation you like, add up all the blessings with which you could be endowed, to be king is still the finest thing in the world; yet if you imagine one with all the advantages of his rank, but no means of diversion, left to ponder and reflect on what he is, this limp felicity will not keep him going; he is bound to start thinking of all the threats facing him, of possible revolts, finally of inescapable death and disease, with the result that if he is deprived of so-called diversion he is unhappy, indeed more unhappy than the humblest of his subjects who can enjoy sport and diversion.

The only good thing for men therefore is to be diverted from thinking of what they are, either by some occupation which takes their mind off it, or by some novel and agreeable passion which keeps them busy, like gambling, hunting, some absorbing show, in short by what is called diversion.

That is why gaming and feminine society, war and high office are so popular. It is not that they really bring happiness, nor that anyone imagines that true bliss comes from possessing the money to be won at gaming or the hare that is hunted: no one would take it as a gift. What people want is not the easy peaceful life that allows us to think of our unhappy condition, nor the dangers of war, nor the burdens of office, but the agitation that takes our mind off it and diverts us. That is why we prefer the hunt to the capture.

That is why men are so fond of hustle and bustle; that is why prison is such a fearful punishment; that is why the pleasures of solitude are so incomprehensible. That, in fact, is the main joy of being a king, because people are continually trying to divert him and procure him every kind of pleasure. A king is surrounded by people whose only thought is to divert him and stop him thinking about himself, because, king though he is, he becomes unhappy as soon as he thinks about himself.

That is all that men have been able to devise for attaining happiness; those who philosophize about it, holding that people are quite unreasonable to spend all day chasing a hare that they would not have wanted to buy, have little knowledge of our nature. The hare itself would not save us from thinking about death and the miseries distracting us, but hunting it does so. Thus when Pyrrhus was advised to take the rest towards which he was so strenuously striving, he found it very hard to do so.[1]

Telling a man to rest is the same as telling him to live happily. It means advising him to enjoy a completely happy state in which he can contemplate at leisure without cause for distress. It means not understanding nature.

Thus men who are naturally conscious of what they are shun nothing so much as rest; they would do anything to be disturbed.

It is wrong then to blame them; they are not wrong to want excitement - if they only wanted it for the sake of diversion. The trouble is that they want it as though, once they had the things they seek, they could not fail to be truly happy. That is what justifies calling their search a vain one. All this shows that neither the critics nor the criticized understand man's real nature.

When men are reproached for pursuing so eagerly something that could never satisfy them, their proper answer, if they really thought about it, ought to be that they simply want a violent and vigorous occupation to take their minds off themselves, and that is why they choose some attractive object to entice them in ardent pursuit. Their opponents could find no answer to that, but they do not answer like that because they do not know themselves. They do not know that all they want is the hunt and not the capture. The nobleman sincerely believes that hunting is a great sport, the sport of kings, but his huntsman does not feel like that. They imagine that if they secured a certain appointment they would enjoy resting afterwards, and they do not realize the insatiable nature of cupidity. They think they genuinely want rest when all they really want is activity.

(Vanity, pleasure of showing off. Dancing, you must think where to put your feet.)

They have a secret instinct driving them to seek external diversion and occupation, and this is the result of their constant sense of wretchedness. They have another secret instinct, left over from the greatness of our original nature, telling them that the only true happiness lies in rest and not in excitement. These two contrary instincts give rise to a confused plan buried out of sight in the depths of their soul, which leads them to seek rest by way of activity and always to imagine that the satisfaction they miss will come to them once they overcome certain obvious difficulties and can open the door to welcome rest.

All our life passes in this way: we seek rest by struggling against certain obstacles, and once they are overcome, rest proves intolerable because of the boredom it produces. We must get away from it and crave excitement.

We think either of present or of threatened miseries, and even if we felt quite safe on every side, boredom on its own account would not fail to emerge from the depths of our hearts, where it is naturally rooted, and poison our whole mind.

Man is so unhappy that he would be bored even if he had no cause for boredom, by the very nature of his temperament, and he is so vain that, though he has a thousand and one basic reasons for being bored, the slightest thing, like pushing a ball with a billiard cue, will be enough to divert him.

'But,' you will say, 'what is his object in all this?' Just so that he can boast tomorrow to his friends that he played better than someone else. Likewise others sweat away in their studies to prove to scholars that they have solved some hitherto insoluble problem in algebra. Many others again, just as foolishly in my view, risk the greatest dangers so that they can boast afterwards of having captured some stronghold. Then there are others who exhaust themselves observing all these things, not in order to become wiser, but just to show they know them, and these are the biggest fools of the lot, because they know what they are doing, while it is conceivable that the rest would stop being foolish if they knew too.

A given man lives a life free from boredom by gambling a small sum every day. Give him every morning the money he might win that day, but on condition that he does not gamble, and you will make him unhappy. It might be argued that what he wants is the entertainment of gaming and not the winnings. Make him play then for nothing; his interest will not be fired and he will become bored, so it is not just entertainment he wants. A half-hearted entertainment without excitement will bore him. He must have excitement, he must delude himself into imagining that he would be happy to win what he would not want as a gift if it meant giving up gambling. He must create some target for his passions and then arouse his desire, anger, fear, for this object he has created, just like children taking fright at a face they have daubed themselves.

That is why this man, who lost his only son a few months ago and was so troubled and oppressed this morning by lawsuits and quarrels, is not thinking about it any more. Do not be surprised; he is concentrating all his attention on which way the boar will go that his dogs have been so hotly pursuing for the past six hours. That is all he needs. However sad a man may be, if you can persuade him to take up some diversion he will be happy while it lasts, and however happy a man may be, if he lacks diversion and has no absorbing passion or entertainment to keep boredom away, he will soon be depressed and unhappy. Without diversion there is no joy; with diversion there is no sadness. That is what constitutes the happiness of persons of rank, for they have a number of people to divert them and the ability to keep themselves in this state.

Make no mistake about it. What else does it mean to be Superintendent, Chancellor, Chief Justice, but to enjoy a position in which a great number of people come every morning from all parts and do not leave them a single hour of the day to think about themselves? When they are in disgrace and sent off to their country houses, where they lack neither wealth nor servants to meet their needs, they infallibly become miserable and dejected because no one stops them thinking about themselves.

139 Diversion. From childhood on men are made responsible for the care of their honour, their property, their friends, and even of the property and honour of their friends; they are burdened with duties, language-training and exercises, and given to understand that they can never be happy unless their health, their honour, their fortune and those of their friends are in good shape, and that it needs only one thing to go wrong to make them unhappy. So they are given responsibilities and duties which harass them from the first moment of each day. You will say that is an odd way to make them happy: what better means could one devise to make them unhappy? What could one do? You would only have to take away all their cares, and then they would see themselves and think about what they are, where they come from, and where they are going. That is why men cannot be too much occupied and distracted, and that is why, when they have been given so many things to do, if they have some time off they are advised to spend it on diversion and sport, and always to keep themselves fully occupied.

How hollow and foul is the heart of man!

148 Man without faith can know neither true good nor justice.

All men seek happiness. There are no exceptions. However different the means they may employ, they all strive towards this goal. The reason why some go to war and some do not is the same desire in both, but interpreted in two different ways. The will never takes the least step except to that end. This is the motive of every act of every man, including those who go and hang themselves.

Yet for very many years no one without faith has ever reached the goal at which everyone is continually aiming. All men complain: princes, subjects, nobles, commoners, old, young, strong, weak, learned, ignorant, healthy, sick, in every country, at every time, of all ages, and all conditions.

A test which has gone on so long, without pause or change, really ought to convince us that we are incapable of attaining the good by our own efforts. But example teaches us very little. No two examples are so exactly alike that there is not some subtle difference, and that is what makes us expect that our expectations will not be disappointed this time as they were last time. So, while the present never satisfies us, experience deceives us, and leads us on from one misfortune to another until death comes as the ultimate and eternal climax.

What else does this craving, and this helplessness, proclaim but that there was once in man a true happiness, of which all that now remains is the empty print and trace? This he tries in vain to fill with everything around him, seeking in things that are not there the help he cannot find in those that are, though none can help, since this infinite abyss can be filled only with an infinite and immutable object; in other words by God himself.

God alone is man's true good, and since man abandoned him it is a strange fact that nothing in nature has been found to take his place: stars, sky, earth, elements, plants, cabbages, leeks, animals, insects, calves, serpents, fever, plague, war, famine, vice, adultery, incest. Since losing his true good, man is capable of seeing it in anything, even his own destruction, although it is so contrary at once to God, to reason and to nature.

Some seek their good in authority, some in intellectual inquiry and knowledge, some in pleasure.

Others again, who have indeed come closer to it, have found it impossible that this universal good, desired by all men, should lie in any of the particular objects which can only be possessed by one individual and which, once shared, cause their possessors more grief over the part they lack than satisfaction over the part they enjoy as their own. They have realized that the true good must be such that it may be possessed by all men at once without diminution or envy, and that no one should be able to lose it against his will. Their reason is that this desire is natural to man, since all men inevitably feel it, and man cannot be without it, and they therefore conclude...

151 It is absurd of us to rely on the company of our fellows, as wretched and helpless as we are; they will not help us; we shall die alone.

We must act then as if we were alone. If that were so, would we build superb houses, etc.? We should unhesitatingly look for the truth. And, if we refuse, it shows that we have a higher regard for men's esteem than for pursuing the truth.

152 Between us and heaven or hell there is only life half-way, the most fragile thing in the world.

153 What after all do you promise me but ten years of self-love (for ten years is the stake), trying hard to please without succeeding, not to speak of certain anguish?

155 Heart
Instinct Principles.

156 Pity the atheists who seek, for are they not unhappy enough? Inveigh against those who boast about it.

157 Atheism indicates strength of mind, but only up to a certain point.

158 As far as the choices go, you must take the trouble to seek the truth, for if you die without worshipping the true principle you are lost. 'But', you say, 'if he had wanted me to worship him, he would have left me some signs of his will.' So he did, but you pay no heed. Look for them then; it is well worth it.

159 If we ought to give up one week of our life, we ought to give up a hundred years.

16o There are only three sorts of people: those who have found God and serve him; those who are busy seeking him and have not found him; those who live without either seeking or finding him. The first are reasonable and happy, the last are foolish and unhappy, those in the middle are unhappy and reasonable.

161 Atheists should say things that are perfectly clear. Now it is not perfectly clear that the soul is material.

162 Begin by pitying unbelievers; their condition makes them unhappy enough.

They ought not to be abused unless it does them good, but in fact it does them harm.

163 A man in a dungeon, not knowing whether sentence has been passed on him, with only an hour left to find out, and that hour enough, once he knows it has been passed, to have it revoked. It would be unnatural for him to spend that hour not finding out whether sentence has been passed but playing piquet.

So it is beyond all nature that man, etc.... It is weighing down the hand of God.

So it is not only the zeal of those who seek him that proves God's existence, but also the blindness of those who do not seek him.

164 Beginning. Dungeon. I agree that Copernicus' opinion need not be more closely examined. But this:

It affects our whole life to know whether the soul is mortal or immortal.

165 The last act is bloody, however fine the rest of the play. They throw earth over your head and it is finished for ever.

166 We run heedlessly into the abyss after putting something in front of us to stop us seeing it.

193 Prejudice leading to error. It is deplorable to see everybody debating about the means, never the end. Everyone thinks about how he will get on in his career, but when it comes to choosing a career or a country it is fate that decides for us.

It is pitiful to see so many Turks, heretics, unbelievers follow in their fathers' footsteps, solely because they have all been brought up to believe that this is the best course. This is what makes each of us pick his particular career as locksmith, soldier, etc.

That is why savages do not care about Provence.

194 Why have limits been set upon my knowledge, my height, my life, making it a hundred rather than a thousand years? For what reason did nature make it so, and choose this rather than that mean from the whole of infinity, when there is no more reason to choose one rather than another, as none is more attractive than another?

195 Little of everything. As we cannot be universal by knowing everything there is to be known about everything, we must know a little about everything, because it is much better to know something about everything than everything about something. Such universality is the finest. It would be still better if we could have both together, but, if a choice must be made, this is the one to choose. The world knows this and does so, for the world is often a good judge.

196 Some fancy makes me dislike people who croak or who puff while eating. Fancy carries a lot of weight. What good will that do us? That we indulge it because it is natural? No, rather that we resist it.

197 There is no better proof of human vanity than to consider the causes and effects of love, because the whole universe can be changed by it. Cleopatra's nose.

198 When I see the blind and wretched state of man, when I survey the whole universe in its dumbness and man left to himself with no light, as though lost in this corner of the universe, without knowing who put him there, what he has come to do, what will become of him when he dies, incapable of knowing anything, I am moved to terror, like a man transported in his sleep to some terrifying desert island, who wakes up quite lost and with no means of escape. Then I marvel that so wretched a state does not drive people to despair. I see other people around me, made like myself. I ask them if they are any better informed than I, and they say they are not. Then these lost and wretched creatures look around and find some attractive objects to which they become addicted and attached. For my part I have never been able to form such attachments, and considering how very likely it is that there exists something besides what I can see, I have tried to find out whether God has left any traces of himself.

I see a number of religions in conflict, and therefore all false, except one. Each of them wishes to be believed on its own authority and threatens unbelievers. I do not believe them on that account. Anyone can say that. Anyone can call himself a prophet, but I see Christianity, and find its prophecies, which are not something that anyone can do.

199 Disproportion of man. This is where unaided knowledge brings us. If it is not true, there is no truth in man, and if it is true, he has good cause to feel humiliated; in either case he is obliged to humble himself.

And, since he cannot exist without believing this knowledge, before going on to a wider inquiry concerning nature, I want him to consider nature just once, seriously and at leisure, and to look at himself as well, and judge whether there is any proportion between himself and nature by comparing the two.

Let man then contemplate the whole of nature in her full and lofty majesty, let him turn his gaze away from the lowly objects around him; let him behold the dazzling light set like an eternal lamp to light up the universe, let him see the earth as a mere speck compared to the vast orbit described by this star, and let him marvel at finding this vast orbit itself to be no more than the tiniest point compared to that described by the stars revolving in the firmament. But if our eyes stop there, let our imagination proceed further; it will grow weary of conceiving things before nature tires of producing them. The whole visible world is only an imperceptible dot in nature's ample bosom. No idea comes near it; it is no good inflating our conceptions beyond imaginable space, we only bring forth atoms compared to the reality of things. Nature is an infinite sphere whose centre is everywhere and circumference nowhere. In short it is the greatest perceptible mark of God's omnipotence that our imagination should lose itself in that thought.

Let man, returning to himself, consider what he is in comparison with what exists; let him regard himself as lost, and from this little dungeon, in which he finds himself lodged, I mean the universe, let him learn to take the earth, its realms, its cities, its houses and himself at their proper value.

What is a man in the infinite?

But, to offer him another prodigy equally astounding, let him look into the tiniest things he knows. Let a mite show him in its minute body incomparably more minute parts, legs with joints, veins in its legs, blood in the veins, humours in the blood, drops in the humours, vapours in the drops: let him divide these things still further until he has exhausted his powers of imagination, and let the last thing he comes down to now be the subject of our discourse. He will perhaps think that this is the ultimate of minuteness in nature.

I want to show him a new abyss. I want to depict to him not only the visible universe, but all the conceivable immensity of nature enclosed in this miniature atom. Let him see there an infinity of universes, each with its firmament, its planets, its earth, in the same proportions as in the visible world, and on that earth animals, and finally mites, in which he will find again the same results as in the first; and finding the same thing yet again in the others without end or respite, he will be lost in such wonders, as astounding in their minuteness as the others in their amplitude. For who will not marvel that our body, a moment ago imperceptible in a universe, itself imperceptible in the bosom of the whole, should now be a colossus, a world, or rather a whole, compared to the nothingness beyond our reach? Anyone who considers himself in this way will be terrified at himself, and, seeing his mass, as given him by nature, supporting him between these two abysses of infinity and nothingness, will tremble at these marvels. I believe that with his curiosity changing into wonder he will be more disposed to contemplate them in silence than investigate them with presumption.

For, after all, what is man in nature? A nothing compared to the infinite, a whole compared to the nothing, a middle point between all and nothing, infinitely remote from an understanding of the extremes; the end of things and their principles are unattainably hidden from him in impenetrable secrecy.

Equally incapable of seeing the nothingness from which he emerges and the infinity in which he is engulfed.

What else can he do, then, but perceive some semblance of the middle of things, eternally hopeless of knowing either their principles or their end? All things have come out of nothingness and are carried onwards to infinity. Who can follow these astonishing processes? The author of these wonders understands them: no one else can.

Because they failed to contemplate these infinities, men have rashly undertaken to probe into nature as if there were some proportion between themselves and her.

Strangely enough they wanted to know the principles of things and go on from there to know everything, inspired by a presumption as infinite as their object. For there can be no doubt that such a plan could not be conceived without infinite presumption or a capacity as infinite as that of nature.

When we know better, we understand that, since nature has engraved her own image and that of her author on all things, they almost all share her double infinity. Thus we see that all the sciences are infinite in the range of their researches, for who can doubt that mathematics, for instance, has an infinity of infinities of propositions to expound? They are infinite also in the multiplicity and subtlety of their principles, for anyone can see that those which are supposed to be ultimate do not stand by themselves, but depend on others, which depend on others again, and thus never allow of any finality.

But we treat as ultimate those which seem so to our reason, as in material things we call a point indivisible when our senses can perceive nothing beyond it, although by its nature it is infinitely divisible.

Of these two infinites of science, that of greatness is much more obvious, and that is why it has occurred to few people to claim that they know everything. 'I am going to speak about everything,' Democritus used to say.

But the infinitely small is much harder to see. The philosophers have much more readily claimed to have reached it, and that is where they have all tripped up. This is the origin of such familiar titles as Of the principles of things, Of the principles of philosophy, and the like, which are really as pretentious, though they do not look it, as this blatant one: Of all that can be known.

We naturally believe we are more capable of reaching the centre of things than of embracing their circumference, and the visible extent of the world is visibly greater than we. But since we in our turn are greater than small things, we think we are more capable of mastering them, and yet it takes no less capacity to reach nothingness than the whole. In either case it takes an infinite capacity, and it seems to me that anyone who had understood the ultimate principles of things might also succeed in knowing infinity. One depends on the other, and one leads to the other. These extremes touch and join by going in opposite directions, and they meet in God and God alone.

Let us then realize our limitations. We are something and we are not everything. Such being as we have conceals from us the knowledge of first principles, which arise from nothingness, and the smallness of our being hides infinity from our sight.

Our intelligence occupies the same rank in the order of intellect as our body in the whole range of nature.

Limited in every respect, we find this intermediate state between two extremes reflected in all our faculties. Our senses can perceive nothing extreme; too much noise deafens us, too much light dazzles; when we are too far or too close we cannot see properly; an argument is obscured by being too long or too short; too much truth bewilders us. I know people who cannot understand that 4 from o leaves o. First principles are too obvious for us; too much pleasure causes discomfort; too much harmony in music is displeasing; too much kindness annoys us: we want to be able to pay back the debt with something over. Kindness is welcome to the extent that it seems the debt can be paid back. When it goes too far gratitude turns into hatred.

We feel neither extreme heat nor extreme cold. Qualities carried to excess are bad for us and cannot be perceived; we no longer feel them, we suffer them. Excessive youth and excessive age impair thought; so do too much and too little learning.

In a word, extremes are as if they did not exist for us nor we for them; they escape us or we escape them.

Such is our true state. That is what makes us incapable of certain knowledge or absolute ignorance. We are floating in a medium of vast extent, always drifting uncertainly, blown to and fro; whenever we think we have a fixed point to which we can cling and make fast, it shifts and leaves us behind; if we follow it, it eludes our grasp, slips away, and flees eternally before us. Nothing stands still for us. This is our natural state and yet the state most contrary to our inclinations. We burn with desire to find a firm footing, an ultimate, lasting base on which to build a tower rising up to infinity, but our whole foundation cracks and the earth opens up into the depth of the abyss.

Let us then seek neither assurance nor stability; our reason is always deceived by the inconsistency of appearances; nothing can fix the finite between the two infinites which enclose and evade it.

Once that is clearly understood, I think that each of us can stay quietly in the state in which nature has placed him. Since the middle station allotted to us is always far from the extremes, what does it matter if someone else has a slightly better understanding of things? If he has, and if he takes them a little further, is he not still infinitely remote from the goal? Is not our span of life equally infinitesimal in eternity, even if it is extended by ten years?

In the perspective of these infinites, all finites are equal and I see no reason to settle our imagination on one rather than another. Merely comparing ourselves with the finite is painful.

If man studied himself, he would see how incapable he is of going further. How could a part possibly know the whole? But perhaps he will aspire to know at least the parts to which he bears some proportion. But the parts of the world are all so related and linked together that I think it is impossible to know one without the other and without the whole.

There is, for example, a relationship between man and all he knows. He needs space to contain him, time to exist in, motion to be alive, elements to constitute him, warmth and food for nourishment, air to breathe. He sees light, he feels bodies, everything in short is related to him. To understand man therefore one must know why he needs air to live, and to understand air one must know how it comes to be thus related to the life of man, etc.

Flame cannot exist without air, so, to know one, one must know the other.

Thus, since all things are both caused or causing, assisted and assisting, mediate and immediate, providing mutual support in a chain linking together naturally and imperceptibly the most distant and different things, I consider it as impossible to know the parts without knowing the whole as to know the whole without knowing the individual parts.

The eternity of things in themselves or in God must still amaze our brief span of life.

The fixed and constant immobility of nature, compared to the continual changes going on in us, must produce the same effect.

And what makes our inability to know things absolute is that they are simple in themselves, while we are composed of two opposing natures of different kinds, soul and body. For it is impossible for the part of us which reasons to be anything but spiritual, and even if it were claimed that we are simply corporeal, that would still more preclude us from knowing things, since there is nothing so inconceivable as the idea that matter knows itself. We cannot possibly know how it could know itself.

Thus, if we are simply material, we can know nothing at all, and, if we are composed of mind and matter, we cannot have perfect knowledge of things which are simply spiritual or corporeal.

That is why nearly all philosophers confuse their ideas of things, and speak spiritually of corporeal things and corporeally of spiritual ones, for they boldly assert that bodies tend to fall, that they aspire towards their centre, that they flee from destruction, that they fear a void, that they have inclinations, sympathies, antipathies, all things pertaining only to things spiritual. And when they speak of minds, they consider them as being in a place, and attribute to them movement from one place to another, which are things pertaining only to bodies.

Instead of receiving ideas of these things in their purity, we colour them with our qualities and stamp our own composite being on all the simple things we contemplate.

Who would not think, to see us compounding everything of mind and matter, that such a mixture is perfectly intelligible to us? Yet this is the thing we understand least; man is to himself the greatest prodigy in nature, for he cannot conceive what body is, and still less what mind is, and least of all how a body can be joined to a mind. This is his supreme difficulty, and yet it is his very being. The way in which minds are attached to bodies is beyond man's understanding, and yet this is what man is.

Finally to complete the proof of our weakness, I shall end with these two considerations ...

200 Man is only a reed, the weakest in nature, but he is a thinking reed. There is no need for the whole universe to take up arms to crush him: a vapour, a drop of water is enough to kill him. But even if the universe were to crush him, man would still be nobler than his slayer, because he knows that he is dying and the advantage the universe has over him. The universe knows none of this.

Thus all our dignity consists in thought. It is on thought that we must depend for our recovery, not on space and time, which we could never fill. Let us then strive to think well; that is the basic principle of morality.

201 The eternal silence of these infinite spaces fills me with dread.

202 Be comforted; it is not from yourself that you must expect it, but on the contrary you must expect it by expecting nothing from yourself.

271 All Jesus did was to teach men that they loved themselves, that they were slaves, blind, sick, unhappy and sinful, that he had to deliver, enlighten, sanctify and heal them, that this would be achieved by men hating themselves and following him through his misery and death on the Cross.

273 Those who find it hard to believe seek an excuse in the fact that the Jews do not believe. 'If it is so clear,' they say, 'why do they not believe?' They would almost like them to believe so that they should not be deterred by the example of the Jews' refusal. But it is the very fact of their refusal that is the basis of our belief. We should be much less inclined to believe if they were on our side; we should then have a much better excuse.

It is a wonderful thing to have made the Jews so fond of prophecies and so hostile to their fulfilment.

281 Perpetuity. This religion consists in believing that man has fallen from a state of glory and communion with God into a state of gloom, penitence and estrangement from God, but that after this life we shall be restored by a promised Messiah, and it has always existed on earth.

All things have passed away, but this, through which all things are, has endured.

In the first age of the world men were led into all kinds of misdeeds, and yet there were holy men like Enoch, Lamech and others who patiently awaited the Christ promised since the world began. Noah saw men's wickedness at its height, and he had the merit to save the world in his person, through hoping in the Messiah, whom he prefigured. Abraham was surrounded by idolaters when God showed him the mystery of the Messiah whom he hailed from afar. In the time of Isaac and Jacob abomination spread over the whole earth but these holy men lived in their faith, and Jacob on his deathbed, as he was blessing his children, cried out in a rapture which made him interrupt his speech: 'I await the saviour whom thou hast promised, O Lord.'

The Egyptians were riddled with idolatry and magic, and even the people of God were carried away by their example. Yet Moses and others saw him they did not see, and worshipped as they looked to the eternal gifts he was preparing for them.

Next the Greeks and Latins set up false gods. The poets invented a hundred different theologies, the philosophers split up into a thousand different sects. And yet in the heart of Judaea there were always chosen men foretelling the coming of the Messiah who was known only to them. He came at last in the fullness of time, and since then we have seen so many schisms and heresies arise, so many states overthrown, so many changes of every kind, while the Church which worships him who has always been has continued without a break. What is wonderful, incomparable and wholly divine is that this religion which has always survived has always been under attack. Times without number it has been on the verge of total destruction, and every time it has been in such a state God has rescued it by extraordinary manifestations of his power. For what is amazing is that it has continued without bending and bowing to the will of tyrants, for there is nothing strange in a state still surviving when its laws are sometimes made to give way to necessity, but that ... (See the circle in Montaigne.)

284 The only religion which is against nature, against common sense and against our pleasures is the only one which has always existed.

308 The infinite distance between body and mind symbolizes the infinitely more infinite distance between mind and charity, for charity is supernatural.

All the splendour of greatness lacks lustre for those engaged in pursuits of the mind.

The greatness of intellectual people is not visible to kings, rich men, captains, who are all great in a carnal sense.

The greatness of wisdom, which is nothing if it does not come from God, is not visible to carnal or intellectual people. They are three orders differing in kind.

Great geniuses have their power, their splendour, their greatness, their victory and their lustre, and do not need carnal greatness, which has no relevance for them. They are recognized not with the eyes but with the mind, and that is enough.

Saints have their power, their splendour, their victory, their lustre, and do not need either carnal or intellectual greatness, which has no relevance for them, for it neither adds nor takes away anything. They are recognized by God and the angels, and not by bodies or by curious minds. God is enough for them.

Archimedes in obscurity would still be revered. He fought no battles visible to the eyes, but enriched every mind with his discoveries. How splendidly he shone in the minds of men!

Jesus without wealth or any outward show of knowledge has his own order of holiness. He made no discoveries; he did not reign, but he was humble, patient, thrice holy to God, terrible to devils, and without sin. With what great pomp and marvellously magnificent array he came in the eyes of the heart, which perceive wisdom!

It would have been pointless for Archimedes to play the prince in his mathematical books, prince though he was.

It would have been pointless for Our Lord Jesus Christ to come as a king with splendour in his reign of holiness, but he truly came in splendour in his own order.

It is quite absurd to be shocked at the lowliness of Jesus, as if his lowliness was of the same order as the greatness he came to reveal.

If we consider his greatness in his life, his passion, his obscurity, his death, in the way he chose his disciples, in their desertion, in his secret resurrection and all the rest, we shall see that it is so great that we have no reason to be shocked at a lowliness which has nothing to do with it.

But there are some who are only capable of admiring carnal greatness, as if there were no such thing as greatness of the mind. And others who only admire greatness of the mind, as if there were not infinitely higher greatness in wisdom.

All bodies, the firmament, the stars, the earth and its kingdoms are not worth the least of minds, for it knows them all and itself too, while bodies know nothing.

All bodies together and all minds together and all their products are not worth the least impulse of charity. This is of an infinitely superior order.

Out of all bodies together we could not succeed in creating one little thought. It is impossible, and of a different order. Out of all bodies and minds we could not extract one impulse of true charity. It is impossible, and of a different, supernatural, order.

310 Proofs of Jesus Christ. The hypothesis that the Apostles were knaves is quite absurd. Follow it out to the end and imagine these twelve men meeting after Jesus's death and conspiring to say that he had risen from the dead. This means attacking all the powers that be. The human heart is singularly susceptible to fickleness, to change, to promises, to bribery. One of them had only to deny his story under these inducements, or still more because of possible imprisonment, tortures and death, and they would all have been lost. Follow that out.

332 Prophecies. If a single man had written a book foretelling the time and manner of Jesus's coming and Jesus had come in conformity with these prophecies, this would carry infinite weight.

But there is much more here. There is a succession of men over a period of 4,000 years, coming consistently and invariably one after the other, to foretell the same coming; there is an entire people proclaiming it, existing for 4,000 years to testify in a body to the certainty they feel about it, from which they cannot be deflected by whatever threats and persecutions they may suffer. This is of a quite different order of importance.

335 The most weighty proofs of Jesus are the prophecies. It is for them that God made most provision, for the event which fulfilled them is a miracle, continuing from the birth of the Church to the end. Thus God raised up prophets for 1,600 years and for 400 years afterwards dispersed all the prophecies with all the Jews, who carried them into every corner of the world. Such was the preparation for the birth of Christ, and, since his Gospel had to be believed by the whole world, there not only had to be prophecies to make men believe it, but these prophecies had to be spread throughout the world so that the whole world should embrace it.

351 Christianity is strange; it bids man to recognize that he is vile, and even abominable, and bids him want to be like God. Without such a counterweight his exaltation would make him horribly vain or his abasement horribly abject.

352 Wretchedness induces despair.

Pride induces presumption.

The Incarnation shows man the greatness of his wretchedness through the greatness of the remedy required.

356 What difference is there between a soldier and a Carthusian as regards obedience? For they are equally obedient and dependent and engaged in equally arduous exercises. But the soldier always hopes to become his own master, and never does, for even captains and princes are always slaves and dependent, but he always hopes, and always strives to achieve his object, whereas the Carthusian vows never to be anything but dependent. Thus they do not differ in their perpetual servitude, which is always their common lot, but in the hope that one always and the other never entertains.

373 We must love God alone and hate ourselves alone.

If the foot had never known it belonged to the body, and that there was a body on which it depended, if it had only known and loved itself, and if it then came to know that it belonged to a body on which it depended, what regret, what shame it would feel for its past life, for having been useless to the body which poured life into it, and would have annihilated it if it had rejected and cut it off as the foot cut itself off from the body! How it would pray to be kept on! How submissively it would let itself be governed by the will in charge of the body, to the point of being amputated if necessary! Otherwise it would cease to be a member, for every member must be willing to perish for the sake of the body, for whose sake alone everything exists.

378 'If I had seen a miracle,' they say, 'I should be converted.' How can they be positive that they would do what they know nothing about? They imagine that such a conversion consists in a worship of God conducted, as they picture it, like some exchange or conversation. True conversion consists in self-annihilation before the universal being whom we have so often vexed and who is perfectly entitled to destroy us at any moment, in recognizing that we can do nothing without him and that we have deserved nothing but his disfavour. It consists in knowing that there is an irreconcilable opposition between God and us, and that without a mediator there can be no exchange.

392 Figures. God wishing to create for himself a holy people, whom he would keep apart from all other nations, whom he would deliver from their enemies, whom he would bring to a place of rest, promised to do so and foretold by his prophets the time and manner of his coming. And yet to strengthen the hope of his chosen people in every age he showed them an image of all this, never leaving them without assurances of his power and will for their salvation, for in the creation of man Adam was witness to this and received the promise of a saviour who should be born of woman.

When men were still so close to Creation that they had not been able to forget their creation and their fall; when those who had seen Adam were no longer in this world, God sent Noah, saving him and drowning the whole earth by a miracle which clearly showed his power to save the world, and his will to do so, and to cause to be born from the seed of woman the one he had promised.

This miracle was sufficient to strengthen the hope of the elect.

The memory of the Flood being still so fresh among men, while Noah was still alive, God made his promises to Abraham, and while Shem was still alive, God sent Moses ...

403 Wretchedness. Solomon and Job have known and spoken best about man's wretchedness, one the happiest, the other the unhappiest of men; one knowing by experience the vanity of pleasure, and the other the reality of afflictions.

412 Men are so inevitably mad that not to be mad would be to give a mad twist to madness.

414 Wretchedness. The only thing that consoles us for our miseries is diversion. And yet it is the greatest of our miseries. For it is that above all which prevents us thinking about ourselves and leads us imperceptibly to destruction. But for that we should be bored, and boredom would drive us to seek some more solid means of escape, but diversion passes our time and brings us imperceptibly to our death.

418 Infinity — nothing. [THE WAGER] Our soul is cast into the body where it finds number, time, dimensions; it reasons about these things and calls them natural, or necessary, and can believe nothing else.

Unity added to infinity does not increase it at all, any more than a foot added to an infinite measurement: the finite is annihilated in the presence of the infinite and becomes pure nothingness. So it is with our mind before God, with our justice before divine justice. There is not so great a disproportion between our justice and God's as between unity and infinity.

God's justice must be as vast as his mercy. Now his justice towards the damned is less vast and ought to be less startling to us than his mercy towards the elect.

We know that the infinite exists without knowing its nature, just as we know that it is untrue that numbers are finite. Thus it is true that there is an infinite number, but we do not know what it is. It is untrue that it is even, untrue that it is odd, for by adding a unit it does not change its nature. Yet it is a number, and every number is even or odd. (It is true that this applies to every finite number.)

Therefore we may well know that God exists without knowing what he is.

Is there no substantial truth, seeing that there are so many true things which are not truth itself?

Thus we know the existence and nature of the finite because we too are finite and extended in space.

We know the existence of the infinite without knowing its nature, because it too has extension but unlike us no limits.

But we do not know either the existence or the nature of God, because he has neither extension nor limits.

But by faith we know his existence, through glory we shall know his nature.

Now I have already proved that it is quite possible to know that something exists without knowing its nature.

Let us now speak according to our natural lights.

If there is a God, he is infinitely beyond our comprehension, since, being indivisible and without limits, he bears no relation to us. We are therefore incapable of knowing either what he is or whether he is. That being so, who would dare to attempt an answer to the question? Certainly not we, who bear no relation to him.

Who then will condemn Christians for being unable to give rational grounds for their belief, professing as they do a religion for which they cannot give rational grounds? They declare that it is a folly, stultitiam, in expounding it to the world, and then you complain that they do not prove it. If they did prove it they would not be keeping their word. It is by being without proof that they show they are not without sense. 'Yes, but although that excuses those who offer their religion as such, and absolves them from the criticism of producing it without rational grounds, it does not absolve those who accept it.' Let us then examine this point, and let us say: 'Either God is or he is not.' But to which view shall we be inclined? Reason cannot decide this question. Infinite chaos separates us. At the far end of this infinite distance a coin is being spun which will come down heads or tails. How will you wager? Reason cannot make you choose either, reason cannot prove either wrong.

Do not then condemn as wrong those who have made a choice, for you know nothing about it. 'No, but I will condemn them not for having made this particular choice, but any choice, for, although the one who calls heads and the other one are equally at fault, the fact is that they are both at fault: the right thing is not to wager at all.'

Yes, but you must wager. There is no choice, you are already committed. Which will you choose then? Let us see: since a choice must be made, let us see which offers you the least interest. You have two things to lose: the true and the good; and two things to stake: your reason and your will, your knowledge and your happiness; and your nature has two things to avoid: error and wretchedness. Since you must necessarily choose, your reason is no more affronted by choosing one rather than the other. That is one point cleared up. But your happiness? Let us weigh up the gain and the loss involved in calling heads that God exists. Let us assess the two cases: if you win you win everything, if you lose you lose nothing. Do not hesitate then; wager that he does exist. 'That is wonderful. Yes, I must wager, but perhaps I am wagering too much.' Let us see: since there is an equal chance of gain and loss, if you stood to win only two lives for one you could still wager, but supposing you stood to win three?

You would have to play (since you must necessarily play) and it would be unwise of you, once you are obliged to play, not to risk your life in order to win three lives at a game in which there is an equal chance of losing and winning. But there is an eternity of life and happiness. That being so, even though there were an infinite number of chances, of which only one were in your favour, you would still be right to wager one in order to win two; and you would be acting wrongly, being obliged to play, in refusing to stake one life against three in a game, where out of an infinite number of chances there is one in your favour, if there were an infinity of infinitely happy life to be won. But here there is an infinity of infinitely happy life to be won, one chance of winning against a finite number of chances of losing, and what you are staking is finite. That leaves no choice; wherever there is infinity, and where there are not infinite chances of losing against that of winning, there is no room for hesitation, you must give everything. And thus, since you are obliged to play, you must be renouncing reason if you hoard your life rather than risk it for an infinite gain, just as likely to occur as a loss amounting to nothing.

For it is no good saying that it is uncertain whether you will win, that it is certain that you are taking a risk, and that the infinite distance between the certainty of what you are risking and the uncertainty of what you may gain makes the finite good you are certainly risking equal to the infinite good that you are not certain to gain. This is not the case. Every gambler takes a certain risk for an uncertain gain, and yet he is taking a certain finite risk for an uncertain finite gain without sinning against reason. Here there is no infinite distance between the certain risk and the uncertain gain: that is not true. There is, indeed, an infinite distance between the certainty of winning and the certainty of losing, but the proportion between the uncertainty of winning and the certainty of what is being risked is in proportion to the chances of winning or losing. And hence if there are as many chances on one side as on the other you are playing for even odds. And in that case the certainty of what you are risking is equal to the uncertainty of what you may win; it is by no means infinitely distant from it. Thus our argument carries infinite weight, when the stakes are finite in a game where there are even chances of winning and losing and an infinite prize to be won.

This is conclusive and if men are capable of any truth this is it.

'I confess, I admit it, but is there really no way of seeing what the cards are?' — 'Yes. Scripture and the rest, etc.' — 'Yes, but my hands are tied and my lips are sealed; I am being forced to wager and I am not free; I am being held fast and I am so made that I cannot believe. What do you want me to do then?' — 'That is true, but at least get it into your head that, if you are unable to believe, it is because of your passions, since reason impels you to believe and yet you cannot do so. Concentrate then not on convincing yourself by multiplying proofs of God's existence but by diminishing your passions. You want to find faith and you do not know the road. You want to be cured of unbelief and you ask for the remedy: learn from those who were once bound like you and who now wager all they have. These are people who know the road you wish to follow, who have been cured of the affliction of which you wish to be cured: follow the way by which they began. They behaved just as if they did believe, taking holy water, having masses said, and so on. That will make you believe quite naturally, and will make you more docile.' — 'But that is what I am afraid of.' — 'But why? What have you to lose? But to show you that this is the way, the fact is that this diminishes the passions which are your great obstacles ...'

'Now what harm will come to you from choosing this course? You will be faithful, honest, humble, grateful, full of good works, a sincere, true friend ... It is true you will not enjoy noxious pleasures, glory and good living, but will you not have others?

'I tell you that you will gain even in this life, and that at every step you take along this road you will see that your gain is so certain and your risk so negligible that in the end you will realize that you have wagered on something certain and infinite for which you have paid nothing.'

'How these words fill me with rapture and delight! —'

'If my words please you and seem cogent, you must know that they come from a man who went down upon his knees before and after to pray this infinite and indivisible being, to whom he submits his own, that he might bring your being also to submit to him for your own good and for his glory: and that strength might thus be reconciled with lowliness.'

427 [AGAINST INDIFFERENCE] Let them at least learn what this religion is which they are attacking before attacking it. If this religion boasted that it had a clear sight of God and plain and manifest evidence of his existence, it would be an effective objection to say that there is nothing to be seen in the world which proves him so obviously. But since on the contrary it says that men are in darkness and remote from God, that he has hidden himself from their understanding, that this is the very name which he gives himself in Scripture: Deus absconditus [the hidden God]; and, in a word, if it strives equally to establish these two facts: that God has appointed visible signs in the Church so that he shall be recognized by those who genuinely seek him, and that he has none the less hidden them in such a way that he will only be perceived by those who seek him with all their heart, then what advantage can they derive when, unconcerned to seek the truth as they profess to be, they protest that nothing shows it to them? For the obscurity in which they find themselves, and which they use as an objection against the Church, simply establishes one of the things the Church maintains without affecting the other, and far from proving her teaching false, confirms it.

In order really to attack the truth they would have to protest that they had made every effort to seek it everywhere, even in what the Church offers by way of instruction, but without any satisfaction. If they talked like that they would indeed be attacking one of Christianity's claims. But I hope to show here that no reasonable person could talk like that. I even venture to say that no one has ever done so. We know well enough how people in this frame of mind behave. They think they have made great efforts to learn when they have spent a few hours reading some book of the Bible, and have questioned some ecclesiastic about the truths of the faith. After that they boast that they have sought without success in books and among men. But, in fact, I should say to them what I have often said: such negligence is intolerable. It is not a question here of the trifling interest of some stranger prompting such behaviour: it is a question of ourselves, and our all.

The immortality of the soul is something of such vital importance to us, affecting us so deeply, that one must have lost all feeling not to care about knowing the facts of the matter. All our actions and thoughts must follow such different paths, according to whether there is hope of eternal blessings or not, that the only possible way of acting with sense and judgement is to decide our course in the light of this point, which ought to be our ultimate objective.

Thus our chief interest and chief duty is to seek enlightenment on this subject, on which all our conduct depends. And that is why, amongst those who are not convinced, I make an absolute distinction between those who strive with all their might to learn and those who live without troubling themselves or thinking about it.

I can feel nothing but compassion for those who sincerely lament their doubt, who regard it as the ultimate misfortune, and who, sparing no effort to escape from it, make their search their principal and most serious business.

But as for those who spend their lives without a thought for this final end of life and who, solely because they do not find within themselves the light of conviction, neglect to look elsewhere, and to examine thoroughly whether this opinion is one of those which people accept out of credulous simplicity or one of those which, though obscure in themselves, none the less have a most solid and unshakeable foundation: as for them, I view them very differently.

This negligence in a matter where they themselves, their eternity, their all are at stake, fills me more with irritation than pity; it astounds and appals me; it seems quite monstrous to me. I do not say this prompted by the pious zeal of spiritual devotion. I mean on the contrary that we ought to have this feeling from principles of human interest and self-esteem. For that we need only see what the least enlightened see.

One needs no great sublimity of soul to realize that in this life there is no true and solid satisfaction, that all our pleasures are mere vanity, that our afflictions are infinite, and finally that death which threatens us at every moment must in a few years infallibly face us with the inescapable and appalling alternative of being annihilated or wretched throughout eternity.

Nothing could be more real, or more dreadful than that. Let us put on as bold a face as we like: that is the end awaiting the world's most illustrious life. Let us ponder these things, and then say whether it is not beyond doubt that the only good thing in this life is the hope of another life, that we become happy only as we come nearer to it, and that, just as no more unhappiness awaits those who have been quite certain of eternity, so there is no happiness for those who have no inkling of it.

It is therefore quite certainly a great evil to have such doubts, but it is at least an indispensable obligation to seek when one does thus doubt; so the doubter who does not seek is at the same time very unhappy and very wrong. If in addition he feels a calm satisfaction, which he openly professes, and even regards as a reason for joy and vanity, I can find no terms to describe so extravagant a creature.

What can give rise to such feelings? What reason for joy can be found in the expectation of nothing but helpless wretchedness? What reason for vanity in being plunged into impenetrable darkness? And how can such an argument as this occur to a reasonable man?

'I do not know who put me into the world, nor what the world is, nor what I am myself. I am terribly ignorant about everything. I do not know what my body is, or my senses, or my soul, or even that part of me which thinks what I am saying, which reflects about everything and about itself, and does not know itself any better than it knows anything else.

'I see the terrifying spaces of the universe hemming me in, and I find myself attached to one corner of this vast expanse without knowing why I have been put in this place rather than that, or why the brief span of life allotted to me should be assigned to one moment rather than another of all the eternity which went before me and all that which will come after me. I see only infinity on every side, hemming me in like an atom or like the shadow of a fleeting instant. All I know is that I must soon die, but what I know least about is this very death which I cannot evade.

'Just as I do not know whence I come, so I do not know whither I am going. All I know is that when I leave this world I shall fall for ever into nothingness or into the hands of a wrathful God, but I do not know which of these two states is to be my eternal lot. Such is my state, full of weakness and uncertainty. And my conclusion from all this is that I must pass my days without a thought of seeking what is to happen to me. Perhaps I might find some enlightenment in my doubts, but I do not want to take the trouble, nor take a step to look for it: and afterwards, as I sneer at those who are striving to this end — (whatever certainty they have should arouse despair rather than vanity) — I will go without fear or foresight to face so momentous an event, and allow myself to be carried off limply to my death, uncertain of my future state for all eternity.'

Who would wish to have as his friend a man who argued like that? Who would choose him from among others as a confidant in his affairs? Who would resort to him in adversity? To what use in life could he possibly be turned?

It is truly glorious for religion to have such unreasonable men as enemies: their opposition represents so small a danger that it serves on the contrary to establish the truths of religion. For the Christian faith consists almost wholly in establishing these two things: The corruption of nature and the redemption of Christ. Now, I maintain that, if they do not serve to prove the truth of the redemption by the sanctity of their conduct, they do at least admirably serve to prove the corruption of nature by such unnatural sentiments.

Nothing is so important to man as his state: nothing more fearful than eternity. Thus the fact that there exist men who are indifferent to the loss of their being and the peril of an eternity of wretchedness is against nature. With everything else they are quite different; they fear the most trifling things, foresee and feel them; and the same man who spends so many days and nights in fury and despair at losing some office or at some imaginary affront to his honour is the very one who knows that he is going to lose everything through death but feels neither anxiety nor emotion. It is a monstrous thing to see one and the same heart at once so sensitive to minor things and so strangely insensitive to the greatest. It is an incomprehensible spell, a supernatural torpor that points to an omnipotent power as its cause.

Man's nature must have undergone a strange reversal for him to glory in being in a state in which it seems incredible that any single person should be. Yet experience has shown me so many like this that it would be surprising if we did not know that most of those concerned in this are pretending and are not really what they seem. They are people who have heard that it is good form to display such extravagance. This is what they call shaking off the yoke, and what they are trying to imitate. But it would not be difficult to show them how mistaken they are to court esteem in this way. That is not how to acquire it, not even, I would say, among worldly people, who judge things sensibly and who know that the only way to succeed is to appear honest, faithful, judicious and capable of rendering useful service to one's friends, because by nature men only like what may be of use to them. Now what advantage is it to us to hear someone say he has shaken off the yoke, that he does not believe that there is a God watching over his actions, that he considers himself sole master of his behaviour, and that he proposes to account for it to no one but himself? Does he think that by so doing he has henceforth won our full confidence, and made us expect from him consolation, counsel and assistance in all life's needs? Do they think that they have given us great pleasure by telling us that they hold our soul to be no more than wind or smoke, and saying it moreover in tones of pride and satisfaction? Is this then something to be said gaily? Is it not on the contrary something to be said sadly, as being the saddest thing in the world?

If they thought seriously, they would see that this is so misguided, so contrary to good sense, so opposed to decency, so remote in every way from the good form they seek, that they would be more likely to reform than corrupt those who might feel inclined to follow them. And, indeed, make them describe the feeling and reasons which inspire their doubts about religion: what they say will be so feeble and cheap as to persuade you of the contrary. As someone said to them very aptly one day: 'If you go on arguing like that,' he said, 'you really will convert me.' And he was right, for who would not shrink from finding himself sharing the feelings of such contemptible people?

Thus those who only pretend to feel like this would be indeed unhappy if they did violence to their nature in order to become the most impertinent of men. If they are vexed in their inmost heart at not seeing more clearly, they should not try to pretend otherwise: it would be no shame to admit it. There is no shame except in having none. There is no surer sign of extreme weakness of mind than the failure to recognize the unhappy state of a man without God; there is no surer sign of an evil heart than failure to desire that the eternal promises be true; nothing is more cowardly than to brazen it out with God. Let them then leave such impiety to those ill-bred enough to be really capable of it; let them at least be decent people if they cannot be Christians; let them, in short, acknowledge that there are only two classes of persons who can be called reasonable: those who serve God with all their heart because they know him and those who seek him with all their heart because they do not know him.

As for those who live without either knowing or seeking him, they consider it so little worthwhile to take trouble over themselves that they are not worth other people's trouble, and it takes all the charity of that religion they despise not to despise them to the point of abandoning them to their folly. But as this religion obliges us always to regard them, as long as they live, as being capable of receiving grace which may enlighten them, and to believe that in a short time they may be filled with more faith than we are, while we on the contrary may be stricken by the same blindness which is theirs now, we must do for them what we would wish to be done for us in their place, and appeal to them to have pity on themselves, and to take at least a few steps in an attempt to find some light. Let them spend on reading about it a few of the hours they waste on other things: however reluctantly they may approach the task they will perhaps hit upon something, and at least they will not be losing much. But as for those who approach it with absolute sincerity and a real desire to find the truth, I hope that they will be satisfied, and convinced by the proofs of so divine a religion which I have collected here, following more or less this order ...

429 This is what I see and what troubles me. I look around in every direction and all I see is darkness. Nature has nothing to offer me that does not give rise to doubt and anxiety. If I saw no sign there of a Divinity I should decide on a negative solution: if I saw signs of a Creator everywhere I should peacefully settle down in the faith. But, seeing too much to deny and not enough to affirm, I am in a pitiful state, where I have wished a hundred times over that, if there is a God supporting nature, she should unequivocally proclaim him, and that, if the signs in nature are deceptive, they should be completely erased; that nature should say all or nothing so that I could see what course I ought to follow. Instead of that, in the state in which I am, not knowing what I am nor what I ought to do, I know neither my condition nor my duty. My whole heart strains to know what the true good is in order to pursue it: no price would be too high to pay for eternity.

I envy those of the faithful whom I see living so unconcernedly, making so little use of a gift which, it seems to me, I should turn to such different account.

430 No other has realized that man is the most excellent of creatures. Some, fully realizing how real his excellence is, have taken for cowardice and ingratitude men's natural feelings of abasement; while others, fully realizing how real this abasement is, have treated with haughty ridicule the feelings of greatness which are just as natural to man.

'Lift up your eyes to God,' say some of them, 'look at him whom you resemble and who created you to worship him. You can make yourself like him: wisdom will make you his equal, if you want to follow him.' — 'Hold your heads high, free men,' said Epictetus. And others say, 'Cast down your eyes towards the ground, puny worm that you are, and look at the beasts whose companion you are.'

What then is to become of man? Will he be the equal of God or the beasts? What a terrifying distance! What then shall he be? Who cannot see from all this that man is lost, that he has fallen from his place, that he anxiously seeks it, and cannot find it again? And who then is to direct him there? The greatest men have failed.

434 Imagine a number of men in chains, all under sentence of death, some of whom are each day butchered in the sight of the others; those remaining see their own condition in that of their fellows, and looking at each other with grief and despair await their turn. This is an image of the human condition.

450 The true religion would have to teach greatness and wretchedness, inspire self-esteem and self-contempt, love and hate.

470 The vilest feature of man is the quest for glory, but it is just this that most clearly shows his excellence. For whatever possession he may own on earth, whatever health or essential amenity he may enjoy, he is dissatisfied unless he enjoys the good opinion of his fellows. He so highly values human reason that, however privileged he may be on earth, if he does not also enjoy a privileged position in human reason he is not happy. This is the finest position on earth, nothing can deflect him from this desire, and this is the most indelible quality in the human heart.

And those who most despise men, and put them on the same level as the beasts, still want to be admired and trusted by them, and contradict themselves by their own feelings, for their nature, which is stronger than anything, convinces them more strongly of man's greatness than reason convinces them of their vileness.

474 When the creation of the world began to recede into the past, God provided a single contemporary historian, and charged an entire people with the custody of this book, so that this should be the most authentic history in the world and all men could learn from it something which it was so necessary for them to know and which could only be known from it.

477 Pride is a counterweight and antidote for all forms of wretchedness. Here is a strange monster, and a very palpable aberration. Here he is, fallen from his place, looking anxiously for it. That is what all men do. Let us see who has found it.

480 In all religions sincerity is essential: true heathens, true Jews, true Christians.

499 What man ever had greater glory?

The entire Jewish people foretells him before his coming. The Gentiles worship him after his coming.

Both the Gentile and Jewish peoples regard him as their centre.

And yet what man ever enjoyed such glory less?

For thirty of his thirty-three years he lives without showing himself. For three years he is treated as an impostor. The priests and rulers reject him. Those who are nearest and dearest to him despise him, finally he dies betrayed by one of his disciples, denied by another and forsaken by all.

What benefit then did he derive from such glory? No man ever had such great glory, no man ever suffered greater ignominy. All this glory has only been of use to us, to enable us to recognize him, and he had none of it for himself.

505 Authority. Hearsay is so far from being a criterion of belief that you should not believe anything until you have put yourself into the same state as if you had never heard it.

It is your own inner assent and the consistent voice of your reason rather than that of others which should make you believe.

Belief is so important.

A hundred contradictions might be true.

If antiquity was the criterion of belief, then the ancients had no criterion.

If general consent, if men had died ...?

Punishment of sinners: error.

False humility, pride.

Raise the curtain.

You are wasting your time, one must either believe, deny or doubt.

Are we then to have no criterion?

When animals do something we can judge whether they are doing it well; is there to be no criterion for judging men?

Denying, believing and doubting are to men what running is to horses.

510 The more intelligent one is, the more men of originality one finds. Ordinary people find no difference between men.

511 Different kinds of right thinking, some in a particular order of things but not in others where they go quite astray.

Some draw correct conclusions from a small number of principles, and this is one kind of right thinking.

Others draw correct conclusions from things involving numerous principles.

For example, some have a good grasp of the properties of water, which involve few principles, but whose conclusions are so subtle that only an extremely accurate mind can reach them. These people might all the same not be great mathematicians, because mathematics comprises a large number of principles, and a mind may well be such that it can easily get right to the bottom of a few principles without being able to make the least advance in things involving many.

Thus there are two kinds of mind: one goes rapidly and deeply into the conclusions from principles, and this is the accurate mind. The other can grasp a large number of principles and keep them distinct, and this is the mathematical mind. The first is a powerful and precise mind, the second shows breadth of mind. Now it is quite possible to have one without the other, for a mind can be powerful and narrow, as well as broad and weak.

513 Mathematics. Intuition. True eloquence has no time for eloquence, true morality has no time for morality. In other words the morality of judgement has no time for the random morality of mind.

For judgement is what goes with instinct, just as knowledge goes with mind. Intuition falls to the lot of judgement, mathematics to that of the mind.

To have no time for philosophy is to be a true philosopher.

517 If St Augustine were to appear today and enjoy as little authority as his modern defenders he would not accomplish anything. God has ruled his Church well by sending him earlier, and endowed with authority.

518 Scepticism. — Extreme intelligence is accused of being as foolish as extreme lack of it; only moderation is good. The majority have laid this down and attack anyone who deviates from it towards any extreme whatever. I am not going to be awkward, I readily consent to being put in the middle and refuse to be at the bottom end, not because it is bottom but because it is the end, for I should refuse just as much to be put at the top. It is deserting humanity to desert the middle way.

The greatness of the human soul lies in knowing how to keep this course; greatness does not mean going outside it, but rather keeping within it.

526 Evil is easy; it has countless forms, while good is almost unique. But a certain sort of evil is as hard to find as what is called good, and this particular evil is often on that account passed off as good. Indeed it takes as much extraordinary greatness of soul to attain such evil, as to attain good.

532 Scepticism. I will write down my thoughts here as they come and in a perhaps not aimless confusion. This is the true order and it will always show my aim by its very disorder.

I should be honouring my subject too much if I treated it in order, since I am trying to show that it is incapable of it.

533 We always picture Plato and Aristotle wearing long academic gowns, but they were ordinary decent people like anyone else, who enjoyed a laugh with their friends. And when they amused themselves by composing their Laws and Politics they did it for fun. It was the least philosophical and least serious part of their lives: the most philosophical part was living simply and without fuss.

If they wrote about politics it was as if to lay down rules for a madhouse.

And if they pretended to treat it as something really important it was because they knew that the madmen they were talking to believed themselves to be kings and emperors. They humoured these beliefs in order to calm down their madness with as little harm as possible.

535 There are some vices which only keep hold on us through other ones, and if we take the trunk away they come off like the branches.

540 All the good maxims already exist in the world: we just fail to apply them.

For example, no one doubts that one should risk his life in defence of the common good, and many people do so, but not for religion.

Inequality must necessarily exist among men, it is true: but that once granted the door is open not only to the most absolute rule but to the most absolute tyranny.

It is necessary to relax the mind a little, but that opens the door to the greatest excesses.

Let us define the limits. There are no boundaries in things. Laws try to impose some, and the mind cannot bear it.

542 Thoughts come at random, and go at random. No device for holding on to them or for having them.

A thought has escaped: I was trying to write it down: instead I write that it has escaped me.

545 'All that is in the world is lust of the flesh, lust of the eyes or pride of life.' Libido sentiendi, libido sciendi, libido dominandi. Wretched is the cursed land consumed rather than watered by these three rivers of fire! Happy are those who are beside those rivers, neither immersed, nor carried away, but immovably steady beside these rivers, not standing but sitting, in a low and safe position. They will not rise thence before the light, but, after resting in peace, stretch out their hands to him who shall raise them to stand upright and steady in the porches of Jerusalem the blessed, where pride shall no more be able to fight against them and lay them low; and yet they weep, not at the sight of all the perishable things swept away by these torrents, but at the memory of their beloved home, the heavenly Jerusalem, which they constantly remember through the long years of their exile.

551 Imagination magnifies small objects with fantastic exaggeration until they fill our soul, and with bold insolence cuts down great things to its own size, as when speaking of God.

561 They say that eclipses are portents of disaster, because disasters are so common, and misfortune occurs often enough for these forecasts to be right, whereas if they said that eclipses were portents of good fortune they would often be wrong. They ascribe good fortune only to rare conjunctions of heavenly bodies and thus seldom guess wrong in their forecasts.

562 There are only two kinds of men: the righteous who think they are sinners and the sinners who think they are righteous.

577 If we must never take any chances we ought not to do anything for religion, for it is not certain. But how many chances we do take: sea voyages, battles. Therefore, I say, we should have to do nothing at all, for nothing is certain. And there is more certainty in religion than that we shall live to see tomorrow.

For it is not certain that we shall see tomorrow but it is certainly possible that we shall not. We cannot say the same of religion. It is not certain that it is true, but who would dare to say that it is certainly possible that it is not?

Now when we work for tomorrow and take chances we are behaving reasonably, for we ought to take chances, according to the rule of probability already demonstrated.

St Augustine saw that we take chances at sea, in battle, etc. — but he did not see the rule of probability which proves that we ought to. Montaigne saw that we are offended by a lame mind and that habit can do anything, but he did not see the reason for this.

All these people saw the effects but did not see the causes. In comparison with those who have discovered the causes they are like those who have only eyes compared to those who have minds. For the effects can, as it were, be felt by the senses but the causes can only be perceived by the mind. And, although these effects can be seen by the mind, this mind can be compared to that which sees the causes as the bodily senses may be compared to the mind.

585 There is a certain model of attractiveness and beauty consisting in a certain relation between our nature, weak or strong as it may be, and the thing which pleases us.

Everything that conforms to this model attracts us, be it a house, a song, a speech, verse, prose, a woman, birds, rivers, trees, rooms, clothes, etc.

Everything which does not conform to this model is displeasing to people of good taste.

And as there is an exact relation between a song and a house based on this good model, because both resemble a single model, though each in its own way, there is in the same way an exact relation between things based on bad models. It is not that there is only one bad model, because they are innumerable, but every bad sonnet, for example, whatever the false model it is based on, is exactly like a woman dressed according to that model.

Nothing gives a better idea of the absurdity of a bad sonnet than to consider its nature and its model and then to imagine a woman or a house conforming to that model.

595 Unless we know ourselves to be full of pride, ambition, concupiscence, weakness, wretchedness and unrighteousness, we are truly blind. And if someone knows all this and does not desire to be saved, what can be said of him?

How then can we have anything but respect for a religion which knows man's faults so well? What desire but that a religion which promises such desirable remedies should be true?

607 Figures. Saviour, father, sacrificer, sacrifice, food, king, wise, lawgiver, afflicted, poor, destined to produce a people whom he should lead and feed, and bring into the land.

620 Man is obviously made for thinking. Therein lies all his dignity and his merit; and his whole duty is to think as he ought. Now the order of thought is to begin with ourselves, and with our author and our end.

Now what does the world think about? Never about that, but about dancing, playing the lute, singing, writing verse, tilting at the ring, etc., and fighting, becoming king, without thinking what it means to be a king or to be a man.

622 Boredom. Man finds nothing so intolerable as to be in a state of complete rest, without passions, without occupation, without diversion, without effort.

Then he faces his nullity, loneliness, inadequacy, dependence, helplessness, emptiness.

And at once there wells up from the depths of his soul boredom, gloom, depression, chagrin, resentment, despair.

623 If it is unnatural blindness to live without trying to find out what one is, it is a fearful blindness to lead an evil life while believing in God.

627 Vanity is so firmly anchored in man's heart that a soldier, a camp follower, a cook or a porter will boast and expect admirers, and even philosophers want them; those who write against them want to enjoy the prestige of having written well, those who read them want the prestige of having read them, and perhaps I who write this want the same thing, perhaps my readers ...

631 It is good to be tired and weary from fruitlessly seeking the true good, so that one can stretch out one's arms to the Redeemer.

632 Man's sensitivity to little things and insensitivity to the greatest things are marks of a strange disorder.

633 Despite the sight of all the miseries which affect us and hold us by the throat we have an irrepressible instinct which bears us up.

634 The most important thing in our lives is the choice of a trade, and chance decides it.

Custom makes masons, soldiers, roofers. 'He is an excellent roofer,' they say, and, speaking of soldiers: 'They are quite mad,' while others on the contrary say: 'There is nothing as great as war, everyone else is worthless.' From hearing people praise these trades in our childhood and running down all the others we make our choice. For we naturally love virtue and hate folly; the very words will decide, we only go wrong in applying them.

So great is the force of custom that where naturehas merely created men, we create every kind and condition of men.

For some regions are full of masons, some of soldiers etc. There is no doubt that nature is not so uniform: it is custom then which does all this, for it coerces nature, but sometimes nature overcomes it and keeps man to his instincts despite all customs, good or bad.

638 When we are well we wonder how we should manage if we were ill. When we are ill we take our medicine cheerfully; our illness settles that problem for us. We no longer have the passions, and the desires for diversions and outings, which went with good health and are incompatible with the exigencies of our illness. Nature then inspires the passions and desires appropriate to our present state. It is only the fears that we owe to ourselves, and not to nature, which disturb us by linking the state in which we are with the passions of that in which we are not.

649 Montaigne. What is good in Montaigne can only be acquired with difficulty. What is bad in him, I mean apart from morals, could have been corrected in a moment if someone had warned him that he was making too much of things and talking too much about himself.

668 Each man is everything to himself, for with his death everything is dead for him. That is why each of us thinks he is everything to everyone. We must not judge nature by ourselves, but by its own standards.

674 We do not keep ourselves virtuous by our own power, but by the counterbalance of two opposing vices, just as we stay upright between two contrary winds. Take one of these vices away and we fall into the other.

685 Glory. Animals do not admire each other. A horse does not admire its companion. It is not that they will not race against each other, but this is of no consequence, for, back in the stable, the one who is heavier and clumsier does not on that account give up his oats to the other, as men want others to do to them. With them virtue is its own reward.

688 What is the self?

A man goes to the window to see the people passing by; if I pass by, can I say he went there to see me? No, for he is not thinking of me in particular. But what about a person who loves someone for the sake of her beauty; does he love her? No, for smallpox, which will destroy beauty without destroying the person, will put an end to his love for her.

And if someone loves me for my judgement or my memory, do they love me? me, myself ? No, for I could lose these qualities without losing my self. Where then is this self, if it is neither in the body nor the soul? And how can one love the body or the soul except for the sake of such qualities, which are not what makes up the self, since they are perishable? Would we love the substance of a person's soul, in the abstract, whatever qualities might be in it?

That is not possible, and it would be wrong. Therefore we never love anyone, but only qualities.

Let us then stop scoffing at those who win honour through their appointments and offices, for we never love anyone except for borrowed qualities.

693 The easiest conditions to live in from the world's point of view are the hardest from that of God; and vice versa. Nothing is so hard from the world's point of view as the religious life, while nothing is easier from that of God. Nothing is easier than to enjoy high office or great wealth in a worldly way, nothing harder than to live such a life in God's way, without taking interest or pleasure in it.

696 Let no one say that I have said nothing new; the arrangement of the material is new. In playing tennis both players use the same ball, but one plays it better.

I would just as soon be told that I have used old words. As if the same thoughts did not form a different argument by being differently arranged, just as the same words make different thoughts when arranged differently!

697 Those who lead disorderly lives tell those who are normal that it is they who deviate from nature, and think they are following nature themselves; just as those who are on board ship think that the people on shore are moving away. Language is the same everywhere: we need a fixed point to judge it. The harbour is the judge of those aboard ship, but where are we going to find a harbour in morals?

699 When everything is moving at once, nothing appears to be moving, as on board ship. When everyone is moving towards depravity, no one seems to be moving, but if someone stops he shows up the others who are rushing on, by acting as a fixed point.

709 We know so little about ourselves that many people think they are going to die when they are quite well, and many think they are quite well when they are on the point of death, not sensing the approach of fever or the abscess ready to form.

711 Strength. Why do we follow the majority? Is it because they are more right? No, but they are stronger.

Why do we follow ancient laws and opinions? Is it because they are the soundest? No, but they are unique and leave us no basis for disagreement.

712 Someone told me one day that he felt full of joy and confidence when he had been to confession. Someone else told me that he was still afraid. My reaction was that one good man could be made by putting these two together, for each of them lacked something in not sharing the feelings of the other. The same thing often happens in other connexions.

739 Truth is so obscured nowadays and lies so well established that unless we love the truth we shall never recognize it.

740 Weaklings are those who know the truth, but maintain it only as far as it is in their interest to do so, and apart from that forsake it.

741 The adding-machine produces effects closer to thought than anything done by the animals, but it does nothing to justify the assertion that it has a will like the animals.

742 Even if people's interests are not affected by what they say, it must not be definitely concluded that they are not lying for there are some people who lie simply for the sake of lying.

743 There is some pleasure in being on board a ship battered by storms when one is certain of not perishing. The persecutions buffeting the Church are like this.

744 When we do not know the truth about something, it is a good thing that there should be some common error on which men's minds can fix, as, for example, the attribution to the moon of changes of seasons, progress of diseases, etc. For man's chief malady is restless curiosity about things he cannot know, and it is not so bad for him to be wrong as so vainly curious.

746 On the fact that neither Josephus, nor Tacitus, nor other historians, spoke of Jesus Christ.

Far from telling against him, this is on the contrary in his favour. For it is certain that Jesus Christ existed, that his religion made a great stir, and so it is obvious that they simply concealed it on purpose, or that they spoke about it and that it was suppressed or changed.

749 How warped is the judgement by which there is nobody who does not put himself above the rest of the world, and who does not prefer his own good, and continuing happiness and survival to that of the rest of the world!

750 Cromwell was about to ravage the whole of Christendom; the royal family was lost and his own set for ever in power, but for a little grain of sand getting into his bladder. Even Rome was about to tremble beneath him. But, with this bit of gravel once there, he died, his family fell into disgrace, peace reigned and the king was restored.

751 Those who are accustomed to judge by feeling have no understanding of matters involving reasoning. For they want to go right to the bottom of things at a glance, and are not accustomed to look for principles. The others, on the contrary, who are accustomed to reason from principles, have no understanding of matters involving feeling, because they look for principles and are unable to see things at a glance.

752 Two sorts of people make everything equal, for example holidays and working days, Christians and priests, all the sins amongst themselves. And from this some people conclude that what is bad for priests is also bad for Christians, while others conclude that what is not bad for Christians is permissible for priests.

753 When Augustus learned that among the children under two put to death by Herod was his own son, he said that it was better to be Herod's pig than his son. (Macrobius, Saturnalia, lib. ii, ch. iv.)

754 First degree: to be blamed for doing badly or praised for doing well.
Second degree: to be neither praised nor blamed.

755 He maketh a vain god.
Disgust.

756 Thought. All man's dignity consists in thought, but what is this thought? How silly it is!

Thought, then, is admirable and incomparable by its very nature. It must have had strange faults to have become worthy of contempt, but it does have such faults that nothing is more ridiculous. How great it is by its nature, how vile by its faults! 757 Draining away. It is an appalling thing to feel all one possesses drain away.

758 Light. Darkness. There would be too much darkness if there were no visible signs of the truth. One admirable sign of it is that it has always resided in a visible Church and congregation. There would be too much light if there were only one opinion in the Church. That which has always existed is the true one, for the true one has always been there, but no false one has always been there.

759 Thought constitutes man's greatness.

764 All the major forms of diversion are dangerous for the Christian life, but among all those which the world has invented none is more to be feared than the theatre. It represents passions so naturally and delicately that it arouses and engenders them in our heart, especially that of love; above all when it is represented as very chaste and virtuous. For the more innocent it seems to innocent souls, the more liable they are to be touched by it; its violence appeals to our self-esteem, which at once conceives the desire to produce the same effects which we see so well represented. At the same time our conscience is conditioned by the irreproachable sentiments to be seen there, which remove the fear of pure souls, who imagine that purity is not offended by loving with a love which seems to them so prudent.

Thus we leave the theatre with hearts so full of all the beauty and sweetness of love, and our mind so convinced of its innocence, that we are quite prepared to receive our first impressions of it, or rather to seek the opportunity of arousing them in someone else's heart, so that we may enjoy the same pleasures and sacrifices as those which we have seen so well depicted in the theatre.

765 If lightning struck low-lying places, etc., poets and people who can only argue about things of this kind would be without proofs.

767 As the ranks of duke, king and magistrate are real and necessary (because power governs all things) they exist at all times and in all places, but, since it is mere whim that makes it this or that person, there is no consistency about it, it is liable to variation, etc.

768 The commands of reason are much more imperative than those of any master, for if we disobey the one we are unhappy, but if we disobey the other we are foolish.

773 Only the contest appeals to us, not the victory.

We like to watch animals fighting, but not the victor falling upon the vanquished. What did we want to see but the final victory? And once it has happened we have had enough. It is the same with gaming, with the pursuit of truth. We like to see the clash of opinions in debate, but do we want to contemplate the truth once it is found? Not at all. If we are to enjoy it, we must see it arising from the debate. It is the same with passions; there is some pleasure in seeing the collision of two opposites, but when one asserts its mastery it becomes mere brutality.

We never go after things in themselves, but the pursuit of things. Thus in the theatre scenes of unclouded happiness are no good, any more than extreme and hopeless misery, or brutal love affairs, or harsh cruelty.

802 Time heals pain and quarrels because we change. We are no longer the same persons; neither the offender nor the offended are themselves any more. It is as if one angered a nation and came back to see them after two generations. They are still Frenchmen, but not the same ones.

803 If we dreamed the same thing every night, it would affect us as much as the objects we see every day. And if an artisan was sure of dreaming for twelve hours every night that he was king, I believe he would be almost as happy as a king who dreamed for twelve hours every night that he was an artisan.

If we dreamed every night that we were being pursued by enemies and troubled by these distressing apparitions, and spent every day doing something different, as one does on a journey, we should suffer almost as much as if it were true, and would dread going to sleep as we dread waking up when we are afraid of really encountering some misfortune. And this would in fact cause almost as much pain as reality.

But because dreams are all different, and there is variety even within each one, what we see in them affects us much less than what we see when we are awake, because of the continuity. This, however, is not so continuous and even that it does not change too, though less abruptly, except on rare occasions, as on a journey, when we say: 'It seems like a dream.' For life is a dream, but somewhat less changeable.

804 Are we to say that men recognized original sin because they said that justice had left the earth? Call no man happy until he is dead. Does that mean that they knew that eternal and absolute happiness begins at death?

805 By knowing each man's ruling passion, we can be sure of pleasing him, and yet each has fancies contrary to his own good, in the very idea he has of good, and this oddity is disconcerting.

806 We are not satisfied with the life we have in ourselves and our own being. We want to lead an imaginary life in the eyes of others, and so we try to make an impression. We strive constantly to embellish and preserve our imaginary being, and neglect the real one. And if we are calm, or generous, or loyal, we are anxious to have it known so that we can attach these virtues to our other existence; we prefer to detach them from our real self so as to unite them with the other. We would cheerfully be cowards if that would acquire us a reputation for bravery. How clear a sign of the nullity of our own being that we are not satisfied with one without the other and often exchange one for the other! For anyone who would not die to save his honour would be infamous.

808 There are three ways to believe: reason, habit, inspiration. Christianity, which alone has reason, does not admit as its true children those who believe without inspiration. It is not that it excludes reason and habit, quite the contrary, but we must open our mind to the proofs, confirm ourselves in it through habit, while offering ourselves through humiliations to inspiration, which alone can produce the real and salutary effect. Lest the Cross of Christ be made of none effect.

812 The style of the Gospels is remarkable in so many ways; among others for never putting in any invective against the executioners and enemies of Christ. For there is none in any of the historians against Judas, Pilate or any of the Jews.

If this restraint of the Evangelists had been put on, together with many other features of such fine character, and if they had only put it on in order to draw attention to it, not daring to remark on it themselves, they would not have failed to acquire friends to make such remarks for their benefit. But, since they acted as they did without affectation and quite disinterestedly, they did not cause anyone to remark on it. And I believe that many of these things have never been remarked on before. That shows how coolly the thing was done.

813 We never do evil so fully and cheerfully as when we do it out of conscience.

814 We pervert our feelings just as we pervert our minds.

Our minds and feelings are trained by the company we keep, and perverted by the company we keep. Thus good or bad company trains or perverts respectively. It is therefore very important to be able to make the right choice so that we train rather than pervert. And we cannot make this choice unless it is already trained, and not perverted. This is thus a vicious circle from which anyone is lucky to escape.

815 Ordinary people have the ability not to think about things they do not want to think about. 'Do not think about the passages concerning the Messiah,' said the Jew to his son. Our own people often behave like this, and this is how false religions are preserved, and even the true one as far as many people are concerned.

But there are some without this ability to stop themselves thinking, who think all the more for being forbidden to do so. These people rid themselves of false religions, and even of the true one, unless they find solid arguments for them.

816 'I should soon have given up a life of pleasure,' they say, 'if I had faith.' But I tell you: 'You would soon have faith if you gave up a life of pleasure. Now it is up to you to begin. If I could give you faith, I would. But I cannot, nor can I test the truth of what you say, but you can easily give up your pleasure and test whether I am telling the truth.'

817 There is no denying it; one must admit that there is something astonishing about Christianity. 'It is because you were born in it,' they will say. Far from it; I stiffen myself against it for that very reason, for fear of being corrupted by prejudice. But, though I was born in it, I cannot help finding it astonishing.

937 When our passions impel us to do something we forget our duty. For example, if we like a book, we read it when we ought to be doing something else. But to remember our duty we need only decide to do something we dislike; we then make the excuse of something else to be done, and thus remember our duty.

938 The figure used in the Gospel for the state of the soul that is sick is that of sick bodies. But, because one body cannot be sick enough to express it properly, there had to be more than one. Thus we find the deaf man, the dumb man, the blind man, the paralytic, dead Lazarus, the man possessed of a devil. All these put together are in the sick soul.

939 'The servant knoweth not what his lord doeth,' because the lord only tells him what to do and not the purpose of it. That is why he obeys slavishly and often sins against the purpose. But Jesus Christ has told us the purpose.

And you destroy that purpose.

940 Jesus did not want to be killed without the forms of justice, for it is much more ignominious to die at the hands of justice than in some unjust insurrection.

NOTE

① [Pyrrhus, pressed to justify his plans for world conquest, reputedly answered that his ultimate purpose was to rest content, but not before realizing his dreams of conquest.]

A CONFESSION

列夫·托尔斯泰：忏悔录

［俄］列夫·托尔斯泰　著

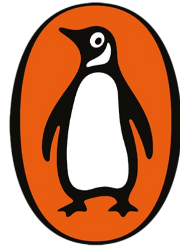
马睿　译

中国出版集团
中译出版社

列夫·托尔斯泰：忏悔录

（俄罗斯）列夫·托尔斯泰/著

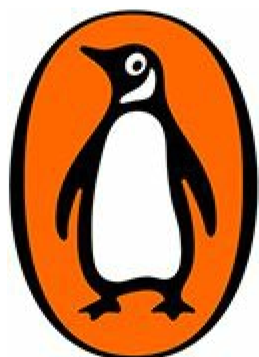
马睿/译



企鹅图书 | PENGUIN BOOKS

UK | USA | Canada | Ireland | Australia
New Zealand | India | South Africa | North Asia

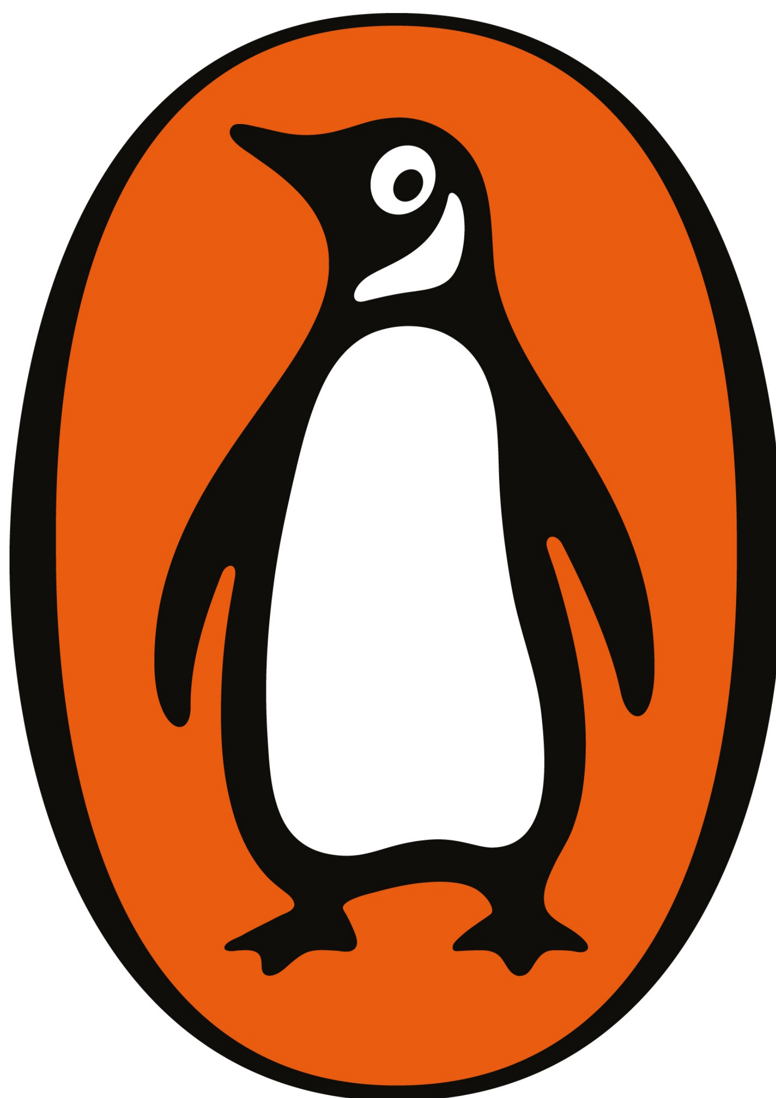
Penguin Books is part of the Penguin Random House group of companies whose addresses can be found at:
global.penguinrandomhouse.com.



www.penguin.com.cn
A Confession first published 1882
This translation first published in Penguin Classics 1987
This edition first published 2008

Set by Rowland Phototypesetting Ltd, Bury St Edmunds, Suffolk

企鹅兰登电子书 | PENGUIN RANDOM HOUSE EBOOKS



目录

“伟大的思想”中文版序

企鹅“伟大的思想”系列丛书自2004年开始陆续面世，在英国、美国和德国均有出版。在英国出版品种最多，已付梓八十种，尚有二十种计划出版。该丛书在全球众多读者间，尤其是学生当中，普及了哲学和政治学，销量已远超二百万册。中文版“伟大的思想”的推出，是该系列的又一延续和发展，令人欢欣鼓舞。

推出这套丛书旨在让读者再次与一些伟大的非小说类经典著作面对面地交流。长久以来，此类书籍的出版都建立在这样一个假设之上——此类著作供学生课堂学习之用，因此需辅以导读、详尽的注释及参考书目等。此类版本无疑十分有用，但我想，如果某一版本能够重建托马斯·潘恩的《常识》或约翰·罗斯金的《艺术与人生》初版时的环境，为读者与作者营造更为亲密无间的氛围，使读者除了原作者及其自身的思考外没有其他参照，也许会更有吸引力。

但是，这一做法亦存在严重缺陷：每位作者的表述难免有难解或不可解之处，一些重要的背景知识或许也有所缺失。例如，读者对亨利·梭罗创作时的情形毫无头绪，也不了解该书的反响及影响。不过，这样做的优点也显而易见，最为显著的便是作者的初衷又一次受到重视——托马斯·潘恩的愤怒、查尔斯·达尔文的灵光、塞内加的隐逸。他们给许多国家的众多读者带来的生活影响难以估量，有的影响甚至长达几个世纪，几乎没有什么比阅读这些作家更令人拍案叫绝的了。倘若没有亚当·斯密或阿图尔·叔本华，将无法想象我们今天的世界。这些小书创作年代久远，但其中的话语彻底改变了我们的政治学、经济学、精神世界、社会规划和宗教信仰。

“伟大的思想”系列一直求新求变，地域不同，收录的作家亦不同。一些作家在中国或美国更受欢迎，而英国版“伟大的思想”收录的一些作家在其他国家和地区则鲜有人知。称其为“伟大的思想”，我们亦是慎之又慎。这些思想之所以伟大，在于其影响深远，但这并不意味着这些思想都是“好”思想，实际上一些书或可列入“坏”思想之列。丛书中收录的很多作家受到同样收录于该丛书的其他作家的巨大影响，例如，马塞尔·普鲁斯特承认受约翰·罗斯金影响很大，米歇尔·德·蒙田也承认深受塞内加影响。但也有些作家彼此憎恶，若发现彼此都被收录于同一丛书，一定会深感苦恼。至于他们思想的或“好”或“坏”，读者可自行判明。我们衷心希望，您可以享受阅读这些著作的乐趣。

“伟大的思想”出版者

西蒙·温德尔

导读

列夫·尼古拉耶维奇·托尔斯泰（1828—1910），俄国小说家、哲学家、政治思想家，也是非暴力的基督教无政府主义者和教育改革家。他出生于贵族家庭，1844年入喀山大学，1847年退学回到故乡尝试农奴制改革。1851年至1854年在高加索军队中服役并开始写作。1854年至1855年参加克里米亚战争。这几年的军旅生活让他看到了上流社会的腐化，也为其后来的巨著《战争与和平》打下了基础。

1855年11月，托尔斯泰到彼得堡进入文学界，并发表其成名小说《童年》。十多年后又创作了长篇历史小说《战争与和平》。在《忏悔录》中，托尔斯泰回忆起这段时光，他写道："在此期间，我出于虚荣、自私和自负而涉身写作。我在写作时的所作所为竟和生活中一模一样。为了猎取写作带来的名利，我不得不隐藏起自己真善美的一面，把罪恶的一面展示在世人面前。如今，每当我想起那段时光、忆及我自己和周围的人们（很不幸，如今这样的人更是成千上万）当时的思想状态，我都会感到悲哀、恐惧和荒谬，它在我身上所激发的情感就像人们在疯人院中看到的那样疯狂和荒诞。"（第二章）

以上只是托尔斯泰对自己过往的一小段评价，实际上，在其成长和写作的生涯中，一直都在剖析和检视自我："撒谎、偷盗、放荡、烂醉、暴力、谋杀……没有一项恶事我未曾染指，尽管这样，我的作为还是赢得了他人的赞赏，同辈人也认为相对而言我是个品德高尚的人。"（第二章）同时，不断尝试从科学、哲学等各种角度去追寻生命的意义，但都宣告失败："如果你活着而又无法了解生命的意义，就结束生命，而不要到处大放厥词或制造文字垃圾，说什么你不了解生命。"（第七章）随后，他将目光投向了宗教信仰，但宗教的门派之争

很快让他认清现实：“当我注意到这些口口声声基督仁爱的教徒的所作所为时，我不禁不寒而栗。”（第十五章）最终，他把对生命意义的执著追求的落脚点转向了劳动人民：“如果我希望继续活着并了解生命的意义的话，就不能够在那些已经失去生命或希望自杀的人们身上寻找，而应该看看那些创造过生命且愿意为自己和他人的生命负责的人，无论他们仍然活着还是已经逝去。于是我环顾四周，仔细观察简朴的普通大众，他们多半没受过什么教育，也没有钱，却一直活着且仍在活着，我看到了全然不同的东西。”（第八章）“就在我倾听一个没有文化的农民信仰者讲述上帝、宗教、生命和救赎时，我突然知晓了信仰的意义。我于是开始接近那些普通人，倾听他们关于生命和宗教的争论，也越来越接近真理。”（第十四章）

托尔斯泰的《忏悔录》，与古罗马奥古斯丁和法国卢梭的《忏悔录》，并称世界三大《忏悔录》。在三本《忏悔录》中，托尔斯泰的《忏悔录》篇幅最短，但却以人生思索与探寻的深度见长。托尔斯泰在文中深刻的思想剖析与严苛的自我检视，对生命意义何在的不断追问，对生命和人生的洞察，即使在今天，依然可以给读者以启发与感悟。

第一章

1.我一出生便接受了东正教的洗礼，并在信仰该教派的家庭环境中长大。我在东正教的谆谆教诲下度过了整个童年、少年和青年时期。然而在十八岁那年，大学二年级的我离开学校，不再相信他们教给我的任何教义。

2.忆及诸多往事，我觉得自己根本未曾笃信过宗教，只是信赖长辈们的言传身教，而这种信赖极不稳固。

3.记得十一岁那年的一个周日，一个名叫沃洛迪亚的高中生（此人如今已去世多年）来家中看望我们，向我们宣布了当时学校里的最新发现——世上根本没有上帝，我们所学到的关于上帝的一切纯属人们的编造（那是1838年）。我记得我的哥哥们对这一发现产生了极大的兴趣，甚至允许我参加他们的讨论。我记得当时大家都十分激动，觉得这个消息切实可信而令人神往。

4.我还记得当时正在上大学的哥哥德米特里突然间以性格中特有的激情，狂热地信起宗教来，并开始参加所有的宗教仪式，诸如奉行斋戒、崇尚纯洁而道德的生活等。我们大家（包括家中的大人）于是时常拿他取笑，出于众所周知的原因，大伙还给他起了个绰号叫“诺亚”。我记得那时喀山大学[1]的图书馆馆长穆西金·普希金先生有一次邀请大家参加舞会，在遭到德米特里的拒绝后，开玩笑地劝告我的这位哥哥说，就连大卫王也在方舟前跳过舞[2]。那时我常常被大人们的玩笑逗乐，从中也得出一个结论，那就是学习教义和去教堂做礼拜都是必要的，但无须过于认真。也曾记得很小的时候读过伏尔泰的作品，当时不仅没有为他那些抨击教会的犀利幽默感到震惊，反倒觉得相当有趣。

5.我的宗教热情日渐减退的过程和大多数同样背景的人差不多，时代进步了，这一过程却基本没有变化。在我看来，绝大多数情况大致如下：每个人经历的生活没有什么区别，但人们生活所依据的原则却不仅与教旨毫无关系，且大体上背道而驰。宗教教义丝毫不能应用于生活和人际关系，我们在自己的个人生活中也无须按照宗教教义行事。宗教教义是在另外一个境界中存在和传播的，它与生活本身有着一段距离，且超然独立于生活。我们所面对的宗教只是一种外部现象，和生活本身毫无关系。

6.一直以来，从一个人的生活或举止根本无法判断他是不是信徒。如果说公开宣称信仰东正教的人和拒绝入教的人有所不同，似乎算不上是对前者的夸赞之词。一直以来，公开声明和宣誓信仰东正教的通常都是愚钝呆滞、生性残暴、道德败坏和自视甚高的人。反之，聪慧、诚实、坦率、温厚以及美德则往往是声称自己并非信徒的人们所具备的品质。国家虽规定学校里必须讲授教义、必须送孩子们去教堂做礼拜，官员们也必须出具参加圣餐仪式的证据；然而现在（在过去更是如此），如果你既不在学校读书也不在政府部门任职，则可以数十年无所顾忌地生活在一个基督教国家，无须顾忌自己的周围都是基督徒。

7.因此如今和以往一样，人们在年少时怀着信任之心接受宗教教义，后来又迫于外界压力继续信仰。渐渐地，由于与知识和生活经验相悖，宗教教条的可信度最终在此二者的影响下不断衰减；当现实生活中已经完全没有宗教的印迹之时，人们可以认为幼时接受的宗教教诲仍然存在，此二者并行不悖，对个人的生活也不会产生什么影响。

8.有一个聪明诚实的人（姑且称之为S.），曾给我讲述过他自己不再信仰宗教的经历。二十六岁那年一次外出狩猎，他在夜间休息时遵循幼年养成的习惯，跪下来祈祷。当时他哥哥也在场，躺在稻草垫子上看着他。当S.祈祷完毕准备躺下睡觉时，他听到哥哥说：“你到现在还在

祈祷？”之后一夜无语。从那天起，迄今三十多年过去了，S.再也没有祈祷、做礼拜或领圣餐，也没有去过教堂。之所以如此，并不是因为他了解了哥哥对于信仰的看法并希望与哥哥意见一致，也不是因为他内心已然作出决定，而恰恰是因为S.内心对宗教的信奉如同一面摇摇欲坠的断壁残垣。哥哥的话就仿佛手指轻轻一弹，整面墙便轰然倒塌。哥哥的话只是挑明了S.内心中被宗教占据的那一隅其实早已变成虚无的空洞，他的祈祷词、胸前画下的十字以及祈祷时的屈膝跪拜全都变成了毫无意义的肢体动作。一旦认识到这一切毫无意义，S.便再也不能够继续这些无谓的信仰了。

9.因此我相信，对绝大多数人而言，情况基本上就是这样，过去和现在没有什么不同。我这里提到的大多数人，是指与我们有着相同背景的人。这些人真诚地对待自己，不将立誓信教作为达到某种世俗目的的手段。（那些人才是最根本的非教徒：既然信仰在他们看来只是用于达到某种世俗目的的工具，那就根本不再有什么信仰可言了）和我们成长背景相同的人们会陷入这样一种境地：知识和生活的光辉会逐渐消融人为建立的宗教信仰，他们要么在不知不觉中把信仰忘得一干二净；要么迄今也未曾注意到这一点，对信仰听之任之。

10.我年幼时接受的宗教教诲后来大多消逝了，这一点和其他人一样。与其他人不同的是，我自幼开始读书思考，因而很早便摒弃了宗教。十六岁时我便不再主动祈祷、做礼拜或斋戒。我不再相信年幼时被灌输的教义，但是我的确一直信仰着，尽管我也说不清自己信仰的东西究竟是什么。我相信上帝，或者更确切地说，我不否认上帝的存在，但是当时的我说不清楚自己信仰的上帝是什么样子；我也不否认耶稣的存在抑或他的教义，而当时的我也同样说不清楚自己对耶稣教义的领悟。

11.回首前尘往事，我可以清楚地看到，除了出于动物本能而激发的对生活的欲望之外，我当时拥有的唯一真实的信念，就是自我修养和

完善。但是这种自我修养包含哪些内容，又有着怎样的目标，当时的我不得而知。我尝试着在知识上完善自我，研习生活中的一切经历。我尝试着锻炼自己的意志，给自己制定各种规则并努力遵守。我尝试着健全自己的体格，通过各种运动来增强力量和身体的灵活性。我还试图克服各种困难，培养自己的韧性和耐心。我将所有这一切视为自我完善。当然，其开端乃是道德修养，然而没过多久，所有这些都烟消云散，被一种更具概括性的完善所取代，我不再关注是否在自己或上帝眼中做得更好，而开始在乎自己在他人看来是否完美无缺。很快这种攀比的决心变成比其他人更具影响力的强烈愿望：我要拥有比他人更多的声名、权力和财富。

第二章

1.有一天，我会向人们讲述自己的生活经历，以及在我年轻时代的十年间，生活给了我怎样的震撼和启示。想必很多人都曾有类似的经历。我真心诚意地希望做到尽善尽美，但那时的我年轻气盛、孤身一人，在追求尽善尽美的道路上孤立无援。每当我试图展示自己内心深处的渴望——做一个道德高尚的人时，总会招来鄙视和嘲笑；而一旦我屈服于低俗的欲望，却总是能够得到人们的赞赏和鼓励。野心、权力欲、自私自利、放荡、骄傲、愤怒、复仇，这些倒成了令人敬仰的品质。于是我渐渐臣服于这些私欲和贪念，变成我长辈的模样，并被他们悦纳。生活中接触到的最为纯洁的人乃是一个可敬的老姑妈，她总说她别无所求，只愿我能够和一位已婚妇女来一段风流韵事。“还有什么比和一位少妇交欢更美妙的呢？”她常常用优雅的法文发出这样的感叹。她还祝愿我能成为一名副官，最好能够为沙皇服务。诸多祈福中最令她兴奋的，莫过于我能迎娶一位富有的女孩，并通过婚姻拥有很多农奴，越多越好。

2.每忆及当年往事，我内心无不充满恐惧、厌恶和悲叹。在战争中我杀过人，给别人下过战书并想在决斗中杀死对方，也赌过纸牌，我压榨雇农，还惩罚他们；我与人私通、行事虚伪、面目丑恶。撒谎、偷盗、放荡、烂醉、暴力、谋杀……没有一项恶事我未曾染指，尽管这样，我的作为还是赢得了他人的赞赏，同辈人也认为相对而言我是个品德高尚的人。他们至今也没有改变这种观点。

3.这样的生活持续了整整十年。

4.在此期间，我出于虚荣、自私和自负而涉身写作。我在写作时的

所作所为竟和生活中一模一样。为了猎取写作带来的名利，我不得不隐藏起自己真善美的一面，把罪恶的一面展示在世人面前。我也正是这么做的。我总是在作品中设法假借冷漠和漫不经心来掩盖使生命充满意义的、对于善的追求。我成功了，并得到人们的赞赏。

5.战争结束[3]那年，二十六岁的我回到圣彼得堡，并开始结交那里的作家。那个圈子欣然接受了我，还对我大肆奉承。我来不及停下思考，就被结交的这群作家同化，采纳了他们的生活态度。没过多久，我自己年轻时所有自我修养的尝试荡然无存。那些作家的生活态度无疑为我毫无节制的生活提供了理论依据和借口。

6.我的这些作家朋友们的人生观可以总结如下：一般来说，生活是一个不断发展的过程，在这个过程中扮演最重要的角色的就是我们这些思想者，而在诸多思想者中，我们这群艺术家和诗人最具影响力。我们的使命是传道授业。为了避免为“我知道些什么，又能教些什么”这类浅薄的问题所迷惑，他们解释说根本没必要知道这个问题的答案，因为诗人和艺术家在无意识中成就了其作为人类导师的使命。我既然是大家公认的杰出艺术家兼诗人，便自然而然地接受了这一理论。作为一个艺术家和诗人，我在写作时不必知道我要向人们传授什么。我做这些是有偿的。作为交换，我得到了美味的食物、舒适的住所、女人的陪伴、令人向往的社交圈和名望。既然如此，想必我教授的东西一定十分出色。

7.相信诗歌的意义以及生活的渐进发展也是一门信仰，而我就是这门教派中的一名“牧师”。作为这样一位“牧师”是件颇有裨益和令人愉悦的事，因而在相当长的一段时间，我都生活在这样的信念当中，从来没有质疑过其正确性。但是在第二年，我开始怀疑它的正确性，并开始了对它的质疑和审视，第三年更是如此。最初引起我怀疑的，是我注意到该教派内部的“牧师”们意见不一。有人说：“我们是最出色、最有价值的老师，我们教授的才是人们最需要的，而其他人教授的都是错误的东

西。”有人说：“不对！我们才是真正的老师，你们错了！”他们为此辩论、争吵，彼此蒙蔽和欺诈。更有甚者，我们之中很多人对谁是谁非漠不关心，而只是冷眼观望，从中渔利。所有这一切迫使我对这门信仰产生了怀疑。

8.此外，一旦我开始质疑作家这门信仰的正确性，我便开始密切关注这里的“牧师”们，并愈加确信该教派内部几乎所有的“牧师”——那些作家们——都是不道德的。他们绝大多数都有着邪恶而卑劣的人格，还远不及我早年在放荡的军旅生活中遇到的那些人。但是他们又都颇为自鸣得意和孤芳自赏——那种自负要么表明他们是真正的圣徒，要么表明他们对虔诚和圣洁一无所知。他们开始显示出对我的厌恶和不满，我也开始对自己厌恶和不满，并最终意识到这门信仰原来是一个骗局。

9.但奇怪的是，尽管我很快认识到这些教条乃是纯粹的谎言，应该尽快抛弃，我却并没有放弃这些人赋予我的地位：没有放弃艺术家、诗人和传道授业者的头衔。我天真地幻想自己是个诗人和艺术家，能够在自己不明所以的情况下教授他人。我也确实是这么做的。

10.在和这些作家的交往中，我染上一种新的恶习，认为自己的使命就是在不明所以的情况下为人传道解惑，并对此抱有病态盲目的自傲和荒唐的自信。

11.如今，每当我想起那段时光、忆及我自己和周围的人们（很不幸，如今这样的人更是成千上万）当时的思想状态，我都会感到悲哀、恐惧和荒谬，它在我身上所激发的情感就像人们在疯人院中看到的那样疯狂和荒诞。

12.那时，我们都坚信自己必须滔滔不绝、笔耕不辍，坚信我们应该尽多尽快地发表作品——那可是全人类的福祉。就这样，成千上万的文人一面彼此相轻、口诛笔伐，一面著书立说、传道授业。没有人意识

到自己的无知，我们连生活中最基本的问题——善恶是非的问题——都回答不了。人人高谈阔论、口若悬河，从不会谦虚地倾听他人说些什么。有时我们彼此纵容、互相夸赞，甚是享受；有时又怒气冲天、恶言相向，整个情形就仿佛我们全都生活在疯人院。

13.成千上万的工人日夜劳作，印成的铅字堆积如山，再邮寄分发至俄国各地。我们以传道授业为天降己任，却未曾真正向人们揭示出所有这些道业的真理，还总是觉得自己没有受到应有的重视并为此烦恼不已。

14.这一切真是非常奇怪，不过现在我全都懂了。我们真正关心的本是如何沽名钓誉。为达到这一目的，我们所知的唯一办法就是著书立说——那正是我们的所为。然而为了完成这一全然无用的任务，说服人们相信我们都是不可或缺的重要人物，就需要一种理论来为自己的所作所为进行辩解。由此我们编造出如下理论：凡是存在的都是合理的，万事都在不断发展变化。发展需要教化，而教化是以书刊的发行量来衡量的。既然这些书刊让我们得到了金钱和人们的尊敬，我们当然是最最重要、最有价值的一群人。如果我们大家意见一致，这个理论应该是非常合情合理的；但是既然我们中任何一个人表达的想法都会有人以截然相左的观点予以反对，我们就应该被迫重新思考该理论的正确性。然而没有人注意到这一点，我们得到了金钱的回报，得到了观点一致的人的赞美和夸奖，自然都觉得自己才是代表正义的一方。

15.如今我明白，我们的举止和疯人院里疯子的行为没有任何分别；但是那时我只是隐约地怀疑到这一点。和所有的疯子一样，我也认为除了我之外，其他人都是疯子。

第三章

1.就这样，我又在这种疯狂的状态下生活了六年，直到后来结婚。在此期间我还出过国。在欧洲的生活，以及与那些博学多才、见多识广的欧洲人的交往，加深了我继续自我修养的信念。因为我发现，那些人也持有同样的信念。这种信念在我身上的表现形式和我们那个时代所有的有识之士差不多，可以用一个词来表达，那就是“进步”。当时的我觉得这个词寓意颇深。我虽过着不错的生活，却和所有人一样，整日被“人类如何能够过上更好的生活”这样的问题所困扰。当时的我还不大了解在探讨如何“与时代共同进步”这个问题时，我就像一个人坐在一只随波逐流的小船上，每当被问及那个最基本、最重要的问题“我掌着生活的舵，驶向哪里”，总是试图逃避问题，而只是说，“我们被时代裹挟着前行”。

2.当时的我并未意识到这些。只是偶尔，我会出于本能（而不是理性）地抗拒在我生活的年代盛极一时的迷信，在那个年代，人们惯于用那样的迷信来掩饰自己对生活的无知。接下来，在巴黎逗留期间见到的一次处决让我意识到，社会进步这一迷信的根基是多么不牢靠。当我看到人们的首级与身体分离之后砰然落入木箱时，我忽然明白——不仅在理性上了解，也全身心地感受到——没有哪个关于人类生存和进步的理论能够为这样的暴行开脱。我意识到，哪怕自创世以来每一个人都根据这样或那样的理论认定这一暴行是必要的，我仍然认为这样做既不必要也不合理。如此看来，每个人都应该有自己关于是非和社会进步的判断，绝不能对他人言听计从、人云亦云，而应该听从自己内心最本真的声音。还有一个瞬间也让我感受到关于进步的迷信无益于人们彻底了解生命，那就是我哥哥的死。他是一个聪明、善良、庄重的人，生病的时候还很年轻，辗转病榻一年多，最终在痛苦中死去。死时他尚不知道自

己为何生，更不知道自己为何死。没有什么理论能够回答这些问题，在哥哥那漫长而备受煎熬的濒死时日，我和他对生命和死亡的意义一样茫然。

3.然而这些只是偶尔出现的瞬间，事实上我仍然继续着我的生活，除了进步之外没有其他信仰。“一切都在发展，我也在进步；至于为什么我能够同万事万物共同进步，总有一天我会知晓原因。”当时的我就这样阐述自己的信仰。

4.回国后，我在乡下创办农民学校，并终日为此奔波忙碌。我之所以对这一职业情有独钟，是因为它没有我此前做文学教师时日益明显而强烈地感受到的虚伪。我在这里也是以进步之名办学，但我已经开始采取一种批判的态度来看待所谓的进步了。我告诉自己，进步的某些表现方式是错误的，而当我在乡下与那些农村孩子相处时，进步则必然体现为一种自由的精神，让他们得以根据自己的意愿选择任何进步的道路。

5.事实上，那时的我仍然面对着同样无法解决的问题：如何在我自己不明所以的情况下传道、授业、解惑。在较高级的文学圈子，我显然无法在自己不明所以的时候教授他人，基于我发现大家的教法各不相同，且我们在争论时总是尽可能地掩饰自己的无知。而在教这些农民孩子的时候，我可以让孩子们学习自己喜欢的任何东西，避开这个难题了。为了实现自己为师授道的抱负，当年的我走了一条多么迂回的道路，想来不免觉得好笑，然而我内心深处非常清楚，我始终无法教授人们真正需要的东西，因为我自己也不知道人们究竟需要什么。花费一年处理学校的各项事务后，我又去了国外，希望了解如何将我自己不明所以的东西教授给他人。

6.在农奴解放那一年，我重回俄国，我以为我终于找到了这个问题的答案并理解个中奥义。这一次我以正义的公断者自居，在学校里给无知的人们传授知识，并开始在报纸杂志上发表檄文，向有识之士传播思

想。这一切似乎进展得不错，但是我感到自己的精神状态不是很健康，因而这一切不会持续太久。在我五十岁的时候，若不是我还能从尚未经历的人生另一面家庭生活中看到一丝救赎之光，或许我会陷入同样不可自拔的绝望之中。

7.整整一年，我忙于自己的仲裁工作、忙于学校的事务和在报纸杂志上发表文章，不久便筋疲力尽。这在很大程度上归咎于我思想上的紊乱，作为仲裁者所要处理的争端太过烦琐、学校的事务太过芜杂、我自己在报纸杂志上的搪塞支吾又令人厌恶，因为所有这些都可以最终归结到同一件事上：我想成为天下人之师，同时又始终力图掩盖一个事实，那就是我根本不知道自己教的是什么。我病了，与其说是身体上的疾病，不如说是精神上的煎熬。我中断手头所有的事情去了西伯利亚大草原，在那里我呼吸着新鲜的空气、喝着香甜的马奶酒，过着一种原始朴素的生活。

8.再次回到俄国时，我结婚了。快乐的家庭生活让我拥有了全新的活力，我彻底摆脱了所有对生命意义的追求。此时，我全部的生活都和我的家庭、妻子和孩子们联系在一起，我最关心的，就是如何改善我们的生活质量。从最初痴迷于自我完善，到后来代之以追求全人类的完善也就是社会进步，那一切都被一种更直接的欲望所战胜，就是如何让我的家庭和我本人过上最好的生活。

9.就这样又过了十五年。

10.尽管在那十五年间我觉得作家的工作无关紧要，我仍然没有间断写作。我已经尝到了身为作家的甜头，它让我在经济上获利甚丰，也为自己微不足道的工作获得了许多掌声。我将投身于写作看成提升自己物质地位的一种手段，与此同时，我也依赖于对写作的专注来压制自己灵魂深处始终缠绕的问题，就是我自己的生命乃至所有人生命的意义。

11.在写作中我试图传递自己认定的唯一真理：我们必须活着，为我们自己和家人创造最好生活的可能性。

12.这样的生活又过去了许多年，直到五年前，一种非常奇怪的现象发生在我身上。起初我开始经历时断时续的迷乱，仿佛生命静止了，仿佛我并不知道应该怎样活着，应该做些什么，我陷入茫然，进而陷入绝望。不过这样的迷乱很快就过去了，一切又恢复了先前的样子。之后这种迷乱发生得越来越频繁，出现的模式也一模一样。每到这时，当生命在一瞬间突然静止，总会有同样的问题出现在我的脑际："为什么会这样？接下来会发生什么？"

13.起初我觉得这些问题毫无意义，也毫不相干。我觉得这些问题的答案，人所共知，只要我愿意解决，不会花费很大的力气；我觉得我一时没有时间考虑这些问题，不过只要我愿意认真思考，总会找到所有的答案。可是问题总是反复出现在我的脑海，越来越迫切地要求我给出答案。它们就像圆圆的句号，总是回到原点，仿佛转了一个大圈，形成一个更大的黑洞。

14.随后，那种常见的致命的心理疾病在我身上爆发。一开始只是一些不舒服的小迹象，一般病人都会忽视这些迹象；后来，症状出现得越来越频繁，最终变成了一段时间的持续煎熬。痛苦日益加重，在病人终于意识到问题的严重性时，他发现最初忽视的那些不舒服的迹象，事实上要比世间的一切都更为重要：那就是死亡。

15.当时的我就是这样。我意识到那并不是偶尔出现的不舒服，而是非常严重的疾病。如果同样的问题不断反复出现，就必须找到答案。我试图为它们寻找答案。那些问题显得如此愚蠢、无知和傻气。然而一旦我开始思考并试图解决这些问题，便立即认定：首先，它们并不傻气而愚蠢，而是生命中最重要、最有意义的问题；其次，无论我怎样绞尽脑汁，仍然找不到答案。在我忙于在萨马拉置办房产、着手教育儿子或

投身写作之前，我必须知道自己做这些事情的意义何在；如果不能了解它们的意义，我什么也做不下去。当时我正忙着考虑农场的事儿，有时突然有一个问题出现在脑中：“啊，很好，这样你就拥有了萨马拉省六千俄亩[4]的农场和三百匹马了，但那又怎么样呢？”这让我觉得茫然，不知道接下来应该想些什么。只要一开始教育孩子们，我就会问自己“为什么”，或者正在思考如何让农民们走向富裕，我会突然问自己“那跟我有什么关系”，或者正想着写作带给我的显赫声名，我会对自己说：“啊，不错，这样你就比果戈理、普希金、莎士比亚、莫里哀更有名了，你会比世界上所有的作家都有名，但那又怎么样呢？”

16.对于这些问题，我根本找不到答案。

第四章

1.我的生活陷入了静止状态。我呼吸如常，吃喝入睡都像是例行公事；但是我已经没有生命力，因为没有什么现实的欲望让我觉得值得去实现。如果预先我就知道我的渴望能被满足，那我就都不会从中获得快乐。

2.假如有一位魔法师站在我面前，对我说他可以满足我的愿望，我不知道该对他说什么。在我偶尔很兴奋的时候，还会有出于习惯的欲望而不是真正的欲望的话，在我清醒的时候，我知道那些不过是幻觉。事实上，我什么也不想得到。我甚至不想知道真相，因为我已经猜到了真相是什么——真相是，生命毫无意义。

3.就仿佛我一直继续着自己的生活之路，就会来到了一个悬崖边，在那里我可以清楚地看到，前方除了毁灭之外什么也没有。然而我已经不可能停下来，不可能回头，或者闭上眼睛假装对此一无所知。人生在世，原来面对的除了关于生命和快乐的谎言，就是煎熬至死的现实——生命，原本是彻底的虚无。

4.我开始厌恶生活，开始感受到有一种不可逾越的力量，它带着我寻求解脱，不管以什么方式，我一定要从这样的虚无中解脱出来。我不能说自己想自杀，那向我招手、让我远离生命的，是一种更强大、更彻底、更宏阔的欲望，就像曾经指引我不懈地追求更好的生活的那种力量。只是如今，指引我向着相反的方向。我用尽全力与生命抗争，自杀的想法出现得如此自然，就像之前那些不断进步、完善自我的想法一样自然。这个想法强烈地吸引着我，以至于我不得不动用一些小伎俩，以免自己太仓促地作出决定。我不想莽撞，希望能够尽量看清整个事情的

真相。我告诉自己，如果当时无法揭开真相，我还有的是时间。就在那时，将在更衣室单间的绳子拿了出来，避免自己在壁橱间的横梁上上吊；每次前去打猎时，我也不再像往常那样随身带一支手枪，以防自己克制不住自杀的念头，那么轻易地结束一切。我也不知道自己想要什么。我害怕生命，全力与它抗争，又仍然希望从生命中得到一些什么。

5.这一切发生在我被常人眼中无比完美和快乐的生活包围着的时候：我还不到五十岁，有一个善良、忠实又深深为我所爱的妻子，孩子们活泼可爱，我还有很大的一片地产，即使我本人没有费什么力气，它也运转良好并有不断扩大之势。亲戚朋友比以往更加尊重我，陌生人也对我赞誉有加，我可以毫不脸红地说，自己已经是一个名人了。此外，我的精神和身体都还健康，有着同龄人少有的充沛精力和体力：在体力上我可以和农民一起在田间耕种；在脑力上我可以连续工作八九个小时也不觉得累，之后也不会出现什么不舒服的反应。而就在这样近乎完满的生活状态下，我觉得自己简直有些活不下去了，同时又因为害怕死亡，我不得不自欺欺人，以防自己真的选择自杀。

6.这种精神状态是以下面这种方式呈现在我脑海中的：生活是某人跟我开的一个愚蠢而邪恶的玩笑。尽管我不知道这位“某人”是谁——他或许是带我来到世间的造物主——这种我被某人带到这个世界上、此人以此种方式跟我开了一个愚蠢而又邪恶的玩笑的想法，在我看来，成为表达自己当时那种精神状态的最自然的方式。

7.我不禁感到，在我身外的某一个空间，那人正一边笑着一边看我的好戏，看我如何生活了三四十年；看我徒劳地学习、长大、达到所谓的身心成熟；看我此时心智成熟地站在生命自我揭示意义的悬崖，像个傻瓜一样，如此坚信生命的虚无：生命毫无意义，过去没有，将来也不会有。那人嘲笑着我。

8.即使那个观察我的生活并以此为乐的人不存在，也不会让我感到

丝毫的轻松。哪怕是一个小小的举动，我都无法为它找到理性的意义，更不要说整个生命了。我只是感到震惊，为什么我一开始竟没有意识到这一点，在如此漫长的生命中，这样的问题一直存在，根本就应该是常识。今天或明天，疾病和死亡就会降临到我最心爱的人们身上，也会降临到我自己身上（或许它们已经来了）。之后除了尸骨渐寒，什么也不会留下。早晚有一天，无论我曾经立下怎样的丰功伟业，它们都会被世人遗忘，荡然无存。那么我们又在这里斤斤计较些什么呢？人，怎么可以一直活着，却看不到这样的真相？这真是太让人震惊了！只有当我们对生活迷迷糊糊时，才有可能这样活着；一旦清醒，就不可能看不到所有这一切都只是一个玩笑，一个愚蠢的恶作剧！那就是真相：没有什么诙谐幽默，一切都显得残酷而愚蠢。

9.有一个古老的东方寓言，讲述一个旅人在没有防备的情况下被一个残暴的野兽驱赶到一片空旷的大草原。为了躲开野兽，旅人藏身于一口已经干涸的深井中，但他朝下一看，井底有一条巨龙正张着大口，准备吞掉他。可怜的旅人不敢爬出深井，因为害怕被残暴的野兽吃掉，也不敢落到井底，怕那条巨龙一口吞掉他。于是他抓住井壁的石头缝里长出的一根灌木枝，整个身子吊在那里。他的胳膊渐渐没劲儿了，知道无论是上还是下，死亡就在不远处等待着他，他别无选择。然而他还是紧紧抓住手中的那颗救命稻草。他四处看看，发现有一黑一白两只老鼠，正在啃噬着他手中抓着的灌木枝的根茎，那根茎已经摇摇欲坠了。不久老鼠就会把它彻底啃断，他就会落入巨龙的大口。旅人看到这个，知道自己注定难逃一死了。然而他吊在那里的时候有几滴蜂蜜落在灌木树叶上，他伸出舌头，舔食蜂蜜。我也像这样吊在生命之树上，我太清楚，死亡的巨龙就在下面等待着我，准备把我撕成碎片，我也不知道自己何以落入这样一口受尽折磨的深井。我试着舔食那曾经让我觉得甘甜和安慰的蜂蜜，但已经从中得不到任何快乐。白色和黑色的老鼠——白天和黑夜——无休止地啃噬着我紧紧抓住的树枝。我清楚地看到那只张着大口的巨龙，蜂蜜吃到嘴里也不再甘甜了。视线所及，只有那条让我无以

逃遁的巨龙和那两只老鼠，我无法转移视线不去看它们。这不是寓言而是真相，是每个人都无法辩驳又能清楚看到的真相。

10.生命中快乐的幻觉曾一度抑制住我对巨龙的恐惧，如今我不再自欺欺人。无论我多少次听到这样的话：你根本无法理解生命的意义，过自己的生活，不要再想了——我仍然无法顺从，因为我已经顺从太久了。现在我总是看到自己被白天和黑夜交替追赶着，走向死亡。这就是我所看到的一切，因为这是唯一的真相，其他的全都是谎言。

11.那两滴蜂蜜，一是对家庭的眷恋，二是对写作——也就是我称之为“艺术”的事业的热爱，曾经是引领我的目光远离残酷真相的最重要的力量，如今却已不再让我感到甜蜜了。

12.“家庭……”我自言自语道。但是我的家庭，我的妻子和孩子也都是凡俗的肉身啊。他们的处境和我一模一样：要么生活在谎言中，要么直面可怕的真相，他们也别无选择。那么他们又是为什么而活着呢？为什么我会爱他们，照顾他们，造就他们，时刻关注着他们？是为了让他们向我一样被绝望笼罩，还是为了让他们对这一切无知无觉？如果我爱他们，就不能向他们隐瞒真相。在知识的海洋，每前进一步，就离真相更进一步，而那真相就是死亡。

13.“艺术，诗歌……”在很长一段时间里，因为成功，因为他人的赞美，我说服自己说那是一件可为之事。尽管日渐走近死亡会将那一切湮没在废墟中：我自己和我的作品，以及人们对这一切的记忆。然而我很快意识到这也是假象。我清楚地看到，艺术只不过是生活的装点和修饰，然而既然它在我看来已全无魅力，我又如何用它去感染他人呢？我并没有真正地生活过，只是一具徒有躯壳的行尸走肉，只要我认为生命是有意义的，哪怕我说不清楚它究竟有何意义，任何诗歌和艺术中所反映的生命都会让我感受到快乐。我通过艺术的镜子观察生活，这让我无比享受。但是当我开始探寻生命的意义，当我开始感受到活着原来是不

得已，这面镜子就变得无关紧要、累赘多余而荒谬可笑，甚至干脆变成了令人痛苦的折磨。在镜中，我看到的只有自己愚蠢而令人绝望的处境，就再也不能奢望从中得到安慰了。当我在自己的灵魂深处认定生命是有意义的时候，镜中的一切会带给我愉悦。那时，光影的跃动，世间的悲喜剧，生命中令人感动、令人赞叹、令人恐惧的方方面面都会给我以慰藉。然而当我发现生命没有意义，根本就是一个可怕的恶作剧时，就不再能够从镜中光影里得到娱乐了。无论蜂蜜有多甘甜，一旦我看到身子下面张着大口的巨龙和头顶上啃噬着支撑我的根茎的老鼠，就再也感受不到任何甘甜的滋味了。

14.还不止如此。如果我只是了解到生命全无意义，或许会平静地接受这一现实，觉得那是我不得不接受的宿命。然而我无法这样冷静。如果我是一个在森林里迷了路的人，知道根本没有出路，或许也就安然地活下去了；但是我像一个莽撞之徒，在森林里迷了路，明知道没有路却又为寻找出路而四处奔跑，这让我倍感恐惧。因为我知道，每往前一步都会更深地迷失，然而又无法停下脚步。

15.这是非常可怕的。于是，为了摆脱这样的恐惧，我想到了自杀。我感到未来等待着我的东西比眼前的处境更可怕，而我既无法将它驱赶开来，又没有足够的耐心平静地等待结局。无论科学界怎么说心脏的血管会在一瞬间崩裂，或者会有什么东西突然爆炸，一切都会在瞬间结束，我仍然无法平心静气地等待那一瞬间的到来。对黑暗的恐惧太强烈，我想要逃离那种恐惧，越快越好，不管是用绳子还是子弹。正是这种感觉无比强烈地引诱我走向自杀的道路。

第五章

1.有好几次我对自己说：“或许我忽略了什么，或者我对某些知识不够了解？不可能人人都会陷入这样的绝望啊。”于是我开始在人类各个分支的知识中找寻答案，之后的很长时间，我一直在苦苦求索。我可不是三心二意地敷衍了事，也绝非出于好奇一时兴起，而是拿出自己全部的耐性和毅力，就像一个垂死的人寻求解脱那样，日夜不停地寻找，最终一无所获。

2.我企图在所有的知识中一探究竟，最终不仅一无所获，反而坚信，所有和我一样在知识中寻找答案的人，必定都和我一样一无所获。他们不仅一无所获，还不无痛苦地认识到同样令我陷入绝望的现实：生命毫无意义。这是人类所能获得的最无可辩驳的知识。

3.我到处寻找，幸亏我一直在学术圈里生活，在学术界交游甚广，可以接触到各个学科的学者。我可以通过著作或通过和他们谈话，洞察这些学者的博学广识，因而关于知识能够回答生命的所有问题，我都一一通晓。

4.在很长一段时间，我不相信知识回答不了生命的问题，而只能回答它本身提出的问题。在很长一段时间，我看到科学在提出自己的主张（那些主张多半与人类生活无关）时那一副自以为是的严肃劲儿，却并没有觉得它们加深了我对世界的理解。在很长一段时间，我在知识面前自惭形秽，觉得自己之所以没有找到问题的答案，一定是因为幼稚无知，而不是知识的错误。不过这对我来说可不是什么好笑的事情，它不是玩笑，而是我生命中一个非常重要的课题。最后我不得不得出结论，我的问题是唯一合理的问题，是所有知识学科的基础。我本人和我的问

题都没有错，如果科学一度伪装自己能够回答这些问题，那就是科学的错。

5.那个让我在五十岁时几近自杀的问题乃是每个人灵魂深处最重要的问题，无论是懵懂无知的少年还是饱读诗书的智叟。根据我的经验，没有这个问题就不可能有生命。这个问题就是：我今天或明天的行为将产生什么样的后果。我的整个一生又将如何？

6.或者我们换一种表达方式，这个问题就是：我为什么活着，为什么我对世间的事物或成就有所渴望。或者再换一种表达方式：有没有一种生命的意义可以超越每个人必将面对的死亡而永恒？

7.我试图通过人类的知识回答这个问题——不管我们以何种方式表达，这些其实都是同一个问题。我发现，根据它们各自与这一问题的关系，人类知识的所有分支几乎可以分为两个对立的领域，在这两个领域的尽头分别是两个对立的极端：一个是积极的，一个是消极的。然而无论哪一个极端，都没有对生命的问题提供任何答案。

8.其中一个知识分支甚至根本不承认问题的存在，却对它自己另行提出的问题给出了清晰而准确的答案：那就是实验科学领域，位于这一领域最极端的是数学。另一个知识领域承认这一问题的存在却没有作出回答，那就是思辨哲学领域，位于这一领域最极端的是形而上学。

9.我很年轻的时候就学习了思辨哲学，但后来却对数学和自然科学非常着迷。在我明确对自己提出那个问题，且问题本身在我的思想深处越积越深、迫切需要我作出回答之前，我对知识给出的答案一直十分满意。

10.在实验科学领域我对自己说："一切都在发展，万事万物各有不同，它们越来越复杂精细，在这一切进步中，是有科学规律可循的。你

本人就是万事万物的一个组成部分。如果你对整个世界以及主导世界发展的科学规律了解得足够深入，你就会了解自己在这个世界中的位置，那时你就认识了你自己。”尽管我羞于提起，但一度我对这个答案非常满意。那个时候，我本人也在成长，变得越来越复杂。我的肌肉在日益增大加强，我的记忆越来越丰富，我的思考和理解能力与日俱增。我日渐成长和日臻成熟，并且感受到了自己体内的这种成长，自然就会相信，有一个普遍规律引导着整个世界的发展，我可以通过那个普遍规律找到自己生命问题的答案。然而不久后我不再成长；我觉得自己不再发展成熟而是日渐干枯萎缩，肌肉萎缩，牙齿纷纷脱落，因而我不仅觉得那个普遍规律无法为我提供任何解释，甚至觉得世界上从来没有也不可能有这样一个规律。我把自己在生命中的某一段时间看到的东西误认为是普遍规律了。在更加严格地考察了它的定义之后，我明确得出结论，根本没有什么永恒发展的规律。我清楚地看到，什么世间万事万物都在永恒的时间和空间中不断发展，越来越完美、复杂和与众不同，全都是没有任何实际意义的空话。因为在永恒的时间和空间里，根本不存在简单和复杂、之前和之后、更好和更糟的分别。

11.最重要的是，这样的论断对于我个人的问题，有关我和我所有的欲望的问题，没有提出任何解决方案。我发现这些科学研究的确非常有趣和迷人，但是它们的精确性和清晰度与它们与生命问题的相关性成反比：与生命问题的相关性越小的学科，就越清晰、越精确；而越是试图解决生命问题的学科，就越晦涩模糊、枯燥无味。看看那些试图回答生命问题的学科，看看生理学、心理学、生物学和社会学，我们会发现，这些学科几乎根本没有什么思想，所有的语言都混沌模糊，伪装自己能够解决超出其学科范围之外的问题。各位思想家之间还不停地发生冲突（甚至常常自相矛盾）。再看看那些根本不关心生命问题而只是回答其本身的专业科学问题的学科，人们大概会惊叹人类智慧的力量，然而就算不探讨这些学科我们也知道，它们根本不会回答有关生命的根本问题。这些学科全然无视这个问题。它们说：“关于你是谁、你为什么

活着这个问题，我们不知道，这个问题也与我们无关。但如果你想知道关于光的定理，或者化学合成，或者有机物生长的机理；如果你想知道物理天体及其形状的各种规律，想知道它们的大小和数目之间的关系；或者如果你想知道人类大脑的生理机制，我们会向你提供清楚、精确而无可辩驳的答案。”

12.总的来说，实验科学与生命问题的关系可以这样来概括。

问：我为什么活着？

答：在无限的空间和永恒的时间里，有无限多的小分子以无限复杂的形式进行着各种变异；一旦你了解了这些变异的规律，你就知道自己为什么活着了。

13.后来我转而探索思想领域，当时的我是这样想的：“整个人类依据一定的精神原则和理想成长、生活和发展成熟。这些思想观念可以分别表达为宗教、科学、艺术和政治。随着这些思想日益提升，人类也会跟着进步，变得更加幸福。我既然是人类的一分子，自然应该以认识和实现这样的理想为己任。”我在没有什么判断力的时期，对这样的说法十分满意。然而一旦我对有关生命的问题有了清晰的认识，这一套理论立刻不堪一击，轰然坍塌。这类知识学科通常在下结论时都显得轻率随便、模棱两可，它们仅对少量样本进行研究就匆忙作出概括性的推断。这一理论体系不同的支持者之间，总是就人类的理想究竟是什么充满了矛盾和争吵，这一观点的古怪之处（或者说愚蠢之处）就在于，为了回答这个摆在每个人面前的问题：“我是谁？”或者，“我为什么活着”，或者，“我应该做些什么”，人们必须先解决“人类的生命是什么”这个问题。关于后一个问题，人们所知实在不多，他们所能探索的，不过是人类历史的一瞬间中一个小片段的一小部分而已。也就是说，要了解自己，必须先了解整个人类的秘密，而所谓人类，正是由像此人一样完全不了解自己的个人组成的。

14.我得承认自己曾经笃信这一理论。那时我有自己偏爱的一套理想来为自己的突发奇想、反复无常找借口。我试图创造一种理论，将自己的这些突发奇想定为适用全人类的普遍规律。然而一旦我从灵魂深处非常清楚地提出了最基本的生命问题，这个答案立即消失得无影无踪了。我开始意识到，和实验科学一样，这个领域也存在着真正的科学和伪科学，二者都力图回答其学科范围之外的问题。这里也同样存在一系列全然不同的学科分支，这些分支同样力图回答其学科范围之外的问题。这些伪科学——包括法律、社会和历史学——全都试图解决人类的各种问题，并假装它们能够以自己的方式解答那个与全人类有关的生命问题。

15.然而，如果说在实验科学领域，一个人认真地提出“他应该怎样活着”这样一个问题，听到有人建议他去研究在无限的时空中无限多的分子以无限复杂的形式进行的变异，他一定不会满意的话，那么同样，如果有人建议他为了解自己就必须先探求整个人类的生命，他也一定不会满意。因为根本没有人知道人类的生命从何处始，至何处终，哪怕其中最小的一部分我们也一无所知。此外，就像实验科学领域的那些伪科学一样，这些科学越是偏离其目的，就越是模棱两可，毫无精确性，愚蠢而矛盾重重。实验科学关心的问题是物质现象的因果顺序，人们只需要问到一个关于终极原因的问题，实验科学就立即变成一堆废纸。思想领域面临的问题是它认为生命的本质是超出因果界定的，人们只要在考察时引入因果现象，如社会或历史数据，就会让这一整套科学变成胡言乱语。

16.因此，实验科学并不在自己的体系中引入终极原因的问题，而只是探讨积极的知识，揭示人类智慧的不同凡响；而抽象的思想领域是后来成为科学的，它完全无视因果现象的顺序问题，而只是考察与某一个终极原因有关的人类，以此来揭示人类智慧的不同凡响。举例来说，在这一领域的最极端就是形而上学，即抽象哲学。这门科学明确提出

了："我是谁？"以及"宇宙是什么？我为什么存在，宇宙又为什么存在？"的问题。自从这门科学产生以来，它为这些问题提出的答案永远都是一样的。无论哲学认为我们生命的本质乃至万事万物的本质是思想还是物质、精神还是意志，其所表达的都只是同一个意思：我存在，而我就是这个本质。然而他并没有解决怎样存在和为什么存在的问题，如果这位哲学家是一个严谨的思想者，他就根本找不到答案。我问："这个本质又为什么存在？它现在是什么样子，将来又是什么样子？"哲学不仅没有回答这些问题，反而又提出了同样的问题。如果它是真正的哲学，那么它的全部任务就在于明确提出这个问题。而如果它恪守这一原则，那么它对于"我是谁"以及"宇宙是什么"的回答就只有一个："要么是一切，要么是虚无。"而它对宇宙为什么存在、我又为什么存在这个问题的回答也只有一个，那就是："不知道。"

17.因此，无论我怎样苦苦思索哲学推测出的这些回答，统统不能称其为答案。个中理由不同于表达较为清楚的实验科学，在实验科学中，答案与问题本身没有关系；而就哲学来说，尽管哲学家们为了回答我的问题而博学强记、绞尽脑汁，他们仍然没有答案。哲学所提供的不是答案，而是同样的问题，只不过是换了一种方式提出来而已。

第六章

1.为了寻找生命问题的答案，我觉得自己就像一个在森林中迷路的旅人。

2.我来到一片空地，爬到一棵树上极目四望，可以看到很远的远方，却看不到一座小木屋或任何栖居之所。我走入一片灌木丛，身处黑暗，四周苍茫一片，却发现那里也没有我要找的小木屋。

3.我以同样的方式徜徉于人类知识的森林，既沐浴了数学知识和实验科学那明媚的光线——在那里我可以远眺地平线，却找不到一座小木屋，也陷入了思想领域那幽深的暗影——在这里我走得越远，笼罩天地的黑暗就越是汹涌。后来我坚信，在这里，我没有也根本不可能有任何出路。

4.当我走向知识的光明一端，我发现那只是在逃避问题。无论在我面前伸出的地平线多么灿烂光明，无论将自己沉迷于这无尽的知识中是多么美妙的诱惑，我已经知道，这些知识越是清楚而条理分明，我就越不需要它，因为它越解答不了我的问题。“嗯，”我自言自语道，“我完全了解了科学所迫切了解的东西，在那条路上，我根本找不到关于生命意义这个问题的答案。”在另一端的思想领域，我知道尽管这类知识的根本目的是要解答我的问题——或许正是因为这个原因——它所能给我的却无非是我自己已经找出的那个一模一样的答案。即，问：“生命的意义是什么？”答：“生命没有意义。”或者，问：“我的生命最终将变成什么样子？”答：“无尽的虚无。”再或者，问：“那么世界为什么存在，我又为什么存在？”答：“因为它们的确存在。”

5.如果为了回答这个问题而去研究人类知识的一个分支，我会得到

无数非常精确的答案，只不过那些都不是我提出的问题的答案。什么星体的化学组成啦、太阳朝向武仙星座的运动啦、物种和人类的起源啦、无限小的原子的形状啦，乃至于非常微小且数目无限的大气分子的浮动啦，等等。然而关于我提出的生命意义的问题，这一知识分支给出的唯一答案是：“你就是你所称之为生命的东西，你是一团暂时存在的、偶尔聚集在一起的物质，这些分子物质的相互作用和变化在你的体内构成了所谓的生命。这一聚集体只能在有限的时间内存续，一旦分子之间的相互作用停止了，也就是我们所说的生命停止了，所有的问题也将随之结束。人的生命就是某种物质的随机组合，该组合堆不断分解，其发酵的过程就是所谓的生命；该组合堆最终将彻底解体，发酵过程终将停止，那时所有的问题也将一并消失。”这就是精确的科学知识给出的答案，如果这些学科严格坚持其本身的原则的话，它们也只能提供这一种答案。

6.然而事实是，这个答案根本没有回答我提出的问题。我需要知道自己生命的意义何在，关于“生命乃是无限时空中的一分子”这样的命题不仅未能说出生命的意义，反而消解了它可能会有的任何意义。

7.如果实验科学试图与思想领域的科学进行暧昧的妥协，它会说生命的意义在于发展，以及对这种发展的促进和鼓励。然而这样的说法太过含混朦胧，根本无法称之为答案。

8.位于人类知识领域另一端的思想科学，如果严格坚持其本身的原则，会试图直接解答生命意义的问题。然而自古以来，它给出的永远是同一个答案：“宇宙是无限的、不可理解的，人类的生命是这个莫测高深的‘整体’的一个莫测高深的组成部分。”在这里，我同样排除了思想领域试图与实验科学（它还包括一整套伪科学）进行的妥协，即所谓的法学、政治学和历史学。在这些科学中也同样存在对于发展和完善的错误理解，唯一的区别是，自然科学探讨的是万事万物的发展，而思想科学

讨论的是人类生命的发展。二者所犯的错误也一模一样：在无限的时空中，发展和完善既无目的，也无方向，而关于我的问题，没有答案。

9.在精确的思想知识，也就是在真正的哲学而不是叔本华所谓的专业哲学（它唯一的作用是把所有现存的现象归入新的哲学类别并给它们加上新的标签）中，哲学并非没有看到那个基本的问题，而其给出的答案只有一个，那就是苏格拉底、叔本华、所罗门和佛所给出的那个答案。

10.“我们只有在与生命渐行渐远时，才会越来越接近生命的实质，”苏格拉底在垂死之时如是说，“那么，我们这些热爱真理之人在生命中又在苦苦求索些什么呢？脱离肉体，并远离起源于肉体生命的所有邪恶之事。如果是这样，那么为什么当死亡临近，我们竟无论如何也高兴不起来呢？”

11.“智者通过生命走向死亡，因此死亡并不令其有所恐惧。”

12.“认识到世界内在的本质是意志，”叔本华说，“并在一切现象中——从无知觉的自然力的无意识的企图直到人的完全有意识的活动，只承认这种意志的具体性，我们就不能回避一个结果，即随着意志的任意否定和自我消亡，一切现象，世界赖以生存的、持久的、既无目的又不停息的、具有不同程度具体内容的希望和爱好也将消失。因果关系的多样性也将消失，随同形式一起，意志的具有空间和时间这种一般形式的一切现象也就消失。结果是世界最终的基本形式——主体和客体也消失了。没有意志，没有表象，也就没有世界。在我们面前就只有虚无。但是抗拒向寂灭转化的一切，我们的自然界也不过是这种构成我们自身和我们世界的生存意志。我们这样害怕寂灭，或者换一种说法，我们这样想活着。这只意味着我们本身就是这种生存的愿望，除此以外，我们一无所知。因此，对我们这些还充满意志的人说来，意志完全消亡之后，剩下的当然是虚无。与此相反，对于意志发生了变化并已消亡的那些人

来说，我们这一非常现实的世界，连同他所有的太阳和银河，都是虚无。”[5]

13.“虚空的虚空，”所罗门说，“凡事都是虚空。人一切的劳碌，就是他在日光之下的劳碌，有什么益处呢？一代过去，一代又来，地球永远长存……已有的事，后必再有；已行的事，后必再行。日光之下，并无新事。岂有一件事人能指着说：这是新的。哪知，在我们以前的世代早已有之。已过的世代，无人记念；将来的世代，后来的人也不记念。我传道者在耶路撒冷做过以色列的王。我专心用智慧寻求查究天下所做的一切事，乃知神叫世人所经练的，是极重的劳苦。我见日光之下所做的一切事，都是虚空，都是捕风……我心里议论说，我得了大智慧，胜过我以前在耶路撒冷的众人，而且我心中多经历智慧和知识的事。我又专心察明智慧、狂妄和愚昧，乃至这也是捕风。因为多有智慧，就多有忧烦；加增知识，就加增忧伤。”[6]“我在心里说：来吧！我以喜乐试试你，你好享福。谁知，这也是虚空。我指着嬉笑说：这是狂妄；论喜乐说：有何功效呢？我心里察究，如何用酒使我肉体舒畅，我心却仍以智慧引导我；又如何持住愚昧，等我看明世人，在天下一生当行何事为美。我为自己动大工程，建造房屋，栽种葡萄园；建造园囿，在其中栽种各种各样果木树；挖造水池，用以浇灌嫩小的树木。我买了奴婢，也有生在家中的奴婢；又有许多牛群羊群，胜过以前在耶路撒冷众人所有的。我又为自己积蓄金银和君主的财宝，以及各省的财宝；又得唱歌的男女和世人取乐之物，如乐器及诸如此类。这样，我就日渐昌盛，胜过以前在耶路撒冷的众人。我的智慧仍然存留。凡我目之所求，我没有不留给他的；我心之所乐的，我没有不享受的；因我的心为我一切所劳碌的快乐，这就是我从劳碌中所得的部分。后来，我查看我亲手经营的一切事和我劳碌所成的功，谁知都是虚空，都是捕风，在日光之下毫无益处。我转念观看智慧、狂妄和愚昧。在王以后而来的人还能做什么呢？也不过行早先所行的就是了。我便看出智慧胜过愚昧，如同光明胜过黑暗。智慧人的眼目光明；愚昧人在黑暗里行。我却看明，这两种人都必

遇见相同的事。我在心里说，愚昧人所遇见的，我也必遇见，我为何更有智慧呢？我心里说，这也是虚空。智慧人和愚昧人一样，永远无人纪念，日后都被忘记。可叹智慧人死亡，与愚昧人无异。我所以恨恶生命，因为在日光之下所行的事，我都以为烦恼，都是虚空，都是捕风。我恨恶一切的劳碌，就是我在日光之下的劳碌，因为我得来的必留给我以后的人……人在日光之下劳碌累心，在他一切的劳碌上得着什么呢？因为他日日忧虑，他的劳苦成为忧烦，连夜间心也不安。这也是虚空。人强莫如吃喝，且在劳碌中享福……”[7]

14.“凡临到众人的事，都是一样。义人和恶人都遭遇一样的事；好人、洁净人和不洁净人、献祭的与不献祭的，也是一样。好人如何，罪人也如何；起誓的如何，怕起誓的也如何。在日光之下所行的一切事上，有一件祸患，就是众人所遭遇的都是一样，并且世人的心充满了恶。活着的时候心里狂妄，后来就归死人那里去了。与一切活人相连的，那人还有指望，因为活着的狗总比死去的狮子强。活着的人知道必死，死去的人毫无所知，也不再得赏赐，他们的名无人记念。他们的爱，他们的恨，他们的嫉妒，早都消灭了。在日光之下所行的一切事上，他们永不再有份了。”[8]

15.所罗门，就是那个写下这些话语的人，如是说。

16.以下是一位印度先哲讲述的故事：“释迦牟尼是一位年轻快乐的王子，从不知道疾病、年迈和死亡为何物。有一天他乘坐马车外出，看见一个可怕的老人，老人满嘴的牙掉光了，口水顺着嘴角流下来。王子因为从不知年迈为何物，非常惊诧，就问马夫那是什么，为什么让他遭遇这样一个可怜、可恶又可憎的景象？当他听说这是所有人的宿命，就连他这位年轻的王子有朝一日也会面临同样的境遇时，王子再也无心游玩，命令马车回程，让他好好考虑一下这件事儿。他把自己关在房里，仔细想了几天。或许他在思考中得到了某种安慰，因为过了几天他又乘

马车外出了，和前一次一样欢快开心。但这一次他又遇到了一个病人。这个人一脸憔悴、脸色发青，眼里暗淡无光。王子因为从不知疾病为何物，便让车夫停下，问那是什么。当他听说那就是疾病，所有人都会染上疾病，即使他这样健康快乐的王子，恐怕明天便难逃疾病的魔爪，他的快乐心情再度烟消云散，命令车夫回程，他回到王宫，为自己寻找安慰。他大概又找到了安慰，因为过了几天，他第三次乘坐马车外出游玩。”而这一次，他又看见了一个新鲜事物：他看到一些人肩上扛着什么东西。“那是什么？”“死人。”“死人是什么？”王子问。他被告知，人都会死。王子走向死者的尸体，揭开盖子看了一眼。“他会变成什么样子呢？”他问道。王子被告知，死人将被埋在地下。“为什么？”“因为他永不可能复活，只会变成一堆白骨，身上爬满尸虫。”“所有的人都必须有此下场吗？我也会这样吗？我也会被埋在地下，变成一堆白骨，身上爬满尸虫？”“是的。”“回宫！我再也不想出来游玩了，我再也不会出宫了！”

17.释迦牟尼无法在生命中找到安慰，便认定生命本身乃是大恶，他竭尽心力要让自己和他人摆脱生命。他所期望的摆脱生命的方式是，人死后不会在任何地方重生，只会变成虚无，彻头彻尾的虚无。所有的印度先哲们都这么说。

18.让我们总结一下人类凭借自己的智慧就生命的问题给出的答案。

19.“肉体生命是大恶，是谎言。既然肉体生命的消失是我们的福祉，我们就必然渴望它的消失。”苏格拉底说。

20.“生命原不应如此，可它的确是：罪恶。向着虚无的转化乃是生命中唯一神圣的事。”叔本华说。

21.“世间万事万物，凭它是愚是智、是富是穷、是喜是悲，都是虚

空。人死之后，什么也不会留下。此乃荒诞。”所罗门说。

22.“人生来苦难，贫病交加，老迈虚弱，必死无疑，人不能念此而生，必须摆脱生命，摆脱一切可能的生命。”佛说。

23.这些伟人们的所说所想，和成千上万的普通人没有分别。我也曾思考过这些，也有过同样的感觉。

24.就这样，我在知识领域的研读不仅未能让我走出绝望，反而加深了我的绝望。一个分支没有解答生命的问题；另一个分支虽给出了答案，却只是再次印证了我的绝望，向我证明，我得出的结论并非因为选择了歧路，也不是因为我的思想出了问题。相反，它让我坚信，我所想的都是正确的，世间最伟大的智者，得出的结论也不过如此。

25.自欺欺人毫无意义，一切都是虚空。只有从未来到世上之人才会快乐，死亡强于生命，我们必须摆脱生命。

第七章

1.既然在知识领域的考察未能给我一个满意的解释，我便开始在生活中寻找，希望能够在周围的人身上找到答案。我开始观察身边那些像我一样的人如何生活，他们又如何解答这个让我陷入绝望的问题。

2.我发现，那些和我处境相同，也就是所受的教育和生活方式相似的人，也都和我一样，陷入了绝望。

3.我发现在这个生活圈子里，人们用四种方式逃避着人人都会面对的可怕困境。

4.第一种逃避方式是无知，是指看不到或无法理解，生命乃是邪恶和荒诞的。大多数这类人要么是女人，要么是小孩，要么是蠢人，他们尚不能了解叔本华、所罗门抑或佛所面对的问题。既看不到在井底张着大口等待的巨龙，也看不到手中紧紧抓住的灌木树枝几乎被老鼠啃得连根拔起，只是自顾自地享受着蜂蜜的甘甜。不过这种享受不会持续太久，他们总会转而注意到巨龙和老鼠，蜂蜜的甘甜终会变得无味。我从这些人那里学不到任何东西，因为知道了就是知道了，你再也不可能佯装不知，回到从前。

5.第二种逃避方式是享乐主义，是指在了解到生命的绝望境地之后，无视巨龙和老鼠的威胁去享受福祉，悠闲地品味蜂蜜的甘甜，当落在灌木树枝上的蜂蜜很多时尤其如此。所罗门如此描述这种方式：

6.“我就称赞快乐，原来人在日光之下，莫强如吃喝玩乐，因为他在日光之下，神赐他……”[9]

7.“你只管去欢欢喜喜吃你的饭，心中快乐地喝你的酒……同你所爱的妻快活度日，因为那是你生前在日光之下劳碌的事上所得的份额。凡你当做的事，要尽力去做，因为在你所必去的阴间，没有工作，没有谋算，没有知识，也没有智慧。”[10]

8.在我的生活圈子中，绝大多数人都采纳这第二种逃避方式。他们身处其中的优渥条件决定了他们拥有更多更好的生活资料；道德上的麻木令其忘记了自己所有的优越地位都是偶然的，不是每个人都可以像所罗门那样拥有一千嫔妃佳丽和奢华宫殿。如果这世间有一个人拥有一千嫔妃，必定有一千人连平凡糟糠都娶之不得。这世间的每一座奢华宫殿必定是一千个人辛勤劳作、大汗淋漓方能建成，如果你今天能够成为所罗门，那么明天你也同样可能成为所罗门的奴隶。这些人由于缺乏想象力而忘记了为什么佛的内心无法平静：疾病、年迈和死亡都是人无以逃遁的宿命，早晚有一天，它们会将世间所有的享乐化为乌有。其中有一些人认为，其思考的迟钝和想象力的缺乏乃是所谓的“积极哲学”。在我看来，即使这样，他们与前一种人也没有任何差别，虽然前一种人根本看不到问题，而只知享受蜂蜜的甘甜。我无法学这些人的作派，因为我不像他们那样缺乏想象力，也无法将自己伪装成他们的样子。和所有真诚生活的人一样，我一旦看见了老鼠和巨龙，就无法再对其视而不见。

9.第三种逃避方式要诉诸力量。这种方式意识到生命是邪恶和无意义的，就企图摧毁生命，少数强壮而坚定的人就是如此。这类人知道生命是造化跟他们开的一个无比愚蠢的玩笑，意识到死亡的福祉要比活着的福祉大得多，世间最好的事情莫过于放弃生命，便立即付诸行动，不惜使用任何方法在一瞬间结束这种愚蠢的玩笑：围着脖颈缠上绳索、投水、用匕首刺向心脏，抑或卧在铁轨上等待下一辆火车的到来。在我们的生活圈子中，越来越多的人选择这种方式。总的来说，这样行事的人都是在青壮年时期作出这一选择的，那时他们的灵魂充满力量，还没有养成什么摧毁理性的坏习惯。我一度觉得这是最有价值的逃避方式，也

企图效仿。

10.第四种逃避方式是软弱，是指即使知道生命没有任何意义，也紧紧抓住这邪恶和徒劳的生命不肯放手。这一类人知道死亡强于生命，却缺乏力量采取理性的行动，通过自杀很快结束这种骗局，他们似乎在等待着什么。这便使之成为一种软弱的逃避方式，因为如果知道世上有更好的东西，又唾手可得，为什么不去顺从自己内心的意愿呢？我自己就属这一类人。

11.就这样，与我同类的人们有四种方式可以将自己拯救出这可怕的困境。我苦思冥想，除了这四种逃避方式之外，再也找不到其他的方式。在第一种方式中，人们未能意识到生命是没有意义、徒劳而邪恶的，未能意识到放弃生命乃是更明智的选择。我既然不可避免地知道了，一旦有此意识，便无法对其视而不见。第二种方法选择利用生命，而不去思考未来，这个我也做不到。和释迦牟尼一样，当我知道了苦难、老迈和死亡的存在，就无法再满心欢喜地外出打猎了。我的想象力太过丰富，再说，某些转瞬即逝的事件或许会让我们的生命有些许快乐，我却不能从中得到安慰。第三种方法是意识到生命的邪恶和荒诞之后，通过自杀结束生命。第四种逃避的方式则是像所罗门和叔本华那样生活，知道生命是某种造化的力量跟我们开的一个愚蠢的玩笑，却仍然继续活着，洗漱、穿衣、吃饭、聊天，甚至还写作。我虽然觉得这样活着既屈辱又痛苦，却仍然保留着这种生活方式。

12.如今我终于明白，当初我之所以没有自杀，是因为我隐约模糊地意识到，自己的观点是错误的。无论我觉得自己的思路多么合理而不可辩驳，抑或那些让我们得出生命毫无意义之结论的想法多么明智，自己一直思虑所得的最终结果到底是否合理，我仍然暗地里有些怀疑。

13.当时的我这样表述这种怀疑：我，亦即我的理性，已经认识到生命是非理性的。如果没有什么高于理性（的确如此，我们无法证明世

间有什么东西高于理性），那么在我看来，就是理性创造了我。没有理性，我就没有生命。那么，如果理性本身就是生命的创造者，它又怎么可能否定生命呢？或者换一种说法：如果没有生命，那么理性也就不复存在，这就必然意味着理性乃是生命的产物。生命才是一切。理性只是生命的结果，而这种理性本身却否定了生命。我感觉到，整套思路有一个环节出了问题。

14.我对自己说：生命是毫无意义的邪恶之事，这一点毫无疑问，然而我一直活着且至今仍然活着，全人类也一直活着，且至今仍然活着，这是怎么回事呢？如果能够选择不再活着，人们为什么还活着呢？难道说，只有叔本华和我才有天才的心智，能够理解生命的了无意义和邪恶本质？

15.关于生命乃是虚空的论断并不是什么特别深奥的道理，普通人很久以前就知道这个道理，然而他们却仍然一直活着。怎么可能所有的人都这样活着，而从不考虑生命的逻辑呢？

16.我自己的所知经过了历代先哲的智慧验证，我从中明白，万事万物，无论是有机物还是无机物，其生存秩序都显示出极为非凡的智慧，而只有我自己的处境是荒诞的。然而这些蠢人——广大头脑简单的人，根本不知道什么有机物和无机物在世界上的秩序，却仍然活着，且觉得生命的安排是如此合理！

17.之后我忽然想到，或许有些什么是我自己不知道的。毕竟那正是无知的表现，无知者总是嘟囔着我正在说的这些话——如果无知者不知道什么，他就说他不知道的东西是愚蠢的。无论如何，似乎全人类都一直在生活，至今仍然活着，仿佛它知道生命的意义，因为如果不知道生命的意义它就无法继续存活。而我却在说生命是没有意义的，我无法继续生活下去。

18.没有人阻止叔本华和我放弃生命。去吧，去自杀，那样你就不会再想这些了。如果你不喜欢生命，大可以去自杀。如果你活着而又无法了解生命的意义，就结束生命，而不要到处大放厥词或制造文字垃圾，说什么你不了解生命。你看，周围的人都活得很开心，每个人都非常快乐，知道自己在做什么，所以，如果你觉得生活无聊而不愉快，你就走吧！

19.因为毕竟，如果我们相信自杀是必须的且又无法下定决心结束生命，那么我们难道不是最软弱、最言行不一，或者坦白说，最愚蠢的人吗？嘴里高唱着结束生命的赞歌，却又伴着自己的平庸与生命共舞。

20.毕竟，无论我们是怎样无可辩驳的智者，我们的智慧并未有助于我们了解生命的意义。而成千上万的庸人依然活着，从没有怀疑过生命的意义。

21.的确，自从生命在我一无所知的远古时期开始以来，那些了解生命之虚空的论断的人（在我看来，他们的确证明了生命毫无意义）却活了下来，为生命注入了其独特的意义。自从世界上开始存在某种形式的人类生命以来，人们就一直认定生命是没有意义的，却仍然继续活着，并将生命的薪火传到了我的手上。我体内和我身边的一切都是他们理解生命的结果。我用来判断和谴责生命的思想方法也是由他们，而不是由我本人创造的。因为有了他们，我才来到这个世界上，接受教育，长大成人。他们从地下挖出了铁矿，教会我们如何伐木和驯养牛马，教会我们如何种植庄稼，如何群居。他们创造了一种生活的秩序。他们教会我如何思考，如何说话。我是他们的后代，他们给了我食物和水，给了我教育，让我得以用他们的思想和语言，思考和论道。现在，我却在向他们证明，这一切毫无意义！“一定是某个环节出了问题，”我对自己说，“我的某一个推论一定是错误的。”然而我却不知道究竟是哪一个环节出了问题。

第八章

1.如今我已经能够比较清晰连贯地说出这些疑虑了，而当时我却根本说不清它们是什么。当时我只是觉得，尽管我关于生命的虚空本质的推断在逻辑上有其必然性，也经过了许多伟大思想家的验证，却仍然存在问题。我不知道是自己的推理过程有漏洞，还是我对生命问题的陈述不够严密，只是觉得自己在得出结论之前的推理过程虽然完整，却仍然不够充分。所有这些结论都未能说服我服从自己的论证逻辑——选择自杀。如果我说，我是通过自己的理性达到了那样一种状态而没有选择自杀，那一定是在说谎。我的理性仍然在起作用，但是同时起作用的还有其他东西，我只能称之为一种“生命意识”。当时似乎有另一种力量在起作用，它让我更多地关注这种生命意识而非理性。正是这种力量让我走出了自己的绝望状态，将我的理性引向一个截然不同的方向。它促使我关注一个事实，那就是我，以及成百上千和我一样的其他人，并非人类的全部，而我也并不知道全人类的生活是什么样。

2.看看我自己的四周，也就是我的同事们那个狭小的圈子。这些人要么浑浑噩噩，要么寻欢作乐，要么自我终结，要么绝望等待。除此之外，我看不到其他的生活方式。我起初以为这个学者的小圈子，和我的生活圈子中有钱、有名望的这些人便构成了整个人类，而那些一直活着、至今仍然活着的数以千百万计的人们只是“他们”，类似于某种牲口，是庸常麻木的“人们”。

3.如今想来真是奇怪，也完全不可理解，那时我对生活的理性思考中，竟完全无视周围所有人的生活。我竟如此荒谬而错误地认为，我自己的生活，以及所罗门和叔本华的生活，才是真实而正常的生活，而那些数百万平庸人的生活则根本不值一提。无论今天看来多么奇怪，这些

的确是我当时真实的想法。在我骄傲地无目的地思考的过程中，我认定所罗门、叔本华和我本人非常诚实而准确地提出了生命的问题，就这个问题来说，不可能再有第二条道路。我非常肯定地认为，那些数百万普通人根本未曾深入该问题的实质，在我为自己寻找生命的意义时，我从来没有问过自己："那数百万一直活着、如今仍然活在世上的人，他们又如何让自己的生命有意义呢？"

4.很长一段时间，我就生活在这样一种疯狂的状态中。那是更激进、受过更多教育的人们较为典型的状态，如果他们大多数尚未付诸行动，起码在语言上如此。然而或许是因为我对真正的劳动人民有一种多少有些奇怪却出自天然的喜爱，迫使我去理解他们，意识到他们并非我们所想的那样愚昧无知，或许是因为我认定自己除了自杀之外无事可做的信念非常诚实，我觉得无论如何，如果我希望继续活着并了解生命的意义的话，就不能够在那些已经失去生命或希望自杀的人们身上寻找，而应该看看那些创造过生命且愿意为自己和他人的生命负责的人，无论他们仍然活着还是已经逝去。于是我环顾四周，仔细观察简朴的普通大众，他们多半没受过什么教育，也没有钱，却一直活着且仍在活着，我看到了全然不同的东西。除了少数例外情况，那数百万普通人并不适合我的分类，不能够把他们简单地归类为不理解生命问题的人，因为他们自己非常清楚地提出并回答了那个有关生命的问题。我也无法将他们归类为享乐主义者，因为在他们的生活中，匮乏和苦难远远多于富足和快乐。我更不能将他们看作是非理性地继续自己无意义的生活的人，因为他们可以清楚地解释自己生活中的每一个行为，包括死亡。他们认为，自杀是最大的恶。看来，整个人类有其理解生命意义的方式，我自己不知道那种方式，反而还嘲笑他们。也就是说，理性的知识未能为生命注入意义，反而让生命失去了意义；而数百万普通人——整个人类——所赋予生命的意义，其所依据的知识却一直遭到我们的鄙视，被认定为谬误。

5.所谓的学者和智者们制造出来的理性知识否定了生命的意义，而大众——构成整个人类的普通大众——认识到，生命的意义就存在于非理性的知识中。这种非理性的知识就是信仰，那正是我曾经禁不住鄙视和放弃的东西：三位一体的上帝、六天创世说、魔鬼和天使，乃至所有曾经令我无法接受、令我抓狂的东西。

6.我的处境非常可怕。我终于知道，在理性知识的道路上我一无所获，只能不断否定生命。而在信仰中，我只能看到对理性的否定，对我来说，这要比否定生命更为艰难。根据理性的知识，生命是邪恶的，人们知道这一点。他们可以选择结束生命，却总是选择继续活着；正如我自己，尽管很久以前便已清楚地知道生命是邪恶而没有意义的，却仍然继续活着。而根据信仰得出的结论是，为了理解生命的意义我必须放弃理性，唯有理性才让人有必要寻找意义。

第九章

1.一个矛盾产生了，摆脱这个矛盾的出路只有两条：要么我称之为理性的东西并非如我所想的那般理智，要么我以前看来非理性的东西并非我自己认为的那样毫无理智。我开始检验源自理性知识的论证过程。

2.我检验了这一论证过程，发现它是完全正确的，“生命就是虚空”是这一论证的必然结论。不过我发现了一个错误，那就是我的思考过程与我提出的问题并不对应。问题是：我为什么活着？或者，在这虚幻而转瞬即逝的一生中，有没有什么东西可以永恒而不会被人们彻底遗忘？再或者，在一个无限的宇宙中，我有限的生命存在的意义是什么？为了回答这个问题，我开始了对生命的探索。

3.目前已有的对所有可能的生命问题的解答显然无法令我满意，因为我的问题，无论乍看之下多么简单，都需要通过无限对有限作出解释，或者反过来，需要通过有限对无限作出解释。

4.我的问题是：“超越时空和因果循环的生命究竟有何意义？”而我试图回答的问题是：“在时空和因果循环中，我的生命有何意义？”结果，无论经过多长时间，无论我怎样绞尽脑汁地思考，都只能回答：“没有意义。”

5.在思考过程中，我总是在有限和有限之间进行比较，在无限和无限之间进行比较，也不可能另寻他途。因此我所能得到的唯一结论就是：力量就是力量，问题就是问题，意志就是意志，无限就是无限，虚空就是虚空。我无法超越这些，走得更远。

6.这有点像在数学里为求解一个方程式而得到一个恒等式。推断的

方法是正确的，然而得到的唯一答案却是a等于a， x等于x，0等于0。我关于生命意义问题的推理过程就出现了这样的问题。科学就此问题所给能出的答案无非就是一堆恒等式。

7.的确，严格遵循理性的知识，如笛卡尔的知识，都是从彻底怀疑一切、否定基于信仰的一切知识开始的，它根据理性和实验的规律重建世界。这样所得出的答案无非就是我已得到的那个答案：含混模糊、悬而未决。只有在最初，我才认为知识给出了一个肯定的答案，也就是叔本华的答案，生命是邪恶而没有意义的。但是一经深入研究那个问题，我立即意识到这个答案并不是肯定的最终答案，只是我自己想当然地这样认为。严格地说，尽管那是文人雅士们、所罗门和叔本华提出的答案，它仍然是一个模糊的恒等式：0等于0，我所面对的虚空的生命就是虚空。因此，哲学知识并没有否定什么，只是回答说它无法解决问题，因为就哲学所能及的范围，任何答案都是含混模糊的。

8.了解这一点之后，我意识到无法通过理性知识回答自己所提出的问题；理性知识所给出的答案无非就是指出：要回答这个问题，就只能以另一种方式重复问题、只能通过引入有限和无限的关系问题。我意识到，无论信仰给出的答案看上去是多么缺乏理性的谬论，它们的优势就在于，每一个答案都回答了有限和无限的关系问题，否则就根本不可能有答案。无论我以何种方式提出这个问题：“我应该如何活着？”答案永远都是：“根据上帝的旨意活着。”或者这个问题：“我的生命中有没有什么东西是真实的？”答案就会是：“永恒的折磨或永恒的福祉。”再或者这个问题：“有没有一种意义是无法被死亡所摧毁的？”答案是：“融入无限、上帝和天堂。”

9.因此除了理性知识（到此为止我一直认为那是唯一的知识）之外，我必然最终意识到，的确存在着另外一种知识——非理性的知识——为全人类所拥有。那就是信仰，人类之所以活着，就是因为他们有

信仰。此前在我看来，信仰一直是非理性的，但是我终于意识到，只有信仰，才能为人们提出的生命问题找到答案，让人们继续自己的生命。

10.理性知识最终让我意识到生命是没有意义的。我的生命骤然停止，我想自杀。当我看向四周，看向整个人类，我发现他们活着，且肯定地认为自己了解生命的意义。我又低头看了看我自己，只有当我知道了生命的意义，我才能够继续活着。在我看来，和其他人一样，信仰让我们的生命拥有了意义。有了信仰，我们才有可能继续生活。

11.我进而看向其他国家的人们，看向我同时代的人和先辈们，并有了同样的发现。有生命的地方就必然有信仰。自开天辟地以来，正是信仰赋予了人类生存的可能。所有信仰最基本的方面永远都是一样的，无论在哪个国家。

12.无论信仰给出的答案如何，无论是哪一种信仰，或者信仰所要回答的问题是谁提出的，这些问题永远为人类有限的存在提供了一种无限的意义，那种意义无法被苦难、匮乏或死亡所摧毁。这表明，只有在信仰中，我们才能找到意义，才能继续生活。我意识到，信仰最根本的意义不仅仅在于“表现从没有人看见过的东西”，也不仅仅在于神圣的启示（这只是在描述信仰存在的一种迹象）；它也不仅仅表述了人与上帝的关系（我们必须先定义信仰，之后才能定义上帝，而不能通过信仰定义上帝）；也不仅仅是人全盘接受自己听到的东西，尽管一直以来，人们普遍觉得信仰就是如此。信仰是一种有关人类生命意义的知识，信仰的结果就是，人不会自杀，而只能活着。信仰是生命的力量。如果一个人活着，他就必须有所信，如果他不相信有什么让他必须活着，他就不会继续活着了。如果他看不到也不能够理解有限的虚幻，他就会信仰有限，如果他理解了有限的虚幻，他就一定会信仰无限。没有信仰，人类就不可能生存。

13.我回忆起自己之前在内心深处思考的整个过程，不禁吓出一身

冷汗。如今我清楚地意识到，人们要想生存，要么根本意识不到无限的存在，要么能够以某种方式对生命的意义作出解释，使有限等同于无限。我虽作出了这样的解释，但在我相信有限时，这个解释对我毫无用处，于是我开始通过理性来验证它。根据理性，我之前的解释全都烟消云散。后来我不再信仰有限，便开始在理性的基础上，通过我的所知去构建一个可能赋予生命意义的解释，但我最终一无所获。结合最伟大的人类智慧，我得出了0等于0的结论，这样的结论让我无比震惊，且当时的我觉得，根本不可能有其他结论。

14.在实验科学中寻找答案意味着什么呢？我希望了解自己为什么活着，于是去研究存在于我本身之外的一切。我显然能够获得许多发现，却没有一个是我需要的。

15.在哲学领域寻找答案又意味着什么呢？我研究了那些自己也陷入过同样困境的人们的思想，他们对于“我们为什么活着”这个问题没有给出任何答案。显然，我在这里得到的发现无非就是我已经知道，“我们不可能了解世界”。

16.我是什么？是无限中的一部分。问题就在这几个字当中。人们难道最近才看出这个问题吗？有没有可能，在我之前根本没有人提出过这个问题，尽管它如此简单，乃至一个无知的懵懂少年也会在不经意间顺嘴说出？

17.当然不是，事实上自从人类在地球上生存的那一天起，这个问题就已经被提出了。一开始，通过将有限等同于有限来解决这个问题显然不会令人满意，将无限等同于无限也是一样。自古以来，人类就一直力图表达有限与无限之间的关系。

18.所有我们用来比较有限和无限，借此理解生命的概念，或者上帝、自由和良善等概念，人们都力图用逻辑进行验证，但它们根本经不

起理性的批判。

19.多么可怕，或者多么可笑，我们这样骄傲和自负，像淘气的孩子，拆开手表，去除发条，把手表变成玩具，然后看到手表不走了，竟然还现出一脸的惊奇。

20.我们必须解决有限和无限之间的矛盾，这是非常重要的，这才是生命问题的答案，找到了这个答案，我们才有可能活着。无论在哪里，所有的人给出的解决方案，无非是那个亘古流传的答案，那是一个非常难以理解的答案，我们自己根本不可能得出类似的答案。于是人们随意推翻这个答案，之后又再次提出那个人人必须面对的问题，而对这个问题，我们又没有自己的答案。

21.万能的上帝、灵魂的圣洁、上帝与俗务的关系、道德上的善恶，所有这些概念都是在历史中，通过我们看不见的人类生活得出的概念。没有这些概念，就根本不可能有生命，也不可能有我自己的存在，然而我竟然轻易否定了人类所有的努力，妄图单枪匹马，以我自己的方式将一切推倒重来。

22.当时我并没有想到这些，但是这些思想已经在我的头脑中生根发芽了。我意识到：（1）尽管叔本华、所罗门和我都是智者，却都犯下了愚蠢的错误——我们认为生命是邪恶的，却仍然继续活着。这显然是愚蠢的，因为如果生命毫无意义，我又这般喜爱理性，那么我必然要摧毁生命，这样就没有谁能够否认我的结论了。（2）我们所有的论证构成了一个恶性循环，就像一个没有附着在马车上的轮子。无论我们没日没夜地进行了多么严谨的思考，都找不到问题的答案，因为0永远等于0，因此，一定是我们使用的方法错了。（3）人类最深邃的智慧存在于信仰给出的答案中，我自己没有权力基于理性否定那些答案，毕竟，那些才是唯一解答了生命问题的答案。

第十章

1.我虽看到了这一点，但问题并没有因此而变得简单。

2.现在我开始准备接受信仰，只要它不要求我直接否定理性。如今看来，这未免虚伪。因此我开始研读关于佛教和伊斯兰教的书籍，当然我接触最多的还是基督教，通过基督教的著述和我周围的人们，我对它有了更深的研究。

3.我最先接触的，自然是我自己生活圈子里的信徒、有学问的人、东正教神学家、德高望重的僧侣、最新式东正教的神学家，甚至通过关于救赎的信仰来教授神学的所谓新基督教徒。我抓住这些信徒，询问他们如何信仰，又如何理解生命的意义。

4.无论我怎样宽容地接受他们的说法，避免一切争论，我仍然无法接受这些人的信仰。我发现他们所谓的信仰根本不能够对生命的意义作出任何解释，而只能使之变得模糊，他们本人根本就不是为了解答生命的问题（那个使我转向信仰的生命问题）才拥有信仰，而是出于我不知道的其他原因。

5.我记得自己当时整日受到恐惧的煎熬，害怕在这么多次满怀希望地与这类人结交之后，再次回到之前的绝望境地。他们越是精确地向我表述自己的教义，我就越清楚地看到他们的错误，直到最后我彻底绝望了，意识到自己根本不可能在他们的信仰中找到任何关于生命意义的解释。

6.我之所以放弃希望，并不完全是因为他们在表述自己的宗教信仰时，将我一直视为至宝的基督教真理与那些不必要、非理性的东西混淆

在一起，而是因为，这些人的生活和我自己一模一样，唯一的区别就是他们根本不按照其教义所表述的那些原则生活。我强烈地感觉到，他们只是在自欺欺人，和我一样，他们对生活没有什么想法，只是为活着而活着，及时行乐而已。我能够看到这一点，是因为如果他们真正了解生命的意义，能够驱散对贫困、苦难和死亡的恐惧的话，就不会害怕这些了。然而我们这个阶层的信徒们像我一样过着富足的生活，并始终力图保有和增加自己的财富和地位，对贫困、苦难和死亡充满了恐惧。和我自己以及所有非信徒一样，他们活着只是为了满足自己的欲望，这样的生活不但不比非信徒优越多少，可能还不如非信徒。

7.无论这些人怎样争辩，我都不相信他们是真正的信徒。只有当他们用行动向我证明，他们理解生命，因而不再像我一样惧怕贫困、疾病和死亡，我才可能相信他们。但我在自己生活圈子里的信徒身上看不到这些。就这样，我从没有在所谓的信徒身上看到这些，反而常常在那个圈子里的非信徒身上看到这样的做派。

8.我意识到，这些人所拥有的信仰根本不是我追求的信仰，他们的信仰并非真正的信仰，而只是享乐主义者在生活中找到的安慰而已。我知道，这种信仰即使不能成为某种安慰，或许也能够让悔过的所罗门在临死前不再为生前的所为懊恼不已，然而它完全不适合大多数人，大多数人根本没有机会将自己的快乐建立在他人的辛勤劳作之上，而不过是在谋生度日。为了生活并将生命一直继续下去，为生命注入意义，数百万人必须拥有某种全然不同的、更加真实和纯粹的信仰观。的确，让我坚信这世上一定有信仰存在的，并不是我本人抑或所罗门抑或叔本华没有自杀，而是这数百万人一直活着且依旧活在世上，生活和挣扎在所罗门和我这类人的底层。

9.我开始接近那些穷苦、朴素、没有受过教育的信仰者：虔诚香客、僧侣、教派人士和农民。这些人和我所在的生活圈子中那些伪信徒

一样，都信仰基督教。他们也在基督教真理中掺杂了大量迷信，然而不同的是，对于我的生活圈子中的信徒而言，迷信是完全不必要的。与他们的生活没有任何关系，而只是为他们提供了某种享乐主义的消遣，而对于劳动阶层的信仰者而言，迷信是他们生活中必不可少的一部分。他们无法想象没有迷信的生活，那是他们生活的必要条件。在我自己的生活圈子中，信徒们的整个生活方式与他们的信仰截然对立，而劳动阶层的信仰者们用其全部的生活方式验证了信仰赋予其生活的意义。我开始更仔细地观察这些人的生活和信仰，观察越深入，就越坚信他们的信仰才是真正的信仰，信仰是他们生命中不可或缺的元素，信仰本身就为他们的生命注入了意义，让他们的生命得以延续下去。我在自己的阶层看到的人们完全可以没有信仰地生活，一千个人中也没有一个能够坦然承认自己是真正的信徒，那些人则相反，一千个人中也很难有一个没有信仰。我在自己的生活圈子中看到的人们一生都在享乐中虚度却仍对生活充满抱怨，而那些人一生辛勤劳作，却并不像富人对生活有种种不满。我们这个阶层的人们，一旦有求而不能得便反抗和诅咒，愤恨命运的不公，那些人却能够毫无怨言地接受一切贫病和苦难，那么安然地坚信一切都是注定的，不可改变，且必然能够带来福祉。我们这些自诩为聪明智慧的人并不十分了解生命的意义，一旦面临苦难和死亡，便说那是造物主的一个恶作剧，那些人则截然相反，他们宁静地生活、无言地受苦，在走向死亡时安静平和且往往心中充满喜悦。在我们生活的圈子中，一般不会有人平静地走向死亡，人们总是对死亡充满了恐惧和绝望，那些人则截然相反，他们中很少有人因为人之将死而备受煎熬，奋力反抗并郁郁而终。这世上有数百万这样的人，他们一无所有——在所罗门和我这样的人看来那些所有是生命唯一的福祉和意义——却仍然生活得无比快乐。我将观察的目光投向更远处，看到无数生灵活过往昔，仍然在继续生活。理解生命意义的人数并非两三个抑或十来个，而是几百个、几千个、几百万个。所有的人，尽管他们的习惯、思想、教育和社会地位截然不同，却全然不似我这般无知，他们了解生命和死亡的意

义，忍受着苦难和煎熬。从生到死，他们并不觉得一切都是虚空，反而认定那是一条向善之路。

10.于是我逐渐爱上了那些人。我越深入地研究自己阅读或听说过的生者和死者的故事，就越热爱他们，也就越容易继续生活下去。像这样生活了大约两年之后，我的思想发生了巨大变化，就仿佛我一直都在等待着这一变化，又好像这种变化的根基始终深植于我的生命中。这一变化就是，我所在阶层的生活，财富和知识，不仅让我厌恶，并且失去了一切意义。我们所有的活动、讨论、科学和艺术在我眼中都变成了纯粹的放任纵容。我意识到，在这样的生活中找不到任何意义。而劳动阶层、那些创造了生命的人的活动，在我看来成了唯一真实而有意义的生活方式。我意识到，这样的生活所呈现的意义才是真理，我欣然接受这样的真理。

第十一章

1.同样是信仰，但我至今仍然记得，当我看到拥有信仰的人们的所作所为却与之背道而驰时，这些信仰让我感到多么厌恶，似乎没有任何意义。而一旦看到那些真正遵照信仰生活的人们，它又对我充满了吸引力，显得明智通达。我终于明白自己为什么一度抛弃了信仰，觉得它毫无意义，现在又全身心地接受了它，觉得它充满了意义。我终于明白，自己曾一度迷失，并且知道自己为什么会迷失。我之所以迷路，不是因为我的思想错误，而是我生活的方式是愚蠢的。我意识到，自己之所以过去看不到这一真理，与其说是被错误的思想蒙住了双眼，不如说是我的生活本身阻隔了通往真理的道路，我过去一直在竭尽全力地满足自己的各种欲望，那是纯粹享乐主义的生活。意识到自己关于生命是什么的问题，乃至关于生命充满邪恶的答案，都十分正确。唯一的错误是，那本是一个只和我自己有关的答案，我却妄图用它来解释整个人类的生命。我对自己提出的问题是：我的生命是什么；答案是，它是邪恶而毫无意义的，这完全正确，因为我沉迷于享乐的追求，的确邪恶而毫无意义，但是这样的答案只适合我自己，不适合全人类。我发现了一条真理，且随后就在《福音书》上找到了这条真理：当人在从事邪恶的行为时，他们往往更喜欢黑暗而不是光明；因为从事恶行的人憎恶光并竭力避免光，生怕自己的行为彰显于光天化日之下。我意识到，为了解生命的本质，生命首先不应该是邪恶而毫无意义的，只有这样，人们才能真正运用理性来阐述这个问题。我终于明白了自己为什么长期在这样一个显而易见的真理附近徘徊却看不到它，我终于明白，要想思考和阐述人类的生命，我们必须思考和阐述整个人类的生命，而不是少数几个寄生虫的生命。真理始终是真理，就像2×2=4一样简单直白，但我们不肯承认这样简单的真理，因为一旦承认了2×2=4，我就不得不承认自己是一

个恶人。对我来说，认为自己是一个好人要比承认2×2=4更为重要也更加必要。我开始热爱良善的人们并憎恶自己，我开始承认真理，一切便昭然若揭。

2.想象一下，一个刽子手一生都在对他人行刑，砍掉人们的头颅，一个无望的酒鬼或疯子穷其一生都生活在一间黑暗的屋子里，他虽憎恶这间黑屋，却又害怕一旦离开了黑屋，便会面临死亡——想象一下，如果这样的人问自己："生命是什么？"他们能够得到的唯一答案显然就是："生命是万恶中的大恶。"疯子的回答或许绝对正确，但那只是关于他自己生命的答案。假如我是这样一个疯子呢？假如所有拥有财富和学识的人全都是这样的疯子呢？

3.我意识到我们的确是这样一群疯子，起码我自己是个疯子。的确，造物主创造鸟儿便让它们飞上蓝天，收集食物并在树上筑巢，每当我看到鸟儿做这些事的时候，总是感到快乐和欣喜。山羊、野兔和狼来到世上就是为了寻找食物、繁衍后代、喂养幼兽，每看到它们如此行事，我总是确信它们非常快乐，它们的生命充满意义。那么人应该做什么呢？他也必须像动物们一样为生存而努力劳作，不同的是，为了生存他无法单枪匹马地劳作，他的劳作不仅仅为了他自己的生存，也为了整个人类的生存。如果人能如此行事，我确信他的生命是快乐而有意义的。而我在过去三十年有意识的生命中又做了些什么？我非但没有为整个人类的生存而劳作，甚至没有为我自己的生存而劳作。我像寄生虫那样活着，难怪当我问自己为什么活着时会得到这样的回答："不为什么。"如果人类生存的意义在于用劳作来维系生命，那么我过去三十年的生活不但没有努力维系生命，反而是在毁灭自己和他人的生命。如此一来，我得到的答案当然只能是："生命是邪恶而毫无意义的。"它的确是邪恶而毫无意义的。

4.整个世界的生命依靠的是某人的意志，我们自己乃至万事万物的

生命依靠的却是另一些人的双手。为了能够了解那种意志，我们首先必须行本分之事，满足那种意志。如果我拒绝行本分之事，就永远不可能了解我们注定的本分之事是什么，更不可能了解造物主对于整个人类乃至整个世界的安排。

5.如果一个衣衫褴褛、饥饿潦倒的乞丐被主人从十字街头带到辉煌宫殿的一隅，主人给了他食物和水，之后让他去上下移动一处手柄，显然，在弄清楚自己为什么被带至这里移动手柄之前，在弄清楚这处宫殿的结构是否合理之前，乞丐必须先顺从主人的意志，移动手柄。移动手柄之后，他会看到那是一个水泵装置，水泵从井里抽出水，水流入花园。之后他又被带离宫殿的这一隅，得到了另一份工作，他在那里采摘水果，并顺从主人的意志行事。随着他的任务越来越高级，他会越来越了解整座宫殿的结构并参与其中，他永远不会停止询问自己在哪里，也永远不会责怪那个把他带到宫殿来的主人。

6.同样，那些头脑简单、行为朴素、没有受过教育的劳动阶级——我们总是称之为一群乌合之众——就顺从着主人的意志，从不责怪主人把他们带到这个世界上。而我们这些所谓的智者，吃了主人的食物却不按主人的吩咐做事，反而聚在一堆儿争论："聪明如我们，怎么能做移动手柄这样愚蠢的活儿呢？"于是我们苦思冥想，认定要么是主人愚蠢，要么根本没有什么主人，我们是世上唯一的智者。只是后来，我们会觉得自己一无所长，必须以某种方式逃避自己，才能从这种苦恼中解脱出来。

第十二章

1.意识到理性知识的错误后，我更容易摆脱徒劳理论解释的诱惑。因为坚信有关真理的知识只能从生命中获得，我开始怀疑自己以往生活方式的价值。让我获救的，是我终于将自己从闭塞孤立的生活中解脱出来，看到朴素的劳动阶层真实的生活，并意识到只有这种生活才是真实的生活。我意识到如果我希望了解生命及其意义，就必须过上真实的生活，而不是做一个寄生虫；既然我已经接受了真正的人类所赋予生命的意义——他们正是真实生活的一部分——我就必须阐述它、验证它。

2.那时我的经历是这样的：在一整年的时间里，几乎每一分钟我都在问自己，是不是应该用一根绳子或一颗子弹结束自己的生命。就在我思考着上述想法和观察结果时，我的心灵却在经受着巨大的折磨。至于这种折磨是什么，我只能称之为“对上帝的求索”。

3.我觉得这种对上帝的求索并不是一种拷问，而是一种情感上的诉求，因为它并非来源于我的头脑，事实上它与思考的过程恰恰相反，而是来自于我的心灵。那是一种被遗弃的恐惧和孤独之感，所有那一切对我而言都非常陌生，另一方面我又隐隐感受到希望——有人能够给我以帮助的希望。

4.尽管我坚信无法证实上帝的存在（康德已经向我证明了这一点，我完全理解那是无法证明的），我仍然在寻找上帝，希望能够找到他。我重拾原有的祈祷习惯，开始对着那个我一直在找寻却无法看到的上帝祈祷。我在自己的头脑中重温了康德和叔本华关于无法证明上帝存在的争论，并开始驳斥那些争论。我对自己说，原因是与时空并不在同一个思考范畴。如果我存在，那就一定有一个存在的理由，这个理由的存在

也有一个理由。万事万物存在的理由就是我们所谓的上帝。我执着于这一想法，全身心地承认这一理由的存在。一旦我承认了在自己之上还有一个强大的力量存在，我立刻感受到了生命的可能性。然而我问自己：“这个理由、这个力量究竟是什么？应该如何看待它？我为何应该将这种力量与上帝联系起来？”而浮现在我脑海中的只有那些熟悉的答案：“他乃造物主，无所不在。”这些答案无法让我满意，我觉得自己内心仍然缺乏生存所必需的力量。我陷入绝望，开始对着那个我苦苦追寻的人祈祷，希望他能够帮助我。我越是祈祷，就越清楚他根本听不到我的祈祷，事实上我根本无处求助。我满心悲伤地发现，在我的上方根本没有那个力量，没有上帝，我哭喊道：“主啊，发发慈悲吧。救救我！哦，主啊，请在冥冥中给我以指引吧！”然而没有人发慈悲帮助我，我觉得生命就此走向了尽头。

5.然而我总是一再地从不同的角度得出同样的结论，那就是我来到这个世界上一定有着某种理由、某种原因或某种意义。我不可能像自己感觉的那样，是一只从鸟巢掉落到地上的羽翼未丰的鸟儿。如果我真的像幼鸟那样哭着落在了草丛中，那是因为我知道妈妈把我带到这个世界上，给我温暖、喂我食物，全身心地爱着我。但是妈妈，她在哪里？如果我是一只被抛弃的幼鸟，又是谁将我抛弃？我无法无视这样的事实，那就是给我生命的人一定是爱我的。此人是谁？同样，又是上帝。

6.“上帝知道，也看到了我的追寻、挣扎和悲苦。他的的确确是存在的。”我对自己说。每一次，在我承认这一点的那一瞬间，内心就会燃起生命之光，立刻感受到活着的可能和乐趣。不过同样，一旦承认了上帝的存在，我就开始继续探求我与他的关系；同样，我所追寻的那个上帝，这个世界的造物主，总是三位一体的，他将自己的儿子派到人间，那是我们的救世主。同样，这位将我和世界区分开来的上帝将在我的眼前冰融消逝，让我再次感到眼前虚空一片，体内燃起的那一点生命之光也瞬间熄灭了。我陷入绝望，感到除了自杀之外已经别无出路。最糟的

是，我觉得自己连自杀的勇气也没有了。

7.无数次，我的情绪在一瞬间从欢乐和热情转为绝望，就在那一瞬间，我感到自己根本无法继续生存下去。

8.我还记得在一个早春，我独自一人来到森林。我在那里倾听着，集中精力思考着自己过去三年一直有意识地思考的问题。我还在寻找上帝。

9.“那么好吧，”我自言自语道，“那就是说，世界上根本没有上帝，上帝只是我想象出来的，唯一真实的是我自己的生命。没有上帝，也不可能出现奇迹证明上帝的存在，因为那只是我的想象，既然是想象，就不是理性的。”

10.“那么我苦苦求索的有关上帝的想法呢？”我问自己，“这个想法到底源于何处？”同样，每当我这样想问题的时候，体内就升腾起一种欢乐的情绪，周围的一切有了生机，充满意义。然而快乐无法持续很久。我的思绪会继续。“关于上帝的想法并非上帝本身，”我对自己说，“关于上帝的想法只是我随心所欲杜撰的。我求索的不是这个，我求索的是那个将生命带到世间的上帝。”我自己体内和周围万物的生机和生命力再度熄灭，我又想自杀了。

11.但是我随即停住，仔细审视了自己，以及体内的情绪。我记得有几百次，生命之光从我的体内熄灭之后又再度燃起，我只有在坚信上帝的时候才是活着的，那时，和现在一样，我对自己说：我只有相信上帝才能继续活着。如果不再相信他，或者忘记他，我就会立刻死去。这些死亡而后重生的过程究竟是什么呢？显然，一旦我不再相信上帝的存在，就无法继续生活，如果没有心底里隐约出现的能够找到上帝的希望，我在很久以前就已经自杀了。我只有清楚地意识到上帝并寻找他的时候才能存活。“那么你寻找的究竟是什么呢？”一个声音在我的体内高

喊道。“那就是上帝！没有他，人类就不可能继续存活。了解上帝和存活是同一回事，上帝就是生命。”

12.“活着就是为了寻找上帝，如果没有上帝，世上就没有生命！”刹那间，我发现自己的体内和周围的万事万物燃起了比以往任何时候都更加强烈的生命之光，从那以后，这一束光辉就再也没有熄灭。

13.就这样，我没有自杀，我得救了。我无法确切地说出这样的变化是什么时候发生、如何发生的。就在我体内的生命力不为人知地逐渐熄灭时，就在我开始感受到生命的不可能性、感受到生命已经在我的体内静止的时候。我需要自杀时，这种生命力同样不为人知地在我的体内逐渐悄然升起。奇怪的是，重新回到我体内的生命力并非什么新鲜事物，而恰是我年轻时吸引过我的东西。我重新捡拾起自己童年和青年时代视之为生命的一部分的东西。我重新相信那种给予我生命并要求我顺从的意志的存在。我重新认为，生命中最最重要的目标乃是完善自我，也就是顺从这种意志生活。我重新坚信，我可以通过一直潜伏于自己体内的某种事物证明这种意志的存在，那是人类在很久以前就已经找到，用于指引前路的东西。换句话说，我开始重新相信上帝，相信道德完善、相信那种赋予生命意义的传统。唯一的区别是，过去我是无意识地接受这一切，而如今我知道，没有这样的信仰，我便无法生活下去。

14.我当时的情况基本上可以这样描述：我在自己未知的情况下，登上了一条已经启航驶向未知的彼岸的小船。有人给我指出彼岸的方向，将船桨塞入我这个毫无经验的舵手手中，接着就抛下我，留下我独自一人。我尽自己最大的努力划桨前行，然而我越是朝着激流的中心划去，湍急的河流就越把我推向离目标更远的地方。我开始遇到越来越多和我一样的划手，他们也正在被湍流带离目标。有些孤独的划手继续驾舟航行，有些人则早已扔掉了双桨。河里有大一些的船只和满载乘客的大轮船，有些人仍在与激流抗争，其他人早已随波逐流。我看着那些顺

水而下的漂浮的小船，发现自己越是奋力划桨，就越是忘记了自己曾一度知晓的方向。就在激流的中央，在许多顺流而下的小船和巨轮中间，我迷失了方向，也丢掉了手中的双桨。四面八方的人们都被船帆或船桨带着顺流而下，他们欢乐地高喊着，安慰着我和他们自己：“本来就只有这一个方向！”我相信了他们，与他们一起顺流直下。我随波逐流了很长时间，几乎已经能够听到那注定要将我毁灭的湍滩，看到了已经被它们撞成碎片的小船。就在那时我忽然醒悟过来。很长一段时间，我不知道自己怎么了。除了正在朝之疾驶而去的毁灭之外，我看不到前路上还有其他希望，但是我害怕毁灭，举目四望，竟也看不到任何救赎，茫然不知所措。但是回头望去，我看到无数船只虽无法停下却坚持不懈地与激流抗争，我忽然忆起自己的船桨和彼岸的方向，也开始挣扎着逆流而上，向彼岸划去。

15.彼岸就是上帝，方向就是传说，船桨就是让我向着彼岸划去与上帝团聚的自由。就这样，我心底里重新拥有了生命的力量，我又开始了新的生活。

第十三章

1.我唾弃自己所在阶层的生活，因为我已经意识到，那根本不是生活而只是像生活而已，我们赖以生活的奢华使我们根本无法了解生活。我知道，要想真正了解生活，必须了解的不是我们这些少数寄生虫的生活，而是朴素的劳动阶层的生活，以及他们赋予生活的意义。我周围的普通劳动阶层就是俄国人民，我将目光转向他们，开始观察他们赋予生活的意义。我试着这样描述这种意义：每个人通过上帝的意志来到这个世界上；上帝创造了人，每个人自行选择毁灭或拯救自己的灵魂。人生的目的就在于拯救自己的灵魂；为了拯救自己的灵魂，人必须按照上帝的旨意生活。

2.为了按照上帝的旨意生活，人必须放弃生命中所有的享受，劳作、谦卑、经受苦难而心怀仁慈。这就是人们从所有宗教教义中获得的意义，它由一代代牧师继承下来并教给他们，那些传统已经构成了他们生命的一部分，他们用故事、谚语和传说来表达这样的意义。现在，我清楚地看到了它，并全身心地接受这样的意义。然而，除了根植于劳动人民信仰中的这种意义之外，还有许多与我生活于其中的非教派人士密不可分的东西，令我感到厌恶和不可理解：圣礼圣餐、教会仪式、斋戒，以及在各种遗迹和肖像前面鞠躬等。人们无法将一件事和另一件事彻底区分开来，我也一样不能。无论我觉得人们的信仰中有多少奇怪的东西，仍然选择了全盘接受，参加各种仪式，每天早晚祈祷、斋戒、领圣餐。生平第一次，我的理性没有提出任何异议。之前让我觉得全无可能的事情如今却没有什么可反驳的——我如今对信仰的态度与以往完全不同了。从前，生命似乎充满了意义，信仰似乎就是人们企图主观证实各种完全没有必要也没有理性的命题，这些命题与生命本身毫无关系。那时我问自己，这些命题究竟有什么意义？我坚信它们没有任何意义，

就将它们抛在一边。现在则相反，我非常清楚地知道，生命没有也不可能有任何意义。不仅信仰的教条在我看来不再是完全没有必要的东西，我也经由无可辩驳的经验而坚信，只有那些信条才能赋予生命意义。从前，我觉得那些东西就是与我毫无关系的天书，而现在，即使我知道自己仍然不能理解，却明白其中蕴含着意义，并告诫自己必须学着了解那些意义。

3.我作了下面的推论。我对自己说，与人及其理性思维能力一样，对信仰的认知也有一个神秘的来源。那个来源就是上帝，是人类头脑和身体的源头。就像我的身体是上帝给我的一样，我的理性和对生命的理解也得自于上帝，因此这种理解发展的各个阶段都是真实存在的。人们真诚信仰的东西必然是真实的，它可能有各种不同的表达方式，但绝不可能是谎言。因此如果我认为它是个谎言，那只能表明我未能理解它的深意。我还对自己说：任何信仰的关键就在于，它能够让生命拥有意义，这种意义不会随着死亡而消失。无论是在奢靡生活中濒死的沙皇，还是终日劳作、贫病交加的老农奴，抑或顽童智叟、无知老妪、欢喜快活的少妇或充满激情的少年，信仰必然会为他们解答有关生命的问题。因此，如果要回答生活境遇截然不同、所受教育大相径庭的人们提出的问题，如果关于那个永恒的问题——我为什么活着？我生命的目的是什么？——只有一种答案，这个答案，尽管基本上都是同一个答案，也必然会有许多不同的表达方式。这个答案越是精辟独到、真实深刻，它的表达方式就越显得生疏和古怪，全看每个人所受的教育和当时的境况如何。然而，这些争论或许能够证明许多在我看来非常奇怪的宗教仪式都有其合理性，却仍不足以让我作出自己所怀疑的行为，特别是在信仰这个业已成为我生命中唯一关注的问题上。我全身心地希望自己能够和那些忠诚顺从地行使仪式的人们融合在一起，然而我不能。我觉得那么做无异于对自己撒谎，嘲弄自己认为神圣的东西。不过就在这时，一些新的俄国神学成果帮助了我。

4.根据这些神学家的解释，信仰的基本教条是教会的不谬性。遵循这一教条，教会所教授知识和教义的真实性都不言自明。教会作为信徒的集合体，以爱的名义将所有信徒团结在一起，因此它拥有真理，成为我们信仰的基础。我对自己说，宗教真理无法通过单个人的努力获得，只能是所有人以爱的名义团结在一起之后才能够得到启示的。为了获得真理，人们不能彼此分离；因为不能够分离，人们就必须爱，必须和那些与我们意见不一致的人和平相处。真理体现为爱，因此，如果你不遵从教会的仪式，就破坏了爱的原则。破坏了爱的原则，就不大可能再了解真理了。当时的我看不到这一论证过程的谬误，看不到以爱之名团结在一起虽然可以启示大爱、却无法启示神圣的真理，就像《尼西亚信经》[11]中用确切的语词表达的那些神圣的真理。我没有看到，爱永远不足以将真理明确表达为一种必然的团结状态。当时的我看不到这一谬误，也正是因此，我能够在理解有限的情况下接受和服从东正教的许多仪式。当时我正试图彻底放弃所有争论和辩驳，尽可能合理地解释教会的所有信条，尽管其中有些与我的想法矛盾。

在顺从这些教会仪式的过程中，我压制了自己的理性，全盘接受一个全人类共有的传统。我将自己与祖先和我所钟爱的人、与父母和祖父母联系在一起。他们，以及他们的前人都曾信仰过、生活过，是他们将我带到这个世界上。我成为自己如此深爱的无数人中的一员。这些行为本身没有任何错误（“错误”是指沉迷于欲望），每天早上起来便向教堂走去，我觉得自己在做一件向善之事，只要那样我就能压制自己骄傲的头脑而牺牲肉体的舒适享受，和我的祖先和同辈人团结在一起，寻找到生命的意义。

我怀着同样的目标领圣餐、每天祈祷、划十字、屈单膝、斋戒。无论这些献身宗教的行为多么微不足道，它们毕竟是以向善为目的。无论在家里还是在教堂，我领圣餐、斋戒、每天做几个小时的祈祷。在倾听教堂布道时，我每听到一个字都会停下来思考一下，试图赋予它意义。

在圣餐仪式上，我听起来最有意义的话是：“在团结中热爱彼此吧。”但接下来我听到这样的话就不再思索了：“我们相信圣父、圣子和圣灵。”因为我无法理解这句话的含义。

第十四章

[12]当时的我迫切需要信仰才能继续生存下去，因此潜意识里不自觉地无视宗教信条中的矛盾和含混之处，但是总有一些仪式是无法为其赋予意义的。如果说我日益明白了启应祷文1中最重要的内容，甚至即便我勉强诠释出以下祷文：“记住我们万能的圣母和一切圣徒，把我们自己、彼此和全体的生命都奉献给基督，我们的主。”即便我诠释出为沙皇及其家人祈祷的那些不断重复的祷词（因为他们比其他更容易受到诱惑，因而更需要祈祷），以及为敌人和对手所做的祷词（因为他们的邪恶行径），事实上这些和其他祷词——例如《智天使颂歌》《威武的将军》以及圣餐礼的一整套仪式——中即使不是全部，也有近三分之二没有任何意义，或者让我觉得赋予其意义无异于说谎，因而将破坏我和上帝之间的关系，那样我就不可能继续信仰了。

2.庆祝主要的节日也让我有同感。守安息日，即用一星期中的一天与上帝交流，这我能够理解。但最重要的节日都是为了纪念耶稣复活，而对于复活的真实性，我既无法想象也无法理解。每周要庆祝的那一天正是以“复活”命名的[13]。每逢这个日子都要举行圣餐礼，对此我完全不理解。除了圣诞节之外，其他十二个重大节日都是纪念奇迹的——为了不至于否定它们，我尽量不去思考其内容：耶稣升天日、圣灵降临日、主现日、圣母节等。在庆祝这些节日时，原本觉得无足轻重的东西硬是要赋予重要意义，每到此时我要么杜撰出一个解释让自己心安理得，要么干脆闭上眼睛，对引发我怀疑的东西视而不见。

3.在参加最常见也被视为最重要的圣礼——洗礼和圣餐——时，这种感觉比任何时候都更加强烈。我在这些仪式上遭遇的不是不可理解的东西，而是完全可以理解的行为：在我看来这些行为充满诱惑，于是我

陷入了两难境地——要么否定，要么撒谎。

4.我永远忘不了自己在多年以后第一次受领圣餐时的痛苦感受。仪式、牧师、祈祷词的念法，这些我统统都能理解，并让我不无欢喜地意识到，我正在逐渐接近生命的意义。我认为圣餐本身就是纪念耶稣基督的行为，它象征着净化原罪并全盘接受耶稣基督的教义。如果说这种解释难免牵强，起码我当时并没有注意到这一点。当我在一个简朴而谨慎的司祭面前俯首听命之时，我觉得自己抖掉了灵魂上的尘土，忏悔了所有的罪过，这让我非常快乐，能够在思想上接近写出规范祷文的教父们的远大抱负，与那些曾经生活过、有过信仰的先辈比肩并进，让我非常快乐，以至于我根本没有注意自己的解释有牵强附会之嫌。然而，当我走近圣像屏的中门，神父请我重复自己的信仰，要我承认自己即将下咽的其实是肉体和血的时候，我的心脏开始痛苦得痉挛。那远远不是什么虚伪的调子，那是一个显然从不知何为信仰的人对我提出的残酷要求。

5.我如今可以允许自己承认那是一个残酷的要求了，但是当时我并不这样想，我只是觉得非常难过。我已经不再年轻，年轻时我觉得生命中的一切条理清晰、易于理解。之所以皈依信仰，就是因为我只能在生命中看到毁灭，除此之外一无所获。因此，那时的我不可能放弃信仰，于是我屈服了。我发现自己的灵魂深处有一种感觉能够帮助我忍受那样的残酷，就是自我贬低和谦卑。我俯首听命，吞下了肉体和血而没有觉得那是一种亵渎，因为我是那般渴望信仰，但是我的心灵仍然遭受了打击。既然已经事先知道了结果，我自然无法再次前往受苦了。

6.然而我继续遵行着教会的仪式，且依然相信自己遵行的信条中蕴涵着真理。之后在我身上发生了一件当时看来十分古怪如今却一目了然的事情。

7.就在我倾听一个没有文化的农民信仰者讲述上帝、宗教、生命和救赎时，我突然知晓了信仰的意义。我于是开始接近那些普通人，倾听

他们关于生命和宗教的争论，也越来越接近真理。在我阅读《东正教圣徒传略汇编》[14]和《训诫集》[15]的时候也是一样，这些后来成为我最喜欢的读物。不去管那些神迹（姑且认为他们只是表达思想的故事而已），这些读物向我揭示了生命的意义。书中有大马卡里传、约瑟夫王子传（即佛的一生），也有金口约翰[16]的故事、井中旅人的故事、拾金修士的故事、税吏彼得的故事，还有殉教的圣徒传，所有这些人一致声称，死亡并不排斥生命。还有一些关于不识字而愚昧无知的人们得救的故事，尽管他们根本不知道教会的教义。

8.然而只要和那些有学问的信徒在一起，或阅读他们的著述，我就会在心底里对他们的论证产生怀疑和不满，并认定他们夸大其词。我觉得自己越是深入了解他们的论说，就越是远离真理而走向绝望。

第十五章

1.我时常嫉妒那些没上过学、大字识不得几个的农民。那些在我看来显然是废话的冗长教条，他们却觉得正确得无可挑剔。他们接受这些教条、信仰真理，我也信仰真理，但我这个可怜的家伙非常清楚，我们信仰的真理中盘根错节地掺杂着谬误，我无法接受这样的真理。

2.这样的生活大概持续了三年，起初我只是平静地一点一点地接受真理，凭借自己的嗅觉找到最明确的方向，因而这些细节并没有引起我太多注意。那时当我遇到什么无法理解的事物时，就会自言自语道：“我有罪，我是个傻瓜。”可随着我研习的真理越来越多，它们逐渐成为我生命的基石，这些令人头疼的障碍就变得越发难以逾越，未曾理解和永远无法理解之间的界限也越来越分明，除非我撒谎，自欺欺人。

3.尽管深受这些疑虑和痛苦的折磨，我仍然信仰东正教。但有关生命的问题一次次浮现在眼前，必须给予解答。教会关于这些问题的教规有悖于我赖以生存的信仰基础，这最终迫使我彻底断绝了与东正教的联系。首先，也是最重要的一点，这些问题关系到东正教如何看待其他教派，譬如天主教和所谓的分裂教派。那时由于对宗教颇有兴趣，我接触到众多教派的信徒，譬如天主教徒、清教徒、旧礼仪派[17]教徒、莫洛肯派[18]教徒，等等。其中不乏品德高尚而虔诚信教的人，我希望自己能够成为他们中的一员。可现实又怎样呢？我听到的教义许诺信仰与博爱可以团结众人，可正是这一教义，却通过它最高级别的代言人告诉我，这都是些误入歧途的人，他们生命的动力是魔鬼的诱惑，我们才可能拥有唯一的真理。我也看到与东正教教义稍有不同便被斥为异端邪说，这和天主教把东正教徒斥为离经叛道者没有任何分别。我还看到无论东正教如何貌似宽容，他们对所有异教徒——参拜不同圣物、念诵不

同祷词的教徒——无不充满敌意。世事注定如此，因为，首先向他人宣告“你的信仰是错误的，我的才正确”太过残忍；其次，对于热爱子女和兄长的人来说，倘若有人想说服他挚爱之人皈依一门错误的信仰，他难免会对此人充满敌意。一个人拥有的神学知识越多，这份敌意就越深。那么如果说真理就蕴含在以爱为纽带的众生团结之中，神学岂不是在阻止它本应该倡导的东西？这个发现令我震惊。

4.在一国多教的国家，我们这些受过教育的人见识过天主教否定东正教和新教、东正教否定天主教和新教、新教否定天主教和东正教时的那种轻慢不屑、自以为是和不可理喻，显然更容易受到这种诱惑。而旧礼仪派、俄国福音派、震颤派[19]以及所有其他教派对异己教派也都采取极为类似的态度。以致起初，这种诱惑明显得令我非常困惑。我告诉自己：“不对，事情绝对不是看上去这么简单。”显然是这样，人们毕竟看不到，假如两种信念互相抵触，那么两派都不可能拥有构成信仰的真理——真理是唯一的。一定还有什么东西我没有看到，是的，这些一定是可以解释的。我确信如此，便开始寻求这一解释，并为此饱读典籍、虚心讨教。但是我最终也未能找到什么合理的解释，无非是各执一词：苏姆斯基骠骑兵团[20]认为他们是世界上最强的兵团，而黄色枪骑兵团[21]觉得他们才是最棒的。不同教派的神父通过其最优秀的代言人所能告诉我的，就是他们坚信自己是拥有真理的一方，而其他人都背离了真理，他们只能为这些人祈祷，仅此而已。我拜见了不少大修道院院长、主教、长老和苦行修士，却没有一个人试着向我阐明这个问题。只有一个人给我作了解释，但他的解释让我以后再也没有提过这个问题。

5.我先前说过，任何非信徒在皈依信仰时（我们的子女也包括在内）首先会问的问题是：为什么真理不在路德教或天主教那里，而只有在东正教的教义中才能找到？事实上新教和天主教也同样确信自己的信仰才是唯一的真理，这一点想必受过中等教育的人都会知道，不了解历史的农民自然无从知晓。史实不足为信——各教派均已出于各自利益篡

改了历史。如此一来，如我之前提到的，像真正信仰的人那样，从一个更高的层面来理解宗教教义，使得各种教派之间的分歧大而化小、小而化无何尝不可？沿着旧礼仪派走过的道路继续追求我们的信仰又岂是天大的难事？他们强调说，他们在胸前画十字的顺序、赞美诗的内容、围绕圣坛的圣礼统统与我们不同。但我们的观点是：你们信仰尼西亚信经[22]七大圣事[23]，我们也一样。让我们在这一点上保持一致，其余的部分保持各自的传统好了。如此我们便可以忽视无关紧要的分歧，通过信仰中最关键的方面团结在一起。我们完全可以告诉天主教徒：关键是你们也信仰这个，信仰那个，至于圣灵是自圣父发出还是同时自圣子发出、是否应该坚持罗马教皇的最高领导之类的问题，大家可以仁者见仁，智者见智。同理，我们又何尝不能与新教徒说同样的话，就更为重要的问题达成一致呢？我就此提议请教一个人，他也赞同我的观点，但同时告诉我说如果作出这样的让步，必定招致宗教权威们的批判。因为这样做偏离了先辈们的信仰，并将导致教派内部的分裂。而神职人员的使命就是坚守阵地，确保先辈们代代相传的希腊东正教信仰纯洁而不受侵犯。

6.这么一讲我全都明白了。我追求的是信仰，是一种驱使生命不断向前的力量，而他们追求的却是如何以世人眼中最好的方式完成人类必尽的某些义务。他们以世俗的方式来履行这些世俗的义务。无论他们如何夸夸其谈，炫耀自己对那些迷路的兄弟充满同情，炫耀自己为那些来到万能的主面前的人们虔诚祷告，在履行世俗的义务时总是不可避免地要使用武力，这一点不会随着时间的流逝而有任何改变。如果两种宗教都认为己方拥有真理而对方只是谎言，那么为了让兄弟们皈依真理，他们一定会宣讲己方的教义。如果坚信自己真理在握的教会有经验不足的教众受到蛊惑而相信了错误的教义，那么教会将别无选择，只能焚烧书籍，并将那个误导己派教众的害群之马流放他乡。在东正教会的眼中，如果目的是把天主的恩宠经由教会施予领受的人。那么，一个教会成员经过谬误之火的毒害，在性命攸关的问题——信仰问题上误导教众，此

人面临的该是怎样的惩罚？砍头、囚禁。除此之外呢？

在沙皇阿列克谢·米哈伊洛维奇[24]统治时期，他们被绑在木桩上活活烧死，这也是当时最残酷的刑罚。时至今日，这类犯人将被单独囚禁，不得与他人接触，也堪称当代酷刑之首了。当我转而关注那些宗教名义下的所作所为时，不由得毛骨悚然，几近要摒弃东正教。更令我难以接受的，是东正教在战争与死刑问题上的立场。

7.那时，俄国正处于战火硝烟之中，俄国人正在以基督仁爱的名义屠杀自己的同胞。我们没有任何理由不思考这个问题，也没有办法回避这样的事实——杀戮是邪恶的，有悖于任何信仰的最基本原则。然而教堂里众人祈祷祝福我们的士兵在战场上得胜，宗教导师们认为它正是信仰的结果，接受这样的杀戮。这些不仅仅发生在战乱年代，在战后那些艰难岁月，我也曾亲眼目睹教会成员，包括牧师、僧侣和修士纵容屠杀手无寸铁的迷失青年的行为。当我注意到这些口口声声基督仁爱的教徒的所作所为时，我不禁不寒而栗。

第十六章

1.从那时起，我就再也没有疑虑，深信自己信奉的教义并非全是真理。不过我年轻时总说，所有的宗教教义都是谎言，后来不那么讲了。作为整体的人类，无疑掌握着真理，否则他们也不会存活至今。况且，如今我接触到这一真理，它已经成为我生活的精神依靠，我也感受到了它的真实性。但我同样确信它本身也有谬误。此前一直令我厌恶的东西如此清晰地呈现在我面前。尽管我知道自己深感厌恶的这一堆谎言在农民那里并没有在教会代言人那里体现得更为明显，可我仍然能够看到，即使普通人的信仰也是真理与谬误并存。

2.然而这些谬误是从哪里来的，真理又究竟来自何方？谬误和真理都是由所谓的教会传承下来的。但谬误和真理也都存在于传统中，存在于所谓的神圣传统以及《圣经》的章节里。

3.无论我喜欢与否，我开始研究和考察《圣经》和这些传统——考察的过程至今回想起来仍犹如噩梦一般。

4.我当日转而研究的那门神学曾遭到自己的蔑视，我曾经觉得它的存在全无必要。最初它给我的印象不过是一堆毫无意义的废话，那时我身边充溢着生命的启示，我觉得生命的道路明晰且充满意义。如今我很高兴自己能够抛弃那些不利于身心健康的想法，但对具体的做法又深感迷茫。我曾获得启示的生命的一重意义恰在于这种宗教信条，或者至少可以说二者密不可分。无论在我那观念陈旧又意志薄弱的头脑看来，这种意义显得多么牵强，它毕竟是我获得救赎的唯一希望。为了理解这一意义，我必须细心严谨地对它进行考察，尽管其理解方法与科学命题截然不同。我知道宗教知识的性质极为特殊，因而我没有、不能也不应该

试图找到能解万物之谜的答案。我知道这样的答案，就好比解释万物起源，只能是永久的秘密。但我希望自己的理解方式能够带我走向那些永恒的不解之谜。我希望自己明白，所有的不解之谜之所以无解，不是因为我的智力希望寻求解释的需求是错误的（这些需求并没有错，否则我将对世界一无所知），而是因为我能够意识到自己的智力有局限性。我希望通过自己的理解方式认识，所有的不解之谜呈现在我面前时便注定无解，而不是我有义务去相信它们的无解。

5.教义之中蕴含真理，对此我深信不疑，但我也同样确信这些教义之中夹杂着谬误，我必须弄清楚哪些是真理，哪些是谬误，将两者区分开来。于是我着手进行这样的研究。我在教义中发现的谬误和真理以及随后得出的结论都出现在本文后面的章节中，如果有人觉得它们有所启示，或许会在某年某地得以出版。

6.以上文字写于三年前。

7.前几天，我重读已经付梓的这部分内容，不由得思绪翻滚，历历往事仿佛就在眼前，恍惚间如入梦境。这个梦境以浓缩的形式向我展示了自己所经历和描述过的一切，因此我觉得对我有所了解的人，描述一下这个梦境会带你们重温并更加清楚和连贯地看到我用这么长的篇幅不厌其烦地讲述的东西。那个梦境是这样的：我看到自己躺在一张床上，谈不上舒服也谈不上不舒服，就是仰面躺着。但我开始思考自己这样躺着到底舒服不舒服。时间一长，两条腿似乎感觉有点别扭，不知道是因为我的腿太短了还是它们压根儿不一般长。我调整了一下腿的位置，同时开始思考自己平躺的姿势以及身下垫着什么东西，这都是刚刚才开始思考的问题。看了看床，我发现自己躺在一些由绳索编织的吊带上，吊带两头系在床的两侧。我的脚就搁在其中的一根吊带上，小腿放在另一根上，因而双腿感到不舒服。不知怎么，我知道这些吊带可以移动，就挪了挪腿，把较远处的那个吊带推到脚下，觉得这样会感觉舒服一些。

但我把那个吊带踢得太远，就晃动双腿想把它挪近一些。这么一折腾，小腿下面的吊带滑掉了，小腿就悬空了。我挪了挪身体想换个位置，确信这下一定能解决问题，不料身体下面更多的吊带滑落了下去。情况更糟了：我的整个下半身都滑了下来，吊在半空中，两只脚又着不了地，全身的力量都靠上半个背部支撑着，这时我在感到不舒服的同时，开始害怕起来。也就在这时候，我开始思考那些之前未曾想到的问题：我这是在哪儿，躺在什么上面？我环顾四周，首先想看看自己身体下面垫着什么，我的身体悬在哪里，即将掉落到什么方向。我低头一看，简直不能相信自己的双眼：我所处的高度不只是什么高耸入云的塔顶或山巅，那是一个我根本无法想象的高度。

8.我甚至连身下的东西都看不清楚，底下是一眼望不到底的深渊，我就这么悬空挂着，摇摇欲坠。我的心跳到了嗓子眼，怕得要命。低头看下去简直糟糕透顶。我觉得要是再往下看，会立即从最后一根吊带上滑落下去，一命呜呼。我于是不再乱看，可这样更糟，因为我不停在想自己要是滑下去会如何粉身碎骨。越想越恐怖，身上也越来越无力，背部滑得越来越低，随时都会掉下去。就在那时我想这可能不是真的，只是个梦，马上就会醒过来。我试着让自己醒过来，却醒不过来。“我该怎么办？我该怎么办？”我不停地问自己，抬头向上望去，也是一眼望不到顶。我看向深邃的天空，试着忘却身下的深渊，事实上我真的办到了，身下的无限令我厌恶和恐慌，头顶的无限却吸引着我，安抚我的情绪。就这样，我凭借身下最后一根没有滑落的吊带，身体悬在半空，下面是深不见底的深渊。我知道自己的身体摇摇欲坠，但是我只往上看，恐惧就消失了。就像在梦里发生的那样，有一个声音对我说：“注意，记住这一点！”我向头顶高不可测的天空深处极目远眺，心绪也逐渐镇定下来。我想起所有的一切是怎么发生的：我怎么动了动腿，怎么挂在这儿，当时感到多么害怕，后来又怎么往上看而克服了这种恐惧。我反问自己：“我现在还悬挂在那儿吗？”只要感觉到身体还牢牢地吊在吊带上，没晃也没掉下来，我就不再环顾四周。我觉得自己不再悬挂在那儿

摇摇欲坠，而是被身下的吊带稳稳托住了。我反问自己怎么会被托住，摸索着，察看周围的情况，就看见身体下面，就在我身体的正中央有一根吊带，当我向上看的时候，躺在吊带上的姿势获得了最稳定的平衡，一直在支撑着我的只有这一根吊带。然后就像在梦里一样，支撑我的东西一下子变得非常自然，成了完全可以理解的必然事物，尽管醒来之后又好像根本说不通了。我甚至在睡梦中感到惊讶，之前怎么从来没有发现这些。原来在我的头旁边有根柱子，没有那么粗壮，但稳固性不容置疑，尽管柱子插在那里似乎并没有什么根基。一根绳子就那么松松垮垮地从柱子上垂下来，但巧妙之处在于：只要人能用身体的正中央平躺在绳子上往上看，就根本不会掉落下去。这我看得很清楚，我很高兴，也心安了。仿佛听见有人对我说：“务必要记住这些啊！”然后我就醒了。

[1]喀山：苏联伏尔加河中游城市。

[2]天主教译为“达味”，伊斯兰教译作“达吾德”，是以色列的第二任国王。“大卫”的意思是“被爱的”。大部分关于他的记载都出自《塔纳赫》中的《塞缪尔记》上、下两部。大卫虽不是没有缺点，但在以色列所有古代的国王中，他被描述为最富有正义感的国王，还是一位优秀的战士、音乐家和诗人（据说《圣经》中许多赞美上帝的诗篇都是他的创作）。根据《圣经》记录，耶稣是大卫的后裔。

[3]1855年，托尔斯泰于克里木战争结束后来到圣彼得堡。

[4]1俄亩约合1.09公顷。

[5]叔本华《作为意志和表象的世界》，结论部分。商务印书馆，1997年，石冲白译。

[6]《圣经·旧约·传道书》第一章。

[7]《圣经·旧约·传道书》第二章。

[8]《圣经·旧约·传道书》第九章。

[9]《圣经·旧约·传道书》第八章。

[10]《圣经·旧约·传道书》第九章。

[11]《尼西亚信经》：也译为《尼吉亚信经》，是传统基督教的三大信经之一。得名于公元325年第一次尼西亚宗教大会，会议确定了圣父、圣子、圣灵为三位一体的上帝，地位平等。

[12]启应祷文：东正教礼拜仪式上的祷告，由教堂执事背诵的一系列祷文组成，期间交错着众人的固定回应。

[13]在俄语中，“星期日”（BockpeceHbe）的含义就是“复活”。

[14]《东正教圣徒传略汇编》共十二卷，于1860年在莫斯科出版。

[15]古罗斯时代教会中流行的一本书，根据教会日历编排，其中包括圣徒传和训诫诗。

[16]即约翰一世（347—407），君士坦丁堡牧首，因演讲雄辩而被追谥为“金口”。金口约翰是重要的希腊教父，被许多教会封为圣人。他的遗骸曾于1204年被十字军掠至罗马，教皇若望·保禄二世于2004年归还了这批圣物。

[17]旧礼仪派：俄罗斯东正教会中的一个反国教派别，亦称“老信徒派”。成员多为下层贫民、群众和低级教士，他们反对政府的横征暴敛，宣扬平均主义和无政府主义。

[18]莫洛肯派：俄语直译为“喝牛奶的教派”，成员多为拒绝加入东正教的农民。在长达两百天的

斋戒中基本上只喝牛奶，由此而得名。

[19]震颤派：1947年源于英国的基督教派，以舞蹈为敬礼上帝的方式之一，因此得名。

[20]苏姆斯基骠骑兵团：Sumsky此为音译，是俄罗斯历史上著名的骠骑兵团。

[21]黄色枪骑兵团：俄罗斯历史上著名的骑兵团，因骑兵身着黄色制服而得名。

[22]天主教相同，分别为圣洗、坚振、告解、圣体、圣秩、病人傅油及婚配。

[23]七大圣事：耶稣亲自建立的有形可见的宗教形式，东正教的七大圣事和天主教相同，分别为圣洗、坚振、告解、圣体、圣秩、病人傅油及婚配。

[24]阿列克谢·米哈伊洛维奇：俄国沙皇，在位时间为1629至1676年，笃信宗教，为彼得大帝之父。

Leo Tolstoy

A Confession

TRANSLATED BY JANE KENTISH

PENGUIN BOOKS — GREAT IDEAS

Contents

Chapter 1

1. I was baptized and brought up in the Orthodox Christian faith. I was instructed in it both as a child and throughout my boyhood and youth. But when at the age of eighteen I left university in my second year, I no longer believed in any of the things I had been taught.
2. Judging from various memories, I had never believed very seriously but had merely trusted in what I was taught and in what was professed by my elders; but this trust was very unstable.
3. I remember when I was eleven years old a high school boy named Volodya, now long since dead, came to see us one Sunday and announced the latest discovery made at school. The discovery was that there is no God and that everything we were being taught was pure invention (this was in 1838). I remember my older brothers taking a great interest in this news and even allowing me to join in the discussion. We all, I remember, became very excited and took the news as something very enthralling and entirely possible.
4. I remember too that when my older brother Dmitri, who was then at university, suddenly and with characteristic fervour embraced the faith and started to attend all the services, to observe the fasts and to lead a pure and moral life we all, including the older ones, constantly made fun of him and for some reason nicknamed him Noah. And I remember when Mushkin-Pushkin, at the time a curator at the University of Kazan, invited us to a ball and jokingly persuaded my brother, who had declined the invitation, that even David danced before the ark. At the time I used to enjoy these jokes of my elders, and from them I drew the conclusion that it is necessary to learn the Catechism and it is necessary to go to church, but that one need not take it all too seriously. I also recall reading Voltaire when I was very young; I not only failed to be shocked by his humour but even found it quite amusing.
5. The decline of my faith occurred in the way in which it has always happened, and still happens, among those from our kind of background. It seems to me that in the majority of instances it happens like this: people live as everyone lives, but on the basis of principles that not only have nothing in common with religious doctrines but are, on the whole, contrary to them; religious doctrine plays no part in life, or in relations between people, neither are we confronted with it in our personal lives. Religious doctrine is professed in some other realm, at a distance from life and independent of it. If we encounter it, it is only as an external phenomenon, disconnected from life.

6. Now, just as then, it is impossible to judge from a person's life, or behaviour, whether or not he is a believer. If there is a difference between those who openly profess Orthodoxy and those who deny it, then it is not to the advantage of the former. Nowadays, as before, the public declaration and confession of Orthodoxy is usually encountered among dull-witted, cruel and immoral people who tend to consider themselves very important. Whereas intelligence, honesty, straightforwardness, good-naturedness and morality are qualities usually found among people who claim to be non-believers. The Catechism is taught in schools and the pupils are sent to church; officials must be able to produce evidence of having received communion. But a person belonging to our circle, who is no longer at school and has not entered into public service, can still live for ten years or more without once remembering that he is living among Christians and is himself considered to be a practising member of the Orthodox Church. This was even more true in the past.
7. Thus today, just as in earlier times, religious teaching, which is accepted on trust and sustained by external pressure, gradually weakens under the influence of knowledge and experience of life that stands in opposition to the religious doctrines; a person can go on living for a long time imagining that the body of religious instruction imparted to him when he was a child is still there, whereas it has in fact disappeared without leaving a trace.
8. An intelligent and honest man by the name of S. told me the story of how he lost his faith. At the age of twenty-six, while resting overnight on a hunting expedition, he followed an old childhood custom of kneeling down to pray in the evening. His elder brother, who was with him on the expedition, lay on some straw watching him. When S. had finished and was preparing to lie down his brother said to him: 'Do you still do that?' Nothing more was said between them. But from that day on S. stopped saying his prayers and going to church. And for thirty years he has not prayed, has not received communion and has not gone to church. And this is not because he knew his brother's convictions and wanted to share them, nor was it because he had resolved something in his heart, but simply because this comment of his brother's was like a finger being pushed against a wall that was on the verge of collapsing from its own weight. These words indicated that the place where he had thought faith to be had long been empty and that the words he spoke, the signs of the cross and genuflections he made in prayer, were essentially meaningless actions. Having recognized their meaninglessness he could no longer continue doing them.

9. Thus it has happened and still happens, I believe, with the great majority of people. I am speaking about people from our type of background, of people who are sincere with themselves, and not of those who use the profession of faith as a means of obtaining some kind of worldly aims. (These people are the most fundamental non-believers, for if faith is seen by them as a means of achieving various worldly aims, then it is certainly no longer faith.) People of our upbringing find themselves in a situation where the light of knowledge and of life have melted away an artificial edifice, and they have either failed to notice this and swept it away completely, or have simply failed to notice it as yet.

10. The religious instruction communicated to me since childhood faded, as it does with others, only with the difference that since I had begun to read and think a great deal while still very young, my abdication of religious faith occurred very early. When I was sixteen I ceased saying my prayers, going to church or fasting of my own accord. I no longer believed in what I had been taught as a child; but I did believe in something, without being able to say what it was. I believed in God, or rather I did not deny God, but what kind of God I could not have said; neither did I reject Christ or his teachings, but what I understood by the teachings again I could not have said.

11. Now, looking back at that time, I can clearly see that the only real faith I had, apart from the animal instincts motivating my life, was a belief in perfection. But what this perfection consisted of, and what its aim was, were unclear to me. I tried to perfect myself intellectually and studied everything I came upon in life. I tried to perfect my will, setting myself rules I tried to follow. I perfected myself physically, practising all kinds of exercises in order to develop my strength and dexterity, and I cultivated endurance and patience by undergoing all kinds of hardship. All this I regarded as perfection. The beginning of it all was, of course, moral perfection, but this was soon replaced by a belief in general perfection, that is a desire to be better not in my own eyes or before God but in the eyes of other people. And very soon this determination to be better than others became a wish to be more powerful than others: more famous, more important, wealthier.

Chapter 2

1. Some day I will relate the story of my life, and of how touching and instructive were those ten years of my youth. I think a great many people must have experienced something similar. I longed with all my soul to be good, but I was young; I had passions and I was alone, completely alone in my search for goodness. Every time I tried to display my innermost desires - a wish to be morally good - I met with contempt and scorn, and as soon as I gave in to base desires I was praised and encouraged. Ambition, lust for power, self-interest, lechery, pride, anger, revenge, were all respected qualities. As I yielded to these passions I became like my elders and I felt that they were pleased with me. A dear old aunt of mine, the purest of creatures, with whom I lived, was always saying that she wished for nothing as much as that I would have a relationship with a married woman. 'Rien ne forme un jeune homme comme une liaison avec une femme comme il faut.' Another happiness she wished for me was that I should become an adjutant, and preferably to the Emperor. And the greatest happiness of all would be for me to marry a very rich girl and acquire as many serfs as possible through the marriage.
2. I cannot recall those years without horror, loathing, and heartache. I killed people in war, summoned others to duels in order to kill them, gambled at cards; I devoured the fruits of the peasants' labour and punished them; I fornicated and practised deceit. Lying, thieving, promiscuity of all kinds, drunkenness, violence, murder... there was not a crime I did not commit, and yet I was praised for it all and my contemporaries considered, and still consider me, a relatively moral man.
3. For ten years I lived in this fashion.
4. During this time I began to write out of vanity, self-interest and pride. In my writings I did the same as I did in life. In order to achieve the fame and money for which I wrote I had to conceal what was good in myself and display what was bad. And this is what I did. Time and again I would contrive in my writings to conceal under the guise of indifference, or even of light-heartedness, those strivings for goodness which lent meaning to my life. And I succeeded and was praised.

5. After the war, by which time I was twenty-six, I returned to St Petersburg and took up company with writers. They accepted me as one of them and flattered me. I had no time to stop and look around before I had assimilated the view of life held by the group of writers with whom I mixed, and before long all my earlier attempts at improvement had been erased. Their outlook provided a theory that justified my undisciplined life.
6. The view of life adopted by these people, my literary associates, was that generally speaking life is a process of development in the course of which the most important role is played by us, the thinkers; and that among the thinkers it is we, the artists and poets, who have the most influence. Our vocation is to educate people. In order to avoid being confronted by the obvious question- 'What do I know and what have I got to teach?' - their theory explained that it is not necessary to know this and that the poet and the artist teach unconsciously. I was considered a superb artist and poet and it was therefore quite natural for me to adopt this theory. I, an artist and poet, wrote without knowing myself what it was I was teaching. And I was paid money for doing this. I was provided with excellent food, lodgings, women, company, and I was famous. It must then be the case that what I was teaching was very good.
7. This faith in the meaning of poetry and in the evolution of life was a religion and I was one of its priests. It was very profitable and pleasant to be one of its priests, and for a considerable length of time I lived in this faith without ever doubting its validity. But in the second, and still more in the third year of this existence, I began to doubt its infallibility and to examine it. The first point of doubt was that I had begun to notice how the priests of this religion disagreed among themselves. Some said: 'We are the finest and most useful teachers and it is we who teach what is needed, while the others teach falsely.' And others said: 'No! We are the real teachers and you teach falsely!' They argued, quarrelled, deceived and tricked one another. Moreover, there were many among us who were unconcerned as to who was right and who wrong, but who simply achieved their own selfish ends by means of this activity of ours. All this forced me to doubt the truth of the faith.
8. Furthermore, once I had begun to doubt the truth of this writer's religion I started observing its priests more closely and became convinced that almost all the priests of this faith - the writers - were immoral men, the majority of bad and worthless character and much inferior to the people I had met during my former dissipated military life. But they were complacent and self-satisfied in a way that is only possible for people who are truly holy, or for those who do not know what holiness is. These people became repugnant to me, and I became repugnant to myself, and realized that the religion was a fraud.

9. But strange to say, even though the utter falsehood of this creed was something I came quickly to understand and to reject, I did not discard the rank these people bestowed on me: that of artist, poet and teacher. I naïvely imagined that I was a poet and an artist, and could teach everybody without myself knowing what I was teaching. And this is what I did.

10. Through my association with these men I acquired a new vice: an unhealthily developed pride, and an insane conviction that it was my vocation to teach people without knowing what I was teaching.

11. Now, when I think about this period and about my state of mind and that of those around me (and incidentally there are thousands of them nowadays), I feel sad, terrible, ridiculous; it arouses in me precisely the same feelings as one might experience in a madhouse.

12. At the time we were all convinced that we must talk and talk and write and publish as quickly as possible, and as much as possible, and that this was all necessary for the good of mankind. And thousands of us, contradicting and abusing one another, published and wrote with the aim of teaching others. Failing to notice that we knew nothing, that we did not know the answer to the most basic question of life—what is good and what is evil—we all spoke at the same time, never listening to one another. At times we indulged and praised each other in order to be indulged and praised in return, at other times we grew angry and shrieked at each other, just as if we were in a madhouse.

13. Thousands of workers toiled day and night, assembling millions and millions of words, which were distributed by post over the whole of Russia; and we taught and taught, but never managed to impart all that we had to teach, and were always annoyed that we were given so little attention.

14. Horribly strange, but I now understand it all. Our genuine, sincere concern was over how to gain as much money and fame as possible. And the only thing we knew how to do in order to achieve this aim was to write books and journals. This is what we did. But in order for us to pursue this utterly useless task and have the assurance that we were very important people we needed an argument that would justify what we were doing. And so we devised the following; everything that exists is rational and all that exists evolves. And it evolves through enlightenment. Enlightenment is measured through the distribution of books and journals. We are paid and respected for writing these books and papers, so we must be the most important and useful people. This theory would have been all very well had we been in agreement; but since any thought expressed by any one of us was always contradicted by the diametrically opposed views of another, we should have been forced to rethink. But we did not notice this; we were paid money and those who sided with us praised us, consequently everyone of us believed himself to be in the right.

15. It is now clear to me that there was no difference between our behaviour and that of people in a madhouse; but at the time I only dimly suspected this and, like all madmen, I thought everyone was mad except myself.

Chapter 3

1. And so I lived, abandoning myself to this madness, for another six years until I married. During this period I went abroad. Life in Europe and the contact I had with advanced and learned Europeans still further reinforced the belief in overall perfection, by which I lived; for I found the same belief among them. With my own self this belief assumed the form it usually takes among the educated men of our time. The belief was expressed in the word 'progress'. At the time I felt that this word had some meaning. Living as I was then, like any individual I was tormented by the problem of how to live a better life. I did not yet understand that in answering 'live in conformity with progress', I was speaking exactly like a person who is in a boat being carried along by wind and waves and who when asked the most important and vital question, 'Where should I steer?' avoids answering by saying, 'We are being carried somewhere.'

2. At the time I noticed none of this. Only occasionally, led more by instinct than reason, I rebelled against the superstition so prevalent in our age by which people shield themselves from their failure to understand life. Thus, during my stay in Paris, the sight of an execution revealed to me the precariousness of my superstition in progress. When I saw the heads being separated from the bodies and heard them thump, one after the next, into the box I understood, and not just with my intellect but with my whole being, that no theories of the rationality of existence and progress could justify this crime. I realized that even if every single person since the day of creation had, according to whatever theory, found this necessary I knew that it was unnecessary and wrong, and therefore that judgements on what is good and necessary must not be based on what other people say and do, or on progress, but on the instincts of my own soul. Another instance in which I felt that the superstition of progress was inadequate in regard to life was the death of my brother. He was an intelligent, kind-hearted, serious man who became ill when he was young, suffered for over a year and died in torment without having understood why he had lived, and still less why he was dying. No theories could provide the answers to these questions, either for him or for me, during his slow and tortuous death.

3. But these were only rare instances of doubt and in truth I continued to live, professing faith only in progress. 'Everything is evolving and I am evolving; and the reason why I am evolving together with all the rest will one day be known to me.' This is how I would have formulated my belief at the time.
4. When I returned from abroad I settled in the country and busied myself with the running of the peasant schools. This occupation was close to my heart because in it was none of the falsehood that had become so apparent to me, and struck me so forcibly when I was a literary teacher. Here too I was acting in the name of progress, but I had already assumed a critical attitude towards this progress. I told myself that in some of its manifestations progress had proceeded incorrectly and that here, when dealing with the primitive peasant children, it was necessary to act in a spirit of freedom, leaving them to choose whatever path to progress they wished to take.
5. In reality I was still confronted with the same insoluble problem of how to teach without knowing what I was teaching. In the higher circles of literary activity it was apparent to me that I could not teach without knowing what it was I taught, for I saw that everyone taught differently and that in our arguments we only concealed our own lack of knowledge from each other. But here with the peasant children I thought I could avoid this difficulty by allowing the children to study whatever they liked. It amused me to recall how I side-tracked in order to fulfil my ambition of teaching, while knowing very well in the depths of my heart that I could not possibly teach what was needed because I did not know what it was. After a year spent occupied with the affairs of the school I went abroad again in order to discover how to teach others what I did not know myself.
6. I thought I learnt this there, and equipped with all this wisdom I returned to Russia in the year of the Emancipation of the Serfs. I took up the position of arbitrator and started teaching the uneducated people in the schools, as well as the educated people through the journal I had begun publishing. This seemed to be going well but I felt that my mental state was not altogether healthy and that this could not continue for long. I might perhaps have fallen at this time into the same despair that I fell into when I was fifty if there had not been one aspect of life I had not yet experienced and which promised salvation: this was family life.
7. For a year I involved myself with arbitration work, with the schools and the journal, and soon exhausted myself. This was largely due to my confusion; the struggle as arbitrator became so burdensome, my school activities so complex and my journalistic prevarications so repulsive to me, since they always consisted of the same thing: the desire to teach everyone while concealing the fact that I did not know what I was teaching. I became ill, spiritually more than physically. I threw in everything and left for the steppes of the Bashkirs to breathe fresh air, drink koumiss and live a primitive life.

8. On my return I married. The new circumstances of happy family life completely distracted me from any search for the overall meaning of life. At the time my whole life was bound up with my family, my wife and my children and thus in concerns for improving our means of living. My striving for self-perfection, which had already been replaced by a striving for perfection in general, that is for progress, was now sublimated beneath the straightforward desire of achieving the best for my family and myself.

9. Thus another fifteen years passed.

10. Despite the fact that during those fifteen years I considered the writer's task unimportant, I continued to write. I had already tasted the temptations of authorship, the temptations of enormous financial gain and applause for my trivial work, and I devoted myself to it as a means of improving my material position and of stifling any questions in my soul regarding the meaning of my own life, or of life in general.

11. I wrote, teaching what was for me the only truth: that we must live in order to give ourselves and our families the best possible in life.

12. And so I lived until five years ago when something very strange started happening to me. At first I began experiencing moments of bewilderment; my life would come to a standstill, as if I did not know how to live or what to do, and I felt lost and fell into despair. But they passed and I continued to live as before. Then these moments of bewilderment started to recur more frequently, always taking the same form. On these occasions, when life came to a standstill, the same questions always arose: 'Why? What comes next?'

13. At first I thought the questions pointless and irrelevant. I felt the answers were well known and that should I wish to resolve them it would not cost me much effort; that for the time being I did not have the time to work it all out, but that when I put my mind to it I would find all the answers. However, the questions repeated themselves over and again, demanding answers with more and more urgency. They fell like full stops, always on the same spot, uniting in one large black spot.

14. And then, what happens to everyone stricken with a fatal inner disease happened to me. At first minor signs of indisposition appear, which the sick person ignores; then these symptoms appear more and more frequently, merging into one interrupted period of suffering. The suffering increases and before the sick man realizes what is happening he discovers that the thing he had taken for an indisposition is in fact the thing that is more important to him than anything in the world: it is death.

15. This is just what happened to me. I realized that it was not just a casual indisposition but something very serious and that if the same questions kept repeating themselves they would have to be answered. And I tried to answer them. The questions seemed so stupid, simple, and childish. But the moment I touched upon them and tried to resolve them I was immediately convinced, firstly, that they were not childish and stupid questions but were the most important and profound questions in life, and secondly, that however much I thought about them I could not resolve them. Before occupying myself with my Samara estate, with the education of my son, or with the writing of books, I had to know why I was doing these things. While I did not know why, I could not do anything. Amidst my thoughts concerning the farm, which at the time kept me very busy, a question would suddenly come into my head: 'Well fine, so you will have 6,000 desyatins in the Samara province and 300 horses, and then what?' And feeling completely taken aback, I would not know what to think next. Or, beginning to reflect on the education of my children, I would ask myself, 'Why?' Or deliberating on how the peasants might achieve prosperity I would suddenly ask myself, 'What concern is it of mine?' Or thinking about the fame my own writing brought me, I would say to myself, 'Well fine, so you will be more famous than Gogal, Pushkin, Shakespeare, Molière, more famous than all the writers in the world, and so what?'
16. And I had absolutely no answer.

Chapter 4

1. My life came to a standstill. I could breathe, eat, drink and sleep and I could not help breathing, eating, drinking and sleeping; but there was no life in me because I had no desires whose gratification I would have deemed it reasonable to fulfil. If I wanted something I knew in advance that whether or not I satisfied my desire nothing would come of it.
2. If a magician had come and offered to grant my wishes I would not have known what to say. If in my intoxicated moments I still had the habit of desire, rather than real desire, in my sober moments I knew that it was a delusion and that I wanted nothing. I did not even wish to know the truth because I had guessed what it was. The truth was that life is meaningless.
3. It was as if I had carried on living and walking until I reached a precipice from which I could see clearly that there was nothing ahead of me other than destruction. But it was impossible to stop, and impossible to turn back or close my eyes in order not to see that there was nothing ahead other than deception of life and of happiness, and the reality of suffering and death: of complete annihilation.
4. Life had grown hateful to me, and some insuperable force was leading me to seek deliverance from it by whatever means. I could not say that I wanted to kill myself. The force beckoning me away from life was a more powerful, complete and overall desire. It was a force similar to my striving after life, only it was going in the other direction. I fought as hard as I could against life. The thought of suicide now came to me as naturally as thoughts of improving my life had previously come to me. This idea was so attractive to me that I had to use cunning against myself in order to avoid carrying it out too hastily. I did not want to rush, simply because I wanted to make every effort to unravel the matter. I told myself that if I could not unravel the matter now, I still had time to do so. And it was at this time that I, a fortunate man, removed a rope from my room where I undressed every night alone, lest I hang myself from the beam between the cupboards; and I gave up taking a rifle with me on hunting trips so as not to be tempted to end my life in such an all too easy fashion. I myself did not know what I wanted. I was afraid of life and strove against it, yet I still hoped for something from it.

5. All this was happening to me at a time when I was surrounded on all sides by what is considered complete happiness: I was not yet fifty, I had a kind, loving and beloved wife, lovely children, and a large estate that was growing and expanding with no effort on my part. I was respected by relatives and friends far more than ever before. I was praised by strangers and could consider myself a celebrity without deceiving myself. Moreover I was not unhealthy in mind or body, but on the contrary enjoyed a strength of mind and body such as I had rarely witnessed in my contemporaries. Physically I could keep up with the peasants tilling the fields; mentally I could work for eight or ten hours at a stretch without suffering any ill effects from the effort. And in these circumstances I found myself at the point where I could no longer go on living and, since I feared death, I had to deceive myself in order to refrain from suicide.
6. This spiritual condition presented itself to me in the following manner: my life is some kind of stupid and evil joke that someone is playing on me. Despite the fact that I did not acknowledge any such 'someone', who might have created me, this concept of there being someone playing a stupid and evil joke on me by bringing me into the world came to me as the most natural way of expressing my condition.
7. I could not help feeling that out there somewhere somebody was amusing himself by looking at me and the way I had lived for thirty or forty years, studying, developing, maturing in mind and body. And how now, with a fully matured intellect, having reached the precipice from which life reveals itself, I stood there like an utter fool, believing so firmly that there is nothing in life, that there never has been, nor ever will be. 'And he laughs...'
8. But whether or not this someone laughing at me really existed did not make it any easier for me. I could not attribute any rational meaning to a single act, let alone to my whole life. I simply felt astonished that I had failed to realize this from the beginning. It had all been common knowledge for such a long time. Today or tomorrow sickness and death will come (and they had already arrived) to those dear to me, and to myself, and nothing will remain other than the stench and the worms. Sooner or later my deeds, whatever they may have been, will be forgotten and will no longer exist. What is all the fuss about then? How can a person carry on living and fail to perceive this? That is what is so astonishing! It is only possible to go on living while you are intoxicated with life; once sober it is impossible not to see that it is all a mere trick, and a stupid trick! That is exactly what it is:

there is nothing either witty or amusing, it is only cruel and stupid.
9. There is an old Eastern fable about a traveller who is taken unawares on the steppes by a ferocious wild animal. In order to escape the beast the traveller hides in an empty well, but at the bottom of the well he sees a dragon with its jaws open, ready to devour him. The poor fellow does not dare to climb out because he is afraid of being eaten by the rapacious beast, neither does he dare drop to the bottom of the well for fear of being eaten by the dragon. So he seizes hold of a branch of a bush that is growing in the crevices of the well and clings on to it. His arms grow weak and he knows that he will soon have to resign himself to the death that awaits him on either side. Yet he still clings on, and while he is holding on to the branch he looks around and sees that two mice, one black and one white, are steadily working their way round the bush he is hanging from, gnawing away at it. Sooner or later they will eat through it and the branch will snap, and he will fall into the jaws of the dragon. The traveller sees this and knows that he will inevitably perish. But while he is still hanging there he sees some drops of honey on the leaves of the bush, stretches out his tongue and licks them. In the same way I am clinging to the tree of life, knowing full well that the dragon of death inevitably awaits me, ready to tear me to pieces, and I cannot understand how I have fallen into this torment. And I try licking the honey that once consoled me, but it no longer gives me pleasure. The white mouse and the black mouse - day and night - are gnawing at the branch from which I am hanging. I can see the dragon clearly and the honey no longer tastes sweet. I can see only one thing; the inescapable dragon and the mice, and I cannot tear my eyes away from them. And this is no fable but the truth, the truth that is irrefutable and intelligible to everyone.
10. The delusion of the joys of life that had formerly stifled my fear of the dragon no longer deceived me. No matter how many times I am told: you cannot understand the meaning of life, do not think about it but live, I cannot do so because I have already done it for too long. Now I cannot help seeing day and night chasing me and leading me to my death. This is all I can see because it is the only truth. All the rest is a lie.
11. Those two drops of honey, which more than all else had diverted my eyes from the cruel truth, my love for my family and for my writing, which I called art - I no longer found sweet.
12. 'The family...,' I said to myself. But my family, my wife and children, are also human beings. They are in exactly the same position as I am: they too must either live a lie, or face the terrible truth. What do they live for? Why do I love them and look after them, bring them up and watch over them? In order to reach the same state of despair that fills me, or in order to be dull-witted! If I love them I cannot conceal the truth from them. Each step taken in knowledge leads them to this truth. And the truth is death.

13. 'Art, poetry...' For a long time, under the influence of success and praise from others, I had persuaded myself that this was a thing that could be done, despite the fact of approaching death which obliterates everything: myself, my works and the memory of both. But I quickly realized that this too was a delusion. It was clear to me that art is an adornment and embellishment of life. But it had lost its charm for me, so how could I charm others? While I was not living my own life but was being carried along on the crest of another life, as long as I believed that life had meaning even if I could not express it, the reflection of life in poetry and in art of all kinds gave me joy and I enjoyed watching life through the mirror of art. But when I began to search for the meaning of life, when I began to feel the necessity of living, I found this mirror either unnecessary, superfluous and ridiculous, or tormenting. I could no longer be comforted by what I saw in the mirror, namely my stupid and desperate position. It was all right for me to rejoice in the sight while in the depths of my soul I believed that my life had meaning. Then the play of light and shade, the comic, the tragic, the touching, the beautiful, and the frightening aspects of life comforted me. But when I saw that life is meaningless and terrible, the play in the mirror could no longer amuse me. However sweet the honey, it could not be sweet to me while I saw the dragon and the mice gnawing at my support.

14. But that was not all. Had I simply understood that life has no meaning I might have accepted it peacefully, knowing that it was my lot. But I could not be calmed by this. If I had been like a man in a wood from which he knows there is no way out, I might have been able to live; but I was like a man in a wood who is lost, and terrified by this rushes around hoping to find his way out, knowing that with each step he is getting more lost, and yet unable to stop rushing about.

15. It was all quite dreadful. And so, in order to escape from this horror, I wanted to kill myself. I felt a horror of what lay ahead of me and knew that this horror was worse than my present position, but I could neither drive it away nor patiently await the end. However convincing the argument that said a blood vessel of the heart would collapse anyway, or that something would burst and it would all be over, I could not wait for the end with composure. The horror of the darkness was too great and I wanted to escape from it as quickly as possible by means of a rope or a bullet. It was this feeling that lured me, more strongly than anything else, towards suicide.

Chapter 5

1. Several times I said to myself, 'But perhaps I have overlooked something, or failed to understand something? It cannot be that this state of despair is common to all men.' And I searched for an answer to my questions in all branches of knowledge acquired by man. I sought long and laboriously. I did not search half-heartedly, or out of idle curiosity, but tormentedly, persistently, day and night, like a dying man seeking salvation, and I found nothing.
2. I searched all branches of knowledge and not only found nothing, but was convinced that all those who had searched the realms of knowledge like myself had likewise found nothing. Not only had they found nothing, but they had plainly acknowledged the same thing that had led me to despair: the meaninglessness of life as the only indisputable piece of knowledge available to man.
3. I searched everywhere and thanks to a life spent in study, and to my connections with the world of learning, I had access to scholars of various disciplines. I was not denied insight into their erudition, both through books and in conversation with them, and I learnt everything that knowledge has to answer to the question of life.
4. For a long time I could not believe that knowledge has no answer to the question of life, other than that which it gives. For a long time it seemed to me, as I observed the air of importance and seriousness with which science asserts its propositions (which have nothing to do with human life), that I had failed to understand something. For a long time I cowered before knowledge, and felt that the fact of my receiving no adequate answers to my question was a result of my naïveté and no fault of knowledge. But it was no laughing matter to me, it was no joke but a subject that dominated my life. I was finally forced to conclude that my questions were the only legitimate ones serving as the basis of all branches of knowledge, and that the fault did not lie with me and my questions, but with science if it had the pretension to answer these questions.
5. My question, the one that brought me to the point of suicide when I was fifty years old, was a most simple one that lies in the soul of every person, from a silly child to a wise old man. It is the question without which life is impossible, as I had learnt from experience. It is this: what will come of what I do today or tomorrow? What will come of my entire life?

6. Expressed another way the question can be put like this: why do I live? Why do I wish for anything, or do anything? Or expressed another way: is there any meaning in my life that will not be annihilated by the inevitability of death which awaits me?
7. I searched through human knowledge for an answer to this question, which is the same whatever way it is expressed. I found that according to their relation to the question, all branches of human knowledge are divided, almost into two opposite hemispheres, at the opposite ends of which are two poles: one positive and one negative: yet at neither pole were there any answers to the question of life.
8. One branch of knowledge does not even seem to acknowledge the question and yet gives clear and precise answers to its own independently posed question: this is the realm of experimental knowledge, and at its extreme end stands mathematics. The other realm of knowledge recognizes the question but does not answer it. This is the sphere of speculative philosophy, at the extreme end of which stands metaphysics.
9. From my early youth I had studied speculative philosophy, but was later attracted by both mathematical and natural science. Until I had posed my question clearly to myself and the question itself had grown up within me, demanding an urgent resolution, I was satisfied with the falsified answers given by knowledge.
10. In the experimental sphere I said to myself, 'Everything develops, differentiates, moving towards complexity and refinement and there are laws governing this progress. You are a part of a whole. When you know as much as possible about the whole, and about the laws of its development, you will understand your place in the whole, and your own self.' Although I am ashamed to admit it, there was a time when I seemed to be satisfied with this. It was at a time when I myself was developing and growing more complex. My muscles were growing and strengthening, my memory was richer, my capacity to think and comprehend was increasing. I was growing and developing, and, feeling this growth within myself, it was natural for me to believe that there was a law governing the world, in which I could find the answers to the questions of my life. But the time came when I stopped growing; I felt that I was no longer developing but was drying up, my muscles were growing weaker, my teeth falling out, and I saw that this law not only failed to explain anything to me, but that there had never been and never could be such a law, and that I had taken for a law something which I had discovered in myself at a certain time of my life. I examined its definition more strictly, and it became clear to me that there could be no law of perpetual development. It became apparent to me that to say that in the infinity of time and space everything is developing, becoming more perfect, complex and differentiated, is really to say nothing at all. They are all words without a meaning, for in the infinite there is no simple and complex, no before and after, and no better or worse.

11. The most important thing was that my own personal question, the question of what I am with all my desires, was left completely unanswered. I understood that these studies are very interesting and attractive but that their precision and clarity are inversely proportionate to their applicability to questions concerning life: the less applicable to the questions of life, the clearer and more precise they are, whereas the more they try to provide solutions to the questions of life, the more obscure and unattractive they become. If we turn to those branches of knowledge that attempt to provide solutions to the question of life, to physiology, psychology, biology and sociology, we encounter a startling poverty of thought, extreme lack of clarity and a completely unjustified pretension to resolve questions beyond their scope, together with continual contradiction between one thinker and another (or even with their own selves). If we turn to the branches of knowledge that are not concerned with resolving life's questions, but which answer their own specialized, scientific questions, we may be enraptured by the power of the human intellect, but we know in advance that they will provide no answers to the question of life. These branches ignore the question. They say: 'As for what you are and why you live, we have no answers and do not involve ourselves with it. On the other hand, if you need to know about the laws governing light, or about chemical combinations, or about the laws governing the development of organisms; or if you need to know about the laws governing physical bodies and their forms, and the relationship between their size and quantity; or if you need to know about the laws governing your own mind, then we have clear, precise and irrefutable answers to all this.'

12. In general, the relationship of the experimental sciences to the questions of life can be expressed in this way. Question: why do I live? Answer: in the infinity of space and the infinity of time infinitely small particles mutate with infinite complexity. When you understand the laws of these mutations you will understand why you live.

13. Then moving into the speculative sphere I would say to myself: 'All mankind lives and develops according to spiritual principles and ideals which guide it. These ideals are expressed in religions, sciences, arts and forms of government. As these ideals become more elevated mankind advances towards greater well-being. I am a part of mankind and my duty therefore is to enhance the recognition and realization of these ideals.' During my weak-minded period I was satisfied with this. But as soon as the question of life presented itself to me clearly, the whole of this theory instantly crumbled to dust. As well as the careless vagueness with which this kind of knowledge draws conclusions, and makes generalized deductions about humanity based on a study of only a small proportion of it; as well as the mutual contradictions between the different supporters of this theory as to what man's ideals actually are, the peculiarity, not to say the stupidity, of this view is that in order to answer the question facing us all: what am I? or: why do I live? or: what must I do? man must first resolve the question of what this life of mankind is, of which so little is known and of which he can know only a minute portion in a fraction of a moment of time? In order to understand what he is man must first understand the entire mystery of humanity, a humanity made up of people like himself, who do not understand themselves.
14. I must confess there was a time when I believed this. It was at a time when I had my own favourite ideals which justified my whims, and I endeavoured to concoct a theory by which I could look upon my whims as laws governing mankind. But once the question of life had risen up in my soul with full clarity, this answer immediately vanished into thin air. I came to realize that just as with the experimental sciences there are genuine sciences and semi-sciences, both trying to give answers beyond their scope, there are similarly a whole series of extremely diverse sciences, also trying to answer questions beyond their scope. These semi-sciences, the judicial, social and historical sciences, all endeavour to resolve man's questions by giving the appearance, each in its own way, of resolving the question of life that concerns all mankind.
15. But just as in the realms of experimental sciences a person who sincerely asks how he ought to live cannot be satisfied with an answer advising him to study the infinite complexities and mutations of an infinite number of particles in the infinity of space and time; similarly a person who sincerely asks how he ought to live cannot be satisfied with an answer telling him that in order to understand himself he must first study the life of the whole of humanity, of which neither the beginning nor the end is known, nor even the smallest part. And, as with the experimental semi-sciences, the more these other sciences diverge from their purpose, the more they become filled with vagueness, lack of precision, stupidities and contradictions. The problem concerning experimental science is the sequence of cause and effect in material phenomena. Experimental science only has to be introduced to the question of final causes for it to turn into a nonsense. The problem facing speculative science is acknowledgement of the essence of life that lies beyond cause and effect. And one only has to introduce causative phenomena, such as social or historical data, into the investigations and it turns into a nonsense.

16. Experimental science, therefore, only deals with positive knowledge and reveals the greatness of the human intellect when it does not introduce the question of ultimate causes into its inquiries. Abstract science, on the other hand, only becomes a science and only reveals the greatness of the human intellect when it completely avoids questions concerning the sequence of causative phenomena and examines man only in relation to an ultimate cause. An example of this science, situated at the pole of the hemisphere, is metaphysics, or abstract philosophy. This science clearly poses the question: who am I? And: what is the universe? Why do I exist and why does the universe exist? And since it has existed this science has always given the same answer. Whether the philosopher calls the essence of life that is within me and within everything an idea, or a substance, a spirit or a will, he is saying the same thing: that I exist and that I am this essence. But how and why he does not know, and if he is a precise thinker he does not answer. I ask, 'Why does this essence exist? What comes of the fact that it is and will be?' And philosophy not only fails to answer but can only ask the same thing itself. And if it is a true philosophy, its whole task lies precisely in posing this question clearly. And if it holds firmly to its purpose then it can have no other answer to the question of what I am and what the universe is than: 'All and nothing.' And to the question of why the universe exists and why I exist, then: 'I do not know.'

17. Thus, whatever way I twist these speculative answers of philosophy, I can find nothing resembling an answer. This is not because, as in the case of the clear, experimental sciences, the answer does not relate to the question, but because despite all the intellectual effort directed at my question, there is no answer. And instead of an answer all one gets is the same question, only put in a more complicated form.

Chapter 6

1. In my search for answers to the question of life I felt just like a man who is lost in a wood.
2. I came to a clearing, climbed a tree and saw clearly into the never-ending distance. But there was no house there, nor could there be. I walked into the thicket, into the gloom and saw the darkness, but there was no house there either.
3. In the same way I wandered in the forest of human knowledge, both amidst the bright rays of mathematical knowledge and experimental knowledge, where wide horizons were opened up to me, but in a direction where I could find no house, and amidst the darkness of speculative knowledge where I was immersed in ever deeper gloom the further I progressed. And I became quite convinced that there was not, and could not be, a way out.
4. When I inclined to the bright side of knowledge I realized that I was only avoiding facing the question. However bright and attractive those horizons spreading out before me were, and however tempting it was to immerse myself in the infinity of all this knowledge, I already knew that the clearer the knowledge was, the less I needed it, and the less it answered my question. 'Well,' I said to myself, 'I know everything that science so urgently wants to know and along that path there is no answer to the question of the meaning of my life.' 'In the speculative realm I knew that despite the fact, or rather precisely because of the fact, that the primary purpose of this knowledge is to answer my question, the answer given was none other than the one I had already given myself: what is the meaning of my life? It has none. Or: what will come of my life? Nothing. Or: why does everything there is exist, and why do I exist? Because it does.
5. When I put my questions to one branch of human knowledge I received a countless number of precise answers to things I had not asked: the chemical composition of the stars, the movement of the sun towards the constellation Hercules, the origin of the species and of man, the forms of infinitely tiny atoms, the fluctuations of infinitely small and imponderable particles of ether. But the only answer this branch of knowledge provided to my question concerning the meaning of life was this: you are that which you call your life; you are a temporary, incidental accumulation of particles. The mutual interaction and alteration of these particles produces in you something you refer to as your life. This accumulation can only survive for a limited length of time; when the interaction of these particles ceases, that which you call life will cease, bringing an end to all your questions. You are a randomly united lump of something. This lump decomposes and the fermentation is called your life. The lump will disintegrate and the fermentation will end, together with all your questions. This is the answer given by the exact side of knowledge, and if it adheres strictly to its principles, it cannot answer otherwise.

6. However, the truth is that this answer does not reply to the question. I need to know the meaning of my life, and the fact that it is a particle of infinity not only fails to give it any meaning, but eliminates any possible meaning.

7. The experimental side of knowledge vaguely compromises with the speculative side in saying that the meaning of life lies in development and in the encouragement of this development. But owing to the inaccuracies and obscurities these cannot be regarded as answers.

8. Whenever the other side of knowledge, the speculative realm, sticks firmly to its principles and gives direct answers to the question, it has always, throughout the ages, given the same answer: the universe is something infinite and incomprehensible. Man's life is an inscrutable part of this inscrutable 'whole'. Again I exclude all the compromises made between the speculative and experimental sciences, which support a whole array of semi-sciences: the so-called judicial, political and historical sciences. In these sciences there is the same mistaken approach to the understanding of development and perfection, with the only difference that in one instance we have the development of everything, and in the other the development of people's lives. The mistake is identical: development and perfection can have no purpose or direction in infinity, and as far as my question is concerned, no answer.

9. When speculative knowledge is exact, namely in true philosophy, and not that which Schopenhauer calls professorial philosophy (which serves only to divide all existing phenomena into new philosophical categories, with new names), here when philosophy does not lose sight of the essential question, the answer is always the same as the one given by Socrates, Schopenhauer, Solomon and Buddha.

10. 'We grow closer to the truth only to the extent that we grow further away from life,' says Socrates when preparing himself for death. 'What do we, who love the truth, strive for in life? In order to be free of the body and of all the evil that arises from the life of the body. If this is so then how can we fail to rejoice when death approaches?'

11. 'The wise man seeks death throughout his life, and therefore death is not frightening to him.'
12. 'If we understand the inner essence of the universe as will,' says Schopenhauer, 'and if we understand all phenomena, from the dark forces of nature to the full conscious activity of man, as no more than the objectivity of the will, we cannot escape the conclusion that it is in the free denial and self-renunciation of the will that all phenomena disappear; the constant striving and the aimless and untiring allurement towards all the levels of subjectivity in which, and through which, the universe exists will disappear, as will all the various subsequent forms. When form disappears so too will all phenomena of form, including both space and time, until eventually even the last basis of form will disappear, i.e. subject and object. There is no idea without will, and no universe. Before us, of course, there remains only nothingness. But that which opposes this transition into nothingness, our nature, is but our own will to exist (Will zum Leben), of which both we and our universe are made up. That we are afraid of nothingness, or that we wish to live, only indicates that we ourselves are nothing other than this desire to live and we know nothing other than this. Therefore what remains to us, who are so full of will after the annihilation of the will, is of course nothingness; on the other hand, in those in whom the will has been reversed and renounced, this universe of ours that is so real with all its suns and galaxies is nothingness.'
13. 'Vanity of vanities,' says Solomon, 'all is vanity. What profit hath a man of all his labour which he taketh under the sun? One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh, but the earth abideth forever... The thing that hath been, it is that which shall be; and that which is done is that which shall be done: and there is no new thing under the sun. Is there any thing whereof it may be said, See this is new? It hath been already of old time, which was before us. There is no remembrance of former things; neither shall there be any remembrance of things that are to come with those that shall come after. I the Preacher was king over Israel in Jerusalem. And I gave my heart to seek and search out by wisdom concerning all things that are done under the heaven: this sore travail hath God given to the sons of man to be exercised therewith. I have seen all the works that are done under the sun; and, behold, all is vanity and vexation of spirit... I communed with mine own heart, saying, Lo, I am come to great estate, and have gotten more wisdom than all they that have been before me in Jerusalem: yea, my heart had great experience of wisdom and knowledge. And I gave my heart to know wisdom, and to know madness and folly: I perceived that this also is vexation of spirit. For in much wisdom is much grief: and he that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow. I said in mine heart, Go to now, I will prove thee with mirth, therefore enjoy pleasure: and, behold, this also is vanity. I said of laughter, it is mad: and of mirth, what doeth it? I sought in mine heart to give myself unto wine, yet acquainting mine heart with wisdom; and to lay hold on folly, till I might see what was that good for the sons of men, which they should do under the heaven all the days of their life. I made me great works; I builded me houses; I planted me vineyards; I made me gardens and orchards, and planted trees in them of all kind of fruits: I made me pools of water to water therewith the wood that bringeth forth trees: I got me servants and maidens, and had servants born in my house; also I had great possessions of great and small cattle above all that were in Jerusalem before me: I gathered me also silver and gold, and the peculiar treasure of kings and of the provinces: I gat me men singers and women singers, and the delights of the sons of men, as musical instruments, and that of all sorts. So I was great, and increased more than all that were before me in Jerusalem: also my wisdom remained with me. And whatsoever mine eyes desired I kept not from them, I withheld not my heart from any joy; for my heart rejoiced in all my labour: and this was my portion of all my labour. Then I looked on all the works that my hands had wrought, and on the labour that I had laboured to do: and, behold, all was vanity and vexation of the spirit, and there was no profit, from them under the sun. And I turned myself to behold wisdom, and madness, and folly: for what can the man do that cometh after the king? Even that which hath been already done. Then I saw that wisdom excelleth folly, as far as light excelleth darkness. The wise man's eyes are in his head; but the fool walketh in darkness: and I myself perceived also that one event happeneth to them all. Then I said in my heart, as it happeneth to the fool, so it happeneth even to me; and why was I then more wise? Then I said in my heart, that this also is vanity. For there is no remembrance of the wise more than of the fool for ever; seeing that which now is in the days to come shall all be forgotten. And how dieth the wise man? As the fool. Therefore I hated life; because the work that is wrought under the sun is grievous unto me: for all is vanity and vexation of spirit. Yea, I hated all my labour which I had taken under the sun: because I should leave it unto the man that shall be after me... For what hath man of all his labour, and of the vexation of his heart, wherein he hath laboured under the sun? For all his days are sorrows, and his travail is grief, yea his heart taketh not rest in the night. This is also vanity. There is nothing better for a man than that he should eat and drink, and that he should make his soul enjoy good in his labour...

14. All things come alike to all: there is one event to the righteous, and to the wicked; to the good and to the clean, and to the unclean; to him that sacrificeth and to him that sacrificeth not: as is the good, so is the sinner; and he that sweareth, as he that feareth an oath. There is an evil among all things that are done under the sun, that there is one event unto all; yea, also the heart of the sons of men is full of evil, and madness is in their heart while they live, and after that they go to the dead. For him that is joined to all the living there is hope: for a living dog is better than a dead lion. For the living know that they shall die: but the dead know not any thing, neither have they any more a reward; for the memory of them is forgotten. Also their love, and their hatred, and their envy, is now perished; neither have they any more a portion for ever of any thing that is done under the sun.'

15. Thus speaks Solomon, or the person who wrote these words.

16. This is what an Indian sage says: 'Saki-Muni, a young and happy Prince, from whom illness, old age and death had been kept secret, went out for a drive one day and saw a frightful, toothless, drivelling old man. The Prince, who until now knew nothing of old age, was aghast and asked the driver what it was and what had brought the man to such a pitiful, repulsive and ugly state. When he learnt that it is a fate common to all men and that he, a young Prince, inevitably faced the same thing, he could go no further and gave orders to return home so that he could think it over. He shut himself up alone and reflected on it. Presumably his thoughts consoled him because he went out again, happy and cheerful, for another drive. But this time he met a sick man. He saw an emaciated bluish, trembling man, with dim eyes. The Prince, from whom sickness had been hidden, stopped the driver and asked what this was. When he discovered that it was sickness, to which all people are susceptible and that he, a healthy and happy Prince, might become sick tomorrow, he again lost the spirit to be cheerful and demanded to be taken home, where he again sought solace. He probably found it for he set out again, for the third time. But on this occasion he saw yet another new thing:

he saw some people carrying something. 'What is it?' 'A dead man.' 'What does dead mean?' asked the Prince. He was told that to be dead was to be what this man was. The Prince went up to the dead body, uncovered it and looked at it. 'What will become of him now?' he asked. The Prince was told that the man would be buried in the ground. 'Why?' 'Because he will never live again and all that will come of him is stench and worms.' 'And is this the fate of all men? Will it happen to me too? Will I be buried and give off a stench and be consumed by worms?' 'Yes.' 'Go back! I do not wish to go for a drive. I will never go for a drive again!'
17. Saki-Muni could find no consolation in life and resolved that life is a great evil, and he devoted all the strength of his soul to freeing himself, and others, from life. He wanted to free them in such a way that after death life would not be renewed anywhere, but would be completely annihilated, at the roots. This is what all Indian sages say.
18. These then are the straightforward answers given by human wisdom in reply to the questions of life:
19. 'The life of the body is evil and a lie. And since the annihilation of the life of the body is a blessing we must long for it,' says Socrates.
20. 'Life is that which it should not be: evil. The transition into nothingness is the only thing sacred in life,' says Schopenhauer.
21. Everything in the world, both folly and wisdom, richness and poverty, happiness and grief, all is vanity and emptiness. A man dies and nothing remains. This is absurd,' says Solomon.
22. 'It is impossible to live in the consciousness that suffering, weakening, old age and death are inevitable; we must free ourselves from life, from all possibility of life,' says Buddha.
23. And the very same thing said by these powerful minds has been said and thought by millions of people similar to them. And I too have thought and felt it.
24. And thus my perusals in the realms of knowledge not only failed to lead me out of my despair, but simply increased it. One branch of knowledge did not answer the question of life; the other gave an answer but the reply only confirmed my despair and showed me that the conclusion I had reached was not the result of my erring ways, or of a morbid state of mind. On the contrary it convinced me that what I had thought was correct, and in accord with the conclusions reached by the most penetrating human minds.
25. To deceive oneself is pointless. All is vanity. Happy is he who was never born. Death is better than life; one must free oneself from it.

Chapter 7

1. Failing to find an explanation in knowledge I began to search for it in life, hoping to find it among the people around me. I began to observe how these people like myself lived, and how they dealt with the question that had led me to despair.
2. And this is what I discovered among people whose position in life, as regards education and lifestyle, was similar to my own.
3. I found that these people of my circle had four methods of escape from the dreadful situation in which we all find ourselves.
4. The first method of escape is that of ignorance. It consists of failing to recognize, or understand, that life is evil and absurd. The majority of the people of this kind are either women, or very young, or very stupid and have not yet understood the problem of life that presented itself to Schopenhauer, Solomon and Buddha. They see neither the dragon that is waiting for them, nor the mice that are gnawing away at the bush from which they are clinging, and they lick the drops of honey. But they only lick them for a while: something will turn their attention to the dragon and the mice and their licking will come to an end. There was nothing I could learn from them, for we can never cease knowing what we know. 5. The second method of escape is that of epicureanism. It consists, while knowing the hopelessness of life, of enjoying the blessings we have without looking at the dragon or the mice, and of licking the honey in the best possible way, especially if a lot of it has fallen on the bush. Solomon describes this method thus:
6. 'Then I commended mirth, because a man hath no better thing under the sun than to eat, to drink, and to be merry: for that shall abide with him of his labour the days of his life, which God giveth him under the sun...
7. Go thy way, eat thy bread with joy, and drink thy wine with a merry heart... Live joyfully with the wife whom thou lovest all the days of the life of thy vanity, which he hath given thee under the sun, all the days of thy vanity: for that is thy portion in this life, and in thy labour which thou takest under the sun... Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is not work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest' (Ecclesiastes, Ⅷ.15, Ⅸ.7, 9-10).

8. This second method of escape sustains the majority of people of our circle. The conditions in which they find themselves dictate that they have a greater share of the good things in life than the bad; their moral torpor allows them to forget that all the privileges of their position are accidental and that not everyone can have a thousand wives and palaces as Solomon did; that for every man with a thousand wives there are a thousand men without wives, and that for every palace there are a thousand men who built it by the sweat of their brow, and that the same chance that has made you Solomon today might make you Solomon's slave tomorrow. The inertia of these people's imagination enables them to forget why it was Buddha was granted no peace: the inevitability of illness, old age and death, which can, if not today then tomorrow, destroy all these pleasures. The fact that a number of these people affirm that the dullness of their thought and imagination is something called 'positive philosophy' fails, in my opinion, to make them any different from the ranks of those who, failing to see the question, lick the honey. I could not imitate these people, for not sharing their dullness of imagination I could not create it artificially in myself. Like any man who sincerely lives I could not turn my eyes away from the mice and the dragon once I had seen them.
9. The third method of escape is through strength and energy. It consists of realizing that life is evil and senseless, and of destroying it. This is what a few strong and consistent people do. Having understood the utter stupidity of the joke that is being played on them, and realizing that the blessings of the dead are far greater than the blessings of the living, and that the best thing of all is not to live, they act accordingly and instantly bring an end to this stupid joke, using any available means: a noose around the neck, water, a stab in the heart, a train on a railway line. There are increasing numbers of people belonging to our circle who act in this way. On the whole those who behave like this do so during the prime of their life, when the strength of the soul is in full force and few of the habits that undermine human reason have yet been acquired. I saw that this was the most worthy mode of escape and wanted to follow it through.
10. The fourth road of escape is that of weakness. It consists of clinging to a life that is evil and futile, knowing in advance that nothing can come of it. People belonging to this category know that death is preferable to life but, lacking the strength to act rationally and bring a quick end to the deception by killing themselves, they seem to wait for something. This is the escape of weakness, for if I know of something better and it is within my reach, then why not yield to it? I myself belonged to this category.

11. Thus, people of my kind have four ways of saving themselves from a terrible contradiction. However hard I strained my mental faculties I could find no other than these four modes of escape. In the first method there is a failure to understand that life is meaningless, vain and evil and that it is better not to live. I could not help knowing this, and once I had realized it I could not close my eyes to it. The second method is to make use of life, such as it is, without thinking about the future. Neither could I do this. Like Saki-Muni, I could not ride out hunting when I knew that suffering, old age and death exist. My imagination was too fertile. Moreover I could not take pleasure in those fleeting occasions which momentarily threw pleasure on my existence. The third method is to have realized that life is evil and absurd and to bring it to an end by killing oneself. The fourth method of escape is to live like Solomon and Schopenhauer, knowing that life is a stupid joke being played on us, but nevertheless continuing to live, to wash, to dress, to eat, to talk, and even to write books. Although I found it offensive and painful I remained in this position.

12. I can now see that if I did not kill myself it was because of some vague awareness that my ideas were mistaken. No matter how convincing and irrefutable I felt my train of thoughts to be, as well as that of the wise ideas that had led us all to the conclusion that life is meaningless I still had some obscure doubts as to the validity of the final outcome of my deliberations.

13. It was expressed as follows: I, that is my reason, have acknowledged that life is irrational. If there is nothing higher than reason (and there is not, and nothing can prove that there is), then reason is the creator of life for me. Without reason I can have no life. How then can reason deny life when it is the creator of it? Or looking at it another way: if there were no life my reason would not exist, which must mean that reason is the offspring of life. Life is everything. Reason is the fruit of life and yet this reason rejects life itself. I felt that something was not quite right here.

14. Life is a senseless evil, that is certain, I said to myself. Yet I have lived and still live, and so too humanity has lived and still lives. How can this be? Why do men live when it is possible not to live? Can it be that only Schopenhauer and I have been intelligent enough to understand the senselessness and evil of life?

15. The argument about the vanity of life is not particularly subtle and all simple folk have known it for a long time; yet they have lived and still live.

How is it they all live and never think of doubting the logic of life?

16. My knowledge, confirmed by the wisdom of the sages, had revealed to me that everything in the world, organic and inorganic, is arranged with the most unusual intelligence, and it is only my position that is absurd. But these fools, the vast masses of simple folk, while knowing nothing about the organic and inorganic arrangement of the world, continue to live and feel that life is very sensibly organized!

17. And it occurred to me that there might be something I did not yet know. After all, that is exactly how ignorance behaves. Ignorance always says what I am saying. When it does not know something it says that the thing it does not know is stupid. In any event it appears that there is a whole section of mankind that has lived and still lives, as if it knew the meaning of life, for without knowing this meaning it could not live. Yet I am saying that all life is meaningless and that I cannot live.

18. No one prevents Schopenhauer and me from denying life. Go ahead then, kill yourself and you won't have to think about it again. If you don't like life kill yourself. If you live and cannot understand the meaning of it, put an end to it, but don't turn around and start talking and writing about the fact that you don't understand life. You find yourself in cheerful company, where everyone is happy and know what they are doing, so if you find it boring and objectionable, leave!

19. For in the end what are we, who are convinced that suicide is obligatory and yet cannot resolve to commit it, other than the weakest, the most inconsistent and, speaking frankly, the most stupid of people, making such a song and dance with our banalities.

20. After all, our wisdom, however irrefutable it may be, has provided us with no understanding of the meaning of life. Yet all those millions who make up humanity manage to live without ever doubting its meaning.

21. Indeed, since those long ago days when life began and of which I know nothing, people who knew the argument about the vanity of life (which seems to me to prove its senselessness), have nevertheless lived and brought to life a meaning of their own. Ever since there has been some form of human life, people have had this understanding of life, and have pursued this life, and passed it down to me. Everything that is in me and around me is the fruit of their understanding of life. These very instruments of thought with which I judge life, and condemn it, were made by them and not by me. I myself was born, educated and grew up thanks to them. They dug up the iron, taught us how to fell wood, tamed the cattle and the horses, taught us how to sow the crops and how to live together; they created an order in life. They taught me how to think and speak. I am their offspring, provided by them with food and water, taught by them, able to think and speak using their thoughts and words, and now I have proved to them that it is all senseless! 'There is something wrong here,' I told myself, 'I have made a mistake somewhere.' But I could not discover where the mistake lay.

Chapter 8

1. None of these doubts, which I can now express more or less coherently, could I have formulated at the time. At the time I simply felt that despite the fact that my deductions about the vanity of life were logically unavoidable and were confirmed by the greatest thinkers, there was still something wrong with them. Whether it was in my reasoning, or whether it was in my formulation of the question, I did not know. I simply felt that the reasoning behind my conviction was complete, but that it was not enough. All these conclusions failed to persuade me to follow my argument to its end, that is to kill myself. I would not be speaking the truth if I said that it was through my reason that I arrived where I did and yet did not kill myself. My reason was working, but so too was something else that I can only call a consciousness of life. There was also another force at work which made me pay attention to the latter and not to the former. It was this force that led me out of my state of despair and guided my reason in an entirely different direction. It compelled me to pay attention to the fact that I, and the hundreds of others similar to myself, do not comprise the whole of humanity, and that I still did not know what this life of humanity was.

2. As I looked around at the narrow circle of my colleagues I saw nothing but people who had failed to understand the question, or who had understood it but drowned it in the intoxication of life, or who had understood it and had put an end to their lives, or who understood it but through weakness continued living in despair. And I saw no others. I thought that this narrow circle of scholars, and of rich and distinguished people, to which I belonged made up the whole of mankind and that the millions who had lived and still live were THEM, some sort of cattle, people.

3. It seems so strange to me now, so utterly incomprehensible, that in my reasoning of life I could have overlooked the life of humanity that surrounded me on all sides and that I could have been so ridiculously mistaken as to think that my life, and the life of Solomon and Schopenhauer, was the true, normal life, while the lives of millions was not worthy of attention. However strange it may seem now, I know it was so at the time. Amidst the wanderings of my conceited mind I felt certain that Solomon, Schopenhauer and myself had posed the question so honestly and exactly that there could be no two ways about it. I felt so certain that all these millions simply belonged to the category of those who had not yet penetrated the depths of the question, that as I searched for the meaning of my life it never once occurred to me to think: 'What sort of meaning do all the millions who have lived, and do live in the world give to their lives?'

4. I lived in this state of madness for a long time. It is a state which if not in deed then in words is very characteristic of more liberated and learned people. But whether it was thanks to my somewhat strange and instinctive love of the true working people that I was forced to understand them and to realize that they are not as stupid as we thought; or whether it was thanks to the sincerity of my conviction that I knew of nothing better to do than hang myself, I sensed anyway that if I wanted to live and to understand the meaning of life I must not seek it among those who have lost it and wish to kill themselves, but among the millions of people living and dead who have created life, and who carry the weight of our lives together with their own. And I looked around at the enormous masses of simple, uneducated people without wealth, who have lived and who still live, and I saw something quite different. I saw that with a few exceptions all those millions do not fit into my divisions, and that I could not categorize them as people who did not understand the question because they themselves posed, and answered, the question with unusual clarity. Neither could I categorize them as epicureans, since their lives rest more on deprivation and suffering than on pleasure. I could still less regard them as living out their meaningless lives irrationally, since they could explain every act of their lives, including death. They considered suicide the greatest evil. It appeared that mankind as a whole had some kind of comprehension of the meaning of life that I did not acknowledge and derided. It followed that rational knowledge does not provide the meaning of life, but excludes it; while the meaning given to life by the millions of people, by humanity as a whole, is founded on some sort of knowledge that is despised and considered false.

5. Rational knowledge, as presented by the learned and wise, negates the meaning of life, yet the vast masses—humanity as a whole—recognize that this meaning lies in irrational knowledge. And this irrational knowledge is faith, the very thing that I could not help rejecting. This God, one in three, the creation in six days, the devils and angels and all the rest that I could not accept without going mad.

6. My position was terrible. I knew that I could find nothing along the path of rational knowledge, other than negation of life. While in faith I found nothing other than a negation of reason, which was even more impossible than denial of life. According to rational knowledge life is an evil and people know it. They have the choice of ending their lives and yet they have always carried on living, just as I myself have done, despite having known for a long time that life is meaningless and evil. According to faith it follows that in order to comprehend the meaning of life I must renounce my reason, the very thing for which meaning was necessary.

Chapter 9

1. A contradiction arose from which there were only two ways out: either that which I called reasonable was not as reasonable as I thought, or that which I felt to be irrational was not as irrational as I thought. And I started to check the line of argument that stemmed from my rational knowledge.
2. As I checked this line of argument I found it to be entirely correct. The conclusion that life is nothing was inevitable, but I spotted a mistake. The mistake was that my thinking did not correspond to the question I had posed. The question was: why do I live? Or: is there anything that will remain and not be annihilated of my illusory and transitory life? Or: what meaning has my finite existence in an infinite universe? In order to answer this question I studied life.
3. Clearly the solution to all the possible questions of life could not satisfy me because my question, however simple it may seem at first, involves a demand for an explanation of the finite by means of the infinite and vice versa.
4. I had asked: what meaning has life beyond time, beyond space and beyond cause? And I was answering the question: 'What is the meaning of my life within time, space and cause?' The result was that after long and laboured thought I could only answer: none.
5. In my deliberations I was continually drawing comparisons between the finite and the finite, and the infinite and the infinite, and I could not have done otherwise. Thus I reached the only conclusion I could reach: force is force, matter is matter, will is will, the infinite is the infinite, nothing is nothing; and I could go no further than that.
6. It was somewhat similar to what happens in mathematics when, trying to resolve an equation, we get an identity. The method of deduction is correct, but the only answer obtained is that a equals a, and x equals x, or o equals o. Precisely the same thing was happening with my reasoning concerning the meaning of life. The only answers the sciences give to this question are identities.
7. And really, strictly rational knowledge, such as that of Descartes, begins with complete doubt in everything and throws aside any knowledge founded on faith, reconstructing everything along laws of reason and experiment. And it can provide no answer other than the one I reached: an indefinite one. It was only at first that I thought knowledge had given an affirmative answer, Schopenhauer's answer that life has no meaning and is evil. But when I went into the matter I realized that this answer is not affirmative and that it was only my senses that had taken it to be so. Strictly expressed, as it is by the Brahmins, Solomon, and Schopenhauer, the answer is but a vague one, an identity: o equals o, life presented to me as nothing is nothing. Thus, philosophical knowledge denies nothing but simply replies that it cannot solve the question, and that as far as it is concerned any resolution remains indefinite.

8. Having understood this, I realized that it was impossible to search for an answer to my questions in rational knowledge; that the answer given by rational knowledge simply suggests that the answer can only be obtained by stating the question in another way, by introducing the question of the relation of the finite to the infinite. I realized that no matter how irrational and distorted the answers given by faith might be, they had the advantage of introducing to every answer a relationship between the finite and the infinite, without which there can be no solution. Whichever way I put the question: how am I to live? the answer is always: according to God's law. Or to the question: is there anything real that will come of my life? the answer is: eternal torment or eternal bliss. Or, to the question: what meaning is there that is not destroyed by death? the answer is: unity with the infinite, God, heaven.

9. Thus in addition to rational knowledge, which I had hitherto thought to be the only knowledge, I was inevitably led to acknowledge that there does exist another kind of knowledge - an irrational one - possessed by humanity as a whole: faith, which affords the possibility of living. Faith remained as irrational to me as before, but I could not fail to recognize that it alone provides mankind with the answers to the question of life, and consequently with the possibility of life.

10. Rational knowledge had led me to recognize that life is meaningless. My life came to a halt and I wanted to kill myself. As I looked around at people, at humanity as a whole, I saw that they lived and affirmed that they knew the meaning of life. I looked at myself. I had lived as long as I knew the meaning of life. For me, as for others, faith provided the meaning of life and the possibility of living.

11. Having looked around further at people in other countries and at my contemporaries and predecessors, I saw the same thing. Where there is life there is faith. Since the day of creation faith has made it possible for mankind to live, and the essential aspects of that faith are always and everywhere the same.

12. Whatever answers faith gives, regardless of which faith, or to whom the answers are given, such answers always give an infinite meaning to the finite existence of man; a meaning that is not destroyed by suffering, deprivation or death. This means that only in faith can we find the meaning and possibility of life. I realized that the essential meaning of faith lies not only in the 'manifestations of things unseen', and so on, or in revelation (this is only a description of one of the signs of faith); nor is it simply the relationship between man and God (it is necessary to define faith, then God, and not God through faith); nor is it an agreement with what one has been told, although this is what faith is commonly understood to be. Faith is a knowledge of the meaning of human life, the consequence of which is that man does not kill himself but lives. Faith is the force of life. If a man lives, then he must believe in something. If he did not believe that there was something he must live for he would not live. If he does not see and comprehend the illusion of the finite he will believe in the finite. If he does understand the illusion of the finite, he is bound to believe in the infinite. Without faith it is impossible to live.

13. I recalled the whole course of my inner thinking and was horrified. It was now clear to me that in order for man to live he must either be unaware of the infinite, or he must have some explanation of the meaning of life by which the finite can be equated with the infinite. I had this explanation but it was no use to me while I believed in the finite; and I began to test it against my reason. And in the light of reason my former explanation vanished into thin air. But the time came when I no longer believed in the finite. And then I began, on a rational basis, to construct out of what I knew an explanation which might give a meaning to life; but nothing came of it. Together with the finest human intellects I reached the conclusion that o equals o and was most astonished at reaching this conclusion and that there could be no other.

14. What did I do when I searched for an answer in the experimental sciences? I wanted to find out why I lived and I therefore studied everything that exists outside myself. It became clear that I could discover a great deal, but nothing of what I needed.

15. What happened when I searched for the answer in the realms of philosophy? I studied the thoughts of those who found themselves in the same predicament as myself and who had no answer to the question of why we live. It was apparent that I could discover nothing here that I did not already know: namely that it is impossible to know anything.

16. What am I? A part of the infinite. It is indeed in these words that the whole problem lies. Can it be that this question has only occurred to man so recently? Can it be that no one before me has posed this question to himself, such a simple question, one that might spring to the lips of any intelligent child?
17. Surely this question has been raised ever since man has existed. Since the beginning it has been evident that solving the question by equating the finite with the finite is just as unsatisfactory as equating the infinite with the infinite. Since time immemorial man has striven to express the relationship between the finite and the infinite.
18. All the concepts we use to compare the finite to the infinite, and to arrive at an understanding of life, of the concepts of God, freedom and goodness, are put to the test of logic. But they fail to stand up to the critique of reason.
19. If it were not so frightening it would be amusing to observe the pride and complacency with which we, like children, take apart the watch, pull out the spring and make a toy of it, and are then surprised when the watch stops working.
20. It is both valuable and necessary to have a solution to the contradiction between the finite and the infinite, an answer to the question of life that makes it possible to live. The one solution we always find everywhere, among all peoples, is the solution that has been passed down to us from times we have lost all record of. It is such a difficult solution that we would be unable to devise anything like it. And it is a solution which we casually destroy so that we may yet again pose the question that confronts us all, and for which we do not have an answer.
21. The concepts of an infinite God, the sanctity of the soul, the relationship between God and the affairs of man, of moral good and evil, are all concepts that have been worked out in history, through the life of a humanity that is hidden to us. Without the existence of these concepts there would be neither life nor myself, and yet I, rejecting all the efforts of humanity, wanted to do it all over again, alone, in my own way.
22. I did not think so at the time but the germs of these thoughts were already within me. I realized that: (1) Despite our intelligence the contentions of Schopenhauer, Solomon and myself were foolish: we considered life to be evil and nevertheless continued to live. This was apparent stupidity because, if life is meaningless and I am so fond of reason, then I must destroy life so that no one can deny it. (2) All our arguments went round in a vicious circle, like a wheel that is not attached to the carriage. However much, and however well, we deliberated, we could find no answer to the question because o will always equal o, and therefore, our method must be mistaken. (3) I began to realize that the most profound wisdom of man is preserved in the answers given by faith, and that I did not have the right to negate them on grounds of reason and, above all, that it is these answers alone that can reply to the question of life.

Chapter 10

1. I could see this but it did not make matters any easier for me.
2. I was now prepared to accept any faith so long as it did not demand a direct denial of reason, which would have been a deceit. So I studied books on Buddhism and Mohammedanism and above all I studied Christianity, both through its writings and through people living around me.
3. Naturally I first turned to believers from my own circle, to learned people, Orthodox theologians, elder monks, theologians of the newest types of Orthodoxy, and even to the so-called New Christians who taught salvation through faith in redemption. I seized on these believers and questioned them on how they believed and what they understood to be the meaning of life.
4. Despite making all possible allowances and avoiding all arguments I could not accept the faith of these people. I saw that what they took to be faith gave no explanation to the meaning of life but obscured it, and that they themselves did not profess their faith in response to the question of life, that had led me to faith, but for some other reasons which were alien to me.
5. I recall the tormenting feeling of fear should I return to my former despair, after the hope I had experienced so many times in my relations with these people. The more precisely they expounded their teachings to me, the more clearly I saw their errors, until I lost all hope of finding an explanation to the meaning of life in their faith.
6. I was not so much alienated by the fact that in expounding their religious beliefs they confused Christian truths that had always been close to me with much that was unnecessary and irrational. It was more the fact that the lives of these people were just like my own, with the only difference that they did not live according to the principles expounded in their teachings. I felt strongly that they were deceiving themselves and that, like myself, they had no other concept of life than of living while they lived and of grabbing hold of everything they could. I saw this from the fact that if they had possessed a meaning that annihilated the fear of deprivation, suffering and death, they would not have been afraid of these things. But these believers of our class lived, just as I did, in excess, striving to maintain and increase it and fearing deprivation, suffering and death. Like myself and all non-believers, they lived only to satisfy their desires and they lived just as badly as, if not worse than, non-believers.

7. No arguments could convince me of the truth of their faith. Only actions showing me that they had an understanding of life that did not make them afraid, as I was, of poverty, sickness and death might have convinced me. But I witnessed no such behaviour among the believers of my circle. So that, while I witnessed this sort of behaviour among those of my circle who did not believe, I never witnessed it among the so-called believers.
8. I realized that the belief these men had was not the faith I was seeking and that their faith is not really faith but only one of the epicurean consolations in life. I understood that while this faith might perhaps serve, if not for consolation, then as some kind of distraction for a repentant Solomon on his deathbed, it is entirely unsuitable for the vast majority of mankind who do not seek amusement at the expense of other men's labour, but to make something of life. In order for mankind to live and to perpetuate life, instilling it with meaning, these millions must all have some different, more genuine concept of faith. Indeed it was not that neither I nor Solomon, nor Schopenhauer, had killed ourselves that convinced me of the existence of faith, but the fact that these millions have lived and still live, bearing those like Solomon and myself on the crest of their lives.
9. And I began to grow close to the believers among the poor, simple, uneducated folk: pilgrims, monks, sectarians and peasants. The belief held by these people was the same Christianity as that of the pseudo-believers of my circle. They too had mixed a great deal of superstition alongside Christian truths, but the difference was that while superstition was quite unnecessary to the believers of my circle, had nothing to do with their lives and simply provided some kind of epicurean distraction, the superstitions of the believers belonging to the labouring section of the population were so interconnected with their lives that they could not have conceived of life without them; they were a necessary condition of their lives. The whole way of life of the believers of my own circle stood in contradiction to their faith, whereas the whole way of life of the believers from the working population reaffirmed the meaning their faith gave to life. And I started to look more closely at the life and faith of these people, and the further I looked the more convinced I became that theirs was the true faith, that their faith was essential to them, and that it alone provides a sense of the meaning and possibility of life. In contrast to what I saw among the people of my class where it is possible to live without faith and where among the thousands there is barely one who can admit to being a believer, among them there is hardly one in a thousand who does not believe. In contrast to what I saw happening in my own circle, where the whole of life is spent in idleness, amusement and dissatisfaction with life, I saw that these people who laboured hard throughout their entire lives were less dissatisfied with life than the rich. In contrast to the people of our class who resist and curse the privations and sufferings of their lot, these people accept sickness and grief without question or protest, and with a calm and firm conviction that this is how it must be, that it cannot be otherwise and that it is all for the good. Contrary to us, who the more intelligent we are the less we understand the meaning of life and see some kind of malicious joke in the fact that we suffer and die, these people live, suffer and approach death peacefully and, more often than not, joyfully. In contrast to the fact that a peaceful death, a death without horror and despair, is a most rare exception in our circle, a tormented, rebellious and unhappy death is a most rare exception amongst these people. And there are millions and millions of these people who are deprived of all those things, which for the Solomons and I are the only blessings in life, and who nevertheless find tremendous happiness in life. I looked more widely around me. I looked at the lives of the multitudes who have lived in the past and who live today. And of those who understood the meaning of life I saw not two, or three, or ten, but hundreds, thousands and millions. And all of them, endlessly varied in their customs, minds, educations and positions, and in complete contrast to my ignorance, knew the meaning of life and death, endured suffering and hardship, lived and died and saw this not as vanity but good.

10. And I came to love these people. The further I penetrated into the lives of those living and dead about whom I had read and heard, the more I loved them and the easier it became for me to live. I lived like this for about two years and a great change took place within me, for which I had been preparing for a long time and the roots of which had always been in me. What happened was that the life of our class, the rich and learned, became not only distasteful to me, but lost all meaning. All our activities, our discussions, our science and our art struck me as sheer indulgence. I realized that there was no meaning to be found here. It was the activities of the labouring people, those who produce life, that presented itself to me as the only true way. I realized that the meaning provided by this life was truth and I accepted it.

Chapter 11

1. I remembered how these very beliefs repelled me and seemed devoid of any meaning when they were professed by people who lived in contradiction to them, and I remembered how these same beliefs attracted me and seemed sensible when I saw people living in accord with them; and I realized why I had rejected them and found them meaningless and why I now accepted them and found them full of meaning. I realized that I had been lost, and how I had become lost. I had strayed not so much because my ideas had been incorrect as because I had lived foolishly. I realized that I had been blinded from the truth not so much through my mistaken thoughts as through my life itself, which had been spent in satisfying desire and in exclusive conditions of epicureanism. I realized that my question as to what my life is, and the answer that it is an evil, was quite correct. The only mistake was that I had extended an answer that related only to myself to life as a whole. I had asked myself what my life was and had received the answer that it is evil and meaningless. And this was quite true, for my life of indulgent pursuits was meaningless and evil, but that answer applied only to my life and not to human life in general. I understood a truism that I subsequently found in the gospels: that people often preferred darkness to light because their deeds were evil. For he who acts maliciously hates light and avoids it so as not to throw light on his deeds. I understood that in order to understand life it is first of all necessary that life is not evil and meaningless, and then one may use reason in order to elucidate it. I realized why I had for so long been treading so close to such an obvious truth without seeing it, and that in order to think and speak about human life one must think and speak about human life and not about the lives of a few parasites. The truth has always been the truth, just as 2×2＝4, but I had not admitted it, because in acknowledging that 2×2＝4 I would have had to admit that I was a bad man. And it was more important and necessary for me to feel that I was good than to admit that 2×2＝4. I came to love good people and to loathe myself, and I acknowledged the truth. And then it all became clear to me.

2. Imagine an executioner who has spent all his life torturing people and chopping off heads, or a hopeless drunkard, or a madman who has spent his entire life in a dark room which he detests but imagines that he would die if he left it - imagine if they should ask themselves, 'What is life?' Obviously the only answer they could come up with is that life is the greatest of evils. The madman's answer would be absolutely correct, but only with respect to himself. Suppose I am such a madman? Suppose all of us who are wealthy and learned are such madmen?

3. And I realized that we really are such madmen. I, at any rate, was one. Indeed, a bird is made in such a way that it can fly, gather food and build a nest, and when I see a bird doing these things I rejoice. Goats, hares and wolves are made in order to eat, multiply and feed their families, and when they do this I feel quite sure that they are happy and that their lives are meaningful. What should a man do? He too must work for his existence, just as the animals do, but with the difference that he will perish if he does it alone, for he must work for an existence, not just for himself, but for everyone. And when he does this I feel quite sure that he is happy and that his life has meaning. And what had I been doing for all those thirty years of conscious life? Far from working for an existence for everyone, I had not even done so for myself. I had lived as a parasite and when I asked myself why I lived, I received the answer: for nothing. If the meaning of human existence lies in working to procure it I had spent thirty years attempting, not to procure it, but to destroy it for myself and for others. How then could I get any answer other than that my life is evil and meaningless? Indeed it was evil and meaningless.

4. The life of the world runs according to someone's will; our lives and the lives of everything in existence are in someone else's hands. In order to have any chance of comprehending this will we must first fulfil it by doing what is asked of us. If I do not do what is asked of me I will never understand what it is that is asked of me, and still less what is asked of us all, of the whole world.

5. If a naked, hungry beggar were taken at a crossroads and led to an enclosed part of a splendid establishment where he is given food and drink, and then forced to move some kind of handle up and down, it is obvious that before deciding why it was he had been brought there to move the handle, and whether or not the establishment was reasonably arranged, the beggar must first move the handle. If he moves the handle he will see that it operates a pump, that the pump draws water and the water flows into the garden. Then he will be taken away from the enclosed place and given another job, and he will gather fruits and will enter into the joy of his Lord. As he progresses from lower to higher tasks he will continue to understand more and more about the structure of the establishment and participate in it, and he will never stop to ask why he is there, and he will never come to reproach his master.

6. Likewise the simple uneducated working people, whom we refer to as the herd, fulfil the will of their master without ever reproaching him. But we, the wise, eat the master's food without doing what he asks of us; instead of doing it we sit around in circles debating whether we should do something as stupid as moving a handle up and down. And then we think it over and decide that either the master is stupid, or that he does not exist and that we are the only intelligent ones. The only thing is, we feel that we are no good for anything and that we must somehow escape from ourselves.

Chapter 12

1. Having realized the errors in rational knowledge I found it easier to free myself from the temptation of futile theorizing. The conviction that knowledge of the truth can only be found in life stirred me to doubt the worth of my own way of life. The thing that saved me was that I managed to tear myself away from my exclusive existence and see the true life of the simple working people, and realize that this alone is genuine life. I realized that if I wanted to understand life and its meaning I had to live a genuine life and not that of a parasite; and having accepted the meaning that is given to life by that real section of humanity who have become part of that genuine life, I had to try it out.
2. At this time the following happened to me: over the course of a whole year, almost every minute I asked myself whether I had not better kill myself with a rope or a bullet. And at the same time as I was experiencing the thoughts and observations I have described, my heart was agonized by a tormenting feeling. I can only describe this feeling as a quest for God.
3. I say that this quest for God was not a debate but an emotion because it did not arise from my stream of thoughts - it was in fact quite contrary to them - but from my heart. It was a feeling of fear, abandonment, loneliness, amid all that was strange to me, and a sense of hope that someone would help me.
4. Despite the fact that I was utterly convinced of the impossibility of proving the existence of a God (Kant had shown me this and I had fully understood that it cannot be proven), I nevertheless searched for God in the hope that I might find Him, and reverting to an old habit of prayer, I prayed to Him whom I sought but could not find. In my mind I went over the arguments of Kant and Schopenhauer on the impossibility of proving the existence of God, and I began to refute them. Cause, I told myself, does not belong to the same category of thought as space and time. If I exist then there must be a cause, and a cause of the cause. And the cause of everything is that which we call God. I dwelled on this thought and tried with my whole being to recognize the presence of this cause. And as soon as I recognized that there is a force with power over me I immediately felt the possibility of life. But I asked myself: 'What is this cause, this force? How should I think about it? How should I relate to this thing I call God?' But only the familiar answers came into my head: 'He is the creator, He is omniscient.' The answers did not satisfy me and I felt that I still lacked something inside me that is necessary in order to live. I fell into a state of panic and started to pray to the one whom I sought, in order that He might help me. And the more I prayed the more apparent it became that He did not hear me and that there was really no one to whom I could turn. And with my heart full of grief that there was no one, no God, I cried: 'Lord have mercy on me. Save me! O Lord show me the way!' But no one had mercy on me and I felt that my life had come to an end.

5. Yet time and again, from different approaches, I kept coming to the same conclusion, that I could not have come into the world without any cause, reason, or meaning; that I could not be the fledgeling fallen from the nest that I felt myself to be. If I lie on my back crying in the tall grass, like a fledgeling, it is because I know that my mother brought me into the world, kept me warm, fed me and loved me. But where is she, that mother? If I am abandoned, then who has abandoned me? I cannot hide myself from the fact that someone who loved me gave birth to me. Who is this someone? Again, God.

6. 'He knows and He sees my search, my struggle and my grief. He does exist,' I told myself. And I had only to recognize this for an instant and life would rise up within me and I would feel the possibility and joy of living. But again, from the recognition of the existence of God, I moved on to search for my relationship to Him, and again I was presented with that God, our Creator, in three persons, who sent us His son, our Saviour. And again, that God, separated from me and the world, would melt like ice before my eyes, and once more there was nothing left and my flicker of life was extinguished. I fell into despair and felt that there was nothing else I could do except kill myself. And worst of all was that I did not even feel I could do that.

7. Not two or three, but tens of hundreds of times, my mood suddenly changed from joy and animation to despair and a consciousness of the impossibility of living.

8. I can remember once in early spring I found myself alone in the woods. I was listening and concentrating my thoughts on the one thing I had been continuously thinking about over the last three years. Again I was searching for God.

9. 'Fine then,' I said to myself, 'so there is no God, other than something I imagine and the only reality is my own life. There is no God and no miracle can prove that there is because it would only be part of my imagination, and would be irrational.'

10. 'But what about my concept of God, of He whom I seek?' I asked myself, 'Where does this concept come from?' Once again, confronted with these thoughts, joyous waves of life surged up within me. Everything around me came to life and took on meaning. But my joy did not last long. My mind continued its work. 'A concept of God is not God,' I told myself. 'A concept of God is something within me that I can either evoke or not evoke. It is not this that I am seeking. I am seeking that, without which there cannot be life.' Once again everything within and around me began to die, and again I wanted to kill myself.
11. But then I stopped and looked at myself and at what was going on inside me. I recalled the hundreds of occasions when life had died within me only to be reborn. I remembered that I only lived during those times when I believed in God. Then, as now, I said to myself: I have only to believe in God in order to live. I have only to disbelieve in Him, or to forget Him, in order to die. What are these deaths and rebirths? It is clear that I do not live when I lose belief in God's existence, and I should have killed myself long ago, were it not for a dim hope of finding Him. I live truly only when I am conscious of Him and seek Him. What then is it you are seeking? a voice exclaimed inside me. There He is! He, without whom it is impossible to live. To know God and to live are one and the same thing. God is life.
12. 'Live in search of God and there will be no life without God!' And more powerfully than ever before everything within and around me came to light, and the light has not deserted me since.
13. And I was saved from suicide. When and how this change occurred in me I could not say. Just as the life force within me was extinguished gradually and imperceptibly, and I came upon the impossibility of life, the cessation of life and the need for suicide, so too did this life force return to me, gradually and imperceptibly. And, strangely, the life force that returned to me was not a new one but the same old one that had attracted me during the early period of my life. I returned to all those things that had been part of my childhood and youth. I returned to a belief in that will that had given birth to me and which asked something of me. I returned to the idea that the single most important aim of my life is to improve myself, that is, to live according to this will. I returned to the conviction that I could find the manifestation of this will in something that had been hidden from me for a long time, in what humanity had worked out long ago for its own guidance. In other words I returned to a belief in God, in moral perfection, and to that tradition which had given life a meaning. Only the difference now was that whereas before I had accepted all this unconsciously, I now knew that I could not live without it.

14. Something like this happened to me: without remembering when I had been put into it, I found myself in a boat that had set off from some unknown shore. The direction to the opposite shore was shown to me, oars were put into my inexperienced hands, and I was left alone. I rowed as best I could and moved forwards, but the further I rowed towards the centre of the stream, the faster the current became that was carrying me directly away from my object, and I kept meeting more oarsmen like myself, who were being carried away by the current. There were lone oarsmen who continued to row; there were some who had discarded their oars; there were large rowing boats and enormous ships full of people, some struggling with the current, others abandoning themselves to it. And as I looked at the flow of those drifting downstream, I found that the more I rowed, the more I forgot the directions that had been given to me. In the very middle of the current, amid the crowd of boats and ships being pulled downstream, I lost my directions and abandoned my oars. From all directions people were being carried downstream by sail and oar, shouting for joy and assuring me and themselves that there could be no other direction. And I believed them and flowed with them. And I was carried a long way, so far that I could hear the noise of the rapids which were bound to shatter me, and I caught sight of boats that were already being smashed against them. Then I came to my senses. For a long time I could not understand what had happened to me. I saw nothing ahead of me except the destruction towards which I was rushing, but which I feared, and I could see no salvation anywhere, and I did not know what to do. But looking behind me I saw countless boats that could not stop but were defiantly pushing against the current, and I remembered the oars and the direction of the shore, and I began to struggle back against the current, towards the shore.

15. The shore was God, the direction was tradition, and the oars were the freedom given to me to row towards the shore and unite with God. In this way the force of life rose up within me and I started to live once again.

Chapter 13

1. I renounced the life of our class, having recognized that it is not life but only a semblance of life, and that the conditions of luxury in which we live deprive us of the possibility of understanding life. I knew that in order to comprehend life I must understand the life not of the minority of those of us who are parasites, but of the simple working people, and of the meaning they give to life. The ordinary working people around me were the Russian people and it was to them that I turned, and to the meaning they give to life. This meaning, if it is possible to describe, is as follows. Every person comes into the world through the will of God. And God created man in such a way that each of us can either destroy his soul or save it. Man's purpose in life is to save his soul; in order to save his soul he must live according to God.
2. In order to live according to God one must renounce all the comforts of life, work, be humble, suffer and be merciful. This is the meaning the people have derived from all the religious teaching that has been handed down and communicated to them by the pastors, and by the traditions that form part of their lives and are expressed in their legends, sayings and tales, and it was clear to me and close to my heart. But, together with this meaning rooted in the faith of the people, there was much that was inextricably bound to the non-sectarian people among whom I lived, which revolted me and which I found incomprehensible: the sacraments, the church services, the fasts, the bowing before relics and icons. The people could not separate one thing from another, and neither could I. However strange I found much of what went on in the people's faith, I accepted all of it, attended services, prayed morning and evening, fasted, received communion, and for the first time my reason did not oppose anything. The very thing I had formerly found impossible now provoked no opposition.
3. My attitude to faith was now quite different from what it had been before. Formerly life had seemed full of meaning, and belief seemed to comprise an arbitrary confirmation of various completely unnecessary and irrational propositions that had nothing to do with life. At that time I asked myself what meaning these propositions could have and, convinced that they had none, I threw them aside. Now, on the contrary, I knew very well that my life has, and could have, no meaning. And not only did the tenets of faith cease to appear unnecessary to me, but I was led by indisputable experience to the conviction that it was only these tenets that can give meaning to life. I had formerly looked upon them as completely irrelevant double Dutch but now, even if I knew that I did not understand them, I knew there was meaning in them, and I told myself that I must learn to understand them. I made the following calculation. I told myself that, as with man and his faculty of reason, knowledge of faith arises from a mysterious source. This source is God, the origin of the human mind and body. Just as my body has succeeded to me from God, so too has my reason and my comprehension of life; therefore the stages in the development of this comprehension cannot be false. Those things in which people sincerely believe must be the truth. It may be expressed in various ways but it cannot be a lie. Therefore if I think it is a lie, it can only mean that I do not understand it. And I also said to myself: the essence of any faith consists in giving a meaning to life that will not perish with death. Faith must provide answers to the questions of a Tsar dying in the midst of luxury, an old serf worn out by work, an ignorant child, a wise old man, a half-witted old lady, a happy young woman, and a youth racked with passion. And so, if it is to answer to people living in the most differing circumstances of life and of different education, and if there is only one answer to the eternal questions of life—why do I live? what is the purpose of my life?—this answer, although essentially always the same, must be endlessly varied in its manifestation. The more unique, sincere and profound the answer, the more strange and peculiar it will appear in attempts to give it expression, depending on the education and circumstances of each individual. But these debates, while justifying much that was strange to me about the ritualistic aspects of religion, were nevertheless insufficient to enable me to perform acts I felt dubious about, particularly when it came to the faith that had become the sole concern of my life. With all the powers of my being I wished to be in a position whereby I could merge with the people in fulfilling the ritual aspects of their faith; but I could not do it. I felt that I would be lying to myself, and mocking what I considered sacred, if I were to do so. But at this point I was helped by some new Russian theological works.

4. According to the explanations of these theologians, the basic dogma of faith is the infallibility of the Church. The truth of everything the Church professes follows from this dogma as a necessary conclusion. The Church, as an assembly of believers, united in love and therefore possessing the truth, became the basis of my faith. I told myself that religious truth cannot be attained by one man alone, but only reveals itself to a union of all people, united through love. In order for the truth to be attained there must be no separation; and for there to be no separation we must love and make peace with those who are not in agreement with us. Truth manifests itself as love, and therefore if you do not respect the rituals of the Church you destroy love. And in destroying love you deprive yourself of the possibility of knowing the truth. At the time I did not see the sophistry of this argument. I did not see that unity in love can reveal the greatest love but never the divine truth as expressed in the definitive words of the Nicene Creed. I failed to see that love can never make a given expression of the truth a compulsory condition of unity. At the time I did not see the flaws in the argument, and thanks to it I was able to accept and fulfil all the rites of the Orthodox Church without understanding the majority of them. At the time I tried with my whole soul to avoid any arguments or contradictions, and attempted to explain those doctrines of the Church with which I was in conflict as reasonably as possible.

5. In fulfilling the church rituals I subdued my reason and submitted myself to a tradition shared by all mankind. I united myself with my ancestors and loved ones, with my father and mother, and grandfather and grandmother. They and all who came before them had believed and lived, and they had brought me into the world. And I joined those millions whom I so admired. Nor was there anything wrong in these acts in themselves (by wrong I mean the indulgence of desire). As I rose early in the morning to go to church I knew that I was doing something good, if only in that I was sacrificing my bodily comforts in order to subdue my proud mind, for the sake of unity with my ancestors and contemporaries, and of finding the meaning of life. It was the same when I prepared for communion and said my daily prayers, making the sign of the cross and genuflecting, as too when I fasted. However insignificant these sacrifices were, they were made for the sake of something good. I prepared for communion, I fasted and I observed the hours of prayer both at home and in church. While listening to the church services I paused at each word and whenever I could I gave it meaning. In the liturgy the most significant words for me were: 'Love one another in unity.' But further on I ignored the words: 'We believe in the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost', because I could not understand them.

Chapter 14

1. At the time it was so essential for me to believe in order to live that I subconsciously hid from myself the contradictions and obscurities in the religious dogma. But there was a limit to the amount of meaning that could be read into the rituals. If the most important words of the Ectene became increasingly clear to me, and even if I somehow managed to interpret the words: 'And remembering Our Sovereign Lady, Holy Mother of God, and all the saints, ourselves and one another, let us all devote our entire life to Christ, Our Lord'; and even if I interpreted the frequent repetition of prayers for the Tsar and his family by the fact that they are more exposed to temptation than others, and therefore in greater need of prayer, and the prayers for the subjugation of our enemies and adversaries by saying that they are evil, nevertheless these prayers and others, such as the Hymn of the Cherubim, the Chosen Warriors, as well as the whole sacrament of the Eucharist, in fact nearly two thirds of the service, if not all of it, had no meaning or made me feel that in giving it meaning I was lying and thereby destroying my relation to God and losing all possibility of faith.
2. I experienced the same thing over the celebration of the major feasts. I could understand the law of observing the Sabbath, in other words devoting one day to God. But the most important feast was in memory of the Resurrection, the reality of which I could neither imagine nor understand. And the name 'Resurrection' was also given to the weekly feast day. On this day the sacrament of the Eucharist was performed, which I found quite incomprehensible. All the other twelve feast days, except for Christmas, were in memory of miracles - things which I endeavoured not to think about, in order not to deny them: the Ascension, Pentecost, the Epiphany, the Intercession of the Virgin, and so on. At the celebration of these festivals, feeling that an importance had been ascribed to things I considered to be of little importance, I either invented something that would suffice as an explanation, or closed my eyes so that I would not see the things that tempted me.
3. This happened to me more powerfully than ever when I participated in what are the most usual, and regarded as the most important, sacraments:

Baptism and Communion. Here I did not come into conflict with something incomprehensible but with fully comprehensible acts; it seemed to me that these acts were seductive and I found myself in a dilemma - either I rejected them, or I lied about them.

4. I shall never forget the tormenting feeling that I experienced on the day I received communion for the first time in many years. The service, the priest, the rules of prayer, were all something I could understand, and created in me a joyful realization that the meaning of life was being revealed. The communion itself I interpreted as an act performed in memory of Christ, signifying the purification of sin and the full acceptance of Christ's teachings. If this explanation was artificial I failed to notice its falsity. As I bowed down and humbled myself before the confessor, a simple, timid priest, I felt so happy to be shaking loose all the dirt in my soul, repenting all my sins, so happy to be united in thought with the aspirations of the Fathers who had written the prayers of the office, so happy to be united with all those who have and who do believe, that I failed to notice the artificiality of my interpretations. But when I approached the Royal Doors and the priest asked me to repeat what I believe, and that what I was about to receive was actually the body and blood, my heart contracted; it was more than a false note, it was a cruel demand made by someone who evidently had never known what faith is.

5. I can now permit myself to say that it was a cruel demand, but at the time I did not think so; it was just horribly painful to me. I was no longer in the position I had been in during my youth, when I thought that everything in life was lucid. I had come to faith because apart from it I had found nothing, absolutely nothing, other than destruction; it was therefore impossible to give up the faith, and so I submitted. I discovered in my soul a feeling that helped me to endure it. It was a sense of self-abasement and humility. I humbled myself and swallowed the body and blood without feeling any sense of blasphemy, and with the desire to believe; but the blow had already struck. Knowing in advance what awaited me I could not do it a second time.

6. I nevertheless continued to perform the church rituals, and I still believed that the truth lay in the dogma I was following. Then something happened to me which is clear to me now, but which struck me as strange at the time.

7. I was listening to the conversation of an illiterate peasant, a pilgrim, speaking about God, religion, life and salvation when a knowledge of faith was opened up to me. I drew closer to the people and, as I listened to their debates on life and religion, I found myself coming closer and closer to an understanding of the truth. The same thing happened to me when I read the Lives of the Martyrs and the Prologues, which became my favourite reading. Disregarding the miracles and thinking of them as fables expressing ideas, this reading revealed to me the meaning of life. There were the lives of Macarius the Great, Joseph the Prince (the story of Buddha), the writings of John Chrysostom, the story of the traveller in the well, of the monk who found gold, of Peter the Publican and the histories of the martyrs, all of whom proclaimed that death does not obliterate life; and there were the tales of illiterate and stupid men who found salvation, although they knew nothing about the teachings of the Church.

8. But I had only to mix in the company of learned believers, or to borrow their books, and vague feelings of doubt, dissatisfaction and exasperation with their arguments would rise up within me, and I felt that the further I penetrated their discourses, the further I distanced myself from the truth and headed for despair.

Chapter 15

1. I so often envied the peasants their illiteracy and lack of learning. They found nothing false in those doctrinal statements which seemed apparent rubbish to me. They could accept them and believe in the truth, in the same truth that I believed in. Only for me, wretched fellow, it was obvious that the truth was interwoven with fine threads of falsehood, and that I could not accept it as such.
2. Thus I lived for about three years and in the early days when, like one possessed, I was gradually acquiring the truth, scenting out the direction that seemed the clearest, these details struck me less. When I failed to understand something I told myself: 'I am guilty, I am a fool.' But the more I became infused with the truths I was studying, the more they became the basis of my life, the more burdensome and irritating these obstacles became, and the sharper the division between what I did not understand and what I could never understand except by lying to myself.
3. Despite the doubts and sufferings I still clung to the Orthodox Church. But questions of life that had to be resolved kept rising to the surface, and the Church's ruling on these issues - contrary to the very foundations of faith by which I lived - finally obliged me to renounce the possibility of communion with Orthodoxy. First and foremost these issues concerned the attitude of the Orthodox Church to other Churches, to the Catholics and the so-called Raskolniks. At the time, as a result of my interest in religion, I had come into contact with believers of various denominations: Catholics, Protestants, Old Believers, Molokans, and others. Among them I met many deeply moral men with sincere belief. I wished to be a brother to these people. And what happened? The teaching which had promised me unity of all through one faith and through love, that very teaching, speaking through its highest representatives, told me that all these people were living a lie, that the thing which gave them strength of life was a temptation of the devil, and that it is we alone who are in possession of the only possible truth. And I saw that the Orthodox Church regarded as heretics all those who did not profess an identical faith to theirs, just as the Catholics and the others consider the Orthodox followers to be heretics. And I saw that the Orthodox, although they may try to hide it, regard with hostility all those who do not practise their faith by using the same external symbols and words as themselves. And this could not be otherwise, first of all because the assertion that you live in falsehood and I in truth is the most cruel thing that one man can say to another and secondly, because a man who loves his children and his brothers cannot help feeling hostile towards those who want to convert his children and his brothers to a false belief. And this hostility increases in proportion to one's knowledge of theology. And assuming that truth lies in union by love, I was struck by the fact that theology was destroying the thing it should be advancing.

4. The temptation is obvious to educated men like ourselves who live in countries where a variety of different faiths are practised and who have seen the contemptuous, self-righteous, invincible manner of rejection with which the Catholics behave towards the Orthodox and the Protestants, and the Orthodox towards the Catholics and Protestants, and the Protestants towards them both. And there is such a similar attitude between the Old Believers, Russian Evangelists, Shakers and all the other religions, that the very obviousness of the temptation initially perplexed me. I told myself: no, it cannot be so simple. Surely if men fail to see that if their two convictions contradict each other, then neither of them possesses the sole truth that constitutes faith. There is something else here, there must be an explanation. I felt sure there was and I searched for the explanation, reading everything I could on the subject and consulting everyone I could. But I received no explanation other than the one according to which the Sumsky Hussars consider themselves to be the finest regiment in the world, while the Yellow Uhlans consider that they are the best regiment in the world. The ecclesiastics of all the different religious denominations, through their finest representatives, could tell me nothing except that they believed themselves to be in possession of the truth whilst others had strayed from it and that all they could do was to pray for them. I visited archimandrites, bishops, elder monks and monks of the strictest orders, yet none of them made any attempt to elucidate the matter for me. Only one explained it to me, but in such a way that I never asked anyone again.

5. I have already said that for every non-believer who returns to the faith (and this could include all of our younger generation), the question that first presents itself is: why is the truth not to be found in Lutheranism, or Catholicism, but only in the Orthodox faith? Someone who has been educated at secondary school cannot help knowing what the peasant does not know - namely, that the Protestants and Catholics are equally convinced of the singular truth of their faiths. Historical evidence, twisted by each religion to suit its own purpose, is insufficient. Is it not possible, as I have suggested, to understand the teachings in a superior way, so that from an elevated level the differences might disappear, as they do for people who genuinely believe? Is it not possible to go further along that path which we are following with the Old Believers? They stress the fact that their cross, their allelujahs, and their way of processing around the altar differ from ours. We say: you believe in the Nicene Creed and in the seven sacraments, and so do we. Let us keep to that and for the rest you may do as you please. Thus we have united with them by placing the essential aspects of faith above the non-essential. Is it not possible to say to the Catholics: you believe in such and such and so and so, which are the important things, as for the issue of the filoque and the Pope, you may do as you please. And can we not say the same to the Protestants and unite with them in the more important issues? My interlocutor agreed with my ideas, but told me that such concessions would provoke criticism from the spiritual authorities in that it suggests a departure from the faith of our ancestors and would lead to a schism, and that the vocation of the clergy is to safeguard, in all its purity, the Greek Orthodox faith that has been handed down by our forefathers.

6. Then I understood it all. While I am seeking faith, the force of life, they are seeking the best way of fulfilling, in the eyes of men, certain human obligations. And in fulfilling these human affairs they perform them in a human fashion. However much they might speak about their compassion for their lost brethren, or of their prayers for those who stand before the throne of the Almighty, it has always been necessary to use force in carrying out human duties. Just as it has always been applied, so it is now, and always will be. If two religions each consider that they hold the truth and the other a lie, then in order to convert their brothers to the truth they will each preach their own doctrines. And if a false doctrine is taught to the inexperienced sons of the Church which holds the truth, then that Church will have no choice other than to burn the books and banish the person who is leading his sons into temptation. What can be done with a sectarian who, in the eyes of the Orthodox Church, is ablaze with the fire of false doctrine, and who is misleading the sons of the Church in the most important matter of life, in faith? What can be done with him other than chop off his head or imprison him? Under the Tsar, Alexis Mikhailovitch, they were burned at the stake; in other words, the severest method of punishment of the time was enforced. In our day too the severest method of punishment is enforced: imprisonment in solitary confinement. As I turned my attention to what is done in the name of religion I was horrified and very nearly repudiated Orthodoxy. A further thing was the Church's attitude to life with regard to war and executions.

7. At the time Russia was at war. And, in the name of Christian love, Russians were killing their fellow men. It was impossible not to think about this. It was impossible to avoid the fact that killing is evil and contrary to the most basic principles of any faith. And yet prayers were said in the churches for the success of our armies, and our religious teachers acknowledged this killing as an outcome of faith. And this was not only applied to murder in time of war, but, during the troubled times that followed the war, I witnessed members of the Church, her teachers, monks, and ascetics condoning the killing of helpless, lost youths. As I turned my attention to all that is done by people who profess Christianity, I was horrified.

Chapter 16

1. I no longer had any doubts and was fully convinced that not all the teachings of the faith I had joined were true. Whereas before I used to say that all religious teaching is a lie, I no longer found it possible to say this. There could be no doubt that the people as a whole had a knowledge of the truth, otherwise they would not be here. Moreover, this knowledge of the truth was now accessible to me; I had already lived by it and felt its validity. But there was falsehood in it as well, of this I had no doubt. All that had hitherto repelled me now stood vividly before me. Although I could see that the mixture of lies I so loathed was less apparent among the peasants than among the representatives of the Church, I could nevertheless see that even in the people's faith there was falsehood mixed with the truth.
2. But where did the falsehood come from, and where did the truth come from? Both had been passed down by what is called the Church. But falsehood and truth are contained in tradition, in the so-called holy tradition and in the Scriptures.
3. Whether I liked it or not, I was led to study and examine these writings and traditions - an examination that until now I had been very fearful of.
4. I turned to a study of that very theology I had once so contemptuously rejected as unnecessary. It had previously struck me as a collection of useless nonsense, this at a time when I had been surrounded by manifestations of life that I thought clear and full of meaning. Now I would have been glad to discard all those things that did not enhance health of mind, but I did not know what to do with myself. The one meaning of life that had been revealed to me rests on this religious doctrine, or is at least inseparably connected. However far-fetched it might seem to my old, infirm mind, it was the only hope of salvation. It must be carefully and attentively examined in order to be understood, even if it is not understood in the way I understand the propositions of science. I do not seek that, nor can I, since I know the unusual nature of religious knowledge. I shall not seek the explanation of everything. I know that the explanation of all things, like the origin of all things, must remain a secret of eternity. But I want to understand in such a way as to be brought to the inevitably inexplicable. I want to realize that all that is inexplicable is so, not because the demands of my intellect are at fault (they are correct and apart from them I can understand nothing), but because I can recognize the limits of my intellect. I want to understand in such a way that everything inexplicable presents itself to me as being necessarily inexplicable and not as being something that I am under an obligation to believe.

5. I have no doubt that there is truth in the teachings, but I also have no doubt that there is falsehood in them too, and that I must discover what is true and what is false and separate one from the other. This is what I have set out to do. That which I found false in the teachings, and that which I found true, and the conclusions I came to comprise the following section of this essay, which, if someone should consider it worthwhile and useful to people, will probably be published some day, somewhere.

6. I wrote the above three years ago.
7. The other day, while I was re-reading this printed section and returning to the train of thoughts and feelings that were inside me when I was experiencing all this, I had a dream. This dream expressed for me, in condensed form, all that I had lived through and described, therefore I think that for those who have understood me a description of the dream will refresh, clarify and unify all that has been related at such length in these pages. Here is the dream: I see that I am lying on a bed. I am neither comfortable, nor uncomfortable. I am lying on my back. But I start to think about whether or not I am comfortable and it seems to me that my legs are a bit awkward; I do not know whether it is that they are too short or that they are uneven. I shift my legs and at the same time I begin to think about the way I am lying and what I am lying on, things which had not entered my head until now. And looking at my bed I see that I am lying on some plaited rope supports that are attached to the sides of the bed. My feet are resting on one of the supports, my calves on another and my legs are uncomfortable. I somehow know that these supports can be moved. Moving one of my legs I push away the furthest support beneath my feet. I presume that this will be better. But I have pushed it too far and want to rescue it with my legs, and this movement causes yet another support, beneath my calves, to fall off and my calves are left dangling. I move my whole body in order to adjust my position and am quite certain that this will settle the matter. But with this movement still more of the supports slip and move away beneath me and I can see that things are getting worse: the whole lower part of my body is slipping and hanging down, and my feet do not reach the ground. I am only supported on the upper half of my back and I start to feel not just uncomfortable but terrified of something. Only at this point do I ask myself the thing that has not yet entered my head. I ask myself: where am I and what am I lying on? I begin looking around and before anywhere else I look beneath me, where my body is dangling and in the direction where I feel I am bound to fall very soon. I look below, and I cannot believe my eyes. I am at a height not just of, say, an extremely tall tower or mountain, but I am at a height such as I could never have imagined.

8. I cannot even discern whether I can see anything there below, in the bottomless abyss over which I am hanging and into which I am being drawn. My heart contracts and I feel terrified. It is dreadful to look down there. I feel that if I look down I will immediately slip from the last support and perish. I do not look, but not looking is still worse because I am thinking about what is going to happen to me when I slip from the last support. And I feel that I am losing my last bit of strength through terror, and that my back is slowly slipping lower and lower. Another moment and I will fall off. And then I have a thought: perhaps it is not real. It is a dream. I will wake up. I try to wake up and cannot. 'What can I do, what can I do?' I ask myself, looking upwards. Above there is also an abyss. I look into this abyss of sky and try to forget about the abyss below, and I do in fact forget it. The infinity below repels and frightens me; the infinity above attracts and reassures me. Thus I am hanging over the abyss, held up by the last of the supports that has not yet slipped out from under me; I know that I am dangling but I only look upwards and my fear passes away. As happens in a dream, a voice says: 'Take note of this, this is it!' I look further and further into the infinity above me and feel myself growing calmer. I remember everything that has happened and how it happened: how I shifted the position of my legs, how I was dangling there, how terrified I felt, and how I was saved from my terror by looking upwards. And I asked myself: 'Am I not still dangling there?' And I do not look around so much as feel with my whole body the edge of the support by which I am held up. I see that I am no longer dangling or falling but am firmly supported. I ask myself how I am being supported: I grope about, look around and see that beneath me, under the middle of my body, there is a single support and when I look up I am lying on it in a position of secure balance, and that it alone gave me support before. And then, as happens in dreams, the mechanism by which I am supported seems to me to be a very natural, comprehensible and sure thing, although when awake it makes no sense at all. I am even surprised, in my sleep, that I had not understood this before. It appears that there is a pillar at my head and the solidity of this slender pillar is beyond doubt, although there is nothing for it to stand on. A rope is hanging very ingeniously, yet simply, from the pillar, and if one lies with the middle of one's body on the rope and looks up there can be no question of falling. This was all clear to me and I was glad and tranquil. It was as if someone were saying to me: 'See that you remember.' And I woke up.

ON CONSPIRACIES

阴谋论

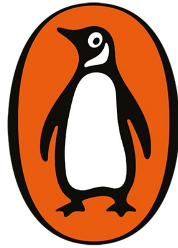
［意］尼可罗·马基雅维利　著
孙平华　方丹丹　译

中国出版集团
中译出版社

阴谋论

（意）尼可罗·马基雅维利/著

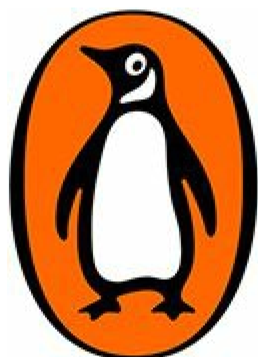
孙平华　方丹丹/译



企鹅图书 | PENGUIN BOOKS

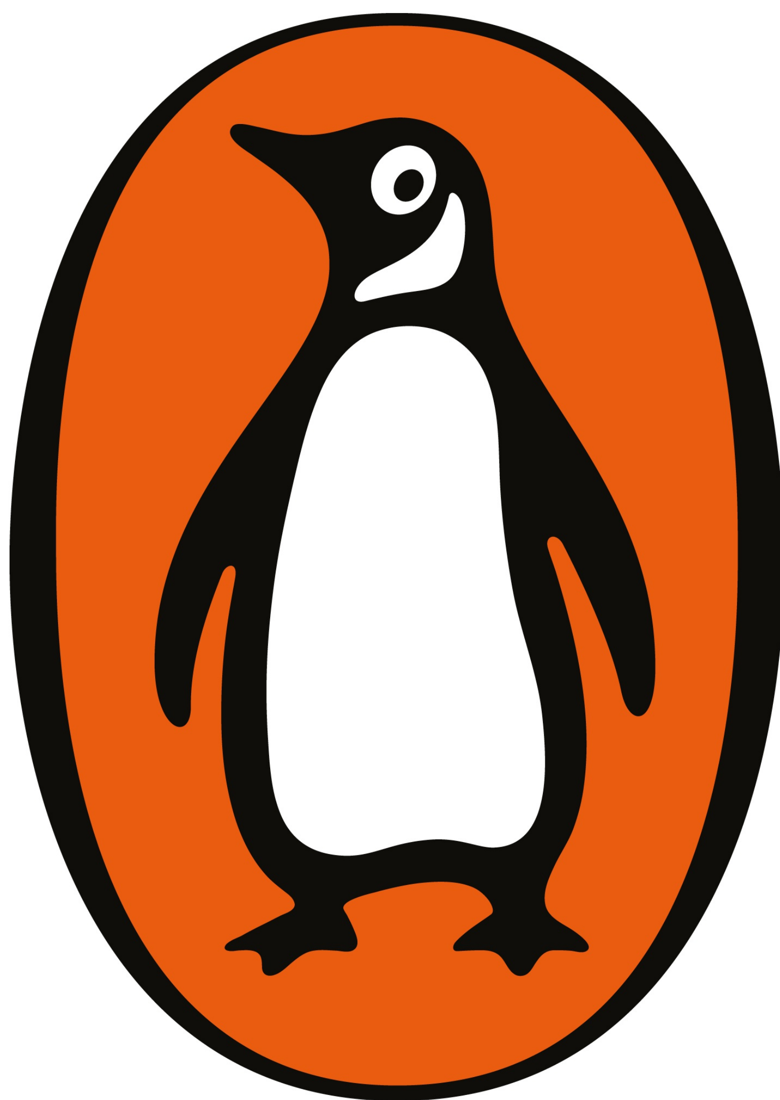
UK | USA | Canada | Ireland | Australia
New Zealand | India | South Africa | North Asia

Penguin Books is part of the Penguin Random House group of companies whose addresses can be found at:
global.penguinrandomhouse.com.



Penguin Books Ltd, Registered Offices: 80 Strand, London WC2R 0RL, England
www.penguin.com
Extracts taken from The Discourses, first published in this edition in 1970 with an introduction by Bernard Crick and subsequently revised and updated 1974, 1998, 2003
This selection published in Penguin Books 2010

企鹅兰登电子书 | PENGUIN RANDOM HOUSE EBOOKS



目录

“伟大的思想”中文版序

企鹅“伟大的思想”系列丛书自2004年开始陆续面世，在英国、美国和德国均有出版。在英国出版品种最多，已付梓八十种，尚有二十种计划出版。该丛书在全球众多读者间，尤其是学生当中，普及了哲学和政治学，销量已远超二百万册。中文版“伟大的思想”的推出，是该系列的又一延续和发展，令人欢欣鼓舞。

推出这套丛书旨在让读者再次与一些伟大的非小说类经典著作面对面地交流。长久以来，此类书籍的出版都建立在这样一个假设之上——此类著作供学生课堂学习之用，因此需辅以导读、详尽的注释及参考书目等。此类版本无疑十分有用，但我想，如果某一版本能够重建托马斯·潘恩的《常识》或约翰·罗斯金的《艺术与人生》初版时的环境，为读者与作者营造更为亲密无间的氛围，使读者除了原作者及其自身的思考外没有其他参照，也许会更有吸引力。

但是，这一做法亦存在严重缺陷：每位作者的表述难免有难解或不可解之处，一些重要的背景知识或许也有所缺失。例如，读者对亨利·梭罗创作时的情形毫无头绪，也不了解该书的反响及影响。不过，这样做的优点也显而易见，最为显著的便是作者的初衷又一次受到重视——托马斯·潘恩的愤怒、查尔斯·达尔文的灵光、塞内加的隐逸。他们给许多国家的众多读者带来的生活影响难以估量，有的影响甚至长达几个世纪，几乎没有什么比阅读这些作家更令人拍案叫绝的了。倘若没有亚当·斯密或阿图尔·叔本华，将无法想象我们今天的世界。这些小书创作年代久远，但其中的话语彻底改变了我们的政治学、经济学、精神世界、社会规划和宗教信仰。

“伟大的思想”系列一直求新求变，地域不同，收录的作家亦不同。一些作家在中国或美国更受欢迎，而英国版“伟大的思想”收录的一些作家在其他国家和地区则鲜有人知。称其为“伟大的思想”，我们亦是慎之又慎。这些思想之所以伟大，在于其影响深远，但这并不意味着这些思想都是“好”思想，实际上一些书或可列入“坏”思想之列。丛书中收录的很多作家受到同样收录于该丛书的其他作家的巨大影响，例如，马塞尔·普鲁斯特承认受约翰·罗斯金影响很大，米歇尔·德·蒙田也承认深受塞内加影响。但也有些作家彼此憎恶，若发现彼此都被收录于同一丛书，一定会深感苦恼。至于他们思想的或“好”或“坏”，读者可自行判明。我们衷心希望，您可以享受阅读这些著作的乐趣。

“伟大的思想”出版者

西蒙·温德尔

译者导读

尼可罗·马基雅维利（Niccolò Machiavelli，1469—1527），意大利政治哲学家、音乐家、诗人和浪漫喜剧剧作家，意大利文艺复兴时期的重要人物。马基雅维利出生在一个没落的贵族家庭，家境贫寒，没有接受过多少正规教育，通过自学，使自己博古通今、多才多艺。他于1498年出任佛罗伦萨共和国第二国务厅的长官，兼任共和国执政委员会秘书，1505年担任国民军九人指挥委员会秘书。1511年教皇的军队攻陷佛罗伦萨，废黜执政官，马基雅维利丧失了一切职务。1527年，美第奇家族倒台，马基雅维利被逐，郁悒成疾，五十八岁即去世。

《阴谋论》是马基雅维利关于阴谋论和军队、战争、战略等领域思想认识的一个合集，该合集用意大利语写成，1513年首次出版。马基雅维利曾于1498年进入十人执政团服务，随后奉命出国担任外交官员，期间积累的工作经验为其政治军事著作提供了丰富的经验基础。整个合集大量引用罗马时期的事例，来论述其政治军事领域的思想。

《阴谋论》合集共分七个部分。第一部分主要是其关于阴谋论的认识，通过对阴谋的成因、实施、失败因素以及防范措施的论述，旨在提醒统治者如何阻止阴谋。第二部分主要介绍了其关于军队、军纪和各兵种方面的认识，通过对比引证，强调了步兵在战争中的重要性，论述了炮兵如何在战争中发挥作用。第三部分主要驳斥了关于城堡利弊、利用城市内讧夺取城市等一些与战争有关的错误认识。第四部分引用罗马共和国在平时与战时和相邻国家城市关系的经验教训，旨在唤起统治者的注意。第五部分通过引用罗马共和国的战争事例，阐述其对战争、策略、新装备和纪律等方面的一些评论。第六部分主要在大战前的小规模战斗、如何取得军队信任、熟悉地形等方面，为征战中的统帅们提出一

些建议。第七部分通过对于战争欺诈、誓死卫国、城下之盟的论述，印证其人民利益至高无上的思想。整个合集作于其著名论著《君主论》之后，是在美第奇家族重新掌权后马基雅维利失意之时所作，作为政治军事领域的重要图书，被列入企鹅口袋书“伟大的思想”系列。

阴谋论

引言

既然阴谋会导致对君主和个人同样危险的后果，那么我也就无法略去不谈其性质，毕竟有更多君主由于阴谋而非公开战争丧失了性命和政权，因为能对一个君主宣战的不过寥寥几个人，但是策划谋反的却可能是任何人。另一方面，在任何一项事业里，没有比个人参与阴谋更危险或者更轻率鲁莽的事情了，因为整个过程都充满困难和危险。因此，尽管人们已有许多阴谋尝试，但达到目的的却寥寥无几。为了使君主们了解如何防范此类危险，为了使个人三思而行并学会安于天命、臣服君主，我将对阴谋进行细致的探讨，不会遗漏任何与君王或个人相关的重要事项。事实上，克奈里乌斯·塔西佗曾经说过这样一句金玉良言：“人应尊重过去，更应着眼当下，即使内心渴求明主，也必须接受自己的君王——不论他们是怎样的人。”毋庸置疑，那些反其道而行之的人常常给他们自己和他们的国家带来灾难。

在开始讨论此话题之前，第一个需要思考的问题是：这些阴谋的产生是针对谁？事实证明，阴谋的产生要么是针对其祖国，要么是针对君主。此文中，我会对这两种类型的阴谋分别进行探讨，因为以将城池移送给围城的敌人手里为目的而制造的阴谋，或者因某种理由制造的与此相似的阴谋，其他地方已言之足矣。

成因

在此论述第一部分，我们先谈谈针对君主的阴谋。首先，我们对其众多成因提出疑问。但其实有一个成因比其他所有成因都更为重要，那就是君主所激起的普遍仇恨，因为当其激起了这种普遍仇恨之时，我们

就能预料到，那些曾被他大大冒犯的人将会寻求报复。而当这些人发现君主已经激起了人们的普遍憎恶，他们的报复欲望就更强烈了。因此，君主应当避免招致此类个人恩怨，鉴于别处已经论及如何避免个人恩怨，此处不再赘述。之所以提及，是因为若君主真有意提防，那么仅仅对于个人施以惩罚将会招致较少的敌意。原因如下：首先，我们很少遇到这样的人，对某种不公正行为无比愤慨，从而身犯险境去实施报复；其次，如果他们确实想这么做且已具备必需的能力，那么他们也会因为君主受人民拥戴而行动受限。

伤害可能波及人的财产、生命或荣誉。杀戮的威胁要比杀戮本身更危险。的确，威胁要进行杀戮是极其危险的，然而杀戮却毫无危险，因为死人不可能思量着复仇，而那些幸存者却通常促使你作复仇的思虑。但是，那些已受到威胁并意识到不得不做些什么或者投身其中的人，对君主而言已构成真正的威胁，我们将引用实例说明。

除去那些由求生本能驱使的行动实例，对人的财产或者荣誉的伤害是最容易激怒人的，对此君主应当警惕，因为不论他如何掠夺一个人的财产，也无法确保那人丧失复仇的能力；不论他如何剥夺一个人的荣誉，也无法让那人打消报复的念头。在人们被剥夺的众多荣誉中，最重要的是女人的荣誉，其次是对男人人品的蔑视。正因如此，帕萨尼亚斯才揭竿而起反对马其顿国王菲利普；也正因如此，才有许多人拿起武器反对其君主。在我们的时代，如果卢西奥·柏兰提没有把他女儿嫁给西恩纳暴君潘多佛为妻，然后又把她带走，那么他就不会被迫密谋反对潘多佛了，这点我们会在适当时候详述。导致帕西对美第奇谋反的主要原因在于美第奇下令夺走了乔瓦尼·邦热美的继承权。

导致人们密谋反对君主的另外一个原因，也是非常有力的一个原因，就是他们收复已被君主攫为己有的国土的欲求。正因如此，布鲁特斯和卡修斯才转而反对恺撒，也正因如此，有那么多人密谋反对法拉里

斯、狄奥尼修斯和其他国家权力的篡夺者。没有一个暴君可以超越此种意志，除非放弃其暴政。然而，没有暴君愿意放弃暴政，所以几乎所有暴君皆以悲剧收场。因此尤维纳尔的诗歌这样写道：“几乎没有君主可以毫发未伤地陨落于冥界，暴君也屡屡难逃悲惨下场。”

单人阴谋

如前所述，阴谋带来的危险是相当多的，并且持续不断，因为一个阴谋中会有多种危险突然出现，这些危险充斥于阴谋形成、实施的整个过程，以及阴谋产生的后果中。阴谋的形成可由单人而为，亦可由多人而为。若仅由单人而为，并不能理所当然地称之为阴谋。准确地说，它是某个个体要杀掉君主的坚定决心。在阴谋所蕴含的三种危险之中，单人之谋仅包含后两种危险。因为在行动之前是不可能有危险产生的，既然没有其他人知晓，也就不存在对君主实施该阴谋的危险。而是否有实施阴谋的决心取决于这个人的能力——无论他伟大或渺小，高贵或卑微，与君主关系密切或疏远。因为任何被准许在某个时间同君主交谈的人，以及任何有机会同君主交谈的人，其情绪皆有可能得以舒缓。我们已经屡次提到的帕萨尼亚斯，在马其顿国王菲利普与一帮武装人员前去庙宇的路上杀害了他，当时走在国王两边的分别是他的儿子和女婿。但是，帕萨尼亚斯是贵族，且与君主相识（但也有其他人）。一个贫穷可怜的西班牙人将匕首刺入了西班牙国王斐迪南的脖子，尽管伤口并不致命，但是它却表明了此种类型的人也可能具备做这种事的意图和机会。一个托钵僧或土耳其牧师，在巴雅泽用弯刀袭击了当时的土耳其君主。他并没有杀死他，但是他必然具有这样做的意图和机会。我认为，我们周围有很多想要做这种事的人，但仅仅心怀这种意图，既不需要受到惩罚，也不会产生任何的危险。但是真正去做的人却寥寥无几，且在这些人中，也只有非常少的人在其行动中幸存。因此，你会发现没有人甘于赴死。但让我们撇开这些单人阴谋，来谈谈多人阴谋。

弱者的阴谋

在我看来，历史上所有的阴谋要么是有名望之人所为，要么是君主近侍或亲信所为，其他人除非是十足的疯子，否则不可能阴谋陷害君主，毕竟无权之人以及无法接触君主之人没有成功实施阴谋的任何希望和机会。首先，无权之人笼络不到可以忠于他们的人，毕竟在有可能冒大风险的情况下，没有人会答应去为他们做事，因为阴谋一旦传达至两三人，告密者就会出现，他们的计划便会暴露。其次，即使他们足够幸运，没有告密者出现，他们在阴谋的实施中也一样会由于无法轻易接近君主而困难重重，而在得以行事之时根本无法逃离险境。既然有名望之人和能够轻易接近君主的人都得屈服于这些困难，更不要说其他人了，他们面临的困难将被无限放大。所以，只要他们的生命和财产并未受到威胁，只要他们不会丢掉脑袋，那么当其认识到自己的劣势，就会变得小心谨慎，即使对君主心怀不满，也只会私下咒骂发泄，等待着那些拥有更高地位声望之人可以替他们报仇雪恨。这样一来，一旦遇见这种人欲行谋害君主之事，人们应对其意图动机而非审慎态度加以赞赏。

强者的阴谋

阴谋者似乎一直都是有名望之人或者与君主关系密切之人，其中因赐予太多利益而导致的谋反与因施予太多惩罚所引发的谋反案例一样众多，例如，卜兰尼斯密谋反对康茂德，普劳提阿努斯密谋反对西弗勒斯，塞扬努斯密谋反对泰比里厄斯。对于这些人而言，君主赐予的财富、荣誉和头衔已经很多，似乎什么都不缺，除了君主的头衔，他们对此不愿意忍受，因此密谋反对君主，而最终总会得到其忘恩负义之行应得的结果。

而近代发生的相似阴谋中，有一个却取得了成功，即雅各布·阿皮亚诺密谋反对比萨君主梅瑟·皮耶罗·干姆巴科尔提，因为雅各布正是由后者抚养长大，且名誉加身，而他却夺了后者的权。在我们的时代也有

科波拉阴谋反对亚拉贡国王费迪南。因为对于已经拥有巨大财富的科波拉来说，唯一缺少的就是一个王国，而他也因为决心得到它而丧命。然而，如果有名望之人谋反成功，则情况一定如此：阴谋必定是由有名的另一位君主所为。但是那种易于使人盲目的支配欲，又一次使他们在着手做事时失去理智。只要他们知道怎样谨慎实施恶行，那么就不可能不成功。

对君主们的忠告

因此，想要提防阴谋的君主，相对于那些已被其过多伤害的人，更应当害怕那些被其授予过多恩惠的人。因为前者缺乏机会，而后者却机会多多，尽管二者所欲相同；统治国家的欲望与复仇的欲望一样大，甚至更大。所以，君主授予其朋友的权力应当保持一个度，即在此权力和君主权力之间应当保持一个特定的间距，且在此间距之中还有别的东西可所欲求。否则，如果我们刚谈论的事情未发生在他们身上，那倒是一件怪事了。下面，言归正传。

告密引发的危险

前面已经提及，谋反者一定是有名望之人和容易接近君主之人，这里我们就谈谈他们的成功和事例，以及为什么有些人成功了而其他人却失败了。如前所述，阴谋的危险常常发生在三个阶段：开始之时，实施之时和结束之后。我们发现，阴谋很少成功，因为成功通过这三个阶段是不可能或者几乎不可能的。首先，我们来谈谈开始阶段的危险。鉴于在制订计划过程中要使阴谋不被发现需要敏锐的判断力和足够的运气，对此阶段危险的探讨显得更加重要。阴谋暴露有两种方式，要么走漏了消息，要么出自推断。信息泄露要么是合谋之人变节，要么是其不够谨慎所致。变节之事时有发生，因为你只能将阴谋传达给你认为会誓死效忠于你的人，或对君主不满的人。也许其中有一两个人是你可以信任的，但是如果你将计划透露给多人，那么要找到这样的人是不可能的，

因为他们必须对你非常信任，他们对危险和惩罚的估计不会影响对你的信任。人常常错估别人对自己的情分，而除非你有前车之鉴，否则无法确定这份情谊。然而，这种前车之鉴的获得也要冒很大风险。甚至于即使在其他危险事件中，他们忠诚于你，你也不能保证他们会在种种危险远远超出之前的事件中保持同等忠诚。如果你判断一个人的忠诚度是依据他对君主的不满程度，那么你很容易犯错；因为你接受了这种不满，即是为他提供了获得满足的各种条件，这样一来，如果要他保持对你的忠诚，要么他确实苦大仇深，要么你对他的影响一定巨大。

所以，阴谋就屡遭暴露，在开始就被挫败。的确，若是一个传达给多人的阴谋很长时间内一直仍是秘密，那可真让人啧啧称奇，就像历史上庇索密谋反对尼罗，以及我们这个时代帕西密谋反对洛伦佐和朱利亚诺·美第奇一样，当时五十多人对此保守秘密，直到采取行动的那一刻阴谋才暴露。

轻率导致的危险

由于轻率而使阴谋暴露的情况发生在密谋时不够谨慎而使佣人或者第三者听到之时，例如，布鲁特斯之子就因其与塔奎因报信者的阴谋谈话被佣人听到而被告发。或者，阴谋的暴露是因为你无意中将其告诉了女友或者男友或者别的轻佻之人，以蒂姆努斯为例，他和菲洛塔斯以及其他人一起谋反亚历山大大帝，曾向一个他很喜欢的名叫尼克马库斯的男孩谈到了他们的计划，不料那个男孩立刻就把此事告诉了他的哥哥赛巴利努斯，而赛巴利努斯又把这个阴谋告诉了国王亚历山大。

推断引发的暴露

由于推断而引起的阴谋暴露，庇索尼安阴谋反对尼罗即是一例。其中一个名叫斯伽维努斯的阴谋者在计划杀掉尼罗的前一天立下遗嘱，并命令他的自由民米里库斯把他那把老旧而锈迹斑斑的匕首磨光，释放所

有的奴隶并分给他们钱财，准备好用于包扎伤口的绷带，从这些事情中米里库斯推断出了有阴谋存在并告诉了尼罗。于是，斯伽维努斯，连同前一天被看到跟他一起长时间秘密谈话的共谋者纳塔莱斯，一起被捕了。由于他们解释不一致，最后被迫说出真相，这样一来阴谋就暴露了，所有与之相关的人都遭遇了灭顶之灾。

防止暴露的困难

无论是由于恶意，还是由于不够谨慎，或者是言行失检，或者是轻率的谈话，所有这些情况下如果知道阴谋的人超过三个或者四个，那么要防止上述这些原因造成的阴谋暴露就是不可能的。因为一旦有一个以上的阴谋者被捕，那么要想阻止阴谋泄露就不可能，原因在于两个人不可能在他们给出解释的每一个细节上都能保持一致。如果只有一个人被捕而他恰好是一个果毅之人，那么他或许不会供出他的同谋者。但是，极为重要的是，其他同谋者也必须有不逊于被捕者的胆量坚守其立场不逃跑，因为无论是被捕之人还是在逃之人，均可能由于缺乏勇气而泄露阴谋。

的确存在这样一个稀少的案例，由泰特斯·李维提出，即反对锡拉库扎国王希罗尼穆斯的阴谋。在这场阴谋中，其中一个叫狄奥多士的同谋者被捕后，他仗义保护其他同谋者，栽赃给了国王的朋友；而他的同伴也非常信得过狄奥多士的为人，他们之中没有一个人离开锡拉库扎或者表现出一丝的害怕。

预防暴露的措施

以上这些都是在阴谋实施之前暴露所面临的危险；避免泄露的补救措施如下。首要的、最安全的，实话讲也是唯一的补救方法就是不给共谋者泄露对你不利信息的时间，且仅在你准备行动之时而非提前将你的计划告知他们。这样做，至少可以避开因谋划阴谋而招致的危险，其他

人通常也可以逃离危险。事实上，他们都会成功，任何谨慎之人都会发现这样做事是可行的。后面我会引用两个实例，暂且讨论至此。

奈勒迈特斯由于无法忍受伊庇鲁斯君主亚里士提摩斯的暴政，集结了家中众多亲戚和朋友，劝说他们一起解放祖国。有人提出需要时间考虑，先把家里的事情安排好。奈勒迈特斯让随从锁上家门，对这些人说道："要么你们现在就跟我一起行动，要么我把你们统统作为囚犯交给亚里士提摩斯。"这些话让他们下了决心，他们发了誓并立即行动，成功地执行了奈勒迈特斯的命令。当通过诡计获得波斯王冠后，王国的一个领袖马吉中的一人和奥塔尼斯听说了此消息并发现了这个诡计，于是他就与其他六位领袖协商，告诉他们是时候推翻这个占星师的暴政了。当有人问何时行动时，六位领袖中一个名叫达赖厄斯的人站起来说道："要么我们现在立刻行动解决此事，要么我去指控你们。"于是他们整齐划一地行动，在敌人未来及作任何准备之时成功实施了计划。与这两个实例相似的还有埃托利亚人为了杀掉斯巴达暴君纳比斯所采用的方法。他们命令同胞亚历科萨麦尼斯带领三十匹马和两百步兵假意援助纳比斯，并只将计划告知亚历科萨麦尼斯，命令其他人必须严格服从于他，违者处以流放之惩罚。因此，亚历科萨麦尼斯去到斯巴达，绝口不提其受委托的任务，直到准备好行动的那一刻。结果，他成功地杀掉了纳比斯。这些人通过采用这些手段，避免了策划阴谋阶段隐藏的危险，效仿他们做法的人也同样总是能避免危险。

阴谋的实用性

他们的行为人人可以效仿，这一点可以从前文提到的庇索案例中得以证明。庇索是尼罗非常信任的人，和尼罗关系密切，有很高的地位和声望。尼罗经常在自己的花园中和庇索一起用餐，这样一来庇索就可以结交到无论心态、勇气还是爱好都非常适合执行此阴谋的朋友，这对于有身份地位的人是非常容易的。当尼罗在花园里的时候，庇索可以用适

当的言语指使这些人做一些他们没有时间拒绝的事，或者使本不可能成功的阴谋最后取得成功。因此，纵观诸多阴谋，没有几个不是按照这个方法成功的。但是，通常情况下人们很少关注世事，因而往往犯下重大错误，尤其是在那些超出常规的事情上，比如阴谋。

进一步的防范

不到迫不得已或时机成熟之时，阴谋绝不能泄露。如果必须要泄露，也只能泄露给一个人，并且是你知根知底或者与你动机相同的人。找一个这样的人要比找一群这样的人容易得多，因为知道的人越多意味着越危险。此外，在合谋者不多的情况下，如果你犯了错误，你还可能找到保护自己的机会。一位智者曾经说过，你可以把你所有的事情单独告诉一个人，因为别人无论肯定回答还是否定回答意义都差不多，除非他说服你将你的所作所为写下来。每个人都要特别提防写下任何东西，因为没有什么比自己的笔迹更容易证实自己的罪行。普劳提阿努斯决心杀掉君主西弗勒斯及其儿子安东尼纳斯，并把这个秘密告诉护民官撒图尔尼努斯。撒图尔尼努斯想去告发他，但又害怕控告普劳提阿努斯时别人相信他而不相信自己，于是他要求普劳提阿努斯提供书面凭证，以证明自己受普劳提阿努斯的委托和授权。被雄心壮志冲昏头脑的普劳提阿努斯真的写给了他，最终因被撒图尔尼努斯控告而获罪。如果没有这份书面材料和其他一些不利证据，普劳提阿努斯完全可以厚着脸皮死不承认以保全自己。可见，如果没有书面材料或其他证据，即便你被控告，照样有机会得以逃脱，因此对待提供书面材料之事要慎之又慎。

在针对尼罗的庇索尼安阴谋中，有一个名叫艾比开瑞斯的女人，曾是尼罗的情人。她认为让一个曾担任尼罗警卫的战船船长参与进来有助于阴谋的实施，因此她把阴谋告诉了这位船长，但是并未告知共谋者都是谁。后来，这个船长食言向尼罗控告她的时候，她严词否认了对她的控告，以至于尼罗无法定夺而让她离开。因此，将阴谋告知另外一人存

在两种危险。一种危险是他可能会主动指控你；另一种危险是他受到怀疑或者不利证据而被捕，在被宣判有罪或受到严刑拷问之时将你供出。在这两种情况下，危险都是可以补救的。因为在第一种情况下，你可以否认对你的指控，宣称对方因为恨你而捏造事实；在第二种情况下，你也可以否认指控，宣称对方是因为被暴力威逼而撒谎。

无预谋的暗杀

因此，最明智的做法是不把自己的情况告诉任何人，而只按照上述案例行动；或者如果你不得不告诉某一个人，也不要告诉再多的人，这样尽管危险可能会更大，但是也不会比你告诉更多人的危险大。当情势逼迫你必须要对君主下手，就像你看到君主准备要对你下手一样时，情况也是一样的，因为此时此刻你的需要迫切至根本没有时间考虑如何防范。这种必要性几乎总能导向理想的结果，为了证明这一点，举两个例子。

在君主康茂德的几个主要朋友和亲信里，里图斯和埃克莱克图斯掌管着禁卫军，而马西娅是他主要情妇之一。这些人有时候会因他的行为有失体统而责备他，所以康茂德决定将他们处死，并把这三人和他决定在第二天夜里处死的其他几个人列了一个名单。他把名单放在了枕头下。在他去洗漱的时候，他最喜爱的小儿子在他床上玩耍嬉闹，无意中看到那个名单，就拿在手里跑了出去，在外面遇到了马西娅，马西娅从他手里拿过名单，读完之后记录下内容，并立即派人去叫里图斯和埃克莱克图斯。他们三人都意识到了自己处境的危险，于是决定先发制人。所以，他们没有浪费任何不必要的时间，在第二天夜里杀掉了康茂德。

第二个例子是，君主安东尼纳斯·卡拉卡拉带兵到美索不达米亚时，有一个地方行政长官叫马克里努斯，比起他的战士身份，他倒更像是一个平民百姓。与所有那些不好的君主一样，安东尼纳斯总是害怕别人不按照他所认为应该得到的礼遇对待他。他给在罗马的一个名叫马特

尼安纳斯的朋友写信，托他向占星家询问是否有人觊觎他的王位，并给他一些相应的建议。马特尼安纳斯回信说，马克里努斯就是那个觊觎王位之人，但是这封信却在送给安东尼纳斯之前落入了马克里努斯之手。就这样，马克里努斯意识到，要么在下一封来自罗马的信到达之前杀掉安东尼纳斯，要么就会被他杀掉，只能二选一。于是他命令手下一个名叫马尔提亚里斯的百夫长将安东尼纳斯暗杀，马尔提亚里斯最终成功完成了任务。马尔提亚里斯效忠于马克里努斯，他的兄弟几天前刚刚被安东尼纳斯处死。

可以看到，当情势紧迫到没有时间可以耽搁的时候，结果就会与前面所说的伊庇鲁斯的奈勒迈特斯所用方法产生的结果相同。还可以看到，我在本文一开始所说的话仍然适用，即与实际造成的伤害相比，威胁对君主的伤害更大，更可能导致阴谋的产生。因此，君主必须防止这类威胁，要么他应该对那些人十分关怀，要么应该确保那些人不对他造成伤害，但是在任何情况下，他都绝不应该将那些人置于“不是你死就是我亡”的境地。

改变计划导致的危险

阴谋实施过程中发生的危险，要么是因为计划发生改变，要么是因为阴谋实施者缺乏勇气，要么是因为实施者粗心犯错，要么是因为未将目标全部消灭而没能完成任务。因此，在此我要指出，没有预先通知突然改变计划，放弃起初拟定的行动计划，是干扰计划实施的最大因素。如果计划的改变会滋生混乱，那么也是在军事行动和我们正谈及的事件之中。因为此类事件中，首先必须要做的是，让参与行动的人清晰地了解自己要做的事情；如果他们花了几天时间去设想一个详细的计划及其行动过程，而突然被告知行动有变，一切都会失调，整个计划就会被搞砸。所以，即使看到计划中存在不妥之处，执行原计划也比取消计划从而卷入诸多不便之中好得多。这个原则适用于没有时间制定新计划的情

况，因为如果有时间的话，完全可以按其所愿进行计划安排。

帕西阴谋反对洛伦佐和朱利亚诺·美第奇的事为大家所熟知。根据拟定的计划，洛伦佐和朱利亚诺·美第奇会受邀与圣乔治教堂的红衣主教共进晚餐，在用餐时将其暗杀。计划还详细布置了哪些人负责暗杀、哪些人负责占领宫殿以及哪些人负责在城市周围散播讯息鼓动人们解放自己。当帕西、美第奇和红衣主教在佛罗伦萨天主教堂出席庄严肃穆的集会时，大家得知朱利亚诺那天不会去和他们共进晚餐，所以共谋者们聚集起来决定将原打算在美第奇家里完成的任务改在教堂完成。这个决定搅乱了整个计划，因为吉奥万巴提斯塔·蒙特塞克拒绝参与，他说他不会去教堂做这件事。因此，不得不寻找替补并重新分配任务，由于没有时间搞清楚行动的细节，他们在实施的时候就犯了许多致命错误，最终失败了。

由于优柔寡断造成的失败

负责完成阴谋任务的实施者优柔寡断，要么是因为尊重人性，要么是因为胆小怯懦。君主展现的威严和气场很容易动摇阴谋实施者的决心或者使他害怕。马里厄斯被民特纳人俘虏后，一个奴隶被派去杀他，但来到马里厄斯面前时，奴隶被他的强大气场所震慑，又想到他的名字代表的含义，顿时失去了杀他的勇气和力量。如果连一个被锁在监狱之中承受不幸的人都有如此魅力，那么未被俘虏且身穿君主长袍，威严无比地被壮丽浮华和朝臣包围时的他一定更有魅力。这样的排场足以威慑到你，他对你热情亲切的迎接可能会让你心软。有一伙人阴谋反对色雷斯国王西塔尔凯斯，他们于行动之日到达国王所在之地，但是竟然没有人敢向西塔尔凯斯动手，最后什么都没做就离开了，他们搞不清到底是什么原因阻止了行动，只好互相责怪。就这样，他们不止一次犯下同样的错误，最终导致阴谋暴露，他们也都因这一可能犯下但最终没有实施的罪行而受到了惩罚。菲拉拉的阿方索公爵有两个兄弟共谋反对他，他们

选择了一个给公爵当差的人作为中间人，这个人既是牧师又是合唱指挥。应两兄弟的要求，此人多次成功引公爵与他们会面，让他们可以趁势杀掉阿方索，但兄弟二人均不敢动手，阴谋暴露后，他们不得不遭受邪恶与缺乏谨慎而招致的惩罚。只有在被君主的强大气场所震慑及因其仁慈的举止而失掉戾气的情况下，这种疏忽大意的过错才会出现。

由于心绪不宁而造成的失败

阴谋实施过程中的诸多不顺利，是由于缺乏谨慎或缺乏勇气酿成的错误所致，因为这两种情况都可能发生，使得你心绪混乱，说错话、做错事。提图斯·李维向我们讲述的一个叫亚历科萨麦尼斯的埃托利亚人的事例，最能贴切描述人们这样崩溃混乱的情形。亚历科萨麦尼斯决心杀掉前文所述的斯巴达人纳比斯，行动时机到来之时，他告知手下任务，并且，依照李维的叙述："努力使自己集中力量，因为思索这样一件大事令他的思绪混乱。"的确，一个人的意志再坚强，对死亡或持弄刀剑再熟悉，也不太可能不混乱。因此，应当选择有做这种事情经验的人，不要把事情委托给任何其他人，即使人们认为他再勇敢也不行。做大事的时机到来之时，如果行动者之前没有任何经验，那么没人敢肯定会发生什么。例如，心绪混乱可能导致武器从手中滑落，或者偶然泄露某些信息并导致同样的后果。康茂德的姐姐卢西拉与昆提阿努斯一起计划杀掉他，昆提阿努斯在圆形剧场入口处等待着康茂德，拿着亮晃晃的匕首来到康茂德面前，说道："元老院送你的礼物！"这些话让他没来得及放下武器袭击康茂德就被捕了。之前提到过，梅瑟·安东尼奥·沃尔泰拉受命杀掉洛伦佐·美第奇，在扑向美第奇那一刻，他喊道："啊，叛徒！"这一惊叫挽救了洛伦佐的性命，摧毁了那个阴谋。

旨在推翻多位君主的阴谋

由于上述原因，成功密谋推翻一位君主已经相当不易，而成功密谋推翻两位君主更是难上加难。换句话说，推翻两位君主的密谋几乎不可

能成功，因为你几乎不可能在同一时间不同地点实施相似的行动，而在不同的时间实施两次又很难确保二者不相互影响。因此，如果说密谋推翻一位君主是没有把握、危险、鲁莽任务，那么密谋推翻两位君主的行为则完全是愚蠢、轻佻。如果不是出于对历史学家的尊重，我是绝不会认为赫罗狄安关于普劳提阿努斯的记叙是可能的。依照他的说法，普劳提阿努斯委任同一个人——百夫长萨图尔尼努斯，去刺杀居住在不同地方的西弗勒斯和安东尼纳斯。这件事完全不合理，我相信它的唯一理由就是赫罗狄安的权威性。

几个雅典青年志士密谋推翻雅典暴君狄奥克莱斯和希庇亚斯，他们杀死了狄奥克莱斯，但希庇亚斯得以逃脱并为他报了仇。柏拉图的弟子，赫拉克勒亚的希翁和利奥尼兹密谋推翻暴君克利阿科斯和萨提洛斯，但他们只杀死了克利阿科斯，萨提洛斯得以存活并替他报了仇。我们前边多次提到的帕西，也仅仅成功杀死了朱利亚诺。因此，任何人都不应该参与密谋推翻多位统治者，因为这对他自己、对他的国家、对其他任何人都没有一点好处。相反，得以幸存的统治者会变本加厉地残暴，就像前文提到的佛罗伦萨、雅典、赫拉克勒亚后来的境况一样。的确，佩洛皮达斯解放他的祖国底比斯的密谋涉及了前文提到的重重困难，最后却得以成功；佩洛皮达斯推翻的君主不是两位而是十位，他不仅是个外人，难以接触到君主，而且他还是一个反叛者。尽管如此，他仍然能够进入底比斯，杀死统治者，解放祖国。但其实，他是因得到了君主参赞卡戎的帮助才得以轻松完成这项壮举的。任何人都不该模仿佩洛皮达斯的做法，因为这本身就是一个不可能的任务，最终能成功是个奇迹。所有提到这件事的作家也都一致认为这件事情是举世无双、空前绝后的事迹。

错误认知导致的失败

阴谋的实施可能被中途产生的错误认知或者不可预见的意外而摧

毁。就在布鲁特斯和他的同伙准备刺杀恺撒的那个早晨，恺撒碰巧和共谋者之一的盖厄斯·庞庇利乌斯·雷那进行了一次长谈。其他同伙发现他们聊了那么久，于是就怀疑庞庇利乌斯向恺撒泄密，并且企图不等他进入元老院就将他当场杀死。实际上，他们确实会这样做，但他们的争论后来得到平息，在看到恺撒没有表露出任何异常的迹象后也消除了疑虑。谨慎的人会充分考虑到这种错误认知并给予充分的关注，但是关注越多越容易产生错觉。这是因为当一个人心里有鬼的时候，很容易认为别人都在谈论他，哪怕毫不相关的言论都可以扰乱他，使其认为肯定和他有关，这样就会导致其放弃密谋，或者过早行事，搅黄密谋。知情人越多，这样的情形越容易发生。

由不可预见的意外导致的失败

由于意外不可预见，我们唯一能做的就是举例说明该如何谨慎行事。前文提到过的西恩纳的卢西奥·柏兰提，因潘多佛带走了已经与他结婚的女儿而对他充满愤怒，于是决定选好时机杀掉潘多佛。潘多佛之前每天都去看望一位生病的亲戚，途中要路过卢西奥的房子。卢西奥发现后，安排同伙在他的家里，以备在潘多佛经过时将其杀害。这些同伙携带武器站在门口内侧，一个观察哨在窗口观察，一旦潘多佛经过门口，观察哨给出信号，门口的同伙就立马冲出去。潘多佛出现那天，信号发出后，他碰巧遇到一个老朋友停了下来，同行的另外几人继续往前走，看到发生了什么，听到武器的嘈杂声，发现了这场预谋。结果，潘多佛逃过一劫，卢西奥和他的同伙不得不逃离西恩纳。就这样，这次偶然的会面打乱了谋划中的事情，从而导致卢西奥计划的流产。由于这样的意外是偶发事件，因此也无法提前给出解决方法。我们能做的只能是尽量考虑所有可能发生的情况，并采取相应的举措。

阴谋实施后的危险

我们现在需要讨论阴谋成功实施后可能发生的危险。唯一的危险就

是，幸免于难的人可能会为君主的死亡实施报复。例如，君主可能还有在世的兄弟、儿子或其他支持者，他们会继承王位。这些可能寻求报复的人之所以得以幸存，往往是由于你的疏忽或者上文提到的原因。因而，当乔瓦尼·安德烈和他的同伙杀死了米兰公爵后，米兰公爵幸存的一个儿子和两个弟弟及时赶到为他复仇。此情形之下共谋者们情有可原，因为对于这样的事情他们也无能为力；但是由于不谨慎或疏忽而导致留下活口，他们就没有任何借口了。弗利城堡的几个公民密谋杀害了他们的君主吉罗拉莫伯爵，俘虏了他的妻子和年幼的孩子。然而，在他们看来，只有获得城堡他们的性命才能保全，但掌控城堡的人拒绝交出城堡。于是，那位名叫凯瑟琳的伯爵夫人向密谋者承诺，如果他们放她回城堡，她就会安排把城堡交给他们。同时，他们把她的孩子作为人质。达成协议后，阴谋者们放她回到城堡，而她一进入城堡就斥责他们杀害了她的丈夫，并威胁会以各种形式报复。

为了使阴谋者相信她不在意那些孩子，她把自己的性器官展示给阴谋者们，并告诉他们她还可以生更多的孩子。阴谋者们目瞪口呆，意识到他们错了，但为时已晚，最终为不谨慎的错误受到了永久流放的惩罚。

但是，如果阴谋者杀害的是受人民爱戴的君主，那么阴谋实施后的危险将是最无法避免和令人畏惧的。这样的情形下阴谋者们无法补救和挽回，因此他们不可能安全。恺撒大帝就是典型例证，因为罗马人民爱戴他，替他复仇，因此阴谋者们在被驱逐出罗马之后，均在不同时间不同地点相继被杀。

旨在反对国家的阴谋

与旨在反对君主的阴谋相比，旨在反对国家的阴谋给参与者带来的危险会更小，因为后者在筹划中的危险更少，在实施过程中也同样，实施完毕后则根本不存在危险了。策划阴谋的过程中危险不多，因为公民

在谋划攫取权力时，可以不向任何人透露自己的想法和计划。如果计划未受干扰，那么任务就能完成；但是如果受到某部法律或者其他因素的限制，那么就必须放弃此次尝试，寻找其他合适时机。这个原则适用于在一定程度上腐败的共和国，因为在一个并不腐败的国家，根本找不到踏入邪途的起步之地，也根本没有公民会有这种想法。对于生活在封邑的公民，他们有各种方法和手段使自己受益，同时不冒任何风险或卷入麻烦；在共和国中也类似，因为相比君主，共和国采取行动会更慢、更让人信服，也因此更不谨慎；还因为共和国对有权势的公民更加尊重，因此这些人更敢于也更倾向于违反国家利益行事。大家都读过撒路斯对于喀提林阴谋的叙述，知道喀提林在阴谋暴露后不仅仍在罗马，而且还加入了元老院，发表着对元老院和执政官的各种无礼申斥言论，由此可见这个城市对公民尊重的程度。如果雷恩图卢斯和其他人自己手中并未持有明明白白证明其阴谋的信件的话，那么在喀提林离开罗马并已经同军队取得联系之时，他们也不会被捕。

迦太基地位显赫的公民汉诺，希望建立一个暴力政权，他安排好要在女儿婚宴上毒死全体元老院成员并自立为王。听到此消息后，元老院仅做了一件事，便是通过了一项法律，限制婚礼和宴会的费用开销。人们对于地位显赫之人的尊重程度可见一斑。

另一方面，旨在反对国家的阴谋在实施过程中，也有可能遇到更多的困难和更大的危险，因为在针对如此多人的阴谋中，你几乎不可能拥有足够的兵力，而且也不是每个人都有任其指挥的军队，像恺撒、阿加托克利斯、克莱奥梅尼等人一样可以靠他们指挥的军队一举征服他们的国家。对于他们来说，此方法简单易行、安全可靠，但是对于没有军队可供指挥的人而言，要想成功实施计划，要么必须采用骗术和诡计，要么必须借助外国军队的力量。雅典人皮西斯特拉妥的故事就是使用骗术和诡计的好例子，他通过战胜麦加拉人而取得了人民的拥护。一天早上，他拖着受伤的身体出现在公众视野，声称是贵族们出于嫉妒袭击了

他，并请求武装军队随行保护他本人。得到授权以后，他轻而易举地大权独揽，成为了雅典的独裁君主。在和其他流放者一起回到西恩纳之后，潘多佛·佩特鲁奇受命指挥露天广场的护卫队，这是一份常规性的差事，别人都不愿意接受。但是，这支武装军队却逐渐为他赢得了声望，不久后他就成了一名君主。除此之外，也有不少人采取过各种手段或方法，最终毫无危险地达到了目的。

一些人企图通过自己的军队或者借助外国军队以控制国家，他们能否取得成功，取决于命运对他们是否眷顾。前文提到的喀提林就丧命于自己的阴谋尝试中。上文提到的汉诺，先是使用毒药却失败了，后来拥有了几千武装支持者，但最终全军覆没，自己也因此丧命。底比斯的几个地位显赫的公民召集了一支斯巴达军队来援助他们，并在底比斯建立专制政权。仔细探究这些推翻国家的阴谋，我们会发现，当阴谋还在策划之中的时候，没有人或者只有寥寥几人受到镇压，但是阴谋付诸实施之时，所有人要么都成功了，要么都失败了。在取得成功之后，除了那些在根本上涉及君主统治权的阴谋，其他阴谋都不会引起任何后续的危险。这是因为，假如一个人变成了专制君主，他就会面临专制统治自然带来的各种危险，而为了避开这些危险，只能采取我们在上文讨论过的那些方法来进行补救。

毒药的使用

关于阴谋，我们要说的到此为止。我之所以重点讨论那些使用刀剑而非毒药的阴谋，是因为它们其实属于同一类型。的确，毒药的不确定性更大，因此它也更加危险，但由于不是每个人都有毒药这种东西，所以人们在使用时必须向那些有毒药的人请教，而请教这一举动对你本身就意味着危险。由于种种原因，一杯下毒的饮料可能并不致命。例如，要去杀康茂德的人发现康茂德将他们给的毒药扔掉之后，如果想要他死，则不得不去勒死他。

阻止阴谋所采取的策略

这样看来，最不利于君主的就是阴谋。若一场旨在推翻君主的阴谋已经形成，结果要么是君主被杀，要么是君主蒙受恶名：如果阴谋得逞，君主必死无疑；如果阴谋暴露，君主杀掉了共谋者，人们就会倾向于以为整件事是被君主冠以阴谋之名的工具，以掩盖他对被杀者的贪婪残忍。因此，我必须提醒那些知道有人策划谋反的君主或者共和国，要在采取惩罚性行动之前尽力挖掘精确的信息，并将阴谋者的实力和地位与自己认真对比，如果发现谋反者实力壮大，就要装作毫不知情，直到自己拥有足够兵力一举摧毁它。如若不然，只会招致灾祸。因此，他们应当尽力学会如何掩饰自己，以防共谋者发现自己已经暴露，从而不顾后果地立即采取行动。

罗马人给我们作了很好的例证。在其他地方已经提到过，两个军团的士兵被派去守卫加普亚，以防萨谟奈人的进攻，而军团的指挥者合谋要征服并统治加普亚。当这个消息传到罗马，一个名叫卢提鲁斯的执政官被委任彻查此事。为了不打草惊蛇，他将元老院批准的加普亚军团的住宿营地公之于众。密谋军队信以为真，认为有足够时间实施计划，于是并不急于行动。就这样，直到意识到执政官已将两个军团分离，共谋者们才起了疑心，采取行动并命令实施计划。没有比这更好的例子了，因为在这个事例中，我们可以看到，当人们认为有时间的时候其行动会十分迟缓，而当形势紧迫时其行动又会非常迅速。如果一位君主或共和国政权想让阴谋延迟起事，最好的做法就是巧妙地给共谋者提供在未来某天的时机，这样，当他们等待那天的来临，相信时间充裕之时，君主或共和国就可以趁机策划对阴谋者的惩罚。

没有这样做的人，只会加速自己的失败，雅典公爵和古格里尔莫·帕西就是例证。当公爵成为佛罗伦萨的独裁君主，并听说有人阴谋推翻他的时候，他把其中的一个共谋者抓了起来，但没有进一步调查此事，

结果其他共谋者立刻揭竿而起，一举推翻了他的政权。1501年，当古格里尔莫担任瓦尔基亚纳行政官的时候，他发现了在阿雷佐有一个支持维海利的阴谋企图从佛罗伦萨人手中夺走城镇，于是立刻奔赴阿雷佐。他既没有考虑共谋者或者他自己的实力，也没有兵力准备就绪，就在主教即其儿子的建议之下抓获一位共谋者。不料，其他共谋者立刻拿起武器，一举从佛罗伦萨人的手中夺取了城镇，古格里尔莫也不再是行政官，而是变成了阶下囚。

但是，如果阴谋本身就脆弱不堪，上述二例就能也应该立刻受到镇压，以免夜长梦多。人们也不应采取下述两种策略——尽管二者的行事方向几乎完全相反。一种是上述的雅典公爵所用的，他为了证明自己相信佛罗伦萨人深深爱戴他，处死了一个向他告密的人。另一种是锡拉库扎人戴恩所用，为了揭露自己所怀疑之人的意图，允许他信任的卡利普斯假装正在酝酿一场阴谋。这两种策略无一例外导致了灾难：第一种阻挠了告密者，鼓励了阴谋者；第二种使杀死戴恩变得很容易，在这场阴谋中他自己其实就是实际的领导者，从他的经历来看，卡利普斯此时已经能够阴谋推翻戴恩——这一计划非常缜密，最终不仅让戴恩丢掉了政权，也丢掉了性命。

军队、军纪和兵种

军队军纪：当代与昔日之差

托夸图斯与德西乌斯领导下的拉丁人之战是罗马人与外族之间最重要的一战。种种迹象表明，如果拉丁人战败，其就会被罗马人统治，同样，如果罗马人战败，也会沦为拉丁人的臣民。泰特斯·李维认为，这两支军队在军纪、素质、战斗力和人数方面都势均力敌，唯一区别就在于：与拉丁军队将领相比，罗马军队统帅更工于战术。

在这场战争中，还有两件前所未有、闻所未闻的事引起了人们的注意，即为拢军心、正军规，一个执政官选择了自杀，另一个执政官则选择了杀子。在泰特斯·李维看来，这两支军队的共同之处是由于长期交战而形成的相同的语言、相同的军纪、相同的武器装备、相同的作战阵形，甚至相同的作战单位和军官称谓。因此，既然实力相当，一方则必然有某些非凡之处用于鼓舞士气提升战斗力。正如我们在他处提到过的，胜利取决于决心，因为只要战士胸中决心不灭，他们绝不会退缩。正因如此，为了使罗马战士的决心比拉丁人更持久，既出于巧合，也出于执政官的素质，托夸图斯不得不杀子，德西乌斯不得不自杀。

泰特斯·李维在指出双方势均力敌时，详细描述了罗马人如何组织和调遣军队作战。所以，此处不再赘述，但有几个值得关注的事我却无法避而不谈，当今所有统帅对它们的忽视，导致了组织调遣军队作战中严重缺乏纪律性。从李维那里，我们知道罗马军队分为三个主要作战单位，托斯卡纳语称为“三列阵法”。第一列为枪兵，第二列为主力兵，第三列为后备兵；每一列都有自己的骑兵。在战场上列阵时，枪兵置于最前沿，其后面紧接的是第二列主力兵，在第三列相同的空间上，部署后

备兵。每个作战单位的骑兵都被部署在三个方阵的左右两翼。骑兵部分，因其队形和位置，被称为“翼”，因为他们看起来像鸟的一双翅膀。罗马人的第一列由枪兵组成密集队形，以向前冲杀并抵御敌军的攻击。第二列的主力兵，最初不参加战斗，而是当第一列被敌人击败或压制时，对其进行支援；他们不是排成密集队形，而是排成疏松的阵形，这样如果第一列被敌人击败而被迫后退，第二列能够和第一列整合且不破坏阵形。第三列的后备兵阵形比第二列更疏松，旨在与败退下来的前两列（即枪兵和主力兵）整合在一起。阵形布置完毕后，他们就投入战斗。如果第一列被迫后退或被打败，他们能直接退入主力兵阵列的间隙中，重新组成一个完整的阵形，继续战斗。如果这两个阵列都被击败或被迫后撤，他们可以退到后备兵更疏松的阵线中，三个阵列又组成一个阵形重新作战。如果这样也被击溃了，就真的失败了，因为没有机会重整阵形。因此，当后备兵阵列参战时，说明军队已身处险境，于是谚语有曰“一切取决于后备兵”，抑或如托斯卡纳习语所曰“我们已经孤注一掷了”。

正如当今将领们已抛弃了所有其他传统，且对古代军队纪律漠不关心一样，他们也已摒弃军事纪律举足轻重的意义。当军队排列成能在战斗中三次组成的阵形时，要击败它，进攻三次已属走运，进攻者的勇气必须要足够打击它三次。只能承受一次攻击的军队，通常指基督徒军队，更容易战败，因为无组织性或缺乏勇气的军队均会与胜利无缘。我们的军队无法三次组成阵形，是因为其丢失了将一个阵列吸纳到另一个阵列中的传统。究其原因，当代战斗阵形中存在两个问题：其一，将阵列一字并排展开，使阵形很宽，但很薄弱，面对进攻时，会因缺乏纵深而不堪一击。其二，为了加强阵线，他们会按罗马方式组织阵形，然而却没有组织好第二阵列如何吸纳第一阵列，所以当第一阵列败退下来时，所有阵列都会乱作一团，不战自败。因为前面的阵列一旦溃退，就会与第二阵列发生冲突，如果第二阵列想要前进，就会受第一阵列的阻碍。因此，当第一阵列冲垮第二阵列，第二阵列又冲垮第三阵列之时，

混乱丛生，整个军队往往会遭受灭顶之灾。

率领法国军队的富瓦亲王战死的那场拉文那战斗，如今看来，也是一场鏖战。西班牙和法国均按照上述方式组织军队阵形，并排列队，因此双方都只有宽度要远大于纵深的单一阵线。在像拉文那这样宽阔的平原交战时，他们总是采用这样的战术。因为他们认为如果军队排成两列，撤退时容易产生混乱，为了避免混乱发生，故将阵线排得很长，如上所述。但是一旦可作战空间狭小不堪，他们就只能忍受上述糟糕的安排，毫无办法。无论是实战，还是军事演习，他们均以此糟糕阵形御敌。

同样，正如法国国王查尔斯穿越意大利之后，因为城市反叛而爆发佛罗伦萨人和比萨人之战，最终前者被后者击败的地方一样，在比萨领地内的圣莱戈洛，灾难完全是由于盟友骑兵团导致的，他们在阵前被敌人打败后，溃退至佛罗伦萨步兵阵列，引发混乱，结果所有战士均闻风而逃。曾经的佛罗伦萨步兵队长——梅瑟·西里亚科·达尔·博尔格，经常在我面前说，除了盟友骑兵外，他从未被打败过。瑞士人被誉为现代战争的大师，他们与法国并肩作战时，首先考虑的就是将其军队部署于两翼，这样即使盟友骑兵被迫撤退，也不会与其冲撞在一起。虽然此战术容易理解且十分可行，但当代将领们仍无人以此改进当代军队阵形。虽然同样有三重军队编制，即前卫、主力和后卫，但其唯一用处仅在于方便安排士兵扎营。如上所述，此法阵列，众人皆在劫难逃。

鉴于许多人为了掩饰其无知，声称火炮的毁灭力已使得古代战例战术不再适用于当代，下面的章节我将会对火炮是否使得往昔岁月英勇不再这个问题再作探讨。

炮兵在军队中应处于何种地位，大众持有的观点是否合情合理

除以上所述外，我在想，当代被法国人称为“日子”而意大利人称

为“武器的功绩”的正面战斗，罗马人在不同时期共进行了多少次，于是我立刻想起大众持有的观点：如果那个时代里有了火炮，罗马人就不可能征服外族行省，也不可能轻易地变外族为其附庸国，也绝不可能进行如此大胆的掠夺占领。他们认为，毁灭性武器的应用已经扼杀了人们像古时那样运用展现其优势的能力。第三个观点还认为，现今比过去更难实现议和，保持古代惯例是不可能的。事实上，不久以后，战争将会变成火炮之间的单纯较量。

探究此观点是否可靠，或者查究火炮究竟会增强还是削弱军队的实力，及其究竟会剥夺还是赋予优秀将军展现“才能”的机会，我认为均值得关注。所以从第一个观点入手，即如果那个时代有火炮，古罗马人将无法取得当时的战绩。

为此，我要指出，战争既有进攻也有防守。那么，我们不禁要问火炮对哪一方更有用或更危险。虽然火炮对双方都有一定作用，但显然其对防守者的杀伤力要远大于进攻者。因为防守者往往身处有城墙的城镇或有栅栏的营地中。如果是有城墙保护的城镇，像大多数城堡一样，空间可能非常狭小，但也或者比较大。若是空间狭小，防守者就必败无疑，因为城墙根本无法抵挡火炮的威力，最厚的城墙也只能多撑几天而已。由于城中的防守者没有足够空间退守或挖掘壕沟或修筑壁垒，因此其失败无法避免。即使有火炮的帮助，他们也无法抵抗敌人从城墙上打开缺口涌入城中，因为有一条公认的真理：火炮无法抵挡猛烈的大规模进攻。所以，在对抗阿尔卑斯山外的异族凶猛进攻时，火炮根本不起作用，但是对抵挡意大利人的进攻却非常有效，因为后者不会大规模进攻，只是以分队形式袭击，这种袭击方式只能称作骚扰战。以这种脆弱阵形向有火炮防守的城墙突破口进军，无疑是自寻死路，对付这样的进攻，火炮非常有用。但是当进攻者以密集持续的阵形涌向突破口，除非有壕沟或壁垒阻挡，否则他们就会到处渗透。火炮即使歼灭一些敌军，也依然无法抵挡更多人冲杀进来夺取胜利。

意大利许多城镇均被阿尔卑斯山附近的外族攻陷就是明证，尤以布雷西亚为典型。其反抗法国统治时，法国人仍以其国王的名义据守卫城。为了防止来自卫城的法国人袭击，威尼斯人在通往卫城的街道上构造了防御工事，并将大炮置于卫城前方、两侧及其他妥当之处。但是，富瓦亲王却对此嗤之以鼻。与之相反，他带领骑兵中队下马作战，冲破火炮的封锁，占领了城市。无人听说过火炮让他损失惨重。因此，如上所述，当小城市防守者自知其城墙低矮且没有可以躲避的壁垒和壕沟，而不得不依赖火炮时，他们会很快溃败。

若是防守一座有回旋空间的大城市，包围者的火炮仍然比防守者的更有用。首先，要使火炮对包围者造成伤害，必须将其抬至高于地面的位置，因为在水平面上，敌人挖掘的壕沟和构筑的壁垒能够为其提供防御，致使你根本无法对其造成破坏。即使将火炮抬升并拖到城墙的凹处，或者用别的方法提升到高处，你仍然会遇到两个问题。第一，使用相同尺寸和威力的火炮时，你不可能像包围者那么有效率，因为你不可能在狭小空间内操作大型武器。第二，即使成功将其安置，你也无法建筑安全可靠的壁垒来掩护火炮，它会被外面的攻击轻易摧毁，而在地面上，任何人都能有想要的空间和便利。因此，包围者有威力足够大的火炮时，防守者不可能在高处设置火炮，如果被赶至低处，如上所述，火炮则很难发挥作用。所以，防守城市不得不像古代军队那样依靠肉搏战，用小口径的火炮作为支援。虽然小型火炮有一定作用，但是其劣势抵消了其优势。由于重炮，城墙被摧毁，壕沟被填平，当守军进行肉搏战时，其处境会因此更为不利。所以，如上所述，这些战争机器对包围者比对防守者更有用。

至于第三个观点，如果为了避免正面作战而用栅栏保护军营，除非情况对你有利并能发挥你方优势，否则我认为在这种情况下，同样是为了避免交战，你不会比古时情况更好，况且有火炮的时代，你可能会更处于劣势。因为如果敌人攻击你，并且地理优势不明显，只要其处于比

你更高的地方，这种情况就会发生，或者如果在他们到来之前，你还没有挖好壕沟做好防护，那么敌人会在你采取补救措施之前，将你赶出来，你就不得不放弃防御工事与敌人作战。西班牙人和拉文那交战时就是如此。他们在龙果河岸建立防御阵地，但是其土木工事不够高，而法国人占有略微地理优势。最终其防御工事被火炮摧毁，被迫参战。但是假设你选择的营地高于敌人领地，且土木工事良好坚固，那么鉴于你的地形优势和其他准备充足，敌人就不敢发动进攻。通常情况下，敌人据守易守难攻之地时，必须依靠古代战术，即四处搜索，占领和包围你的友邦城市，切断你的供给，以迫使你离开营地进行决战，如上所述，火炮发挥不了作用。因此，从罗马人发动战争的原因中，可以看到其几乎所有的战争都是进攻模式，而非防守模式，由此可见，上述内容仍然适用，即如果那个时代有火炮，它将成为罗马人的优势，并加速他们的胜利。

对于第二个观点，其认为火炮的使用使得人们不能再像古代那样英勇，我不否认。当军队以小分队进行战斗时，如果必须攀爬城墙或者不以整体队形而是以个人形式，一个接一个发起攻击，则现在的危险要比过去更大。军队统帅会比以前面临更多危险，这是事实，因为无论在哪里，他们都会受到火炮的威胁。即使在最后一支骑兵中队或非常勇敢的士兵们的保护下也无济于事。我们发现，这两种危险情况仍然极少造成重大损失。毕竟人不可能攀登上防御严密的城墙，也不可能被小股部队攻击。如果想要占领一座城市，就必须像古时那样包围它。甚至在其被攻陷时，现在的危险也没有比过去更大，因为那个时代城里的守军不缺少发射弹丸的武器，即使不令人恐惧，仍然能有效杀伤敌人。至于军队统帅阵亡的例子，在意大利最近二十四年战争里阵亡的人数要比古代十年战争中阵亡的人数更少。除了几年之前在菲拉拉战死的卢多维科·黛拉·米兰多拉伯爵，和在切里尼奥拉战死的内穆尔公爵，没有其他人死于火炮的轰炸。富瓦亲王死于刀剑下，而不是被炮弹所杀。因此，如果作为个人无法展现英勇，原因一定不在火炮，而在于拙劣的战术和无能

的（现代）军队，因为他们作为一个整体都缺乏勇气，个体就更不可能勇敢了。

第三个观点说，肉搏战不可能出现，战争将最终成为火炮之间的较量。这一观点完全错误，尤其对于希望军队在战斗中表现出古代素质的人们来说，更被视为绝对谬论。想要组建善战之师的人理应通过模拟战或实战，使士兵适应与敌人近距离战斗，刀锋相见。他们应该更多依靠步兵，而非骑兵，理由将在下文中详述。如果他们确实依靠步兵，并按照上述方式训练，那么火炮将变得一无是处。相对于躲避古代的战象或装有大镰刀的战车，或者其他罗马步兵遭遇的不熟悉的武器而言，当今步兵在交战中躲避炮弹更加容易。他们总能找出对付那些武器的对策，而找到对付火炮的方法则更容易，因为火炮造成伤亡的时间要比大象和镰刀战车更短。后者在战斗中会让你陷入混乱，而前者只是战斗开始前的小麻烦。步兵可以通过借助战场掩体或者在炮弹来袭时卧倒的方式轻松躲避这种小麻烦。但是，经验表明，这是没有必要的，尤其是遇到重炮需要防御时，因为调整重炮的射程很费劲。要么炮口太高，打不到你，要么太低，落在你的前面。

同样，当军队之间展开近战时，事实也清楚地表明，无论是重炮还是小炮都伤害不到你。如果敌人将火炮设在阵前，你可以缴获它；如果将它放在后面，它会在打到你之前打到他们自己人。如果在侧翼，火炮无法对你造成伤害，你反而可以冲过去夺取它，所以毋庸置疑，最终结果都是一样的。瑞士人的例子即是明证：1513年在诺瓦拉，瑞士人在没有火炮和骑兵的情况下，与法国军队交战，虽然法军在防御阵地上有火炮支援，但是瑞士人还是轻而易举地击败了他们。

除了上述原因外，还因为想要火炮发挥作用，就必须要将其置于城墙、壕沟或土木工事的保护下；缺少任何一种形式的保护，它都会被敌人夺取或不起作用，当人们必须在战场正面激战时，以上情况就会发

生。除非像古代人使用抛射机那样，否则火炮无法在侧翼使用。这种发射装置被安置在主力部队外围，是为了使其在阵列之外发挥作用，当操作手被敌人骑兵或其他部队袭击时，他可以躲到正规军中。那些对火炮期望甚高的人并没有理解它的用处，因此仅仅寄希望于容易让其失望的武器上。土耳其人使用火炮战胜了古波斯王苏菲和苏丹，仅仅是由于火炮奇怪的轰鸣声惊吓骑兵的马匹而引发的混乱。

最后，我的结论是，只有在如古人所表现的勇气的支持下，火炮才能发挥作用，否则，它一样无法抵御无畏的军队。

罗马权威和古代军事实例表明步兵比骑兵更应该受到重视

许多原因和事例清楚地表明，在所有军事行动中，罗马人对步兵的重视程度要大于骑兵，并以此制订作战计划。例如，罗马人与拉丁人在里吉洛斯湖附近交战，为了支援开始动摇的罗马军队，一些骑兵被命令下马，徒步作战。这个方法的采用，使战斗得以延续，罗马人最终取得胜利。此例中，相对骑兵而言，罗马人明显对徒步作战的士兵更有信心。他们在其他诸多战斗中也使用了此战术，并发现在危急关头这是最好的补救措施。

即使是汉尼拔也不能反驳这一点，在坎尼战役中，他注意到罗马执政官让骑兵下马参加战斗，于是开玩笑说“Quam mallem vinctos mihi traderent equites”，意思是：“如果他们能把骑兵交由我指挥，我将不胜荣幸。”即使这话出自一位伟人，我们也还是更应该相信罗马共和国及其众多杰出将领的观点，而非汉尼拔一家之言。除了对权威的认同之外，我还可以列举其他合理的原因：步兵可以到达骑兵无法到达的地方；步兵可以被训练保持阵列，即便阵列被攻破，步兵也知道如何重新列阵，然而骑兵就很难保持阵列，当其阵列被打乱时，不可能重新组织。除此之外，马和人一样，有时胆小，有时勇敢，于是经常会发生这样的事情，即胆怯之人骑着英勇之马，以及英勇之人骑着胆怯之马，无

论是哪一种组合，都会扰乱军队的秩序。

组织严密的步兵能轻松击败骑兵，但是骑兵却很难击溃步兵。这个观点不仅仅在古代和现代的诸多事例中得以证实，而且也得到了公民行为规范制定者的认同：在没有组建步兵之前，骑兵是战争中的主力军，后来有了步兵，人们随即确信其比骑兵更有用。但这并不是说骑兵对军队不重要，骑兵的作用是侦察敌情，袭击和掠夺乡村，追逐逃亡的敌人，以及与敌军的骑兵对抗。但是，步兵构成了军队的基础，军队的中坚力量应该是步兵，所以应该得到更多的重视。

使意大利陷于外国统治者奴役的意大利君主犯下的诸多罪行中危害最大的就是，不重视军队的规模，过分专注于骑兵。这种荒唐做法源自军官们的刚愎自用和统治者的无知。失去官方地位的意大利民兵在过去的二十五年里，逐渐沦为雇佣兵。这些民兵意识到，如果他们拥有统治者所没有的武装力量，他们就能获得应有的地位。由于他们没有财力维持一支大规模的步兵团，没有可利用的人力资源，而小规模军队不足以使他们声名鹊起，于是他们将目光转向骑兵。两三百人的雇佣骑兵队就能确保佣兵队长的名誉，而且这笔数目不大的金钱容易从国务大臣那里得到。因此，他们得遂所愿并取得了名誉，于是更加轻视步兵的作用，更多关注骑兵。这种做法的滥用导致即便在规模最大的军队中步兵也只占少数。此做法以及其他与之有关的诸多错误行为，让意大利的民兵组织变得软弱无能，从而使意大利沦为更容易被外族人欺凌的对象。

为了更明确地证实“应重视骑兵轻视步兵”这一观点的错误，另以罗马为例。罗马人在索拉城外扎营之时，从城中杀出一支骑兵袭击他们营地。罗马人组织骑兵进行反击。两军交锋时，意外出现了，第一回合交手中双方指挥官均阵亡。即便如此，战斗仍然继续，罗马士兵为了更容易战胜对手，从马上下来，使敌人骑兵也被迫下马徒步作战，凭这个战术罗马人取胜了。这个例子极好地说明了步兵比骑兵更有功效。在别的

行动中，执政官让罗马骑兵下马的目的是协助处于被动、需要支援的步兵。但是在此处，他们下马不是为了帮助自己的步兵，也不是为了与敌人步兵交战，而是骑兵对骑兵的对决，因为罗马人意识到他们在马上无法战胜敌人，他们徒步战斗胜算会更大。所以，据此我推断，只有付出艰苦的努力，一支组织严密的步兵团才有可能被另外一支步兵团击败。

虽然帕提亚骑兵数目庞大，但罗马的克拉苏和马克·安东尼，依靠极少的骑兵和众多的步兵占领了帕提亚的领土很长时间。尽管克拉苏和他的军队被消灭了，但是马克·安东尼英勇作战，最终脱离险境。虽然罗马人遭受了不幸，但我们仍看出步兵比骑兵的价值更大，平原广阔，无险可依，河流稀少，远离大海，交通不便，但是帕提亚人自己也承认，马克·安东尼凭借他杰出的才智拯救了自己。虽然帕提亚拥有庞大的骑兵，却依旧不敢与他的军队决战。克拉苏被留在了战场上，仔细研究他当时的行为记录，人们发现他死于敌人的计谋而非武力。尽管克拉苏陷入被动，帕提亚人也没有趁机冒险进攻他。相反，他们总是在附近游击，拦截他的护卫，许下空头承诺，直到将他逼入绝境。

如果近期没有太多有说服力的事例证明步兵的“功效”要比骑兵更大的话，那么我将不得不花大力气以作证实，但事实证明这种担心完全多余。之前提到过九千瑞士士兵在诺瓦拉进攻一万骑兵和一万步兵，并打败了他们。因为一方面骑兵无法靠近他们，另一方面他们还不屑那些步兵，因为其大部分步兵是只会吹牛的加斯科涅人，组织混乱。后来有两万六千瑞士军队前往米兰，欲与法国国王弗朗西斯交战，后者有两万骑兵、四万步兵和一万门大炮。即使没有像诺瓦拉那样取得胜利，他们依然英勇战斗了两天，虽然被打败了，但仍然有半数的军队成功逃脱。马尔库斯·雷古鲁斯·阿蒂利乌斯不仅有勇气以步兵与敌人骑兵作战，他还与象兵作战。即使他没有获胜，也不是因为他的步兵缺乏勇气而使他不相信他们能战胜困难。再次强调，要想战胜纪律严明的步兵，必须要借助纪律更加严明的步兵，否则只有痛苦的绝望。

米兰公爵菲利普·维斯康蒂在位期间，伦巴第遭到一万六千瑞士人的进攻。于是公爵派遣卡尔米纽奥拉率领他的军队迎敌，共有一千骑兵和少数步兵。卡尔米纽奥拉不熟悉敌人的作战方式，用骑兵进攻敌军，以为能迅速击溃他们。但是瑞士人稳住了阵脚，他却损失惨重，于是撤退了。然而，作为勇士，他知道情况改变时如何抓住有利战机，所以当增援军队到达，实力增强时，他果断出击，命令骑兵下马，并将其置于步兵前面，于是这些骑兵无处可逃。由于卡尔米纽奥拉的骑兵下马作战，而且有厚重的盔甲保护，他们轻而易举地突破了瑞士人的阵列，而没有损伤，随着阵线的突破，最终战胜了瑞士人。结果仁慈的卡尔米纽奥拉选择宽恕他们，瑞士人得以保全性命。

我相信很多人都已意识到这两个兵种之间的特点差异，但是我们当今有些世人仍不接受这一点，无论是古代抑或现代的事例，或者正在发生的公认的错误，都不足以使现代统治者改变观点并意识到：一位君主或一个国家要想保持其军队的声誉，就必须恢复步兵的地位和信誉，信任他们，壮大他们，这样他们才能为统治者带来安全保障和显赫声望。但是，如果统治者就像忽视了上述的其他提醒一样忽视了这点，则不良后果将迅速降临，不仅不会为国家带来荣誉，反而会造成损害。

与战争相关的错误

建造城堡往往弊大于利

对于当代精明之士来说，罗马人似乎做了一件蠢事，即虽然希望取得拉丁姆和普里乌努姆民众的忠心支持，但也没有建造城堡去控制民众，迫使他们保持忠诚，尤其是在佛罗伦萨，这已是公认事实。于是，这些精明之士断言，比萨和其他城市均应该依靠城堡守卫。如果罗马人能力具备，他们也会毫无疑问地建造城堡，但是因其品德、判断力和权力与常人不同，所以他们没有这么做。只要罗马依然享受着自由，依然忠于其自身的制度和有效的体制，就决不会依靠城堡守卫罗马的城市与行省（原有的城堡除外）。古罗马人和当今统治者在此件事上看法不同，鉴于此，我认为，建造城堡是否有益及其对于建造者来说是利是弊，都值得思考。

须知城堡作为防御工事是用于抵御外敌或镇压臣民的。于前者，它不必要，于后者，其则有害。首先，我们要解释为什么于后者而言是有害的。我坚信，君王或共和国惧怕他的臣民，害怕他们会聚众叛乱。此恐惧根源于臣民对统治者的切肤之恨；此仇恨源自统治者的荒诞行为，而荒诞行为又来自于他们自以为能通过武力或愚蠢的统治方式控制民众的幻想。有城可据，是统治者们迷信武力的原因之一，因此，统治不当升级为仇恨也往往由坐拥城堡的君主或共和国所致。在此事例中，城堡的作用弊远大于利。正如前文所说，一开始，它会使你在对待臣民时更加鲁莽粗暴。然后，它无法满足你内心希望得到的安全感。在控制你的臣民时，除了下面两种情况之外，武力与暴力均无济于事：一是你拥有一支像罗马人一样能投入战斗的善战之师；二是你的臣民精疲力竭、一盘散沙、各自为战，无法联合起来反抗你。如果你使他们穷困潦

倒，“虽然被盘剥殚尽，他们仍然能武装起来”，就算你解除了他们的武装，“他们的怒火将成为最锋利的武器”，如果你处决了他们的领袖，将暴动扼杀在萌芽中，其他领袖也会像九头蛇一样又重新出现。如果你建立了城堡，它们在和平时期有用，能为你虐待臣民的暴行壮胆，但是在战争时期，却会变得一无是处，因为它们将受到来自敌人和臣民的攻击，在这双重打击之下，没有城堡能幸免于难。而且，火炮的使用让城堡风光不再，根本无法对抗火炮的威力来守卫狭小的城堡，如上所述，没有人能够舒服地躲在高墙之后逃过一劫。

在这个问题上我意欲浓墨重彩。我的君主，你想用城堡牢牢掌控城中居民吗？作为一国之主或共和国，你想固守住你在战争中夺取的城市吗？我想告诉你，如果你成为君主，控制百姓最无用的办法就是修建城堡，理由我早已给出：它简单易行，无所顾忌，是严酷之法，只会使百姓希望你早日垮台，正因如此，他们的愤怒会让你失去城堡的庇护。因此，贤明的君主若希望永保圣明，同时不给子孙自甘堕落的理由，那么他永远也不会建造城堡，而是希望继任者能更多地倚重臣民的衷心拥护，而非高墙壁垒。

弗朗西斯科·斯福尔扎伯爵，虽然被誉英明之士，但却在成为米兰公爵之后建造了城堡，我坚信，他的做法极不明智，结果也证明这座城堡非但没有为其后人提供安全保护，反而招致祸害。他们自以为在城堡中就可以安全无虞，可以镇压市民臣民，肆无忌惮地对他们使用暴力；结果被人们极度憎恶，如此一来敌人可轻而易举地攻取他们的国家。城堡在战争时期，既不能提供保护，也不能为其所用，在和平时期又对他们产生损害；如果没有城堡，残酷对待公民亦非明智之举，他们本该早点意识到危险，本可不受其害。在此例中，与其拥有城堡和离心离德的臣民，不如没有城堡却能够和忠诚的臣民共同英勇抵抗法国的进攻。

无论如何，城堡都不会有助于你。守军的背叛，敌人猛烈的进攻，

或饥饿围困都会让城堡失陷。在仅存一座城堡的情况下，如果你想利用它收复失地，则必须要有一支能反攻入侵者的军队。有了这样一支军队，即使没有城堡，你也能夺回领土。尤其当你没有因城堡而心生傲慢，没有欺凌友善的臣民，这将更容易做到。经验表明，当遇到灾祸时，米兰城堡无论对斯福尔扎家族，还是对法国人都毫无用处。它带来的灾难与毁灭，反而让其甚至无暇顾及这是否是维护其地位的最有效方法。

乌尔比诺公爵吉多贝多，即弗雷德里克之子，曾贵为军队统帅，却被恺撒·博尔吉亚（即教皇亚历山大六世之子）驱逐流放。后来，因偶然的原因，他又重返故土，将当地所有的城堡都夷为平地，因为在他看来城堡是祸害。他的臣民爱戴他，所以他不需要城堡；在敌人面前，他意识到自己无法保卫城堡，除非专门调派一支军队在战场上保护它们。所以他决心摆脱它们的束缚。

教皇尤利乌斯将本蒂沃利奥从博洛尼亚驱逐出境后，建造了一座城堡，随后他的总督残酷压迫居民，从而导致群众暴动，很快就失去了城堡。城堡非但没帮助他，反而害了他。如果当初不那么做，城堡本可以有益于他。

维特里之父尼科洛·达·卡斯特罗，当他从流亡地重新踏上国土时，立刻拆除了教皇西克斯特四世建造的两座城堡，因为他坚信，不是城堡而是人民对他的衷心爱戴为他守护了自己的国家。

但是，在所有事件中，最近也最值得注意的是不久前发生在热那亚的事件，它能从各个方面说明建造城堡的徒劳无用，以及拆除它们的种种好处。众所周知，1507年热那亚反抗法国国王路易十二，法国国王亲率所有军队重新征服了它，随后建立了当时所知的最坚固的城堡，由于地处海角山顶，因此称“热那亚之角”。因其地理位置险要及其他因素，该城堡易守难攻，可以控制港口和热那亚城的大片地区。1512年，情况

有变，法国人被赶出意大利之后，尽管依然控制着城堡，但热那亚人还是起义了。奥塔维诺·弗雷哥索取得政权，使出浑身解数围困城堡达十六个月之久，最终城堡中的人在饥饿面前屈服。人们都希望而且许多人建议应将城堡作为紧急避难所保留下来，但是弗雷哥索是聪明之人，他拆除了城堡，因为他认识到将权力赋予统治者的不是城堡的威严，而是人民的意愿。所以，他没有依赖城堡，而是选择用美德和贤明来巩固地位，他做到了。过去想夺取热那亚政权，一千步兵足矣，但如今纵使它的敌人有上万之众，热那亚也岿然不动。从此，人们知道拆掉城堡不会对奥塔维诺产生威胁，建立城堡也不会有助于君主。一旦他能率领军队进入意大利，即便没有城堡，他也能收复热那亚；但假若他无法率军进入意大利，即使有城堡他也无法收复热那亚。由此可见，法国国王花费大笔金银修建城堡，却落得城破人亡、颜面尽失，反之，奥塔维诺征服城堡为他带来了无上荣耀，拆毁城堡又使他获益匪浅。

现在来谈一下共和国，他们在夺取的城镇中而非自己的国家里建立城堡。如果已列举的关于法国和热那亚的事例还不能说明问题，那么引用佛罗伦萨和比萨的事例应该足矣。佛罗伦萨人修建城堡以控制比萨城，却不知道比萨人对其统治充满了愤怒，渴望得到自由，将反抗作为重获自由的必经之途。佛罗伦萨人要想得到比萨，就要采用罗马人的方式，要么化敌为友，要么将其毁灭。查尔斯国王的到来，使得城堡的作用日益明显，比萨人向他投降了，既是因为对现有管理者的不信任，也是因为害怕招来更坏的统治者。但是如果一开始没有城堡，佛罗伦萨人不用城堡也能控制比萨，那么查尔斯国王也就无法因此从其手中夺取比萨，因为迄今他们所采用的方法或许能守住比萨，但利用城堡无疑是最具灾难性的方法。

由此可见，城堡不利于保卫自己的国家，也无法守住夺取的城镇。罗马人这一事例足以证明这一点。为了固守所得城镇，他们非但没有修建城墙，反而拆掉它们。若有人引用古代塔伦特姆和现代布雷西亚的例

子驳斥我，我现对此作出回应。这两个地方在当地民众起义之后，都是因为城堡的协助得以收复。为了收复塔伦特姆，费边·马克西姆斯在其执政初期，就派遣了所有的军队，即使没有城堡，也足够收复之用。虽然费边利用了城堡，但即便没有城堡，他也能用其他方法取得同样的效果。也就是说，收复城市，只需要一支军队和一个像费边·马克西姆斯一样的指挥者足矣。从加普亚的例子来看，罗马人收复它是迟早的事，那里没有城堡，罗马人依靠的是军队的英勇。

现在谈谈布雷西亚。那场暴动中发生的事情绝对是极其罕见的。一个城市发动暴动，城堡仍在你的控制中，而且附近驻有你一支大军，这就是法国人当时的处境。国王的指挥官富瓦亲王，在博洛尼亚有一支军队，当他听到布雷西亚失守时，没有片刻犹豫，立即出兵平叛，三天内就抵达了布雷西亚，并凭借城堡的抵抗收复了失地。在这里，布雷西亚的城堡发挥了作用，但它依然需要富瓦亲王和行军三天后的法国军队来解救。因此布雷西亚的例子并不足以反驳与之相反的例子。在最近发生的战争中，许多城堡被反复争夺，拥有着和那些被反复争夺的不设防的国家相同的命运，不只是在伦巴第，也在罗马涅，在那不勒斯，在意大利的每个角落都是如此。

对于拥有强大军队的人民或国家来说，没有必要修建城堡抵御外敌；对于没有这样军队的国家来说，也没有此必要。无城可守的善战之师足以保卫国家，而有城可据的孱弱之师则无以御敌。这里有享誉青史的统治者的经验为证，以罗马人与斯巴达人为例。罗马人没有建造城堡，斯巴达人不仅没有这么做，甚至不允许修建城墙，他们选择依靠个人品德来抵御外敌，因此无须其他。当斯巴达人被雅典人问到雅典的城墙是否美观时，他们回答道：“非常好，专为女人们而建。”

对于拥有强大军队的统治者而言，在领土的海岸和边界上设立城堡，以阻挡敌人进攻使其有备而战，有时有用，但并非必要。但是，如

果没有强大的军队，那么在其境内或边境上修建城堡，要么有害，要么无用。有害是因为他会很轻易地失去这些城堡，而且失守后会被敌人所用；如果城堡足够坚固，没有被敌人占领，那么也会被敌军丢在身后，毫无用武之地。因为强大的军队不会遭遇激烈抵抗，行进军不会理会城市和城堡，只会把它们甩在身后。古代史中弗朗西斯科·玛丽亚多次进攻乌尔比诺，但途中敌人的城市均秋毫无犯。

能召集强大军队的统治者，没有城堡也能成就大业，而没有强大军队的统治者最好不要修建城堡。最好的办法是，加固其所居住的城市，保证食物供给充足，妥善安置居民，这样才能抵挡敌人的进攻，直到达成协议或争取到外援解救。所有其他计谋在和平时期只会耗费财力，而在战时却毫无用处。如上所述，罗马人在其他管理制度方面同样明智而谨慎，正如他们决定用更善良、更明智的方法来获得拉丁人和普里奈特人的忠心那样。

利用内讧借机征服城市的策略不可取

罗马共和国时期，平民和贵族之间冲突不断，因此维恩特人和伊特鲁里亚人认为，只要他们联手利用这些矛盾就可以摧毁罗马政权。于是，他们组织军队，入侵罗马领土，元老院派遣盖厄斯·曼利厄斯和马库斯·费边去抵抗入侵。当罗马军队靠近维恩特人的军队时，后者不停地辱骂罗马人。他们的鲁莽与傲慢反倒让内讧的罗马人同仇敌忾，一致对外，战斗一开始，他们就被罗马人打得落花流水，大败而归。由此可见，依赖敌方内部的不和来制定策略多么愚蠢啊！历史在不断地重演，他们自以为唾手可得，却功败垂成。维恩特人自以为在罗马人不团结时，可以趁虚而入，结果入侵反而引火烧身，使罗马人重新团结起来。罗马共和国内部不和通常是因其正处太平盛世，而团结一致是因其恐惧和战争。如果维恩特人稍有头脑，发现罗马人内部不和时，就应该有意避免与之开战，而采用和平时期所用的计谋来智取。

首先，要取得内讧城市的信任。只要还没有开始互相攻击，他们就可继续在各派之间充当仲裁人的角色。已经武力冲突时，也不要急于支持较弱的一方，而应让其继续自相残杀，消耗彼此的实力。有效的策略不会给任何人留有余地去怀疑你是在谋划征服他们，成为他们的统治者。计谋进展顺利，你就能达到目的，取得你想要的结果。我曾在另一个论题中提及，佛罗伦萨共和国就是靠这种计谋征服了皮斯托亚城。皮斯托亚城正处在分裂中时，佛罗伦萨人时而支持这一方，时而又支持另一方，两面都不得罪，诱使他们上当，直到皮斯托亚城人厌倦其动乱的生活方式，最终自愿投入佛罗伦萨的怀抱。

西恩纳城从未因佛罗伦萨人的帮助而改变其政体，除非那种帮助微弱而少有，因为频繁而有力的帮助反而会使整个城市为保卫当权政府而团结起来。还有一个有力的实例，即米兰公爵菲利普·维斯康蒂，曾利用佛罗伦萨人的内讧对他们发动过几次战争，但结果都以失败告终，因此他为这些无果的进攻而悲叹，说佛罗伦萨人的愚蠢让他花费了两百万金币，却一无所获。

如上所述，维恩特人和托斯卡纳人在这点上均犯了大错，因此刀兵相见之时，反而被罗马人击败。如果其他人也打算借助此法妄想征服敌人，那么也会犯同样的错误。

蔑视和侮辱对施行的人非但无益，反而会招致仇恨

避免使用威胁和侮辱性言语是人们审慎的标志，因为这两个方法都不能夺敌之勇，反而会使其保持警惕，其次会加深对你的仇恨，使其更加处心积虑地想消灭你。上个章节中讨论的维恩特人一例就是证明。除了战争所带来的伤亡之外，他们还用言语侮辱罗马人，每个理智的统帅都应该禁止他的士兵这样做。因为这种言语只会激怒敌人，他们会为此复仇，或者如上所述，这只会影响他的进攻：事实上它们会变成对抗你的武器。

亚洲有一个很有名的事例即是证明。波斯统帅科巴第斯对阿米达城长时间包围，逐渐心生厌倦，于是决定撤军。正当他拔营撤退时，城里的人为其胜利忘乎所以，登上城墙，极尽各种羞辱之能事，嘲笑和辱骂波斯人的胆小和怯懦。这一行为终于惹怒了科巴第斯，他深感愤怒，于是改变主意，又重新包围此城，并在几天后将其攻陷。

同样的事情也发生在维恩特人身上，如上所述，他们不仅对罗马人开战，而且还轻视敌人，走近罗马军营防御栅栏，不停地辱骂他们。这比战争本身更让罗马军队恼怒，本来一开始他们不情愿打仗，但是现在反而逼迫执政官要求参战，结果正如前文中提到的，维恩特人为其行为得到了应有的惩罚。优秀的军队统帅和明智的共和国统治者应该采取一切必要措施来阻止粗言秽语和嘲讽横行，无论是在城中，还是在军队中，无论是对自己人，还是对敌人。除非谨慎之人采取预防措施，否则，如果对敌人使用，会导致上述麻烦产生，如果对自己人使用，后果更糟。

被留在加普亚的罗马军团密谋反抗加普亚人时，（与这次阴谋有关的）兵变发生了，后来瓦列利乌斯·科尔维努斯将其镇压下去，并在集会中制定了对那些责难他人参与兵变之人应处以的最严厉刑罚规定。

提比略·格拉古，在对汉尼拔的战争中，曾受命指挥因兵员短缺而被罗马人武装起来的奴隶们，对那些胆敢侮辱奴隶的人，他特意制定了一条死刑的特殊规定。

可见，罗马人认为诽谤或责难他人的过失非常有害，如上所述，没有比这个更能激怒人心，或引起更大愤怒，无论嘲笑是真的，还是在开玩笑，“智者说过，当他们接近真相时，要将苦涩的滋味丢掉”。

明智的君主和共和国应满足于胜利，否则胜利将弃之而去

轻视敌人通常是因胜利或者对胜利虚假的希望而骄傲，这种虚假的希望不仅让人在言语中，也会让人在行动中犯错误。人一旦有了这种希望，就不再小心行事，从而常常与希望中可成之事失之交臂，更别提可改进的确定之事。这值得思考，因为人们经常会犯这样的错误，以推罗城为例，被胜利冲昏了头脑的人们，不仅拒绝了使者的条件，还杀了这位前来谈判的使者。因此，亚历山大震怒了，全力攻城，最终占领并毁灭了推罗城，城里居民不是被杀，就是沦为奴隶。

1512年，西班牙军队入侵佛罗伦萨，旨在重振美第奇并对该城征税。佛罗伦萨的内奸使他们相信，只要他们越过边境，就会以其名义揭竿而起。但是当西班牙军队进入阿尔诺河平原后，却发现没有内应，由于缺少粮食补给，于是提出议和。但佛罗伦萨人太过骄傲没有接受，由此导致了普拉托的陷落和国家的灭亡。

因此，当统治者遭受攻击，而敌军比其自己的军队强大许多时，此时最愚蠢的决定就是拒绝和谈，尤其如果和谈是由敌方提出，因为条件不会太苛刻，接受条款的人总会得到一些利益，所以从某种程度上说，他们也分享了胜利。举例说明，亚历山大接受他起初拒绝的条件时，如果推罗城的人们能满足于此，那么他们获得的胜利将不止一点，因为凭借自己的军队，他们使一个伟人被迫屈尊于其意愿。同样地，当西班牙军队对佛罗伦萨人的条件作出让步而没有提出自己的条件时，如果佛罗伦萨人能够满足于此，这也将是伟大的胜利。因为西班牙军队想要的是佛罗伦萨改变政体，不再亲近法国，以及征收贡品。对于这三件事，如果西班牙人能得到后两个，佛罗伦萨人则能保留第一个，即保留他们的政体，双方都能获得一定的荣誉和满足。只要性命无忧，佛罗伦萨人也不会对另两件事太过计较。可惜结果并非如此。如果他们能将此看成一个不错的、几成定局的更伟大的胜利，那么也不会沦落到将自己完全交付命运的安排，并且拿最后的本钱冒险，除非万不得已，否则，冒险绝非明智之举。

曾在意大利尊享荣耀十六年的汉尼拔，当因被迦太基人召回帮助他自己的国家而离开意大利时，他发现哈斯德鲁巴和西法克斯已经被击溃，努米底亚王国灭亡了，迦太基人被困在自己的城市里，只有他和他的军队能为他们带来希望。当他意识到祖国已经危如累卵，于是就决定，在尝试过所有的补救措施之前，绝不去冒险，追求和平并非耻辱，因为他确信，如果他的国家还有一线希望，那就是和平，而不是战争。当和平没有出路时，既然自觉仍可能取得胜利，即使必然战败，他也没有拒绝战斗。但如果他的失败不可避免，他至少可以光荣地失败。虽然汉尼拔具备将领的大智大勇，也拥有一支强劲的军队，但考虑到战败后，人民将沦为奴隶，他便更倾向于和平，而非战争。因此，那些并不具备他的才智和经验的人，在决定开始战争前，是否应该三思呢？但是，人会犯错误，因为他们的希望太无边无际；他们会被摧毁，因为他们只依赖这样的希望而不考虑其他因素。

罗马在和平时与战时同相邻国家和城市的关系

共和国或君主如果不为公众或个人伸张正义、惩奸罚恶将是危险的

什么会使人产生愤怒？这可以从罗马人的经历中找到答案。罗马人派遣三个法比依家族的人出使高卢，当时高卢人正准备进攻托斯卡纳，尤其是克鲁修姆城。克鲁修姆人请求罗马帮助抵抗高卢人。因此罗马人向高卢派遣三个法比依家族的人作为使节，并以罗马共和国的名义声明，一定会阻止高卢对托斯卡纳的战争。当使节到达目的地时，他们发现高卢人和托斯卡纳人正准备交战，于是超过职责范围直接介入了冲突，帮助托斯卡纳人。如此一来事情发生了改变，高卢人发现后，他们将对托斯卡纳人的怒火转移到罗马人的身上。高卢人向罗马元老院提出抗议，要求将上述使节移交给他们发落，以弥补给他们造成的损失。但是这些使节不仅没有被移交给高卢人，也没有受到任何惩罚，反而被选为享有领事权的护民官。结果，高卢人看到本应受到惩处的人反而受到重用，就认为这是对他们的侮辱和蔑视，于是义愤填膺进军罗马并占领了除卡庇托山外的所有地区。罗马人因藐视正义而给自己带来了灾难，因为他们的使节违反了“万国公法”，本应该受到惩罚，而不是加官进爵。

这不禁让人思考，重视这些冒犯对每个共和国和君主来讲多么重要，不仅仅是对所有民众的冒犯，还有关系到个人的冒犯。毕竟，如果一个人受到公众或个人的严重伤害，却没有得到应有的公正对待，那么假如他生活在共和国中，他会为自己复仇，即使会导致共和国毁灭；假如处于君主统治下，且生性勇敢不屈，即使会惹火烧身，他也会费尽心机地报仇雪恨，不达目的誓不罢休。

为了验证这点，没有比马其顿国王菲利普（亚历山大的父亲）更好的例子了。菲利普国王的一个名叫阿塔罗斯的随从被一位名叫鲍桑尼亚的年轻贵族迷住了，几次三番向他表达爱意，但是却发现对方对其并无好感。眼看着无法得其所欲，他于是决定设计阴谋迫使鲍桑尼亚就范。因此，阿塔罗斯大摆酒宴，邀请鲍桑尼亚和其他贵族男爵参加，在其酒足饭饱之际，他抓住了鲍桑尼亚，把他绑了起来。然后他不光使用暴力满足自己的淫欲，而且为了羞辱鲍桑尼亚，他还让其他人也用同样下流不堪的方式虐待他。对此奇耻大辱，鲍桑尼亚向菲利普国王反复申诉，国王却让他稍安勿躁，耐心等候。后来国王不但没有为他复仇，反而任命阿塔罗斯为希腊省总督。看到他的仇敌不仅没有受到惩罚还被重用，于是鲍桑尼亚将作恶者阿塔罗斯和没有为其主持公正的菲利普国王均视为其怒火的宣泄对象。因此在一天早晨菲利普国王女儿嫁入伊庇鲁斯王国的亚历山大家族的庄严婚礼上，正当菲利普国王站在两个亚历山大族人和其儿子与女婿之间，要走向圣殿参加仪式时，鲍桑尼亚杀死了他。这件事与罗马人的遭遇相似，统治者均应引以为戒，决不应该轻视任何人，理所当然地以为如果往伤口上撒盐，受伤之人不会复仇，因为其会卷入危险和毁灭之中。

命运不想让人类阻碍她的计划，于是她蒙蔽了他们的头脑

仔细思考世事，我们会发现许多事情的发生和众多不幸的降临并非天意，毫无防备。因此，显而易见，此段论述在罗马事例中仍然适用，正如美德、宗教、规范的行为方面，同样的事情会经常发生在缺乏以上方面的城市和行省。泰特斯·李维用一个众所周知的事件详细而有力地说明了天意控制人事的道理。他说，为了让罗马人认识到他的力量，天意首先使法比依家族的人在出使高卢时表现不公正，借助其错误行为激怒了高卢人，使高卢对罗马宣战。然后又宣布罗马人无力抵抗高卢的进攻。首先，罗马人在邪恶笼罩的时期里唯一的希望卡美卢斯被流放到了阿尔代亚。然后，当高卢人逼近罗马时，他们没有像以前抵抗沃尔西人

和附近其他敌人的多次入侵那样，任命一个独裁官。这也使他们变得虚弱，无法迅速集结部队，部队也根本没有时间武装起来并及时赶到离罗马十英里的阿里亚河岸与高卢人对阵。此时，护民官丢失了其惯有的勤勉来安营扎寨，既没有提前侦察地形，也没有修建壕沟和栅栏保护军营，更没有采取其他人为或天助的防御措施。备战时，指挥混乱，军队和指挥官也没有表现出罗马应有的军纪。战斗中没有人员伤亡，因为罗马军队一触即溃，大部分人逃到维伊，其余的人退守罗马，他们没有回家而是直接躲进卡庇托山。由于罗马元老院对罗马的防御一窍不通，他们甚至忘记关上城门。一些罗马元老逃走了，其他元老则和剩下的罗马人退据卡庇托山，他们在防守卡庇托山时恢复了一些军纪，把不能战斗的人留在城外，为应对长期围困收集他们能找到的所有粮食。不能战斗的人，像老人、妇女和儿童大部分逃到附近乡下，余下的人只能留在罗马听天由命。没有人知道前人是如何应对的，也没有人知道接下来要怎么做，因为没有人认为他们还是与祖先一样的罗马人。

对上述种种混乱的描述，泰特斯·李维总结如下：“当命运不想让人们反抗她的力量时，就蒙蔽人们的头脑至此地步。”

李维的结论是正确无疑的。人的一生既会遭遇坎坷，也会享受富贵，因此应宠辱不惊。人们发现其已经被天意给予种种美好的前景所驱使，要么走向毁灭，要么成就辉煌。据此，他们被给予或被剥夺成为美德之人的机会。命运的安排尽善尽美。当她想让一个人成为伟大事业的领导者之时，她会选择一个品行兼备、能抓住她所给予的时机的人。同样地，当她想让一个人制造灾难时，她会优先考虑可以帮助她达到目的的人。如果有任何人敢横加拦阻，她会杀死他或者剥夺他行善的所有能力。

从李维的论据中可清楚地看出，为了使罗马更加伟大，指引它铸就日后的辉煌，天意认为它必须先要经受磨难（在下本书的开篇会有详细

的描述），但她并没有完全毁灭罗马。因为她只是将卡美卢斯流放，并没有害死他；虽然罗马被占领了，但卡庇托山没有沦陷；她这样安排是为了让罗马得不到有效的帮助。她致使罗马被占领，军队主力在阿里亚河畔被击溃，退守到维伊城，从而使罗马城无兵可守。在这些事情的设计之中，她同时也为罗马的再生准备了出路，即在维伊城还有罗马军队，而且卡美卢斯还在阿尔代亚，罗马在战无不胜、声名显赫的统帅的带领下，还可以发动积极攻势收复失地。

为了证实上述观点，我可能还可以列举出更多的现代事例，但并无此必要，此处给出的例子已经足矣。再次强调历史的真相，总体来说证明了人可以接受其命运，但不能反对它；我们可以自己安排它，但不可以破坏它。人应永不放弃，因为希望总是会有的，虽然不知道结局，也不知道通向希望的道路有多么曲折和凶险，但是因为有希望，无论命运会带来什么，无论要承受怎样的艰难困苦，我们都不应该绝望。

真正强大的共和国和君主不会靠金钱收买盟友，而是依靠美德和军队的威望

罗马人被围困在卡庇托山，虽然希望得到来自维伊和卡美卢斯的援救，但由于饥荒，他们不得不向高卢人求和，同意缴纳大笔黄金。当卡美卢斯率领军队抵达时，他们正在按照约定给黄金称重。因此，历史学家说，命运注定“罗马人不应该用金钱换取性命”。

此事不但引人注意，而且深刻说明了此共和国的行为特征。罗马从未购买城镇或者换取和平，因为其一直都是靠军队的威名取得二者。其他共和国却不曾做过类似事情。强国权力的象征之一就是它与其邻国的条约关系。当其处于支配地位，为了获得友谊，它的邻国想成为其附庸国，这是国家强大的明显标志；但是如果邻国虽然实力不济，却仍然能得到进贡，这是国家弱小的明显标志。

纵览罗马历史，你会看到马西利亚人、埃杜维、罗得斯岛人、锡拉库扎的希罗国王、欧迈尼斯国王和马西尼萨国王，都曾与罗马帝国为邻，愿意花费金钱向罗马进贡，以获取罗马的友谊，而只要求得到她的保护作为回报。在弱国，你会发现情况正好相反。首先，佛罗伦萨声名显赫的辉煌时代已经过去，罗马涅的领主都能从它那里收取钱财。同时，它也会给佩鲁贾人、卡斯泰拉尼人以及所有其他邻国赠款。如果佛罗伦萨国力强盛、兵强马壮，那么情况将正好相反，即为了得到它的保护，许多国家会向它进贡钱财，以得到它的友谊，而并非出卖它自己。

不止是佛罗伦萨人曾自贬身价，威尼斯人和法国国王也有过同样遭遇。后者的国家虽强盛，却习惯于给瑞士人和英国国王进贡。这样可以剥夺民众的武装，而且还因为，法国国王和上述提到的其他国家宁可享受现有剥削其人民的优势，不居安思危，也不愿意装腔作势地去保护其人民以使国家长治久安。像这样的荒唐统治，虽然可以暂时换取安宁，但是日久必然会引发危机、灾难和无法弥补的损失。佛罗伦萨人、威尼斯人和法国人花钱避战、自取其辱的事情不计其数，罗马人有且只有一次。佛罗伦萨人和威尼斯人曾买下许多城镇，但后来遭遇动乱时，他们却无法用刀剑来守住用黄金换来的城镇。罗马人只要依然享受自由，就会保持其优良传统。但是当其处于罗马皇帝统治之下时，皇帝逐渐荒唐堕落，远离光明，坠入黑暗，他们也开始向帕提亚人，有时向德国和其他邻国进贡，于是这个伟大帝国开始走向衰亡。

这种种不利情况的产生，是因为你剥夺了民众的武装。更糟糕的是，敌人的攻击力越强大，你会发现自己越虚弱。因为上述的统治者对居住在其统治范围内的臣民施行暴政，但是为了让其能阻敌于国门外，却对那些处于边境的民众施以仁慈。为了更好地防止敌人入侵，他资助邻近的领主和民众，为的是维持自己国家的统治，确保边境太平。但是一旦敌人越境侵犯，则无计可施。这样的国家没有意识到，其统治方式完全违背了正常规律。因为身体最需要加强的是心脏和重要器官，而不

是四肢。如果没有四肢，人还可以继续存活，但是如果前者受了伤，人就会死去。这样国家就好比一个拥有全副武装的手脚而无任何心脏保护的身体。

佛罗伦萨因这种秩序的缺乏而遭受的恶果显而易见，也是可预见的。敌军越过边境，逼近它的心脏时，它会发现自己黔驴技穷。同理，几年以前威尼斯人也证明了这一点，如果他们的城市不是有护城河环绕，那么就没有希望了。在法国很少发生这种事，因为法国是一个大国，很少有比它更强大的敌人。尽管如此，1513年英国人入侵法国，整个国家陷入恐慌之中，国王和其他人都认为一次失败就会断送国王和国家。罗马人在这种情况下就与法国人不同，敌军越是接近罗马，他们发现罗马城的抵抗就会变得越坚决。汉尼拔入侵意大利，他发现尽管罗马三次惨败，损失了那么多将军和士兵，但它不仅依然能够抵抗敌人，而且最终赢得了战争。这都归功于“心脏”得到了最好的防护，而不是四肢。因为在这个国家中，主要人口是罗马人，也就是拉丁人，意大利的其他地方和殖民地也有相似的背景。因此，罗马拥有源源不断的兵员可以补充，延续战争。汉尼拔在坎尼取胜后派回信使，从迦太基亲罗马派首领汉诺对信使提出的问题中，就可以看出以上事实。在信使们赞颂汉尼拔的丰功伟绩后，汉诺问他们罗马人是否答应和谈，拉丁人和殖民地的城镇是否已经反叛罗马，这两个问题的答案都是否定的，因此汉诺说道：“这场战争仍然如开始一样远没有结束。”

可见，现今的共和国与古代共和国的作风迥异。正因如此，每天有多少成就铸成，就有多少失败降临。在缺乏美德之人的身上，命运展现了它的力量。因命运变迁，各个共和国和政府也随之而变，而且会一直持续下去，直到某个人带着古人的宠爱降临，他可以控制万物，如同太阳运行，命运之神不必时时展示她之所能。

相信流亡者是危险的事情

相信那些被驱逐出自己国家的流亡者是非常危险的事，鉴于这是每一个当权者都不得不解决的问题，因此这个观点在别的专题中可能并非错误。为了支持这一观点，举一个泰特斯·李维在其史书中曾引用过的典型例子，尽管这不在他的研究范围。亚历山大大帝进军亚洲时，他的一个亲戚——实际上是他叔叔——伊庇鲁斯王国亚历山大，受到卢卡尼亚流亡者的邀请，让其带领军队进入意大利，使其相信通过他们的斡旋，他能得到整个王国。带着他们的承诺和由此而生的希望，他进入意大利，结果被他们害死了，因为同城的公民答应，如果能杀死他，他们就可以回到自己的祖国。因此，我们应该反思那些被自己国家流放的人许下的协议和承诺的不可靠性，要弄清这种人是否言而有信，一定要牢牢记住：一旦他们有机会无须你的帮助就可以回归故土，他们将不顾对你许下的任何承诺，抛弃你投靠别人。相比空洞的承诺和希望，回家的渴望更强烈，以至于他们认为那是错误，并且狡诈地夸大：所以在他们所信与所说之间，他们相信他们使你有了这样的希望，如果你依赖它，你会一无所获或者自取灭亡。

亚历山大和雅典的地米斯托克利的例子足以明证。地米斯托克利被宣布为叛国者后，在亚洲大流士寻求庇护，他向大流士郑重承诺，如果大流士有决心，他会协助进攻希腊。但是后来他没有履行承诺，无论是因为出于愧疚还是害怕惩罚，地米斯托克利最终饮鸩自尽。由此可见，如果像地米斯托克利这样杰出的人物都会犯下如此错误，那么那些德行逊于他的人则更可能犯错，更可能被自己的欲望和冲动左右。因此，统治者应该对流亡者承诺的事情保持谨慎，因为他得到的往往是巨大的屈辱或伤害。

因为利用偷袭或城里居民提供的情报来夺取城镇，极少能够成功，所以我觉得探讨这个与下个章节无关，罗马人照样有很多攻城之法。

罗马人各种攻城之法

罗马人热衷于战争，所以他们总是在任何场合利用任何事情牟利，比如说花钱，以及任何能有所帮助的事情。这就是为什么他们不愿意围困城市，他们认为此战术代价太高，而且过于死板，围城的劣势更多地会抵消胜利带来的优势。因此他们认为最好是采用其他战术而不是围困。在罗马人长年的征战史上，极少有围困城市的事例。

为了得到一座城市，罗马人要么攻城，要么逼其投降。他们进攻时既会凭其强大军队而强攻，也会使用计谋。强攻时，他们会使用两个战术，一是在不破坏城墙的情况下，从所有方向同时进攻，称之为“给城市加冠”，因为所有军队都参与包围并与敌交战。运用这个战术，他们取得了多次胜利，甚至有的大城市在被第一次攻击时就在所难免，例如，西皮奥夺取了西班牙的新迦太基城。其次，当攻击失败后，他们就开始用攻城锥或其他围城器具破坏城墙，或者挖掘直通城里的地道，例如，维伊城就是这样被攻取的。再者，为了化解守军的高度优势，他们会建造木质塔楼，或在城墙外修筑土山，以便和守军处在同一高度。

为了抵抗上述进攻，城里的守军在面对罗马人第一个战术即全面进攻时，会很快暴露在危险面前，而且没有有效的对策。因为各处都需要守军防守，他们没有足够的预备队和援军，即使人手充足，也不是所有人都能英勇作战，一旦一处攻破，则全线溃败。这种情况时常发生，所以这个战术非常有效。但是，当第一轮进攻失利后，他们不会保持很久，因为这对军队来说很危险，它涉及太多战场，作为整体抵抗是可以的，但对于守军却无力突围。军队失去控制且疲惫不堪；但是如果能出其不意，他们只会尝试一次这种战术。如果在城墙上有突破口，可以暂时借助壁垒进行反击。对付地道，他们可以使用现有的武器或其他工具进行反地道战，如装满羽毛的大桶，点燃之后，把它们投入地道中，烟雾和恶臭会阻止敌人进入地道。如果受到塔楼攻击，他们可以尝试用火攻摧毁它。对付土山，他们可以在城墙的低处开个洞，此处是土山倚靠城墙的地方，然后将外面的泥土吸到城里来，因为泥土从外面堆起，却

从内部被掏空，所以土山就垒不起来。

这些攻城战术都不能持久，所以他们要么安营扎寨，要么改变取胜策略，西皮奥在非洲就是这么做的。当他进攻尤蒂卡受挫后，在外面扎营寻机与迦太基军队交战，消灭他们。或者他们可以依靠围困战术，正如他们采用围困战术攻取了维伊、加普亚、迦太基、耶路撒冷和其他城市一样。

借助内应密谋夺城的例子是帕拉奥波利，罗马人在内应的接应下占领了它。罗马人和其他人时常尝试这种战术，但是很少成功。原因就是，即使最小的失误也会导致满盘皆输，这种失误很容易发生。一开始在阴谋计划时就有可能暴露，因为有人会去告发，所以很容易被发现。有时也是因为困难重重。除非你能找到借口，否则并不允许和他们交谈，但此种情况下你就必须要与敌人接触。即便计划顺利进行，没有被发觉，开始实施时还会遇到一大堆问题。如果你比约定时间提前或者推迟都会扰乱计划。再者，如果有任何意外的响声，像卡庇托山的白鹅那样，或者如果正常的过程被打断，即使是最小的错误或失误，进攻也会注定失败。除此之外，黑暗的夜晚会给执行危险任务的人增加恐惧，实际上大多数参与者不熟悉所要去往的地方。他们会迷茫、怯懦，轻微的意外也会使他们心惊胆战，任何错觉都足以使他们掉头逃跑。

在这样隐秘的夜间冒险中，比起西西尼亚人，阿拉托斯则更幸运，没有人被发现，然而，即使他很大胆，在白天公开进行，也会同样感到紧张。我们可以归因于他所具有的某种神秘品行，而不是使他们比其他人更幸运的带有夜间冒险特征的任何事物。虽然经常计划用此战术，但是极少能成功奏效。

城市的投降有可能是自愿的，也有可能是被迫的。如果是自愿的，一方面是因为某些外部情况使城市居民想得到他国的保护，如加普亚希望得到罗马的庇护。另一方面是渴望拥有仁慈的统治者，这种愿望是来

自英明君主领导下的好政府，此君主会考虑那些自愿接受他统治的人民，如罗得斯岛人、马西利亚人和其他投降罗马的人。如果是被迫投降，可能是因为上述长期围困，也可能是因为想摆脱由于袭击、劫夺和其他难忍之事而生的苦难。

上述所有方法中，罗马人使用最多的是最后一种。在四百五十多年里，他们通过战场上的胜利和袭击使邻国筋疲力尽，通过条约能获得比他们对手更大的荣誉。这是他们最倚重的方法，虽然他们试过所有方法，但发现其他方法危险且无用。因为围城耗费时间，代价高昂，攻城则无把握且风险高，计谋也不可靠。他们也意识到，如果敌军被击溃，他们一天之内就可以占领敌国，然而，如果他们包围一座顽抗的城市，可能需要几年才能取得。

罗马人给予军队统帅自主权

如果一个人能够重视罗马民众和元老们采用的全部程序模式，他就能通过熟读李维的史书而有所斩获，最引人关注的一点是，他们会赋予执政官、独裁官和军队统帅在战场上的权力。这是非常高的权力，因为罗马元老只为自己保留了开战和确认和平条约的权力。其他所有权力都留给了执政官。举例来说，当民众和元老决定对拉丁人发动战争，他们将其余事情都留给执政官自行决定，可以决定如何战斗，以及选择进攻的城市。

很多例子都证实了这一点，尤其以远征托斯卡纳人一例为典型。执政官费边在苏特流姆附近击败了他们，接着计划带领军队穿过直通托斯卡纳的奇米尼森林。尽管战争在一片新的未探索过的危险地区进行，但是对于其计划，他没有与元老院商议，甚至没有告知他们。正好与之相反，元老院可以接受的行动就是进一步确认。听说了费边取得的胜利，元老院很想知道他下一步是否要穿过奇米尼森林进军托斯卡纳，他们认为最好不要冒险，于是派了两名使者去阻止费边进军。但是当使者到达

时，费边已经到达托斯卡纳，并大获全胜，于是，使者干脆抛弃使命，将胜利的消息带回罗马，宣扬他赢得的荣誉。

凡是认真思考这种方式的人都会发现，善于使用它是非常明智的。如果元老院要求执政官一步步按照他们的指示指挥战争，那么他就会变得谨小慎微，反应迟缓。元老院认为胜利的荣耀不能全部归功于执政官，他们也要分享，因为战争原本是在他们指挥下进行的。而且，元老院本可以对一些不需要立即处理的事情提出建议，虽然元老们都是在军事方面经验丰富的人，但他们远在千里之外，并不熟悉战场的种种重要细节，因此无法给出正确的建议，会犯下许多错误。正因如此，他们更希望执政官自行决定，他们认为他会因热爱荣誉而尽力约束和节制自己的行为。

说到这点，我想唤起读者的注意，因为我注意到现今的共和国，像威尼斯和佛罗伦萨共和国，表现有所不同。如果他们的统帅、执政官或地方长官要安排战术，他们了解它并给出建议——这套程序与其他值得称赞的相同程序一样，让我们走上如今的道路。

对战略、策略、新装备和纪律的各种评论

如果敌人不惜一切代价决意与之交战，统帅则无法避战

“独裁官盖乌斯·苏尔比基乌斯与高卢人作战，在其作战时机和不利状况继续恶化时，不会孤注一掷与敌人决战。”对于所有人或大多数人都可能犯的错误，经常警告他们应对错误不是一件坏事。因此，我们现今处理重大事件的方法比不上古人的水平。在这个时候再次指出这点并不多余。如果说有什么已经违背了古代传统的话，那么一定是在军事方面，古人们看重的东西现在都消失了。这种不幸是由于共和国和君主已经将这些事情委托给其他人执行。为了避免危险，他们置身军事行动之外，虽然有时君主也会亲自带兵出征，但我不会因此认为他能作出值得称颂的事。实际上，他们参与军事行动，只是为了炫耀而非可敬的原因。这是事实，他们会偶尔检阅一下军队，保留统帅的头衔，他们犯错误的次数要比共和国少一些，尤其是意大利的那些共和国，他们严重依赖他人，自己则对战争一无所知，然而他们希望自己在军队眼中仍贵为君主，于是参与制定决策，结果犯下了数不清的错误。

虽然在别的地方讨论过一些错误，但我依旧无法对一些大错保持沉默。当这些懒散的君主或无能的共和国派遣他们的将军征战时，他们认为任命他去做的最明智的事情，不是在战场上与敌人交战，而是恰恰相反，防守敌人进攻高于一切。他们认为这么做是在效仿费边·马克西姆斯，即避免交战从而拯救罗马。但他们忽略了这样一个事实：这样的委任多半是荒谬或危险的。应谨记于心的一点是，如果敌军不惜一切代价决意与之交战，留在战场上的将军将无法避免战斗。因此，这样的委任相当于：“迫不得已时方可参战，否则不可主动进攻。”如果一个将军想留在战场又不想交战，那么唯一的保险办法就是，与敌军保持至少五十

英里的距离，然后派出精锐的侦察员，如果敌人向你进军，你可以有时间远离他们。另一个方法就是躲在城里。但两个方法都极其危险。第一个方法会让你的国家受制于敌，英勇的君主宁可在战场上决一死战，也不愿意以他的臣民为代价拖延战争。第二个方法注定会失败，如果事情果真这样，把军队带进城里，你可能会被包围，而且用不了多久你就会被饥饿折磨而开城投降。因避战而采用这两个办法都极其不利。只要费边·马克西姆斯的军队依然英勇无畏使敌人不敢到你的阵前挑战，那么他采纳的坚守险要的计划就会一直有效。所以说费边没有避战，他只是更想利用他的优势进行交战。如果汉尼拔想与他交战，他本可以一整天等待他。但汉尼拔不敢在这样条件下和他交战。可以说汉尼拔和费边一样避战；但如果任何一方决意不惜代价决战，另一方将不得不采用三个方法之一，即前面已经说过的两个方法，还有逃跑。

以上所述千真万确，有很多例子可以清楚地证明，尤其是罗马人和马其顿的菲利普（珀修斯之父）之间的战争。当菲利普被罗马人攻击时，他决定不与之交战，如同费边·马克西姆斯一开始在意大利那样避免交战一样。他和他的军队驻扎在山顶上，建立防御工事，原以为罗马人不敢来找他交战。但是罗马人来了，和他交战，还把他从山上赶走了。他无力抵抗，和他大部分的军队一起逃跑了。恶劣难行的地形阻止了罗马人的追击，使他免遭彻底被歼。菲利普仍然不愿意与罗马人交战，他在罗马的附近扎营，不得不离开。他从失败经验中学会了如何避战，在山顶上扎营是不够的，也不能把自己关在城里。于是决定采用余下的方法，让自己与罗马的营地保持很远的距离。因此，当罗马人进驻这个省，他就转移到另一个省，如此这样捉迷藏，只要罗马人退走，他就回去。但最后他终于意识到靠拖延战争，他的处境会越来越糟，双方都让他的百姓遭受很多痛苦。他决定在战争中一决高下。于是在适当的时候，他与罗马人展开了正面决战。

在费边军队身处的情况下避免交战是有利的，对盖乌斯·苏尔比基

乌斯也是如此，即当你有一支善战之师，敌人不敢应战，无法把你赶出防御工事时，或者当敌人在你的国家立足未稳，无法保证后勤补给供应时，这个方法有用，李维给出的理由是："只要时机和不利状况每天都会使敌人的处境变得越坏，那么他就不愿意孤注一掷与敌人决战。"但是在其他情况下，避战会带来耻辱和危险，因为如果你逃跑了，正如菲利普那样，其结果会和被击溃一样糟糕，而且更可耻，以至于有损你的美德。尽管他成功逃脱了，但是那些无有利地形帮助的人可能就没有他那么幸运了。

无人否认汉尼拔是一位战争奇才。当他在非洲与西皮奥较量时，如果他能看出拖延战争的任何好处，他一定会这么做。或者，身为一名拥有一支常胜之师的高明统帅，他本可以效仿费边在意大利的做法。但是，他既然没有这么做，一定有更强有力的理由。他的军队已经集结完毕，他知道自己军费匮乏，缺少盟友，不能进行持久战，作为统帅，如果在他的军队被迫解散之前不与敌人进行决战，那么他一定是疯了。如果他继续等待，肯定会失败；但如果进攻，他可能会成功。

还有一点值得思考：如果你注定要失败，又试图赢得荣誉，那么与敌人战斗至最后一兵一卒将比其他让你蒙羞的方法更能让你得到敌人的尊敬。汉尼拔一定是被困境限制了手脚。另一方面，如果汉尼拔当时推迟交战，而西皮奥没有勇气进军攻击他坚固的工事，那么西皮奥本可以不会为此蒙受损失，因为他已经打败了西法克斯，并占领了非洲大部分城市，如同在意大利一样处境无忧。与汉尼拔的战争不是他当初对抗费边时的情景了，同样与高卢人的战争也不是他当初对抗苏尔比基乌斯时的情景了。

带领军队进攻别的国家而又想避免交战是不可能的。如果想进军敌国，敌军出现时，交战是不可避免的。如果在一座城市前列阵，也必须交战。我们这个时代就发生过这样的事情，当勃艮第公爵查尔斯在瑞士

城镇穆尔滕前安营扎寨时，被瑞士人击溃了。同样，当法国军队包围诺瓦拉时，也被瑞士人击败了。

当被迫对抗多个敌人时，即使比敌人弱小，假如能抵挡住敌人的首次进攻，你实际上已经胜利了

罗马城民众的护民官的权力非常大，这很有必要，否则，他们就不可能监控贵族的野心。正如前述，在此情况下，贵族原本会很快腐蚀共和国。然而，我在别处提到过，因为体制内特有的弊病，导致了新的灾难，所以共和国必须颁布新的法令对抗他们。因此，护民官因权力在握而变得越来越傲慢，威胁了贵族和整个罗马。如果阿庇乌斯·克劳狄未提出制衡护民官权力的措施，那么由此产生的危险会对罗马的自由造成不利影响。这包括从他们中间甄别出哪些人怯懦、容易腐化，哪些人能投身于公众利益，以及当他们的建议与元老院的建议相左时，哪些人易被诱导以致反抗其他人的意志。这个措施在很大程度上限制了护民官过大的权力，有益于罗马。

这让我们不禁思考下面情况是如何发生的，众多力量联合起来对抗单一力量，虽然通过联合使其力量比对方高出许多，然而单一力量却被期望得更多，虽然力量比联合力量弱小，即使它很强大，单一力量还有许多联合力量所没有的众多优势，因此，其只要稍稍努力，较弱一方就可以瓦解联合力量，使原本强大的联盟变弱。我不再引证古代史中的例子，因为例子太多，但是我会用引用一些发生在我们时代的现代事例。

1483年，所有的意大利行省组成了反威尼斯联盟。威尼斯人失去了所有领土，他们的军队在战场也落败了，于是靠贿赂诱使取得米兰统治权的卢多维科爵士与其成功达成了协议，按照协议威尼斯人不仅收回了他们失去的土地，而且还获得菲拉拉国的一块领地。因此，虽然他们战败了，但是当和平来临时，他们却比之前更富有。

几年前，整个欧洲组成了反法同盟，但是在战争结束之前，西班牙退出了同盟，出于自身利益的考虑与法国人讲和，结果导致其他同盟国在很短的时间内也纷纷与法国达成和解。

由此结论显而易见。如果许多国家对一个国家宣战，那么这个国家摆脱此局面最好的方法是：它必须抵抗住第一轮的进攻，然后拖延时间，等待时机的来临。如果做不到这一点，许多危险将随之而生，威尼斯就遭遇了这种情况。如果可以拖住法国军队，有时间争取到反威尼斯联盟中的某个国家的支持，它就可能避免灾难的发生。但是威尼斯的军队不够强大到可以拖住敌军，没有时间劝说任何国家脱离联盟，因此失败了。我们注意到，罗马教皇在收复失地后，成了它的同盟国，随后西班牙也与其结盟。如果这两位君主有能力，他们本来很愿意帮助它拯救伦巴第，因为这样可以阻止法国在意大利称霸。因此，威尼斯人原本可以通过放弃部分领土，而保住其他部分。如果在战争爆发之前能实现的话，这将会是一个明智的选择，这样他们就不会被赶出来。但是在战争开始后，这样做反而会受到谴责，而且很可能没有作用。然而，在开战前，几乎没有威尼斯人预见到这种危险，更别说应对措施，也没有人给他们提出建议。

由此，我们的结论是，罗马元老院找到了从护民官的野心中挽救国家的方法，即设置多个护民官。所以，如果有很多人辅佐的君主非常英明地采取适当的措施化解联盟，那么他就能控制国家。

谨慎的统帅应该让他自己的军队绝对相信作战的必要性，但应避免迫使敌人也这么做

以上论述已经表明，生存欲望在人类生活中发挥了非常大的作用，它可以引领人们取得光荣的业绩。正如德高望重的哲学家在他们作品中写到的那样，如果没被生存欲望驱使，那么人最高贵的工具，即双手和舌头，就不可能完美地完成工作，或者将他们的工作带到前所未有的高

度。因此，古代军队统帅意识到了生存欲望的作用，即当受到生存欲望的驱使，士兵就能在战斗中变得坚定不移，作战勇敢，因此他们会将其部队置于绝境中，另一方面，不让敌人有破釜沉舟的可能。为达此目的，他们经常会向敌军打开他们原本关闭的道路，而对自己的士兵封闭原本开放的道路。要想让一个城市能顽强抵抗，或者让军队在战争中勇敢作战，那么他首先应该做的就是，将这种生存欲望灌输到参战士兵的头脑中。

结果就是，谨慎的统帅在攻打和包围一城市时，应该考虑促使城中居民抵抗的生存欲望程度，从而估计出攻城的难度。如果发现促使他们守城的生存欲望非常大，他就应该知道围困将很困难，反之，将很容易。这就是为什么平定反叛的城市比首次攻取它时要困难得多。起初，他们不会担心因为抵抗而受到敌人的惩罚，于是轻易地投降了，但是后来他们害怕由于再次抵抗而受到惩罚，于是征服他们就会变得困难。这种固执源于邻国之间天然的仇恨。出于野心与嫉妒促使国家之间互相征伐，尤其是共和国之间，托斯卡纳就是例子，这种敌对和竞争使得征服对方变得艰难，而且艰难程度会越来越大。仔细思考一下佛罗伦萨城的邻国有哪些，威尼斯城的邻国有哪些，就不难理解，佛罗伦萨在战争中本不应该花费比威尼斯多，所得到的却比它少，因为威尼斯周边的城镇没有比佛罗伦萨周边城镇的抵抗更顽强。这是因为威尼斯人更习惯于在君主而不是自由城邦的统治下，而习惯于服从的城市通常不介意更换统治者，恰好相反，他们愿意这么做。因此，虽然威尼斯的邻国比佛罗伦萨的邻国更加强大，但由于这些城镇的抵抗并不顽强，所以威尼斯能比佛罗伦萨更快地征服他们，而后者的周围都是自由城邦。

我们回到这个论述的主题。当一位将军攻击一座城市时，他应该尽其所能使守军放弃生存欲望，以及他们顽抗的意志，如果他们害怕惩罚，则通过承诺赦免他们，如果他们害怕失去自由，则跟他们解释他们大多数人的公共利益不会受到侵犯，只是剥夺少数野心家的利益。这样

做有助于攻取城市。虽然这些花言巧语很容易被人看穿，尤其是谨慎之人，但平民依然时常上当。因为他们渴望和平早日来临，于是对慷慨承诺掩盖下的陷阱视而不见。许多城市就是因此沦为奴役之地的。佛罗伦萨就是最近的例子。这发生在克拉苏和他的军队身上，虽然他意识到帕提亚的承诺是空洞的，但敌人的和平建议却使他的军队失去了抵抗的必要信念，他无法维持军队的志气，迷失了方向。如果重新审视自己的人生，我们就能看清这一点。

由于少数人的野心，撒姆尼人违反他们的条约，袭击和掠夺罗马同盟国的领土。后来他们派遣使节到罗马请求和平，提出愿意归还他们掠夺的东西，并交出导致战乱和抢掠的罪魁祸首，但他们的请求被罗马人拒绝了。当他们两手空空地回到撒姆尼后，撒姆尼军队的统帅克劳迪厄斯·庞提乌斯，在他著名的演说之一中指出：虽然他们这方希望和平，但是罗马人无论如何都想发动战争，生存欲望驱使他们必须参战，他说道："如果生存欲望迫使人们参战，则战争是正当的，如果人们的希望寄于武力，则拿起武器就是他们的职责。"他将军队胜利的希望建立在此生存欲望上。

还有一个罗马事例中更值得注意的例子，即盖乌斯·曼利厄斯领导他的军队对抗维伊人，当一部分维伊人的军队突破他们的防御栅栏后，他急忙带领一队人马抵抗他们，为了不让维伊人逃掉，他在军营中的每个出口都设置了守卫。因此，当维伊人发现他们无路可逃时，反而勇猛异常，竟然杀死了曼利厄斯，如果不是一位护民官头脑清醒放他们出去，他们也许会将其他罗马人也杀死。因此，只要生存欲望仍在约束维伊人战斗，他们就会勇不可当，但是，当他们看见有路可逃时，反而只会想着逃跑，而不是战斗。

当沃尔西人和埃魁人的军队越过罗马边境时，罗马派遣执政官抵抗他们。维提乌斯·麦西乌斯指挥的沃尔西军队在战斗中，发现被罗马人

的防御栅栏包围了。他知道要么战死，要么拼死作战求得生机，于是对他的士兵说：“跟我一起上，在战场上没有城墙和壁垒，只有刀剑对刀剑，虽然我们勇气相当，但生存欲望是我们最后的武器，也是最好的武器，你拥有这种优势。”因此，李维称生存欲望是“最后和最好的武器”。

全罗马最谨慎的统帅卡美卢斯，当他率领军队进入维伊城后，为了巩固取得的胜利，让敌人失去抵抗的最后一丝生存欲望，在维伊人能听见的情况下，大声发布命令：任何人只要放下武器，就不会受到伤害。结果就是维伊人扔掉了武器，整个城市几乎兵不血刃就屈服了。这个方法后来被很多将领效仿。

哪一方最值得相信，强将弱兵，还是弱将强兵？

科里奥兰纳斯被罗马驱逐出境后，投靠了沃尔西人，在那里集结了一支军队，借此向他的罗马同胞复仇。他开始向罗马进军，但是最终撤退了，原因是他对他母亲的爱，而非对罗马军队的爱。在对这件事情的评论中，李维说道：我们可以从中知道，罗马共和国更多是通过她将领的美德，而不是士兵的美德而成长。虽然沃尔西人以往总是失败，但这次他们本可以获胜，但由于科里奥兰纳斯是他们的统帅，才没有取胜。虽然李维提出这个观点，但在他的历史著作中有许多文章表明，没有统帅指挥的士兵们也曾表现出证明他们品行的非凡行为，在执政官死后，他们甚至比他战死前更加纪律严明，更加意志坚决。这样的事情发生在西班牙由西皮奥家族领导的罗马军队身上，尽管这两个统帅均战死了，但罗马士兵的品行不仅保护了自己，而且打败了敌人，为罗马共和国挽救了西班牙。考虑上述许多例子中只凭士兵的品行就赢得了战争，还有许多其他例子中是将军的品行发挥了同样的作用，所以我们可以说，将军与士兵需要彼此。

在这一点上，我们应该首先考虑哪一个更让人害怕：弱将强兵，还

是强将弱兵。如果我们相信恺撒的观点，则双方同等重要。恺撒前往西班牙与阿夫拉涅乌斯和彼得利乌斯作战时，虽然对手有一流的军队，但是他没有表现出一丝恐惧，他说道，他是在和一支无将之师作战，以此表明统帅的无能。另外，当他前往塞萨利与庞培交手时，他说道：“我将遇到一位无兵之将。”

更进一步探讨此问题：究竟是常胜将军铸造了常胜之师，还是常胜之师成就了常胜将军。我倾向于这个观点：众人之力皆为一人之志，则易；而一人之力皆为众人之志，则难。当卢库勒斯被派遣与米特里达梯交战时，完全没有任何战争经验，然而他带领的军队很精锐而且有杰出的军官，很快他就成长为优秀的统帅。同样，罗马人因为人力短缺，武装了许多奴隶，并把他们交由森普罗尼乌斯·格拉古斯训练，在很短的时间里，他就把他们培养成了一支优秀的军队。曾在别处提到过的佩洛皮达斯和伊巴密浓达，当他们把底比斯从斯巴达人的奴役中解放出来后，在短期内将底比斯农夫打造成了优秀的战士，他们不仅能够对抗斯巴达的民兵，而且还打败了他们。

这场争论是势均力敌的，因为一方是好的，就可以使另一方变得和它一样好。一支优秀的军队，如果缺少一个英明的统帅就会变得躁动而危险，亚历山大死后的马其顿军以及内战中的老兵就是这样。因此，我们应该对有时间训练士兵并将他们全副武装的杰出统帅更有信心，而不是一个狂躁之徒被临时选为乱军的头头。更多的荣誉与赞美应该给予那些既能打败敌人，又能将军队在迎敌前训练成虎狼之师的将军们，因为他们展示出了双重的美德，即使将这种美德给予众人，使其成为严厉的纪律严明者，他们也远不能像那些将军那样受到尊敬和赞颂。

由于战争中新发明的出现或不熟悉的叫喊而产生的作用

许多事件都表明，在冲突和战争中因第一次被人看见或听到的事物而发生前所未有的事件非常重要，以罗马人与沃尔西人的战争为例。当

奎因久斯发现他军队的一个侧翼在后撤，于是大声呵斥他们坚守阵线，因为另一个侧翼正在获胜，通过这些激励的话语，他让自己的士兵重新获得勇气，同时也让敌人惊恐万分，于是他获胜了。对于纪律严明的军队，这些话语会有很大作用，对于混乱不堪和军纪涣散的军队仍会有更大作用，可以说是，一语重于泰山。

举一个发生在我们时代的不同寻常的例子。几年前，佩鲁贾城因奥迪和巴利奥尼两支势力而分裂。后者当权之后，前者被流放了。但是在朋友的帮助下，巴利奥尼召集了一支军队，集结在靠近佩鲁贾的一座城镇里。在城内追随者的协助下，夜晚他们神不知鬼不觉地潜入城中，然后向广场的方向前进。因为城中的每个街头都设置了铁链阻挡道路，所以在奥迪军队的前列有一个人手持铁狼牙棒负责砸开固定铁链的锁，以便让骑兵通过。当呼喊声“拿起武器！”响起时，正在砸锁的人被后面的人群推挤得无法举起胳膊抡棒，于是，他大喊了一声“退后！”，这句话被后面的人一级级传下去，结果变成了“撤退！”。于是后面的人开始逃跑，一个接一个，其他人也随着自己人产生的混乱而溃逃。因此，奥迪人的计划就这么泡汤了，就因为一句不起眼的话。

严明的纪律不仅能使军队在战斗中保持有序的队列，而且也会防止一些小意外扰乱军心。仅以此原因，就说明平民大众在战争中毫无用处，因为任何谣言、喊声、骚动都会影响他们的情绪，使他们落荒而逃。因此训导是有必要的，高明的统帅应该委派专人听从其口头命令，并将命令传递给其他人。他应该使他的军队不去理会别人，军官们不得擅离职守。疏忽这些要点会导致无法控制的混乱。

至于疑兵之计，每位统帅都应该在战斗中尝试使用这种方法鼓舞士气，同时挫伤敌人的锐气，尤其是在侥幸获胜的战斗中非常有效。以罗马独裁官盖乌斯·苏尔比基乌斯为例。在他与高卢人作战时，他把武器分发给所有脚夫和随从们，让他们骑上骡子和其他乘骑，让他们伪装成

一支骑兵部队，然后让他们手持旌旗隐蔽在山后。在战斗白热化的时候，命令他们收到信号后，出现在战场上，让敌人看到。如此疑兵之法，让高卢人惊恐万分，于是溃败了。有两件事是一位优秀统帅应该做的：第一，他应该知道是否应该采用新奇的战法惊吓敌人；第二，他应该保持警惕，观察敌人是否会用同样的花招来对付他，从而察觉出并化解它。

印度国王就是这么做的，但当塞米勒米斯注意到印度国王有很多大象后，为了威吓住他，让他看到她也有很多大象，于是将水牛和母牛的兽皮披在骆驼的背上伪装出许多假大象。但她的计谋让印度国王发现了，她的计划不仅无用，而且变成了她的劣势。同样，当独裁官玛莫库斯与费德奈人交战时，为了惊吓罗马人，在战斗最激烈的时候，他们命令许多军队将火把绑在长枪上从费德奈城出来，自以为借此就可以分散罗马人的注意力，结果自乱阵脚。

但须注意，这种计谋如果实大于虚，则可以用于占优势的一方，因为如果他们足够勇猛，弱点就不会很快被发现。但是如果虚大于实，则最好不要采用，或者如果采用了，要尽量多伪装一会儿，别让骗局很快被揭穿，就像盖乌斯·苏尔比基乌斯的“骡兵”做的那样。如果疑兵之术有内部弱点，只要走到近前就会被看穿，那将对你是百害而无益，就像塞米勒米斯的大象和费德奈人的火把一样。虽然一开始他让罗马军队变得有点不安，然而，独裁官赶过来，喝住他的士兵，告诉他们不要像胆小鬼一样被一点点小烟吓跑，应该转身冲过去，他高呼道：“既然你们无法用仁慈使他们安静，那么就用火焰摧毁费德奈。”这种方法被证明对费德奈人没有用处，他们是战斗的失败者。

军队的统帅应该只有一位，而非多位，令出多门是祸事

当费德奈人反叛并屠杀了罗马人派到费德奈的移民后，罗马人为了报仇雪耻任命了四位有领事权的护民官，其中一人留下保卫罗马，另外

三个人被派遣去与费德奈人和维伊人交战。由于指挥权分散，护民官之间相互对立，虽然没有造成严重后果，但他们回到罗马时名誉扫地。幸亏罗马军队英勇善战，才没有因他们的无能而引发灾难。因此，当罗马人意识到问题根源后，就任命了一位独裁官，负责将三位护民官引发的混乱恢复正常。这表明，多人指挥同一支军队或者负责防御同一座城市毫无用处。泰特斯·李维对这件事是再明白不过，他写道：“三位有领事权的护民官向我们展示了在战争中令出多门是多么的徒劳无用，每个人都倾向于自己的意见，认为别人的都是错误的，于是他们给了敌人可乘之机。”

虽然这个例子足够说明号令不统一在战争中会引起混乱，我想再举两个例子，一个来自现代，另一个来自古代，能更好地支持这个观点。

1500年，在法国国王路易十二重新征服了米兰之后，他派出军队进军比萨城，想从佛罗伦萨人手中夺回它。军队由吉奥凡巴蒂斯塔·里多尔菲和卢卡·蒂·安东尼奥·第格利·阿尔卑兹同时指挥。因为吉奥凡巴蒂斯塔威望很高，而且经验丰富，卢卡将一切事务均交由他管理。虽然没有显露出，但卢卡通过沉默、疏忽和批评的方式表现出反对吉奥凡巴蒂斯塔的野心，结果他既没有为围城作战出力，也没有献计献策，表现得像自己并不存在。后来，因为某件事情的发生让吉奥凡巴蒂斯塔不得不返回佛罗伦萨。当卢卡一人独掌大权之后，事情发生了变化，他通过勇气、勤奋和明断表现出了他的价值，只要他的同僚还在军营，所有这些特质都不会被展示出来。

为了证实泰特斯·李维的话，引用另一个例子：罗马派遣一支军队讨伐在奎因久斯和他同僚阿格里帕指挥下的埃魁人。阿格里帕想从奎因久斯手中取得对战争的绝对控制权，他说道：“只有当最高指挥权在一人之手时，军队事务管理才会最明智。”

这和我们现在的共和国和君主的做法正好相反，为了加强管理，他

们为一个地方加派了多名行政长官和多名军队指挥官，导致了难以形容的混乱。在我们的时代里，如果人们想找到灾难降临到意大利和法国军队上的原因，那么这是最有效的通途。总而言之，可以确信，将征战之事委托给一位才智平庸的人，要好过交给两位拥有同等权力的杰出之人。

给征战中统帅们的建议

为什么法国人曾被而且如今依旧被认为开战如虎，后继如鼠

高卢人在战斗激情的鼓舞下，时常在阿尼奥河岸上向罗马人提出挑战，这引发了他们与提图斯·曼利厄斯的战争。高卢人的斗志也使我想起泰特斯·李维曾数次说到他们，即在战斗刚开始的时候比男人更加勇敢，但是随着战斗的持续，他们会变得比女人还不如。至于为什么会这样，许多人认为这是本性使然，这正确无疑。但不能由此推断出曾使他们一开始勇敢战斗的本性，不能被规则控制以至于他们无法将勇猛坚持到底。

为了证明这一点，我们先了解一下军队的三种类型。第一种，既有斗志又有秩序。秩序能提升斗志和品德，这在罗马军队中得以体现。在他们的整个历史中，罗马军队总是秩序井然，军纪的使用由来已久。在纪律严明的军队中，没有人不按照军规行事。因此，罗马军队征服了全世界，他们是其他军队的榜样——没有人好吃懒做或嫖娼，而且没有执政官的命令，不会有人擅自执行军事或民事行动。不遵守纪律的军队不是真正的军队，即使他们做了不起的事，也是由于激情和冲动，而不是因为英勇。遵守纪律的品德能在恰当的时间以恰当的方式使用激情，军队不会因此遭遇困难或损失。严明的军纪能激发勇气和斗志，从而增加胜利的希望，只要军纪尚存，则胜利尤在。

与上述类型正好相反，第二种类型是只有激情而无纪律的军队，高卢人就是这样，他们在战斗中纪律涣散。如果第一次进攻受挫，他们就会动摇不定，因为激情不能维持长久，当他们的激情冷却下来，他们就无所依靠。罗马人，正好相反，因为他们纪律严明，所以他们不在乎危

险，不会丧失胜利的信心，他们能保持坚定和顽强，自始至终用同样的勇气和品德进行战斗。当战斗意志被激发起来，他们就会勇往直前。

第三种类型的军队就是既无天生的斗志也无纪律进行补充的军队，就是我们时代的意大利军队，非常无能，除非遇到一支因意外而逃跑的军队，否则绝不可能获胜。没有必要引述更多例子，因为他们每时每刻都在证明着自己多么的软弱无能，毫无勇气可言。因此，泰特斯·李维的话简明扼要地阐述了优秀的军人和无能的军人是如何产生的，我引用帕披里乌斯·克塞在指责费边时所作的演讲："没人会尊重人或众神，他们不会遵守统帅的法令或指示，他们会在和平或敌对的领土上到处游荡劫掠；他们会忘记自己的誓言，未经许可就脱离军队，而且他们很愿意这么做；他们会让旗帜无人守卫，不会再听从命令集结或解散；他们会为争夺领地而不停争斗，不管这个地方是否适宜，也不管统帅的命令；他们不会保留军团或军阶；就像一群强盗，盲目而狂躁，而不是守纪和尽职的军人。"在这段话中，我们能立刻看出我们时代的军人是否盲目而狂躁，或者是否守纪和尽职，他们远没达到军人的标准，而且远不及罗马人那样有斗志有纪律，或者仅仅像高卢人那样有战斗的激情。

大战前的小规模战斗是否有必要，如果统帅不这样做，怎么才能了解新的敌军

我们在上文提到过，在世事中，还有这种困境：当人们想将事情办得达到完美程度时，会发现灾祸总会与福祉同行，祸易变成福，这两者共存似乎是可能的。这是世之常情。正因如此，福祉总是难以得到，除非命运的眷顾为你消除天然的麻烦。我不得不说，这是曼利厄斯与高卢人的战争，对此泰特斯·李维说道："这场战斗将决定整个战争的结局，高卢人的军队在恐惧中丢弃了他们的营地，最先逃进提泊坦，然后流窜到坎帕尼亚。"一方面，无论如何，优秀的统帅都应避免因偶然事件而损害军队的行为，因为他的军队不是雇佣兵，因此孤注一掷的冒险是极

其鲁莽的，正如上文在谈论守卫关口时所述。

另一方面，当英明的统帅发觉他将与享誉盛名的不熟悉的敌军交战时，在决战之前，他们应让军队通过小规模的接触战来探得敌人的实力，从而了解敌人，继而找出应对之法，这可以消除因谣言和敌人声望而生的恐惧。对统帅而言，这么做至关重要。在此过程中，生存欲望会约束你去采用它，因为你不想看到自己置身危难之中，如果要和敌人交战，首先要让你的军队与敌人有所接触，从而使他们内心摆脱由敌人的声望而生的恐惧。

瓦列利乌斯·科尔维努斯受命指挥罗马军队对付撒姆尼人，但迄今罗马人没有与撒姆尼人交战的经验，对他们的作战能力也不了解。因此，泰特斯·李维说到瓦列利乌斯让罗马士兵与撒姆尼人进行小规模接触战，“于是他们可能就不再害怕未知的战争与敌人”。巨大的危险依然存在，如果你的士兵在接触战中被打败了，反而会增加他们的恐惧与胆怯，造成与你希望相反的局面，即你将使他们感到害怕，与你原本想让他们感到安全的初衷相反。于是这就是祸福之间紧密相连的事情之一，它们之间是如此密切，以至于很容易让你弄巧成拙。

有鉴于此，杰出的统帅应该采取一切预防措施，以防止消磨军队志气的危险事情发生。首战失利就是能打击士气的事情。因此对于接触战，应该慎重行事，除非有很大的优势，确信会获胜，否则就不应出战。也不应该试图据守关隘，因为那里无法使其军队施展开。也不应该防守城市，除非其损失将不可避免地使其灭亡。再者，如果决心守城，他应该安排他的军队与驻军协防以反击进攻，这样他所有的军队在应对围攻时就能发挥作用。否则，他就应放弃防守城市。放弃可能守不住的城市，保全军队，他不会在战争中失去声誉或取胜的希望。但是当你没有守住你原本打算防守的城市，而且人人皆知你在进行防守，那么损失将很严重而且可能是灾难性的。因此事实上，你会像高卢人那样，由于

暂时的胜利而失去战争。

珀修斯的父亲即马其顿王国的菲利普，在他那个时代，是声誉显赫的战士，当他受到罗马人攻击时，主动放弃了他认为无法守住的大片国土，并采取坚壁清野的策略，作为谨慎之人，他认为如果他没有守住他原本打算防守的地方，他将失去声望，这远比故意让那些好像他不在乎的地方落入敌手要更加可怕。当坎尼的失利使罗马人行为变得更加残暴时，他们拒绝帮助他们的追随者和臣民，吩咐他们要尽力自我防御。这个做法要比帮助盟友防守却最终让他们失望要好得多，因为如果那样做，他们会同时失去盟友和自己的军队，但如果不那样做，失去的只是盟友。

话题重新回到小规模接触战，我坚持认为，如果一位统帅因为他对敌人一无所知而必须倚靠接触战，那么他应该在他处于绝对优势不会有任何闪失的时候行动。他应该像马里厄斯在与辛布里人作战时那样。辛布里人是一个凶猛的部落，他们前来掠夺意大利，因为他们凶暴残忍、人多势大，而且已经打败了一支罗马军队，所以马里厄斯在进军时非常害怕。他由此判断，在与敌人交战之前，他必须消除由于畏敌而在军队中蔓延的恐慌情绪，作为慎重的统帅，他不止一次将他的军队驻扎在辛布里人必经的关口附近，旨在让他的军队能躲在防御工事的后面，亲眼看到并熟悉敌军的模样，所以当他们看到敌军如此杂乱无序、辎重拖累、武器落后，甚至还有人赤手空拳时，他们打消了疑虑，重新燃起斗志。马里厄斯非常明智地使用了这个方法，其他人也应该积极效仿，不再招致上述危险，也不要像高卢人表现得那样，“他们由于一些偶然事件而害怕，最先逃进提泊坦，然后流窜到坎帕尼亚”。

既然在这段论述中提到过瓦列利乌斯·科尔维努斯，那么我将在下个章节中使用他关于统帅该如何表现的演说。

统帅怎样才能获得军队的信任

如上所述，瓦列利乌斯·科尔维努斯带兵与撒姆尼人交战。由于罗马人不熟悉他们的作战方式，为了安定军心、了解敌人，他让军队与敌人进行一些接触战，仅仅这么做是不够的，于是他决定对士兵们作战前演说，极有说服力地指出他们应该多么藐视敌人，他的演说唤起了士兵们及他自己的勇气。从李维记录的这个演说中，我们了解到统帅应如何表现以获得军队的拥戴。他说道：“仔细看看指挥和支持你们奋战的统帅！扪心自问一下，这个你们将要听命于他的人是否只是一个言过其实、光鲜但没有任何军事才能的演说家，他是否知道如何使用武器，冲锋在前，在战斗最激烈时上阵杀敌！我要你们，我勇敢的兄弟们，跟随我的脚步，而不是我的言语，不要只关注我的命令，而是视我为榜样，因为凭着我执政官的右手已经获得了无数的最高赞誉。”可以从演说中得知，他是否认真思索过，如果他想占据统帅的地位，他将如何去做；如果反其道行之，则无论是因运气或野心而取得的地位，都会在某个适当的时候毁掉他的名誉，而不是成就它。因为不是头衔成就了人的伟大，而是人成就了伟大的头衔。

我们须再次注意以上所述，当伟大的统帅在面对不熟悉的敌人时，他是否使用了非凡的方法来鼓舞久经沙场的军队，当他指挥一支新组建的从未见过敌人的军队时，他是否会殚精竭虑地训练他们。如果一支经验丰富的军队都会害怕不熟悉的敌人，那么从未上过战场的新军则情况更糟。然而事实上，这些困难通常会被优秀的统帅以他的谨慎行事化解，上文曾提及的罗马人格拉古和底比斯人伊巴密浓达都是这么做的，他们指挥没有经验的新军打败了经验丰富的老兵。

他们采取的方法就是先用数月时间训练军队，并通过模拟战使他们逐渐习惯服从命令，在对新军有足够信心的时候，再带领他们参加实战。因此，在不缺乏人力时，受过训练、掌握了作战技能的平民就能组成一支优秀的军队。所以说，拥有丰富人力的君主却缺乏善战的士兵，不是由于他的人民懦弱，而仅仅是由于他自己的懒惰与愚蠢。

统帅应该熟悉地形

在统帅必备的才能中，熟知地形和地利是其中之一。如果没有这方面综合详细的知识，那么他就无法有效指挥战斗。正如科学需要实践一样，如果渴望得到完美，就需要经常练习。这种练习和详细的知识通过狩猎获得的比其他锻炼更多。因此，古代作家告诉我们，在他们的时代，统治世界的英雄们都是在森林和追逐中成长起来。追逐不仅能为他们提供必不可少的知识，而且教会了他们在战争中的其他必需技能。因此，色诺芬在他的《居鲁士传记》这样说道，当他准备进攻亚美尼亚王国时，委派任务后，他提醒领受任务的下属，这些任务就像他们以前经常随他进行的狩猎活动一样。他说，那些他派往山区埋伏的人应该像在山脊设陷阱的猎人，而那些前往扫荡平原的人应该像捕猎的人，先将野兽从它的巢穴中赶出来，然后追逐它，直至把它赶到罗网中。

上文所述是为了表明，色诺芬认为狩猎活动与战争极为相似，所以，伟人们将狩猎视为高贵和必要的运动。没有比狩猎更简便的方法来获得地理知识，因为追逐猎物的过程为猎手提供了解地形的绝佳机会。同时它使猎手熟悉了当地的环境，轻松掌握了未知地区的细节。所有国家和地区的地理特征都具有一致性，于是在一个地区掌握的地理知识可以被借鉴到另一地区，但是没有任何经验的人很难掌握另一地区的地形，除非他在那里生活了很长时间，否则不可能了解当地环境。例如，实践过的人一眼就能看出平原的面积，山脉的高度，河谷的走向等等，因为他已经能学以致用了。

泰特斯·李维在普布利乌斯·德西乌斯的例子中阐明了这一观点。在撒姆尼人的战争中，普布利乌斯·德西乌斯是护民官，负责指挥执政官科尼利厄斯的军队，当执政官打算率领罗马军队进入一条可能会被撒姆尼人切断退路的山谷时，德西乌斯看出其中的巨大危险，于是对执政官说：“奥留斯·科尼利厄斯，你看到敌人上面的那座山峰了吗？如果我们

能迅速占领它，它的险要位置可以保证我们的安全，撒姆尼人愚蠢地忽视了它。”在告诉大家德西乌斯的话之前，泰特斯·李维说：“普布利乌斯·德西乌斯，一个受过军事训练的护民官，观察到树木繁茂的山谷中有一座能威胁到敌人的山峰，虽然它不利于大部队进攻，但是轻装的小股部队却可以登上。”因此，执政官命令他带领三千名士兵占领了它，从而挽救了罗马军队。然后，当夜幕降临时，他思考如何能安全撤退，保全自己和他的部队，李维是这么记录的：“跟我来，让灯火继续亮着，我们去侦察一下敌人设置岗哨的地方，看看是否有办法逃出去。”他穿了件短小的军队斗篷，以免让敌人看到他是一位军官。

这件事证明了对于统帅而言了解地形的内在本质非常有用和必要，假如德西乌斯不是明智之人，没有这种本事，他就不可能看出占领那座山对罗马人有利，也不可能从远处看出如何占领此山，也不能在山顶被敌人四面包围时，发现一条在敌人严密防守下的出路，返回执政官的军队。从中我们可以推断出，德西乌斯一定有这样惊人的才能，才会使罗马军队占领山头转危为安，才会使他在敌人的重重包围中发现安全突围的生路。

人民的利益是至高无上的法律

在战争中使用欺诈不是可耻的事情

虽然使用欺诈是可憎的行为，但在战争中却值得称赞和夸耀。一个人使用欺诈战胜敌人，与他使用武力打败敌人一样值得赞许。我们可以从传记作家对伟人的评价中看出，他们赞扬汉尼拔和其他著名人物的这种行为。这样的例子举不胜举，在此不再赘述，但我想强调，关于失信或毁约的欺诈是不光彩的，虽然如上所述它会偶尔为你赢得国家或王国，但是不会为你带来荣誉。我所说的欺诈，是用于对付与你没有信用可言的敌人，即与战争有关的欺诈。例如，汉尼拔在佩鲁贾湖边假装逃跑，引诱罗马执政官和军队进入圈套，以及借助被点燃牛角的牛群逃出费边·马克西姆斯的包围。

庞提乌斯就善于使用欺诈，作为撒姆尼人的统帅，他在考地乌姆岔口使罗马军队落入圈套。他将自己的军队靠山埋伏好后，派出几个士兵化装成牧羊人，带着一群羊穿过平原。他们被罗马人抓住后被问到撒姆尼军队的位置，于是把庞提乌斯事先准备好的话告诉了罗马人，即撒姆尼军队已经动身去包围诺切拉。罗马执政官听信了他们的假情报，当罗马军队抵达那里时，他们马上被撒姆尼人包围在考地乌姆的悬崖峭壁之间。如果庞提乌斯能听从他父亲的建议，要么放罗马人一条生路，要么把他们赶尽杀绝，那么他用欺诈战术取得这场胜利就应该给他带来诸多荣誉，但是他采用了折中办法，即“既没有化敌为友，也没有彻底消灭敌人”，折中办法总是不利于国家事务，我在别的论述中已经提出过。

无论将面对耻辱还是荣誉，我们都应该保卫自己的国家，无论用什么手段都是正当的

如上文所说，罗马执政官和军队被撒姆尼人包围了。撒姆尼人极大地羞辱了罗马人，把他们的武器和装备都收缴了，强迫他们从牛轭下经过返回罗马。罗马执政官们惊恐万分，整个军队也陷入绝望中。罗马副将卢修斯·图鲁斯说道，为了拯救国家不应该拒绝任何可行的方法，罗马的存亡系于这支军队的存亡，应该想方设法地挽救它，无论用什么手段保卫国家都是正当的，无论带来的是耻辱还是光荣。因为如果这支军队保住了，罗马还有机会一雪前耻，但是如果没有成功，即便光荣地战死沙场，罗马及其自由也将随之湮没。所以，图鲁斯的建议最终被采纳了。

这个忠告值得关注，应该被每个为国家献策的公民遵守。当国家的安危依赖于所采用的决定时，就不应理会正义与非正义，善良或残酷，值得赞扬或有辱名誉。相反，任何其他顾虑都应置之不理，全心全意地执行能挽救国民生命与保全国家自由的措施。

这是法国人采纳的方法——他们所言与所行都是如此——为了捍卫他们的国王或他们王国的权力，没有人会发出不和谐的声音，“这样做会为国王带来耻辱”。他们说，国王没有作出可耻的决定，无论是福还是祸，无论他赢得还是葬送了整个王国。

城下之盟不应该被遵守

当执政官带着被剥夺武器且遭受撒姆尼人极尽羞辱虐待的军队回到罗马时，第一位在元老院发言的人说道，不应该遵守在考地乌姆达成的和平协议。他是罗马执政官斯普利乌斯·普斯图米尔斯。他认为，罗马人民不能受它束缚，只有他和其他承诺和平的人才受此约束。因此，如果人民想免除责任，他们应该将他和所有作出承诺的人当作犯人送给撒姆尼人。他坚决的要求最终使元老院让步了，于是他和其他人被当作囚犯交给了撒姆尼人，以此抗议和平无效。命运似乎垂青于普斯图米尔斯，撒姆尼人没有关押他，在他回到罗马后，在罗马人眼中他靠投降赢

得的荣誉，竟然比在撒姆尼人眼中庞提乌斯靠胜利获得的还要多。

有两件事应该引起我们关注。一件事是，荣誉可以通过两个行为中的任意一个获得，即在正常情况下靠胜利取得，以及如果你能证明失败与你无关或者借助义举在失败中将功补过。另一件事是，你没有兑现被迫作出的承诺并不可耻。实际上，当武力威胁消除时，影响共和国的城下之盟总是自动瓦解。这样的例子在历史中随处可见，而且人人皆知，即使在现代也会发生。不仅仅是当武力威胁消除时君主不再遵守被胁迫的承诺，我们发现当最初作出承诺的原因不再适用时，其他承诺也会失效。无论这是否值得称颂，无论君主应该不应该如此行事，《君主论》中已经详细地探讨过。因此在这里无须再作说明。

Niccolò Machiavelli

On Conspiracies

TRANSLATED BY LESLIE J. WALKER, SJ
WITH REVISIONS BY BRIAN RICHARDSON

PENGUIN BOOKS — GREAT IDEAS

Contents

On conspiracies

Introductory

Since conspiracies are of such dangerous consequence alike to princes and to private persons，I cannot well omit to discuss their nature，for it is plain that many more princes have lost their lives and their states in this way than by open war，because it is given to but few to make open war on a prince，whereas anyone can conspire against him．There is，on the other hand，no enterprise in which private persons can engage more dangerous or more rash than is this，for it is both difficult and extremely dangerous in all its stages．Whence it comes about that，though many conspiracies have been attempted，very few have attained the desired end．Hence，in order that princes may learn how to guard against these dangers，and that private persons may think twice before undertaking them and may learn，instead， to be content with life under the regime which fate has placed over them，I shall speak of conspiracies at length，omitting nothing of importance that is relevant either to a prince or to a private person．There is，in fact，a golden saying voiced by Cornelius Tacitus，who says that men have to respect the past but to submit to the present，and，while they should be desirous of having good princes，should put up with them of whatever sort they may turn out to be．And unquestionably those who act otherwise usually bring disaster both upon themselves and upon their country．

In starting to deal with this topic the first thing to be considered is against whom conspiracies are formed．It will be found that they are formed either against one's fatherland or against a prince. I propose here to discuss both these types, for of conspiracies formed with a view to handing over a town to the enemy besieging it or conspiracies which for one reason or another resemble this, enough has been said elsewhere.

Causes

We shall deal in the first part of this discourse with conspiracies against a prince, and shall inquire first as to their causes, which are many. There is, however, one which is much more important than all the rest. This consists in the universal hatred a prince may evoke, for when a prince has aroused such universal hatred it is to be expected that there will be certain persons to whom he has given greater offence and that they will seek vengeance. This desire will be intensified by the universal ill will which they notice has been aroused against him. A prince, therefore, should avoid incurring these personal reproaches, and since what he has to do in order to avoid them has been discussed elsewhere I shall refrain from discussing it here: I mention it because, if he does guard against this, the mere giving of offence to individuals will evoke less hostility. The reason is, first, that one rarely comes across men so indignant at an unjust act as to endanger themselves to such an extent by seeking vengeance; and secondly, that, should they actually be inclined to do this and have the requisite power, they are restrained by the universal goodwill which they see that the prince enjoys.

Injuries may affect either a man's property, his life or his honour. The threat of bloodshed is more dangerous than is the shedding of blood. To threaten to shed blood is, in fact, extremely dangerous: whereas to shed it is attended with no danger at all，for a dead man cannot contemplate vengeance，and those that remain alive usually leave you to do the contemplating. But a man who has been threatened and sees that he must of necessity either do something or be for it，has been turned into a real menace for the prince，as we shall cite cases presently to show.

Prescinding from the case in which action is imposed by necessity，injuries affecting a man's property or honour are the two things which give men greater offence than anything else，and against them the prince should be on his guard，for he can never so despoil anyone but that there will remain to him a knife with which to wreak vengeance. Nor can he deprive a man of his honour to such an extent that his mind will cease to be set on vengeance. And of the honours of which men may be deprived，that which imports most is a woman's honour，and，after that，contempt for a man's person. It was this that caused Pausanias to take up arms against Philip of Macedon；and this that has caused many others to take up arms against many other princes. In our day Lucio Belanti would not have been moved to conspire against Pandolfo，the tyrant of Siena，if he had not given him his daughter to wife and then taken her away again，as we shall relate in due course. The chief cause which led the Pazzi to conspire against the Medici was the inheritance of Giovanni Bonromei of which they had been deprived by the Medici's orders.

Another cause，and this a very powerful one，that makes men conspire against a prince，is the desire to liberate their fatherland of which a prince has seized possession. It was this that caused Brutus and Cassius to turn against Caesar；this that led to many other conspiracies，against Phalaris，

Dionysius and against other usurpers of their country's rights. Nor can any tyrant prevail over this spirit，except by discarding his tyranny. And since one does not find tyrants doing this，one finds few who have not come to a miserable end. Hence the verse of Juvenal：

To Pluto's realm few kings unscathed descend,
Nor tyrants oft escape a sticky end.

Oneman conspiracies

The dangers involved in conspiracies，as I have said above，are considerable，and go on all the time，for in a conspiracy dangers crop up alike in forming the plot，in carrying it out，and as a result of its having been carried out. Plots may be formed by one conspirator，or by several. If by one person only，it cannot rightly be called a conspiracy. Rather it is a firm resolve on the part of some individual to kill the prince. Of the three dangers conspiracies entail，a oneman conspiracy lacks the first. For no danger can arise before the time for action comes，since no one else being privy to the secret，there is no danger of the plot being carried to the ears of the prince. To make a resolve of this kind lies within the competence of anybody whatsoever，be he great，small，noble or insignificant，intimate or not intimate with the prince. For anyone is allowed at some time or other to speak to the prince，and anyone who gets the chance of speaking to him，gets a chance to relieve his feelings. Pausanias，of whom we have already spoken several times，killed Philip of Macedon as he was on his way to the temple with a lot of armed men about him and his son on one side and his soninlaw on the other. The former，however，was a nobleman and an acquaintance of the prince. ［But there are others. ］A poor，miserable Spaniard stuck a dagger in the neck of Ferdinand，king of Spain，and，though the wound was not fatal，it shows us that a man of this type may have both the intention and the opportunity of doing such a thing. A dervish，or Turkish priest，struck at Bajazet，the father of the present Turk，with a scimitar. He did not kill him，but he certainly had the intention and the opportunity of so doing. One finds plenty of people，I think，who would like to do such things，for the intention is attended neither with penalty nor danger of any kind. Yet there are but few who actually do such things，and of those who do，there are very few，if any，who do not themselves get killed in the very act. Hence one does not find men keen on going to certain death. But let us leave these oneman plots and turn to conspiracies involving several people.

Conspiracies formed by the weak

I maintain that one finds in history that all conspiracies have been made by men of standing or else by men in immediate attendance on a prince，for other people，unless they be sheer lunatics，cannot form a conspiracy；since men without power and those who are not in touch with a prince are devoid alike of any hope and of any opportunity of carrying out a conspiracy successfully. For，first of all，men without power cannot get hold of anyone who will keep faith with them，since no one can consent to do what they want under any of those prospects which induce men to take great risks，so that，once the plot has been communicated to two or three people，an informer will turn up and they are ruined. Moreover，should they actually be lucky enough to avoid informers，the carrying out of the plot will involve them in such difficulties，owing to the lack of easy access to the prince，that it will be impossible for them to escape disaster in carrying out their scheme．For，if men of standing and those who have easy access succumb to these difficulties，which will be dealt with presently，it is to be expected that in the case of these others such difficulties will be magnified without end．Consequently，since when their lives and property are not at stake，men do not entirely lose their heads，they become cautious when they recognize their weakness，and when they get sick of a prince confine themselves to cursing him，and wait for those of higher standing than they have，to avenge them．So that，should one in fact come across somebody of this kind who has attempted such a thing，one should praise his intention but not his prudence．

Conspiracies formed by the strong

It would seem，then，that conspirators have all been men of standing or intimates of the prince，and，of these，those who have been moved to conspire by too many benefits are as numerous as those moved to conspire by too many injuries，as was the case with Perennis versus Commodus，Plautianus versus Severus，and Sejanus versus Tiberius．For to all these men their emperors had granted such wealth and so many honours and titles that there seemed to be nothing wanting to complete their power，save the imperial title；so，since with the lack of this they were unwilling to put up，they were moved to conspire against their prince，and their conspiracy in each case was attended with the results which their ingratitude merited．

Of similar conspiracies which have occurred in more recent times there is，however，one that met with success，that of Jacopo di Appiano against Messer Piero Gambacorti，prince of Pisa；for this Jacopo had been brought up by，reared by，and owed his reputation to，the very person whom later on he deprived of his power．There is also in our own times the conspiracy of Coppola against king Ferdinand of Aragon；the said Coppola having attained a greatness such that the only thing that seemed to him to be lacking was a kingdom，and since he made up his mind to acquire this，he lost his life．And yet，if any conspiracies against a prince，made by men of standing，ought to have succeeded it should surely have been this，since it was made by another king，so to speak，who had every convenience requisite to satisfying his desire．But that lust for domination，which blinds men，blinds them yet again in the way they set about the business：for，if they knew but how to do their evil deeds with prudence，it would be impossible for them not to succeed．

A warning to princes

A prince，therefore，who wants to guard against conspiracies，should fear those on whom he has conferred excessive favours more than those to whom he has done excessive injury．For the latter lack opportunity，whereas the former abound in it，and the desire is the same in both cases；for the desire to rule is as great as，or greater than，is the desire for vengeance．Consequently princes should confer on their friends an authority of such magnitude that between it and that of the prince there remains a certain interval，and between the two a something else to be desired．Otherwise it will be a strange thing if that does not happen to them which happened to the princes we have been talking about．But to return to the lines of our discourse．

The danger due to informers

Having said that conspirators must be men of standing and have easy access to the prince，I must now discuss the success of these，their undertaking，and inquire as to why some have succeeded and others have failed．As I have remarked above，in conspiracies there are three stages at which danger may be found to occur：at the start，while carrying them out，and afterwards．One finds that few conspiracies prove successful because it is impossible，or almost impossible，to pass through all three stages successfully．Let us begin by discussing the dangers incurred at the outset．These are the more important，I maintain，since there is need of great discretion and one must have considerable luck if，in making one's plans，the plot is not to be discovered．Plots are discovered either from information received or by conjecture．Leakage of information is due either to lack of loyalty or to lack of discretion among those to whom you communicate the plot．Lack of loyalty may easily occur，because you can only communicate your plan to those in whom you have such confidence that you think they will risk death for your sake，or else to men who are discontented with the prince．Now there may be one or two persons whom you can trust，but it is impossible to find such men if you reveal your plans to many people，for the goodwill they bear you must indeed be great if the danger and the fear of punishment is not to outweigh it in their estimation．

Men，too，quite frequently make mistakes about the affection another man has for them，nor can you be sure of it unless of it you have previously had experience，and to acquire experience in such a matter is a very risky business．Even should you have had experience of some other dangerous affair in which they have been loyal to you，you cannot infer from their loyalty in this case that they will be equally loyal in another which far exceeds it in dangers of all kinds．While if you judge of a person's loyalty by the degree of disaffection he has for the prince，here，too，you may easily be mistaken；for by the very fact of your having opened your mind to such a malcontent，you provide him with material with which to obtain contentment，so that，if he is to keep faith with you，either his hatred must be great or your influence over him must be very great indeed．

It thus comes about that conspiracies are frequently revealed and are crushed at the very start．Indeed，it is looked on as a marvel if a plot which has been communicated to many people，remains secret for any length of time，as was the case with that formed by Piso against Nero，and in our day with that formed by the Pazzi against Lorenzo and Juliano de’ Medici，to which there were privy more than fifty persons and yet it was not discovered till it came to the point of execution．

The danger due to indiscretion

As to discovery due to lack of discretion，this comes about when a conspiracy is spoken of without due caution and a servant or some third person gets to hear of it，as happened to the sons of Brutus who were overheard discussing their plans with Tarquin's messengers by a servant who informed against them．Or it may be due to your having lightly communicated it to a lady friend or to a boy friend or to some other frivolous person，as did Dymnus，who with Philotas and others conspired against Alexander the Great，and talked of the conspiracy to Nicomachus，a boy of whom he was fond，who at once told his brother，Cebalinus，about it，and Cebalinus told it to the king．

Discovery due to conjecture

As to discovery due to conjecture，we have an example of this in the Pisonian conspiracy formed against Nero，in which Scaevinus，one of the conspirators，made his will on the day before he had to kill Nero，ordered Milichus，his freedman，to have his old and rusty dagger sharpened up，freed all his slaves and gave them money，and had bandages got ready for binding up the wounded；from which facts Milichus conjectured that there was a plot and told Nero．Scaevinus was arrested，together with Natales，another conspirator，who had been seen talking together for a long time and in secret the day before；and，as their explanations did not agree，they were forced to tell the truth；so that the conspiracy was discovered，with disastrous results for all concerned in it．

The difficulty or preventing discovery

Against discovery due to such causes it is impossible so to guard as to prevent the plot being revealed，whether owing to malice，to indiscretion or to frivolous conversation，in all cases in which the number of those who are cognizant of it exceeds three or four．For，should more than one of the conspirators be arrested，it is impossible to prevent its coming out，because two cannot possibly agree as to every detail in the explanations they give．If only one man is arrested and he be a man of resolution，he may have sufficient strength of mind to be silent about his fellow conspirators．It is essential，however，that the other conspirators have no less courage than he has in standing their ground and not running away，for the conspiracy will be revealed by either party in which courage is lacking，whether by the man who has been arrested or those who are still at large．

There is，indeed，a rare case given by Titus Livy，namely，the conspiracy formed against Hieronymus，king of Syracuse，in which，when Theodotus，one of the conspirators，was arrested，he showed great virtue in concealing all the other conspirators，and accused the king's own friends；and the other conspirators，on their part，had such confidence in Theodotus's virtue，that not one of them left Syracuse or showed any other sign of fear．

Precautions against discovery

These，then，are the dangers to which a conspiracy is exposed in the course of its formation before the time comes for it to be carried out；and，if they are to be avoided，these are the remedies．The first，the safest and，to tell the truth，the only one，is not to allow the conspirators time to give information against you，and to tell them of your plan only when you are ready to act，and not before．Those who have so acted，at any rate escape the dangers involved in contriving the plot，and more often than not，the others also．All of them，in fact，have been successful，and any prudent man should find it possible to conduct things in this fashion．I shall cite two cases，and leave it at that．

Nelematus，being unable to stand the tyranny of Aristotimus，tyrant of Epirus，collected in his house many of his relations and friends，and exhorted them to set their country free．Some of them asked for time to consider the matter and to put their affairs in order．Whereupon Nelematus told his servants to lock the doors of the house，and to those whom he had called together said：‘Either you swear to go and do the deed now，or I shall hand you all over as prisoners to Aristotimus．’ These words got them going；they took the oath，and，having set out without delay，they successfully carried out Nelematus's instructions. When one of the Magi by subterfuge got possession of the Persian throne, and Otanes, one of the leading men in the kingdom, heard of it and discovered the fraud, he conferred with six other leading men in the state, and told them that it was for them to rid the kingdom of the tyranny of this Magus. When one of them asked for time, Darius, one of the six who had been called together by Otanes, got up and said: 'Either we go at once and put this business through, or I shall go and lay information against the lot of you.' So with one accord they got up, and succeeded in carrying out their plan before anyone had time to repent. Similar to these two cases also was the method the Aetolians adopted in order to kill Nabis, the Spartan tyrant; for they commissioned their fellowcitizen, Alexamenes, to go with thirty horse and two hundred foot ostensibly to the assistance of Nabis, communicated the secret only to Alexamenes, and told the rest to obey him on each and every point under pain of banishment. So Alexamenes went to Sparta and never mentioned the commission entrusted to him till he was ready to carry it out; with the result that he succeeded in killing Nabis. These folk, then, by adopting these methods, have avoided the dangers which attend the planning of a conspiracy; and those who follow their example will always avoid them.

Their practicability

That anyone can do as they did, I propose now to prove by citing the case of Piso, of whom mention has already been made. Piso was a man of very high standing and great repute, and was intimate with Nero, who had considerable confidence in him. Nero used frequently to dine with him in his gardens. Piso, therefore, could have made friends with men who in mentality, courage and inclination were of the right kind to carry out such a scheme, for to a man of standing this is quite an easy matter; and while Nero was in his gardens, he could have told them of the business and with suitable words got them to do what there would have been no time for them to refuse and what could not but have succeeded. Hence if we inquire into conspiracies in general, but few will be found that could not have been carried out in the same way. Ordinarily, however, men pay but little attention to the affairs of the world and so make frequently the gravest blunders, especially in matters which lie outside the ordinary run of things, as this does.

Further precautions

A plot, then, should never be divulged unless one is driven to it and it is ripe for execution, and if you, perforce, have to divulge it, it should be told to but one other person, and this a man of whom you have had very considerable experience, or else one who is actuated by the same motives as you are. To find such a man is far easier than to find several, and for this very reason is less dangerous. Moreover, should you, in fact, make a mistake, you have here a chance of protecting yourself, which is not the case where many conspirators are involved. For I have heard a wise man say that you can talk about anything to one person alone, since, unless you allow yourself to be persuaded to commit yourself in writing, one man's 'yes' will be worth just as much as the other man's 'no'. And against writing anything down everybody should be on his guard as against a rock, for nothing is more likely to convict you than is your own handwriting.

Plautianus，having made up his mind to kill the emperor，Severus，and his son，Antoninus，entrusted the secret to Saturninus，the tribune，who wanted to inform against him instead of doing what he wished，but was afraid that，when he brought the charge，more credence might be given to Plautianus than to himself. So he asked for something in writing that might serve as evidence of the commission entrusted to him. Blinded by ambition，Plautianus gave it him，with the result that the tribune brought the accusation and he was convicted. Yet without this commitment in writing and certain other evidence against him，Plautianus would have got the better of him，so brazen was he in denying the charge. There is then some chance of getting off when a charge is brought by but one person provided you cannot be convicted by a written document or other evidence telling against you，which one should take care not to provide.

In the Pisonian conspiracy there was a woman called Epicharis，who had formerly been Nero's mistress. Since she thought it would help to get a captain of some triremes which served as Nero's guard to join the conspirators，she told him of the plot，but not who the conspirators were. Subsequently，when the captain broke his word and charged her with it to Nero，Epicharis denied the charge with such vehemence that Nero could not make up his mind and let her off. There are，then，in communicating a plot to a single other person two dangers：the first is that he may accuse you of his own accord；and the second is that he may get arrested on suspicion or because there is some evidence against him，and accuse you when convicted and constrained by torture to do so. In both these cases the danger is not irremediable；for in the first case you can deny the charge and allege that he made it because he hated you；and in the second you can deny it，alleging that under force he has been compelled to tell a lie．

Unpremeditated assassination

The wisest thing，therefore，is not to tell anybody what you are about，but to act in accordance with the examples given above；or，if you have to tell somebody，not to tell more than one，in which case，though the danger will be somewhat greater，it will not be so great as if you had told it to many．The case is somewhat the same when necessity constrains you to do that to a prince which you see that the prince is about to do to you，for your need is then so great that it does not give you time to think of precautions．A necessity of this kind almost always leads to the end desired；and，to prove it，I propose to give just two examples．

Among the chief friends and intimates which the em peror，Commodus，had，were Laetus and Eclectus，who were in charge of his praetorian troops，and for one of his principal concubines or lady friends he had Marcia；and because they sometimes reproached him for sullying alike his person and his imperial position by his behaviour，he decided to put them to death，and made out a list on which he wrote the names of Marcia，Laetus and Eclectus，and several others whom he proposed on the following night to put to death．This list he put under the pillow of his bed．Having gone to wash himself，a favourite little boy of his was romping about the room and on the bed when he came across the list，and，having gone outside with it in his hand，met Marcia，who took it from him，and，having read it and noted its contents，sent at once for Laetus and Eclectus．All three of them，realizing the danger in which they stood，decided to forestall it；so，without wasting any unnecessary time，they killed

Commodus the following night.

Again, the emperor Antoninus Caracalla, when with his army in Mesopotamia, had as his prefect Macrinus, who was more of a civilian than a soldier; and, as is usually the case with princes who are not good, he was for ever afraid that others should not act towards him as he thought he deserved. So Antoninus wrote to Maternianus, a friend of his in Rome, to request him to inquire of the astrologers whether anybody was aspiring to become emperor, and to advise him accordingly. Maternianus, therefore, wrote him that Macrinus was the man who had this idea in mind, but the letter fell into the hands of Macrinus before it got to the emperor, and, in consequence, Macrinus saw that it was necessary either to kill him before a further letter came from Rome, or to be killed; so he instructed Martialis, a centurion who was devoted to him and whose brother Antoninus had killed a few days before, to assassinate the emperor, a commission which he carried out successfully.

Hence we see that when necessity becomes so urgent that it leaves no time for delay, it produces much the same effect as does the method adopted by Nelematus of Epirus, which I have described above. We see, too, that what I have said almost at the beginning of this discourse also holds good, namely, that threats do more harm to princes and are more likely to result in conspiracies than the actual infliction of injuries. Against threats, therefore, a prince should be on his guard; for either he should make a fuss of men or should make sure they will do him no harm, but in no case should he put them in such a position that the only courses which appear open to them are either to get killed or to kill somebody else.

Dangers arising from a change of plan

As to the dangers which occur during the carrying out of a plot，these are due either to a change of plan，or to lack of courage on the part of the person who is to carry it out，or to the operative's making some mistake owing to carelessness，or to failure to complete the job in that there remain alive some of those who were to have been killed．I would here point out，therefore，that nothing so perturbs and interferes with anything undertaken by men as does their having suddenly and without due notice to change their plan and to give up that laid down at the start．And，if such a change of plan anywhere gives rise to disorder，it is in military operations and in affairs such as those of which we are speaking；because in a business of this kind what it is essential to do first and foremost is to get clearly into the heads of those concerned the part which each of them has to play，and，if men have for several days been picturing to themselves a certain course of action and a certain plan，and this is suddenly changed，it is impossible but that it should throw everything out of gear and spoil the whole scheme．So that it is much better to carry out the original plan，even if one sees in it certain inconveniences，than it is to cancel it and thereby to involve oneself in a host of inconveniences．This applies to cases in which there is no time to draw up a new plan，for，if there is time，a man can arrange matters as he pleases．

The conspiracy of the Pazzi against Lorenzo and Giuliano de’ Medici is familiar to all．According to the plan that had been given out，they were to be invited to dinner with the Cardinal of St George，and at the dinner were to be assassinated．Those who were to kill them，those who were to seize the palace and those who were to run about the city calling on the people to free themselves，had all been detailed．It happened that，when the Pazzi，the Medici and the Cardinal were attending a solemn function in the cathedral church of Florence，it became known that Giuliano was not going to dine with them that day；so the conspirators got together and decided that what they had been going to do in the house of the Medici should be done in the church．This upset the whole plan，for Giovambatista da Montesecco declined to take part in the murder，since he was not going to do it in church，he said．So they had to find new operatives and to redistribute the parts assigned，and，since there was no time for them to get clear as to their parts，they made such blunders in carrying it out that they were overcome．

Failure due to irresolution

Irresolution on the part of operatives in doing their job，is due either to human respect or to personal cowardice．Such is the majesty and the respect inspired by the presence of a prince that it may easily damp the resolution of an operative or terrify him．When Marius was taken prisoner by the Minturnians a slave was sent to kill him，but，so overawed was he by the presence of such a man and by the recollection of what his name stood for，that he lost courage and hadn't the strength to kill him．If，then，such power appertains to a man who is chained up in prison and overwhelmed with misfortune，how much greater must be that of a prince who is not thus encumbered，but is there in his majesty，wearing his robes and decorations，surrounded by pomp and by his courtiers．Such pomp as this may well affright you，or again the graciousness of his welcome may soften you．Certain persons were conspiring against Sitalces，king of Thrace，had settled the day on which the deed was to be done，and had got to the place assigned at which the prince then was；yet none of them ventured to attack him，so that at length they went away without trying to do anything and without quite knowing what had prevented them，each laying the blame on the other．They made the same mistake more than once，so that in the end the conspiracy was discovered and they were punished for a crime which they could have committed but were reluctant to commit．Two of his brothers conspired against Alfonso，Duke of Ferrara，and used as an intermediary Giannes，a priest and a cantor in the duke's employ．Several times at their request he got the duke to meet them，so that it lay in their power to kill him；in spite of which not one of them dared to do it，so that，the plot being discovered，they suffered the penalty of their wickedness and their want of prudence．Such negligence could not have been due to anything except their being frightened by the presence of the prince or humbled by some gracious act of his．

Failure due to perturbation of mind

Inconveniences in the carrying out of a conspiracy are due to mistakes caused either by lack of prudence or by lack of courage，for both these two things may befall you and cause you such confusion of mind that you say and do what you oughtn't to say or do．That men do get thus overwhelmed and confused cannot be better illustrated than by what Titus Livy tells us of Alexamenes，the Aetolian，who had made up his mind to kill Nabis the Spartan，of whom we have already spoken．When the time came to do it，he explained to his men what it was they had to do，and，says Livy，‘pulled himself together，for his mind had become confused by thinking of so great a matter’. It is, indeed, impossible, that any man, even though he be strongminded, familiar with death and accustomed to using the sword, should not become confused. Hence men should be chosen who have had experience in doing such deeds, and one should entrust them to no one else, brave as he may be thought to be. For when it comes to doing big things of which a man has had no previous experience, no one can say for certain what will happen. This confusion, for instance, might be such as to cause you to let the weapon fall from your hand, or to let slip some word which would have precisely the same effect. Lucilla, the sister of Commodus, arranged with Quintianus to kill him. Quintianus lay in wait for Commodus at the entrance to the amphitheatre, and, going up to him with a naked dagger, greeted him with the words: ‘The senate sends you this! ’, words which led to his being arrested before he had lowered his arm to strike. Messer Antonio de Volterra was deputed, as we have already said, to kill Lorenzo de’ Medici. On coming up to him he said: ‘Ah, traitor! ’, an exclamation which saved Lorenzo's life and ruined the conspiracy.

Conspiracies directed against more than one prince

It is not easy to do the thing perfectly when a conspiracy is directed against one ruler, for the reasons alleged, and still less is it easy to do it perfectly when a conspiracy is directed against two. On the contrary, it is so difficult that it is almost impossible for the conspiracy to succeed. For it is almost impossible to do similar actions in different places at one and the same time, and you cannot perform them at different times if you do not want one to spoil the other. Hence, if to conspire against one prince is a doubtful，dangerous and imprudent undertaking，to conspire against two is altogether foolish and frivolous. Were it not for my respect for the historian I should never have thought that what Herodian says of Plautianus were possible，namely，that he should have commissioned the same person，Saturninus the centurion，to kill both Severus and Antoninus who dwelt in different places，for the thing is so utterly unreasonable that nothing short of his authority would make me believe it.

Certain Athenian youths conspired against Diocles and Hippias，tyrants ruling in Athens. They killed Diocles，but Hippias escaped and avenged him. Chion and Leonides of Heraclea，disciples of Plato，conspired against the tyrants，Clearchus and Satyrus. They killed Clearchus，but Satyrus remained alive to avenge him. The Pazzi，whom we have mentioned more than once，only succeeded in killing Giuliano. Hence no one should engage in conspiracies against more than one ruler since he will do not good either to himself or to his country or to anybody at all. On the contrary，those who survive，will become more insupportable and more bitter，as Florence，Athens and Heraclea，to which I have already alluded，found out. True，the conspiracy which Pelopidas formed for the liberation of Thebes，his fatherland，involved all these difficulties，and yet was successful；for Pelopidas conspired not only against two tyrants，but against ten，and not only was he an outsider to whom access to the tyrants presented a difficulty，but he was a rebel. None the less，he was able to get into Thebes，to kill the tyrants and to liberate his country. Actually，however，it was with the assistance of Charon，counsellor to the tyrants，that he did all this，for it was through him that he gained easy access to do the deed. Nor should anyone nevertheless emulate his example；for it was an impossible undertaking and a marvellous thing that it succeeded. It was also, as all writers are agreed who have mentioned it, a rare and almost unparalleled thing.

Failure due to false impressions

The carrying out of a plot may be ruined by a false impression or by an unforeseen accident which occurs in the course of it. On the very morning on which Brutus and the other conspirators had decided to kill Caesar, it happened that he held a long conversation with Gaius Pompilius Lenas, who was one of the conspirators, and when the others saw him talking for so long, they wondered whether the said Pompilius was not telling Caesar of the conspiracy, and were on the point of killing him there and then, without waiting for him to come into the senate. They would, indeed, have done this, had the argument not come to an end and had they not then been reassured when they saw Caesar gave no sign of unusual emotion. False impressions of this kind should be taken into account and due attention be paid to them, if one would be prudent; the more so in that it is easy to get such false impressions. For, when a man has a bad conscience, he readily believes that people are talking about him, and a remark which is irrelevant may disturb your equanimity and make you think that it has bearing on your business, and this causes you either to give the conspiracy away by running off, or to muddle it by acting before the proper time. And the more there are who are in the know, the more likely is this to happen.

Failure due to unforeseen accidents

As to accidents, since they cannot be foreseen, the only thing one can do is to give examples showing how cautious men ought to be in regard to them. Lucio Belanti of Siena, of whom mention has already been made, was so indignant with Pandolfo, who had taken away the daughter he had previously given him in marriage, that he decided to kill him, and chose the occasion as follows. Pandolfo used to go daily to visit a sick relative, and, in doing so, passed by Lucio's house. Lucio, having noticed this, arranged for his conspirators to be ready in his house to kill Pandolfo as he was going by. He placed them inside the doorway with their arms, and stationed one of them at the window ready to give the signal when Pandolfo was to pass by the doorway, whereupon they were at once to issue forth. It so happened that, when Pandolfo came along and the signal had been given, Pandolfo met a friend who stopped him, and some of those who were with him went on ahead, saw what was happening, heard the clatter of arms and so discovered the trap; with the result that Pandolfo escaped and Lucio and his accomplices had to fly from Siena. Thus this accidental meeting interfered with the business in hand and caused Lucio's scheme to end in disaster. Since accidents, such as these, are of rare occurrence, it is impossible to prescribe any remedy. What one must do is to consider everything that is likely to happen, and to provide accordingly.

Dangers subsequent to a conspiracy

It remains now for us to discuss the dangers that may occur after a conspiracy has been successfully carried out. There is but one. It is that someone may be left alive who will avenge the death of the prince. There may, for instance, remain brothers or sons or other supporters to whom the principality was expected to come. Survival of those who may wreak vengeance may be due either to your negligence or to the causes mentioned above. Thus, when Giovanni Andrea da Lampognano and his accomplices had killed the Duke of Milan, there remained one of his sons and two of his brothers, who in due course came to avenge his death. In cases such as these the conspirators have an excuse, for there is nothing they can do about it; but when it is owing to lack of prudence or to their negligence that someone is left alive, they have in that case no excuse. Some conspirators who were citizens of Forli, killed Count Girolamo, their Lord, and took prisoner his wife and his children, who were little ones. It seemed to them, however, that their lives would scarce be safe unless they could get hold of the citadel, which its governor declined to hand over. So Mistress Catherine, as the countess was called, promised the conspirators that, if they would let her go to the citadel, she would arrange for it to be handed over to them. Meanwhile they were to keep her children as hostages. On this understanding the conspirators let her go to the citadel, from the walls of which, when she got inside, she reproached them with killing her husband and threatened them with vengeance in every shape and form. And to convince them that she did not mind about her children she exposed her sexual parts to them and said she was still capable of bearing more. The conspirators, dumbfounded, realized their mistake too late, and paid the penalty for their lack of prudence by suffering perpetual banishment.

But of all the dangers that may ensue after a successful conspiracy there is none more inevitable or more to be dreaded than when the people are well disposed to the prince you have killed; for in such a case, since there is no remedy to which the conspirators can have recourse, there is no chance of their ever obtaining security. Caesar is a case in point, for he was avenged by the people of Rome who were friendlily disposed towards him；and of the conspirators，after they had been driven out of Rome，one and all were killed at various times and in various places．

Conspiracies against one's country

Conspiracies against one's country are less dangerous to those who take part in them than are conspiracies against princes，since fewer dangers occur in the planning of them than in the latter case；in carrying them out they are the same；and afterwards there are none．There are not many dangers in planning the conspiracy because a citizen can scheme to obtain power without revealing his mind or his plan to anybody else，and，if his schemes are not interfered with，success will attend his undertaking；while if they should be interfered with by some law or other，he must bide his time and look for some other opening．This applies to a republic which is to some extent corrupt，for，since in one that is not corrupt no starting on evil courses there finds a place，no citizen is likely to harbour such thoughts．There are，then，all manner of ways and means of which citizens who aspire to a principality can avail themselves without running any risk of getting into trouble，alike because a republic is slower to take action than is a prince，is less suspicious，and for this reason less cautious，and because it has more respect for citizens of standing，and，in consequence，the latter are more daring and more inclined to act contrary to its interests．Everybody has read Sallust's account of the conspiracy of Catiline，and is aware that Catiline not only remained in Rome after the conspiracy was discovered，but attended the senate，where he made opprobrious remarks about the senate and about the consuls，so great was the respect which this city had for its citizens. Nor, when he had left Rome and was already in touch with the armies, would Lentulus and others have been arrested if they had not had in their possession letters in their own hand which plainly showed their complicity.

Again, when Hanno, one of the leading citizens in Carthage, who hoped to set up a tyranny, had arranged to poison the whole senate at the marriagefeast of one of his daughters, and afterwards to make himself prince, all the senate did, when it got to hear of the business, was to pass a law restricting the amount to be spent on banquets and marriages, so great was the respect they had for a man in his position.

On the other hand, it may well be that in carrying out a conspiracy against one's country there is more difficulty and the dangers are greater, for in a conspiracy aimed at so many people your own forces will scarce suffice; and not everybody has an army at his disposal, as had Caesar, Agathocles, Cleomenes and suchlike, who have at one stroke subjugated their country by means of the forces they commanded. For to such folk the way is easy enough and safe enough; but others who have not such forces at their disposal, must give effect to their designs either by means of deceit and artifice or with the help of foreign troops. The use of deceit and artifice is illustrated in the case of Pisistratus, the Athenian, who by his victory over the Megarians gained favour with the people. One morning he appeared in public, wounded, said that the nobility out of envy had attacked him, and asked that he might go about with an armed force for the protection of his person. This being authorized, he had no difficulty in arrogating to himself such great power that he became tyrant of Athens. Pandolfo Petrucci, on his return to Siena with other exiles，was given command of the guard in the Piazza，a routine business which others had refused；yet this armed force in course of time acquired for him such repute that he became before long a prince. Many others have adopted other devices and other methods and in course of time and without danger have achieved their aim.

Those who have conspired to get control of their country by means of their own forces or with foreign armies have met with varied success according as fortune has favoured them or not. Catiline，whom we mentioned above，perished in the attempt. Hanno，of whom also we made mention，having failed to succeed by using poison，armed several thousands of his partisans，and both he and they were slain. Some of the principal citizens of Thebes called in a Spartan army to help them，and set up a tyranny in that city. If，then，we inquire into all the conspiracies men have made against their country，it will be found that none of them，or but few，have been suppressed while the plot was being contrived，but that all of them have either succeeded or been ruined when it came to carrying them out. Nor，when successful，do they entail any subsequent dangers other than those which pertain to a principality by its very nature. For，given that a man has become a tyrant，he is faced with the dangers which tyranny naturally and normally involves，and to avert them has no remedies other than those that we have already discussed.

The use of poison

This is all that needs to be said about conspiracies，and if I have taken account of those in which the sword and not poison has been used，it is because they are all of one and the same pattern. It is true that the use of poison is more dangerous owing to its being more uncertain，for not everybody has the commodity，so that those who have it must needs be consulted and the necessity of consulting others means danger to yourself. Again，for a variety of reasons，a poisoned drink may not prove fatal，as those discovered who were to kill Commodus，for，on his throwing up the poison they had given him，they were forced to strangle him if they wanted him to die.

Tactics to be used in suppressing a conspiracy

There is nothing，then，more inimical to princes than a conspiracy. For，when a conspiracy is formed against them，either they get killed or they incur infamy；since，if it succeeds，they die，and if it is discovered and they kill the conspirators，the conspiracy is apt to be regarded as a device on the part of the prince whereby to cloak his avarice and his cruelty visàvis the lives and property of those he has put to death. I must not， therefore，neglect to warn that prince or that republic who knows that a conspiracy has been planned，to endeavour to discover its precise character before they take punitive action，and to compare carefully the strength and standing of the conspirators with their own；and，should they find it large and powerful，to take no notice of it until they have at their disposal enough forces to crush it. To act otherwise is but to court disaster. Hence they should practise dissimulation as best they can，lest the conspirators，finding themselves discovered，be driven of necessity to take immediate action regardless of the result.

The Romans afford us an example of this. Two legions of soldiers were left to guard Capua against the Samnites，as we have pointed out elsewhere. Those who were in command of these legions conspired together to reduce the Capuans to subjection. When this came to be known in Rome, Rutilus, a new consul, was commissioned to look into the matter. To keep the conspirators quiet, he made public the senate confirmation of the Capuan legions' lodging quarters. The troops believed this, and, since there seemed to them to be plenty of time to carry out their plan, they made no attempt to hurry things. So matters stood until they came to realize that the consul had separated one legion from the other, which caused them to grow suspicious, to come out into the open and to give orders for their scheme to be put into execution. Nor can there be a better example than this from whichever point of view we look at it, for we see how slow men are to act when they think they have time, and how quick to act when the need becomes urgent. Nor yet can a prince or a republic that wants to postpone the discovery of a conspiracy in its own interests do better than artfully to provide the conspirators with an opportunity at some future date, so that, while they await it in the belief that there is no hurry, that prince or that republic may have time to arrange for their punishment.

Those who have acted otherwise have but hastened their own downfall, as the Duke of Athens did, and Guglielmo de' Pazzi. When the duke became tyrant of Florence and heard that a conspiracy had been formed against him, he had one of the conspirators arrested but did not inquire further into the matter, with the result that the rest at once flew to arms and deprived him of the government. When Guglielmo was commissioner in the Val di Chiana in 1501 and learned that a conspiracy in favour of the Virelli had been formed in Arezzo whereby the Florentines were to be deprived of that town, he went at once to that city, and without considering either the strength of the conspirators or his own and without having any forces in readiness，on the advice of the bishop，his son，he had one of the conspirators arrested．After the arrest，the remaining conspirators at once took up arms，took the town from the Florentines and Guglielmo became a prisoner instead of a commissioner．

But when conspiracies are weak they both can，and ought，to be suppressed without further ado．Nor should either of the two following expedients be adopted，though one is almost the exact opposite of the other．One was used by the aforesaid Duke of Athens，who to show that he believed the Florentines to be well disposed towards him，put to death a man who had told him of a conspiracy．The other was adopted by Dion，the Syracusan，who，to discover the intentions of someone of whom he was suspicious，allowed Callippus，whom he trusted，to pretend to be forming a conspiracy．Both these expedients led to disaster，for the first discouraged informers and encouraged wouldbe conspirators，and the second made it an easy matter to compass Dion's death by means of the very conspiracy of which he was the real head，as he learned by experience，for Callippus was now able without further ado to plot against Dion，and he plotted so well that he deprived him both of his state and of his life．

The army, its discipline and component parts

How far the Discipline of Troops in our Day falls short of that maintained in Days gone by

The most important battle ever fought by the Romans in any war with another nation was the battle they fought with the Latin peoples in the consulate of Torquatus and Decius. For everything shows that，just as the Latins by losing became a subject people，so the Romans would have become a subject people，had they not won. This is the view held by Titus Livy，for in all respects the two armies were alike in discipline，virtue，truculence and in numbers；the only difference was that the commanders of the Roman army had more virtuosity than those of the Latin army.

One notes，too，how in the conduct of this battle there occurred two unprecedented incidents of which there have been but few examples since；namely，to strengthen the resolution of the soldiers and to make them obey orders，of the two consuls one killed himself and the other killed his son. The parity which Titus Livy says held between the two armies was due to their having for a long time waged war together，and consisted in their having the same language，the same discipline，and the same kind of arms，for in drawing up troops for battle they used the same formation，and both units and officers bore the same names. It was essential，therefore，since both in strength and in virtù they were equal，that something extraordinary should take place whereby to strengthen the ardour and truculence of the one rather than the other，for，as we have remarked on other occasions，it is on determination that victory depends，since，so long as it lasts in the breasts of those who are fighting，an army will never turn tail．And in order that it might last longer in the breasts of the Romans than with the Latins it came about，owing partly to chance and partly to the virtue of the consuls，that Torquatus had to kill his son and Decius to kill himself．

When pointing out this parity in strength Titus Livy describes in detail how the Romans drew up their armies and how they disposed them for battle．He has done this at considerable length，so I shall not repeat it all，but shall discuss the points which I deem worthy of note，points which are ignored by all presentday commanders，with the result that there is a grave lack of proper order alike in drawing up armies and in battle．From Livy we gather that in the Roman army there were three main divisions for which the Tuscan term three ‘ranks’ may be used．They called the first Hastati，the second Principes，the third Triarii．Each had its own cavalry attached．In drawing them up for battle，they put the Hastati in front；in the second place，immediately behind the Hastati，they put the Principes；in the third，all covering precisely the same space，they placed the Triarii．The cavalry pertaining to each of these divisions they put on the right and on the left of the three formations．These mounted troops，on account of their formation and their position，were called alae，because they looked like two wings attached to the body．They drew up the first rank，consisting of the Hastati who were in front，in close formation，so that they might thrust forward and hold up the enemy. The second rank，consisting of Principes，since they were not to be engaged at the outset，but were to come to the aid of the first should they be beaten or hard pressed，they did not draw up in such close formation，but kept their lines thinner so that this rank could receive the first rank，without disturbing its formation，should the latter be overcome by the enemy and have to fall back．The third rank consisting of Triarii，were drawn up in yet thinner lines than the second，so as to receive the two first ranks，comprising Principes and Hastati，should need arise．When their ranks had thus been drawn up in this formation，they went into battle；and，should the Hastati be forced back or defeated，they fell straight back upon the thinner ranks of the Principes，and the two ranks，thus united to form one compact body，resumed the fight．Should these ranks be beaten and forced to retreat，they retired upon the thinner ranks of the Triarii，and all three ranks，together forming one body，renewed the fight．But should they be overcome，the day was lost，since they had no further chance to reform．Wherefore，since every time this last rank of Triarii became engaged，it meant danger to the army，there arose the proverb：'It all depends on the Triarii'，or，as we say in the Tuscan idiom：'We have played the last stake'．

As generals in our days have abandoned all other traditions and pay no attention to any point in ancient military discipline，so they have abandoned it in regard to this point，which is of no small importance．For where an army is so drawn up as to be able to reform three times during a battle，to lose the day luck must go against it three times and the valour of those attacking it must be sufficient to beat it three times over．But an army that can withstand but one attack，as is the case with all Christian armies，may easily lose，for，if it become in any way disorganized or its valour be but indifferent，its chance of victory goes．The inability of our armies thrice to reform is due to their having dropped the custom of receiving one rank into the other. This in turn is due to there being in presentday battleformations one of two defects: either they station their ranks one alongside the other, and make their formations broad in extent but thin in the line of attack, which makes them weaker owing to their lack of depth; or when, to make them stronger, they actually draw up the ranks in Roman fashion, then, since no arrangement is made for the first to be received by the second, when the first is routed, all get mixed up together and defeat themselves. For if the rank in front gets the worst of it, it collides with the second; and, if the second wants to advance, it is impeded by the first. Hence when the first falls back on the second, and the second on the third, so much confusion arises that the whole army is frequently ruined should the least misadventure befall.

At the battle of Ravenna, in which Monsieur de Foix who commanded the armies of France was killed – a wellfought battle as things go today – both the Spanish and the French armies were drawn up in one of the ways just described, i. e. each of the two armies advanced with all its troops drawn up shoulder to shoulder so that both presented but a single front which was much greater in extent than it was in depth. This is always their procedure when they are operating on a large plain such as they had at Ravenna; for, realizing the disorder a retreat causes when troops are arranged in files, they avoid this, when they can, by making their front broad, as has been said. But should the available space be narrow they put up with the aforesaid bad arrangement without providing any remedy. And in the same bad formation they ride through the enemy's country, whether to loot it or to perform any other military manoeuvre.

Again，at San. Regolo in the territory of Pisa，as also at other places in which the Florentines were routed by the Pisans during the war which took place between the Florentines and that city owing to its having rebelled after Charles，king of France，passed through Italy，the disaster was entirely due to the allied cavalry which，being in front and having been repulsed by the enemy，fell back on the Florentine infantry and broke it up，so that the rest of the troops all turned tail. Messer Ciriaco dal Borgo，once a captain of Florentine infantry，has also often stated in my presence that he had never been routed except by the cavalry of his allies. The Swiss，who are masters of modern warfare，when fighting on the French side，make it their first care to station themselves on the flanks，so that，should the allied cavalry be driven back，it will not clash with them. Yet，though such things are both easy to understand and very easy to carry out，none the less there has not appeared as yet any of our contemporary generals who has adopted the ancient formations and emended the modern ones. And though they may again have the threefold army formation，called respectively the vanguard，the main body and the rearguard，it serves no purpose other than that of disposing men in billets. Moreover，when they make use of it，as was said above，it rarely happens that the selfsame fortune does not befall all these bodies.

Since many，to cover their ignorance，assert that the destructive power of artillery does not in these days permit the use of many ancient practices，I propose to discuss this question in the following chapter，and to inquire whether artillery renders it impossible to display the valour of days gone by.

In what Esteem Artillery should be held by Armies at the Present Time，and whether the Opinion universally held in its Regard is Sound

When in addition to what I have just written，I consider how many open battles which in our time the French call ‘days’ and the Italians call ‘feats of arms’，were fought by the Romans at different times，there comes to my mind the common opinion so many hold，an opinion which would have it that，had there been artillery in those days，it would not have been possible for the Romans to have conquered provinces and to have made peoples become their tributaries so easily as they did；nor would they have been able in any way to make such bold acquisitions．They allege，too，that the use of these destructive weapons prevents men from employing and displaying their virtue as they used to do of old．And as a third point they add that it is more difficult than it was then to come to an engagement，and that it is impossible to keep to the ancient usages．In fact，war before long will be reduced to the question of artillery．

I do not think it beside the point to discuss whether this view is sound，or to inquire whether artillery has increased or has lessened the strength of armies，and whether it has deprived good generals of，or has provided them with，an opportunity for acting ‘virtuously’．So let me begin by dealing with the first of these claims，namely，that Roman armies of old would not have made the acquisitions they did make，if in those days there had been artillery．

In reply to this I would point out that wars are either offensive or defensive．Hence we must first ask to which of these two kinds of warfare artillery is the more useful or the more dangerous．Though there is something to be said for either view，yet I am convinced that artillery is incomparably more harmful to defenders than to those who attack. The reason why I say this is that the defenders are either in a walled town or are encamped behind a stockade. If they are within a walled town，either it is small，as are most fortresses，or it is large. In the first case，it is all up with the defenders，for the force of artillery is such that no wall can stand it，not even the thickest，for more than a few days. Hence if those within have not a goodly space into which to retire and dig trenches and build ramparts they are doomed. Nor can they withstand the attack of an enemy determined to force his way through a gap in the walls，even if they have artillery to help them，for it is an accepted maxim that against a heavy massed attack artillery is powerless. For this reason the defending of towns against the fury of ultramontane attacks has not been successful but against the assaults of Italians they have been highly successful，for the latter do not attack en masse but in detachments，a form of attack for which much the best name is skirmishing. To advance thus coolly in such weak formation towards a breach in the walls where there is artillery，is to advance to certain death，and against such attacks artillery is of service. But when the attackers form a dense mass and come on one after the other to a breach in the walls，they get through anywhere unless held up by trenches and ramparts. Artillery will not hold them，for，though some get killed，there will not be so many killed as to prevent a victory.

That this is so is shown by the many towns stormed by the ultramontanes in Italy，and especially by that of Brescia. For when this town rebelled against the French who still held the citadel on behalf of the king of France，in order to prevent raids being made on the town from the citadel，the Venetians fortified the whole of the street leading down from the citadel to the city with artillery，placing it both in front and on the flanks and in any other convenient place. But of this Monsieur de Foix made no account. On the contrary，with a squadron of his cavalry，who dismounted，he got right through the artillery and took the city；nor do we hear that the artillery caused him any appreciable loss. So that the defenders of a small town，as we have said，when they find their walls laid low and have no space into which to retire behind ramparts and in trenches，but have to rely on their artillery，are speedily undone.

If you are defending a large town where you have all you need for a withdrawal，artillery is still of far greater use to those who are outside than to those who are within. First，because，if artillery is to do any damage to those who are outside，you must needs raise it above the level of the ground，for，if on the level，every little trench the enemy digs and every rampart he puts up will afford him security，and you can do him no harm. So much so that，having raised your artillery and dragged it into some recess in the walls or having in some other way elevated it above the ground，you will then meet with two difficulties. First，you cannot bring into action artillery of the same size and power as those outside can avail themselves of，since in a small space it is impossible to manipulate large pieces. Secondly，should you succeed in getting it there，you will not be able to construct reliable and safe ramparts whereby to protect the said artillery，which can be done quite easily outside，on terra firma，where there are all the conveniences and as much space as anyone can want. Hence it is impossible for the defenders of a town to have their artillery in high positions when those who are outside have enough artillery and that of a powerful kind；and if they are driven to place it in a low position，it is in large part useless，as has been said．Consequently，the defence of a city has to be carried on by handtohand fighting，as was done of old，supported by artillery of very light calibre．Wherefore，though some slight benefit may accrue from this light artillery，it brings with it a disadvantage which counterbalances the advantage due to artillery，because，owing to the heavy artillery，the walls of towns are demolished and lie flat，buried，as it were，in ditches，so that，when it comes to handtohand fighting，the defenders have a worse time of it than they had before，since their walls have been battered down or their trenches filled up．These engines of war，therefore，as was said above，are of more use to the besiegers of towns than they are to the besieged．

As to the third point，if your camp has been placed behind a stockade so as to avoid open battle unless it suit your convenience and is to your advantage，I claim that in this case you are ordinarily no better off in regard to preventing an engagement than was the case in the old days，and that there are times when，on account of artillery，you may be at a greater disadvantage．For，should the enemy come upon you and have a slight advantage in position，as may easily happen should he find himself on higher ground than yours；or should you on his arriving not yet have made your trenches and dug yourself well in；straightway，and without your being able to do anything about it，he will dislodge you and you will have to quit your fortified position and join battle．This happened to the Spaniards at the battle of Ravenna．They had fortified themselves on the banks of the Ronco，but the earthworks they had thrown up were not sufficiently high and the French had a slight advantage in position，so that they were compelled by artillery to quit their fortifications and join battle. But suppose，as should usually be the case，that the site you have chosen for the camp is above that occupied by the enemy and that its earthworks are good and strong，so that，owing to your position and the other preparations you have made，the enemy does not dare to attack，it will be found that in such a case recourse will be had to the methods that were used in ancient times when someone had his army in a position in which it could not be attacked，namely，to scouring the country，taking or laying siege to towns that are friendly to you，and cutting off your supplies，so that you will be forced under such conditions to leave your camp and come out into the open，where artillery，as I shall presently point out，cannot do much. In view，therefore，of the reasons for which the Romans made war，and seeing that almost all their wars were of the offensive and not of the defensive type，it would seem that what we have said above holds good，namely，that it would have been to their advantage and would have speeded up their conquests，had there been artillery in those days.

As to the second charge，which alleges that men cannot display their valour as they used to do of old，on account of artillery，I admit it is true that，where men in small detachments have to expose themselves，there is greater danger now than then，should they have to scale the walls of a town or to make an assault of this kind not with a compact body of troops but individually，first one appearing and then another. It is also true that the officers and generals of an army are more exposed to the danger of death now than then，since anywhere they may come under artillery fire. Nor does it help them to be in the last squadron or to be supported by very brave men. One finds，none the less，that rarely does either of these two dangers occasion any outoftheway loss．For the walls of wellfortified towns cannot be scaled，nor are attacks on them made with weak troops．If a town is to be taken，it has to be besieged，just as it was of old．Nor，even when it is taken by assault are the dangers much greater now than they were then，for the defenders of towns even in those days did not lack equipment for launching projectiles，which，if not so terrifying，were no less effective in the matter of killing men. As to the death of officers and army commanders，in the last twentyfour years during which there have been wars in Italy，there have been fewer cases than there were during ten years of war in olden times．For，except for Count Ludovico della Mirandola，who was killed at Ferrara when the Venetians attacked that state a few years ago，and for the Duke of Nemours，who was killed abroad at Cerignuola，artillery has not killed anybody；for Monsieur de Foix was killed with a sword，not by a cannonball．Hence if men do not，as individuals，display their valour，it is not due to artillery，but to bad methods and to the weakness of ［modern］ armies，for since they lack valour as a whole，they cannot display it in the part．

To their third allegation which is that it is impossible to bring about a handtohand fight and that war will eventually become a matter of artillery，I reply that this statement is altogether false，and will always be looked on as false by those who want their armies to display in their operations the virtue of ancient times．For it behoves him who wants to form a good army，to accustom his men by means of sham fights or real fights to engage the enemy at close quarters，sword in hand．Hence he should rely more on infantry than on cavalry，for reasons which will presently be given．And，if he does rely on infantry，trained as we have said，artillery becomes quite useless，since it is easier for infantry when engaging the enemy to avoid cannonballs than it was of old for them to avoid an attack by elephants or by chariots armed with scythes，or other unfamiliar weapons such as the Roman infantry had to encounter．Against such devices they always found a remedy；and against artillery would the more easily have found a remedy in that the time during which it may harm you is shorter than that during which elephants and scythed chariots could do you harm．For the latter throw you into disorder during a battle，whereas the former is a nuisance only before the fight begins；and this nuisance infantry easily avoid either by availing themselves of such cover as the site offers or by lying flat on the ground when a volley comes．Experience，however，has shown that this is unnecessary，especially as a defence against heavy artillery；for with heavy artillery the range cannot be so nicely adjusted．Hence either the fire is too high，and does not get you，or it is too low and falls short of you．

Again，when armies come to handtohand conflict，it is as clear as the day that neither heavy nor light artillery can hurt you．For if the enemy place it in front，you capture it；and，if he puts it behind，it hits his own folk before it hits you；while on the flanks it cannot do you so much damage but that you can go and get it，so that in the end it all comes to much the same thing．Nor is there much question about this．For it is clear from the case of the Swiss，who at Novara in 1513 were without either artillery or cavalry，yet went for the French army，which was supported by artillery in a fortified position，and found no difficulty on this account in breaking it up．

The reason for this，besides what I said above，is that，if artillery is to function，it must be protected either by walls or trenches or earthworks， and, if either form of protection is lacking, it either gets taken or becomes useless, just as happens when men have to defend it in pitched battles and open engagements. Nor can it be used on the flanks except in the way the ancients used projectile launching devices. Such instruments were then placed outside the main body, in order that they might function outside the ranks, and, should those who used them be overcome at any time by cavalry or other forces, they took refuge behind the regular troops. Those who expect anything more from artillery do not understand it properly and place their trust in what can easily let them down. And if by using artillery the Turk gained a victory over Sophy and the Sultan, it was solely in virtue of the panic caused among their cavalry by its unfamiliar noise.

On coming, then, to the end of this discourse, my conclusion is that artillery is useful to an army provided it be backed by valour such as was displayed of old; but, without this, it is of not the least use against a valorous army.

That Infantry should be more highly esteemed than Cavalry is shown by the Authority of the Romans and by the Example of Ancient Military Practice

It is possible to give many reasons and to cite many cases showing clearly how much greater esteem the Romans had for footsoldiers than for cavalry in all military operations, and how upon this basis they drew up all plans for their forces. Numerous instances illustrate this; among others the battle fought with the Latins near Lake Regillus, where, when the Roman army began to give way, to support them some troops on horseback were ordered to dismount and fight on foot, by which means the battle was renewed and a victory gained. From which it is obvious that the Romans had more confidence in their men when on foot than when mounted. They used this expedient in many other battles, and always found it the best remedy in dangerous situations.

Nor can this be countered by the opinion expressed by Hannibal when during the battle of Cannae he noticed that the consuls had made their cavalry dismount, and joked about it, saying: 'Quam mallem vinctos mihi traderent equites,' i. e. 'I should have liked it better had they handed the horsemen over to me bound.' Though this opinion is voiced by a firstclass man, yet, if it be a question of authority, one should put more credence in a Roman republic and in the many firstclass generals who were in it than in Hannibal alone. Furthermore, apart from an appeal to authority, sound reasons can be adduced; for a footsoldier can get to many places to which a mounted man cannot go; infantry can be taught to keep their ranks, and, when broken, know how to reform them, whereas it is difficult for cavalry to keep their ranks, and impossible for them to re-form when their ranks are disorganized. Besides which, one finds that horses, like men, sometimes have little spirit and sometimes a great deal, and quite often it happens that a spirited horse is ridden by a timid man and a timid horse by a man of spirit; and of whichever kind the disparity be, the result is subversive of utility and order.

Infantry, when well drawn up, can easily break cavalry, but with difficulty are routed by them. This view is corroborated not only by many instances, both ancient and modern, but also by authors who prescribe rules for the conduct of civic affairs and in them show that wars were first fought with cavalry，since there were then no rules for drawing up infantry；but when these were made，it was at once recognized that infantry are more useful than cavalry．But it does not follow from this that cavalry is not essential to an army alike for the purpose of scouting，of raiding and pillaging the country，of pursuing the enemy when in flight，and again as a partial counterpoise to the cavalry of the adversary：but it is infantry that should constitute the basis and sinews of an army and that should be held in the higher esteem．

Among the sins committed by Italian princes who have made Italy the slave of the foreigner，there is none more grave than that of having held this arm of small account and of having devoted all their attention to mounted troops．This mismanagement is due to the perversity of captains and to the ignorance of those who hold office．For the Italian militia having lost all official status during the last twentyfive years had become like soldiers of fortune．It occurred to the militia that their reputation would be made if they had the armed forces while the rulers had none．Since，then，they could not maintain a large number of infantry continually in their pay and they had no subjects of whom they could avail themselves，and since a small number would not make their reputation，they turned to cavalry；for with two or three hundred cavalry in his pay，the reputation of a condottiere was safe，and the pay was not such as to prevent him getting it from ministers of state．So the more easily to attain their end and to keep up their reputation they made light of all the esteem and repute in which infantry was held，and applied it instead to their own cavalry：an abuse which has grown to such an extent that even of the largest armies the infantry constitute but a fraction．It is this practice，conjoined with numerous other abuses associated with it， that has made the Italian militia so weak that Italy has become an easy prey，downtrodden by all the ultramontanes.

To show yet more clearly what a mistake it is to prefer cavalry to infantry，I shall take another example from Rome. The Romans were encamped before Sora. From the town there came forth a troop of cavalry to attack their camp. The Roman master of horse advanced to meet them with his cavalry. When they met，luck would have it that at their first encounter the officers commanding both bodies of troops were killed. Though without their leaders，the fight none the less went on，and that they might the more easily get the better of their foes，the Romans dismounted，and forced the enemy's cavalry in order to defend themselves，to do the same；by which means the Romans gained the victory. Than this example none shows better how much more virtue there is in infantry than in cavalry；for in other actions the consuls made the Roman cavalry dismount that they might help the infantry who were hard pressed and were in need of support；but in this case they dismounted，not to help the infantry，nor yet to engage the enemy's footsoldiers，but because，while fighting as cavalry against cavalry，it occurred to them that，since as cavalry they could not prevail，they might win more easily by dismounting. Whence I infer that it is only with the greatest difficulty that infantry when properly drawn up，can be overcome except by other infantry.

Crassus and Mark Antony，two Romans，overran the domains of the Parthians for many days with very few cavalry but plenty of infantry，though against them they had vast numbers of Parthian cavalry. Crassus with part of the army got killed，but Mark Antony fought valiantly and escaped. None the less, in the misfortunes the Romans suffered, we see how much more value infantry were than cavalry, for the country was vast, mountains scarce, streams very scarce, the sea far away, and no conveniences at hand; yet Mark Antony, as the Parthians themselves admitted, saved himself by his outstanding virtue; nor did the Parthian cavalry, numerous as it was, ever dare to try conclusions with his army. And, if Crassus was left behind, he who studies closely the record of his doings, will see that it was by deceit rather than by force that he was undone, for, in spite of all his troubles, the Parthians never ventured to attack him. On the contrary, they always went roaming about, intercepting his convoys, making promises which they did not keep, till they had reduced him to dire extremity.

I should have been at more pains, I think, to prove that the 'virtue' of infantry is more potent than that of cavalry if there had not been so many recent examples which provide abundant evidence of this. There were the nine thousand Swiss we have already mentioned, who at Novara proceeded to attack ten thousand cavalry and as many infantry, and beat them; for the cavalry could not get at them, and they thought little of the infantry, since it consisted for the most part of Gascons and was badly organized. Then there were the twentysix thousand Swiss who went as far as Milan to look for Francis, king of France, who had with him twenty thousand cavalry, forty thousand infantry, and a hundred pieces of artillery; and if they did not win the day as they had done at Novara, they fought valiantly for two days, and, though routed, got away with half their forces. Marcus Regulus Atilius had the courage to oppose not only cavalry, but elephants, with infantry; and, if his project did not succeed, it was not because his infantry were so lacking in virtue，that he had not sufficient confidence in them to believe that they would overcome the difficulty. I repeat，then，that to get the better of welldisciplined infantry it is necessary to bring against them better disciplined infantry；otherwise the case is plainly hopeless.

In the days of Philip Visconti，Duke of Milan，there descended on Lombardy about sixteen thousand Swiss. Whereupon the Duke，whose forces were then commanded by Carmignuola，sent him with about a thousand cavalry and a few infantry to meet them. Carmignuola，unacquainted with their way of fighting，attacked them with his cavalry，assuming that he would be able to break them at once. But they stood firm，and，having lost many of his men，he retired. Being，however，a very brave man，who knew how to take fresh chances when circumstances changed，as soon as reinforcements came along to make up his strength，he went to meet them，told all his menatarms to dismount，and，putting them at the head of his infantry，set out to attack the Swiss. For whom there was no escape，because Carmignuola's menatarms having dismounted and being well protected by armour，they could easily pierce the ranks of the Swiss without suffering any harm，and，having got through，could easily overcome them. The result was that of all the Swiss there remained alive only those whom the humanity of Carmignuola chose to spare.

I believe many are aware of the difference in virtue that exists between these two kinds of troops，but so unhappy are these our times that neither ancient nor modern examples nor its being admittedly a mistake is sufficient to make modern rulers revise their point of view and realize that，if a province or a state is to keep up its military reputation，it is essential to resuscitate these services，to have them at hand，to restore their credit，to put fresh life into them，so that they may bring to the ruler both life and reputation. But，as rulers have departed from these ways，so they have departed from others mentioned above，and in consequence acquisitions do harm to a state instead of contributing to its greatness，as will presently be pointed out.

Mistakes often made in connection with war

Fortresses in General are much more Harmful than Useful

To the wiseacres of our times it may perhaps seem a foolish thing that when the Romans wanted to ensure the loyalty of the people of Latium and the city of Privernum it did not occur to them to build any sort of fortress to curb them and keep them loyal，especially as in Florence it is an accepted principle，so our wiseacres say，that Pisa and other such cities should be held by means of fortresses．Had the Romans been of their calibre，it would undoubtedly have occurred to them to build fortresses，but since their virtue，judgement，and power was of different order they did not do so．So long as Rome enjoyed freedom and was loyal to her institutions and to her efficient constitution she never held either cities or provinces by means of fortresses save where they were already built．In view，then，of the way the Romans acted in this matter and of the way rulers act today，it seems to me worth while considering whether it is good to build fortresses and whether they are harmful or useful to those who build them．

It must be borne in mind，then，that fortresses are constructed as a defence either against enemies or against subjects．In the first case they are unnecessary，and in the second case harmful．Let us begin by explaining why in the second case they are harmful．I maintain that when a prince or a republic is afraid of its subjects and fears they may rebel，the root cause of this fear must lie in the hatred which such subjects have for their rulers：a hatred which is due to their misbehaviour; and a misbehaviour which is due to their fancying they can hold them by force, or to their foolish way of governing them. And one of the things that makes rulers believe in force is the fact that they have fortresses to fall back on. For when mismanagement gives rise to hatred it is mainly due to a prince or a republic having fortresses; and, when this is the case, fortresses are far more harmful than useful. For, in the first place, they make you more foolhardy and violent in dealing with your subjects, as has been said. Next, they do not afford you internally that security you fancy they do. For no force and no violence is of the least use in controlling your people except under one of two conditions: either you have a good army which you can put in the field, as the Romans had; or your people are so exhausted, spent, disorganized and divided, that they cannot unite to do you hurt. For if you reduce them to poverty, 'though despoiled, they still have arms', and, if you disarm them, 'their fury will provide them with arms'. If you kill their leaders and suppress all other signs of insurrection, like the heads of the Hydra other leaders will arise. If you erect fortresses, they are useful in time of peace because they give you more courage in illtreating your subjects, but in time of war they are quite useless, for they will be attacked both by your enemies and by your subjects, and against both it is impossible for them to stand. And if there ever was a time when they were useless, it is now on account of artillery, for against its fire it is impossible to defend such small places where there are no embankments behind which men can retire, as we have shown above.

In discussing this question I am going to particularize. Do you, my prince, with your fortresses want to keep a firm hand on the people in your city？ Do you，be you a prince or a republic，want to tighten your grip on a city you have taken during a war？ I tell you，if you be a prince，that as a means of controlling your citizens，nothing can be more futile than a fortress for the reasons I have given：it makes you quicker to use，and less careful in using，harsh measures，and by such measures you make them long for your downfall，and they become so furious that，for this very reason，your fortress will afford you no protection. So obvious is this，that a wise and good prince never constructs fortresses if he wants to remain good and to avoid providing his sons with a reason for wanting to become bad，for he would have them rely not on fortresses，but on their subjects' goodwill.

And if Count Francesco Sforza，having become Duke of Milan，was reputed a wise man，and yet built a fortress in Milan，I maintain that in this he was not wise，and the result has proved that this fortress did harm to his heirs instead of affording them security. For with a fortress they thought they were safe and could oppress their citizens and subjects，so lost no opportunity of doing them violence；with the result that they came to be detested beyond all measure，and lost their state to the first enemy who attacked them. Nor was this fortress any protection or of any service to them in time of war，while in time of peace it did them much harm，since，if they had not had it，yet had been so unwise as to treat their citizens harshly，they would have realized their danger sooner and would have withdrawn from it. In which case they would have been able to put up a more spirited resistance to the French attack with loyal subjects but without a fortress than with a fortress and disloyal subjects.

In no way，then，do fortresses help you，for you will lose them either through the treachery of their keepers，or by some violent attack，or，by their being starved out. While，if you do want them to help you，and to enable you to recover a state you have lost，in which there remains to you only a fortress，you must have an army with which to attack those who have driven you out，and when you have such an army，you will recover your state anyhow，even if there be no fortress there；and this the more easily when your men are friendly and have not been badly treated owing to the arrogance a fortress instils. Experience then shows that this Milanese fortress was not the least use either to the Sforzas or to the French when with either of them things went wrong. On the contrary，to both it brought disaster and ruin in that it prevented them from considering whether there might not be a more honest way of maintaining their position.

Guidobaldo，Duke of Urbino，the son of Frederick，who was highly esteemed in his day as an army commander，was expelled from his state by Caesar Borgia，the son of Pope Alexander VI. When later，owing to an accident，he got back，he had all the fortresses in that district razed to the ground since he thought them mischievous. For with respect to his people who were fond of him，he did not need fortresses and，so far as his enemies were concerned，he realized he could not protect the fortresses，since he would require to have an army in the field to defend them. So he resolved to get rid of them.

Pope Julius，when he had expelled the Bentivogli from Bologna，erected a fortress in that city，and afterwards caused its inhabitants to be cruelly oppressed by one of his governors so that they rebelled；and straightaway he lost the fortress，which thus did not help him，but harmed him in as much as，had he acted otherwise，it would have helped him.

Niccolò da Castello，father of the Vitelli，on returning to his country from which he had been exiled，at once pulled down two fortresses which had been built there by Pope Sixtus IV，for he held that it was not the fortress，but the affection of his people which would preserve his state for him.

But of all such cases the most recent and the most noteworthy in every way as illustrating the futility of building fortresses and the utility of demolishing them，is what happened at Genoa not long ago. Everybody knows that in 1507 Genoa rebelled against Louis XII，King of France，who came in person with all his forces to reconquer it，and that，on recovering it，he constructed a fortress stronger than any at present known，since，situated on the point of a hill which juts into the sea，called by the Genoese Codefà，it was，owing to its position and to a number of other circumstances，impregnable，and commanded the port and a large part of the city of Genoa. It none the less came about that in 1512，when the French were driven from Italy，Genoa rebelled，despite the fortress；Ottaviano Fregoso seized the government；and，after a siege of sixteen months in which he used all possible devices，he starved the fortress out. Everyone then expected，and many advised，that it should be kept as a refuge in case of emergency，but Fregoso，like a prudent man，destroyed it，for he recognized that it is not fortresses but the wills of men that keep rulers in power. Thus，instead of relying on a fortress，he relied on virtue and sound sense，and so held his position and holds it still. And，whereas to change the government of Genoa，a thousand infantry used to suffice，its adversaries have since attacked it with ten thousand and have done it no harm. Hence one sees that dismantling a fortress did not hurt Ottaviano, and erecting one did not help the king. For so long as he could come with an army into Italy, he could recover Genoa without having a fortress there; but, when he could not come into Italy with an army, he could not hold Genoa, though he had the fortress. Thus, constructing the fortress was expensive to the king, and losing it shameful; whereas to Ottaviano the reconquering of the fortress brought glory and the demolishing of it advantage.

We come now to republics which erect fortresses not in their native land but in towns which they have acquired. If the instances already given, of France and of Genoa, do not suffice to show the fallacy involved, it should be enough if I cite those of Florence and Pisa. The Florentines erected fortresses to hold the city of Pisa, not considering that, since the Pisans had always been hostile to Florentine power, had enjoyed freedom and regarded rebellion as a means to freedom, it was necessary, if they were to retain Pisa, to adopt the Roman method, i. e. either to make it an ally or to destroy it. For the virtue of the fortresses became evident on the arrival of King Charles, to whom they surrendered owing either to the bad faith of their custodians or for fear of worse to come. Whereas if there had been no fortresses, the Florentines would not have based on them their power to hold Pisa; nor would the king have been able by means of them to deprive the Florentines of that city; for the means they had taken thus far might perchance have enabled them to keep it, and unquestionably would not have proved more disastrous than the fortresses.

I conclude, therefore, that for the purpose of holding one's own country fortresses are hurtful, and that for the purpose of holding acquired towns they are futile. The authority of the Romans is enough for me here, for round the towns they wanted to hold by force they did not build walls but pulled them down. And, if against this my view anyone should cite in ancient times the case of Tarentum, and in modern times Brescia, both of which places were regained, thanks to fortresses, after their subjects had revolted, I answer thus. To recover Tarentum Fabius Maximus, at the beginning of his year of office, was sent with a whole army, which would have sufficed for its recovery even if there had been no fortress there; and though Fabius made use of it, if it had not been there he would have adopted other means which would have produced the same effect. What use there is in a fortress I do not know, if, to recover a town, one needs a consular army and a Fabius Maximus to command it. Moreover, that the Romans would have recovered it in any case, is seen from the example of Capua, where there was no fortress, but which the Romans retook by the valour of the army.

But let us turn to Brescia. I maintain that what happened in that rebellion is a rare occurrence. Rarely when a town rebels does it happen that the fortress remains in your hands and that you have a large army in the neighbourhood, as the French then had. For Monsieur de Foix, the king's commander, had an army at Bologna, and when he heard that Brescia was lost, he went without delay to deal with the revolt, in three days reached Brescia, and with assistance from the fortress recovered the town. Here again, then, for the fortress at Brescia to be of any use, it needed a Monsieur de Foix and a French army to relieve it after three days march.

The case of Brescia，therefore，is not enough to refute examples of the opposite kind；for in wars recently waged，numbers of fortresses have been taken and retaken with the same fortune that has attended the taking and retaking of open country，not only in Lombardy，but in the Romagna，in the kingdom of Naples，and in every part of Italy．

As to building fortresses for defence against external foes，I maintain that they are unnecessary where peoples or kingdoms have good armies and that to those who have no such armies they are useless；for good armies without fortresses suffice for defence，and fortresses without good armies are no defence．This is borne out by the experience of men of high repute as rulers and in other matters，for instance，the Romans and the Spartans；for if the Romans did not build fortresses，the Spartans not only abstained from doing this，but did not permit their cities to have walls，because they chose to rely for defence on the virtue of the individual，and wanted no other． Hence，when a Spartan was asked by an Athenian whether the walls of Athens did not look fine，he answered：‘Quite！ provided it be ladies who live there．’

The ruler，then，who has good armies，may sometimes find it useful，though not essential，to have fortresses on the coast and on the frontiers of his domains to hold off the attack of an enemy till he gets properly going．But，if he has not a good army，to have fortresses within his state or on its frontiers is either harmful or useless：harmful because he so easily loses them and，when lost，they make war on him；or，if they should chance to be so strong that the enemy cannot capture them，they get left behind by the hostile army and so come to be useless．For，when good armies do not meet with very strong opposition，on entering a country they pay no attention to cities and fortresses，which they may leave behind them. We see this in ancient history just as we have seen it done by Francesco Maria，who in quite recent times，when on his way to attack Urbino，left behind him ten of the enemy's cities，without bothering about them.

The ruler，then，who can muster a good army，can do without fortresses，and the ruler who has not a good army had better not build them. The best thing he can do is to fortify the city where he dwells，to keep it provisioned and its inhabitants well disposed，so as to hold off an enemy's attack till he can either come to terms or get outside help to relieve him. All other plans are expensive in time of peace and useless in time of war. In view，then，of all I have said，it will be seen that，as the Romans were wise in their other institutions，so，too，were they prudent when they decided in the case of the Latins and the Privernates to dispense with fortresses and took more virtuous and wiser means of securing their loyalty.

To attack a Divided City in the Hope that its Divisions will facilitate the Conquest of it is Bad Policy

There was so much discord between the plebs and the nobility in the Roman republic that the Veientes，in conjunction with the Etruscans，thought this disunion would enable them to destroy the power of Rome. Having，therefore，formed an army and invaded Roman territory，the senate sent Gaius Manlius and Marcus Fabius to engage them. When the army they were leading drew near to the army of the Veientes，the latter kept on attacking and vilifying the Roman name with insults and abuse. And so great was their rashness and insolence that the Romans became united instead of disunited, and, when it came to a fight, broke and defeated the enemy. Thus one sees, as we have said above, how mistaken men are when in coming to decisions they rely on discord, and how often, when they think they have a sure thing they lose. The Veientes thought that if they attacked the Romans, when disunited, they would overcome them; but their attack caused the Romans to unite and brought about their own ruin. For discord in a republic is usually due to idleness and peace, and unity to fear and to war. Had the Veientes been wise, then, the more disunited they found the Romans to be, the more studiously should they have refrained from going to war with them, and have striven to get the better of them by the artifices men use in time of peace.

The way to set about this is to win the confidence of the city which is disunited; and, so long as they do not come to blows, to act as arbitrator between the parties, and, when they do come to blows, to give tardy support to the weaker party, both with a view to keeping them at it and wearing them out; and, again, because stronger measures would leave no room for any to doubt that you were out to subjugate them and make yourself their ruler. When this scheme is well carried out, it will happen, as always, that the end you have in view will be attained. The city of Pistoia, as I have said in another discourse and apropos of another topic, was acquired by the republic of Florence by just such an artifice; for it was divided and the Florentines supported now one, now the other party and, without making themselves obnoxious to either, led them on until they got sick of their turbulent way of living and in the end came to throw themselves voluntarily into the arms of Florence.

The city of Siena has never changed its form of government with the help of the Florentines except when their help was weak and infrequent; for, when it was frequent and strong, its effect was to make that city united in defence of the government in power.

I wish to add to the abovementioned examples a further example. Filippo Visconti, Duke of Milan, several times made war on the Florentines, relying on their disunion, and in all cases came out the loser, so that when he was bewailing these attacks, he used to say that the follies of the Florentines had involved him in an expenditure of two millions in gold to no purpose.

It remained, then, that the Veientes and the Tuscans were mistaken on this point, as was said above, so that in the end there came a battle when the Romans conquered them. And in like manner will others find themselves mistaken, should they imagine that by such means and in such circumstances they can bring a people into subjection.

Scorn and abuse arouse Hatred against those who indulge in them without bringing them any Advantage

I hold it to be a sign of great prudence in men to refrain alike from threats and from the use of insulting language, for neither of these things deprives the enemy of his power, but the first puts him more on his guard, while the other intensifies his hatred of you and makes him more industrious in devising means to harm you. This is seen in the case of the Veientes, whom we were discussing in the previous chapter. Besides the injury done by the war, they abused the Romans by word of mouth, a thing which every sensible general should prevent his soldiers from doing，for such language does but exasperate the enemy and move him to vengeance，nor，as has been said，does it in any way interfere with his attack：so that in fact they are weapons which turn against you.

Of this a notable instance occurred in Asia. When Cobades，the Persian commander，had been besieging Amida for a considerable time，he grew weary of the tiresome business and decided to withdraw. While he was striking camp the townsmen，exhilarated by their victory，all climbed on the walls and used every sort of abuse，calumniating and accusing and upbraiding the enemy for his cowardice and poltroonery. This so annoyed Cobades that he changed his mind，and，indignant at the injustice，returned to the siege and in a few days had taken and sacked the city.

The same thing happened to the Veientes，who，as I have said，were not content to make war on the Romans，but also spoke of them contemptuously，going up to the stockade surrounding their camp and shouting abuse at them. This annoyed the troops much more than the fighting did；so that，whereas they had at first fought unwillingly，they now pressed the consuls to join battle，with the result that the Veientes，like those mentioned above，were punished for their contumacy as they deserved. Good army commanders and good republican rulers should take all appropriate measures to prevent the use of abusive language and taunts，whether in the city or in their army，and whether used one towards another or towards the enemy. For，if used towards the enemy，there ensue the aforesaid inconveniences，and still worse inconveniences if used one towards the other，unless precautions be taken，as they always have been by prudent men.

When the Roman legions, left in Capua, conspired against the Capuans, as will be narrated in due course, and in connection with this conspiracy a mutiny arose, subsequently quelled by Valerius Corvinus, among other points in the convention he drew up, it prescribed the severest penalties on those who should reproach any of the troops for having taken part in the mutiny.

Tiberius Gracchus, who, during the war with Hannibal, had been put in command of a certain number of slaves, whom, owing to the shortage of men, the Romans had armed, made a special point of the capital punishment he prescribed for anyone who should reproach any slave with his servitude.

We see, then, how harmful the Romans thought it to calumniate others or to reproach them for a shameful deed, as has been said, for than this there is nothing that inflames the mind more, or arouses greater indignation, whether the taunt be true or be said in jest, 'For smart sayings, when they border on the truth, leave a bitter taste behind them.'

Prudent Princes and Republics should be content with Victory, for, when they are not content with it, they usually lose

Speaking to the disparagement of an enemy is usually due to the arrogance aroused in you by victory or by the false hope of victory. False hopes of this kind not only cause men to make mistakes in what they say, but also in what they do. For, when such hopes enter men's breasts, they cause them to dispense with caution，and often to miss the chance of obtaining a sure thing in the hope，but by no means the certainty，of improving on it．This matter is worth considering，since very often men make mistakes in regard to it，detrimental to their Tyre，elated with success，not only refused to accept his terms，but killed the envoy who came to arrange matters．Whereupon Alexander，becoming indignant，put such life into the siege that he took and demolished the city，and either killed or made slaves of its inhabitants．

In 1512 a Spanish army invaded the dominions of Florence with a view to restoring the Medici and levying a tax on the city，acting on behalf of fifth columnists who had led them to expect that，once they had crossed the border，they would take up arms in their favour．On entering the plain ［of the Arno］ they found none of them，and，as they were short of provisions，they made overtures of peace．The people of Florence were too proud to accept them．Hence the loss of Prato，and the ruin of that state．

Rulers of states，when attacked，therefore，cannot make a greater mistake than to refuse to come to terms when the forces attacking them are a good deal stronger than their own，especially if the overtures are made by the enemy：for the terms will never be so hard but that in them some benefit will accrue to those who accept them，so that in a way they will share in the victory．The people of Tyre，for instance，should have been content that Alexander had accepted the conditions which he had at first refused，and the victory thus gained would have been considerable，since with their armed forces they had compelled a great man to condescend to their wishes．It should，in like manner，have sufficed the people of Florence that the Spanish army had yielded to any of their demands instead of fulfilling all their own，for this，too，would have been a considerable victory．For what the Spanish army wanted was to change the form of government in Florence，to put an end to its attachment to France，and to levy tribute．If of these three things the Spaniards had gained the last two，and the people of Florence had gained the first，that is the retention of their form of government，each would have acquired a certain honour and a certain satisfaction；nor would the people have been likely to trouble much about the other two things，so long as their lives were safe．Nay，even had they seen there was a good，and almost certain，chance of a greater victory，they should not have placed themselves wholly at the discretion of fortune and ventured their last stake，which it is never wise to risk unless driven to it．

When Hannibal，who had enjoyed great glory in Italy for sixteen years，left it on being recalled by the Carthaginians to help his own country，he found Hasdrubal and Syphax routed，the kingdom of Numidia lost，and the Carthaginians cooped up within their own walls，destitute of hope except what he and his army should bring．Realizing that his country was reduced to its last stake，he was determined not to risk that till he had tried all other remedies，and so was not ashamed to sue for peace，since he was convinced that，if there was any hope at all for his country，it lay in this and not in war．When peace was refused，he did not decline to fight though bound to lose，since he felt that he could still win，but if he had to lose，he could at least lose gloriously．If，then，Hannibal，who was so full of virtuosity，and had his army still intact，preferred peace to war when he saw that，by losing，his country would be enslaved，what should a man do who has neither the efficiency nor the experience of Hannibal？ Yet there are men who make this mistake， in that to their hopes they set no bound， and are ruined because they rely on such hopes and take no account of other things.

Rome's dealings with neighbouring states and cities in peace and war

How Dangerous it is for a Republic or a Prince not to avenge an Injury done either to the Public or to a Private Person

What is likely to make men indignant with others may easily be learnt from what happened to the Romans when they sent the three Fabii as ambassadors to the Gauls，who were about to attack Tuscany and，in particular，Clusium．The people of Clusium had appealed to Rome for help against the Gauls．Hence the Romans sent the three Fabii as ambassadors to the Gauls to insist in the name of the Roman republic on their abstaining from a war with the Tuscans．When they arrived at their destination the ambassadors，who were better at acting than speaking，found the Gauls and the Tuscans about to join battle，whereupon they were the foremost to enter the fray．It thus came about that when the Gauls became aware of this，their annoyance with the Tuscans was turned against the Romans．And their indignation was intensified when the Gauls，having complained to the Roman senate through their ambassadors of this unfairness and demanded that the aforesaid Fabii be handed over to them to compensate for the harm they had done，they were not only not handed over or punished in some other way，but an election was held in which they were made tribunes with consular power．Consequently when the Gauls saw those being honoured who ought to have been punished，they took it as an affront and an indignity offered to themselves, and, inflamed with indignation and anger, marched on Rome and took it, except for the Capitol. A disaster which the Romans brought on themselves through their disregard of justice, for since their ambassadors had offended against the ‘Law of Nations’, they should have been punished, instead of being honoured.

This leads one to consider how important it is for every republic and every prince to take account of such offences, not only when an injury is done to a whole people, but also when it affects an individual. For if an individual is grievously offended either by the public or by a private person, and does not receive due satisfaction, he will, if he lives in a republic, seek to avenge himself, even if it lead to the ruin of that republic; and, if he lives under a prince and has a spark of manliness, will never rest content till he has in some way or other wreaked vengeance on him even though he sees that, in doing so, he will bring disaster on himself.

In verification of this there is no finer or more relevant instance than that of Philip, king of Macedon, the father of Alexander, in whose court there was a handsome and noble young man, Pausanias. With him Attalus, one of the chief men in Philip's entourage, was enamoured, and had on several occasions sought to get him to assent, but found that he had no liking for such things; so, seeing that he could not get what he wanted otherwise, he decided to set a trap for him and to use force. He gave, therefore, a great banquet, which Pausanias and other noble barons attended, and, when they had had their fill of food and wine, he had him seized and bound; then he not only used force in order to gratify his lust, but, to his greater shame, got others to treat him in the same disgusting way. Of this affront

Pausanias complained several times to Philip，who，having kept him for a time in expectation of vengeance，not only did not avenge him，but made Attalus governor of a Grecian province．Pausanias，therefore，seeing his enemy honoured instead of being punished，gave full vent to his indignation not only against the perpetrator of the deed，but against Philip who had not avenged it．So，one morning，the day of the solemn wedding of Philip's daughter，who was being married to Alexander of Epirus，he killed Philip as he was going to the temple for the celebration standing between the two Alexanders，his son and his soninlaw．Of this incident，which is akin to that which happened to the Romans，all who rule should take note，so that they may never esteem any man so lightly as to think that，if injury be added to injury，the injured person will not consider how to vindicate himself，even though it involve him in all manner of dangers and entail his own downfall．

Fortune blinds Men's Minds when she does not wish them to obstruct her Designs

If one ponders well the course of human affairs，it will be seen that many events happen and many misfortunes come about，against which the heavens have not been willing that any provision at all should be made．Since this statement holds good in the case of Rome，which was conspicuous alike for virtue，religion and orderly conduct，it is no wonder that the same thing happens yet more often in cities and provinces which are lacking in these respects．There is a wellknown passage in which Titus Livy shows at length and with great force the power that heaven exercises over human affairs．He says that，with a view to making the Romans recognize its power，heaven first caused the Fabii to act wrongly when sent as ambassadors to the Gauls， and by means of what they did excited the Gauls to make war on Rome； then ordained that in Rome nothing worthy of the Roman people should be done to meet their attack； for first it brought about that Camillus， who was the only hope they had in those evil days， should be sent as an exile to Ardea； then that， when the Gauls were marching on Rome， they did not appoint a dictator， as they had done many times to meet the attack of the Volsci and other enemies in the neighbourhood． It also caused them to be weak and to take no particular care in calling up troops， who were so slow in taking up arms that they scarce had time to confront the Gauls on the banks of the Allia， which was but ten miles from Rome． There the tribunes set up their camp without their accustomed diligence， since they did not inspect the site beforehand， nor surround it with trenches and stockades， nor take any other precautions， either human or divine； while in preparing for battle they made their ranks thin and weak， and neither troops nor officers behaved as Roman discipline required． No blood was shed during the battle because at the first onslaught the Romans ran away， the greater number going to Veii， and the rest retiring on Rome， where they sought refuge in the Capitol without first going home； whereupon the senate took so little thought for Rome's defence that， for one thing， they omitted to close the gates； and some of its members fled， while others went with the rest into the Capitol．

Granted， in their defence of the Capitol they used some sort of discipline， for they did not pack all the useless people inside， and they got in all the corn they could， so as to be able to stand the siege； while of the useless crowd of old men， women and children， most fled to the country round about， and the rest stayed in Rome at the mercy of the Gauls． So that no one who had read of what was done so often in years gone by and were to read what was now being done，would think they were one and the same people.

Having described all the disorders mentioned above，Titus Livy concludes with the remark：‘To such an extent does fortune blind the minds of men when she does not want them to oppose the force she is using.’

Nor can anything be more true than the conclusion Livy draws. Hence men who in this life normally either suffer great adversity or enjoy great prosperity，deserve neither praise nor blame；for one usually finds that they have been driven either to ruin or to greatness by the prospect of some great advantage which the heavens have held out，whereby they have been given the chance，or have been deprived of the chance，of being able to act virtuously. Fortune arranges this quite nicely. For，when it wants a man to take the lead in doing great things，it chooses a man of high spirits and great virtue who will seize the occasion it offers him. And in like manner，when it wants a man to bring about a great disaster，it gives precedence to men who will help to promote it；and，if anyone gets in the way，it either kills him off or deprives him of all power of doing good.

It plainly appears from Livy's evidence that，in order to make Rome greater and to lead it on to its future greatness，fortune decided it was necessary first to chastise it in a way that will be described at length in the beginning of the next book，but did not want to ruin it altogether. Hence we see that it made an exile of Camillus，but did not cause him to die；that it caused Rome to be taken，but not the Capitol；that it arranged matters so that nothing useful was thought of to help Rome，nor anything overlooked that could help in the defence of the Capitol. It brought it about that，since

Rome was to be taken，the greater part of the troops which were routed at Allia，should go on to Veii，thus leaving the city without any men to defend it．But in arranging things thus，it also prepared the way for Rome's recovery；for since there was a Roman army at Veii，and Camillus was at Ardea，it became possible to make a more vigorous attempt to deliver the fatherland under a general whose career was free from the stain of defeat and whose reputation was untarnished．

In confirmation of this one might adduce further examples from modern times，but I do not think this necessary，so pass them over，since that I have given should be enough to satisfy anybody．I assert once again as a truth to which history as a whole bears witness that men may second their fortune，but cannot oppose it；that they may weave its warp，but cannot break it．Yet they should never give up，because there is always hope，though they know not the end and move towards it along roads which cross one another and as yet are unexplored；and since there is hope，they should not despair，no matter what fortune brings or in what travail they find themselves．

Really Powerful Republics and Princes do not purchase Alliances with Money，but obtain them by means of the Virtue and the Reputation of their Forces

The Romans were being besieged in the Capitol，and，though they expected help from Veii and from Camillus，were in such bad case owing to famine that they came to terms with the Gauls and agreed to pay them so much gold．They were weighing out the gold agreed upon when Camillus arrived with his army；whereupon fortune，says the historian，decided that ‘the Romans should not by purchase save their lives’.

This kind of thing is not only noticeable in this case but characterizes the behaviour of this republic throughout. We never find the Romans purchasing towns，or paying in order to obtain peace. They always acquired both by virtue of their arms. Nor do I think that this has ever happened in the case of any other republic. Among other indications of the power of a strong state one looks to the terms on which it lives with its neighbours. When it is so governed that，to obtain its friendship，its neighbours become its tributaries，it is a sure sign that the state is powerful；but when the said neighbours，though inferior in strength，extract payment from it，it is a sure sign of its weakness.

As one runs through Roman history，one sees how the Massilians，the Aedui，the Rhodians，Hiero of Syracuse，king Eumenes and king Masinissa，who were neighbours with estates bordering on the empire of Rome，were ready to incur expense and pay tribute in order to obtain the friendship of Rome，and in return ask only for her protection. In weak states one finds just the opposite. To begin with，in our own state，Florence，in times past when its reputation stood at its highest，there was no lord in the Romagna who did not receive payment from it. It also made grants to the Perugians，the Castellani and all its other neighbours. Had this city been armed and strong，everything would have been just the contrary，for to secure its protection many states would have paid money to it，and would have sought to purchase its friendship，not to sell their own.

Nor are the Florentines the only people who have thus demeaned themselves since the Venetians and the King of France do the same thing； for the latter，great as his kingdom is，habitually pays tribute to the Swiss and to the King of England. This all comes from depriving the people of arms，and from the fact that this king and the other states mentioned have chosen rather to enjoy the present advantage of being able to despoil their people and of being able to avoid an imaginary rather than a real danger， instead of so acting as to secure their people's goodwill and to make their state happy for ever. A malpractice such as this，though it may bring a little temporary quiet，in time becomes the cause of crises，disaster and irremediable ruin. It would take too long to relate how often the Florentines，the Venetians，and this kingdom，have bought off wars and submitted to an ignominy which the Romans submitted to but once. It would take too long to recount how many towns the Florentines and the Venetians have purchased in which one afterwards saw disorder，and how they failed to protect with steel what gold had purchased. The Romans kept up their standards so long as they remained free；but when they fell under the yoke of the emperors，and the emperors began to behave badly and to prefer the shadow to the sun，they，too，began to make grants sometimes to the Parthians，sometimes to Germany，sometimes to other neighbouring peoples；which was the first step towards that great empire's downfall.

Such are the inconveniences，then，that arise from depriving your people of arms. And there is a worse trouble，too，for the greater the force of the enemy's attack，the weaker do you find yourself；for he who lives in the aforesaid way treats ill the subjects who reside within his domain，but treats well those who live on its confines in order to have people well disposed to keep the enemy off. It thus comes about that，in order the better to keep the enemy off，he subsidizes the lords and peoples who are his next-door neighbours, with the result that the states which he has thus kept going, offer a modicum of resistance on the frontiers, but, when the enemy has crossed them, no further remedy is available. Such states do not see that their way of proceeding is incompatible with any kind of good order. For it is the heart and the vital parts of the body that have to be strengthened, not its extremities, since without them the body can survive, but, if the former be injured, it dies; yet such states keep unarmed the heart, but arm the hands and the feet.

What this lack of order has done for Florence is clear, and may be seen any day; for when an army crosses its frontiers and gets near its heart, it finds itself without further remedy. Of it the Venetians also gave proof a few years ago, and, if their city had not been girt about by water, it would have been the end of it. In France this experience is not found so frequently, for it is so large a kingdom that it has but few enemies superior to it. None the less, when the English attacked this kingdom in 1513, the whole realm was in trepidation, and the king and everybody else thought that a single defeat would spell ruin to the king and to the state. Very different was it in the case of the Romans, for the nearer the enemy approached to Rome the greater he found the city's power of resistance to be. When Hannibal invaded Italy, one sees how, after three defeats and the death of so many generals and soldiers, it was still able, not merely to withstand the enemy, but to win the war. All this comes from having fortified well the heart, but of the extremities made less account. For of basic importance in this state were the people of Rome, the people known as Latins, the other parts of Italy associated with it, and its colonies. Thence came the vast number of soldiers which enabled it to fight and to hold the whole world. That this is so may be seen from the question asked by Hanno, the Carthaginian, of the messengers who came from Hannibal after the rout at Cannae. Having made much of Hannibal's exploits, they were asked by Hanno whether the Roman people had sent to ask for peace, and whether among the Latins and in its colonies any town had revolted against the Romans. To both questions the answer was in the negative, whereupon Hanno remarked: ‘This war, then, is still in as full swing as it was at the start. ’

We see from this discourse and from what I have said in other places, how great is the difference between the procedure of presentday republics and that of ancient republics. We see, too, how, because of this, astonishing acquisitions are made and astonishing losses occur daily. For where men have but little virtue, fortune makes a great display of its power; and, since fortune changes, republics and governments frequently change; and will go on changing till someone comes along, so imbued with the love of antiquity that he regulates things in such fashion that fortune does not every time the sun turns round get a chance of showing what it can do.

How Dangerous it is to put Confidence in Refugees

It may not be amiss among other topics to show how dangerous it is to trust those who have been driven from their country, since this is a matter with which everyone who holds office has to deal. In support it is possible to adduce a noteworthy case which Titus Livy cites in his histories, though it lies outside his main topic. When Alexander the Great crossed with his army into Asia, Alexander of Epirus, a relative – in fact his uncle – went with some troops to Italy, having been invited by some Lucanian refugees who had led him to expect that through their mediation he would gain the whole of that country. Relying on their word and on the hopes they aroused, he came to Italy and was put to death by them; for their fellowcitizens had promised that, if they would kill him, they might return to their own country. One should reflect, therefore, on the unreliability of agreements and promises made by men who find themselves shut out from their country, because in determining what such men's word is worth it must be borne in mind that, once they get a chance of returning to their country without your help, they will desert you and turn to others in spite of any promises they may have made you. While in regard to the vain promises and hopes, so intense is their desire to get back home that they naturally believe much that is false and artfully add much more: so that between what they believe and what they say they believe they fill you with a hope which is such that, if you rely on it, either you incur expense in vain or take up what will ruin you.

I propose to let this example of Alexander suffice, conjoined with that of Themistocles the Athenian, who, having been proclaimed a rebel, sought refuge with Darius in Asia; to whom he promised so much if he would but attack Greece that Darius resolved to do so. When later he was unable to fulfil these promises whether out of shame or for fear of punishment, Themistocles poisoned himself. Wherefore, if so eminent a man as Themistocles made this mistake, how much more likely are those to err who are less virtuous and let themselves be swayed by their desires and their passions. A ruler, therefore, should be slow to take up an enterprise because of what some exile has told him, for more often than not all he will get out of it is shame or most grievous harm.

And because the taking of towns by stealth and owing to information supplied by their inhabitants rarely succeeds，it does not seem to me irrelevant to discuss this in the next chapter，as also in how many ways the Romans acquired them.

On the Various Methods used by the Romans in taking Towns

Since the Romans were all keen on war，they always and on all occasions took advantage of anything，alike in the matter of expense and of any other matter，that promised to help. It was for this reason that they took care not to besiege the towns they took，for they thought this method so costly and so clumsy that its disadvantages would much more than counterbalance the advantages likely to accrue from the conquest. Hence they deemed it better and more useful to subjugate towns by any other means rather than lay siege to them，so that in all their wars and in all the years they took，there are very few instances of their having used sieges.

In order to get hold of a city，therefore，the Romans either took it by assault or got it to surrender. Their assaults were either carried out openly in strength and with violence，or by force conjoined with fraud. When storming a town openly they used two methods. Either they attacked it on all sides without first demolishing the walls，which is called ‘putting a crown round the city’ since the whole army surrounds it and engages it at all points；and in this way they often succeeded in taking a city，even a very large one，at the first assault，as Scipio took New Carthage in Spain. Or，when an attack failed，they set about breaking down the walls with rams and other siege implements，or made a sap by which they obtained entrance to the city，as was done when Veii was taken；or to get on a level with those defending the walls, they constructed wooden towers, or raised earthworks against the walls from without, so as to be at the same height as the defenders.

Against such assaults the city's defenders in the first case, where the attack came from all sides, were more quickly exposed to danger and had more dubious remedies. For, since many defenders were needed everywhere, either those they had were not enough to provide them all with reserves and reliefs; or, if they could, not all were equally courageous in resisting, and, if a section shirked the battle, all was lost. Hence it often happened, as I have said, that this method proved successful. But when the first assault was not successful, they did not keep it going long, because this was too dangerous for the army; for, since it covered so much ground, it could as a whole resist but feebly a sortie made by those within. The troops, too, got out of hand and grew weary; but for just once, when it was unexpected, they would try this method. When a breach was made in the walls, it was countered by means of ramparts as at the present time. And to counteract a sap, they made a countersap through which they got at the enemy either with their weapons or by other devices; of which one consisted of barrels filled with feathers to which they applied a light, and, when burning, put them in the sap so that the smoke and the stench might prevent the enemy getting through. While, if attacked from towers, they tried to destroy them by fire; and, if from earthworks, they made a hole in the lower part of the wall on which the earthwork was leaning, and drew in the earth which those outside had put there, so that, since the earth was being piled up outside and being taken away from the inside, the earthwork did not grow.

Such methods of storming a town could not be kept up for long，so they had either to raise their camp or to devise other methods of winning the war，as Scipio did when he got to Africa；for when he attacked Utica，but did not succeed in taking it，he raised his camp and sought to engage the Carthaginian armies and break them. Or they would have recourse to a siege，as they did at Veii，Capua，Carthage，Jerusalem and other towns which they took by means of sieges.

The acquiring of towns by furtive violence is illustrated in the case of Palaeopolis，which the Romans took by arrangement with fifth columnists inside. This form of attack has often been tried by the Romans and by other peoples，but has seldom succeeded. The reason is that at the smallest setback the plan breaks down，and such setbacks easily happen. For in the first place the conspiracy may be discovered before it comes to a head，and in discovering it there is not much difficulty，owing sometimes to the treachery of those who have been told of it，sometimes to practical difficulties. For you must get in touch with the enemy，with whom it is not permitted to speak unless you can find some excuse. And，should the plot not be discovered while arrangements are being made，a host of difficulties occur when the time comes for action. For if you arrive before the time appointed，or get there late，anything may upset the plot. So，too，if there occurs some unexpected noise，such as the geese made at the Capitol，or if the normal course of events is interrupted. Given the least blunder or the smallest mistake，the attack is bound to fail. In addition to which there is the darkness of the night to add to the fear of those engaged in such dangerous tasks；and the fact that most of the men who are taken on such expeditions，having had no experience of the country or of the place to which they are being led，may get muddled and fainthearted，or upset by some tiny and accidental mishap；and any false impression is enough to make them turn tail．

Anyone more lucky in such stealthy nocturnal ventures than Aratus the Sicyonian is not to be found，yet，bold as he was in these，he was equally nervous about ventures in daylight and in the open．This we may put down to some occult virtue with which he was endowed，rather than to anything in the nature of nocturnal expeditions which makes them more fortunate than others．Though such means are frequently planned，therefore，but few arrive at fruition，and very few succeed．

When towns are acquired by surrender，the surrender may either be voluntary or compulsory．When voluntary，it is due either to some external circumstance which compels a town to seek protection under another's wing，as Capua sought Rome's；or to the desire to be well ruled，a desire evoked by the good government exercised by the prince in question over those who of their own accord have placed themselves in his hands，as was the case with the Rhodians，the Massilians and other such cities which surrendered to the Roman people．When the surrender is compulsory，it is either brought about by a long siege，as we have said above；or it is due to the continued vexation produced by raids，depredations and other annoyances，to escape which a city surrenders．

Of all the methods mentioned above，the Romans used the last more than any．For more than four hundred and fifty years they sought to tire out their neighbours by defeats in the field and by raids，and by means of treaties managed to acquire greater repute than their rivals did，as we have pointed out elsewhere. It was on this method that they always relied most, though they tried them all, but found the others fraught with danger or of no use. For sieges are long and costly, assaults of doubtful issue and risky; and conspiracies are unreliable. They also realized that, if the enemy's army was routed, they acquired a kingdom in a day; whereas, if they besieged an obstinate city, it might take years to get it.

The Romans gave to Army Commanders Discretionary Powers

If one is to profit from the perusal of Livy's history one ought, I think, to take account of all the modes of procedure used by the people and senate of Rome and among other points worthy of notice there is the authority we find them giving to their consuls, dictators and other army commanders when in the field. It was of a very high order, for the senate reserved to itself only the power to initiate fresh wars and to confirm peace treaties. All else was left to the discretion and power of the consul. For, when the people and senate had decided to go to war, against the Latins, for instance, they left everything else to the discretion of the consul, who could either give battle or not give it, and attack this or that town as he thought fit.

This is confirmed by numerous examples, but especially by what occurred in an expedition against the Tuscans. The consul, Fabius, had defeated those who were near Sutrium, and was planning next to lead his army through the Ciminian forest en route for Tuscany. About this, not only did he not consult the senate, but he did not even inform them, though the war was to be carried on in a new, unexplored and dangerous country. Further confirmation is afforded by the action the senate here took, which was of the opposite kind; for, when they heard of the victory which Fabius had gained and wondered whether his next step would be to pass through the said forest into Tuscany，they thought it best not to run the risk this war would entail，and so sent two legates to Fabius to stop him from going on to Tuscany．But，when they arrived，he had already got there and had won a victory，so that，instead of preventing a war，the legates came home bringing news of a conquest and of glory won．

Whoever considers carefully this technique will see that it was very wise to make use of it．For，if the senate had required a consul in conducting a war to proceed step by step according as they directed，it would have made him less circumspect and slower to act，for it would have seemed to him that the glory of victory would not be wholly his，but that the senate would share in it，since it would have been carried out under its directions． Furthermore，the senate would have had to advise on matters of which it had no immediate cognizance；for，though the senators were all men of considerable experience in military matters，yet，as they were not on the spot，they would not be acquainted with the multitudinous details which it is essential to know before one can give sound advice，and so would have made numerous mistakes．This being so，they preferred that the consul should decide what to do，and that the glory should be wholly his，for they thought his actions would be so restrained and regulated by his love of glory that he would do his utmost．

To this I have the more willingly called attention，because I notice that the republics of today，such as the Venetian and the Florentine republics， act differently，for if their generals，administrators or commissioners， have to set up a piece of artillery，they want to know of it and to advise about it – a procedure as praiseworthy as are others of that ilk，which together have brought us to our present pass.

Sundry remarks on strategy, tactics, new devices and discipline

That a General cannot avoid an Engagement if the Enemy is determined to force him to it at All Costs

'Gaius Sulpicius，the dictator，when waging war with the Gauls，was unwilling to try his fortune in an engagement with an enemy whose position time and an awkward situation was steadily making worse．' When there occurs an error which all men，or most men，are liable to make，it is not a bad thing，I think，to warn them often against it．Since，therefore，as I have frequently pointed out，the way in which important matters are dealt with today does not come up to the standard of the ancients，it does not seem to me superfluous at this juncture to point it out once again．For，if there be any way in which there has been a departure from ancient customs，it is especially so in military matters，in which none of the things the ancients esteemed so highly are now done．This inconvenience is due to republics and princes having entrusted such matters to other people．To avoid danger they themselves keep clear of military operations and，though one does sometimes find a king in these days sallying forth in person，I do not on this account think that it leads him to do much else that is worthy of commendation．For when they actually do engage in military operations，they do it for the sake of display and not for any praiseworthy reason．True，in that they occasionally review their troops and reserve to themselves the title of commander，they make mistakes of less moment than do republics，especially Italian republics，which rely on others and understand nothing which has to do with war，and yet in their desire to look like a prince in the eyes of the army，make decisions，and，in doing so，commit innumerable blunders.

And although some of these blunders I have discussed elsewhere，I cannot here be silent about one which is very important. When these idle princes or effeminate republics are sending one of their generals on an expedition，it seems to them that the wisest thing they can commission him to do，is on no account to engage in open battle，but，on the contrary，above all else to be on his guard against an engagement；for they think that in so doing they are emulating the prudence of Fabius Maximus who，by putting off an engagement，saved the Roman state from destruction；wherein they overlook the fact that，more often than not，such a commission is nonsensical or dangerous. The point one has to bear in mind here is that a general who proposes to remain in the field cannot avoid battle if the enemy is determined to force one on him at all costs. Hence what such a commission amounts to is just this：‘Join battle at the enemy's behest，not at your own’. For，if one wants to remain in the field and not join battle，the only safe thing to do is to put at least fifty miles between oneself and the enemy，and then to have good scouts so that，should he come your way，you may have time to get farther off. Another alternative in this case is to shut yourself up in a city. But both courses are extremely harmful. For the first leaves your country at the mercy of the enemy，and a valiant prince would sooner try his fortune in battle than prolong a war at such cost to his subjects. While the second alternative is manifestly that of a lost cause，for what it comes to is that，when you have got your army into a city，you may be besieged，and before long to be reduced by the pangs of hunger to surrender. Hence to avoid battle in either of these two ways is extremely hurtful. The plan adopted by Fabius Maximus of occupying strong positions is good so long as you have so valiant an army that the enemy does not dare come and seek you out in your position of vantage. Nor can it be said that Fabius avoided battle，but rather that he preferred to fight when he had the advantage. For，if Hannibal had gone to seek him out，he would have awaited him and made a day of it. But Hannibal did not dare to fight with him on these terms. So that it was as much Hannibal who avoided battle as Fabius；but，if either had determined at all costs to fight，the other would have had to adopt one of three courses，i. e. either to adopt one of the two courses mentioned above，or else to run away.

That what I am saying is true can be clearly seen from a host of cases，and especially in the war the Romans had with Philip of Macedon，the father of Perseus. For，when Philip was attacked by the Romans，he decided not to join battle，and，to avoid it，did at first what Fabius Maximus did in Italy：posted himself with his army on top of a mountain where he erected fortifications，thinking that the Romans would not dare to go and seek him out. But they did go，and，having fought with him，drove him from the mountain，and he，being powerless to resist，fled with the greater part of his forces. What saved him from being utterly undone was the impossible country，which prevented the Romans from following him up. Philip，therefore，still desirous of avoiding battle and being encamped in the neighbourhood of the Romans，had to get away；and，having learned by experience that，to avoid battle，it is not enough to take up a position on top of a mountain, and being averse to shutting himself up in towns, decided to take the remaining course and to put many miles between himself and the Roman camp. Hence, when the Romans were in one province, he moved to another, and, in like manner, whenever the Romans moved out, he moved in. But when at length he came to see that by prolonging the war in this way his situation was getting worse, and that, now by him, now by the enemy, his subjects were being harassed, he decided to try his fortune in battle. He thus came to an engagement with the Romans, as was proper.

It is useful then not to fight under the conditions in which Fabius' army found itself, or again in those in which Gaius Sulpicius found himself, i.e. when you have so good an army that the enemy does not dare to come and oust you from your fortified position; or when the enemy is in your country, but without having the footing there that would guarantee provisions. In this case the course adopted is useful for the reasons Livy gives when he says: 'he was unwilling to try his fortune in an engagement with the enemy so long as time and his adverse situation were daily making the enemy's position worse'. But under all other conditions battle cannot be avoided without incurring dishonour and danger, for if you run away, as Philip did, it is as bad as being routed, and is the more shameful in that you afford less proof of your virtue. And if he thus succeeded in getting away, another who is not helped by the country may not be so successful as he was.

That Hannibal was a past master in warfare no one will deny. Hence, when he was up against Scipio in Africa, if he had seen any advantage in prolonging the war he would have done so； and peradventure， being a good general and having a good army， he might have done as Fabius did in Italy. But， as he did not do it， it must be supposed that strong grounds impelled him to act thus. For a commander who has an army massed together and sees that for lack of funds or of allies he cannot keep it long in the field， is quite mad if he does not put his fortune to the test before his army has to be disbanded； because， if he waits， he is surely lost； but if he tries， he may succeed.

Another point of importance to be considered here is that one ought， if one is going to lose， to try to acquire glory， and there is more glory in being overcome by force than there is when it is through some other inconvenience that you come to lose. Hannibal must have been constrained by these necessities. On the other hand， should Hannibal have put off giving battle and Scipio had not enough courage to go and attack him in his strong positions， Scipio would have been none the worse for this， since he had already beaten Syphax and acquired so many towns in Africa that his position there was as safe and as comfortable as if he were in Italy. This was not the case with Hannibal when he was up against Fabius， nor with the Gauls when they were up against Sulpicius.

Still less， again， is it possible for him to avoid battle who with his army is attacking a foreign country， for if he wants to get into the enemy's country， it behoves him when the enemy shows fight， to give battle， and if he takes up his position before a town， he is so much the more obliged to give battle. This happened in our times in the case of Charles， Duke of Burgundy， who， when encamped before Morat， a Swiss town， was attacked and routed by the Swiss; and in the case of the French army which was besieging Novara and was in like manner routed by the Swiss.

That he who has to deal with several Foes, even though he be Weaker than they are, can actually Win, provided he can sustain their First Attack

The power of the tribunes of the plebs in the city of Rome was considerable, which was necessary since otherwise they could not have checked the ambition of the nobility, as we have frequently pointed out; and the nobility would in that case have corrupted the republic long before they did. Nevertheless, because inherent in everything is its own peculiar malady, as has been said elsewhere, and this gives rise to fresh misfortunes, it is necessary to provide against them by fresh enactments. Hence, when the tribunes grew arrogant in the use of their authority and became a menace alike to the nobility and to the whole of Rome, there would have arisen an inconvenience harmful to Roman liberty if Appius Claudius had not shown how the ambition of the tribunes might be counteracted. This consisted in looking among them for someone who was either timorous or corruptible or devoted to the common good, and who could thus be induced to oppose the will of the rest when they were proposing to do something contrary to the will of the senate. This remedy acted in no small measure as a restraint on the excessive authority of the tribunes and was often of service to Rome.

This leads me on to consider how it sometimes happens that, when many powers are united against a single power, though in combination they are much more powerful than it is, yet more is always to be expected from the single power, though less strong, than from the many even though very strong, for apart from the many advantages which a single power has over the many – and they are countless – there is always this: it will be able by using a little industry to break up the many, and to make what was a strong body, weak. I shall not adduce examples from ancient history, for they would be many, but shall content myself with modern examples which have happened in our own times.

In 1483 all Italy formed a confederation against the Venetians, who, since they had lost everything and their army could no longer hold its own in the field, suborned Signor Ludovico who was ruling in Milan and by means of this managed to obtain terms by which they not only recovered their lost lands, but obtained part of the state of Ferrara. Thus, though they were losing the war, when peace came, they were better off than before.

A few years ago the whole world formed a confederation against France, yet, before the war came to an end, Spain had fallen out with the confederation and made peace on its own account, with the result that the remaining confederates shortly afterwards also had to come to terms with France.

The conclusion to be drawn from this is obvious. If the many make war on the one, the one will come out of it best provided her virtue be such that she can sustain the first attack and await her opportunity by procrastinating. For, should she not be able to do this, a host of dangers may ensue, as happened to Venice in 08 when, could she have temporized with the French army and have found time to win over one of the states confederated against her, she might have avoided disaster. But since in arms she was not sufficiently strong to be able to temporize with the enemy，and so had not time to persuade any power to leave the confederation，she was undone. Yet one finds that the Pope，once he had recovered his lost territory，became her ally，and so did Spain；and either of these two princes would have been very glad to help her to save Lombardy so as to prevent the French becoming too powerful in Italy，had they been able to do so. Hence the Venetians，by giving up part of their territories，might have saved the rest；and this would have been a very wise course had it been done in time before the war broke out so that they should not appear to have been driven to it. But after the war had begun it would have been reprehensible，and probably of but little use. Yet，before war broke out，few Venetian citizens saw the danger，and still fewer the remedy；and there was no one to advise them. But to come back to where we started. The conclusion I draw from this discourse is that，just as the Roman senate found means to save their country from the ambition of the tribunes because there were many tribunes，so any prince who is assailed by many，has a remedy to hand，if he be wise enough to take appropriate steps to break up the confederation.

That a Prudent General should make it absolutely necessary for his own Troops to Fight，but should avoid forcing the Enemy to do so

We have in other discourses shown how useful a part necessity plays in human affairs，and to what glorious deeds it may lead men. As some moral philosophers in their writings have remarked，neither of the two most noble instruments to which man's nobility is due，his hands and his tongue，would have attained such perfection in their work or have carried man's works to the height which one can see they have reached，if they had not been driven to it by necessity. Since, therefore, army commanders of old were aware of the virtue that lies in necessity, and how steadfast, when necessity drives, the minds of soldiers can become in their resolve to fight, they used every endeavour to put their troops under such constraint and, on the other hand, employed any device that would free the enemy from such constraint. To this end they often left open to the enemy a route they might have closed, and closed a route to their own soldiers which they might have left open. If, then, anyone wants a city to be obstinately defended or an army in the field to fight obstinately, he should, first and foremost, seek to instil this necessity into the minds of those who have to do the fighting.

It follows that a prudent general who has to go and lay siege to a city should base his estimate of how easy or how difficult it is going to be to take it on the knowledge and consideration of the extent to which necessity will constrain the inhabitants to defend it; and, if he find the necessity constraining them to defend it, considerable, should account the siege difficult, but, if otherwise, should account it easy. It is for this reason that towns which have rebelled are more difficult to acquire than they are to acquire in the first instance; for in the first instance they have no cause to expect punishment for having given offence, and so surrender easily; but, since they are aware, when in revolt, of having given offence, and in consequence fear punishment, they become difficult to take. Again, obstinacy of this kind is also aroused by the natural hatred which neighbouring princes and neighbouring republics have for one another; which, in turn, is occasioned by the ambition which moves states to dominate one another, and by their jealousy, especially if they are republics, as was the case in Tuscany, and this rivalry and competition have made it difficult，and will continue to make it difficult，for one to seize the other．If，therefore，one considers carefully what neighbours the city of Florence has and what neighbours the city of Venice has，it is not so extraordinary as many make out that Florence should have spent more on wars and have acquired less than Venice，since it is all due to the towns in the neighbourhood of Venice not being so obstinate in defending themselves as are those in the neighbourhood of Florence．This comes about because the cities abutting on Venetian territory are accustomed to live under a prince，and are not free cities；and cities accustomed to subjection are usually not so particular about changing masters：on the contrary，they are often glad to do so．Hence，though Venice's neighbours are more powerful than those of Florence，yet，on account of its having found the towns less obstinate，Venice has been able to subdue them more quickly than has Florence，which is surrounded entirely by free cities．

But to return to the main topic of this discourse．When a general is attacking a town he should endeavour with all diligence to relieve its defenders of the necessity we have been discussing，and so of their obstinacy；by promising them pardon if they are afraid of punishment，and，if they fear for their liberty，by explaining that no attack is being made on the common good，but only on a few ambitious citizens．This has often facilitated the attack on，and the taking of，towns．And，though such false colours are easily seen through，especially by men of prudence，the populace is none the less often deceived；for，in its eagerness for a speedy peace it shuts its eyes to any trap which may underlie generous promises．Innumerable cities have by this means been reduced to servile states．It was so with Florence，for instance，quite recently；and it happened to Crassus and his army；for，though he realized the emptiness of Parthian promises，made merely to deprive his troops of the need to defend themselves，this did not enable him to sustain their steadfastness，blinded as they were，by the offers of peace which the enemy had made：a point one sees clearly if one reads his life．

In this connection I might mention that when the Samnites，in contravention of their treaty and owing to the ambition of the few，raided and pillaged the lands of Rome's allies；and then sent ambassadors to Rome to sue for peace，offering to restore what they had taken and to hand over those responsible for the disturbances and for the booty taken，their offer was turned down by the Romans．On their returning to Samnium without hope of an agreement，Claudius Pontius，then in command of the Samnite army，in one of his remarkable speeches，pointed out that the Romans had anyhow wanted war，and that，though on their part they were anxious for peace，necessity constrained them to go to war. He then used these words：‘War is justified，if necessity forces one to it，and to arm is a duty，if in arms lies one's hope’ and upon this necessity he based the hope of victory for his troops．

That I may not have to return later to this topic，it will be best for me to mention the more noteworthy instances in Rome's case．There was that of Gaius Manlius who led his army against the Veientes，and，when a section of the Veientine army broke through his stockades，hurried with a detachment to defend them and，to prevent the Veientes escaping，put a guard on all the exits from the camp．Hence，finding themselves shut in，the Veientes began to fight so furiously that they killed Manlius，and would have got the better of all the rest of the Romans if one of the tribunes had not had the sense to let them out. Thus we see that，so long as necessity constrained the Veientes to fight，they fought with great ferocity，but， when they saw the way was open，thought more of getting away than of fighting.

The armies of the Volsci and the Aequi had crossed the Roman frontiers. Against them the consuls were sent. In the course of the battle the Volscian army，commanded by Vettius Messius，found itself at one moment shut up between its stockades which the Romans had taken，and the other Roman army. Seeing that he must needs die or use his sword to fight for his life，Vettius Messius said to his soldiers：‘Follow me. There is neither wall nor rampart in the way，but just armed forces to oppose armed forces. In valour we are equal，but in necessity which is the last weapon and the best of all，you have the advantage. ’ Thus Livy calls necessity ‘the last and best of all weapons’.

Camillus，the most prudent of all Rome's generals，having already got into the city of Veii with his army，in order to facilitate the taking of it and to deprive the enemy of a last necessity to defend it，gave orders within the hearing of the Veientes to the effect that no one should touch those who were without arms. The result was that they threw down their arms and the city was taken almost without bloodshed. This device was afterwards adopted by many generals.

Which is it best to trust，a Good General with a Weak Army or a Good Army with a Weak General？

Coriolanus，being banished from Rome，went to the Volsci，where，having got together an army wherewith to avenge himself on his fellow citizens，he set out for Rome，but turned back rather out of devotion to his mother than to the Roman forces. Commenting on this incident，Livy remarks that from it we may learn that the Roman republic grew more through the virtue of her generals than through that of her soldiers for，in view of the fact that the Volsci had thus far always been beaten，they could have won on this occasion only because Coriolanus was their general. But，though Livy advances this opinion，many passages in his history show that soldiers without a general have given remarkable proof of their virtue，and that they have been better disciplined and more determined after the death of their consuls than before they got killed. It happened thus with the army the Romans had in Spain under the Scipios，for，when both these generals had been killed，its virtue was such that not only did it successfully defend itself，but it beat the enemy and thus saved this province for the republic. Hence all things considered，there are many cases in which the virtue of the soldiers alone has won the day，and many others in which the virtue of generals has had the same effect，so that one can say that each has need of the other.

In this connection it will be well to consider first which is more to be feared：a good army badly generalled，or a good general who has poor troops. If we follow here the opinion of Caesar，neither one nor the other is worth much. For when he went to Spain against Afranius and Petreius，who had a firstclass army，he showed how little esteem he had for them by remarking that ‘he was going to fight an army without a general’，thereby indicating the weakness of the generals. On the other hand，when he went to Thessaly to fight Pompey，he said：‘I am going to meet a general without an army’.

We can now turn to the further question：whether it is easier for a good general to make a good army，or for a good army to make a good general. I submit that on this point there can be no dispute；for it is easier for many，if good，to select or make a good man of someone，than it is for one good man to do it for many. Lucullus，when he was sent against Mithridates，was wholly without experience of warfare；yet the army，which was good and had excellent officers，soon made him a good general. Again，the Romans，who were short of men，armed a number of slaves，and handed them over to Sempronius Gracchus to train，and in a short time he made of them a good army. Pelopidas and Epaminondas，as I have remarked elsewhere，when they had delivered Thebes，their fatherland，from servitude to the Spartans，in a short time made such excellent soldiers of the Theban peasants that they could not only stand up against the Spartan militia but beat it.

The arguments are evenly balanced，because，if one is good，it can make the other like it. A good army，none the less，if it lacks a good head is apt to become mutinous and dangerous，as happened with the Macedonian army after the death of Alexander，and with the veterans in the civil war. Hence I am of opinion that more confidence should be placed in a good general who has time to train his men and a chance to arm them，than in a mutinous army with a turbulent fellow it has chosen as its head. Twice the glory and praise is due，then，to those generals who have not only had an enemy to beat，but，before coming to grips with him，have had to drill their troops and make a good army of them; for in this they display a twofold virtue, which is so rare that if it were given to many to be such strict disciplinarians, they would be much less esteemed and lauded than they are.

What Effects are produced by the Appearance of New Inventions in the course of a Battle and by the hearing of Unfamiliar Cries

Of what importance in strife and battle may be an unprecedented incident due to something seen or heard for the first time can be shown by numerous incidents and especially by that which occurred during the battle the Romans fought with the Volsci, when Quintius, seeing that one wing of his army was giving way, began to call to it in a loud voice to stand firm since the other wing was winning; for by these words he put courage into his own men and alarmed the enemy, and so won the day. And if on a well-disciplined army such remarks have a great effect, on a disorderly and ill-disciplined army they have a still greater effect, for the whole is swayed, as it were, by a wind.

Let me give you a remarkable instance which occurred in our own times. A few years ago, the city of Perugia was divided between two factions, the Oddi and the Baglioni. The latter were in power, the former having been banished. But, with the help of their friends, they got together an army and assembled it in one of their towns close to Perugia. Then, with the connivance of their partisans they got one night into the city and were on their way to take the piazza without having been discovered. Since at every street corner in the city chains had been placed to block the way, the troops of the Oddi put at their head a man with an iron mace to break the locks fastening the chains so that the cavalry could get through. It remained for him to break only that which barred the way into the piazza when the cry 'To arms! ' was raised, and on the fellow who was doing the breaking the crowd pressed so hard that he could not raise his arm to strike, so, in order to manage it, he called out 'Get back there! ', words which, as they passed from rank to rank, became 'Get back! '. Whereupon those in the rear began to run away, and one after another, the rest followed suit with such frenzy that their own men were thrown into confusion. So that the plans of the Oddi came to nought owing to this insignificant incident.

This leads me to observe that good discipline is needed in an army not merely to enable it to fight in orderly fashion, but also that you may not be perturbed should some tiny misadventure befall. For this reason alone the masses are useless in war, since any rumour, any cry, any commotion may change their mood and make them run away. Hence it is essential to discipline that a good general should depute men to take note of his verbal instructions and to pass them on to others; that he should accustom his troops to pay no heed to anyone else, and his officers not to depart from what they have been commissioned by him to say; for we find that failure to observe these points carefully has often led to the greatest confusion. In regard to strange sights, every general should try to present something of the sort while his army is in action so as to give courage to his own men and to dispel that of the enemy; for among the events which are incidental to victory this is especially effective. In illustration of this the case of Gaius Sulpicius, the Roman dictator, may be adduced, who, when engaged in battle with the Gauls, armed all his baggagemen and a low lot of camp-followers，put them on mules and other mounts so that with their arms and standards they looked like a troop of horse，and stationed them with flags flying behind a hill，with orders that，at a given signal when the fighting grew hotter，they should appear and show themselves to the enemy. This being done，as arranged，it so terrified the Gauls that they lost the day. There are two things，then，that a good general should do：first，he should see whether by employing some such novel device he can scare the enemy；and，secondly，he should be on the lookout so that，should the same trick be played on him by the enemy，he may discover it and nullify its effect.

It was thus that the King of India acted when Semiramis，noticing that the king had a good number of elephants，in the hope of intimidating him and showing him that she，too，had plenty of them，constructed a number of them out of the hides of buffaloes and cows and put them on camels which she sent ahead；but，the trick having been discovered by the king，her plan not only proved useless but turned out to her disadvantage. So，too，when the dictator Mamercus was at war with the Fidenates，to frighten the Roman army they ordered that in the heat of battle a number of troops should sally forth from Fidenae with torches on their lances in the hope that，distracted by the novelty of the thing，the Romans would break their ranks.

It should be noted here that，when such devices involve more truth than fiction，they can in that case be used on men with advantage，for if they have sufficient boldness，their weakness cannot be discovered so quickly. But when they involve more fiction than truth it is well either not to use them at all，or，if employed，to hold the performance some way off so that the fraud cannot be so quickly detected，as Gaius Sulpicius did with his muleteers. For if fraught with internal weakness，and they be near，they will soon be seen through，and will do you harm instead of good；as the elephants did to Semiramis and the torches to the Fidenates；for，though at the start they upset the army a little，yet，when the dictator came along and began to shout at the men，telling them not to be such cowards as to run away from the smoke like bees but to turn back and go for them，crying：‘Use the flames to destroy Fidenae since you have failed to pacify them with kindness’，the device proved of no avail to the Fidenates，who were left the losers of the battle.

That at the Head of an Army there should be One，not Several，Commanders，and that to have a Plurality is a Nuisance

When the Fidenates rebelled and put to the sword the colony the Romans had sent to Fidenae，to right the insult the Romans appointed four tribunes with consular power，of whom one was left to guard Rome，and the other three were sent against the Fidenates and the Veientes. Owing to the divided command and to the tribunes being at loggerheads one with the other，they returned discredited，though there had been no disaster. For the discredit they were responsible，but that there had been no disaster was due to the valour of the troops. Hence when the Romans saw what was wrong，they had recourse to the appointment of a dictator so that one man should be responsible for putting right the disorder that three had caused. This shows us the futility of having several persons in command of the same army or in charge of the defence of the same town. Nor can the case be put more clearly than it is by Titus Livy when he writes：‘The three tribunes with consular power afforded an illustration of how futile it is for many to share the imperium in a war，for each inclined to follow his own counsel，and since the others thought otherwise，they gave the enemy their chance．’

And though this example is sufficient to show the disorders that a plurality of commanders causes in a war，I propose to give two more，one modern and the other ancient，the better to establish this point．

In 1500，after the King of France，Louis XII，had retaken Milan，he sent his troops to Pisa to recover it for the Florentines．The commissaries，Giovambatista Ridolfi and Luca di Antonio degli Albizi，were in command．Since Giovambatista was a man with a reputation and had seen more service，Luca left the management of everything to him，but though he did not display his own ambition by opposing him，he displayed it by his silence，by his negligence and by criticizing everything，with the result that he helped the siege operations neither by action nor advice，but behaved like a man of no account．Later on，however，when something occurred which necessitated Giovambatista's returning to Florence，one finds everything quite different；for，when Luca was left in sole charge，he showed his worth alike by his courage，his industry and his sound sense，all of which characteristics had failed to show themselves so long as he had a colleague．

In confirmation of this remark of Titus Livy's I would cite another example：the expedition which the Romans sent against the Aequi under Quintius and his colleague，Agrippa．Agrippa，who wanted the whole conduct of the war to be undertaken by Quintius，says：‘In the administration of affairs of moment it is highly advisable that the supreme command should be in the hands of one man’．

This is just the opposite of what our republics and princes do today， for to improve the administration they now send to a place more than one commissioner and more than one head， and this leads to indescribable confusion. Indeed， were one to seek the causes of the disasters that have befallen Italian and French armies in our own times， it would be found that this is the most potent. In conclusion， then， one may be quite certain that it is better to entrust an expedition to one man of average prudence than to give to two men of outstanding ability the same authority.

Advice to generals in the field

Reasons why the French have been，and still are，looked upon in the Beginning of a Battle as more than Men，and afterwards as less than Women

The ardour of the Gaul who challenged any Roman on the banks of the river Anio to single combat，which led to a fight between him and Titus Manlius，reminds me of what Titus Livy several times says of the Gauls，namely，that in the beginning of a battle they are more than men，but in the fighting that follows they turn out worse than women. As to how this comes about，many think that nature has made them so，which is no doubt true，but it does not follow from this that the nature which makes them ardent at the start could not be so regulated by rules as to keep them ardent right up to the end.

In proof of this let me point out that armies are of three types. In the first there is both ardour and order. Now order promotes both ardour and virtù as it did in the case of the Romans；for，during the whole course of their history one finds that there was good order in their armies，which military discipline of long standing had introduced. In a welldisciplined army，no one should perform any action except in accordance with regulations. Hence in the Roman army – which，since it conquered the world，should be taken as a model by all other armies – we find that no one ate or slept or went wenching or performed any other action，military or domestic，without instructions from the consul. Armies which act otherwise are not true armies；and if they do anything of note they do it through ardour and impetuosity，not through valour. But when disciplined virtù uses its ardour in the right way and at the right time，no difficulties dismay an army or cause it to lose courage. For good discipline stimulates courage and ardour，in that it strengthens the hope of victory，which is never wanting so long as discipline remains.

The opposite of all this happens in those armies in which there is ardour but no discipline，as was the case with the Gauls，who in their fighting were wholly lacking in method；for if their first attack did not succeed，they faltered，since the ardour on which they relied was not sustained by disciplined valour，and there was nothing else on which they could rely when their ardour cooled. The Romans，on the other hand，made light of dangers since their discipline was good；and，since they did not despair of victory，they remained firm and dogged，and fought with the same courage and the same virtù at the end as at the start；nay，when stimulated by a fight，they always grew more ardent.

The third type of army is one in which there exists neither a natural ardour，nor yet discipline to supplement it；as is the case with Italian armies in our day，which are quite useless and never win unless they come across an army which happens for some reason to run away. There is no need to cite further instances，since every day they afford evidence of how utterly lacking they are in valour. So that，however，what Titus Livy says may make it plain to all how good soldiery should be made and how worthless soldiery are made，I propose to cite the speech which Papirius Cursor made when he wanted to reprove Fabius，his master of horse．What he said was：‘No one would have respect either for men or for the gods；they would obey neither the edicts of generals nor the auspices；soldiers without provisions，would wander about here and there alike in peaceful and in hostile territory；forgetful of their oath，they would discharge themselves from the army without authority and when it pleased them；they would leave the colours almost unguarded，and neither assemble nor dismiss at the word of command；they would fight by day or night whether the place were suitable or unsuitable，and with or without orders from the general；they would keep neither to their regiments nor to their ranks；but，like a band of robbers，were a blind and tumultuous，rather than a disciplined and dutiful，soldiery．’ And in this passage applied，it will at once be seen whether the soldiery of our day is blind and tumultuous or disciplined and dutiful，and how far it falls short of what we commonly call soldiery，and how far removed it is from being either ardent and disciplined，like the Romans，or just simply ardent，like the Gauls．

Whether Skirmishes are Necessary before a Battle，and how，if one decides to do without them，the Presence of Fresh Enemy Troops is to be discovered

It would appear that in human affairs，as we have remarked in other discourses，there is，in addition to others，this difficulty：that，when one wants to bring things to the pitch of perfection，one always finds that，bound up with what is good，there is some evil which is so easily brought about in doing good that it would seem to be impossible to have the one without the other．This is the case in everything that man does．And it is because of it that the good is with difficulty attained unless you are so aided by fortune that fortune itself eliminates this normal and natural inconvenience. What moves me to say this is the fight Manlius had with the Gauls, of which Titus Livy says: ‘This conflict was of great moment to the outcome of the whole war, for the army of the Gauls in trepidation deserted their camp and moved first into Tiburtine territory, and then into Campania’; for I hold, on the one hand, that a good general ought to avoid at all costs doing anything which, though in itself of small moment, can produce a bad effect on his army; because to engage in a battle in which all one's forces are not employed and thereby to risk one's whole fortune, is extremely rash, as I said above when I was talking about guarding passes.

On the other hand, I hold that when wise generals find they are up against a new enemy who has acquired a reputation, it is essential that, before engaging in a pitched battle, they let their troops find out by means of skirmishes what he is worth; so that, having acquired some knowledge of him and of how to deal with him, it may dispel the fears to which rumour and his standing had given rise. For a general to do this is of the utmost importance; for there is in this course a quasinecessity that constrains you to adopt it, since you can scarce fail to see that you are plainly exposing yourself to disaster if you engage the enemy without having first provided your troops with some little experiment whereby to rid them of that fear which the enemy's reputation had aroused in their minds.

Valerius Corvinus was in command of the armies which the Romans had dispatched to deal with the Samnites, new enemies, of whose fighting capacities the Romans had thus far had no experience in actual combat one with the other. Hence Titus Livy says that Valerius caused the Romans to engage in some skirmishes with the Samnites 'so that they might be afraid neither of the new war nor of the new enemy'. None the less, there is a very great danger that, if your soldiers get the worst of the skirmishing it will increase their fear and their cowardice, and so will produce the opposite effect to that you had in mind; i. e. you will have alarmed them, whereas you wanted to make them feel safe. So that this is just one of those things in which evil is so closely associated with good, and so bound up are they one with the other, that it may easily happen that he who thinks he will get one, gets the other.

In regard, then, to this, I maintain that a good general should take every precaution to prevent the occurrence of any untoward event likely to diminish the courage of his army. But to begin by losing is just the thing that is likely to diminish its courage. Hence he should act cautiously in regard to skirmishes, and should not permit them unless he has a great advantage and he feels sure he will be victorious. Nor should he attempt to guard passes where he cannot bring the whole of his army into operation. Nor yet should he defend towns unless their loss will inevitably entail his ruin. And, if he does defend them, he should arrange for his army to cooperate with the garrison in repelling an attack, so that in dealing with the siege all his forces may be brought into play; otherwise he should leave the town undefended. For in losing what may be abandoned, provided his army is still intact, he will not in such a case lose either his reputation in the war or the hope of winning it; but when you lose what you have planned to defend and everybody knows that you were defending it, the loss is serious and may be disastrous; in fact, you may, like the Gauls, on account of something of small moment have lost the war.

Philip of Macedon, the father of Perseus, a soldier of high standing in his day, when attacked by the Romans, abandoned and laid waste a large part of his country which he judged it impossible to defend, for, being a prudent man, he thought it more disastrous to lose his reputation by failing to defend what he had set out to defend, than to let it fall into the hands of the enemy as if it were a thing he did not mind losing. When after the defeat at Cannae the affairs of the Romans were in a bad way, they declined to help many of their dependents and subjects, bidding them defend themselves as best they could. Such courses are much better than taking up the defence of allies and then letting them down, for in that case one loses both one's allies and one's forces; but in the other the allies alone are lost.

But to return to skirmishing, I maintain that if a general is absolutely compelled to have recourse to skirmishes because his enemy is a new one, he should only undertake them when he has so considerable an advantage that there will be no danger of his losing thereby. He should, otherwise – and it is the better course – do as Marius did when he went to fight the Cimbri, a fierce tribe which had come to prey upon Italy and which he was approaching with considerable trepidation owing to their ferocity and their numbers, and because they had already defeated a Roman army. Judging it necessary before engaging in battle to do something which would dispel the panic into which fear of the enemy had thrown his army, like a prudent general, he more than once stationed his army in a position near to which the army of the Cimbri must pass, with the intention that from behind the fortifications of their camp, his troops should look at and accustom their eyes to the enemy's appearance，so that when they saw what a disorderly crowd they were，encumbered with baggage，their arms useless and some without arms，they might be reassured and become eager for the fight．This course so wisely adopted by Marius，others should diligently imitate，so as not to incur the dangers I have described above，and not to have to act as the Gauls did，‘who，in trepidation on account of an event of small moment，moved first into Tiburtine territory and then into Campania’.

Since we have in this discourse mentioned Valerius Corvinus，I propose in the next chapter to use his speech to show how a general should behave．

What ought to be done by a General so that his Army may have Confidence in him

Valerius Corvinus，as we have said above，had gone with the army to fight the Samnites，enemies new to the Roman people；so，to give his troops assurance and some acquaintance with the foe，he caused them to make a few skirmishes，and，since this was not enough，he decided to address them before the battle，and to point out as forcefully as he could how little esteem they should have for such a foe，appealing in his speech alike to the valour of his soldiers and to his own．From the speech which Livy makes him deliver，one may learn how a general should act if his army is to have confidence in him．What he says is this：‘Look at the man under whose leadership and auspices you are going to fight！ Ask yourselves whether the person to whom you are about to listen is but a brilliant orator，valiant in words，but inexperienced in military matters，or whether he knows how to handle weapons，to advance before the colours，and to plunge right into the thick of the fight! I want you, my good men, to go by my actions, not my words, and to look to me not merely for orders, but for an example, for with this my right hand I have as a consul thrice won the highest praise.' Anyone may learn from a speech such as this, if he ponder it well, how to act if he wants to occupy the rank of a general; and he who acts otherwise will find that his rank, whether it be by luck or by ambition that he has attained it, in due course will destroy, instead of making, his reputation; for it is not titles that make men illustrious, but men who make titles illustrious.

One ought again in what was said at the outset of this discourse to observe that if great generals have used extraordinary means to strengthen the courage of a veteran army when confronted with an enemy with which it is unfamiliar, much greater industry will have to be used when in command of a new army which has never been in sight of the enemy. For if an enemy with which an old army is unfamiliar fills it with terror, so much the more must this be the case when a new army faces any enemy at all. Actually, however, one finds that all these difficulties are usually overcome by good generals with consummate prudence, as they were overcome by Gracchus the Roman, and by Epaminondas the Theban, of whom we have spoken on other occasions, for with new armies they defeated veteran armies with plenty of experience.

The methods they adopted were to exercise the troops for several months and to accustom them to obey orders by means of sham fights, after which they had so much confidence in them that they took them to a real fight. No military man, therefore, should be diffident as to his ability to form a good army，when there is no lack of men；so that the prince who has an abundance of men，but lacks soldiers，should bewail not the cowardice of his men，but merely his own laziness and folly．

That a General ought to be acquainted with the Lie of the Land

Among other things essential to the commander of an army is a knowledge of terrains and of countries，for，unless he has this knowledge，alike general and detailed，no army commander can perform any operation well． Wherefore，just as all sciences demand practice if we desire to attain perfection in them，so this is one that calls for a good deal of practice．And this practice and this detailed knowledge are acquired more by hunting，than by any other exercises．Hence ancient writers tell us that the heroes who ruled the world in their day were brought up in the forests and on the chase． For the chase not only provides one with the requisite knowledge，but teaches one a host of other things that are essential in warfare．Thus， Xenophon in his Life of Cyrus tells us how，when he was about to attack the king of Armenia，in appointing tasks he reminded those about him that it would be just like one of those hunting expeditions on which they had often accompanied him；and to those whom he sent to form an ambush in the mountains he said that they would be like men going to lay snares on the ridges；and to those who had to scour the countryside that they would be like men who went to rouse a wild beast from its lair so as，after hunting it，to drive it into the nets．

This I mention to show that Xenophon supports the view that a hunting expedition is very like a war，and that，consequently，great men look on this sport as honourable and necessary．Nor yet can a knowledge of the country be acquired in a more convenient way than by hunting，for the chase gives those who engage in it an exact knowledge of the lie of the land in which the sport takes place．It also enables one who has familiarized himself with one district，to grasp with ease the details of any new region．For all countries and all their parts have about them a certain uniformity，so that from the knowledge of one it is easy to pass to the knowledge of another；whereas he who has not acquired a good experience of any one can with difficulty acquire a knowledge of another，and cannot acquire it at all unless he is there for a long time．A person who has had practice，for instance，will see at a glance how far this plain extends，to what height that mountain rises，where this valley goes，and everything else of this kind，for of it all he has already acquired a sound knowledge．

That this is so Titus Livy shows us in the case of Publius Decius．When he was a tribune in charge of troops belonging to the army which the consul，Cornelius，commanded in the Samnite war，and the consul had led the Roman army into a valley where it could have been shut in by the Samnites，Decius saw the great danger to which it was exposed，and said to the consul：‘Do you see，Aulus Cornelius，that peak above the enemy？ It is in that height that lies our hope of safety if we take it quickly，the Samnites having stupidly neglected it．’ Also，before telling us what Decius said，Titus Livy says：‘Publius Decius，a military tribune，observed a hill which rose above a wooded ravine and threatened the enemy's position，difficult of access to an army in marching order，but not difficult to light troops．’ Whereupon he was sent there by the consul with three thousand soldiers and so saved the Roman army．Then，when night came on，and he was thinking of departing so as to save both himself and his troops，Livy makes him use these words：‘Come with me while the light holds，and let us reconnoitre the places in which the enemy has placed guards to see whether there is any way out’. All of which he carried out clad in a small military cloak，lest the enemy should notice an officer wandering about.

This evidence all goes to show how useful and necessary it is for a general to know the nature of the country；for，if Decius had not been a prudent man and acquired such knowledge，he would not have been able to see how useful it was to the Roman army to take that hill，nor would he have been able to tell from a distance whether the hill was accessible or not；nor yet，when he had been sent to the top of it and wanted to get back to the consul，would he，with the enemy on all sides，have been able to spot from a distance the way to go and the places which the enemy was guarding. One is bound then to infer that Decius had such expert knowledge，and that it was this that enabled him to save the Roman army by taking the hill，and afterwards when he was surrounded there，to discover a route whereby both he and the troops that were with him could reach safety.

Salus populi, suprema lex

That it is a Glorious Thing to use Fraud in the Conduct of a War

Although to use fraud in any action is detestable，yet in the conduct of a war it is praise worthy and glorious．And a man who uses fraud to overcome his enemy is praised，just as much as is he who overcomes his enemy by force．This is seen in the judgement pronounced on great men by biographers，who praise Hannibal and others well known for this kind of behaviour．Of this one comes across so many examples that I shall not cite any，I will say but this，I do not mean that a fraud which involves breaking your word or the contracts you have made is glorious；for，although on occasion it may win for you a state or a kingdom，as has been said in an earlier discourse，it will never bring you glory．I am speaking of fraud used in dealing with an enemy who has not kept faith with you，i．e．of the fraud which is involved in the conduct of a war；such as that which Hannibal used when at the Perugian lake he pretended flight in order to entrap the consul and the Roman army，and when，to escape from the hands of Fabius Maximus he lit up the horns of a herd of cattle．

To this class of fraud belongs that which was practised by Pontius，the general of the Samnites，that he might entrap the Roman army in the Caudine Forks．Having placed his army up against the mountains，he sent some of his soldiers，dressed as shepherds，with a flock of sheep across the plain．They were captured by the Romans，who asked where the Samnite army was．All agreed in saying what Pontius had told them to say，i．e． that it had gone to lay siege to Nocera. The credence given by the consuls to this report led to their being caught between the Caudine cliffs，where，when they got there，they were at once hemmed in by the Samnites. This victory，which Pontius gained by fraud，would have redounded greatly to his credit had he followed his father's advice，which was that he should either let the Romans go scotfree or should slaughter them all，and that he should not take the middle course which ‘neither makes you friends，nor removes your enemies’；and this middle course has always been harmful in affairs of state，as I have already pointed out in another discourse.

That one's Country should be defended whether it entail Ignominy or Glory，and that it is Good to defend it in any Way Whatsoever

The consul and the Roman army were surrounded by the Samnites，as has just been said. The Samnites had imposed on the Romans ignominious conditions. They were to pass under the yoke and to be sent back to Rome without their arms and equipment. At this the consuls，being astonished and the whole army being in despair，Lucius Lentulus，the Roman legate，told them that it did not seem to him that they should reject any alternative in order to save their country；for，since the survival of Rome depended on the survival of this very army，it should be saved in any way that offered；and that it is good to defend one's country in whatever way it be done，whether it entail ignominy or glory；for，if this army was saved，Rome might in time wipe out the ignominy；but that，if it were not saved and even if it should die gloriously，Rome and its freedom would be lost. So Lentulus's advice was followed.

This counsel merits the attention of，and ought to be observed by， every citizen who has to give advice to his country. For when the safety of one's country wholly depends on the decision to be taken, no attention should be paid either to justice or injustice, to kindness or cruelty, or to its being praiseworthy or ignominious. On the contrary, every other consideration being set aside, that alternative should be wholeheartedly adopted which will save the life and preserve the freedom of one's country.

This is the course the French adopt – both in what they say and what they do – in order to defend the majesty of their king or the power of their kingdom; for no voice is heard with greater impatience than one that should say: 'Such an alternative it would be ignominious for the king to adopt.' No decision the king makes can be shameful, they say, whether it leads to good or to adverse fortune, for, whether he wins or loses is entirely his business, they claim.

That Promises extracted by Force ought not to be kept

When with an army that had been stripped of its arms and had suffered such ignominious treatment, the consuls returned to Rome, the first person to speak in the senate said that the peace made at Caudium ought not to be observed. This was the consul, Spurius Postumius. He said that the Roman people were not bound by it, but that he and the others who had promised peace were bound by it. Hence, if the people wanted to be free from any obligation, they should send him and all those who had made the promise back to the Samnites as prisoners. He defended this view with such tenacity that the senate yielded, sent him and the others as prisoners to Samnium, and protested to the Samnites that the peace was invalid. Fortune favoured Postumius in this case, for the Samnites did not keep him，and on his return to Rome he gained more glory in the eyes of the Romans by having surrendered than Pontius gained in the eyes of the Samnites by his victory．

Two things should here be noted．One is that glory can be gained by either kind of action，for it is acquired by victory in the ordinary course，and in defeat it is acquired if you can either show that the defeat was not your fault，or can at once perform some virtuous action which cancels it out．The other is that it is not shameful to fail to keep a promise which you have been forced to make．Forced promises affecting the public will，in fact，always be broken when the force in question is removed，and this without shame to those who break them．Everywhere in history one comes across examples of this of one kind or another，and everyone is aware that it happens also at the present day．And not only are forced promises not observed by princes when the force in question is no longer operative；but we also find that all other promises are broken when the reasons which caused such promises to be made no longer hold good．Whether this is praiseworthy or not，and whether a prince should or should not behave in this way，we have discussed at length in our treatise on The Prince．Here，therefore，nothing will be said about it．

ON POWER

论权力

［英］威廉·莎士比亚　著

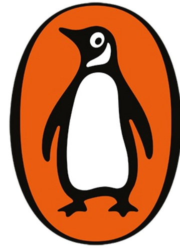
朱生豪　方平　等　译

中国出版集团
中译出版社

论权力

（英）威廉·莎士比亚/著

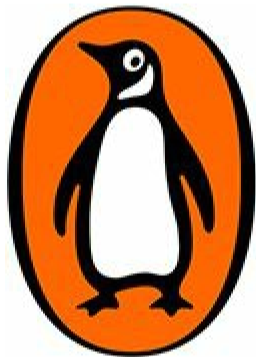
朱生豪等/译



企鹅图书 | PENGUIN BOOKS

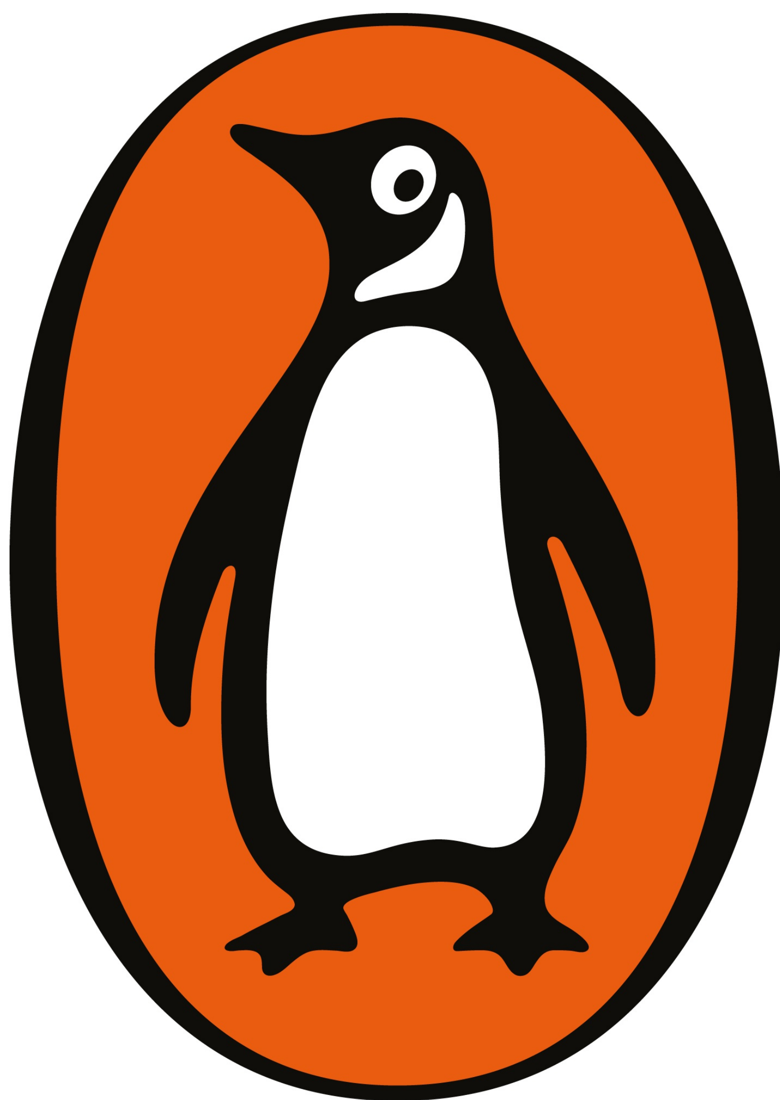
UK | USA | Canada | Ireland | Australia
New Zealand | India | South Africa | North Asia

Penguin Books is part of the Penguin Random House group of companies whose addresses can be found at:
global.penguinrandomhouse.com.



Penguin Books Ltd, Registered Offices: 80 Strand, London WC2R 0RL, England
www.penguin.com
This selection first published in Penguin Books 2009

企鹅兰登电子书 | PENGUIN RANDOM HOUSE EBOOKS



目录

“伟大的思想”中文版序

企鹅“伟大的思想”系列丛书自2004年开始陆续面世，在英国、美国和德国均有出版。在英国出版品种最多，已付梓八十种，尚有二十种计划出版。该丛书在全球众多读者间，尤其是学生当中，普及了哲学和政治学，销量已远超二百万册。中文版“伟大的思想”的推出，是该系列的又一延续和发展，令人欢欣鼓舞。

推出这套丛书旨在让读者再次与一些伟大的非小说类经典著作面对面地交流。长久以来，此类书籍的出版都建立在这样一个假设之上——此类著作供学生课堂学习之用，因此需辅以导读、详尽的注释及参考书目等。此类版本无疑十分有用，但我想，如果某一版本能够重建托马斯·潘恩的《常识》或约翰·罗斯金的《艺术与人生》初版时的环境，为读者与作者营造更为亲密无间的氛围，使读者除了原作者及其自身的思考外没有其他参照，也许会更有吸引力。

但是，这一做法亦存在严重缺陷：每位作者的表述难免有难解或不可解之处，一些重要的背景知识或许也有所缺失。例如，读者对亨利·梭罗创作时的情形毫无头绪，也不了解该书的反响及影响。不过，这样做的优点也显而易见，最为显著的便是作者的初衷又一次受到重视——托马斯·潘恩的愤怒、查尔斯·达尔文的灵光、塞内加的隐逸。他们给许多国家的众多读者带来的生活影响难以估量，有的影响甚至长达几个世纪，几乎没有什么比阅读这些作家更令人拍案叫绝的了。倘若没有亚当·斯密或阿图尔·叔本华，将无法想象我们今天的世界。这些小书创作年代久远，但其中的话语彻底改变了我们的政治学、经济学、精神世界、社会规划和宗教信仰。

“伟大的思想”系列一直求新求变，地域不同，收录的作家亦不同。一些作家在中国或美国更受欢迎，而英国版“伟大的思想”收录的一些作家在其他国家和地区则鲜有人知。称其为“伟大的思想”，我们亦是慎之又慎。这些思想之所以伟大，在于其影响深远，但这并不意味着这些思想都是“好”思想，实际上一些书或可列入“坏”思想之列。丛书中收录的很多作家受到同样收录于该丛书的其他作家的巨大影响，例如，马塞尔·普鲁斯特承认受约翰·罗斯金影响很大，米歇尔·德·蒙田也承认深受塞内加影响。但也有些作家彼此憎恶，若发现彼此都被收录于同一丛书，一定会深感苦恼。至于他们思想的或“好”或“坏”，读者可自行判明。我们衷心希望，您可以享受阅读这些著作的乐趣。

“伟大的思想”出版者

西蒙·温德尔

导读

威廉·莎士比亚，这个从文艺复兴时期施施然走来的英国人，创造了文学世界的一个奇观：他的译本遍布全球，研究他的论著浩如烟海，他同时得到文学巨匠和普通读者的一致倾慕，他的作品完美地诠释了“经典”和“畅销”，他是普世的，是属于千秋万代的。大仲马曾经说：“除了上帝，莎士比亚创造的最多。”木心则更进一步，直言：“威廉，你是仅次于上帝的人。”

这样的评论，本来不可轻信，可是面对莎翁的一部部传世精品，我们只能哑口无言，只好看一遍，再看一遍，一任由他牵引，听他对世相人心、权力欲望，抽筋刮骨似的鞭辟，还有，感受一个文学家对天下一切的可悲可怜难以自禁的同情。莎士比亚不仅有一双天赋的慧眼，一份天纵的才情，写善恶两极时，痛快淋漓，直见性命，更有一颗金心，句句诚恳，对人事自有一份体谅。

对一部《哈姆雷特》的论述，也许已经可以撑起一座图书馆。但是莎士比亚之所以是莎士比亚，当还有另外一层伟大——在这本中英文都只有百十页的小书《论权力》里，没有曲折的情节，摘选莎作中有关权力的诸片段，处处易懂，但也处处都是警句——想必能做到随意抽取片言片语，都闪烁着金句光芒的，莎翁之作，仅次于《圣经》。

对于高高在上的君王，莎翁有刻骨铭心的嘲讽，但淳朴、实在，他嘲笑他们煊赫的排场和所得的奉承，在《李尔王》里对虚荣国王不留情面；他也体恤，借着亨利五世之口直言：“随着‘伟大’而来的，是多么难堪的地位啊……做了国王，多少民间所享受的人生乐趣他就得放弃”；同时，他还清醒，国王“除了地位、名衔、外表引起人们的敬畏与惶惑

外——你还有什么呢”……不是李尔王执迷不悟，也不是亨利五世勤恳清明，而是莎士比亚，实在透彻。

透彻的莎翁自然也不会放过对庶人的针刺。他在《奥赛罗》里写出两种奴才相：有一种是天生的奴才，奴颜卑膝，为了粮草出卖一生；另有一种，则表面鞠躬如也，骨子里实利成癖。这样的感喟，并非出自知识，它来自一个敏感的文豪敏感的处世经验。这样的奴才代代都不稀缺，所以说，莎翁的写作超越了时代，因为他退得开，所以他看得透。人间百态，人性深层，写到这样悠游裕如的地步，他因此永恒。

而莎士比亚的金心，在这本书中最动人的体现，首推最后“恋人间的权力”部分的选段。当鲍西亚对着巴萨尼奥倾诉肺腑，慨言为妻的忠诚时，当罗密欧说“朱丽叶所在的地方就是天堂”，为爱陨殉时，我们有幸，读到了这世上最美的情书。后来人再写年少的爱恋，难以超越了。莎士比亚，他是世间所有懂爱之人的知音。

莎翁没有上过大学，可他的语言之优美、词汇之丰饶，令人感佩，这或许恰巧印证了那句“虎豹出自山野”吧。在无数的莎翁著作中译本中，朱生豪先生的译笔尤健，既雅且达，颇现原著精髓。作为读者，我们只有以阅读来贡献敬仰。

假若没有《哈姆雷特》和《罗密欧与朱丽叶》，文学世界将少了怎样两颗明珠？假若没有莎翁，世界文学史有没有塌下一角的感觉？实在不敢想象。因此只好打开书，再读一遍莎翁的金句，感叹他那颗金子般的心。

乔敏

政府权力

哈姆莱特　第三幕　第三场

罗森格兰兹　每一个庶民都知道怎样远祸全身，一个身负天下重寄的人，尤其应该时刻不懈地防备危害的袭击。君主的薨逝不仅是个人的死亡，它像一个旋涡一样，凡是在它近旁的东西，都要被它卷去同归于尽；又像一个矗立在最高山峰上的巨轮，它的轮辐上连附着无数的小物件，当巨轮轰然崩裂的时候，那些小物件也跟着它一齐粉碎。国王的一声叹息，总是伴随着全国的呻吟。

（朱生豪　译）

理查二世　第三幕　第二场

理查王　不必问他在什么地方。谁也不准讲那些安慰的话儿，让我们谈谈坟墓、蛆虫和墓碑吧；让我们以泥土为纸，用我们淋雨的眼睛在大地的胸膛上写下我们的悲哀；让我们找几个遗产管理人，商议我们的遗嘱——可是这也不必，因为我们除了把一具尸骸还给大地以外，还有什么可以遗留给后人的？我们的土地、我们的生命，一切都是波林勃洛克的，只有死亡和掩埋我们骨骼的一黄土，才可以算是属于我们自己的。为了上帝的缘故，让我们坐在地上，讲些关于国王们的死亡的悲惨的故事。有些是被人废黜的，有些是在战场上阵亡的，有些是被他们所废黜的鬼魂们缠绕着的，有些是被他们的妻子所毒毙的，有些是在睡梦中被杀的，全都不得善终。因为在那围绕着一个凡世的国王头上的这顶空洞的王冠之内，正是死神驻节的宫廷，这妖魔高坐在里边，揶揄他的尊严，讪笑他的荣华，给他一段短短的呼吸的时间，让他在舞台上露一

露脸，使他君临万民，受尽众人的敬畏，一眨眼就可以致人于死命，把妄自尊大的思想灌注他的心头，仿佛这包藏着我们生命的血肉的皮囊，是一堵不可摧毁的铜墙铁壁一样。当他这样志得意满的时候，却不知道他的末日已经临近眼前，一枚小小的针就可以刺破他的壁垒，于是再会吧，国王！戴上你们的帽子，不要把严肃的敬礼施在一个凡人的身上；丢开传统的礼貌，仪式的虚文，因为你们一向都把我认错了；像你们一样，我也靠着面包生活，我也有欲望，我也懂得悲哀，我也需要朋友。既然如此，你们怎么能对我说我是一个国王呢？

（朱生豪　译）

雅典的泰门　第四幕　第三场

艾帕曼特斯　要是你披上这身寒酸的衣服，目的只是要惩罚你自己的骄傲，那么很好；可是你是出于勉强的，倘然你不再是一个乞丐，你就会再去做一个廷臣。自愿的贫困胜如不定的浮华；穷奢极欲的人要是贪得无厌，比最贫困而知足的人更要不幸得多了。你既然这样困苦，应该但求速死。

泰门　我不会听了一个比我更倒霉的人的话而去寻死。你是一个奴隶，命运的温柔的手臂从来不曾拥抱过你。要是你从呱呱坠地的时候就跟我们一样，可以随心所欲地享受这浮世的欢娱，你一定已经沉溺在无边的放荡里，把你的青春消磨在左拥右抱之中，除了一味追求眼前的淫乐以外，再也不会知道那些冷冰冰的人伦道德。可是我，整个的世界曾经是我的糖果的作坊。人们的嘴、舌头、眼睛和心都争先恐后地等候着我的使唤，虽然我没有这许多工作可以给他们做。无数的人像叶子依附橡树一般依附着我，可是经不起冬风的一吹，他们便落下枝头，剩下我赤裸裸的枯干，去忍受风雨的摧残：像我这样享福过来的人，一旦挨受这种逆运，那才是一件难堪的重荷。你却是从开始时候就尝到人世的痛

苦的，经验已经把你磨炼得十分坚强了。你为什么厌恶人类呢？他们从来没有向你献过媚。你曾经有些什么东西给人家呢？倘然你要咒骂，你就得咒骂你的父亲，那个穷酸的叫花，他因为一时起兴，和一个女乞婆养下了你这世袭的穷光蛋来。滚开！快去！倘然你不是生下来就是世间最下贱的人，你就是个奸佞的小人。

（朱生豪　译）

亨利五世　第一幕　第二场

坎特伯雷　所以上天把人体当作一个政体，赋予了性质各不同的机能；不同的机能使一个个欲求不断地见之于行动；而每一个行动，就像系附着同一种目标或者是同一种对象，也必然带来了整体的服从。蜜蜂就是这样发挥它们的效能，这种昆虫，凭着自己天性中的规律把秩序的法则教给了万民之邦。它们有一个王，有各司其职的官员。有些像地方官，在国内惩戒过失；也有些像闯码头、走外洋去办货的商人；还有些像兵丁，用尾刺做武器，在那夏季的丝绒似的花蕊中间大肆劫掠，然后欢欣鼓舞，把战利品往回搬运——运到大王升座的宝帐中。那日理万机的蜂王，可正在视察那哼着歌儿的泥水匠把金黄的屋顶给盖上。一般安分的老百姓又正在把蜂蜜酿造；可怜那脚夫们，肩上扛着重担，硬是要把小门挨进；只听见冷冷的一声“哼”，原来那瞪着眼儿的法官把那无所事事、呵欠连连的雄蜂发付给了脸色铁青的刽子手。我的结论是：许许多多的事情只要环绕着一个共同的目的，不妨分头进行，就像从各个不同的角度发出的箭，射向一个目标，东西南北的道路都通向一个城镇，千百条淡水的河流汇聚在一片咸海里，许多线条结合在日晷的中心点——就像这样，千头万绪的事业一旦动手，共同完成一个使命，什么都顺利进行，不会有一点儿差错。所以，到法兰西去吧，我的君主！把你那“快乐的英格兰”一分为四，这四分之一就给你带到法兰西去大显威

风，叫高卢族人人发抖。而我们，以三倍的力量在国内防守，要是再不能扎紧藩篱，不许野狗钻进来，那么活该我们倒霉，叫恶狗扑身，丧尽了咱们民族的勇敢与政治上机警的英名。

（方平　译）

科利奥兰纳斯　第二幕　第二场

吏乙　老实说一句，有许多大人物尽管口头上拼命讨好平民，心里却一点不喜欢他们；也有许多人喜欢了一个人，却不知道为什么要喜欢他，他们既然会莫名其妙地爱他，也就会莫名其妙地恨他。所以科利奥兰纳斯对于他们的爱憎漠不关心，正可以表示他真正了解他们的性格；他也由他们去看得一清二楚，满不在意。

吏甲　要是他对于他们的爱憎漠不关心，那么他既不会有心讨好他们，也不会故意冒犯他们。可是他对他们寻衅的心理，却比他们对他仇恨的心理更强，凡是可以表明他是他们的敌人的事实，他总是不加讳饰地表现出来。像这样有意装出敌视人民的态度，比起他所唾弃的那种取媚人民以求得他们欢心的手段来，同样是不足为法的。

吏乙　他替国家立下了极大的功劳，他的跻登高位，绝不像那些毫无寸尺之功、单凭着向人民曲意逢迎的手段滥邀爵禄的人们那样容易。他的荣誉彪炳在他们的眼前，他的功业铭刻在他们的心底，他们要是不作一声，否认这一切，那就是忘恩负义；要是颠倒是非，混淆黑白，那就是恶意中伤。

吏甲　别讲他了，他是一个可尊敬的人。

（朱生豪　译）

亨利五世　第四幕　第二场

亨利王　要国王负责！那不妨把我们的生命、灵魂，把我们的债务、我们的操心的妻子、我们的孩子以及我们的罪恶，全都放在国王头上吧！他得一股脑儿担当下来。随着“伟大”而来的，是多么难堪的地位啊！听凭每个傻瓜来议论他——他们想到、感觉到的，只是个人的苦楚！做了国王，多少民间所享受的人生乐趣他就得放弃！而人君所享有的，有什么是平民百姓所享受不到的——只除了排场，只除了那众人前的排场？你又算是什么呢——你偶像似的排场？你比崇拜者忍受着更大的忧患，又是什么神明？你收到多少租金，又带来了多少进账？啊，排场，让我看一看你的价值是多少吧！你凭什么法宝叫人这样崇拜？除了地位、名衔、外表引起人们的敬畏与惶恐外，你还有些什么呢？你叫人惶恐，为什么反而不及那帮诚惶诚恐的人来得快乐呢？你天天喝下肚去的，除了有毒的谄媚代替了纯洁的尊敬外，还有什么呢？啊，伟大的“伟大”呀，且等你病倒了，吩咐你那套排场来给你治病吧！你可认为那沸烫的发烧，会因为一大堆一味奉承的字眼而退去吗？凭着那打躬作揖，病痛就会霍然而愈吗？当你命令乞丐向你双膝跪下的时候，你能同时命令他把康健献给你吗？不，你妄自尊大的幻梦啊，你这样善于戏弄帝王的安眠。我这一个国王早已看破了你。我明白，无论帝王加冕的圣油、权杖和那金球，也无论那剑、那御杖、那皇冠、那金线织成和珍珠镶嵌的王袍、那加在帝号前头的长长一连串荣衔；无论是他高踞的王位，或者是那煊赫尊荣，像声势浩大的潮浪泛滥了整个陆岸——不，这一切辉煌无比的排场，也不能让你睡在君王的床上，就像一个卑贱的奴隶那样睡得香甜。一个奴隶，塞饱了肚子，空着脑子，爬上床去——干了一天辛苦活儿，就再看不见那阴森森的、从地狱里产生的黑夜。他倒像是伺候太阳神的一个小厮，从日出到日落，只是在阳光里挥汗，到了晚上，就在乐园里睡个通宵。第二天天一亮，又一骨碌起身，赶着替太阳神把骏马套上了车。年年月月，他就干着这营生，直到进入了坟墓。

像这样，一个奴隶，欠缺的就只是煊赫的排场，要不然，他日出而作，日落而息，远远地胜过了做一个皇帝。他浑浑噩噩、安安稳稳地过着太平日子，全没想到做人君的为了维护这太平世界，对着孤灯，操着怎样一片心。他宵旰勤劳，到头来却是那村夫最受用。

（方平　译）

一报还一报　第一幕　第一场

公爵　关于政治方面的种种机宜，我不必多向你絮说，因为我知道你在这方面的经验阅历，胜过我所能给你的任何指示。对于地方上人民的习性，以及布政施教的宪章、信赏必罚的律法，你也都了如指掌，比得上任何博学练达之士，所以我尽可信任你的才能，让你自己去适宜应付。我给你这一道诏书，愿你依此而行。（以诏书授爱斯卡勒斯）来人，去唤安哲鲁过来。（一侍从下）你看，他这人能不能代理我的责任？因为我在再三考虑之下，已经决定当我出巡的时候，叫他摄理政务；他可以充分享受众人的畏惧爱敬，全权处置一切的事情。你以为怎样？

爱斯卡勒斯　在维也纳地方，要是有人值得受这样隆重的眷宠恩荣，那就是安哲鲁大人了。

公爵　他来了。（安哲鲁上。）

安哲鲁　听见殿下的召唤，小臣特来恭听谕令。

公爵　安哲鲁，在你的生命中有一种与众不同的地方，使人家一眼便知道你全部的为人。你自己和你所有的一切，倘不拿出来贡献于人世，仅仅一个人独善其身，那实在是一种浪费。上天生下我们，是要把我们当作火炬，不是照亮自己，而是普照世界。因为我们的德行倘不能

推及他人，那就等于没有一样。一个人有了才华智慧，必须使它产生有益的结果。造物是一个工于算计的女神，她所给予世人的每一分才智，都要受赐的人知恩感激，加倍报答。可是我虽然这样对你说，也许我倒是更应该受你教益的，所以请你收下这道诏书吧，安哲鲁。（以诏书授安哲鲁）当我不在的时候，你就是我的全权代表，你的片言一念，可以决定维也纳人民的生死，年高的爱斯卡勒斯虽然先受到我的嘱托，他却是你的辅佐。

（朱生豪　译）

理查二世　第五幕　第五场

理查王　我正在研究怎样可以把我所栖身的这座牢狱和整个的世界两相比较，可是因为这世上充满了人类，这儿除了我一身之外，没有其他的生物，所以它们是比较不起来的。虽然这样说，我还要仔细思考一下。我要证明我的头脑是我心灵的妻子，我的心灵是我思想的父亲；它们两个产下了一代生生不息的思想，这些思想充斥在这小小的世界之上，正像世上的人们一般互相倾轧，因为没有一个思想是满足的。比较好的那些思想，例如关于宗教方面的思想，却和怀疑互相间杂，往往援用经文的本身攻击经文。譬如说，“来吧，小孩子们，”可是接着又这么说，“到天国去是像骆驼穿过针孔一般艰难的。”野心勃勃的思想总在计划不可能的奇迹，凭着这些脆弱无力的指爪，怎样从这冷酷的世界的坚硬的肋骨、我的凹凸不平的囚墙上，抓破一条出路。可是因为它们没有这样的能力，所以只能在它们自己的盛气之中死去。安分自足的思想却用这样的话安慰自己：它们并不是命运的最初的奴隶，不会是它的最后的奴隶；正像愚蠢的乞丐套上了枷，自以为许多人都在他以前套过枷，在他以后，也还有别的人要站在他现在所站的地方，用这样的思想掩饰他们的羞辱一样。凭着这一种念头，它们获得了精神上的宽裕，假借过

去的人们同样的遭际来背负它们不幸的灾祸。这样我一个人扮演着许多不同的角色，没有一个能够满足他自己的命运：有时我是国王；叛逆的奸谋使我希望我是一个乞丐，于是我就变成了乞丐；可是压人的穷困劝诱我还不如做一个国王，于是我又变成了国王；一会儿忽然想到我的王位已经被波林勃洛克所推翻，那时候我就立刻化为乌有；可是无论我是什么人，无论是我还是别人，只要是一个人，在他没有彻底化为乌有以前，是什么也不能使他感到满足的。

（朱生豪　译）

雅典的泰门　第一幕　第一场

诗人　您瞧这一大群蝇营蚁附的宾客。在我的拙作中间，我勾画出了一个受尽世俗爱宠的人。可是我并不单单着力作个人的描写，我让我的恣肆的笔锋在无数的模型之间活动，不带一丝恶意，只是像凌空的鹰隼一样，一往直前，不留下一丝痕迹。

画师　您的意思我有点不大懂得。

诗人　我可以解释给您听。您瞧各种不同地位不同性情的人，无论是轻浮油滑的，或是严肃庄重的，都愿意为泰门大爷效劳服役。他的巨大的财产，再加上他的善良和蔼的天性，征服了各种不同的人，使他们乐于向他输诚致敬。从那些脸上反映出主人的喜怒的谄媚者起，直到憎恨自己的艾帕曼特斯，一个个在他的面前屈膝，只要泰门点点头，就可以使他们满载而归。

画师　我曾经看见他跟艾帕曼特斯在一起谈话。

诗人　先生，我假定命运的女神端坐在一座巍峨而幽美的山上，在那山麓下面，有无数智愚贤不肖的人劳心劳力，追求世间的名利，他们

的眼睛都一致注视着这位主宰一切的女神。我把其中一个人代表泰门，命运女神用她象牙一样洁白的手招引他到她的身边，他是她眼前的恩宠，他的敌人也一齐变成了他的奴仆。

画师　果然是很巧妙的设想。我想这一个宝座、这一位命运女神和这一座山，在这山下的许多人中间只有一个人得到女神的招手，这个人正弓着身子向峻峭的山崖爬去，攀登到幸福的顶端，很可以表现出我们这儿的情形。

诗人　不，先生，听我说下去。那些在不久以前还和他同样地位的人，也有一些本来胜过他的人，现在都跟在他后面亦步亦趋。他的接待室里挤满了关心他的起居的人，他的耳朵中充满了一片有如向神圣祷告那样的低语，连他的马镫也被奉为神圣，他们从他那里呼吸到自由的空气。

画师　好，那便怎么样呢？

诗人　当命运突然改变了心肠，把她的宠儿一脚踢下山坡的时候，那些攀龙附凤之徒，本来跟在他后面匍匐膝行的，这时候便会冷眼看他跌落，没有一个人做他患难中的同伴。

（朱生豪　译）

亨利四世上篇　第一幕　第二场

福斯塔夫　呃，我说，乖乖好孩子，等你做了国王以后，不要让我们这些夜间的绅士们被人称为掠夺白昼的佳丽的窃贼。让我们成为狄安娜的猎户、月亮的嬖宠，让人家说，我们都是很有节制的人，因为正像海水一般，我们受着我们高贵纯洁的女王月亮的节制，我们是在她的许可之下偷窃的。

亲王　你说得好，一点不错，因为我们这些月亮的信徒们既然像海水一般受着月亮的节制，我们的命运也像海水一般起伏无定。举例说，星期一晚上出了死力抢下来的一袋金钱，星期二早上便会把它胡乱花去；凭着一声吆喝“放下”把它抓到手里，喊了几回“酒来”就花得一文不剩。有时潦倒不堪，可是也许有一天时来运转，两脚腾空，高升绞架。

（朱生豪　译）

理查二世　第三幕　第四场

园丁　去，你把那边垂下来的杏子扎起来，它们像顽劣的子女一般，使他们的老父因为不胜重负而弯腰屈背，那些弯曲的树枝你要把它们支撑住了。你去做一个刽子手，斩下那些长得太快的小枝的头，它们在咱们的共和国里显得太高傲了，咱们国里一切都应该平等的。你们去做各人的事，我要去割下那些有害的莠草，它们本身没有一点用处，却会吸收土壤中的肥料，阻碍鲜花的生长。

仆甲　我们何必在这小小的围墙之内保持着法纪、秩序和有条不紊的布置，夸耀我们雏形的治绩。你看我们那座以大海为围墙的花园，我们整个国土，不是莠草蔓生，她的最美的鲜花全都窒息而死，她的果树无人修剪，她的篱笆东倒西歪，她的花池凌乱无序，她的佳卉异草被虫儿蛀得枝叶凋残吗？

园丁　不要胡说。那容忍着这样一个凌乱无序的春天的人，自己已经遭到落叶飘零的命运；那些托庇于他的广布的枝叶之下，名为拥护他，实则在吮吸他的精液的莠草，全都被波林勃洛克连根拔起了。我的意思是说威尔特郡伯爵和布希、格林那些人们。

仆甲　什么！他们死了吗？

园丁　他们都死了，波林勃洛克已经捉住那个浪荡的国王。啊！可惜他不曾像我们治理这座花园一般治理他的国土！我们每年按着时季，总要略微割破我们果树的外皮，因为恐怕它们过于肥茂，反而结不出果子。要是他能够用同样的手段，对付那些威权日盛的人们，他们就可以自知戒饬，他也可以尝到他们忠心的果实。对于多余的旁枝，我们总是毫不吝惜地把它们剪去，让那结果的干枝繁荣滋长。要是他也能够采取这样的办法，他就可以保全他的王冠，不至于在嬉戏游乐之中把它轻易断送了。

（朱生豪　译）

李尔王　第三幕　第一场

高纳里尔　父亲，我们家里难道没有两倍这么多的仆人可以侍候您？依我说，不但用不着二十五个人，就是十个五个也是多余的。

里根　依我看来，一个也不需要。

李尔　啊！不要跟我说什么需要不需要。最卑贱的乞丐，也有他的不值钱的身外之物，人生除了天然的需要以外，要是没有其他的享受，那和畜类的生活有什么分别。你是一位夫人，你穿着这样华丽的衣服，如果你的目的只是为了保持温暖，那就根本不合你的需要，因为这种盛装艳饰并不能使你温暖。可是，讲到真的需要，那么天啊，给我忍耐吧，我需要忍耐！神啊，你们看见我在这儿，一个可怜的老头子，被忧伤和老迈折磨得好苦！假如是你们鼓动这两个女儿的心，使她们忤逆她们的父亲，那么请你们不要尽是愚弄我，叫我默然忍受吧。让我的心里激起了刚强的怒火，别让妇人所恃为武器的泪点玷污我的男子汉的面颊！不，你们这两个不孝的妖妇，我要向你们复仇，我要作出一些使全世界惊怖的事情来，虽然我现在还不知道我要怎么做。你们以为我将要

哭泣？不，我不愿哭泣，我虽然有充分的哭泣的理由，可是我宁愿让这颗心碎成万片，也不愿流下一滴泪来。啊，傻瓜！我要发疯了！

（朱生豪　译）

十四行诗　九四

谁有力量损害人而不这样干，

谁不做人以为他们爱做的事，

谁使人动情，自己却石头一般，

冰冷、无动于衷，对诱惑能抗拒——

谁就恰当地承受上天的恩宠，

善于贮藏和保管造化的财富；

他们才是自己美貌的主人翁，

而别人只是自己姿色的家奴。

夏天的花把夏天熏得多芳馥，

虽然对自己它只自开又自落，

但是那花若染上卑劣的病毒，

最贱的野草也比它高贵得多：

极香的东西一腐烂就成极臭，

烂百合花比野草更臭得难受。

（梁宗岱　译）

裘力思·凯撒　第一幕　第二场

凯歇斯　嘿，老兄，他像一个巨人似的跨越这狭隘的世界，我们这些渺小的凡人一个个在他粗大的两腿下行走，四处张望着，替自己寻找不光荣的坟墓。人们有时可以支配他们自己的命运。要是我们受制于人，亲爱的勃鲁托斯，那错处并不在我们的命运，而在我们自己。勃鲁托斯和凯撒，“凯撒”那个名字又有什么了不得？为什么人们只是提起它而不提起勃鲁托斯？把那两个名字写在一起，您的名字并不比他的难看；放在嘴上念起来，它也一样顺口；称起重量来，它们是一样的重；要是用它们呼神召鬼，“勃鲁托斯”也可以同样感动幽灵，正像“凯撒”一样。凭着一切天神的名字，我们这位凯撒究竟吃些什么美食，才会长得这样伟大？可耻的时代！罗马啊，你的高贵血统已经中断了！自从洪水以后，什么时代你不曾产生比一个更多的著名人物？直到现在为止，什么时候人们谈起罗马，能够说，她的广大的城墙之内，只是一个人的世界？要是罗马给一个人独占了去，那么它真的变成无人之境了。啊！你我都曾听见我们的父老说过，从前罗马有一个勃鲁托斯，不愿让他的国家被一个君主所统治，正像他不愿让它被永劫的恶魔统治一样。

（朱生豪　译）

科利奥兰纳斯　第二幕　第三场

勃鲁托斯　你们难道不会凭着你们所受的教训，对他说当他还没有掌握权力、不过是政府里一个地位卑微的仆人的时候，他就是你们的敌

人，老是反对着你们的自由和你们在这共和国里所享有的特权吗？你们难道不会对他说，现在他登上了秉持国家大权的地位，要是他仍旧怀着恶意，继续做平民的死敌，那么你们现在所表示的同意，不将要成为你们自己的咒诅吗？你们应当对他说，他伟大的功业，既然可以使他享有他所要求的地位而无愧色，但愿他仁厚的天性，也能够想到你们现在所给他的同情的赞助，而把他对你们的敌意变成友谊，永远做你们慈爱的执政。

西西涅斯　你们照这样对他说了以后，就可以触动他的心性，试探他的真正的意向。也许他会给你们善意的允诺，那么将来倘有需要的时候，你们就可以责令他履行旧约。也许那会激怒他的暴戾的天性，因为他是不能容忍任何拘束的，这样引动了他的恼怒，你们就可以他的恶劣的脾气做理由，拒绝他当执政。

勃鲁托斯　你们看他在需要你们好感的时候，会用这样公然侮蔑的态度向你们请求，难道你们没有想到当他有权力压迫你们的时候，他这种侮蔑的态度不会变成公然的伤害吗？怎么，你们胸膛里难道都是没有心的吗？或者，你们的舌头会反抗理智的判断吗？

西西涅斯　你们以前不是曾经拒绝过向你们请求的人吗？现在他并没有请求你们，不过把你们讥笑了一顿，你们却会毫不迟疑地给他同意吗？

市民丙　他还没有经过正式的确认，我们还可以拒绝他。

市民乙　我们一定要拒绝他，我可以号召五百个人反对他就任。

市民甲　好，就是一千个人也不难，还可以叫他们各人拉些朋友来充数。

勃鲁托斯　你们立刻就去，告诉你们那些朋友，说他们已经选了一

个执政，他将会剥夺他们的自由，限制他们发言的权利，把他们当作狗一样看待，虽然为了要它们吠叫而豢养，可是往往因为它们吠叫而把它们痛打。

（朱生豪　译）

奥瑟罗　第一幕　第一场

伊阿古　我之所以跟随他，不过是要利用他达到我自己的目的。我们不能每个人都是主人，每个主人也不是都该让仆人忠心地追随他。你可以看到，有一辈天生的奴才，他们卑躬屈节，拼命讨主人的好，甘心受主人的鞭策，像一头驴子似的，为了一些粮草而出卖他们的一生，等到年纪老了，主人就把他们撵走。这种老实的奴才是应该抽一顿鞭子的。还有一种人，尽管表面上装出一副鞠躬如也的样子，骨子里却是为他们自己打算；看上去好像替主人做事，实际却靠着主人发展自己的势力，等捞足了油水，就可以知道他所尊敬的其实是他本人。像这种人还有几分头脑，我承认我自己就属于这一类。因为，老兄，正像你是罗德利哥而不是别人一样，我要是做了那摩尔人，我就不会是伊阿古。同样，虽说我跟随他，其实还是跟随我自己。上天是我的公证人，我这样对他赔着小心，既不是为了忠心，也不是为了义务，只是为了自己的利益，才装出这一副假脸。要是我表面上的恭而敬之的行为会泄露我内心的活动，那么不久我就要掏出我的心来，让乌鸦们乱啄了。世人所知道的我，并不是实在的我。

（朱生豪　译）

理查三世　第三幕　第七场

勃金汉　那就请听我冒昧陈词吧，您不该再三推辞，放弃至尊的宝座，那是您祖代相传的威权所在，是您福运降临，也是您世袭而来的名分。您奕奕皇室的世代光荣，岂能由您让给一支腐朽的系族。您在高枕无忧之中悠思遐想，而这块皇土正等待着大力扶持，为国家前途计，我们特来敦促您醒悟过来。如今纲常不振，面目全非，皇朝正统，平添枯枝残叶，无以生根，势必陷落深渊，从此湮没无闻。为了拯救这种颓运，我们衷心请求殿下亲自负起国家重任，掌握王权；不再为人作嫁，做一个护政者、家宰、代理人，或当一个卑贱的经手员；您应该维护血统，继承王业，本是您生来的权利，是您的领土，应归您自有。为此之故，我和市民们一起，还有您的虔诚热情的朋友们，都急切地催促着我来向殿下发出这正义呼声，求您垂听下情。

葛罗斯特　以我的地位或您的处境看来，我不知道该默然离去，还是该严斥您一番。如果我不予作答，您或许认为我是个守口如瓶的野心家，是我眼见您一厢情愿地把那辉煌的重担套上我的肩头，而我却默然承受下来了。如果我见您一片至诚，向我求告，我反而横加斥责，这岂不是我又杜绝了友辈的言路。因此，我该既不默然而去，也不严词驳斥，却把我的心头思念向您作明确的答复。您的热诚值得我衷心感激，但是对我要求过分，我自愧无能，怕难孚众望。首先，即使一切障碍都能扫除，我面前这条登基的道路已经铺平，创业时机已经成熟，只等我继承正统，可是我志气还不够高昂，我德行菲薄，瑕疵多端，缺陷重大，我宁愿闭门思过，以免卷入洪流。好比一叶扁舟，岂敢驶进大海，一旦涌上浪巅，欲罢不能，那就只好在彩光烟雾之中窒息而死了。好在今天还不需要我，感谢上帝。如果讲到需要，我正该多下功夫，自助助人。王室系族留下了王室子嗣，经过日换星移，自可成长起来，来日坐镇朝廷，你我都会臣服而乐事新君。您所要委我的重任，我加在他身上，是天命所归，也是他权分所在。上帝不容我强夺他的王权！

勃金汉　我的大人，这确实说明您心地磊落。无奈从多方考虑，您

所顾念的都是些不可捉摸的细节。您说爱德华是您大哥的儿子，我们也如此说，却不出自他的妻。早先他和露西夫人订过婚约，至今还有您在世的母亲可以作证，后来又通过中间人去法国，向法王的姨妹波娜求婚结盟。此后两人都遭冷落，于是一个多儿的寡母，色衰福浅，竟然乞怜求诉，她虽青春已逝，年已半老，君王却贪淫无度，眉目传情，好比鹰鸟高飞半空，忽而窜落，以致伤风败俗，寡妇重婚。因此一场漠视法纪的结合传下了这个小爱德华，为了保持体面，称为太子。我本可深入揭露，但是为未亡人留些余地，我且话到口边暂留三分。所以，我的好大人，愿您亲自接过我们所呈献的至尊权位，即使不为我们和全国的幸福着想，也该把这祖传的尊贵血统继承下去，匡时拯世，恢复真正的纲纪。

市长　接受吧，好大人；您的市民在请求您了。

勃金汉　伟大的主君，莫拒绝这诚心的献礼。

凯茨比　呵！让他们欢庆吧，允许他们的合理请求吧！

葛罗斯特　唉！你们何必硬要把重担堆在我身上呢？我不配治理国家，不应称君王。务必请你们不要误会，我不能，也不愿，听从你们的要求。

勃金汉　如果您拒绝所请，一心为了爱护您的侄儿，不忍将他废黜。诚如我们在您日常与亲朋过往，处世接物之中，知道您一向心地温厚，待人体贴入微，无奈此刻我们已顾不得您接受与否，反正不能由您侄儿在我国称为君王；我们只好拥立他人继承王位，那样，您的王室势必声名扫地，倾覆无闻：现在我们谨作此决定，并向您告辞。市民们，走吧，我们不再请求了。

（勃金汉与市民们下。）

凯茨比　叫他们回来，好主君；接受他们的请求。您如果再不应允，全国都要遭殃了。

葛罗斯特　你们真要逼我负起这样烦心的重任吗？叫他们回来；我何尝是铁石心肠，虽然违拗我的心性，我岂能辜负盛情，顽固到底。（凯茨比下。）

（勃金汉及众人重上。）

葛罗斯特勃金汉贤弟，各位父老，你们既不顾我是否愿意，坚持要把命运的重担压上我肩头，勉强我负起重任，从此我就不得不任劳负重，忍受下去。但是万一在你们迫使我登位之后，假若有人暗中攻讦，或破口辱骂，那么此事既由你们促成，一切垢污糟蹋都应与我无关。上帝知道，你们也可能见到，这是一件多么违反我心愿的事。

市长　上帝祝福您，殿下！我们看见了真情，我们要让大家知道。

葛罗斯特　你们宣扬出去必须根据事实。

勃金汉　现在我向您称君道贺：理查王万岁，英国的尊君万岁！

全体　阿门。

（方重　译）

特洛伊罗斯与克瑞西达　第一幕　第三场

俄底修斯　特洛亚至今兀立不动，没有给我们攻下，赫克托的宝剑仍旧在它主人的手里，这都是因为我们漠视了军令的森严。看这一带大军驻屯的阵地，散布着多少虚有其表的营寨，都怀着各不相下的私心。大将就像是一个蜂房里的蜂王，要是采蜜的工蜂大家各自为政，不把采

得的粮食归献蜂王，那么还有什么蜜可以酿得出来呢？尊卑的等级可以不分，那么最微贱的人，也可以和最有才能的人分庭抗礼了。满天的星辰，在运行的时候，都恪守着自身的等级和地位，遵循着各自不变的轨道，依照着一定的范围、季候和方式，履行它们经常的职责，所以灿烂的太阳才能高拱出天，洞察寰宇，纠正星辰的过失，遏恶扬善，发挥它的无上威权。可是众星如果出了常轨，陷入了混乱的状态，那么多少的灾祸、变异、叛乱、海啸、地震、风暴、惊骇，将要震撼、摧裂、破坏、毁灭这宇宙间的和谐！纪律是达到一切雄图的阶梯，要是纪律发生动摇，啊！那时候事业的前途也就变黯淡了。要是没有纪律，社会上的秩序怎么得以稳定？学校中的班次怎么得以整齐？城市中的和平怎么得以保持？各地间的贸易怎么得以畅通？法律上所规定的与生俱来的特权，以及尊长、君王、统治者、胜利者所享有的特殊权利，怎么得以确立不坠？只要把纪律的琴弦拆去，听吧！多少刺耳的噪音就会发出来；一切都是互相抵触；江河里的水会泛滥得高过堤岸，淹没整个世界；强壮的要欺凌老弱，不孝的儿子要打死他的父亲；威力将代替公理，没有是非之分，也没有正义存在。那时候权力便是一切，而凭仗着权力，便可以逞着自己的意志，放纵无厌的贪欲。欲望，这一头贪心不足的饿狼，得到了意志和权力的两重辅佐，势必至于把全世界供它的馋吻，然后把自己也吃下去。伟大的阿伽门农，这一种混乱的状态，只有在纪律被人扼杀以后才会发生。就是因为漠视了纪律，有意前进的才反而会向后退却。主帅被他属下的将领所轻视，那将领又被他的属下所轻视，这样上行下效，谁都瞧不起他的长官，结果就引起了猜忌争竞的心理，损害了整个军队的元气。特洛亚所以至今兀立不动，不是靠着它自己的力量，乃是靠着我们的这一种弱点；换句话说，它的生命是全赖我们的弱点替它支持下来的。

（朱生豪　译）

亨利四世下篇　第三幕　第一场

亨利王　我的几千个最贫贱的人民正在这时候酣然熟睡！睡眠啊！柔和的睡眠啊！大自然的温情的保姆，我怎样惊吓了你，你才不愿再替我闭上我的眼皮，把我的感觉沉浸在忘河之中？为什么，睡眠，你宁愿栖身在烟熏的茅屋里，在不舒适的草荐上伸展你的肢体，让嗡嗡作声的蚊虫催着你入梦，却不愿偃息在香雾氤氲的王侯的深宫之中，在华贵的宝帐之下，让最甜美的乐声把你陶醉？啊，你冥漠的神灵！为什么你在污秽的床上和下贱的愚民同寝，却让国王的卧榻变成一个表盒子或是告变的警钟？在巍峨高耸惊心眩目的桅杆上，你不是会使年轻的水手闭住他的眼睛吗？当天风海浪做他的摇篮，那巨大的浪头被风卷上高高的云端，发出震耳欲聋的喧声，即使死神也会被它从睡梦中惊醒的时候。
啊，偏心的睡眠！你能够在那样惊险的时候，把你的安息给予一个风吹浪打的水手，可是在最宁静安谧的晚间，最温暖舒适的环境之中，你却不让一个国王享受你的厚惠吗？那么，幸福的卑贱者啊，安睡吧！戴王冠的头是不能安于他的枕席的。

（朱生豪　译）

家族权力

威尼斯商人　第三幕　第二场

鲍西娅　巴萨尼奥公子，您瞧我站在这儿，不过是这样的一个人。虽然为了我自己的缘故，我不愿妄想自己比现在的我更好一点，可是为了您的缘故，我希望我能够六十倍胜过我的本身，再加上一千倍的美丽，一万倍的富有。但愿我有无比的贤德、美貌、财产和亲友，好让我在您的心目中占据一个很高的位置。可是我这一身却是一无所有，我只是一个不学无术、没有教养、缺少见识的女子。幸亏她的年纪还不是顶大，来得及发愤学习；她的天资也不是顶笨，可以加以教导；尤其大幸的是，她有一颗柔顺的心灵，愿意把它奉献给您，听从您的指导，把您当作她的主人、她的统治者和她的君王。我自己以及我所有的一切，现在都变成您的所有了。刚才我还拥有着这一座华丽的大厦，我的仆人都听从着我的指挥，我是支配我自己的女王，可是就在现在，这屋子、这些仆人和这一个我，都是属于您的了，我的夫君。凭着这一个指环，我把这一切完全呈献给您。要是您让这指环离开您的身边，或者把它丢了，或者把它送给别人，那就预示着您的爱情的毁灭，我可以因此责怪您的。

（朱生豪　译）

李尔王　第一幕　第一场

李尔　现在我要向你们说明我的心事。把那地图给我。告诉你们吧，我已经把我的国土划成三部；我因为自己年纪老了，决心摆脱一切事务的牵萦，把责任交卸给年轻力壮之人，让自己松一松肩，好安安心

心地等死。康华尔贤婿，还有同样是我心爱的奥本尼贤婿，为了预防他日的争执，我想还是趁现在把我的几个女儿的嫁妆当众分配清楚。法兰西和勃艮第两位君主正在竞争我的小女儿的爱情，他们为了求婚而住在我们宫廷里，也已经有好多时候了，现在他们就可以得到答复。孩子们，在我还没有把我的政权、领土和国事的重任全部放弃以前，告诉我，你们中间哪一个人最爱我？我要看看谁最有孝心，最有贤德，我就给她最大的恩惠。高纳里尔，我的大女儿，你先说。

高纳里尔　父亲，我对您的爱，不是言语所能表达的。我爱您胜过自己的眼睛、整个的空间和广大的自由；超越一切可以估价的贵重稀有的事物；不亚于赋有淑德、健康、美貌和荣誉的生命。不曾有一个儿女这样爱过他的父亲，也不曾有一个父亲这样被他的儿女所爱。这一种爱可以使唇舌无能为力，辩才失去效用，我爱您是不可以数量计算的。

考狄利娅（旁白）考狄利娅应该怎么好呢？默默地爱着吧。

李尔　在这些疆界以内，从这一条界线起，直到这一条界线为止，所有一切浓密的森林、膏腴的平原、富庶的河流、广大的牧场，都要奉你为它们的女主人；这一块土地永远为你和奥本尼的子孙所保有。我的二女儿，最亲爱的里根，康华尔的夫人，你怎么说？

里根　我跟姊姊具有同样的品质，您凭着她就可以判断我。在我的真心之中，我觉得她刚才所说的话，正是我爱您的实际的情形，可是她还不能充分说明我的心理：我厌弃一切凡是敏锐的知觉所能感受到的快乐，只有爱您才是我无上的幸福。

考狄利娅（旁白）那么，考狄利娅，你只好自安于贫穷了！可是我并不贫穷，因为我深信我的爱心比我的口才更富有。

李尔　这一块从我们这美好的王国中划分出来的三分之一的沃壤，

是你和你的子孙永远世袭的产业，和高纳里尔所得到的那份同样广大、同样富庶，也同样佳美。现在，我的宝贝，虽然是最后的一个，却并非最不在我的心头，法兰西的葡萄和勃艮第的乳酪都在竞争你的青春之爱，你有些什么话，可以换到一份比你的两个姊姊更富庶的土地？说吧。

考狄利娅　父亲，我没有话说。

李尔　没有？

考狄利娅　没有。

李尔　没有只能换到没有，重新说过。

（朱生豪　译）

亨利四世下篇　第二幕　第三场

潘西夫人　啊！可是为了上帝的缘故，不要去参加这种战争吧。公公，您曾经毁弃过对您自己更有切身关系的诺言。您的亲生的潘西，我那心爱的哈利，曾经好多次引颈北望，盼他的父亲带着援兵到来，可是他终于望了个空。那时候是谁劝您不要出兵的？两重的荣誉已经丧失了，您自己的荣誉和您儿子的荣誉。讲到您自己的荣誉，愿上帝扫清它的雾障吧！他的荣誉却是和他不可分的，正像太阳永远高悬在苍苍的天宇之上一样；全英国的骑士都在他的光辉鼓舞之下，表现了他们英雄的身手。他的确是高贵的青年们的一面立身的明镜。谁不曾学会他的步行的姿态，等于白生了两条腿。说话急速不清本来是他天生的缺点，现在却成为勇士们应有的语调，那些能够用低声而迂缓的调子讲话的人，都宁愿放弃他们自己的特长，模拟他这一种缺点。这样无论在语音上、步态上、饮食娱乐上、性情气质上、治军作战上，他的一言一动，都是他

人效法的规范。然而他，啊，天神一般的他！啊，人类中的奇男子！这盖世无双的他，却得不到您的援助，你竟忍心让他在不利的形势中，面对着狰狞可怖的战神。让他孤军苦战，除了霍茨波的英名之外，再也没有可以抵御敌人的武力，您是这样离弃了他！千万不要，啊！千万不要再给他的亡魂这样的侮辱，把您对于别人的信誉看得比您对于他的信誉更重。让他们去吧。那司礼大臣和那大主教的实力是很强大的，要是我那亲爱的哈利有他们一半的军力，今天也许我可以攀住霍茨波的颈项，听他谈起蒙穆斯的死了。

诺森伯兰　哎哟，贤媳！你用这样悲痛的申诉重新揭发我往日的过失，使我的心都寸寸碎裂了。

（朱生豪　译）

理查三世　第四幕　第四场

玛格莱特王后　我曾称你为我的幸运墙上所加的浮雕；称你为可怜的阴影，一个画中王后。你无非把我过去的声势来模仿，为一场大悲剧做了一些动听的剧情说明。哪怕你一时趾高气扬，终究要堕入尘埃。你枉做了一对伶俐的孩子的母亲。过去的一切都成了梦境、泡影、一块高贵的招牌、一面炫耀的旗帜，突兀招展着供人射击。一国之后做了笑柄，在舞台上不过串演着一个配角。如今你丈夫何在？你兄弟何在？你孩子何在？人生乐趣又何在？谁还来跪求你，高呼着“神佑吾后”？一向对你卑躬屈节的大臣们哪儿去了？追随你的大队人马又哪儿去了？前后对照就看清了你的处境：快乐的妻子成为最不幸的寡妇；幸福的母亲却在因为身为母亲而悲伤；坐听人诉的人反向人哭诉；国后变为愁眉蹙额的贱婢；从前轻慢我而今遭我轻慢；从前人人怕你，如今单怕一人；一向发号施令，如今无人听命。可见天道循环，赏罚分明，你只落得在时间的鹰爪下做个牺牲者；你倘若只顾怀念过去，同时又无法摆脱目前的

处境，你的苦难将更难忍受。你既僭占了我的名位，岂能不分摊其中的苦楚？如今你的傲骨分挑着我的重担，我正好抽出我劳顿的肩头，把这全副担子都卸给你。再会吧，约克的夫人，厄运的王后；英国的这些忧伤，将在法国供我作笑料。

（方重　译）

仲夏夜之梦　第一幕　第一场

伊吉斯　我怀着满心的气恼，来控诉我的孩子，我的女儿赫米娅。走上前来，狄米特律斯。殿下，这个人，是我答应把我女儿嫁给他的。走上前来，拉山德。殿下，这个人引诱坏了我的孩子。你，你，拉山德，你写诗句给我的孩子，和她交换着爱情的纪念物；你在月夜到她的窗前用做作的声调歌唱着假作多情的诗篇；你用头发编成的腕环、戒指、虚华的饰物、琐碎的玩具、花束、糖果——这些可以强烈地骗诱一个稚嫩的少女之心的“信使”来偷得她的痴情；你用诡计盗取了她的心，煽惑她使她对我的顺从变成倔强的顽抗。殿下，假如她现在当着您的面仍旧不肯嫁给狄米特律斯，我就要要求雅典自古相传的权利，因为她是我的女儿，我可以随意处置她。按照我们的法律，逢到这样的情况，她要是不嫁给这位绅士，便应当立时处死。

忒修斯　你有什么话说，赫米娅？当心一点吧，美貌的姑娘！你的父亲对于你应当是一尊神明。你的美貌是他给予的，你就像在他手中捏成的一块蜡像，他可以保全你，也可以毁灭你。狄米特律斯是一个很好的绅士呢。

赫米娅　拉山德也很好啊。

忒修斯　他本人当然很好，但是要做你的丈夫，如果不能得到你父

亲的同意，那么比起来他就要差一筹了。

赫米娅　我真希望我的父亲和我有同样的看法。

忒修斯　实在还是应该你依从你父亲的看法才对。

赫米娅　请殿下宽恕我！我不知道是什么一种力量使我如此大胆，也不知道在这里披诉我的心思将会怎样影响到我的美名，但是我要敬问殿下，要是我拒绝嫁给狄米特律斯，会有什么最恶的命运临到我的头上？

忒修斯　不是受死刑，便是永远和男人隔绝。因此，美丽的赫米娅，仔细问一问你自己的心愿吧！考虑一下你的青春，好好地估量一下你血脉中的搏动。倘然不肯服从你父亲的选择，就想想看能不能披上尼姑的道服，终生幽闭在阴沉的庵院中，向着凄凉寂寞的明月唱着暗淡的圣歌，做一个孤寂的修道女了此一生？她们能这样抑制热情，到老保持处女的贞洁，自然应当格外受到上天的眷宠。但是结婚的女子有如被采下炼制过的玫瑰，香气留存不散，比之孤独地自开自谢，奄然朽腐的花儿，在尘俗的眼光看来，总是要幸福得多了。

赫米娅　就让我这样自开自谢吧，殿下，我不愿意把我的贞操奉献给我心里并不敬服的人。

（朱生豪　译）

冬天的故事　第一幕　第二场

赫米温妮　假如您需要我们，我们就在园里，我们就在那边等着您好吗？

里昂提斯　随你们便吧，只要你们不飞到天上去，总可以找得到的。我现在在垂钓，虽然你们没有看见我放下钓线去。好吧，好吧！瞧她那么把嘴向他送过去！简直像个妻子对她正式的丈夫那样无所顾忌！（波力克希尼斯、赫米温妮及侍从等下）已经去了！一顶绿头巾已经稳稳地戴上了！去玩去吧，孩子，玩去吧。你妈在玩着，我也在玩着，可是我扮的是这么一个丢脸的角色，准要给人喝倒彩嘘下了坟墓去的，轻蔑和讥笑便是我的葬钟。去玩去吧，孩子，玩去吧。要是我不曾弄错，那么乌龟这东西确是从来便有的。即使在现在，当我说这话的时候，一定就有许多人抱着他的妻子，却不知道她在他不在的时候早已给别人揩过油；他自己池子里的鱼，已经给他笑脸的邻居捞了去。我道不孤，聊堪自慰。假如有了不贞的妻子的男人全都怨起命来，世界上十分之一的人类都要上吊死了。补救的办法是一点没有的。正像有一个荒淫的星球，照临人世，到处惹是招非。你想，东南西北，无论哪处都抵挡不过肚子底下的作怪；魔鬼简直可以带了箱笼行李堂而皇之地进出呢。我们中间有千万个人都害着这毛病，但自己却不觉得。

（朱生豪　译）

暴风雨　第一幕　第二场

米兰达　亲爱的父亲，假如你曾经用你的法术使狂暴的海水兴起这场风浪，请你使它们平息了吧！天空似乎要倒下发臭的沥青来，但海水腾涌到天的脸上，把火焰浇熄了。唉！我瞧着那些受难的人们，我也和他们同样受难：这样一只壮丽的船，里面一定载着好些尊贵的人，一下子便撞得粉碎！啊，那呼号的声音一直打进我的心坎。可怜的人们，他们死了！要是我是一个有权力的神，我一定要叫海沉进地中，不让它把这只好船和它所载着的人们一起这样吞没了。

普洛斯彼罗　安静些，不要惊骇！告诉你那仁慈的心，一点灾祸都

不会发生。

米兰达　唉，不幸的日子！

普洛斯彼罗　不要紧的。凡我所做的事，无非是为你打算，我的宝贝！我的女儿！你不知道你是什么人，也不知道我从什么地方来，你也不会想到我是一个比普洛斯彼罗——一所十分寒碜的洞窟的主人，你的微贱的父亲——更出色的人物。

（朱生豪　译）

终成眷属　第二幕　第三场

国王　你看不起她，不过因为她地位低微，那我可以把她抬高起来。要是把人们的血液倾注在一起，那颜色、重量和热度都难以区别，偏偏在人间的关系上，会划分这样清楚的鸿沟，真是一件怪事。她倘然是一个道德上完善的女子，你不喜欢她，只因为她是一个穷医生的女儿，那么你重视虚名甚于美德，这就错了。穷巷陋室，有德之士居之，可以使蓬荜增辉，世禄之家，不务修善，虽有盛名，亦将堕败。善恶的区别，在于行为的本身，不在于地位的有无。她有天赋的青春、智慧和美貌，这一切的本身即是光荣；最可耻的，却是那些席父祖的余荫、不知绍述先志、一味妄自尊大的人。最好的光荣应该来自我们自己的行动，而不是倚恃家门。虚名是一个下贱的奴隶，在每一座墓碑上说着谎话，倒是在默默无言的一荒土之下，往往埋葬着忠臣义士的骸骨。有什么话好说呢？只要你能因为这女子的本身而爱她，我可以给她其余的一切，她的贤淑美貌是她自己的嫁妆，光荣和财富是我给她的赏赐。

勃特拉姆　我不能爱她，也不想爱她。

国王　你要是抗不奉命，一定要自讨没趣的。

海丽娜　陛下圣体复原，已经使我欣慰万分，其余的事情，不必谈了。

国王　这与我的信用有关，为使它不受损害，我必须运用我的权力。来，骄横傲慢的孩子，握着她的手，你才不配接受这一件卓越的赐予呢。你的愚妄狂悖，不但辜负了她的好处，也已经丧失了我的欢心。你以为她和你处在天平的不平衡的两端，却不知道我站在她的一面，便可以把两方的轻重倒转过来。你也没有想到你的升沉荣辱，完全操在我的手中。为了你自己的好处，赶快抑制你的轻蔑，服从我的旨意。我有命令你的权力，你有服从我的天职，否则你将永远得不到我的眷顾，让年轻的愚昧把你拖下了终身蹭蹬的深渊，我的愤恨和憎恶将要用王法的名义降临到你的头上，没有一点怜悯宽恕。快回答我吧。

勃特拉姆　求陛下恕罪，我愿意捐弃个人的爱憎，服从陛下的指示。当我一想起多少恩荣富贵，都可以随着陛下的一言而予夺，我就觉得适才我所认为最卑贱的她，已经受到陛下的宠眷，而和出身贵族的女子同样高贵了。

（朱生豪　译）

一报还一报　第二幕　第四场

安哲鲁　谁会相信你呢，依莎贝拉？我的洁白无瑕的名声，我的持躬的严正，我的振振有词的驳斥，我的柄持国政的地位，都可以压倒你的控诉，使你自取其辱，人家会把你的话当作挟嫌诽谤。我现在一不做二不休，不再控制我的情欲，你必须满足我的饥渴，放弃礼法的拘束，解脱一切的忸怩，这些对你要请求的事情是有害无利的。把你的肉体呈献给我，来救你弟弟的性命，否则他不但不能活命，而且因为你的无情冷酷，我要叫他遍尝各种痛苦而死去。明天给我答复，否则我要听任感

情的支配，叫他知道些厉害。你尽管向人怎样说我，我的虚伪会压倒你的真实。（下。）

依莎贝拉　我将向谁诉说呢？把这种事情告诉别人，谁会相信我？凭着一条可怕的舌头，可以操纵人的生死，把法律供自己的驱使，是非善恶，都由他任意判断！我要去看我的弟弟，他虽然因为一时情欲的冲动而堕落，可是他是一个爱惜荣誉的人，即使他有二十颗头颅，他也宁愿让它们在二十个断头台上被人砍落，而不愿让他姊姊的身体遭受如此的污辱。依莎贝拉，你必须活着做一个清白的人，让你的弟弟死去吧，贞操是比兄弟更为重要的。

（朱生豪　译）

亨利四世下篇　第四幕　第五场

亲王　我再也想不到还会听见您说话。

亨利王　你因为存着那样的愿望，哈利，所以才会产生那样的思想。我耽搁得太长久，害你等得厌倦了。难道你是那样贪爱着我的空位，所以在时机还没有成熟以前，就要攫取我的尊荣吗？啊，傻孩子！你所追求的尊荣，是会把你压倒的。略微再等一会儿，因为我的尊严就像一片乌云，只有一丝微风把它托住，一下子就会降落下来，我的白昼已经昏暗了。你所偷去的东西，再过几小时就可以名正言顺地归你所有，可是你却在我临死的时候，充分证实了我对你的想法。你的平生行事，都可以表明你没有一点爱父之心，现在我离死不远了，你还要向我证实你的不孝。你把一千柄利刃藏在你的思想之中，把它们在你那石块一般的心上磨得雪亮锋快，要来谋刺我的只剩半小时的生命。嘿！难道你不能容忍我再活半小时吗？那么你就去亲手掘下我的坟墓吧，叫那快乐的钟声响起来，报知你加冕的喜讯，而不是我死亡的噩耗。让那应该

洒在我的灵柩上的所有的眼泪，都变成涂抹你的头顶的圣油；让我和被遗忘的泥土混合在一起，把那给你生命的人丢给蛆虫吧。贬斥我的官吏，废止我的法令，因为一个无法无天的新时代已经到来了。哈利五世已经加冕为王！起来吧，浮华的淫乐！没落吧，君主的威严！你们一切深谋远虑的老臣，都给我滚开！现在要让四方各处游手好闲之徒聚集在英国的宫廷里了！邻邦啊，把你们的莠民败类淘汰出来吧。你们有没有什么酗酒谩骂、通宵作乐、杀人越货、无所不为的流氓恶棍？放心吧，他不会再来烦扰你们了，英国将要给他不次的光荣，使他官居要职，爵登显秩，手握大权，因为第五代的哈利将要松开奢淫这条野犬的羁勒，让它向每一个无辜的人张牙舞爪了。啊，我的疮痍未复的可怜的王国！我用尽心力，还不能戡定你的祸乱，在朝纲败坏、法纪荡然的时候，你又将怎样呢？啊！你将要重新变成一片荒野，豺狼将要归返它们的故居。

亲王　啊！恕我，陛下。倘不是因为我的眼泪使我哽咽得说不出话来，我决不会默然倾听您这番沉痛的严训而不加分辩的。这是您的王冠，但愿永生的上帝保佑您长久享有它！（他还回王冠并跪下。）要是我对它怀着私心，并不只是因为它是您的尊荣的标记而珍重它，让我跪在地上，永远站不起来。上帝为我作证，当我进来的时候，看见陛下的嘴里没有一丝气息，我是怎样地感到寒心！要是我的悲哀是虚伪的，啊！让我就在我现在这一种荒唐的行为中死去，再没有机会给世人看看我将要怎样洗心革面，做一个堂堂的人物。我因为进来探望您，看见您仿佛死了的样子，我自己，主上，也几乎因悲痛而死去，当时我就用这样的话责骂这顶王冠，就像它是有知觉的一般，我说："追随着您的烦恼已经把我的父亲杀害了，所以你这最好的黄金却是最坏的黄金。别的黄金虽然在质地上不如你，却可以炼成祛病延年的药水，比你贵重得多了。可是你这最纯粹的，最受人尊敬重视的，却把你的主人吞噬下去。"我一面这样责骂它，陛下，一面就把它试戴在我的头上，认为它是在我的面前杀死我的父亲的仇敌，我作为忠诚的继承者应该要和它算

账。可是假如它使我的血液中感染着欢乐，或是使我的精神上充满着骄傲，假如我的悖逆虚荣的心灵对它抱着丝毫爱悦的情绪，愿上帝永远不让它加在我头上，使我像一个最微贱的奴隶一般向着它战栗下跪！

亨利王啊，我儿！上帝让你把它拿了去，好叫你用这样贤明的辩解，格外博取你父亲的欢心。过来，哈利，坐在我的床边，听我这垂死之人的最后的遗命。（哈里王子坐在了床边。）上帝知道，我儿，我是用怎样诡诈的手段取得这一顶王冠。我自己也十分明白，它戴在我的头上，给了我多大的烦恼。可是你将要更安静更确定地占有它，不像我这样遭人嫉视，因为一切篡窃攘夺的污点，都将随着我一起埋葬。它在人们的心目之中，不过是我用暴力攫取的尊荣，那些帮助我得到它的人都在指斥我的罪状，他们的怨望每天都在酿成斗争和流血，破坏这粉饰的和平。你也看见我曾经冒着怎样的危险，应付这些大胆的威胁，我做了这么多年的国王，不过在反复串演着这一场争杀的武戏。现在我一死之后，情形就可以改变过来了，因为我是用非法手段获得的，在你却是合法继承的权利。可是你的地位虽然可以比我稳定一些，然而人心未服，余憾尚新，你的基础还没有十分巩固。那些拥护我的人们，也就是你所必须认为朋友的，他们的锐牙利刺还不过新近拔去；他们用奸险的手段把我扶上高位，我不能不对他们怀着疑虑，怕他们会用同样的手段把我推翻。为了避免这一种危机，我才多方剪除他们的势力，并且正在准备把许多人带领到圣地作战，免得他们在国内闲居无事，又要发生觊觎王座的图谋。所以，我的哈利，你的政策应该是多多利用对外的战争，使那些心性轻浮的人们有向外活动的机会，不至于在国内为非作乱，旧日的不快的回忆也可以因此而消失。我还有许多话要对你说，可是我的肺力不济，再也说不下去了。上帝啊！恕宥我用不正当的手段取得这一顶王冠，愿你能够平平安安享有它！

亲王陛下，您好容易挣来这一顶王冠，好容易把它保持下来，现在您把它给了我，我当然对它有合法的所有权。我一定要用超乎一切的努

力，不让它从我的手里失去。

（朱生豪　译）

战争和暴力中的权力

裘力思·凯撒　第二幕　第一场

勃鲁托斯　只有叫他死这一个办法，我自己对他并没有私怨，只是为了大众的利益。他将要戴上王冠，那会不会改变他的性格是一个问题，蝮蛇是在光天化日之下出现的，所以步行的人必须刻刻提防。让他戴上王冠？不！那等于我们把一个毒刺给了他，使他可以随意加害于人。把不忍之心和威权分开，那威权就会被人误用。讲到凯撒这个人，说一句公平话，我还不曾知道他什么时候一味感情用事，不受理智的支配。可是微贱往往是初期野心的阶梯，凭借着它一步步爬上了高处，他一旦登上了最高的一级之后，便不再回顾那梯子，他的眼光仰望着云霄，瞧不起他从前所恃为凭借的低下的阶段。凯撒何尝不会这样？所以，为了怕他有这一天，必须早一点防备。既然我们反对他的理由，不是因为他现在有什么可以指责的地方，所以就得这样说：照他现在的地位要是再扩大些权力，一定会引起这样那样的后患；我们应当把他当作一颗蛇蛋，与其让他孵出以后害人，不如趁他还在壳里的时候就把他杀死。

（朱生豪　译）

亨利五世　第四幕　第一场

亨利王　皇上就跟我一样，也是一个人罢了。一朵紫罗兰花儿他闻起来，跟我闻起来还不是一样？他头上和我头上合顶着一方天，他也不过用眼睛来看、耳朵来听啊！把一切荣衔丢开，还他一个赤裸裸的本相，那么他只是一个人罢了。虽说他的心思寄托在比我们高出一层的事

物上，可是好比一只在云霄里飞翔的老鹰，他有时也不免降落下来，栖息在枝头和地面上。所以，当他有理由害怕的时候，他就像我们一样，感到了害怕，不用问，那心头的滋味也跟我们的感觉差不多。可是照理说，谁也不能叫他感到一丝恐惧，否则的话，他一流露出来，可不要瓦解军队的士气。

培茨　尽管他外表装得怎样勇敢，今夜又这样冷，可是我相信，他心里希望自己宁可浸在泰晤士河里，哪怕河水齐到了脖子。我也但愿他在那儿，而我呢，就在他身边——只要能离开此地，我们还有什么好计较的？

亨利王　不跟你们说瞎话——我愿意代替国王捧着良心说句话——我认为他不会希望不在眼前这个地方，跑到任何别的地方去。

培茨　那么我但愿他独自守在这块地方吧。这样，他当然免不了要献出一笔赎金来，许许多多可怜虫因此也就保全了生命啦。

亨利王　我敢说，你对他不至于一点儿敬爱都没有，竟希望就只他一个人守在这儿，你这么说，无非是试探别人的口气罢了。照我看，我无论死在什么地方，也没有像跟国王死在一块儿那样叫我称心的了，因为他是师出有名的，他的战争是正义的。

威廉斯　这就不是我们所能了解的了。

培茨　啊，或者说，这就不是我们所该追究的了。因为说到了解不了解，只要我们知道自己是国王的臣民，那就够了。即使他是站在理亏的一边，只要我们这些人是服从我们国王的，也就消除了我们的罪名。

威廉斯　可是，如果这不是师出有名，那么国王头上的这笔账可有得他算了。打一场仗，有多少的腿、多少的胳膊、多少的头要给砍下来，将来有一天，它们又结合在了一起，就会一齐高声呼号：“我们死

在这样一个地方！”有的在咒天骂地，有的在喊叫军医，有的在哭他抛下了苦命的妻，有的高嚷他欠了人家的债还没还，也有的一声声叫他甩手不管的孩子——我只怕死在战场上的人很少有死得像个样儿的！人家既然要流你的血，还能跟你讲什么慈悲？我说，如果这帮人不得好死，那么把他们领到死路上去的国王就是罪孽深重了。苦的是小百姓，他们要是违抗了君命，那就是违反了做百姓的名分。

亨利王　照这样说来，假如有个儿子，父亲派他出洋去做生意，结果他却带着一身罪孽葬身在海里了，那么照你的一套看法，这份罪孽就应当归在把他派出去的父亲的头上。或者是，有一个奴仆，受了主人的嘱咐，运送一笔钱，却在半路上遭了打劫，还没来得及忏悔就给强盗杀死了，你也许要把那个主人叫作害这个仆人堕入地狱的主使者。不过，这不是那么一回事。国王手下的兵士他们一个个怎样结局、收场，国王用不着负责。做父亲的对于儿子，做主人的对于奴仆，也是这样，因为他们派给他们任务的时候，并没有把死派给他们。再说，国王出兵，就算他是完全理直气壮的，一旦到了在战场上见个高低，他也无从叫所有的兵士都免除了罪孽。很难说，有些兵士曾经蓄意谋杀过人，有些兵士拿虚伪的山盟海誓骗取了姑娘的贞操，有些兵士曾经犯过抢劫的案子、破坏了安宁和秩序，正好拿战争作避难所。现在，这帮人逃脱了法网，躲过了罪有应得的惩罚——虽然人们是给他瞒过了，他却插翅难逃上帝的手心！战争是他的一张拘票，战争是他的报应，这帮人过去触犯了王法，现在就在国王的战争中领受惩罚。他们为了怕死就投了军，他们以为这样就得救了，不料反而遭了殃。那么要是他不得好死，入了地狱，国王负什么责任？正像他们从前犯下不敬上帝的罪不能由他负责一样。为这罪恶，他们现在得了报应！每个臣民都有为国效忠的本分，可是每个臣民的灵魂却是属于他自己掌管的。

（方平　译）

哈姆莱特　第四幕　第四场

哈姆莱特　我所见到、听到的一切，都好像在对我谴责，鞭策我赶快进行我的蹉跎未就的复仇大愿！一个人要是把生活的幸福和目的，只看作吃吃睡睡，他还算是个什么东西？简直不过是一头畜生！上帝造下我们来，使我们能够这样高谈阔论、瞻前顾后，当然要我们利用他所赋予我们的这一种能力和灵明的理智，不让它们白白废掉。现在我明明有理由、有决心、有力量、有方法，可以动手干我所要干的事，可是我还是在大言不惭地说："这件事需要做。"可是始终不曾在行动上表现出来。我不知道这是因为像鹿豕一般健忘呢，还是因为三分懦怯一分智慧的过于审慎的顾虑。像大地一样显明的榜样都在鼓励我，瞧这一支勇猛的大军，领队的是一个娇养的少年王子，勃勃的雄心振起了他的精神，使他蔑视不可知的结果，为了区区弹丸大小的一块不毛之地，拼着血肉之躯，去向命运、死亡和危险挑战。真正的伟大不是轻举妄动，而是在荣誉遭遇危险的时候，即使为了一根稻秆之微，也要慷慨力争。可是我的父亲给人惨杀，我的母亲给人污辱，我的理智和感情都被这种不共戴天的大仇所激动，我却因循隐忍，一切听其自然，看着这两万个人为向博取一个空虚的名声，视死如归地走向他们的坟墓里去，目的只是争夺一方还不够给他们作战场或者埋骨之所的土地，相形之下，我将何地自容呢？啊！从这一刻起，让我摒除一切的疑虑妄念，把流血的思想充满我的脑际！

（朱生豪　译）

亨利四世下篇　第一幕　第三场

巴道夫　要是我们把这次战争的运命完全寄托在希望上，那希望对于我们是无益而有害的，正像我们在早春时候所见的初生的蓓蕾一般，希望不能保证它们开花结实，无情的寒霜早已摧残了它们的生机。当我

们准备建筑房屋的时候，我们首先要测量地基，然后设计图样；打好图样以后，我们还要估计建筑的费用，要是那费用超过我们的财力，就必须把图样重新改绘，设法减省一些人工，或是放弃这一项建筑计划。现在我们所进行的这件伟大的工作，简直是推翻一个旧的王国，重新建立一个新的王国，所以我们尤其应该熟察环境，详定方针，确立一个稳固的基础，询问测量师，明了我们自身的力量，是不是能够从事这样的工作，对抗敌人的压迫。否则要是我们徒然在纸上谈兵，把战士的名单代替了实际上阵的战士，那就像一个人打了一幅他的力量所不能建筑的房屋的图样，造了一半就中途停工，丢下那未完成的屋架子，让它去受凄风苦雨的吹淋。

（朱生豪　译）

麦克白　第一幕　第七场

麦克白　要是干了以后就完了，那么还是快一点干。要是凭着暗杀的手段，可以攫取美满的结果，又可以排除了一切后患。要是这一刀砍下去，就可以完成一切、终结一切、解决一切——在这人世上，仅仅在这人世上，在时间这大海的浅滩上，那么来生我也就顾不到了。可是在这种事情上，我们往往逃不过现世的裁判；我们树立下血的榜样，教会别人杀人，结果反而自己被人所杀；把毒药投入酒杯里的人，结果也会自己饮鸩而死，这就是一丝不爽的报应。他到这儿来本有两重信任：第一，我是他的亲戚，又是他的臣子，按照名分绝对不能干这样的事；第二，我是他的主人，应当保障他身体的安全，怎么可以自己持刀行刺？而且，这个邓肯秉性仁慈，处理国政，从来没有过失，要是把他杀死了，他生前的美德，将要像天使一般发出喇叭一样清澈的声音，向世人昭告我的弑君重罪。“怜悯”像一个赤身裸体在狂风中飘游的婴儿，又像一个御气而行的天婴，将要把这可憎的行为揭露在每一个人的眼中，使

眼泪淹没叹息。没有一种力量可以鞭策我实现自己的意图，可是我跃跃欲试的野心，却不顾一切地驱着我去冒颠踬的危险。

（朱生豪　译）

理查三世　第五幕　第五场

里士满　那就该是披甲发令的时间了。亲爱的同胞们，时间已经十分紧迫，我无法和你们尽情多谈了；可是大家只消记住这一点，上帝和正义都在同我们一起作战；圣洁的圣徒们和冤死的人们都在为我们祈祷，他们站在我们面前像一座高耸的堡垒；除了理查之外，他手下的人没有一个不宁愿我们战胜，唯恐他得到胜利。要知道他们所跟从的这个人是个什么样的人呢？弟兄们，他确实是一个杀人如麻的暴君；他在人血中成长，靠流血起家；利用他原有的地位以扩展势力，屠宰他自己的谋士，过河拆桥；一颗卑劣的假宝石，空凭英国的王座来衬托出光芒，其实是装错了地位，满不相称；他始终与上帝为敌。你们既和上帝的敌人交战，做上帝的战士必得天道庇佑；如果你们挥着汗除恶歼暴，功成名遂之后，自可高枕无忧；如果你们为国家战胜公敌，国家自然会把肥甘犒赏你们；如果你们为保护妻孥的安全而战，你们的妻孥就会来迎接胜利者回家园；如果你们把儿女救出了虎口，你们的子孙就可在你们的晚年承欢报恩。所以，为上帝之名和这一切权益，举旗前进，凭自愿拔刀杀敌去吧。至于我，为了这英勇的一役要激战一场，甚至不惜寒土埋冷骨；但是我若幸而获胜，这胜利的果实要和你们每一个士卒共享。击鼓吹号吧，奋勇欢呼起来；上帝与圣乔治在此！里士满与胜利！

（方重　译）

亨利六世中篇　第一幕　第一场

约克　安佐和缅因白白送给了法国人，巴黎已经丧失了，这些地区丢了以后，诺曼底省就处于极不安全的状态。萨福克签订了合约条款，贵族们都已同意，亨利也愿意用两个公爵的采邑换取一个公爵的标致女儿。为了这些事，我也怪不得他们；在他们看来，这些都算得什么？他们送掉的原是你的东西，而不是他们自己的东西。海盗们把抢来的财富尽情挥霍，收买朋友，赏赐娼妓，直到花干净，也毫不吝惜。而那不幸的物主却只能唉声叹气，搓手摇头，战兢兢地站在一旁，眼看着自己的东西被人分配完毕，全都带走，自己只能忍饥挨饿，对自己的财产连碰都不敢碰一下。我约克正是处于这样的地位：我自己的土地被人家换掉了、出卖了，我只能坐在一旁，忍气吞声。在我看来，英格兰、法兰西、爱尔兰，这些国土都是我心头之肉，都是我生命的寄托。而他们竟然把安佐和缅因送给了法国人！这真是一件令人泄气的消息，那法兰西，如同英格兰的肥沃土地一样，原是我想要弄到手的。总有一天我约克要把自己的东西收归已有。为了这个目的，我不妨站到萨立斯伯雷父子这一边来，在外表上对骄横的亨弗雷公爵表现一下拥戴的态度。等时机一到，我就提出对王冠的要求，那才是我所追求的最高目标。可是，约克呵，你得耐心一点，要等待时机成熟。当别人入睡的时候，你得保持清醒，留心伺察，把国家的内幕刺探清楚。亨利替英国花了许多钱买来一位王后，他正陶醉在新媳妇的爱河之中，等他和亨弗雷同其他的贵族们一旦发生破裂，我就要高举乳白色的玫瑰，使那空气里充满它的芬芳，我要树起绣有约克家族徽记的旗帜，对兰开斯特家族进行搏斗。我要使用武力，迫使他交出王冠，这些年来，在他的书呆子般的统治之下，英格兰的威望是一天天低落了。

（章益　译）

暴风雨　第三幕　第三场

爱丽儿　你们是三个有罪的人，操纵着下界一切的天命使得那贪馋的怒海重又把你们吐了出来，把你们抛在这没有人居住的岛上，你们是不配居住在人类中间的。你们已经发狂了。（阿隆佐、西巴斯辛等拔剑）即使像你们这样勇敢的人，也没有法子免除一死。你们这辈愚人！我和我的同伴们都是运命的使者，你们的用风、火熔炼的刀剑不能损害我们身上的一根羽毛，正像把它们砍向呼啸的风、刺向分而复合的水波一样，只显得可笑。我的伙伴们也是刀枪不入的。而且即使它们能够把我们伤害，现在你们也已经没有力量把臂膀举起来了。（阿隆佐、西巴斯辛等吃惊地站着。）好生记住吧，我来就是告诉你们这句话，你们三个人是在米兰把善良的普洛斯彼罗篡逐的恶人，你们把他和他的无辜的婴孩放逐在海上，如今你们也受到同样的报应了。为着这件恶事，上天虽然并不把惩罚立刻加在你们身上，却并没有轻轻放过，已经使海洋陆地，以及一切有生之伦，都来和你们作对了。你，阿隆佐，已经丧失了你的儿子；我再向你宣告，活地狱的无穷的痛苦——一切死状合在一起也没有那么惨，将要一步步临到你生命的途程中。除非痛改前非，以后洗心革面，做一个清白的人，否则在这荒岛上面，天谴已经迫在眼前了！

（爱丽儿在雷鸣中隐去。柔和的乐声复起，精灵们重上，跳舞且作揶揄状，把空桌抬下。）

普洛斯彼罗　你把这怪鸟扮演得很好，我的爱丽儿，这一桌酒席你也席卷得妙，我叫你说的话你一句也没有漏去；就是那些小精灵们也都是生龙活虎，各自非常出力。我的神通已经显出力量，我这些仇人们已经惊惶得不能动弹，他们都已经在我的权力之下了。

（朱生豪　译）

科利奥兰纳斯　第一幕　第一场

市民甲　我们都是苦百姓，贵族才是好市民。那些有权有势的人吃饱了，装不下的东西就可以救济我们。他们只要把吃剩下来的东西趁着新鲜的时候赏给我们，我们就会以为他们是出于人道之心来救济我们。可是在他们看来，我们都是不值得救济的。我们的痛苦饥寒，我们的枯瘦憔悴，就像是列载着他们的富裕的一张清单，他们享福就是靠了我们受苦。让我们举起我们的武器来复仇，趁我们还没有瘦得只剩几根骨头。天神知道我说这样的话，只是迫于没有面包吃的饥饿，不是因为渴于复仇。

（朱生豪　译）

亨利四世上篇　第一幕　第三场

霍茨波　啊，那就难怪他那位做了国王的叔父恨不得要让摩提默在荒凉的山谷之间饿死了。可是你们把王冠加在这个健忘的人的头上，为了他的缘故，蒙上教唆行弑的万恶的罪名，难道你们就这样甘心做一个篡位者的卑鄙的帮凶，一个弑君的刽子手，受尽无穷的咒诅吗？啊！恕我这样不知忌讳，直言指出你们在这狡诈的国王手下充任了何等的角色。难道你们愿意让当世的舆论和未来的历史提起这一件可羞的事实，说是像你们这样两个有地位有势力的人，却会作出那样不义之事——上帝恕宥你们的罪恶！——把理查，那芬芳可爱的蔷薇拔了下来，却扶植起波林勃洛克，这一棵刺人的荆棘？难道你们愿意让他们提起这一件更可羞的事实，说是你们为了那个人蒙受这样的耻辱，结果却被他所愚弄、摈斥和抛弃？不，现在你们还来得及赎回你们被放逐的荣誉，恢复世人对你们的好感；报复这骄傲的国王所加于你们的侮蔑吧，他每天每晚都在考虑着怎样酬答你们的辛劳，他是不会吝惜用流血的手段把你们处死的。所以，我说……

华斯特　静下来，侄儿！别多说了。

（朱生豪　译）

理查三世　第四幕　第三场

提瑞尔　一桩血腥的暴行已经完成；真是这片国土之上还未见过的一件罪大恶极的惨案。我曾唆使戴登和福列司特一起去硬着心肠下这毒手，可是他俩虽然是嗜血暴徒，听了那番临死前的悲诉，也竟顽石点头，像孩提一般流下热泪来。“看哪，”戴登说，“这幼嫩的孩子们躺在那儿。”“就这样，”福列司特说，“他俩这样相互抱住，白蜡似的纯洁臂膀缠得好紧，那嘴唇就像枝头的四瓣红玫瑰，娇滴滴地在夏季的馥郁中亲吻。枕边放着一本祈祷书，我险些，”福列司特说道，“心头软下来，然而那魔鬼呵。”这个恶汉停住了。这时戴登又续道：“我们把开天辟地以来所未有的美品，天公的精心杰作，竟一手给闷死了。”他俩就这样受到良心的责备，话也说不出来。那时我们分了手，我便来向血腥的国王复命：他来了。（理查王上。）

提瑞尔　祝您万福，我的主君！

理查王　好提瑞尔，你的消息是叫我高兴的吗？

瑞尔　如果我完成了您交下的使命就能叫您高兴的话，那就请您高兴吧，因为这件事已经办成了。

理查王　你看见他们确已死了？

提瑞尔　看见了，我的主君。

理查王　埋葬了吗，好提瑞尔？

提瑞尔　伦敦塔中的牧师把他们埋了，至于埋在哪儿，怎样埋的，

我却不知道。

理查王　晚饭后到我这里来，提瑞尔，我要你告诉我他们死时的经过，同时不妨先想一想我该如何酬谢你，怎样满足你的欲望。再见，等你来。

提瑞尔　我敬向您告辞。

理查王　克莱伦斯的儿子我已经关禁起来，他的女儿我已把她嫁给了穷人，爱德华的两个儿子睡进了亚伯拉罕的怀抱里，我妻安辞别了人世。现在我知道布列塔尼的里士满觊觎着我的侄女小伊利莎白，借这一结合，妄图争得王冠，我就去找她，再当个快乐幸福的求婚郎。

（方重　译）

雅典的泰门　第五幕　第四场

艾西巴第斯　吹起喇叭来，让这个怯懦的、淫秽的城市知道我们的大军已经来到。

（吹谈判信号。元老等登城。）

艾西巴第斯　在今天以前，由你们胡作非为，肆行不义，把你们的私心当作公道；在今天以前，我自己以及一切睡在你们权力的阴影下面的人，谁都是叉手彷徨，有冤莫诉。现在忍无可忍的时间已经到了，蹲伏惯了的脊骨，在重重的压迫之下，喊出“受不住了”的呼声。现在无告的冤苦将要坐在你们宽大的安乐椅上喘息，短气的骄横将要狼狈奔逃了。

元老甲　尊贵的少年将军，你当初因为些微的误会一怒而去的时

候，虽然你还是无拳无勇，我们无须恐惧你的报复，可是我们仍旧召你回来，好意抚慰你，用逾量的恩宠洗刷我们负心的罪戾。

元老乙　就是对于改换了形貌的泰门，我们也曾用谦恭的使节和优渥的允诺恳求他眷念我们的城市。我们并不全是冷酷无情的人，也不该不分皂白地同受战争的屠戮。

元老甲　我们这一座城墙，并不是建立于得罪你的那些人之手；这些巍峨的高塔、标柱和学校，更不应该为了私人的错误而同归毁灭。

元老乙　当初驱迫你出亡的那些人，因为自愧缺少应付非常的才能，心中惭疚，都已忧郁逝世了。尊贵的将军，带领你的大军，高扬你的旗帜，开进我们的城中吧！要是你不顾上天好生之德，你的复仇的欲望必须得到满足，那么请你在十人中杀死一人，让那不幸接触你的锋刃的作为牺牲吧。

（朱生豪　译）

理查二世　第三幕　第三场

波林勃洛克（向诺森伯兰伯爵）贵爵，请你到那座古堡的顽强的墙壁之前，用铜角把谈判的信号吹进它的残废的耳中，为我这样传言：亨利·波林勃洛克屈下他的双膝，敬吻理查王的御手，向他最尊贵的本人致献臣服的诚意和不二的忠心。就在他的足前，我准备放下我的武器，遣散我的军队，只要他能答应撤销我的放逐的判决，归还我的应得的土地。不然的话，我要利用我的军力的优势，让那从被屠杀的英国人的伤口中流下的血雨浇溉夏天的泥土。可是我的谦卑的忠顺将会证明用这种猩红的雨点浸染理查王的美好的青绿的田野，绝不是波林勃洛克的本意。去，这样对他说。我们就在这儿平坦的草原上整队前进。让我们进

军的时候不要敲起惊人的鼓声，这样可以让他们从那城堡的摇摇欲倾的雉堞之上，看看我们雄壮的军容。我想理查王跟我上阵的时候，将要像水火的交攻一样骇人，那彼此接触时的雷鸣巨响，可以把天空震破。让他做火，我愿意做柔顺的水；雷霆之威是属于他的，我只向地上浇洒我的雨露。

（朱生豪　译）

科利奥兰纳斯　第四幕　第五场

科利奥兰纳斯　我的名字是卡厄斯·马歇斯，我曾经把极大的伤害和灾祸加在你和一切伏尔斯人的身上，我的姓氏科利奥兰纳斯就是最好的证明。辛苦的战役、重大的危险、替我这负恩的国家所流过的血，结果只是换到了这一个空洞的姓氏，为你对我所怀的怨恨留下一个创巨痛深的记忆。只有这名字还留着。残酷猜忌的人民，得到了我们那些怯懦的贵族的默许，已经一致遗弃了我，抹杀了我一切的功绩，让那些奴才们把我轰出了罗马。这一种不幸的遭遇，使我今天来到你的家里。不要误会我，以为我想来向你求恩乞命，因为要是我怕死的话，我就应该远远地躲开你。我只是因为出于气愤，渴想报复那些放逐我的人，所以才到这儿来站在你的面前。要是你也有一颗复仇的心，想要替你自己和你的国家洗雪耻辱，你的机会到了，你正可以利用我的不幸，达到你自己的目的，因为我将要用地狱中一切饿鬼的怨毒，来与我的腐败的祖国作战。可是你要是没有这样的胆量，也不想追求远大的前程，那么一句话，我也已经厌倦人世，愿意伸直我的颈项，听任你的宰割，让你一泄这许多年来郁积在心头的怨恨。你要是不杀我，你就是个傻瓜，因为我一向是你的死敌，曾经从你祖国的胸前溅下了无数吨的血。要是让我活在世上，对于你永远是一个耻辱，除非你能够跟我合作。

（朱生豪　译）

亨利四世下篇　第四幕　第一场

威斯摩兰　那么，大主教，我要把您作为我的发言的主要对象。要是叛乱不脱它的本色，不过是一群乌合之众的暴动，在少数嗜杀好乱的少年领导之下，获得那些无赖贱民的拥护。要是它果然以这一种适合于它的本性的面目出现，那么您，可尊敬的神父，以及这几位尊贵的勋爵，决不会厕身于他们的行列，用你们的荣誉替卑劣残暴的叛徒丑类张目。您，大主教，您的职位是借着国内的和平而确立的，您的须髯曾经为和平所吹拂，您的学问文章都是受着和平的甄陶，您的白袍象征着纯洁、圣灵与和平的精神，为什么您现在停止您的优美的和平的宣讲，高呼着粗暴喧嚣的战争的口号，把经典换了甲胄，把墨水换了鲜血，把短笔换了长枪，把神圣的辩舌化成了战场上的号角？

约克　为什么我要采取这样的行动？这是您对我所发的疑问。我的简单的答案是这样的：我们都是害着重病的人；过度的宴乐和荒淫已经使我们遍身像火烧一般发热，我们必须因此而流血；我们的前王理查就是因为染上这一种疾病而不治身亡的。可是，我的最尊贵的威斯摩兰伯爵，我并不以一个医生自任，虽然我现在置身在这些战士们的中间，我并不愿做一个和平的敌人。我的意思不过是暂时借可怖的战争为手段，强迫被无度的纵乐所糜烂的身心得到一些合理的节制，对那开始遏止我们生命活力的障碍作一番彻底的扫除。再听我说得明白一些：我曾经仔细衡量过我们的武力所能造成的损害和我们自己所身受的损害，发现我们的怨愤比我们的过失更重。我们看见时势的潮流奔赴着哪一个方向，在环境的强力的挟持之下，我们不得不适应大势，离开我们平静安谧的本位。我们已经把我们的不满列为条款，在适当的时间，我们将要把它们公开宣布。这些条款在很久以前，我们曾想呈递给国王，但多方祈求仍不能邀蒙接受。当我们受到侮辱损害，准备申诉我们的怨苦的时候，我们总不能得到面谒国王的机会，而那些阻止我们看见他的人，也正就是给我们最大的侮辱与损害的人。新近过去的危机——它用血写成的记

忆还留着鲜明的印象，以及当前每一分钟所呈现的险象，使我们穿起了这些不合身的武装，我们不是要破坏和平，而是要确立一个名实相符的真正和平。

（朱生豪　译）

恋人间的权力

特洛伊罗斯与克瑞西达　第三幕　第二场

特洛伊罗斯　那么我的克瑞西达为什么这样不容易征服呢？

克瑞西达　似乎不容易征服，可是，殿下，当您第一眼看着我的时候，我早就给您征服了——恕我不再说下去，要是我招认得太多，您会看轻我的。我现在爱着您，可是直到现在为止，我还能够控制我自己的感情。不，说老实话，我说了谎了；我的思想就像一群顽劣的孩子，倔强得不受他们母亲的管束。瞧，我们真是些傻瓜！为什么就要唠唠叨叨说这些话呢？要是我们不能替自己保守秘密，谁还会对我们忠实呢？我虽然这样爱您，却没有向您求爱。然而说老实话，我却希望我自己是个男子，或者我们女子也像男子一样有先启口的权利。亲爱的，快叫我止住我的舌头吧，因为我这样得意忘形，一定会说出使我后悔的话来。瞧，瞧！您这么狡猾地一声不响，已经使我从我的脆弱当中流露出我的内心来了。封住我的嘴吧。

特洛伊罗斯　好，虽然甜蜜的音乐从您嘴里发出。

（他吻了她。）

（朱生豪　译）

十四行诗　一五零

哦，从什么威力中你取得这力量，

连缺陷也能把我的心灵支配？

教我诬蔑我可靠的目光撒谎，

并矢口否认太阳使白天明媚？

何来这化臭腐为神奇的本领，

使你的种种丑恶不堪的表现

都具有一种灵活强劲的保证，

使它们，对于我，超越一切至善？

谁教你有办法使我更加爱你，

当我听到和见到你种种可憎？

哦，尽管我钟爱着人家所嫌弃，

你总不该嫌弃我，同人家一条心：

既然你越不可爱，越使得我爱，

你就该觉得我更值得你喜爱。

（梁宗岱　译）

维罗那二绅士　第三幕　第一场

凡伦丁　与其活着受煎熬，何不一死了事？死不过是把自己放逐出自己的躯壳。西尔维娅已经和我合成一体，离开她就是离开我自己，这

不是和死同样的刑罚吗？看不见西尔维娅，世上还有什么光明？不能和西尔维娅在一起，世上还有什么乐趣？我只好闭上眼睛假想她在旁边，用这样美好的幻影寻求片刻的陶醉。除非夜间有西尔维娅陪着我，否则夜莺的歌唱只是不入耳的噪音；除非白天有西尔维娅在我的面前，否则我的生命将是一个不见天日的长夜。她是我生命的精华，我要是不能在她的煦护拂庇之下滋养生机，就要干枯憔悴而死。即使能逃过他这可怕的判决，我也仍然不能逃避死亡；因为我留在这儿，结果不过一死，可是离开了这儿，就是离开了生命所寄托的一切。

（朱生豪　译）

无事生非　第三幕　第一场

希罗　爱神在上，我也知道像他这样的人品是值得享受世间一切至美至好的事物的，可是造物造下的女人的心，没有一颗比得上像贝特丽丝那样骄傲冷酷的。轻蔑和讥嘲在她的眼睛里闪耀着，把她所看见的一切贬得一文不值，她因为自恃才情，所以什么都不放在眼里。她不会恋爱，也从来不想到有恋爱这件事，她是太自命不凡了。

欧苏拉　不错，我也是这样想。所以还是不要让她知道他对她的爱情，免得反而遭到她的讥笑。

希罗　是呀，你说得很对。无论怎样聪明、高贵、年轻、漂亮的男子，她总要把他批评得体无完肤：要是他面孔长得白净，她就发誓说这位先生应当做她的妹妹；要是他皮肤黑了点儿，她就说上帝在打一个小花脸的图样的时候，不小心涂上了一大块墨渍；要是他是个高个儿，他就是柄歪头的长枪；要是他是个矮子，他就是块刻坏了的玛瑙坠子；要是他多讲了几句话，他就是个随风转的风标；要是他一声不响，他就是块没有知觉的木头。她这样指摘着每一个人的短处，至于他的纯朴的德

行和才能，她却绝口不给它们应得的赞赏。

欧苏拉　真的，这种吹毛求疵可不敢恭维。

希罗　是呀，像贝特丽丝这样古怪得不近人情，真叫人不敢恭维。可是谁敢去对她这样说呢？要是我对她说了，她会把我讥笑得无地自容，用她的俏皮话儿把我揶揄死呢！所以还是让培尼狄克像一堆盖在灰里的火一样，在叹息中熄灭了他的生命的残焰吧。与其受人讥笑而死——这就像痒得要死那样难熬——还是不声不响地闷死了好。

（朱生豪　译）

驯悍记　第四幕　第一场

彼特鲁乔　我已经开始巧妙地把她驾驭起来，希望能够得到美满的成功。我这只悍鹰现在非常饥饿，在她没有俯首听命以前，不能让她吃饱，不然她就不肯再练习打猎了。我还有一个制服这鸷鸟的办法，使她能呼之则来，挥之则去。那就是总叫她睁着眼，不得休息，拿她当一只乱扑翅膀的倔强鹞子一样对待。今天她没有吃过肉，明天我也不给她吃；昨夜她不曾睡觉，今夜我也不让她睡觉，我要故意嫌被褥铺得不好，把枕头、枕垫、被单、线毯向满房乱丢，还说都是为了爱惜她才这样做。总之她将要整夜不能合眼，倘然她昏昏思睡，我就骂人吵闹，吵得她睡不着。这是用体贴为名惩治妻子的法子，我就这样克制她的狂暴倔强的脾气。要是有谁知道还有比这更好的驯悍妙法，那么我倒要请教请教。

（朱生豪　译）

鲁克丽丝受辱记　第281—301行

正好比稀稀禾苗，被萋萋恶草掩蔽，

审慎的顾虑几乎被猖狂的欲念窒息。

他竖起耳朵倾听，偷偷举步前移，

满怀无耻的希冀，满腹无聊的猜疑；

希冀、猜疑仿佛是恶人的两名仆役，

让他们相忤的主张交错于他的脑际，

使他一会儿想收兵，一会儿又想进袭。

潜思中，他恍惚瞥见她天仙一般的形象，

还恍惚瞥见柯拉廷，也与她同在那厢；

向她望着的那只眼，搅得他心神迷惘；

向她望着的那只眼，却较为虔敬忠良，

不肯屈从于这种背信弃义的意向，

发出纯真的呼吁，求心灵作出主张；

但心灵既经腐蚀，竟投向恶的一方。

这就大大怂恿了他那卑劣的情思：

见心灵洋洋自得，它们也踌躇满志，

涨满了他的淫欲，像分秒填满了小时；

自吹互捧过了头，它们越来越骄恣，

竟与它们的统帅——心灵毫无二致。

听任奸邪的欲念如此癫狂地指使，

罗马王子直驱鲁克丽丝的卧室。

（杨德豫　译）

仲夏夜之梦　第五幕　第一场

忒修斯　情人们和疯子们都富于纷乱的思想和成形的幻觉，他们所理会到的永远不是冷静的理智所能充分了解。疯子、情人和诗人，都是幻想的产儿：疯子眼中所见的鬼，多过于广大的地狱所能容纳；情人，同样是那么疯狂，能从埃及人的黑脸上看见海伦的美貌；诗人的眼睛在神奇的、狂放的一转中，便能从天上看到地下，从地下看到天上。想象会把不知名的事物用一种形式呈现出来，诗人的笔再使它们具有如实的形象，空虚的无物也会有了居处和名字。强烈的想象往往具有这种本领，只要一领略到一些快乐，就会相信那种快乐的背后有一个赐予的人。夜间一转到恐惧的念头，一株灌木一下子便会变成一头熊。

（朱生豪　译）

罗密欧与朱丽叶　第三幕　第三场

罗密欧　这是酷刑，不是恩典。朱丽叶所在的地方就是天堂；这儿的每一只猫、每一只狗、每一只小小的老鼠，都生活在天堂里，都可以瞻仰到她的容颜，可是罗密欧却看不见她。污秽的苍蝇都可以接触亲爱

的朱丽叶的皎洁的玉手，从她的嘴唇上偷取天堂中的幸福，那两片嘴唇是这样的纯洁贞淑，永远含着娇羞，好像觉得它们自身的相吻也是一种罪恶。苍蝇可以这样做，我却必须远走高飞，它们是自由的，我却是一个放逐的流徒。你还说放逐不是死吗？难道你没有配好的毒药、锋锐的刀子或者无论什么致命的利器，而必须用“放逐”两个字把我杀害吗？放逐！啊，神父！只有沉沦在地狱里的鬼魂才会用到这两个字，伴着凄厉的呼号。你是一个教士，一个替人忏罪的神父，又是我的朋友，怎么忍心用“放逐”这两个字来寸磔我呢？

（梁宗岱　译）

终成眷属　第一幕　第一场

海丽娜　唉！要是真的只是这样倒好了。我不是想我的父亲，我这些滔滔的眼泪，虽然好像是一片孺慕的哀忱，却不是为他而流。他的容貌怎样，我也早就忘记了，在我的想象之中，除了勃特拉姆以外没有别人的影子。我现在一切都完了！要是勃特拉姆离我而去，我还有什么生趣？我正像爱上了一颗灿烂的明星，痴心地希望着有一天能够和它结合。他是这样高不可攀，我不能逾越我的名分和他亲近，只好在他的耀目的光华下，沾取他的几分余晖，安慰安慰我的饥渴。我的爱情的野心使我备受痛苦，希望和狮子匹配的驯鹿，必须为爱而死。每时每刻看见他，是愉快也是苦痛。我默坐在他的旁边，在心版上深深地刻画着他的秀曲的眉毛，他的敏锐的眼睛，他的迷人的鬈发，他那可爱的脸庞上的每一根线条，每一处微细的特点，都会清清楚楚地摄在我的心里。可是现在他去了，我的爱慕的私衷，只好以眷怀旧日的陈迹为满足。

（朱生豪　译）

十四行诗　五七

既然是你奴隶，我有什么可做，

除了时时刻刻伺候你的心愿？

我毫无宝贵的时间可消磨，

也无事可做，直到你有所驱遣。

我不敢骂那绵绵无尽的时刻，

当我为你，主人，把时辰来看守；

也不敢埋怨别离是多么残酷，

在你已经把你的仆人辞退后；

也不敢用妒忌的念头去探索

你究竟在哪里，或者为什么忙碌，

只是，像个可怜的奴隶，呆想着

你所在的地方，人们会多幸福。

爱这呆子是那么无救药得呆

凭你为所欲为，他都不觉得坏。

（梁宗岱　译）

爱的徒劳　第一幕　第二场

亚马多　我爱上了那被她穿在她的卑贱的鞋子里的更卑贱的脚所践踏的最卑贱的地面。要是我恋爱了，我将要破坏誓约，那就是说了一句虚伪的谎。虚伪的谎怎么可以换到真实的爱呢？爱情是一个魔鬼，是一个独一无二的罪恶的天使。可是参孙也曾被它引诱，他是个力气很大的人；所罗门也曾被它迷惑，他是个聪明无比的人。赫拉克勒斯的巨棍也敌不住丘匹德的箭镞，所以一个西班牙人的宝剑怎么能够对抗得了呢？不消一两个回合，我的剑法就要完全散乱了。什么直刺，什么横劈，在他看来都是不值一笑。他的耻辱是被人称为孩子，他的光荣却是征服成人。别了，勇气！锈了吧，宝剑！静下来，战鼓！因为你们的主人在恋爱了。是的，他在恋爱了。即景生情的诗神啊，帮助我！因为我相信我要写起十四行诗来了。想吧，智慧；写吧，笔！我有足够的诗情，可以写满几大卷的对开大本呢。

（朱生豪　译）

罗密欧与朱丽叶　第一幕　第一场

罗密欧　啊，吵吵闹闹的相爱，亲亲热热的怨恨！啊，无中生有的一切！啊，沉重的轻浮，严肃的狂妄，整齐的混乱，铅铸的羽毛，光明的烟雾，寒冷的火焰，憔悴的健康，永远觉醒的睡眠，否定的存在！我感觉到的爱情正是这么一种东西，可是我并不喜爱这一种爱情。你不会笑我吗？

班伏里奥　不，兄弟，我倒是有点儿想哭。

罗密欧　好人，为什么呢？

班伏里奥　因为瞧着你善良的心承受这样的痛苦。

罗密欧　唉！这就是爱情的错误，我自己已经有太多的忧愁重压在

我的心头，你对我表示的同情，徒然使我在太多的忧愁之上再加上一重忧愁。爱情是叹息吹起的一阵烟，恋人的眼中有它净化了的火星，恋人的眼泪是它激起的波涛。它又是最智慧的疯狂，哽喉的苦味，吃不到嘴的蜜糖。

（朱生豪　译）

安东尼与克莉奥佩特拉　第四幕　第十六场

克莉奥佩特拉　什么都没有了，我只是一个平凡的女人，平凡的感情支配着我，正像支配着一个挤牛奶、做贱工的婢女一样。我应该向不仁的神明怒掷我的御杖，告诉他们当他们没有偷去我们的珍宝的时候，我们这世界是可以和他们的天国媲美的。如今一切都只是空虚无聊，忍着像傻瓜，不忍着又像疯狗。那么在死神还不敢侵犯我们以前，就奔进了幽秘的死窟，是不是罪恶呢？怎么啦，我的姑娘们？唉，唉！高兴点儿吧！哎哟，怎么啦，查米恩！我的好孩子们！啊，姑娘们，姑娘们，瞧！我们的灯熄了，它暗下去了，各位好朋友，提起勇气来，我们要埋葬他，一切依照最庄严、最高贵的罗马的仪式，让死神乐于带我们同去。来，走吧。容纳着那样一颗伟大的灵魂的躯壳现在已经冰冷了。啊，姑娘们，姑娘们！我们没有朋友，只有视死如归的决心。

（朱生豪　译）

十四行诗　二六

我爱情的至尊，你的美德已经

使我这藩属加强对你的拥戴，

我现在寄给你这诗当作使臣，

去向你述职，并非要向你炫才。

职责那么重，我又才拙少俊语，

难免要显得赤裸裸和她相见，

但望你的妙思，不嫌它太粗鄙，

在你灵魂里把它的赤裸裸遮掩；

因而不管什么星照引我前程，

都对我露出一副和悦的笑容，

把华服加给我这寒碜的爱情，

使我配得上你那缱绻的恩宠。

那时我才敢对你夸耀我的爱，

否则怕你考验我，总要躲起来。

（梁宗岱　译）

驯悍记　第五幕　第二场

彼特鲁乔　凯瑟琳，你去告诉这些倔强的女人，做妻子的应该向她们的夫主尽些什么本分。

寡妇　好了，好了，别开玩笑了，我们不要听这些个。

彼特鲁乔　说吧，先讲给她听。

寡妇　用不着她讲。

彼特鲁乔　我偏要她讲，先讲给她听。

凯瑟丽娜　哎呀！展开你那颦蹙的眉头，收起你那轻蔑的瞥视，不要让它伤害你的主人，你的君王，你的支配者。它会使你的美貌减色，就像严霜啮噬着草原，它会使你的名誉受损，就像旋风摧残着蓓蕾；它绝对没有可取之处，也丝毫引不起别人的好感。一个使性的女人，就像一池受到激动的泉水，混浊可憎，失去一切的美丽，无论怎样喉干吻渴的人，也不愿把它啜饮一口。你的丈夫就是你的主人、你的生命、你的所有者、你的头脑、你的君王；他照顾着你，扶养着你，在海洋里陆地上辛苦操作，夜里冒着风波，白天忍受寒冷，你却穿得暖暖的住在家里，享受着安全与舒适。他希望你贡献给他的，只是你的爱情，你的温柔的辞色，你的真心的服从；你欠他的好处这么多，他所要求于你的酬报却是这么微薄！一个女人对待她的丈夫，应当像臣子对待君王一样忠心恭顺；倘使她倔强使性，乖张暴戾，不服从他正当的愿望，那么她岂不是一个大逆不道、忘恩负义的叛徒？应当长跪乞和的时候，她却向他挑战；应当尽心竭力服侍他、敬爱他、顺从他的时候，她却企图篡夺主权，发号施令：这一种愚蠢的行为，真是女人的耻辱。我们的身体为什么这样柔软无力，耐不了苦，熬不起忧患？那不是因为我们的性情必须和我们的外表互相一致，同样温柔吗？听我的话吧，你们这些倔强而无力的可怜虫！我的心从前也跟你们一样高傲，也许我有比你们更多的理由，不甘心向人俯首认输，可是现在我知道我们的枪矛只是些稻草，我们的力量是软弱的，我们的软弱是无比的，我们所有的只是一个空虚的外表。所以你们还是挫抑你们无益的傲气，跪下来向你们的丈夫请求怜爱吧。为了表示我的顺从，只要我的丈夫吩咐我，我就可以向他下跪，让他因此而心中快慰。

（朱生豪　译）

特洛伊罗斯与克瑞西达　第二幕　第二场

特洛伊罗斯　假如我今天娶了一个妻子，我的选择是取决于我的意志，我的意志是受我的耳目所左右。假如在选定以后，我的意志又不满于我的选择，那么我怎么可以避免既成的事实呢？一方面逃避责任，一方面又不损害自己的荣誉，这样的事是不可能的。我们把绸缎污毁了以后，就不能再拿它向商家退换；我们也不因为已经吃饱，就把剩余的食物倒在肮脏的阴沟里。当初大家都赞成帕里斯去向希腊人报复，你们的一致同意鼓励了他的远行，善于捣乱的海浪和天风，也协力帮助他一帆风顺地到了他的目的地。因为希腊人俘虏了我们一个年老的姑母，他夺回了一个希腊的王妃作为交换，她的青春和娇艳掩盖了朝暾的美丽。我们为什么留住她不放？因为希腊人没有放还我们的姑母，她是值得我们保留的吗？啊，她是一颗明珠，它的高贵的价值，曾经掀动过千百个国王迢迢渡海而来，大家都要做一个觅宝的商人。你们不能不承认帕里斯的前去并不是失策，因为你们大家都喊着“去！去！”你们也不能不承认他带回了光荣的战利品，因为你们大家都拍手欢呼，说她的价值是不可估计的。那么你们现在为什么要诋毁从你们自己的智慧中产生的果实，把你们曾经估计为价值超过海洋和陆地的宝物重新贬斥得一文不值呢？啊！赃物已经偷了来了，我们却不敢把它保留下来，这才是最卑劣的偷窃！这样的盗贼是不配偷窃这样的宝物的。

（朱生豪　译）

安东尼与克莉奥佩特拉　第一幕　第一场

菲罗　嘿，咱们主帅这样迷恋，真太不成话啦。从前他指挥大军的

时候，他的英勇的眼睛像全身盔甲的战神一样发出棱棱的威光，现在却如醉如痴地尽是盯在一张黄褐色的脸上。他的大将的雄心曾经在激烈的鏖战里涨断了胸前的扣带，现在却失掉一切常态，甘愿做一具风扇，扇凉一个吉卜赛女人的欲焰。瞧！他们来了。

（喇叭奏花腔。安东尼及克莉奥佩特拉率侍从上；太监掌扇随侍。）

菲罗　留心看着，你就可以知道他本来是这世界上三大柱石之一，现在已经变成一个娼妇的弄人了，瞧吧。

克莉奥佩特拉（向安东尼）要是那真的是爱，告诉我多么深。

安东尼　可以量深浅的爱是贫乏的。

（朱生豪　译）

奥瑟罗　第一幕　第三场

罗德利哥　我该怎么办？我承认这样痴心是一件丢脸的事，可是我没有力量把它补救过来呀。

伊阿古　力量！废话！我们变成这样那样，全在于我们自己。我们的身体就像一座园圃，我们的意志是这园圃里的园丁；不论我们插荨麻、种莴苣、栽下牛膝草、拔起百里香，或者单独培植一种草木，或者把全园种得万卉纷披，让它荒废不治也好，把它辛勤耕垦也好，那权力都在于我们的意志。要是在我们的生命之中，理智和情欲不能保持平衡，我们血肉的邪心就会引导我们到一个荒唐的结局。可是我们有的是理智，可以冲淡我们汹涌的热情、肉体的刺激和奔放的淫欲。我认为你所称为“爱情”的，也不过是那样一种东西。

（朱生豪　译）

十四行诗　一三一

尽管你不算美，你的暴虐并不
亚于那些因美而骄横的女人；
因为你知道我的心那么糊涂，
把你当作世上的至美和至珍。
不过，说实话，见过你的人都说，
你的脸缺少使爱呻吟的魅力：
尽管我心中发誓反对这说法，
我可还没有公开否认的勇气。
当然我发的誓一点也不欺人；
数不完的呻吟，一想起你的脸，
马上联翩而来，可以为我作证：
对于我，你的黑胜于一切秀妍。
你一点也不黑，除了你的人品，
可能为了这缘故，诽谤才流行。

（梁宗岱　译）

William Shakespeare
On Power

PENGUIN BOOKS — GREAT IDEAS

Contents

Power in government

Hamlet, Act III, Scene 3

ROSENCRANTZ:

The single and peculiar life is bound
With all the strength and armour of the mind
To keep itself from noyance, but much more
That spirit upon whose weal depends and rests
The lives of many. The cease of majesty
Dies not alone, but like a gulf doth draw
What's near it with it. It is a massy wheel
Fixed on the summit of the highest mount,
To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things
Are mortised and adjoined, which when it falls
Each small annexment, petty consequence,
Attends the boist'rous ruin. Never alone
Did the King sigh, but with a general groan.

Richard II, Act III, Scene 2

KING RICHARD:

Of comfort no man speak.
Let's talk of graves, of worms, and epitaphs,
Make dust our paper and with rainy eyes
Write sorrow on the bosom of the earth.
Let's choose executors and talk of wills,
And yet not so, for what can we bequeath
Save our deposed bodies to the ground?
Our lands, our lives, and all are Bolingbroke's,
And nothing can we call our own but death,
And that small model of the barren earth
Which serves as paste and cover to our bones.
For God's sake, let us sit upon the ground
And tell sad stories of the death of kings:
How some have been deposed, some slain in war,
Some haunted by the ghosts they have deposed,
Some poisoned by their wives, some sleeping killed,
All murdered. For within the hollow crown
That rounds the mortal temples of a king
Keeps Death his court; and there the antic sits,
Scoffing his state and grinning at his pomp,
Allowing him a breath, a little scene,
To monarchize, be feared, and kill with looks,
Infusing him with self and vain conceit,

As if this flesh which walls about our life
Were brass impregnable; and humoured thus,
Comes at the last, and with a little pin
Bores through his castle wall; and farewell, king.
Cover your heads and mock not flesh and blood
With solemn reverence. Throw away respect,
Tradition, form, and ceremonious duty,
For you have but mistook me all this while.
I live with bread, like you; feel want,
Taste grief, need friends. Subjected thus,
How can you say to me I am a king?

Timon of Athens, Act IV, Scene 3

APEMANTUS:

If thou didst put this sour cold habit on
To castigate thy pride, 'twere well, but thou
Dost it enforcedly. Thou'dst courtier be again
Wert thou not beggar. Willing misery
Outlives incertain pomp, is crowned before.
The one is filling still, never complete,
The other at high wish. Best state, contentless,
Hath a distracted and most wretched being,
Worse than the worst, content.
Thou shouldst desire to die, being miserable.

TIMON:

Not by his breath that is more miserable.
Thou art a slave whom fortune's tender arm
With favour never clasped, but bred a dog.
Hadst thou like us from our first swathe proceeded
The sweet degrees that this brief world affords
To such as may the passive drudges of it
Freely command, thou wouldst have plunged thyself
In general riot, melted down thy youth
In different beds of lust, and never learned
The icy precepts of respect, but followed
The sugared game before thee. But myself,
Who had the world as my confectionary,

The mouths, the tongues, the eyes and hearts of men
At duty, more than I could frame employment,
That numberless upon me stuck, as leaves
Do on the oak, have with one winter's brush
Fell from their boughs, and left me open, bare
For every storm that blows. I to bare this,
That never knew but better, is some burden.
Thy nature did commence in sufferance, time
Hath made thee hard in't. Why shouldst thou hate men?
They never flattered thee. What hast thou given?
If thou wilt curse, thy father, that poor rag,
Must be thy subject, who in spite put stuff
To some she-beggar and compounded thee
Poor rogue hereditary. Hence, be gone.
If thou hadst not been born the worst of men
Thou hadst been a knave and flatterer.

Henry V, Act I, Scene 2

CANTERBURY:

True. Therefore doth heaven divide
The state of man in divers functions,
Setting endeavour in continual motion;
To which is fixed, as an aim or butt,
Obedience. For so work the honey-bees,
Creatures that by a rule in nature teach
The act of order to a peopled kingdom.
They have a king, and officers of sorts,
Where some like magistrates correct at home;
Others like merchants venture trade abroad;
Others like soldiers, armed in their stings,
Make boot upon the summer's velvet buds,
Which pillage they with merry march bring home
To the tent royal of their emperor,
Who busied in his majesty surveys
The singing masons building roofs of gold,
The civil citizens lading up the honey,
The poor mechanic porters crowding in
Their heavy burdens at his narrow gate,
The sad-eyed justice with his surly hum
Delivering o'er to executors pale
The lazy yawning drone. I this infer:
That many things, having full reference

To one consent, may work contrariously.
As many arrows, loosed several ways,
Fly to one mark, as many ways meet in one town,
As many fresh streams meet in one salt sea,
As many lines close in the dial's centre,
So may a thousand actions once afoot
End in one purpose, and be all well borne
Without defect. Therefore to France my liege.
Divide your happy England into four,
Whereof take you one quarter into France,
And you withal shall make all Gallia shake.
If we with thrice such powers left at home
Cannot defend our own doors from the dog,
Let us be worried, and our nation lose
The name of hardiness and policy.

Coriolanus, Act II, Scene 2

SECOND OFFICER: There hath been many great men that have flattered the people who ne'er loved them; and there be many that they have loved they know not wherefore, so that if they love they know not why; they hate upon no better a ground. Therefore for Coriolanus neither to care whether they love or hate him manifests the true knowledge he has in their disposition, and out of his noble carelessness lets them plainly see it.

FIRST OFFICER: If he did not care whether he had their love or no he waved indifferently 'twixt doing them neither good nor harm, but he seeks their hate with greater devotion than they can render it him, and leaves nothing undone that may fully discover him their opposite. Now to seem to affect the malice and displeasure of the people is as bad as that which he dislikes, to flatter them for their love.

SECOND OFFICER: He hath deserved worthily of his country, and his ascent is not by such easy degrees as those who, having been supple and courteous to the people, bonneted, without any further deed to have them at all into their estimation and report. But he hath so planted his honours in their eyes and his actions in their hearts that for their tongues to be silent and not confess so much were a kind of in-grateful injury. To report otherwise were a malice that, giving itself the lie, would pluck reproof and rebuke from every ear that heard it.

FIRST OFFICER: No more of him. He's a worthy man.

Henry V, Act IV, Scene 2

KING HARRY:

Upon the King:
‘Let us our lives, our souls, our debts, our care-full wives,
Our children, and our sins, lay on the King.’
We must bear all. O hard condition,
Twin-born with greatness, subject to the breath of every fool,
Whose sense no more can feel
But his own wringing. What infinite heartsease
Must kings neglect that private men enjoy?
And what have kings that privates have not too,
Save ceremony, save general ceremony?
And what art thou, thou idol ceremony?
What kind of god art thou, that suffer'st more
Of mortal griefs than do thy worshippers?
What are thy rents? What are thy comings-in?
O ceremony, show me but thy worth.
What is thy soul of adoration?
Art thou aught else but place, degree, and form,
Creating awe and fear in other men?
Wherein thou art less happy, being feared,
Than they in fearing.
What drink'st thou oft, instead of homage sweet,
But poisoned flattery? O be sick, great greatness,
And bid thy ceremony give thee cure.

Think'st thou the fiery fever will go out
With titles blown from adulation?
Will it give place to flexure and low bending?
Canst thou, when thou command'st the beggar's knee,
Command the health of it? No, thou proud dream
That play'st so subtly with a king's repose.
I am a king that find thee, and I know
'Tis not the balm, the sceptre, and the ball,
The sword, the mace, the crown imperial,
The intertissued robe of gold and pearl,
The farced title running fore the king,
The throne he sits on, nor the tide of pomp
That beats upon the high shore of this world.
No, not all these, thrice-gorgeous ceremony,
Not all these, laid in bed majestical,
Can sleep so soundly as the wretched slave
Who with a body filled and vacant mind
Gets him to rest, crammed with distressful bread;
Never sees horrid night, the child of hell,
But like a lackey from the rise to set
Sweats in the eye of Phoebus, and all night
Sleeps in Elysium; next day, after dawn
Doth rise and help Hyperion to his horse,
And follows so the ever-running year
With profitable labour to his grave.
And but for ceremony such a wretch,
Winding up days with toil and nights with sleep

Had the forehand and vantage of a king.
The slave, a member of the country's peace,
Enjoys it, but in gross brain little wots
What watch the King keeps to maintain the peace,
Whose hours the peasant best advantages.

Measure for Measure, Act I, Scene 1

DUKE:

Of government the properties to unfold
Would seem in me t'affect speech and discourse,
Since I am put to know that your own science
Exceeds in that the lists of all advice
My strength can give you. Then no more remains
But this: to your sufficiency, as your worth is able,
And let them work. The nature of our people,
Our city's institutions and the terms
For common justice, you're as pregnant in
As art and practice hath enriched any
That we remember.

He gives Escalus papers.

There is our commission,
From which we would not have you warp.

(To a lord)

Call hither,
I say bid come before us Angelo.

(To Escalus)

What figure of us think you he will bear?
For you must know we have with special soul

Elected him our absence to supply,
Lent him our terror, dressed him with our love,
And given his deputation all the organs
Of our own power. What think you of it?

ESCALUS:

If any in Vienna be of worth
To undergo such ample grace and honour
It is Lord Angelo.

Enter Angelo

DUKE:

Look where he comes.

ANGELO:

Always obedient to your grace's will,
I come to know your pleasure.

DUKE:

Angelo,
There is a kind of character in thy life
That to th'observer doth thy history
Fully unfold. Thyself and thy belongings
Are not thine own so proper as to waste
Thyself upon thy virtues, they on thee.
Heaven doth with us as we with torches do,
Not light them for themselves; for if our virtues

Did not go forth of us, 'twere all alike
As if we had them not. Spirits are not finely touched
But to fine issues, nor nature never lends
The smallest scruple of her excellence
But, like a thrifty goddess, she determines Herself the glory of a creditor,
Both thanks and use. But I do bend my speech
To one that can my part in him advertise.
Hold therefore, Angelo.
In our remove be thou at full ourself:
Mortality and mercy in Vienna
Live in thy tongue and heart. Old Escalus,
Though first in question, is thy secondary.
Take thy commission.

Richard II, Act V, Scene 5

KING RICHARD:

I have been studying how I may compare
This prison where I live unto the world,
And for because the world is populous,
And here is not a creature but myself,
I cannot do it. Yet I'll hammer it out.
My brain I'll prove the female to my soul,
My soul the father, and these two beget
A generation of still-breeding thoughts,
And these same thoughts people this little world
In humours like the people of this world.
For no thought is contented. The better sort,
As thoughts of things divine, are intermixed
With scruples, and do set the faith itself
Against the faith, as thus:‘Come, little ones’,
And then again,
‘It is as hard to come as for a camel
To thread the postern of a small needle's eye.’
Thoughts tending to ambition, they do plot
Unlikely wonders: how these vain, weak nails
May tear a passage through the flinty ribs
Of this hard world, my ragged prison walls;
And for they cannot, die in their own pride.
Thoughts tending to content flatter themselves

That they are not the first of fortune's slaves,
Nor shall not be the last, like seely beggars,
Who, sitting in the stocks, refuge their shame
That many have, and others must, set there;
And in this thought they find a kind of ease,
Bearing their own misfortunes on the back
Of such as have before endured the like.
Thus play I in one person many people,
And none contented. Sometimes am I king,
Then treason makes me wish myself a beggar,
And so I am. Then crushing penury
Persuades me I was better when a king.
Then am I kinged again, and by and by
Think that I am unkinged by Bolingbroke,
And straight am nothing. But whate'er I be,
Nor I, nor any man that but man is,
With nothing shall be pleased till he be eased
With being nothing.

Timon of Athens, Act I, Scene 1

POET:

You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors.
I have in this rough work shaped out a man
Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hug
With amplest entertainment. My free drift
Halts not particularly, but moves itself
In a wide sea of tax. No levelled malice
Infects one comma in the course I hold,
But flies an eagle flight, bold and forth on,
Leaving no tract behind.

PAINTER:

How shall I understand you?

POET:

I will unbolt to you.
You see how all conditions, how all minds,
As well of glib and slipp'ry creatures as
Of grave and austere quality, tender down
Their service to Lord Timon. His large fortune,
Upon his good and gracious nature hanging,
Subdues and properties to his love and tendance
All sorts of hearts. Yea, from the glass-faced flatterer
To Apemantus, that few things loves better
Than to abhor himself; even he drops down

The knee before him, and returns in peace,
Most rich in Timon's nod.

PAINTER:

I saw them speak together.

POET:

Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant hill
Feigned Fortune to be throned. The base o'th'mount
Is ranked with all deserts, all kind of natures
That labour on the bosom of this sphere
To propagate their states. Amongst them all
Whose eyes are on this sovereign lady fixed
One do I personate of Lord Timon's frame,
Whom Fortune with her ivory hand wafts to her,
Whose present grace to present slaves and servants
Translates his rivals.

PAINTER:

'Tis conceived to scope.
This throne, this Fortune, and this hill methinks,
With one man beckoned from the rest below,
Bowing his head against the steepy mount
To climb his happiness, would be well expressed
In our condition.

POET:

Nay sir, but hear me on.

All those which were his fellows but of late,
Some better than his value, on the moment
Follow his strides, his lobbies fill with tendance,
Rain sacrificial whisperings in his ear,
Make sacred even his stirrup, and through him
Drink the free air.

PAINTER:

Ay, marry, what of these?

POET:

When Fortune in her shift and change of mood
Spurns down her late beloved, all his dependants,
Which laboured after him to the mountain's top
Even on their knees and hands, let him fall down,
Not one accompanying his declining foot.

Henry IV, Part I, Act I, Scene 2

SIR JOHN OLDCASTLE: Marry then, sweet wag, when thou art king let not us that are squires of the night's body be called thieves of the day's beauty. Let us be‘Diana's foresters’,‘gentlemen of the shade’,‘minions of the moon’, and let men say we be men of good government, being governed, as the sea is, by our noble and chaste mistress the moon, under whose countenance we steal.

PRINCE HARRY: Thou sayst well, and it holds well too, for the fortune of us that are the moon's men doth ebb and flow like the sea, being governed as the sea is by the moon. As for proof now: a purse of gold most resolutely snatched on Monday night and most dissolutely spent on Tuesday morning, got with swearing‘lay by!’and spent with crying‘bring in!’, now in as low an ebb as the foot of the ladder and by and by in as high a flow as the ridge of the gallows.

Richard II, Act III, Scene 4

GARDENER (to First Man):

Go, bind thou up young dangling apricots
Which, like unruly children, make their sire
Stoop with oppression of their prodigal weight.
Give some supportance to the bending twigs.
(To Second Man) Go thou, and, like an executioner,
Cut off the heads of too fast-growing sprays
That look too lofty in our commonwealth.
All must be even in our government.
You thus employed, I will go root away
The noisome weeds which without profit suck
The soil's fertility from wholesome flowers.

FIRST MAN:

Why should we, in the compass of a pale,
Keep law and form and due proportion,
Showing as in a model our firm estate,
When our sea-walled garden, the whole land,
Is full of weeds, her fairest flowers choked up,
Her fruit trees all unpruned, her hedges ruined,
Her knots disordered, and her wholesome herbs
Swarming with caterpillars?

GARDENER:

Hold thy peace.

He that hath suffered this disordered spring
Hath now himself met with the fall of leaf.
The weeds which his broad spreading leaves did shelter,
That seemed in eating him to hold him up,
Are plucked up, root and all, by Bolingbroke —
I mean the Earl of Wiltshire, Bushy, Green.

SECOND MAN:

What, are they dead?

GARDENER:

They are; and Bolingbroke
Hath seized the wasteful King. O, what pity is it
That he had not so trimmed and dressed his land
As we this garden! We at time of year
Do wound the bark, the skin of our fruit trees,
Lest, being over-proud in sap and blood,
With too much riches it confound itself.
Had he done so to great and growing men,
They might have lived to bear, and he to taste,
Their fruits of duty. Superfluous branches
We lop away, that bearing boughs may live.
Had he done so, himself had borne the crown,
Which waste of idle hours hath quite thrown down.

King Lear, Act III, Scene 1

GONERIL:

Hear me, my lord.
What need you five-and-twenty, ten, or five,
To follow in a house where twice so many
Have a command to tend you?

REGAN:

What need one?

LEAR:

O, reason not the need! Our basest beggars
Are in the poorest thing superfluous.
Allow not nature more than nature needs.
Man's life is cheap as beast's. Thou art a lady.
If only to go warm were gorgeous,
Why, nature needs not what thou, gorgeous, wear'st,
Which scarcely keeps thee warm. But for true need,
You heavens, give me that patience, patience I need.
You see me here, you gods, a poor old man,
As full of grief as age, wretched in both.
If it be you that stirs these daughters' hearts
Against their father, fool me not so much
To bear it tamely. Touch me with noble anger
And let not women's weapons, water-drops,
Stain my man's cheeks. No, you unnatural hags,

I will have such revenges on you both
That all the world shall — I will do such things —
What they are, yet I know not; but they shall be
The terrors of the earth. You think I'll weep.
No I'll not weep. I have full cause of weeping,

Storm and tempest.

But this heart shall break into a hundred thousand flaws
Or ere I'll weep. O Fool, I shall go mad!

Sonnet 94

They that have power to hurt and will do none,
That do not do the thing they most do show,
Who moving others are themselves as stone,
Unmoved, cold, and to temptation slow;
They rightly do inherit heaven's graces
And husband nature's riches from expense;
They are the lords and owners of their faces,
Others but stewards of their excellence.
The summer's flower is to the summer sweet,
Though to itself it only live and die,
But if that flower with base infection meet
The basest weed outbraves his dignity.
For sweetest things turn sourest by their deeds:
Lilies that fester smell far worse than weeds.

Julius Caesar, Act I, Scene 2

CASSIUS:

Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world
Like a Colossus, and we petty men
Walk under his huge legs and peep about
To find ourselves dishonourable graves.
Men at sometime were masters of their fates.
The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars
But in ourselves, that we are underlings.
Brutus and Caesar: what should be in that‘Caesar’?
Why should that name be sounded more than yours?
Write them together: yours is as fair a name.
Sound them: it doth become the mouth as well.
Weigh them: it is as heavy. Conjure with 'em:
‘Brutus’will start a spirit as soon as‘Caesar’.
Now in the names of all the gods at once,
Upon what meat doth this our Caesar feed
That he is grown so great? Age, thou art shamed.
Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble bloods.
When went there by an age since the great flood,
But it was famed with more than with one man?
When could they say till now, that talked of Rome,
That her wide walls encompassed but one man?
Now is it Rome indeed, and room enough
When there is in it but one only man.

O you and I have heard our fathers say
There was a Brutus once that would have brooked
Th'eternal devil to keep his state in Rome
As easily as a king.

Coriolanus, Act II, Scene 3

BRUTUS (to the citizens):

Could you not have told him
As you were lessoned? When he had no power
But was a petty servant to the state
He was your enemy, ever spake against
Your liberties and the charters that you bear
I'th'body of the weal; and now arriving
A place of potency and sway o'th' state,
If he should still malignantly remain
Fast foe to th' plebeii, your voices might Be curses to yourselves. You should have said
That as his worthy deeds did claim no less
Than what he stood for, so his gracious nature
Would think upon you for your voices and Translate his malice towards you into love,
Standing your friendly lord.

SICINIUS (to the citizens):

Thus to have said
As you were foreadvised had touched his spirit
And tried his inclination, from him plucked Either is gracious promise, which you might,
As cause had called you up, have held him to,
Or else it would have galled his surly nature,
Which easily endures not article

Tying him to aught. So putting him to rage,
You should have ta'en th'advantage of his choler
And passed him unelected.

BRUTUS (to the citizens):

Did you perceive
He did solicit you in free contempt
When he did need your loves, and do you think
That his contempt shall not be bruising to you
When he hath power to crush? Why, had your bodies
No heart among you? Or had you tongues to cry
Against the rectorship of judgement?

SICINIUS (to the citizens):

Have you
Ere now denied the asker, and now again,
Of him that did not ask but mock, bestow
Your sued-for tongues?

THIRD CITIZEN:

He's not confirmed, we may deny him yet.

SECOND CITIZEN:

And will deny him.
I'll have five hundred voices of that sound.

FIRST CITIZEN:

I twice five hundred, and their friends to piece 'em.

BRUTUS :

Get you hence instantly, and tell those friends
They have chose a consul that will from them take Their liberties, make them of no more voice
Than dogs that are as often beat for barking
As therefor kept to do so.

Othello, Act I, Scene 1

IAGO:

I follow him to serve my turn upon him.
We cannot all be masters, nor all masters
Cannot be truly followed. You shall mark
Many a duteous and knee-crooking knave
That, doting on his own obsequious bondage,
Wears out his time much like his master's ass,
For naught but provender, and when he's old, cashiered.
Whip me such honest knaves. Others there are
Who, trimmed in forms and visages of duty,
Keep yet their hearts attending on themselves,
And throwing but shows of service on their lords
Do well thrive by 'em, and when they have lined their coats
Do themselves homage. These fellows have some soul,
And such a one do I profess myself; for, sir,
It is as sure that you are Roderigo,
Were I the Moor I would not be Iago.
In following him I follow but myself.
Heaven is my judge, not I for love and duty,
But seeming so for my peculiar end.
For when my outward action doth demonstrate
The native act and figure of my heart
In compliment extern, 'tis not long after
But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve

For daws to peck at. I am not what I am.

Richard III, Act III, Scene 7

BUCKINGHAM:

Know then, it is your fault that you resign
The supreme seat, the throne majestical,
The sceptred office of your ancestors,
Your state of fortune and your due of birth,
The lineal glory of your royal house,
To the corruption of a blemished stock,
Whiles in the mildness of your sleepy thoughts —
Which here we waken to our country's good —
The noble isle doth want her proper limbs.
Her face defaced with scars of infamy,
Her royal stock graft with ignoble plants
And almost shouldered in the swallowing gulf
Of dark forgetfulness and deep oblivion,
Which to recure we heartily solicit
Your gracious self to take on you the charge
And kingly government of this your land,
Not as Protector, steward, substitute,
Or lowly factor for another's gain,
But as successively, from blood to blood,
Your right of birth, your empery, your own.
For this, consorted with the citizens,
Your very worshipful and loving friends,
And by their vehement instigation,

In this just cause come I to move your grace.

RICHARD GLOUCESTER:

I cannot tell if to depart in silence
Or bitterly to speak in your reproof
Best fitteth my degree or your condition.
Your love deserves my thanks, but my desert,
Unmeritable, shuns your high request.
First, if all obstacles were cut away
And that my path were even to the crown,
As the ripe revenue and due of birth,
Yet so much is my poverty of spirit,
So mighty and so many my defects,
That I would rather hide me from my greatness —
Being a barque to brook no mighty sea —
Than in my greatness covet to be hid,
And in the vapour of my glory smothered.
But, God be thanked, there is no need of me,
And much I need to help you, were there need.
The royal tree hath left us royal fruit,
Which, mellowed by the stealing hours of time,
Will well become the seat of majesty
And make, no doubt, us happy by his reign.
On him I lay that you would lay on me,
The right and fortune of his happy stars,
Which God defend that I should wring from him.

BUCKINGHAM:

My lord, this argues conscience in your grace,
But the respects thereof are nice and trivial,
All circumstances well considered.
You say that Edward is your brother's son,
So say we too, but not by Edward's wife,
For first was he contract to Lady Lucy,
Your mother lives a witness to his vow,
And afterward, by substitute, betrothed
To Bona, sister to the King of France.
These both put off, a poor petitioner,
A care-crazed mother to a many sons,
A beauty-waning and distressed widow
Even in the afternoon of her best days,
Made prize and purchase of his wanton eye,
Seduced the pitch and height of his degree
To base declension and loathed bigamy.
By her in his unlawful bed he got
This Edward, whom our manners call the Prince.
More bitterly could I expostulate,
Save that for reverence to some alive
I give a sparing limit to my tongue.
Then, good my lord, take to your royal self
This proffered benefit of dignity,
If not to bless us and the land withal,
Yet to draw forth your noble ancestry
From the corruption of abusing times

Unto a lineal, true-derived course.

MAYOR (to Richard):

Do, good my lord. Your citizens entreat you.

BUCKINGHAM (to Richard):

Refuse not, mighty lord, this proffered love.

CATESBY (to Richard):

O make them joyful. Grant their lawful suit.

RICHARD GLOUCESTER:

Alas, why would you heap this care on me?
I am unfit for state and majesty.
I do beseech you, take it not amiss,
I cannot, nor I will not, yield to you.

BUCKINGHAM:

If you refuse it, as, in love and zeal,
Loath to depose the child, your brother's son,
As well we know your tenderness of heart
And gentle, kind, effeminate remorse,
Which we have noted in you to your kindred,
And equally indeed to all estates,
Yet know, whe'er you accept our suit or no,
Your brother's son shall never reign our king;
But we will plant some other in the throne,
To the disgrace and downfall of your house.

And in this resolution here we leave you.
Come, citizens. 'Swounds, I'll entreat no more.

RICHARD GLOUCESTER:

O do not swear, my lord of Buckingham.
Exeunt Buckingham and some others.

CATESBY:

Call him again, sweet prince. Accept their suit.

(ANOTHER):

If you deny them, all the land will rue it.

RICHARD GLOUCESTER:

Will you enforce me to a world of cares?
Call them again.

Exit one or more.

I am not made of stone,
But penetrable to your kind entreats,
Albeit against my conscience and my soul.

Enter Buckingham and the rest.

Cousin of Buckingham, and sage, grave men,
Since you will buckle fortune on my back,
To bear her burden, whe'er I will or no,
I must have patience to endure the load.
But if black scandal or foul-faced reproach

Attend the sequel of your imposition,
Your mere enforcement shall acquittance me
From all the impure blots and stains thereof.
For God doth know, and you may partly see,
How far I am from the desire of this.

MAYOR:

God bless your grace! We see it and will say it.

RICHARD GLOUCESTER:

In saying so you shall but say the truth.

BUCKINGHAM:

Then I salute you with this royal title:
Long live kind Richard, England's worthy king!

(ALL BUT RICHARD):

Amen.

Troilus and Cressida, Act I, Scene 3

ULYSSES:

Troy, yet upon his basis, had been down
And the great Hector's sword had lacked a master
But for these instances:
The specialty of rule hath been neglected,
And look how many Grecian tents do stand
Hollow upon this plain: so many hollow factions.
When that the general is not like the hive
To whom the foragers shall all repair,
What honey is expected? Degree being vizarded,
Th'unworthiest shows as fairly in the masque
[...]
The heavens themselves, the planets, and this centre,
Observe degree, priority, and place,
Infixture, course, proportion, season, form,
Office and custom, in all line of order.
And therefore is the glorious planet Sol,
In noble eminence enthroned and sphered
Amidst the other, whose med'cinable eye
Corrects the ill aspects of planets evil
And posts like the commandment of a king,
Sans check, to good and bad. But when the planets
In evil mixture to disorder wander,
What plagues and what portents, what mutiny?

What raging of the sea, shaking of earth?
Commotion in the winds, frights, changes, horrors
Divert and crack, rend and deracinate
The unity and married calm of states
Quite from their fixture. O when degree is shaked,
Which is the ladder to all high designs,
The enterprise is sick. How could communities,
Degrees in schools, and brotherhoods in cities,
Peaceful commerce from dividable shores,
The primogenity and due of birth,
Prerogative of age, crowns, sceptres, laurels,
But by degree stand in authentic place?
Take but degree away, untune that string,
And hark what discord follows. Each thing meets
In mere oppugnancy. The bounded waters
Should lift their bosoms higher than the shores
And make a sop of all this solid globe;
Strength should be lord of imbecility,
And the rude son should strike his father dead.
Force should be right; or rather, right and wrong,
Between whose endless jar justice resides,
Should lose their names, and so should justice too,
Then everything includes itself in power:
Power into will, will into appetite,
And appetite, an universal wolf,
So doubly seconded with will and power,
Must make perforce an universal prey,

And last eat up himself. Great Agamemnon,
This chaos, when degree is suffocate,
Follows the choking;
And this neglection of degree it is,
That by a pace goes backward in a purpose
It hath to climb. The general's disdained
By him one step below; he, by the next;
That next, by him beneath. So every step,
Exampled by the first pace that is sick
Of his superior, grows to an envious fever
Of pale and bloodless emulation.
And 'tis this fever that keeps Troy on foot,
Not her own sinews. To end a tale of length:
Troy in our weakness lives, not in her strength.

Henry IV, Part II, Act III, Scene 1

KING HENRY:

How many thousand of my poorest subjects
Are at this hour asleep? O sleep, O gentle sleep,
Nature's soft nurse, how have I frighted thee
That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down
And steep my senses in forgetfulness?
Why rather, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs,
Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee,
And hushed with buzzing night-flies to thy slumber,
Than in the perfumed chambers of the great,
Under the canopies of costly state
And lulled with sound of sweetest melody?
O thou dull god, why li'st thou with the vile
In loathsome beds, and leav'st the kingly couch
A watch-case, or a common 'larum-bell?
Wilt thou upon the high and giddy mast
Seal up the ship-boy's eyes, and rock his brains
In cradle of the rude imperious surge,
And in the visitation of the winds,
Who take the ruffian billows by the top,
Curling their monstrous heads and hanging them
With deafing clamour in the slippery clouds,
That, with the hurly, death itself awakes?
Canst thou, O partial sleep, give thy repose

To the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude,
And in the calmest and most stillest night,
With all appliances and means to boot,
Deny it to a king? Then happy low, lie down.
Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

Power in the family

The Merchant of Venice, Act III, Scene 2

PORTIA:

You see me, Lord Bassanio, where I stand,
Such as I am. Though for myself alone
I would not be ambitious in my wish
To wish myself much better, yet for you
I would be trebled twenty times myself,
A thousand times more fair, ten thousand times more rich,
That only to stand high in your account
I might in virtues, beauties, livings, friends,
Exceed account. But the full sum of me
Is sum of something which, to term in gross
Is an unlessoned girl, unschooled, unpractised,
Happy in this, she is not yet so old
But she may learn; happier than this,
She is not bred so dull but she can learn;
Happiest of all is that her gentle spirit
Commits itself to yours to be directed
As from her lord, her governor, her king.
Myself and what is mine to you and yours
Is now converted. But now I was the lord
Of this fair mansion, master of my servants,
Queen o'er myself; and even now, but now,
This house, these servants, and this same myself
Are yours, my lord's. I give them with this ring,

Which when you part from, lose, or give away,
Let it presage the ruin of your love,
And be my vantage to exclaim on you.

King Lear, Act I, Scene 1

LEAR:

Meantime we shall express our darker purpose.
Give me the map there. Know that we have divided
In three our kingdom, and 'tis our fast intent
To shake all cares and business from our age,
Conferring them on younger strengths while we Unburdened crawl toward death. Our son of Cornwall,
And you, our no less loving son of Albany,
We have this hour a constant will to publish
Our daughters' several dowers, that future strife
May be prevented now. The princes France and Burgundy —
Great rivals in our youngest daughter's love —
Long in our court have made their amorous sojourn,
And here are to be answered. Tell me, my daughters,
Since now we will divest us both of rule,
Interest of territory, cares of state,
Which of you shall we say doth love us most,
That we our largest bounty may extend
Where nature doth with merit challenge? Goneril,
Our eldest born, speak first.

GONERIL:

Sir, I love you more than words can wield the matter,
Dearer than eyesight, space, and liberty,
Beyond what can be valued, rich or rare,

No less than life, with grace, health, beauty, honour,
As much as child e'er loved or father found,
A love that makes breath poor and speech unable;
Beyond all manner of so much I love you.

CORDELIA (aside):

What shall Cordelia speak? Love and be silent.

LEAR (to Goneril):

Of all these bounds even from this line to this,
With shadowy forests and with champaigns riched,
With plenteous rivers and wide-skirted meads,
We make thee lady. To thine and Albany's issues
Be this perpetual. What says our second daughter?
Our dearest Regan, wife of Cornwall?

REGAN:

I am made of that self mettle as my sister,
And prize me at her worth. In my true heart
I find she names my very deed of love;
Only she comes too short, that I profess
Myself an enemy to all other joys,
Which the most precious square of sense possesses,
And find I am alone felicitate
In your dear highness' love.

CORDELIA (aside):

Then, poor Cordelia,

And yet not so, since I am sure my love's
More ponderous than my tongue.

LEAR (to Regan):

To thee and thine hereditary ever
Remain this ample third of our fair kingdom,
No less in space, validity, and pleasure
Than that conferred on Goneril. (to Cordelia) Now our joy,
Although our last and least, to whose young love
The vines of France and milk of Burgundy
Strive to be interessed: what can you say to draw
A third more opulent than your sisters? Speak.

CORDELIA:

Nothing, my lord.

LEAR:

Nothing?

CORDELIA:

Nothing.

LEAR:

Nothing will come of nothing.

Henry IV, Part II, Act II, Scene 3

LADY PERCY:

O yet, for God's sake, go not to these wars!
The time was, father, that you broke your word
When you were more endeared to it than now,
When your own Percy, when my heart's dear Harry,
Threw many a northward look to see his father
Bring up his powers; but he did long in vain.
Who then persuaded you to stay at home?
There were two honours lost, yours and your son's.
For yours, the God of heaven brighten it!
For his, it stuck upon him as the sun
In the grey vault of heaven, and by his light
Did all the chivalry of England move
To do brave acts. He was indeed the glass
Wherein the noble youth did dress themselves.
He had no legs that practised not his gait;
And speaking thick, which nature made him blemish,
Became the accents of the valiant.
For those that could speak low and tardily
Would turn their own perfection to abuse
To seem like him. So that in speech, in gait,
In diet, in affections of delight,
In military rules, humours of blood,
He was the mark and glass, copy and book,

That fashioned others. And him, O wondrous him!
O miracle of men! Him did you leave,
Second to none, unseconded by you,
To look upon the hideous god of war
In disadvantage, to abide a field
Where nothing but the sound of Hotspur's name
Did seem defensible; so you left him.
Never, O never do his ghost the wrong
To hold your honour more precise and nice
With others than with him. Let them alone.
The Marshal and the Archbishop are strong.
Had my sweet Harry had but half their numbers,
Today might I, hanging on Hotspur's neck,
Have talked of Monmouth's grave.

NORTHUMBERLAND:

Beshrew your heart,
Fair daughter, you do draw my spirits from me
With new lamenting ancient oversights.

Richard III, Act IV, Scene 4

QUEEN MARGARET:

I called thee then‘vain flourish of my fortune’,
I called thee then, poor shadow,‘painted queen’,
The presentation of but what I was,
The flattering index of a direful pageant,
One heaved a-high to be hurled down below,
A mother only mocked with two fair babes,
A dream of what thou wast, a garish flag
To be the aim of every dangerous shot,
A sign of dignity, a breath, a bubble,
A queen in jest, only to fill the scene.
Where is thy husband now? Where be thy brothers?
Where are thy two sons? Wherein dost thou joy?
Who sues, and kneels, and says‘God save the Queen’?
Where be the bending peers that flattered thee?
Where be the thronging troops that followed thee?
Decline all this and see what now thou art:
For happy wife, a most distressed widow;
For joyful mother, one that wails the name;
For queen, a very caitiff, crowned with care;
For one being sued to, one that humbly sues;
For she that scorned at me, now scorned of me;
For she being feared of all, now fearing one;
For she commanding all, obeyed of none.

Thus hath the course of justice whirled about
And left thee but a very prey to time,
Having no more but thought of what thou wert
To torture thee the more, being what thou art.
Thou didst usurp my place, and dost thou not
Usurp the just proportion of my sorrow?
Now thy proud neck bears half my burdened yoke,
From which, even here, I slip my weary head,
And leave the burden of it all on thee.
Farewell, York's wife, and queen of sad mischance.

A Midsummer Night's Dream, Act I, Scene 1

EGEUS:

Full of vexation come I, with complaint
Against my child, my daughter Hermia.
Stand forth Demetrius. My noble lord,
This man hath my consent to marry her.
Stand forth Lysander. And, my gracious Duke,
This hath bewitched the bosom of my child.
Thou, thou, Lysander, thou hast given her rhymes
And interchanged love tokens with my child.
Thou hast by moonlight at her window sung
With feigning voice verses of feigning love,
And stol'n the impression of her fantasy
With bracelets of thy hair, rings, gauds, conceits,
Knacks, trifles, nosegays, sweetmeats; messengers
Of strong prevailment in unhardened youth.
With cunning hast thou filched my daughter's heart,
Turned her obedience which is due to me
To stubborn harshness. And, my gracious Duke,
Be it so she will not here before your grace
Consent to marry with Demetrius,
I beg the ancient privilege of Athens:
As she is mine, I may dispose of her,
Which shall be either to this gentleman
Or to her death, according to our law

Immediately provided in that case.

THESEUS：

What say you Hermia? Be advised, fair maid.
To you your father should be as a god,
One that composed your beauties, yea, and one
To whom you are but as a form in wax,
By him imprinted, and within his power
To leave the figure or disfigure it.
Demetrius is a worthy gentleman.

HERMIA：

So is Lysander.

THESEUS：

In himself he is,
But in this kind, wanting your father's voice,
The other must be held the worthier.

HERMIA：

I would my father looked but with my eyes.

THESEUS：

Rather your eyes must with his judgement look.

HERMIA：

I do entreat your grace to pardon me.
I know not by what power I am made bold,
Nor how it may concern my modesty

In such a presence here to plead my thoughts,
But I beseech your grace that I may know
The worst that may befall me in this case
If I refuse to wed Demetrius.

THESEUS:

Either to die the death, or to abjure
For ever the society of men.
Therefore, fair Hermia, question your desires.
Know of your youth, examine well your blood,
Whether, if you yield not to your father's choice,
You can endure the livery of a nun,
For aye to be in shady cloister mewed,
To live a barren sister all your life,
Chanting faint hymns to the cold fruitless moon.
Thrice blessed they that master so their blood
To undergo such maiden pilgrimage;
But earthlier happy is the rose distilled
Than that which, withering on the virgin thorn,
Grows, lives, and dies in single blessedness.

HERMIA:

So will I grow, so live, so die, my lord,
Ere I will yield my virgin patent up
Unto his lordship whose unwished yoke
My soul consents not to give sovereignty.

The Winter's Tale, Act I, Scene 2

HERMIONE:

If you would seek us,
We are yours i'th' garden. Shall's attend you there?

LEONTES:

To your own bents dispose you. You'll be found,
Be you beneath the sky. I am angling now,
Though you perceive me not how I give line.
Go to, go to!
How she holds up the neb, the bill to him,
And arms her with the boldness of a wife
To her allowing husband!

Exeunt Polixenes and Hermione.

Gone already.
Inch-thick, knee-deep, o'er head and ears a forked one!
Go play, boy, play. Thy mother plays, and I
Play too, but so disgraced a part, whose issue
Will hiss me to my grave. Contempt and clamour
Will be my knell. Go play, boy, play. There have been,
Or I am much deceived, cuckolds ere now,
And many a man there is, even at this present,
Now, while I speak this, holds his wife by th'arm,
That little thinks she has been sluiced in's absence,

And his pond fished by his next neighbour, by Sir Smile, his neighbour. Nay, there's comfort in't, Whiles other men have gates, and those gates opened,
As mine, against their will. Should all despair
That have revolted wives, the tenth of mankind
Would hang themselves. Physic for't there's none.
It is a bawdy planet, that will strike
Where 'tis predominant; and 'tis powerful. Think it:
From east, west, north, and south, be it concluded,
No barricado for a belly. Know't,
It will let in and out the enemy
With bag and baggage. Many thousand on's
Have the disease and feel't not.

The Tempest, Act I, Scene 2

MIRANDA:

If by your art, my dearest father, you have Put the wild waters in this roar, allay them.
The sky, it seems, would pour down stinking pitch,
But that the sea, mounting to th' welkin's cheek,
Dashes the fire out. O, I have suffered
With those that I saw suffer! A brave vessel,
Who had, no doubt, some noble creature in her,
Dashed all to pieces! O, the cry did knock
Against my very heart! Poor souls, they perished.
Had I been any god if power I would Have sunk the sea within the earth, or ere
It should the good ship so have swallowed and
The fraughting souls within her.

PROSPERO:

Be collected.
No more amazement. Tell your piteous heart
There's no harm done.

MIRANDA:

O woe the day!

PROSPERO:

No harm.

I have done nothing but in care of thee,
Of thee, my dear one, thee, my daughter, who Art ignorant of what thou art, naught knowing
Of whence I am, nor that I am more better
Than Prospero, master of a full poor cell
And thy no greater father.

All's Well That Ends Well, Act II, Scene 3

KING:

'Tis only title thou disdain'st in her, the which
I can build up. Strange is it that our bloods,
Of colour, weight, and heat, poured all together,
Would quite confound distinction, yet stands off
In differences so mighty. If she be
All that is virtuous, save what thou dislik'st —
‘A poor physician's daughter’— thou dislik'st
Of virtue for the name. But do not so.
From lowest place when virtuous things proceed,
The place is dignified by th' doer's deed.
Where great additions swell's, and virtue none,
It is a dropsied honour. Good alone
Is good without a name, vileness is so:
The property by what it is should go,
Not by the title. She is young, wise, fair.
In these to nature she's immediate heir,
And these breed honour. That is honour's scorn,
Which challenges itself as honour's born,
And is not like the sire. Honours thrive
When rather from our acts we them derive
Than our foregoers. The mere word's a slave,
Debauched on every tomb, on every grave
A lying trophy, and as oft is dumb

Where dust and dammed oblivion is the tomb
Of honoured bones indeed. What should be said?
If thou canst like this creature as a maid
I can create the rest. Virtue and she Is her own dower; honour and wealth from me.

BERTRAM:

I cannot love her, nor will strive to do't.

KING:

Thou wrong'st thyself. If thou shouldst strive to choose —

HELEN:

That you are well restored, my lord, I'm glad.
Let the rest go.

KING:

Mine honour's at the stake, which to defeat
I must produce my power. Here, take her hand,
Proud, scornful boy, unworthy this good gift,
That dost in vile misprision shackle up
My love and her desert; that canst not dream,
We, poising us in her defective scale,
Shall weigh to the beam; that wilt not know
It is in us to plant thine honour where
We please to have it grow. Check thy contempt,
Obey our will, which travails in thy good;
Believe not thy disdain, but presently

Do thine own fortunes that obedient right
Which both thy duty owes and our power claims,
Or I will throw thee from my care for ever
Into the staggers and the careless lapse
Of youth and ignorance, both my revenge and hate
Loosing upon thee in the name of justice
Without all terms of pity. Speak. Thine answer.

BERTRAM:

Pardon, my gracious lord, for I submit
My fancy to your eyes. When I consider
What great creation and what dole of honour
Flies where you bid it, I find that she, which late
Was in my nobler thoughts most base, is now
The praised of the King, who, so ennobled,
Is as 'twere born so.

Measure for Measure, Act II, Scene 4

ANGELO:

Who will believe thee, Isabel?
My unsoiled name, th'austereness of my life,
My vouch against you, and my place i'th' state,
Will so your accusation overweigh
That you shall stifle in your own report,
And smell of calumny. I have begun,
And now I give my sensual race the rein.
Fit thy consent to my sharp appetite.
Lay by all nicety and prolixious blushes
That banish what they sue for. Redeem thy brother
By yielding up thy body to my will,
Or else he must not only die the death,
But thy unkindness shall his death draw out
To ling'ring sufferance. Answer me tomorrow,
Or by the affection that now guides me most,
I'll prove a tyrant to him. As for you,
Say what you can, my false o'erweighs your true.

Exit.

ISABELLA:

To whom should I complain? Did I tell this
Who would believe me? O perilous mouths
That bear in them one and the selfsame tongue

Either of condemnation or aproof,
Bidding the law make curtsy to their will,
Hooking both right and wrong to th'appetite,
To follow as it draws! I'll to my brother.
Though he hath fall'n by prompture of the blood,
Yet hath he in him such a mind of honour
That had he twenty heads to tender down
On twenty bloody blocks, he'd yield them up
Before his sister should her body stoop
To such abhorred pollution.
Then Isabel live chaste, and brother die.
More than our brother is our chastity.

Henry IV, Part II, Act IV, Scene 5

PRINCE HARRY:

I never thought to hear you speak again.

KING HENRY:

Thy wish was father, Harry, to that thought.
I stay too long by thee. I weary thee.
Dost thou so hunger for mine empty chair
That thou wilt needs invest thee with my honours
Before thy hour be ripe? O foolish youth,
Thou seek'st the greatness that will overwhelm thee!
Stay but a little, for my cloud of dignity
Is held from falling with so weak a wind
That it will quickly drop. My day is dim.
Thou hast stol'n that which after some few hours
Were thine without offence, and at my death
Thou hast sealed up my expectation.
Thy life did manifest thou loved'st me not,
And thou wilt have me die assured of it.
Thou hidst a thousand daggers in thy thoughts,
Whom thou hast whetted on thy stony heart
To stab at half an hour of my life.
What, canst thou not forbear me half an hour?
Then get thee gone and dig my grave thyself,
And bid the merry bells ring to thine ear
That thou art crowned, not that I am dead.

Let all the tears that should bedew my hearse
Be drops of balm to sanctify thy head.
Only compound me with forgotten dust.
Give that which gave thee life unto the worms.
Pluck down my officers, break my decrees;
For now a time is come to mock at form.
Harry the Fifth is crowned. Up, vanity!
Down, royal state! All you sage counsellors, hence!
And to the English court assemble now
From every region apes of idleness!
Now, neighbour confines, purge you of your scum!
Have you a ruffian that will swear, drink, dance,
Revel the night, rob, murder, and commit
The oldest sins the newest kind of ways?
Be happy, he will trouble you no more.
England shall double gild his treble guilt;
England shall give him office, honour, might;
For the fifth Harry from curbed licence plucks
The muzzle of restraint, and the wild dog
Shall flesh his tooth on every innocent.
O my poor kingdom, sick with civil blows!
When that my care could not withhold thy riots,
What wilt thou do when riot is thy care?
O, thou wilt be a wilderness again,
Peopled with wolves, thy old inhabitants.

PRINCE HARRY:

O pardon me, my liege! But for my tears,
The moist impediments unto my speech,
I had forestalled this dear and deep rebuke
Ere you with grief had spoke and I had heard
The course of it so far. There is your crown.

(He returns the crown and kneels.)

And He that wears the crown immortally
Long guard it yours! If I affect it more
Than as your honour and as your renown,
Let me no more from this obedience rise,
Which is my most true and inward duteous spirit
Teacheth this prostrate and exterior bending.
God witness with me, when I here came in
And found no course of breath within your majesty,
How cold it struck my heart. If I do feign,
O, let me in my present wildness die,
And never live to show th'incredulous world
The noble change that I have purposed.
Coming to look on you, thinking you dead,
And dead almost, my liege, to think you were,
I spake unto this crown as having sense
And thus upbraided it:‘The care on thee depending Hath fed upon the body of my father,
Therefore thou best of gold art worst of gold.
Other, less fine in carat, is more precious,

Preserving life in medicine potable,
But thou, most fine, most honoured, most renowned,
Hast eat thy bearer up.’Thus, my royal liege,
Accusing it, I put it on my head,
To try with it, as with an enemy
That had before my face murdered my father,
The quarrel of a true inheritor.
But if it did infect my blood with joy
Or swell my thoughts to any strain of pride,
If any rebel or vain spirit of mine
Did with the least affection of a welcome
Give entertainment to the might of it,
Let God for ever keep it from my head,
And make me as the poorest vassal is,
That doth with awe and terror kneel to it.

KING HENRY:

O my son,
God put it in thy mind to take it hence,
That thou mightst win the more thy father's love,
Pleading so wisely in excuse of it!
Come hither, Harry, sit thou by my bed,
And hear, I think, the very latest counsel
That ever I shall breathe.

Prince Harry sits by the bed.

God knows, my son,

By what bypaths and indirect crook'd ways
I met this crown; and I myself know well
How troublesome it sat upon my head.
To thee it shall descend with better quiet,
Better opinion, better confirmation;
For all the soil of the achievement goes
With me into the earth. It seemed in me
But as an honour snatched with boist'rous hand,
And I had many living to upbraid
My gain of it by their assistances,
Which daily grew to quarrel and to bloodshed
Wounding supposed peace. All these bold fears
Thou seest with peril I have answered;
For all my reign hath been but as a scene
Acting that argument. And now my death
Changes the mood, for what in me was purchased
Falls upon thee in a more fairer sort,
So thou the garland wear'st successively.
Yet though thou stand'st more sure than I could do,
Thou art not firm enough, since griefs are green,
And all thy friends — which thou must make thy friends —
Have but their stings and teeth newly ta'en out,
By whose fell working I was first advanced,
And by whose power I well might lodge a fear
To be again displaced; which to avoid
I cut them off, and had a purpose now
To lead out many to the Holy Land,

Lest rest and lying still might make them look Too near unto my state. Therefore, my Harry,
Be it thy course to busy giddy minds
With foreign quarrels, that action hence borne out
May waste the memory of the former days.
More would I, but my lungs are wasted so
That strength of speech is utterly denied me.
How came I by the crown, O god forgive,
And grant it may with thee in true peace live!

PRINCE HARRY:

My gracious liege,
You won it, wore it, kept it, gave it to me,
Then plain and right must my possession be,
Which I with more than with a common pain
'Gainst all the world will rightfully maintain.

Power in war and violence

Julius Caesar, Act II, Scene 1

BRUTUS :

It must be by his death. And for my part
I know no personal cause to spurn at him
But for the general. He would be crowned.
How that might change his nature, there's the question.
It is the bright day that brings forth the adder
And that craves wary walking. Crown him: that!
And then I grant we put a sting in him
That at his will he may do danger with.
Th'abuse of greatness is when it disjoins
Remorse from power. And to speak truth of Caesar,
I have not known when his affections swayed
More than his reason. But 'tis a common proof
That lowliness is young ambition's ladder,
Whereto the climber-upward turns his face;
But when he once attains the upmost round,
He then unto the ladder turns his back,
Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees
By which he did ascend. So Caesar may.
Then lest he may, prevent. And since the quarrel
Will bear no colour for the thing he is,
Fashion it thus: that what he is, augmented,
Would run to these and these extremities;
And therefore think him as a serpent's egg,

Which, hatched, would as his kind grow mischievous
And kill him in the shell.

Henry V, Act IV, Scene 1

HARRY: I think the King is but a man, as I am. The violet smells to him as it doth to me; the element shows to him as it doth to me. All his senses have but human conditions. His ceremonies laid by, in his nakedness he appears but a man, and though his affections are higher mounted than ours, yet when they stoop, they stoop with the like wing. Therefore, when he sees reason of fears, as we do, his fears, out of doubt, be of the same relish as ours are. Yet, in reason, no man should possess him with any appearance of fear, lest he, by showing it, should dishearten his army.

BATES: He may show what outward courage he will, but I believe, as cold a night as 'tis, he could wish himself in Thames up to the neck. And so I would he were, and I by him, at all adventures, so we were quit here.

KING HARRY: By my troth, I will speak my conscience of the King. I think he would not wish himself anywhere but where he is.

BATES: Then I would he were here alone. So should he be sure to be ransomed, and a many poor men's lives saved.

KING HARRY: I dare say you love him not so ill to wish him here alone, howsoever you speak this to feel other men's minds. Methinks I could not die anywhere so contented as in the King's company, his cause being just and his quarrel honourable.

WILLIAMS: That's more than we know.

BATES: Ay, or more than we should seek after. For we know enough if we know we are the King's subjects. If his cause be wrong, our obedience to the King wipes the crime of it out of us.

WILLIAMS: But if the cause be not good, the King himself hath a heavy reckoning to make, when all those legs and arms and heads chopped off in a battle shall join together at the latter day and cry all,‘We died at such a place’— some swearing, some crying for a surgeon, some upon their wives left poor behind them, some upon the debts they owe, some upon their children rawly left. I am afeard there are few die well that die in a battle, for how can they charitably dispose of anything when blood is their argument? Now, if these men do not die well it will be a black matter for the King that led them to it — who to disobey were against all proportion of subjection.

KING HARRY: So, if a son that is by his father sent about merchandise do sinfully miscarry upon the sea, the imputation of his wickedness, by your rule, should be imposed upon his father, that sent him. Or if a servant, under his master's command transporting a sum of money, be assailed by robbers and die in many irreconciled iniquities, you may call the business of the master the author of the servant's damnation. But this is not so. The King is not bound to answer the particular endings of his soldiers, the father of his son, nor the master of his servant, for they purpose not their deaths when they propose their services. Besides, there is no king, be his cause never so spotless, if it come to the arbitrament of swords, can try it out with all unspotted soldiers. Some, peradventure, have on them the guilt of premeditated and contrived murder; some, of beguiling virgins with the broken seals of perjury; some, making the wars their bulwark, that have before gored the gentle bosom of peace with pillage and robbery. Now, if these men have defeated the law and outrun native punishment, though they can outstrip men, they have no wings to fly from God. War is his beadle. War is his vengeance. So that here men are punished for before breach of the King's laws, in now the King's quarrel. Where they feared the death, they have borne life away, and where they would be safe, they perish. Then if they die unprovided, no more is the King guilty of their damnation than he was before guilty of those impieties for the which they are now visited. Every subject's duty is the King's, but every subject's soul is his own.

Hamlet, Act IV, Scene 4

HAMLET:

How all occasions do inform against me
And spur my dull revenge! What is a man
If his chief good and market of his time
Be but to sleep and feed? A beast, no more.
Sure, he that made us with such large discourse,
Looking before and after, gave us not
That capability and god-like reason
To fust in us unused. Now whether it be Bestial oblivion, or some craven scruple
Of thinking too precisely on th'event —
A thought which, quartered, hath but one part wisdom
And ever three parts coward — I do not know
Why yet I live to say,'This thing's to do',
Sith I have cause and will and strength and means
To do't. Examples gross as earth exhort me,
Witness this army of such mass and charge,
Led by a delicate and tender prince,
Whose spirit with divine ambition puffed
Makes mouths at the invisible event,
Exposing what is mortal and unsure
To all that fortune, death, and danger dare,
Even for an eggshell. Rightly to be great
Is not to stir without great argument

But greatly to find quarrel in a straw
When honour's at the stake. How stand I, then,
That have a father killed, a mother stained,
Excitements of my reason and my blood,
And let all sleep while, to my shame, I see
The imminent death of twenty thousand men
That, for a fantasy and trick of fame,
Go to their graves like beds, fight for a plot
Whereon the numbers cannot try the cause,
Which is not tomb enough and continent
To hide the slain. O from this time forth
My thoughts be bloody or be nothing worth!

Henry IV, Part II, Act I, Scene 3

LORD BARDOLPH:

Yes, if this present quality of war,
Indeed the instant action, a cause on foot,
Lives so in hope, as in an early spring
We see th'appearing buds, which to prove fruit
Hope gives not so much warrant as despair
That frosts will bite them. When we mean to build
We first survey the plot, then draw the model;
And when we see the figure of the house,
Which if we find outweighs ability,
What do we then but draw anew the model
In fewer offices, or at least desist
To build at all? Much more in this great work —
Which is almost to pluck a kingdom down
And set another up — should we survey
The plot of situation and the model,
Consent upon a sure foundation,
Question surveyors, know our own estate,
How able such a work to undergo,
To weigh against his opposite; or else
We fortify in paper and in figures,
Using the names of men instead of men,
Like one that draws the model of an house
Beyond his power to build it, who, half-through,

Gives o'er, and leaves his part-created cost
A naked subject to the weeping clouds,
And waste for churlish winter's tyranny.

Macbeth, Act I, Scene 7

MACBETH:

If it were done when 'tis done, then 'twere well
It were done quickly. If th'assassination
Could trammel up the consequence and catch
With his surcease success, that but this blow
Might be the be-all and end-all, here;
But here upon this bank and shoal of time,
We'd jump the life to come. But in these cases
We still have judgement here, that we but teach
Bloody instructions which, being taught, return
To plague th'inventor. This even-handed justice
Commends th'ingredience of our poisoned chalice
To our own lips. He's here in double trust:
First, as I am his kinsman and his subject,
Strong both against the deed; then, as his host,
Who should against his murderer shut the door,
Not bear the knife myself. Besides, this Duncan Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been
So clear in his great office, that his virtues
Will plead like angels, trumpet-tongued against
The deep damnation of his taking-off,
And pity, like a naked new-born babe,
Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubin, horsed
Upon the sightless couriers of the air,

Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye
That tears shall drown the wind. I have no spur
To prick the sides of my intent, but only
Vaulting ambition which o'erleaps itself
And falls on th'other.

Richard III, Act V, Scene 5

HENRY, EARL OF RICHMOND:

Why then, 'tis time to arm, and give direction.
Much that I could say, loving countrymen,
The leisure and enforcement of the time
Forbids to dwell on. Yet remember this:
God and our good cause fight upon our side.
The prayers of holy saints and wronged souls,
Like high-reared bulwarks, stand before our forces.
Richard except, those whom we fight against
Had rather have us win than him they follow.
For what is he they follow? Truly friends,
A bloody tyrant and a homicide;
One raised in blood, and one in blood established;
One that made means to come by what he hath,
And slaughtered those that were the means to help him;
A base, foul stone, made precious by the foil
Of England's chair, where he is falsely set;
One that hath ever been God's enemy.
Then, if you fight against God's enemy,
God will, in justice, ward you as his soldiers.
If you do sweat to put a tyrant down,
You sleep in peace, the tyrant being slain.
If you do fight against your country's foes,
Your country's fat shall pay your pains the hire.

If you do fight in safeguard of your wives,
Your wives shall welcome home the conquerors.
If you do free your children from the sword,
Your children's children quites it in your age.
Then, in the name of God and all these rights,
Advance your standards! Draw your willing swords!
For me the ransom of this bold attempt
Shall be my cold corpse on the earth's cold face;
But if I thrive, to gain of my attempt,
The least of you shall share his part thereof.
Sound drums and trumpets, bold and cheerfully!
God and Saint George! Richmond and victory!

Henry VI, Part II, Act I, Scene 1

YORK:

Anjou and Maine are given to the French,
Paris is lost, the state of Normandy
Stands on a tickle point now they are gone.
Suffolk concluded on the articles,
The peers agreed, and Henry was well pleased
To change two dukedoms for a duke's fair daughter.
I cannot blame them all — what is't to them?
'Tis thine they give away and not their own!
Pirates may make cheap pennyworths of their pillage,
And purchase friends, and give to courtesans,
Still revelling like lords till all be gone,
Whileas the seely owner of the goods
Weeps over them and wrings his hapless hands,
And shakes his head, and, trembling, stands aloof,
While all is shared and all is borne away,
Ready to starve and dare not touch his own.
So York must sit and fret and bite his tongue
While his own lands are bargained for and sold.
Methinks the realms of England, France, and Ireland
Bear that proportion to my flesh and blood
As did the fatal brand Althaea burnt
Unto the prince's heart of Calydon.
Anjou and Maine both given unto the French!

Cold news for me, for I had hope of France,
Even as I have of fertile England's soil.
A day will come when York shall claim his own
And therefore I will take the Neville's parts,
And make a show of love to proud Duke Humphrey,
And, when I spy advantage, claim the crown.
Then, York, be still a while till time do serve.
Watch thou, and wake when others be asleep,
To pry into the secrets of the state —
Till Henry, surfeit in the joys of love
With his new bride and England's dear-bought queen,
And Humphrey with the peers be fall'n at jars.
Then will I raise aloft the milk-white rose,
With whose sweet smell the air shall be perfumed,
And in my standard bear the arms of York
To grapple with the house of Lancaster;
And force perforce I'll make him yield the crown
Whose bookish rule hath pulled fair England down.

The Tempest, Act III, Scene 3

ARIEL:

You are three men of sin, whom destiny,
That hath to instrument this lower world
And what is in't, the never surfeited sea,
Hath caused to belch up you; and on this island
Where man doth not inhabit, you 'mongst men
Being most unfit to live. I have made you mad,
And even with suchlike valour men hang and drown
Their proper selves.

Alonso, Sebastian, and Antonio draw.

You fools! I and my fellows
Are ministers of fate. The elements
Of whom your swords are tempered may as well
Wound the loud winds, or with bemocked-at stabs
Kill the still-closing waters, as diminish
One dowl that's in my plume. My fellow ministers
Are like invulnerable. If you could hurt,
Your swords are now too massy for your strengths
And will not be uplifted.

Alonso, Sebastian, and Antonio stand amazed.

But remember,
For that's my business to you, that you three

From Milan did supplant good Prospero —
Exposed unto the sea, which hath requit it,
Him and his innocent child — for which foul deed,
The powers, delaying not forgetting, have Incensed the seas and shores, yea, all the creatures,
Against your peace. Thee of thy son, Alonso,
They have bereft, and do pronounce by me
Ling'ring perdition — worse than any death
Can be at once — shall step by step attend
You and your ways, whose wraths to guard you from,
Which here in this most desolate isle else falls
Upon your heads, is nothing but heart's sorrow
And a clear life ensuing.

He ascends and vanishes in thunder. Then, to soft music, enter the spirits again and dance with mocks and mows, and they depart, carrying out the table.

PROSPERO:

Bravely the figure of this harpy has thou
Performed, my Ariel; a grace it had devouring.
Of my instruction hast thou nothing bated
In what thou hadst to say. So with good life
And observation strange my meaner ministers
Their several kinds have done. My high charms work,
And these mine enemies are all knit up
In their distractions. They now are in my power.

Coriolanus, Act I, Scene 1

FIRST CITIZEN: We are accounted poor citizens, the patricians good. What authority surfeits on would relieve us. If they would yield us but the superfluity while it were wholesome we might guess they relieved us humanely, but they think we are too dear. The leanness that afflicts us, the object of our misery, is as an inventory to particularize their abundance. Our sufferance is a gain to them. Let us revenge this with our pikes ere we become rakes, for the gods know I speak this in hunger for bread, not in thirst for revenge.

Henry IV, Part I, Act I, Scene 3

HOTSPUR:

Nay, then I cannot blame his cousin King
That wished him on the barren mountains starve.
But shall it be that you that set the crown
Upon the head of this forgetful man,
And for his sake wear the detested blot
Of murderous subornation, shall it be
That you a world of curses undergo,
Being the agents or base second means,
The cords, the ladder, or the hangman, rather?
O pardon me that I descend so low
To show the line and the predicament
Wherein you range under this subtle King!
Shall it for shame be spoken in these days,
Or fill up chronicles in time to come,
That men of your nobility and power
Did gage them both in an unjust behalf,
As both of you, God pardon it, have done:
To put down Richard, that sweet, lovely rose,
And plant this thorn, this canker, Bolingbroke?
And shall it in more shame be further spoken
That you are fooled, discarded, and shook off
By him for whom these shames ye underwent?
No, yet time serves wherein you may redeem

Your banished honours and restore yourselves
Into the good thoughts of the world again,
Revenge for the jeering and disdained contempt
Of this proud King, who studies day and night
To answer all the debt he owes to you
Even with the bloody payment of your deaths.
Therefore I say —

WORCESTER:

Peace cousin, say no more.

Richard III, Act IV, Scene 3

TYRELL:

The tyrannous and bloody act is done —
The most arch deed of piteous massacre
That ever yet this land was guilty of.
Dighton and Forrest, whom I did suborn
To do this piece of ruthless butchery,
Albeit they were fleshed villains, bloody dogs,
Melted with tenderness and mild compassion,
Wept like two children in their deaths' sad story.
‘O thus’, quoth Dighton,‘lay the gentle babes’;
‘Thus, thus’, quoth Forrest,‘girdling one another
Within their alabaster innocent arms.
Their lips were four red roses on a stalk,
And in their summer beauty kissed each other.
A book of prayers on their pillow lay,
Which once’, quoth Forrest,‘almost changed my mind.
But O, the devil’— there the villain stopped,
When Dighton thus told on,‘We smothered
The most replenished sweet work of nature,
That from the prime creation e'er she framed.’
Hence both are gone, with conscience and remorse.
They could not speak, and so I left them both,
To bear this tidings to the bloody king.

Enter King Richard.

And here he comes. All health my sovereign lord.

KING RICHARD:

Kind Tyrell, am I happy in thy news?

TYRELL:

If to have done the thing you gave in charge
Beget your happiness, be happy then,
For it is done.

KING RICHARD:

But didst thou see them dead?

TYRELL:

I did my lord.

KING RICHARD:

And buried, gentle Tyrell?

TYRELL:

The chaplain of the Tower hath buried them,
But where, to say the truth, I do not know.

KING RICHARD:

Come to me, Tyrell, soon, at after-supper,
When thou shalt tell the process of their death.
Meantime, but think how I may do thee good,
And be inheritor of thy desire.
Farewell till then.

TYRELL:

I humbly take my leave.

KING RICHARD:

The son of Clarence have I pent up close.
His daughter meanly have I matched in marriage,
The sons of Edward sleep in Abraham's bosom,
And Anne, my wife, hath bid this world goodnight.
Now for I know the Breton Richmond aims
At young Elizabeth, my brother's daughter,
And by that knot looks proudly o'er the crown,
To her go I, a jolly thriving wooer.

Timon of Athens, Act V, Scene 5

ALCIBIADES:

Sound to this coward and lascivious town
Our terrible approach.

A parley sounds. The senators appear upon the walls.

Till now you have gone on and filled the time
With all licentious measure, making your wills
The scope of justice. Till now myself and such As slept within the shadow of your power
Have wandered with our traversed arms and breathed
Our sufferance vainly. Now the time is flush,
When crouching marrow, in the bearer strong,
Cries of itself'No more'. Now breathless wrong
Shall sit and pant in your great chairs of ease
And pursy insolence shall break his wind
With fear and horrid flight.

FIRST SENATOR:

Noble and young,
When thy first griefs were but a mere conceit,
Ere thou hadst power or we had cause of fear,
We sent to thee to give thy rages balm,
To wipe out our ingratitude with loves
Above their quantity.

SECOND SENATOR:

So did we woo
Transformed Timon to our city's love
By humble message and by promised means.
We were not all unkind, nor all deserve
The common stroke of war.

FIRST SENATOR:

These walls of ours
Were not erected by their hands from whom
You have received your grief, nor are they such
That these great tow'rs, trophies, and schools should fall
For private faults in them.

SECOND SENATOR:

Nor are they living
Who were the motives that you first went out.
Shame that they wanted cunning, in excess,
Hath broke their hearts. March, noble lord,
Into our city with thy banners spread.
By decimation and a tithed death,
If thy revenges hunger for that food
Which nature loathes, take thou the destined tenth,
And by the hazard of the spotted die
Let die the spotted.

Richard II, Act III, Scene 3

BOLINGBROKE (to Northumberland):

Noble lord,
Go to the rude ribs of that ancient castle,
Through brazen trumpet send the breath of parley
Into his ruined ears, and thus deliver:
Henry Bolingbroke
Upon his knees doth kiss King Richard's hand
And sends allegiance and true faith of heart
To his most royal person, hither come
Even at his feet to lay my arms and power,
Provided that my banishment repealed
And lands restored again be freely granted.
If not, I'll use the advantage of my power,
And lay the summer's dust with showers of blood
Rained from the wounds of slaughtered Englishmen,
The which how far off from the mind of Bolingbroke
It is such crimson tempest should bedrench
The fresh green lap of fair King Richard's land,
My stooping duty tenderly shall show.
Go, signify as much, while here we march
Upon the grassy carpet of this plain.
Let's march without the noise of threat'ning drum,
That from this castle's tottered battlements
Our fair appointments may be well perused.

Methinks King Richard and myself should meet
With no less terror than the elements
Of fire and water when their thund'ring shock
At meeting tears the cloudy cheeks of heaven.
Be he the fire, I'll be the yielding water.
The rage be his, whilst on the earth I rain
My waters: on the earth, and not on him.

Coriolanus, Act IV, Scene 5

CORIOLANUS:

My name is Caius Martius, who hath done
To thee particularly, and to all the Volsces,
Great hurt and mischief. Thereto witness may
My surname Coriolanus. The painful service,
The extreme dangers, and the drops of blood
Shed for my thankless country, are requited
But with that surname — a good memory
And witness of the malice and displeasure
Which thou shouldst bear me. Only that name remains.
The cruelty and envy of the people,
Permitted by our dastard nobles, who
Have all forsook me, hath devoured the rest,
And suffered me by th'voice of slaves to be Whooped out of Rome. Now this extremity
Hath brought me to thy hearth. Not out of hope — Mistake me not — to save my life, for if I had feared death, of all the men i'th'world
I would have 'voided thee, but in mere spite
To be full quit of those my banishers
Stand I before thee here. Then if thou hast
A heart of wreak in thee that wilt revenge
Thine own particular wrongs and stop those maims
Of shame seen through thy country, speed thee straight,

And make my misery serve thy turn. So use it
That my revengeful services may prove
As benefits to thee; for I will fight Against my cankered country with the spleen
Of all the under-fiends. But if so be Thou dar'st not this, and that to prove more fortunes
Thou'rt tired, then, in a word, I also am
Longer to live most weary and present
My throat to thee and to thy ancient malice,
Which not to cut would show thee but a fool,
Since I have ever followed thee with hate,
Drawn tuns of blood out of thy country's breast,
And cannot live but to thy shame unless
It be to do thee service.

Henry IV, Part II, Act IV, Scene 1

WESTMORLAND:

Then, my lord,
Unto your grace do I in chief address
The substance of my speech. If that rebellion
Came like itself, in base and abject routs,
Led on by bloody youth, guarded with rags,
And countenanced by boys and beggary,
I say, if damned commotion so appeared
In his true native and most proper shape,
You, reverend father, and these noble lords
Had not been here to dress the ugly form
Of base and bloody insurrection
With your fair honours. You, Lord Archbishop,
Whose see is by a civil peace maintained,
Whose beard the silver hand of peace hath tutored,
Whose white investments figure innocence,
The dove and very blessed spirit of peace,
Wherefore do you so ill translate yourself
Out of the speech of peace that bears such grace
Into the harsh and boist'rous tongue of war,
Turning your books to graves, your ink to blood,
Your pens to lances, and your tongue divine
To a loud trumpet and a point of war?

ARCHBISHOP OF YORK:

Wherefore do I this? So the question stands.
Briefly, to this end: we are all diseased,
And with our surfeiting and wanton hours
Have brought ourselves into a burning fever,
And we must bleed for it; of which disease
Our late King Richard, being infected, died.
But my most noble lord of Westmorland,
I take not on me here as a physician,
Nor do I as an enemy to peace
Troop in the throngs of military men,
But rather show a while like fearful war
To diet rank minds, sick of happiness,
And purge th'obstructions which begin to stop
Our very veins of life. Hear me more plainly.
I have in equal balance justly weighed
What wrongs our arms may do, what wrongs we suffer,
And find our griefs heavier than our offences.
We see which way the stream of life doth run,
And are enforced from our most quiet shore
By the rough torrent of occasion;
And have the summary of all our griefs,
When time shall serve, to show in articles,
Which long ere this we offered to the King,
And might by no suit gain our audience.
When we are wronged and would unfold our griefs
We are denied access unto his person,
Even by those men that most have done us wrong.

The dangers of the days but newly gone,
Whose memory is written on the earth
With yet appearing blood, and the examples
Of every minute's instance, present now,
Hath put us in these ill-beseeming arms,
Not to break peace, or any branch of it,
But to establish here a peace indeed,
Concurring both in name and quality.

Power of love, between men and women

Troilus and Cressida, Act III, Scene 2

TROILUS:

Why was my Cressid then so hard to win?

CRESSIDA:

Hard to seem won, but I was won, my lord,
With the first glance that ever — pardon me,
If I confess much you will play the tyrant.
I love you now, but till now not so much
But I might master it. In faith, I lie.
My thoughts were like unbridled children, grown
Too headstrong for their mother. See, we fools!
Why have I blabbed? Who shall be true to us,
When we are so unsecret to ourselves?
But though I loved you well I wooed you not.
And yet, good faith, I wished myself a man,
Or that we women had men's privilege
Of speaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue,
For in this rapture I shall surely speak
The thing I shall repent. See, see, your silence,
Cunning in dumbness, in my weakness draws
My soul of counsel from me. Stop my mouth.

TROILUS:

And shall, albeit sweet music issues thence.

He kisses her.

Sonnet 150

O from what power hast thou this powerful might
With insufficiency my heart to sway,
To make me give the lie to my true sight
And swear that brightness doth not grace the day?
Whence hast thou this becoming of things ill,
That in the very refuse of thy deeds
There is such strength and warrantise of skill
That in my mind thy worst all best exceeds?
Who taught thee how to make me love thee more
The more I hear and see just cause of hate?
O though I love what others do abhor,
With others thou shouldst not abhor my state.
If thy unworthiness raised love in me,
More worthy I to be beloved of thee.

The Two Gentlemen of Verona, Act III, Scene 1

VALENTINE:

And why not death, rather than living torment?
To die is to be banished from myself,
And Silvia is my self. Banished from her
Is self from self, a deadly banishment.
What light is light if Silvia be not seen?
What joy is joy if Silvia be not by?
Unless it be to think that she is by,
And feed upon the shadow of perfection.
Except I be by Silvia in the night
There is no music in the nightingale.
Unless I look on Silvia in the day
There is no day for me to look upon.
She is my essence, and I leave to be
If I be not by her fair influence
Fostered, illumined, cherished, kept alive.
I fly not death to fly his deadly doom,
Tarry I here I but attend on death,
But fly I hence, I fly away from life.

Much Ado About Nothing, Act III, Scene 1

HERO:

O god of love! I know he doth deserve
As much as may be yielded to a man.
But nature never framed a woman's heart
Of prouder stuff than that of Beatrice.
Disdain and scorn ride sparkling in her eyes,
Misprising what they look on, and her wit
Values itself so highly that to her
All matter else seems weak. She cannot love,
Nor take no shape nor project of affection,
She is so self-endeared.

URSULA:

Sure, I think so.
And therefore certainly it were not good
She knew his love, lest she'll make sport at it.

HERO:

Why, you speak truth. I never yet saw man,
How wise, how noble, young, how rarely featured,
But she would spell him backward. If fair-faced,
She would swear the gentleman should be her sister;
If black, why nature, drawing of an antic,
Made a foul blot; if tall, a lance ill-headed;
If low, an agate very vilely cut;

If speaking, why, a vane blown with all winds;
If silent, why, a block moved with none.
So turns she every man the wrong side out,
And never gives to truth and virtue that
Which simpleness and merit purchaseth.

URSULA:

Sure, sure, such carping is not commendable.

HERO:

No, not to be so odd and from all fashions
As Beatrice is cannot be commendable.
But who dare tell her so? If I should speak
She would mock me into air. O, she would laugh me
Out of myself, press me to death with wit.
Therefore let Benedick, like covered fire,
Consume away in sighs, waste inwardly.
It were a better death than die with mocks,
Which is as bad as die with tickling.

The Taming of the Shrew, Act IV, Scene 1

PETRUCCIO:

Thus have I politicly begun my reign,
And 'tis my hope to end successfully.
My falcon now is sharp and passing empty,
And till she stoop she must not be full-gorged,
For then she never looks upon her lure.
Another way I have to man my haggard,
To make her come and know her keeper's call;
That is, to watch her as we watch these kites
That bate and beat and will not be obedient.
She ate no meat today, nor none shall eat.
Last night she slept not, nor tonight she shall not.
As with the meat, some undeserved fault
I'll find about the making of the bed,
And here I'll fling the pillow, there the bolster,
This way the coverlet, another way the sheets,
Ay, and amid this hurly I intend
That all is done in reverent care of her,
And in conclusion she shall watch all night,
And if she chance to nod I'll rail and brawl
And with the clamour keep her still awake.
This is a way to kill a wife with kindness,
And thus I'll curb her mad and headstrong humour.
He that knows better how to tame a shrew,

Now let him speak. 'Tis charity to show.

‘The Rape of Lucrece’, lines 281—301

As corn o'ergrown by weeds, so heedful fear
Is almost choked by unresisted lust.
Away he steals with open list'ning ear,
Full of foul hope and full of fond mistrust,
Both which as servitors to the unjust
So cross him with their opposite persuasion
That now he vows a league, and now invasion.

Within his thought her heavenly image sits,
And in the selfsame seat sits Collatine.
That eye which looks on her confounds his wits,
That eye which him beholds, as more divine,
Unto a view so false will not incline,
But with a pure appeal seeks to the heart,
Which once corrupted, takes the worser part,

And therein heartens up his servile powers
Who, flattered by their leader's jocund show,
Stuff up his lust as minutes fill up hours,
And as their captain, so their pride doth grow,
Paying more slavish tribute than they owe.
By reprobate desire thus madly led
The Roman lord marcheth to Lucrece' bed.

A Midsummer Night's Dream, Act V, Scene 1

THESEUS :

Lovers and madmen have such seething brains,
Such shaping fantasies that apprehend
More than cool reason ever comprehends.
The lunatic, the lover, and the poet
Are of imagination all compact.
One sees more devils than vast hell can hold:
That is the madman. The lover, all as frantic,
Sees Helen's beauty in a brow of Egypt.
The poet's eye, in a fine frenzy rolling,
Doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth to heaven,
And as imagination bodies forth
The forms of things unknown; the poet's pen
Turns them to shapes and gives to airy nothing
A local habitation and a name.
Such tricks hath strong imagination
That if it would but apprehend some joy
It comprehends some bringer of that joy.
Or in the night, imagining some fear;
How easy is a bush supposed a bear!

Romeo and Juliet, Act III, Scene 3

ROMEO:

'Tis torture and not mercy. Heaven is here,
Where Juliet lives, and every cat and dog
And little mouse, every unworthy thing,
Live here in heaven and may look on her,
But Romeo may not. More validity,
More honourable state, more courtship lives
In carrion flies than Romeo. They may seize
On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand,
And steal immortal blessing from her lips,
Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,
Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin.
But Romeo may not; he is banished.
Flies may do this, but I from this must fly.
They are free men, but I am banished.
And sayst thou yet that exile is not death?
Hadst thou no poison mixed, no sharp-ground knife,
No sudden mean of death, though ne'er so mean,
But‘banished’to kill me.‘Banished’?
O friar, the damned use that word in hell.
Howling attends it. How hast thou the heart,
Being a divine, a ghostly confessor,
A sin-absolver and my friend professed,
To mangle me with that word‘banished’?

All's Well That Ends Well, Act I, Scene 1

HELEN:

O were that all! I think not on my father,
And these great tears grace his remembrance more Than those I shed for him. What was he like?
I have forgot him. My imagination
Carries no favour in't but Bertram's.
I am undone. There is no living, none,
If Bertram be away. 'Twere all one
That I should love a bright particular star
And think to wed it, he is so above me.
In his bright radiance and collateral light
Must I be comforted, not in his sphere.
Th'ambition in my love thus plagues itself.
The hind that would be mated by the lion
Must die for love. 'Twas pretty, though a plague,
To see him every hour, to sit and draw
His arched brows, his hawking eye, his curls,
In our heart's table — heart too capable
Of every line and trick of his sweet favour.
But now he's gone, and my idolatrous fancy
Must sanctify his relics.

Sonnet 57

Being your slave, what should I do but tend Upon the hours and times of your desire?
I have no precious time at all to spend,
Nor services to do, till you require;
Nor dare I chide the world-without-end hour
Whilst I, my sovereign, watch the clock for you,
Nor think the bitterness of absence sour
When you have bid your servant once adieu;
Nor dare I question with my jealous thought
Where you may be, or your affairs suppose,
But like a sad slave stay and think of naught
Save, where you are, how happy you make those.
So true a fool is love that in your will,
Though you do anything, he thinks no ill.

Love's Labour's Lost, Act I, Scene 2

ARMADO: I do affect the very ground, which is base, where her shoe, which is baser, guided by her foot, which is basest, doth tread. I shall be forsworn, which is a great argument of falsehood, if I love. And how can that be true love which is falsely attempted? Love is a familiar; love is a devil. There is no evil angel but love. Yet was Samson so tempted, and he had an excellent strength. Yet was Solomon so seduced, and he had a very good wit. Cupid's butt-shaft is too hard for Hercules' club, and therefore too much odds for a Spaniard's rapier. The first and second cause will not serve my turn: the passado he respects not, the duello he regards not. His disgrace is to be called boy, but his glory is to subdue men. Adieu, valour; rust, rapier; be still, drum; for your manager is in love, yea, he loveth. Assist me some extemporal god of rhyme, for I am sure I shall turn sonnet. Devise wit, write, pen, for I am for whole volumes, in folio.

Romeo and Juliet, Act I, Scene 1

ROMEO:

Why then, O brawling love, O loving hate,
O anything of nothing first create,
O heavy lightness, serious vanity,
Misshapen chaos of well-seeming forms,
Feather of lead, bright smoke, cold fire, sick health,
Still-waking sleep, that is not what it is!
This love feel I, that feel no love in this.
Dost thou not laugh?

BENVOLIO:

No coz, I rather weep.

ROMEO:

Good heart, at what?

BENVOLIO:

At thy good heart's oppression.

ROMEO:

Why, such is love's transgression.
Griefs of mine own lie heavy in my breast,
Which thou wilt propagate to have it pressed
With more of thine. This love that thou hast shown
Doth add more grief to too much of mine own.
Love is a smoke made with the fume of sighs,

Being purged, a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes,
Being vexed, a sea nourished with lovers' tears.
What is it else? A madness most discreet,
A choking gall and a preserving sweet.

Antony and Cleopatra, Act IV, Scene 13

CLEOPATRA:

No more but e'en a woman, and commanded
By such poor passion as the maid that milks
And does the meanest chores. It were for me
To throw my sceptre at the injurious gods,
To tell them that this world did equal theirs
Till they had stol'n our jewel. All's but naught.
Patience is sottish, and impatience does
Become a dog that's mad. Then is it sin
To rush into the secret house of death
Ere death dare come to us? How do you, women?
What, what, good cheer! Why, how now, Charmian?
My noble girls! Ah, women, women! Look,
Our lamp is spent; it's out. Good sires take heart.
We'll bury him and then what's brave, what's noble.
Let's do it after the high Roman fashion
And make death proud to take us. Come away.
This case of that huge spirit now is cold.
Ah, women, women! Come. We have no friend
But resolution, and the briefest end.

Sonnet 26

Lord of my love, to whom in vassalage
Thy merit hath my duty strongly knit,
To thee I send this written embassage
To witness duty, not to show my wit;
Duty so great which wit so poor as mine
May make seem bare in wanting words to show it,
But that I hope some good conceit of thine
In thy soul's thought, all naked, will bestow it;
Till whatsoever star that guides my moving
Points on me graciously with fair aspect,
And puts apparel on my tattered loving,
To show me worthy of thy sweet respect.
Then may I dare to boast how I do love thee;
Till then, not show my head where thou mayst prove me.

The Taming of the Shrew, Act V, Scene 2

PETRUCCIO:

Katherine, I charge thee tell these headstrong women
What duty they do owe their lords and husbands.

WIDOW:

Come, come, you're mocking. We will have no telling.

PETRUCCIO:

Come on, I say, and first begin with her.

WIDOW:

She shall not.

PETRUCCIO:

I say she shall, and first begin with her.

KATHERINE:

Fie, fie, unknit that threat'ning, unkind brow,
And dart not scornful glances from those eyes
To wound thy lord, thy king, thy governor.
It blots thy beauty as frosts do bite the meads,
Confounds thy fame as whirlwinds shake fair buds,
And in no sense is meet or amiable.
A woman moved is like a fountain troubled,
Muddy, ill-seeming, thick, bereft of beauty,
And while it is so, none so dry or thirsty

Will deign to sip or touch one drop of it.
Thy husband is thy lord, thy life, thy keeper,
Thy head, thy sovereign, one that cares for thee,
And for thy maintenance commits his body
To painful labour both by sea and land,
To watch the night in storms, and the day in cold,
While thou liest warm at home, secure and safe,
And craves no other tribute at thy hands
But love, fair looks, and true obedience,
Too little payment for so great a debt.
Such duty as the subject owes the prince,
Even such a woman oweth to her husband;
And when she is froward, peevish, sullen, sour,
And not obedient to his honest will,
What is she but a foul, contending rebel,
And graceless traitor to her loving lord?
I am ashamed that women are so simple
To offer war where they should kneel for peace,
Or seek for rule, supremacy, and sway
When they are bound to serve, love, and obey.
Why are our bodies soft, and weak, and smooth,
Unapt to toil and trouble in the world,
But that our soft conditions and our hearts
Should well agree with our external parts?
Come, come, your froward and unable worms,
My mind hath been as big as one of yours,
My heart as great, my reason haply more,

To bandy word for word and frown for frown;
But now I see our lances are but straws,
Our strength as weak, our weakness past compare,
That seeming to be most which we indeed least are.
Then vail your stomachs, for it is no boot,
And place your hands below your husband's foot,
In token of which duty, if he please,
My hand is ready, may it do him ease.

Troilus and Cressida, Act II, Scene 2

TROILUS:

I take today a wife, and my election
Is led on in the conduct of my will,
My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears,
Two traded pilots 'twixt the dangerous shores
Of will and judgement. How may I avoid
Although my will distaste what it elected
The wife I chose? There can be no evasion
To blench from this and to stand firm by honour.
We turn not back the silks upon the merchant
When we have spoiled them, nor the remainder viands
We do not throw in unrespective sewer
Because we now are full. It was thought meet
Paris should do some vengeance on the Greeks;
Your breath of full consent bellied his sails,
The seas and winds, old wranglers, took a truce
And did him service. He touched the ports desired
And for an old aunt whom the Greeks held captive
He brought a Grecian Queen, whose youth and freshness
Wrinkles Apollo's and makes stale the morning.
Why keep we her? The Grecians keep our aunt.
Is she worth keeping? Why, she is a pearl
Whose price hath launched above a thousand ships
And turned crowned kings to merchants.

If you'll avouch 'twas wisdom Paris went,
As you must needs, for you all cried,‘Go, go!’
If you'll confess he brought home noble prize,
As you must needs, for you all clapped your hands
And cried,‘Inestimable!’Why do you now
The issue of your proper wisdoms rate
And do a deed that never fortune did:
Beggar the estimation which you prized
Richer than sea and land? O theft most base,
That we have stol'n what we fear to keep!
But thieves unworthy of a thing so stol'n,
That in their country did them that disgrace
We fear to warrant in our native place.

Antony and Cleopatra, Act I, Scene 1

PHILO:

Nay, but this dotage of our General's O'erflows the measure. Those his goodly eyes
That o'er the files and musters of the war
Have glowed like plated Mars, now bend, now turn
The office and devotion of their view
Upon a tawny front. His captain's heart,
Which in the scuffles of great fights hath burst
The buckles on his breast, reneges all temper,
And is become the bellows and the fan
To cool a gipsy's lust.

Flourish. Enter Antony, Cleopatra, her ladies, the train, with eunuchs fanning her.

Look where they come.
Take but good note and you shall see in him
The triple pillar of the world transformed
Into a strumpet's fool. Behold and see.

CLEOPATRA (to Antony): If it be love indeed, tell me how much.

ANTONY:

There's beggary in the love that can be reckoned.

Othello, Act I, Scene 3

RODERIGO: What should I do? I confess it is my shame to be so fond, but it is not in my virtue to amend it.

IAGO: Virtue? A fig! 'Tis in ourselves that we are thus or thus. Our bodies are our gardens, to the which our wills are gardeners, so that if we will plant nettles or sow lettuce, set hyssop and weed up thyme, supply it with one gender of herbs or distract it with many, either to have it sterile with idleness or manured with industry, why, the power and incorrigible authority of this lies in our wills. If the beam of our lives had not one scale of reason to peise another of sensuality, the blood and baseness of our natures would conduct us to cool our raging motions, our carnal stings, our unbitted lusts; whereof I take this that you call love to be a sect or scion.

Sonnet 131

Thou art as tyrannous, so as thou art,
As those whose beauties proudly make them cruel,
For well thou know'st to my dear doting heart
Thou art the fairest and most precious jewel.
Yet, in good faith, some say that thee behold,
Thy face hath not the power to make love groan.
To say they err I dare not be so bold,
Although I swear it to myself alone;
And to be sure that is not false I swear
A thousand groans but thinking on thy face,
One on another's neck do witness bear
Thy black is fairest in my judgement's place.
In nothing art thou black save in thy deeds,
And thence this slander as I think proceeds.

AN ANSWER TO THE QUESTION:
'WHAT IS ENLIGHTENMENT?'

康德：对“什么是启蒙”的回答

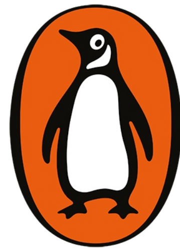
［德］伊曼努尔·康德　著
肖树乔　译

中国出版集团
中译出版社

康德：对“什么是启蒙”的回答

（德）伊曼努尔·康德/著

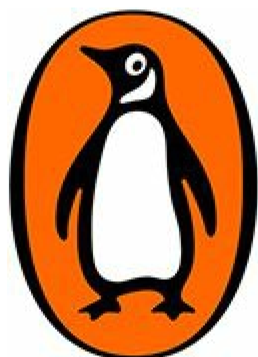
肖树乔/译



企鹅图书 | PENGUIN BOOKS

UK | USA | Canada | Ireland | Australia
New Zealand | India | South Africa | North Asia

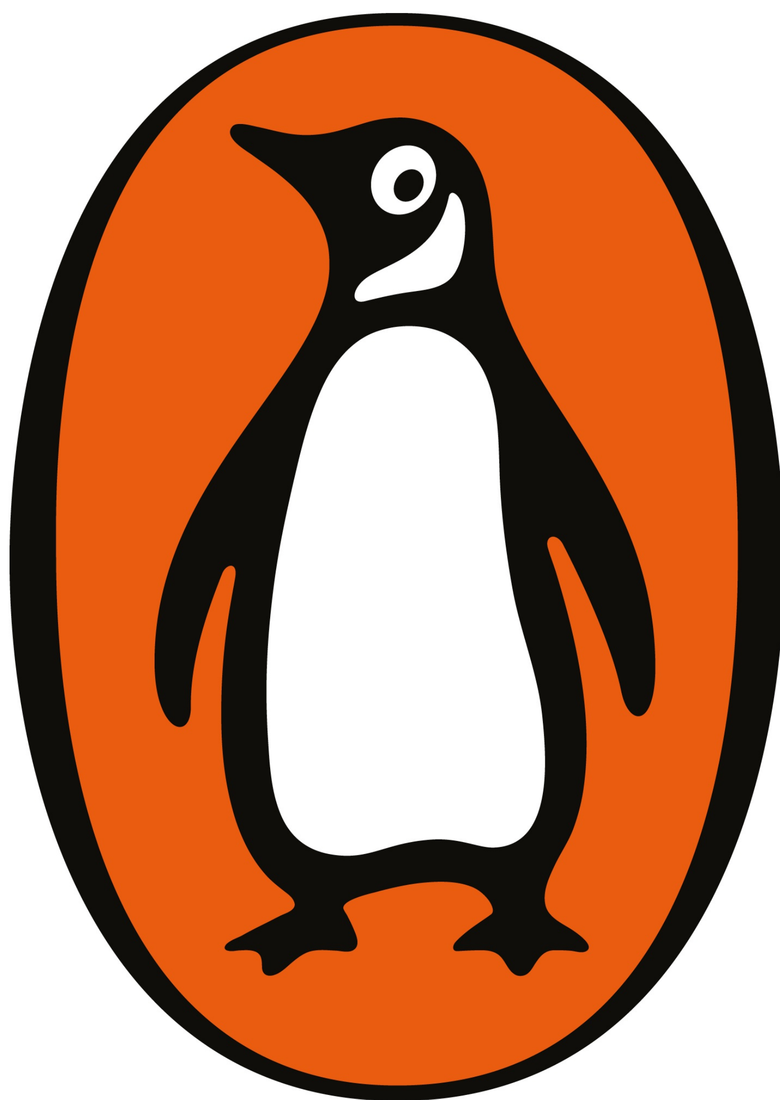
Penguin Books is part of the Penguin Random House group of companies whose addresses can be found at:
global.penguinrandomhouse.com.



Penguin Books Ltd, Registered Offices: 80 Strand, London WC2R 0RL, England
www.penguin.com
This selection first published in Penguin Books 2009
First published by Cambridge University Press 1991

All pieces in this collection taken from Kant’s Political Writings, edited by H. S. Reiss and translated by H. B. Nisbet. This reprint edition is published with the permission of the Syndicate of the Press of the University of Cambridg e, Cambridge, England

企鹅兰登电子书 | PENGUIN RANDOM HOUSE EBOOKS



目录

“伟大的思想”中文版序

企鹅“伟大的思想”系列丛书自2004年开始陆续面世，在英国、美国和德国均有出版。在英国出版品种最多，已付梓八十种，尚有二十种计划出版。该丛书在全球众多读者间，尤其是学生当中，普及了哲学和政治学，销量已远超二百万册。中文版“伟大的思想”的推出，是该系列的又一延续和发展，令人欢欣鼓舞。

推出这套丛书旨在让读者再次与一些伟大的非小说类经典著作面对面地交流。长久以来，此类书籍的出版都建立在这样一个假设之上——此类著作供学生课堂学习之用，因此需辅以导读、详尽的注释及参考书目等。此类版本无疑十分有用，但我想，如果某一版本能够重建托马斯·潘恩的《常识》或约翰·罗斯金的《艺术与人生》初版时的环境，为读者与作者营造更为亲密无间的氛围，使读者除了原作者及其自身的思考外没有其他参照，也许会更有吸引力。

但是，这一做法亦存在严重缺陷：每位作者的表述难免有难解或不可解之处，一些重要的背景知识或许也有所缺失。例如，读者对亨利·梭罗创作时的情形毫无头绪，也不了解该书的反响及影响。不过，这样做的优点也显而易见，最为显著的便是作者的初衷又一次受到重视——托马斯·潘恩的愤怒、查尔斯·达尔文的灵光、塞内加的隐逸。他们给许多国家的众多读者带来的生活影响难以估量，有的影响甚至长达几个世纪，几乎没有什么比阅读这些作家更令人拍案叫绝的了。倘若没有亚当·斯密或阿图尔·叔本华，将无法想象我们今天的世界。这些小书创作年代久远，但其中的话语彻底改变了我们的政治学、经济学、精神世界、社会规划和宗教信仰。

“伟大的思想”系列一直求新求变，地域不同，收录的作家亦不同。一些作家在中国或美国更受欢迎，而英国版“伟大的思想”收录的一些作家在其他国家和地区则鲜有人知。称其为“伟大的思想”，我们亦是慎之又慎。这些思想之所以伟大，在于其影响深远，但这并不意味着这些思想都是“好”思想，实际上一些书或可列入“坏”思想之列。丛书中收录的很多作家受到同样收录于该丛书的其他作家的巨大影响，例如，马塞尔·普鲁斯特承认受约翰·罗斯金影响很大，米歇尔·德·蒙田也承认深受塞内加影响。但也有些作家彼此憎恶，若发现彼此都被收录于同一丛书，一定会深感苦恼。至于他们思想的或“好”或“坏”，读者可自行判明。我们衷心希望，您可以享受阅读这些著作的乐趣。

“伟大的思想”出版者

西蒙·温德尔

译者导读

伊曼努尔·康德（Immanuel Kant，1724—1804），德国思想家、哲学家、天文学家、星云说的创立者之一，德国古典哲学的创始人。其学说深刻地影响了此后的哲学，开启了德国唯心主义和康德主义的诸多流派，被认为是对现代欧洲最具影响力的思想家之一，也是启蒙运动最后一位主要哲学家。康德一生著述颇丰，其中核心的著作合称“三大批判”，即《纯粹理性批判》《实践理性批判》和《判断力批判》，这三本哲学著作的问世是康德批判哲学体系诞生的真正标志。

康德一生的研究涉猎广泛，对自然科学、美学、神学、巫术等都有研究，但有一个问题是一直贯穿其中的，那就是哲学研究应该如何进行：是从理性的观点出发，从普遍真理中推导出有关事物的真理，还是从经验出发通过观察得出普遍的结论。

康德的研究以1770年为界可分为前期和后期两个阶段，前期主要研究自然科学，而后期则主要研究哲学。前期的主要研究成果有1755年发表的《自然通史和天体论》，提出了太阳系起源的星云假说。后期的研究成果就是前面提到的“三大批评”。

本书收集的是他后期的四篇作品，即“对‘什么是启蒙’的回答”（1784年）、“论永久和平：一个哲学素描”（1795年）、“回答‘人类是否在持续地改进’问题的新尝试”（1797年）、“关于人类历史开端的猜想”（1786年）。

在《对“什么是启蒙”的回答》中，康德对“什么是启蒙”进行了探讨。他认为，启蒙是人类从自我导致的不成熟状态中觉醒。为什么即使大自然早就把人类从远距离指导的桎梏中解放出来了，仍然有大量的人

保持着不成熟的状态，他得出的结论是：懒惰和怯懦。这种不成熟的状态成为了一种惯性。康德指出，要使公众得到启蒙，最为需要的是自由，是在一切事物中公开地运用自己的理性的自由。理性的运用又分为个人运用和公开利用。理性的个人运用是一个人在其被委任的职位或工作中对自己理性的使用。理性的公开利用是臣民们公开运用他们的理性，将他们更好地起草法律的想法公之于众。康德认为，只有自己已经启蒙并且拥有一支能够保障公共安全的军队的统治者才会允许公众理性地思考，而按照人的尊严来对待人，允许他们进行理性的思考对于政府是有益的。

“永久和平：一个哲学素描”应该是康德为人类贡献的最后一篇有深远影响的论著，其中提出的世界公民、世界联邦、不干涉内政的主权国家的原则至今仍有现实意义。论文分两部分阐述了康德关于国际社会保持和平的法哲学理论。第一部分是关于各个国家之间的永久和平的预备条款，用六项条文鼓励缔结和平条约，并以和平条约为依据逐步使常备军无用武之地，从而达到废除常备军的目的。第二部分是国家间永久和平的正式条款，提出建立共和制的市民宪法和以联邦主义为基础的国际法。康德期望以共和制国家的联合以实现国际社会的永久和平。他提出的国际永久和平的思想至今仍深刻地影响着现代国际法和外交准则。

在“回答‘人类是否在持续地改进’问题的新尝试”中，康德探讨了“人类文明史是如何发展的”这个问题。他认为，人类进步的历史必须以某种经验为起点。人类的进步是某个事件发挥作用产生的必然结果。而这个事件是指被自然权利所规定的宪法的演进，即一个共和制的宪法。人们所渴望的国家的实际形式可能是共和制，或者它可能只是在治理模式上是共和制的。

康德预言人类会实现这一目标。而要做到世界不断地改进就要进行大众的启蒙，公开地教给人民对自己国家的义务和权利。一旦一个共和

制的宪法被制定出来，它就最有权威阻止战争，当权者会越来越少地使用暴力，而越来越多地遵从法律。这最终会延伸到不同民族之间的外部关系上，直至一个世界公民社会的建立。当人类不断前进时，人的善行会更多，这就是人类能获得的好处。

在“关于人类历史开端的猜想”中，康德阐述了对历史、人性及人类社会的看法，这可以看作是康德历史哲学的重要部分。在这篇论文中，康德猜想了人类自由的最初发展史并给出了一个优美的诠释。人类起初只有动物性的本能，他必须靠本能的指引，听从上帝的命令。第一步是理性的促动，把饮食知识扩大到本能的限度之外。第二步是理性很快让人感到它的存在，并且寻求超越本能的界限扩大食物的知识，这标志着理性驾驭了冲动的意识。第三步反映在对未来的预测上，这是人类优势的决定性因素。因为具有了这种预见性，人类能够为长远的目标做好准备。但是由于这同样的能力，当人类预见到不确定性时，会产生最无穷无尽的担心和焦虑。第四步，人类意识到人才是大自然的真正目的，地球上没有谁能与其抗衡，因此可以把动物看成手段和工具，但是人人平等，人不能像对待动物一样对待其他的人，而应当把他们看作能平分大自然礼物的人。在对人性考察的基础上，康德看到了恶的手段背后隐蔽的善的目的。

康德的作品以晦涩难懂而著称，译者在翻译的过程中参考了其他译者的翻译文本，力求做到语言上清楚明白，希望能以此来减少读者的阅读困难，若有疏漏之处，敬请批评指正。

对“什么是启蒙”的回答

启蒙，是指人类从自我导致的不成熟状态中觉醒。这种不成熟状态是指在缺乏指导下无力运用自我理性的状态。造成它的原因并非人们缺乏理性，而是在无人指导之下缺乏决心和勇气来运用理性。因此，启蒙的口号是“勇于智慧”，即有勇气运用自己的理性！

即使大自然早已把人类从远距离指导的桎梏中解放，懒惰和怯懦使很多人依然快乐地保持着不成熟状态；同样的原因，一些人很容易自命为另一些人的守护者。保持不成熟状态是如此方便：如果有一本书代替我理解，一个精神导师指导我的良知，一个医生评判我的饮食，等等，我就不需要做任何努力。只要金钱能够解决的，我就不需要思想；其他人很快就能替我做这些累人的工作。那些好心接过指导工作的守护者不久就发现，太多的人，不分性别，认为迈向成熟不仅困难重重而且相当危险。这些守护者起初为这些驯化了的动物而着迷，小心翼翼地防止其越雷池一步。他们下一个策略就是展示危险，使其不敢尝试在没有帮助的情况下行走；危险实际上并不那么大，因为他们一定会在摔过几次跟头之后最终学会走路。但是，这样的例子具有恐吓性，通常会吓得他们不敢再尝试。

然而，让每一个个体找到脱离不成熟状态的路十分困难，不成熟状态已经成为他们的第二特征。他们甚至变得喜欢这种状态，随着时间的推移，真得再没有能力运用自己的理性，因为他从未被允许作出这种尝试。规章和程式，这些合理使用或者说是误用他天资的机械工具，就是对他永久性不成熟状态的禁锢。倘若有人扔掉这些枷锁，他依然会不确定是否能够跃过甚至是最窄的壕沟，因为他不习惯这种自由运动。因此，只有少数人能够通过头脑训练成功地脱离这种不成熟状态，继续大

胆前行。

相比之下，公众有更多的机会进行自我启蒙。倘若公众被赋予了自由，他们的自我启蒙的确几乎是不可避免的，因为总会有少数人独立思考，他们甚至存在于被指定的大众守护者中间。这些守护者一旦扔掉不成熟状态的枷锁，就会传播尊重个人价值、尊重人人需有独立思考之责任的理念。这样做引人瞩目的一点是，如果之前被守护者锢入枷锁中的公众被唤醒，或许最终会迫使守护者自己留在枷锁中。宣传偏见是非常有害的，因为偏见最终会报复到最初宣扬它的人的身上。因此，公众只能慢慢获得启蒙。一场革命或许能够结束独裁暴政与强权压迫，但是它从不会带来真正的思想革命；取而代之的是新的偏见，如同它们所取代的旧观念一样，成为掌控缺乏思想自由的大众的枷锁。

对于这种启蒙而言，它所需要的只是自由，而这种自由是所有自由形式中最没有恶意的，即在所有事情上公开运用理性的自由。但是我听到各方在说，不要争辩！军官说，不要争辩，列队行进；税务官说，不要争辩，交税；神职人员说，不要争辩，相信！（世界上只有一个统治者说，想怎么争辩就怎么争辩，想争辩什么就争辩什么，但是，服从！）这些都意味着对自由无处不在的限制。但是哪种限制阻碍启蒙，哪种限制不但不阻碍反而促进启蒙？我的回答是：人的理性的公开运用必须总是自由的，这本身就能带来人类的启蒙。理性的个人运用或许常常受到严格的限制，但并不会过度地阻碍启蒙的进步。我所谓的理性的公开运用，是指像一位学者向读者大众阐述观点那样对自己理性的运用。而理性的个人运用，我把它定义为，一个人在其被委任的职位或工作中对自己理性的运用。

在一些关乎公众全体利益的事务中，我们需要一定的机制，在此机制下，一些成员必须完全服从调配，这样他们才能通过一份人为的共同协议，为政府雇用而服务于公共利益（或者至少不会损害公共利益）。

在这种情况之下，争辩当然是不被允许的，顺从是必要的。但是，作为机器零部件的单个个人而言，他们认为自己也是公众甚或世界社会的一员，那么就像一位学者通过写作用真正意义上的文字向公众阐述观点一样，他或许的确能做到一边争辩，同时又不妨害自己所受雇从事的事务。然而，如果一个从上司那里领命的军官在执行时公开质疑这一命令的适当性或者有用性，后果是非常有害的。他必须完全地服从命令。但是，我们无法禁止他像学者一样对军事事务中的错误进行观察，也不能禁止他将自己的观察公之于众以供评判。公民不能拒绝缴纳税赋。一个被通知纳税的人，对于这些税赋自以为是的批评，会被当作导致抗命的暴行而受到处罚。然而，一个公民，作为一个博学的个体，公开地阐述这类税赋措施的不恰当甚至是不公平，并没有违反其公民责任。同理，一个受雇于教堂的神职人员有责任根据其所服务教堂的相关教义指导他的受众。但是作为一个学者，他完全有自由也有责任经过深思熟虑，出于善意地将这些教义的谬误之处公之于众，同时为更好地组织宗教和教会的相关事宜提供建议。这一过程中并没有对良心的拷问。作为一个教会的积极服务者，他在履行职责时所教授，并由他呈现出的，就是他职务的一个结果，是他被雇来用一种指定的方式和以其他人的名义而宣讲的。他会说，我们的教会教这个和那个，这些就是教会所引用的论据。然后，他尽量从自己都无法完全信服的戒律中找寻出更多的实际价值。而这些戒律事实上也包含着真理，因此他能够加以阐释。无论如何，在这些教义中没有与宗教本质相悖的内容。如果神职人员认为在这些教义中存在违背宗教本质的内容，他就不会心安理得地履行其职责，就会辞职。然而，这种理性的运用纯粹是私人性质的，因为教区无论多大都不过是私人聚会。这样看来，作为牧师也不会是自由的，因为他是在履行外界赋予的使命。与此相反，如果作为一个用作品感染公众（例如，整个世界）的学者，一位公开运用理性的神职人员应当享受无限的自由，能够自由表达，否则就等同于说人们精神世界的守护者本身不成熟，而这种说法是荒唐的，并且永远是荒唐的。

神职人员团体，例如一个教会法院或者是教务评议会，是否应当宣誓对不可改变的信条负有忠实义务，以确保全天候地为其信徒进而为其他人提供监护？我的回答是，这不可能。这种旨在永远阻止人类的启蒙而订立的契约，即使它由最高权力机构、神圣罗马帝国国会或最庄严的和平条约所认可，也完全没有法律效力。一个时代不能通过誓约将下一个时代放在这样一个位置上，使其无法拓展和修正知识，特别是在像启蒙这样重要的问题上寻求进步。这是违反人性的犯罪，因为人性的原始目标正是在此方面取得进步。后代人因此完全有权利将这些协议看作是毫无权威并且是犯罪而摒弃它们。检验一项具体措施能否成为法律，我们只需看一个民族是否将这项法律施加于自身；在没有更好的解决方法之前，这也可作为在某个特定的短暂时期内引进一项制度的方法。这也意味着每个公民，特别是神职人员，会被给予像学者一样在其著述中公开评论现行制度不足的自由。与此同时，这项新制度会继续存在，直到公众对于这些事物的看法有所进步，一致同意通过一项议案提交给国王。这是为了保护那些有更深刻认识的会众改变其宗教信仰，但并不会阻碍那些希望维持原状的会众。终其一生皈依一个没有人可以公开质疑的宗教是绝对不可取的，因为，这会抹杀人们进步的一个阶段，因此对后代是毫无益处，甚至是有害的。一个人自己或许在有限的一段时间内，在应当知道的事物上延迟启蒙；但是完全放弃这种启蒙，不管是为其个人还是为其后代，都意味着侵犯和践踏人类神圣的权利。但是人们不愿意强加于自身的东西，更不会被统治者所强加，因为统治者取得立法权力正是靠汇集人们集体意愿于他一身。只要他看到所有的真实存在或者是想象中的进步无碍于社会秩序，就会允许臣民做任何他们认为必要的完成自我救赎的事情，这与他无关。他的责任是制止任何人阻碍别人完成自我救赎。倘若他把臣民用写作阐述宗教观点的举动纳入政府的监控之中，那的确有损其王权。而如果他的强权基于其自以为是的意见，他会受到谴责。而如果他利用至高无上的权力支持少数独裁者对臣民进行精神统治，他就更是民众谴责的众矢之的。

如果现在问，我们当前是否生活在一个已经启蒙的时代，答案是：不，但我们的确生活在一个启蒙时代。当前，要全体人类能够无需外部指导也可以自信熟练地运用自身对宗教事务的理解，我们还有很长的路要走。但是，确有清晰的迹象表明，这条道路正被开辟出来，使人们可以沿着这个方向自由前行；普遍启蒙的障碍也正逐渐减少，使人类可以摆脱自身的蒙昧幼稚。从这个角度而言，我们的时代是启蒙时代，是腓特烈的时代。

如果一个君主认为，他在宗教事务中的职责不是命令其臣民，而是给予他们充分的自由，或者他自己甚至不接受“宽容”这一略显自负的头衔，那么这个君主自身就启蒙了；他值得受到现代以及后代人的赞扬，因为他（从政府的角度）率先将人类从蒙昧中解放，让所有人自由地运用理性解决所有事情。在他的统治之下，宗教显贵们尽管有政府职务，也会尽力像学者一样自由而公开地发表自己的判断和观点，接受世界的评判，即使这些观点有时偏离了宗教的教义；那些不受官职限制的人更是如此。这种自由的精神也会传播到国外，传播到那些与外部阻力斗争的国家，而阻力则来自于政府对自身功能的曲解。对于此类政府，现在有一个出色的实例，能够证明自由可以丝毫不妨碍公共和谐与联邦的统一。只要没有人为设置的条件蓄意使人们停留在野蛮状态，人们自己就会逐渐走出野蛮。

我将宗教事务描述为启蒙的焦点——启蒙即指人类摆脱自身的蒙昧。这首先是因为我们的统治者对于做艺术和科学方面的监护人不感兴趣，第二点是因为宗教蒙昧是最有害和不光彩的。但是，对于在艺术和科学方面崇尚自由的君主而言，他会进一步地延伸其主张，因为他认识到，如果允许臣民们公开运用自己的理性，将关于立法的更好观点公之于众，那么，即便这会引发他们对现有法律的正面批评，也不会产生任何危险，哪怕是君主的法律也安全无虞。面前就有一个绝好的例子：我们现今尊敬的这位君主没有别人能比得上。

但是，只有一位自身启蒙、不怕鬼魂，手中又拥有一支纪律严明且数量众多的军队以保障公共安全的统治者，才会说出共和国政府不敢说的话：你们可以就任何事情随意争论，但要服从！从中我们可以看到人类事务的一个奇怪而出乎意料的模式（如果在更广的范围上看，我们总能发现这一现象，即近乎所有事情都是矛盾的）。高度的公民自由看似对一个民族的思想自由颇有裨益，但它也为后者筑起了不可逾越的障碍。相反，较低程度的公民自由给思想自由足够的空间，使其可以充分扩展。因此，一旦大自然精心培育的胚芽，即人类自由思考的趋势和天职在这一硬壳中生长，它就会作用于人们的心智，促使人们自由行动的能力逐渐增强。最终，它甚至会影响政府的原则；政府会发现，它们尊重人们便会从中受益，人们不是一台机器。[1]

柯尼斯堡-普鲁士

1784年9月30日

永久和平：一个哲学素描

“永久和平”

一位荷兰旅店的店主曾经把具有讽刺意味的碑文连同一张坟墓的图片放在旅馆留言板上；我们不必费心询问这是否涉及广义上的男人，还是特指国家元首（国家元首们从不厌倦战争），或者仅是指那些幸福地梦想着永久和平的哲学家。本篇文章的作者事先做个保留。实践政治家倾向于不可一世地把政治理论家仅仅看作是研究人员而轻视他们。实践政治家认为，政治理论家抽象的主张不会危及国家安全，因为国家必须建立在实践原则的基础之上，因此，允许释放其所有的不满似乎是安全的。老于世故的政治家对此不必理会。因此，接下来的就是，如果实践政治家不前后矛盾的话，在与理论家争辩的时候，他们就不应当宣布理论家随意、公开表述过的观点对国家具有什么危险。根据这个保留条款，本文作者自认为将受到正确和恰当的保护，不会被恶意曲解。

第一部分　包含国家间永久和平的先决条款

1.“如果对未来战争存有秘密的保留条件，则和平结论的得出是无效的。”

如果情况是这样的话，这仅仅是个停战期，是敌对的延续，不是和平。和平意味着所有敌对的结束，将形容词“永久”加在和平之前已经有些冗长。和平条约的缔结消除了未来战争的所有存在理由，尽管这些理由对签约双方仍尚未可知，也不管他们是如何敏锐地、精心地从旧文件中拼凑出了这些理由。对于未来过去的托辞是否能再次生效，各方都可能对此持有精神上的保留。这种保留不会被特别地提出，因为双方都对继续打仗感到筋疲力尽，尽管他们心存恶念，希望抓住第一个机会达到

目的。但是如果我们考虑这些保留意见本身，它们不过是耶稣式的狡辩。它们不配一位统治者的尊严，正如按照这种推理逻辑，它们不配一位国务大臣的尊严一样。

但是，如果依据政治权宜之计的“启蒙”动向，我们相信一个国家真正的光荣在于采取一切办法不断增强实力，不过，上述的判断看上去确实既迂腐又充满了学究气。

2.“凡现存的独立国家，不论大小，他国皆不得通过继承、交换、买卖或赠送的方式获得。”

一个国家，不像其脚下的土地那样是一种财产。它是一个由人组成的社会。只有它能对自己下命令或者进行自我处置。正像一棵树，它有自己的根，把它如同嫩芽一样移植到另一个国家去是中止其道德人格的存在，而把它当作了商品。这与原始契约的初衷背道而驰。没有了原始契约这一初衷，保障一个民族的权利是不可想象的。[2]每一个人都知道这样获得国家权利带给欧洲的危险（因为这种实践在其他大陆是不为人知的）。人们认为国家之间可以彼此联姻。这提供了一种新的产业，即权力能够通过家庭结盟而增强，不需要耗费精力，与此同时土地财产也得以扩展。同理，当一国军队受雇于另一国去打击属于一方的敌人时，臣民们因此就会被当作或错误地当作可随意支配的物体加以使用。

3.“常设军队将逐渐全部被废除。”

常设军队一直是为战争而准备的。它们不断用战争威胁着其他国家的安全。它们通过武装毫无限制的士兵的数量刺激国家之间相互赶超。由于军队自身就是侵略战争的根源，维持常设军队的费用最终使和平演变成了战争，而战争解决了军费开支的负担。再有，雇凶杀人或者被杀似乎是把这些人当成某些人（国家）手中的武器，这不能与人内在人格中的权利原则相提并论。如果公民们不时接受自愿的军事训练是为保护

自己和家园免遭外部的侵犯，这就是另外一回事了。但是如果是增加财富而不是增加士兵人数也是一样，这也会被其他国家看作是军事威胁，会促使其采取防御性的攻击，因为一个国家有三种力量——军事力量、联盟力量、财富力量——第三者可能是战争最可靠的工具。如果发现另一国所拥有的财富并不匮乏的话，战争就会频繁发生。

4.“任何国家债务合约都不得与该国外部事务相关联。”

为国家经济寻求帮助，不论是内援还是外援都是没有什么可疑的（例如，改善公路状况、重新安置移民、储存粮食以备饥荒时用，等等）。但是，如果一种借贷制度被列强用作征服别国的工具，那它体现的是财力最危险的形式。因为当这些债务现在不被追讨时，它们却在无限制地增长（因为不是所有的债主会同时要求还债）。由商业民族在本世纪发明的这个精巧体系所提供的军事经费可以超过所有其他国家可提供的总和。通过这一借贷制度可以为工业和贸易提供商业上的刺激，从而使经济崩溃推迟相当一段时间，但是债务国最终会被税收赤字压垮。这种战争的延缓，加上当权者的好战倾向（这似乎是与人性不可分离的特性），外债就是永久和平道路上的障碍。因此，外债必须在和平协定的先决条款中被禁止，否则国家的破产就在所难免，由此产生的损失可能殃及其他无辜的国家，给其造成伤害；其他国家因此有充分的理由联合起来一致对付这样一个国家。

5.“任何国家不得强行干涉他国的宪法和政府。”

什么能使这种干涉合情合理呢？当然不是一个国家在另一个国家的事务中引发的造谣和冒犯行为；这应当是对他国的一种警示，是一个民族由于目无法纪而招来恶魔的例证。一个自由的人给另一个人树立的坏榜样与他对后者的伤害是不同的。如果一个国家由于内部的纷争想分成两部分，每一部分自成一国，声称拥有原来的那个国家，那情况就不一样了。如果一个外部的国家想要给予其中的一个国家帮助，在这种情况

下不能认定为是对这个国家宪法的干涉，因为其正属于无政府状态。只要这种内部矛盾没有解决，外部势力的干涉就是对一个独立民族权利的干涉，因为这个民族的人民在与其自身的疾病作斗争。这种干涉是一种积极的冒犯，会给所有其他国家的自治带来不安全感。

6.“与另一个国家交战的国家不允许有下列仇视行为，因为这些行为会在未来的和平时期导致彼此缺乏信任。这些行为包括在敌对国家进行暗杀或者投毒，违反协议，煽动叛国等。”

这些都是不光彩的行径。即使在战争时期，对敌对方的态度也必须存在某种信任，否则和平协议就不可能达成，敌对就会演变成毁灭性的战争。毕竟，战争仅仅是，在没有公正的法庭用司法权威评判的情况下，一个国家用武力争取权利的令人惋惜的权宜之计。在这些案例中，双方都不能被称作是非正义的敌人，因为那样做就已经假设了一个法官的裁决。冲突的结局，如同所谓“上帝的审判”的案例，可以决定谁是对的一方。国家间的惩罚性战争是难以想象的，因为它们之间没有优劣之分。接下来是，毁灭性的战争使交战双方及其权利同时受损，永久的和平只存在于巨大的人类坟墓里。此类战争及其导致战争的种种因素必须坚决禁止。但是上面所列的那些手段会引发这样的战争，因为这些糟糕透顶的技艺，除了特别令人厌恶之外，一旦被拿来运用就不仅仅局限于战争本身。例如，战争会使用间谍，这只会利用别人的不诚实为自己谋利（这种做法永远不会完全消失）。这种做法会延续至和平时期，因此完全损害到和平的宗旨。

所有上面列出的条款，如果客观地或者联系当权者的意图审视，属于禁止性法律。有些法律是最严格的，不管情况如何变化，它们都是有效的，要求立即禁止有关行为（第1、5、6条）。其他的条款（第2、3、4条），尽管它们也是公平条款，却允许根据所适用情形保有一定的自由度。后者不一定立即执行，只要它们的最终目的没有受到忽视（例

如，根据第2项条款恢复某些国家的自由）。但是，这些条款的延期执行并非遥遥无期，而仅仅作为一种手段，用以避免生硬地执行，从而导致无法达到设立此条款目的的结果。第2条的情况是，禁止只与获得的方式有关，与国家的政治状况无关。尽管这个现状不被合法政府支持，但是在每个国家的公共意见中，在公认的推定取得的时代，这被认为是合法的。[3]

第二部分　包含国家间永久和平的正式条款

共同生活的人们之间的和平状态与自然状态是不同的。自然状态即是一种战争状态。因为即使没有主动的敌意行为，也不断存在危险的爆发。因此和平状态必须是正式建立的，因为敌对状态的延缓本身无法保障和平。除非一个邻居在另一个邻居的要求下为其作出保证（这只能在一个法制国家实现），否则后者都会视前者为敌人。[4]

永久和平的第一个正式条款：每个国家的市民宪法应当是共和政体。

一部共和制的宪法建立在三条原则基础之上。第一，社会成员中所有的成员都享有自由。第二，每个人都依靠一个共同的法律体系。第三，每个公民都享有司法平等。[5]宪法是唯一一个缘自原始契约思想的法律文件。一个民族所有的正当立法必须建立在其基础之上。因此，就权利而言，共和制本身就是每一种市民宪法的原始基础，剩下所要问的问题是，它是否是通向永久和平的唯一宪法。

共和制宪法不仅自身起源纯粹（因为它来源于纯粹的权利概念），而且它还提供了获得所渴望结果的前景，例如，一个永久的和平。理由如下：是否宣战需要征得公民的同意，很自然，公民们会非常犹豫是否投赞成票，因为宣战意味着他们要承担战争的所有悲惨后果。例如，他们要亲自参战，要从他们自己的资源中抽出战争的费用，痛苦地修复灾

难的创伤，承担负债的压力，而负债的压力由于新战争的不断威胁而永远无法减轻。然而，在宪法之下的臣民并非公民的情况下，即在非共和政体之下，战争是世界上最简单的事。由于一国之君不是一个公民，而是国家的拥有者，战争不会让他作出任何的牺牲：他的宴会、狩猎、享乐消遣的宫殿、节日的狂欢都一如既往。他因此会决定宣战。他之所以这样做并没有合理的理由，只是一种消遣。他会毫无顾虑地将辩护的事情交给外交使团——他们一直是为此目的作准备的——以为了国家繁荣而战为开战的理由。

共和制的宪法常常和民主制的宪法相混淆，下面的解释可以避免这种错误。国家的各种形式既可以依据行使最高权力人的不同而定，也可以依据其统治者统治的方式而定。有三种可能的形式，依据是统治权是在个人、少数人组成的团体，还是在所有组成公民社会的人们手中（例如，独裁政体、贵族统治、民主政体，即王子政权、贵族政权、人民政权）。第二种分类取决于政府的形式，（例如，普通大众成为人民的普遍意愿）与国家如何依据宪法（例如，由于普遍意愿变成了法案，因此人群成为了民族）以什么样的方式行使其全部权力。在这种情况下，政府的形式或者是共和政体或者是专制政体。共和主义是一种政治体制，即执行权力（政府）与司法权力分离。独裁主义在这样的一个国家横行，其法律的制定和执行由同一个权力完成。它只有在统治者把人民意愿当成自己意愿时才会反映人民的意愿。在这三种政体中，民主政体也可能是一种暴政，因为它设立了一种执行权力，通过这个执行权力，所有公民针对一个人作决定，并且不经过这个人的同意，因此，决定是由大家作出的，又不是由大家作出的。这意味着普遍的意愿自相矛盾，也与自由相矛盾。

任何没有代议制的政府都是非正常现象，因为一个人，同一个人不能同时是立法者和其自我意愿的执行者，如同逻辑推理中一般命题不能同时是次要命题一样。即使其他两种政治宪法（例如，独裁政体和贵族

政体）因其给独裁政府留有足够的空间而总是存在缺陷，它们还会与这样的政府联系在一起，因为这个政府秉承代议制精神。因此，弗里德里克二世说，他仅仅是国家最高级别的仆人，[6]而在一个民主宪法之下，这种态度不可能存在，因为民主政体中的每一个人都想成为一个统治者。我们因此可以说一个国家统治者的数量越少其代表权力越大，宪法也更体现其共和的本质，并通过逐渐改革最终实现这一本质还是有希望的。由于这个原因，实现这个唯一完美的合法宪法，在一个贵族政体里比在一个君主政体中更加困难。在一个民主政体中，通过暴力革命有可能得以实现。但是人们比关心宪法的形式更加关心政府的模式，[7]尽管更要看宪法在多大程度上符合政府的意图。但是如果政府的模式要与权利的概念相一致，它必须建立在代议制的基础上。这种代议制能够使一个民主国家成为可能，不管采用何种形式的宪法，没有这种民主代表制度，暴政和暴力就会出现。所谓古希腊和古罗马时期的共和制没有采用这种民主代表制度，因此它们也毫无例外地以暴政而告终，尽管在一个人的统治之下，这种体制相对来说依然可以忍受。

永久和平的第二个正式条款：各国的权利应当建立在自由国家联盟的基础上。

我们可以用评判独立于任何外部的法律约束、生活在一种自然状态下的个人的方式评判自己归属于民族国家的哪些民族，因为仅仅依据他们是邻居这一事实，他们就彼此构成威胁。每个国家为了自身的安全能够也应当要求其他国家与自己一道进入一种宪法体制，这种宪法体制类似于市民宪法，从而使每个人的权利得以维护；这就意味着建立一个各民族的联盟。但是，这种联盟与一个国际性的国家不同。一个国际性国家的想法是自相矛盾的，因为每个国家都包含一个上级（法律制定者）和一个下级（遵守法律的人们）的关系，而几个民族组成一个国家就是建立一个民族。这与我们最初的设想相矛盾，因为我们是从民族相互之间的关系出发考虑各民族权利的，它们隶属于不同的国家，而不是联合

成为一个整体。

我们带着极大的蔑视看待没有法律约束的自由与残暴的生活方式。他们宁愿陷于无休止的争斗中也不愿意遵从法律的约束，因为他们喜欢愚蠢的自由，而不喜欢理性的自由。我们认为这是人性的野蛮、粗俗和残暴。我们因此期盼每一个文明的民族自我组成国家，尽快摒弃如此可耻的状态。但是与此期望背道而驰的是，每个国家都认为其君主不需遵从任何外部法律的约束，其统治者的光荣就在于命令数以千计的人为了一个事业而赴汤蹈火，而这个事业与他们毫无关系，统治者自己却不需冒任何风险。[8]欧洲野蛮民族与美国民族的主要区别就在于，当一些美国的部落被他们的敌人完全吃掉时，欧洲人知道如何更好地利用这些战败者而不是简单地吃掉他们：他们宁愿利用战败者来增加被统治者的数量，并用增加武器的办法去扩大战争的范围。

尽管在法律统治下的公民社会中，对于人性的剥夺被深深地掩盖了，但在不同民族间不受约束的相互关系中还是赤裸裸地展现了出来。因此，人们不禁要问，权利一词是不是还没有完全从军事政治中被驱除，是不是还没有哪个国家胆敢公开宣称要消灭权利一词。尽管他们富有哲理和外交性的条款没有也不会有极微小的法律效力，胡果·格劳修斯、塞缪尔·普芬多夫、瓦特尔和其他人（他们是可怜的安慰者）的言论仍在军事侵略中被引用，因为这样的国家不受一个共同的外部约束所制约。因此，也没有先例表明，一个国家因为听从了上面提及的尊贵的人的言论而停止其军事行动。这种每个国家对权利概念的敬畏表明，人类拥有伟大的道德能力，能够战胜自身的邪恶（因为他不能否认邪恶的存在），并且希望其他人也能够这样做；否则权利一词就永远不会被企图彼此宣战的国家所使用，除非是在嘲弄的意义上，正如某位高卢王子所宣称的："自然界赋予强壮者驯服弱者的特权。"由于没有外部的特别法庭审判其主张，那么各国寻求自身权利的办法只能是战争。但是军事胜利不能保证权利，一个和平协议可以终结当前的战争，却不能终结普

遍的战争状态，而发动一场新的战争的理由总是能够找到的。的确，这样的一种事态也不能说完全不公平，因为它允许每个当事方在决定自己事情时充当法官。自然权利允许我们说生活在无法无天状态下的人应当摒弃这种状态，而各民族的权利却不允许我们对国家说同样的话。因为作为国家，它们已经有了一个合法的内部宪法，因此，它们超越了其他民族的权利概念并将根据自身对于权利概念的理解将自己纳入一个更加广泛的合法体制中。另一方面，作为司法道德的最高权威，理智绝对谴责战争，并把建立和平作为当即的使命。但是，如果没有一个国家间的协议，是不能宣布并确保和平的。因此，一种特定的团体，我们可以称之为"和平联盟"的组织便应运而生了。它与和平协议不同，后者结束了一场战争，而前者是寻求结束所有的战争。这一联盟并不力求获得像国家那样的权力，而仅仅是维护和确保每个国家的自由以及其他结盟国家的自由。这并不意味着它们服从于公法以及执行它们的强制性权力，就像自然状态中的人们一样。这种联邦主义的想法逐渐延伸至所有的国家，达到永久的和平，是可行并且具有现实意义的。因为如果一个强大的、受到启蒙的民族在机缘下形成共和国，这将为其他国家形成联盟提供一个活动中心。其他国家会加入第一个国家的行列，并在尊重各国权利的共识下保障了各国的自由。通过一系列这类联盟的形成，达成共识的国家数量会越来越多。

一个民族这样说是可以理解的。它说："我们之间将没有战争。我们将组成一个国家，自己指定最高的立法、执行和司法的权利机构，用和平方式解决我们之间的矛盾。"但是，如果这个国家说，"我自己和其他国家之间将没有战争，尽管我不承认任何最高的立法权力能够确保我的权利，而它的权利我也应当予以保障。"除非我能依靠一些公民社会联合体的替代品，例如，一个自由的联邦，否则我便不能对我的权利的保障有信心。如果说国际权利的概念想具有某种意义的话，理性必须能够与这种联盟相随相伴。

国际权利的概念如果理解为战争的权利，那么这一概念就变得毫无意义了。因为这就等于认可了这样的现实，即决定什么是合法的存在，并非通过普遍有效的外部法律而是通过以武力作支撑的片面行为准则。这也可以理解为，持有这种观点的人相互诋毁是完全公平的，因此只能在巨大的坟墓中找寻永久的和平，坟墓中埋葬着所有对暴力的恐惧和那些对暴力负责的人们。只有一种理性的办法能使国家与其他国家在没有法律的、纯粹的战争状态中共存。如同一个一个的人，他们必须放弃野蛮和没有法律约束的自由，将自己纳入公法的管辖之内，从而形成一个国际性的国家，该国家持续增大直至容纳地球上所有的民族。但是，因为根据目前国际性权利的概念，这不是国家的意愿，建立一个世界性共和国的积极想法无法得到实现。如果所有都不失去的话，也最好可以找到一个替代品，即建立一个逐渐扩张的联邦来防止战争。后者可以检查目前人们蔑视法律对抗伙伴的倾向，尽管一直存在战争再一次爆发的危险。（正如维吉尔的诗句所言：“邪恶的狂怒张开血盆大口，疯狂地肆虐着。”）[9]

永久和平的第三个正式条款：世界性权利应当限制在全球友好的前提下。

正如以下条款所示，我们在这里不是关注慈善，而是关注权利。在这一语境下，友好意味着当一个陌生人在到达他国领土时不会受到恶意的对待。他的确可以不被收留，倘若这样做不会导致其死亡，但是只要他在碰巧进入的那个地方表现平和，他就不应当受到恶意的对待。这个陌生人不能要求受到客人般的款待，因为那样需要一个特别友好的协议，根据这个协议，他可能会在一定时间内成为当地家庭的一员。他或许仅仅能够要求有度假权，因为所有人有权共同拥有地球表面，所以所有人都有权在属于其他人的地域出现。由于地球是一个球体，人们无法划定一个无限的区域，必须尽可能地忍受彼此的共存。没有人在占有地球某个特定部分时享有更大的权利。人类群体被地球表面不可居住部分

的海洋和沙漠所分隔，即使是这样，船舶和骆驼（沙漠之舟）使得他们能够穿越这些无主地而靠近他们的同伴，利用人类共享地球表面的权利作为社会交往的一种形式。沿海居民在连接海洋的水域掠夺船只，奴役被俘海员的不友好行为，以及沙漠居民认为靠近游牧部落就可以掠夺他们的做法都是违反自然权利的。但是这种友好的自然权利，例如，陌生人的权利，不会延伸到超越条件使得他们企图与当地居民建立关系的地步。这样，彼此有距离的各大洲也能够进入共同的和平关系，可能最终受到公法的规范，从而将人类逐渐向一个世界性公民体制靠拢。

如果我们比较大陆上文明国度的不友好行为，特别是商业国家的不友好行为，它们展现出的对外国和外国人的不公平行为似乎耸人听闻（对于占领外国和控制外国人情况是一样的）。美洲、黑人国家、香料群岛、好望角等等在被发现时被看作是无主地，因为土著居民被忽视了。在东印度（印度斯坦），外国军队仅仅以建立贸易站点为借口侵入。这导致了当地人受到压迫，印度各邦陷入战争、饥荒、叛乱、背叛，以及一系列折磨人类的罪恶行径。

中国 [10]和日本在经历了这些客人的骚扰后智慧地对他们进行了限制。中国允许他们停靠在其领土周围，却禁止其进入；而日本只允许荷兰这一个欧洲民族靠岸，但是却像对待囚徒一样将荷兰人与当地人分隔开。最为糟糕的是（或者从道德的角度评判是最好的），商业国家并没有因为其暴力行为而获益，因为他们所有的贸易公司都处在崩溃的边缘。糖料群岛（the Sugar Islands），一个最残酷最绞尽脑汁实行奴隶制的地方，根本不盈利。这些岛屿只是服务于为战船培养船员的不怎么光彩的间接目的，从而帮助欧洲进行战争。所有这些都是强权的杰作，他们不停地拿虔诚做文章。他们希望被看作是被选中的信奉者，与此同时却享受着不公平的战果。

地球上的各民族不同程度地进入了一个全球性的社会。它已经发展

到这种程度，即发生在世界某地的人权侵犯行为会被世界各地感受到。世界公民权利的想法因此并非太不切合实际也太过勉强，它是对未形成条文的政治和国际权利的一个必要补充，将其发展成为一个人类的世界性权利。只有在这种条件下，我们才能自我恭维一下说，我们正在继续向着永久的和平进发。

补充条款一：关于保障永久和平

自然这个伟大的艺术家是永久和平的保障者。自然的运作过程可视性地展现了其在人类中创造和谐的设想，甚至是有悖于人类的意愿并通过他们之间不和谐的方式达到。这种规划，倘若我们认为其运行法则不为人所知，则被冠以“命运”之称。如果我们在世界的发展中审视其富有目的性的设计，它展现出一个主宰更高事业的内在智慧，给人类完成客观目标指明道路，并且确定了世界的进化；我们称之为神意。 [11]我们实际上观察不到自然的这种诡计，我们甚至不能推断其存在。但是，在各种事物的关系和目的之间，我们能够并且必须运用它，以便将自然的诡计与人类的诡计作类比。神意与结果的关系以及与结果的一致只能被设想成是一种想法，由理性直接告诉我们。然而，这一想法的确是难以触摸的理论，它具有有效性并且在实践中有非常真实的基础，正如永久和平的概念，我们有责任运用上面提到的自然的机制去推动它。在只关心理论而不是宗教的语境下，我们也应当注意并且谈及自然，这更是人类理性的局限而不是神意的问题，因为理性必须在可能的经验的边界内处理因果关系。谦逊禁止我们谈论神意，因为这就意味着戴上伊卡洛斯的翅膀，假定要靠近其神妙莫测的奥秘。

在我们更确切地界定这一保障之前，我们必须首先检查一下自然将演员们放置在其伟大壮观的场面的情景，因为正是这种情景要求有和平的保障。下一步我们可以探求这种保障是以何种形式提供的。

大自然的安排是这样的：首先，她关心人类能够在他们所定居的地

方生存。第二，她通过战争的方式将人类驱逐到四面八方，甚至让人类居住在最恶劣的地区。第三，她用同样的方法迫使人类或多或少地建立司法关系。苔藓在北冰洋最寒冷的荒野中依然能够生长，这本身就是一个奇迹；驯鹿能从积雪中将苔藓挖出，让其成为食物，并使自己成为奥斯提亚克斯人或者萨莫耶德斯人的牲畜。同理，盐碱沙漠中有骆驼，它们仿佛是为在沙漠中行走而生，这样它们也会被利用。当我们认识到如下事实时，自然被设计的证据会更清晰地展现：北冰洋的海岸不仅住着毛皮动物，而且有海豹、海象、鲸鱼，它们的肉和脂肪为当地人提供了食物和能量。自然界（如下的）关照（行为）引发更多的敬仰。自然界将漂流木带到没有树的地方，谁也不知道这些漂流木来自哪里。当地人如果没有这些材料，他们就无法造船和造武器，或者是建造住所来居住。他们与动物的斗争已经很吃力，因而彼此之间能够和平相处。但是，可能正是战争把他们驱赶到了这些地区。在征服地球的过程中，所有动物中人类首先驯服的战争工具就是马。在国家建立之后较为奢侈的时期大象才被驯服。播种叫作谷物的某种草也是一样；这些谷物的原始特性并不为我们所知。培养和种植各种各样的水果也是一样（在欧洲，大概只有两个品种即沙果树和野生梨）。只有在国家形成、土地固定，人们摒弃了猎人、[12]渔民、牧羊人没有法律规范的自由生活并完成向农业生活方式的过渡后，这种艺术才能产生。接着，盐和铁被发现了——它们是各民族间贸易的最初物品。这样国家间首次彼此进入和平的关系，甚至与最远的同伴达成相互理解、互利和平的关系。

大自然看到人们能够居住在地球上的各个地方；大自然的意愿是他们应当住在各个地方，甚至有悖于他们自己的意愿。这个义务并非基于责任的概念，或者是基于道德法则要求他们完成的。相反，自然选择战争作为达到这一目的的手段。

我们可以观察到民族通过其语言的一致性展现其后代的一体性。北冰洋上的萨莫耶德斯人和相距二百英里的阿尔泰山里说同一种语言的另

一群人就属于这种情况。另一群蒙古族裔骑马征战，把其中的一个部落驱赶到了最荒蛮的北极地区，这显然不是这群人的意愿。[13]同样的，欧洲最北部地区的芬兰人（在那里他们被称为拉普人）现在与匈牙利人远远相隔，这两群人在语言上是相互联系的，他们被哥特人和萨马特人从中分开了。除了战争还能有谁会这么做。大自然在地球上散播人群的方法能让爱斯基摩人占据最北部，因为他们和其他美洲族群不同，有可能是古代欧洲探险者的后裔。佩沙拉人被用同样的方式驱赶到南方的火地岛。然而，战争本身不需要特别的动机，因为人性中好战的基因仿佛与生俱来。好战甚至被看作是高贵的，使人们受到荣誉感的激励，且并无自私的动机。因此，好战的勇气，连同美洲人的野蛮及其中世纪欧洲伙伴的野蛮，被看作拥有伟大的、直接的价值，不仅仅是在战争时期，也在即将产生战争的时期。因此战争常常是因为要展现这一品质而开始的，于是战争本身被赋予了一种内在的尊严，甚至哲学家们把战争看作是对人产生尊贵影响的事，完全忘却了希腊谚语所说“战争是坏的，因为它在毁灭魔鬼的同时制造出更多的魔鬼”。大自然为了达到其目的对动物种类中的人类亦如法炮制。

我们现在来谈谈关于永久和平的前景的核心问题。大自然对于人们认定的自己的责任做了什么？例如，大自然是如何帮助推动其道德目标的？大自然如何能够保证，依据自由法则人应当做的（但还没有做）实际上会由自然的力量做到又无损于人的自由？这个问题提出了公权利三个领域的问题，即政治、国际和世界公民的权利。如果我说自然愿意让这个或者那个发生，这并不意味着自然赋予我们责任去做这样的事，因为责任只能在具有可行性的理由时才能赋予，并且在没有任何外部限制的情况下实行。相反，自然不管我们是否愿意都会这么做，“命运引领着愿意的人，但是也拽着不愿意的人”。

1.即使人们不被内部的分歧所驱使而服从公法的强制力，战争也会从外部制造出同样的效果。因为根据上面所描述的自然的安排，每个民

族都会发现自己要面对邻近一个民族的挑战，因此被迫形成一个国家以对付另一个民族的武装力量。如今共和制宪法是唯一一个完全公正地保护人权的宪法。但它也最难建立，且更难维护，因此许多人认为这样的宪法只能在天使的国度里成为可能，因为人类有追逐私利的倾向，因而没有能力遵循一个极其自然的宪法。但是，事实上，自然会帮助理智的、普遍的人类意愿，人类的意愿那么令人羡慕，在实践中又是那么无能为力。意愿只会让人们为国家创建一个好的机构，他们有能力做这件事。人们这样安排这个机构使得他自利的能量相互抵消，每个人中和或者抵消其他人的破坏力量。就理智而言，结果是一样的，仿佛人类的自私倾向不存在，因此，人，即使自己缺乏道德也会被迫成为一个好的公民。建立国家的问题甚至能被一个由魔鬼组成的民族所解决（只要他们拥有知性）。可以表述如下：“为了建立一个由理智者组成的组织，这些理智者为了生存需要普遍适用的法律，但是每个个体倾向于把自己排除在这些法律的约束之外，宪法必须如此设计，即即使公民的私人看法彼此相左，但是这些不同的观点能够相互抑制致使公民的公共行为一致，仿佛他们并没有过这些邪恶的观点。”这样的问题必须是可以解决的。因为这个任务不包括人类道德水平的提高，它仅仅意味着寻找出如何将自然的机理运用于人类，让他们彼此仇视的情绪迫使他们遵守强制的法律，并因此创造一个和平的条件，使得法律能够得到执行。我们甚至可以看到这个原则在现存的国家间起作用（尽管这还并不完美）。因为在它们的外部关系中，它们已经接近了权利的想法，尽管这样做的理由不是其内部的道德观点。同理，我们不能期望它们的道德态度产生一个完善的政治宪法。相反，正是通过后者，人们才能够期望获得一个好的道德文化。因此，自私的倾向在其外部关系中自然地相互排斥的自然机理可以被理智所利用以达到其目的，即权利统治。内部和外部的和平因此得到深化与确保，只要这种和平就在国家权力可控的范围内。我们或许因此说自然决定让权利最终占上风。人类忽略的事情最终会自动发生，尽管多少有些不便。正如鲍特维克所指出的那样：“如果芦苇弯得

太狠就会断裂；索要太多将一无所获。”

2.国际权利的观点假定许多独立的相邻国家独自存在。国家的事务基本上是战争，除非有一个联盟防止敌对行为的爆发。但是依据理智性的想法，这样一个国家依旧比独立国家联合体更受期待，它统治着其他的国家，创造出一个统一的王朝。随着政府力量的加强，法律逐渐地失去其影响力。一个没有灵魂的暴政，在粉碎了善的萌芽之后最终陷入无政府状态。因此，每个国家（或者其统治者）都渴望，尽可能占领整个世界以获取持久的和平。但是自然的愿望恰好相反。自然用两种办法，即语言和宗教的不同，来分离国家并阻止它们合并。 [14]这些当然可能制造双方的敌意，为战争提供条件；但是，随着文化的发展，人类逐渐地转向原则上的一致，他们有了相互的理解及和平。与吞噬了所有人的能量和埋葬了自由的暴政不同，这种和平是由力量的均衡与最激烈的较量所缔造和保障的。

3.因此，大自然智慧地将国家分开，尽管每个国家的愿望，依据国际权利的论点，是采用武力或是计谋将其他国家统一在其麾下。另一方面，大自然也通过国家之间的共同利益将它们联合起来。商业精神迟早会支配并抓住每个民族，而这不能与战争共存。在所有可以利用的国家权力（或者手段）中，财政权力是最可以依靠的。因此，国家发现它们不得不推动高尚的和平事业，尽管不是出于道德的动机。当世界上有战争爆发的威胁时，国家会试图通过调停避免它，仿佛它们已经为了这个目的而进入永久的同盟一样。依据事物的自然规律，大的军事联盟很难形成，也更难取得成功。

这样，大自然通过人类意愿自身的机制确保永久和平。虽然我们不能从理论上预言未来，但获得永久和平的可能性足以成为务实的目标。大自然赋予我们责任去努力实现这一目标，而这并非一个空洞的幻想。

补充条款二：论永久和平的秘密条款

在处理关于公权利的事务时，有一个秘密条款（客观地看或者是从其内容上看）是矛盾的。主观上说，例如，对于记述这一条款的人而言，一个条款可能正好包含一个秘密要素，因为这个人会认为公开地宣称自己为条款的创立者有损个人尊严。

这类条款的唯一条目包含在下列句子中：“哲学家们关于公共和平条件的论述，应当被那些武装起来准备战争的国家引为忠告。”

在与其他国家关系的原则问题上向臣民们（哲学家）寻求指导，这对于一个国家的司法机关似乎有些耻辱，因为我们必须自然地将最高级别的智慧归功于司法机关；但是，我们仍然强烈建议这样做。国家因此悄悄寻求哲学家们的帮助，并使之成为一个秘密。换句话说，这将允许他们公开而自由地评说关于战争和维和的准则。如果没有人禁止他们的讨论，他们的确会主动这么做。国家间没有特别、正式地安排让他们同意这样做，因为这样的协议已经包含在人类作为道德的立法者所承担的义务中。然而，这并不意味着国家必须承认哲学家的原则优于法学家的声明（法学家代表的是国家的权力），只是哲学家应当有解释其思想的机会。将权利的天平和公平之剑作为其象征的法学家常常使用后者，不仅仅是为了免除外来影响对前者的作用，而且也会在天平的一只托盘不下沉时把剑扔在它上面（被征服的人惨了）。除非法学家同时也是哲学家，就道德层面而言，他有强烈的愿望这么做，因为他的工作仅仅是执行现有法律，而不是探寻这些法律是否需要改进。法学家的表现仿佛他的这一低级学科实际上是高级学科一样，原因很简单，因为这里面伴随着权力（其他的两个学科也是如此）。但是哲学在众多学科组成的权力层中占据非常低的位置。因此，我们被告知，哲学是神学的女仆，与其他学科的关系也相似，诸如此类的话。但是这个女仆是在她仁慈的主人前面高擎火炬还是在其身后托着裙裾还远不清楚。

人们并不期待国王会哲学化或者哲学家将成为国王，这也不是他们

想要的，因为拥有权力毫无疑问地会破坏理智的自由评判。国王们或者是主权国家的人民（例如，那些用主张人人平等的法律进行自治的人们）不应当迫使哲学家们消失或者是保持沉默，而是应当允许他们公开发表见解。让阳光照亮他们，这一点至关重要。哲学家一族天生就是不会形成恶意的团伙或俱乐部，他们不会有传播叛乱舆论的嫌疑。

附录

一、关于永久和平，道德与政治的不一致

道德，作为我们行为应当遵守的、具有约束力法则的集合，从客观的角度来说，基本上属于实践的范畴。如果我们曾经知晓责任这一概念的影响力，那么说我们不能遵守道德法则就是荒唐的。因为如果是这样的话，责任的概念就会自动地失去道德（没有人被迫做他没有能力做的事）。因此，作为权利应用分支的政治和作为权利理论分支的道德之间不会有矛盾（也就是，在理论与实践之间）。这样的矛盾只会在道德被用作权宜之计时才会发生，例如，某人选取最有用的手段牟取一己之私利，这无异于否认道德的存在。

如果政治说，"你要像蛇一样狡猾"，道德就会加上"像鸽子一样无害"。如果这两条规范不能在同一诫条中并存，那么政治与道德之间确实存在着不一致。但是如果要统一两者，再假定它们的对立就是荒唐的，此种矛盾如何解决的问题，甚至不能拿来做思考练习。"诚实是最好的政策"的格言包含着一个与现实常常相反的理论，这是事实。然而，另一个理论命题"诚实胜过任何政策"超越了所有的反对意见，它的确是任何政策不可分割的条件。道德的上帝不会向暴力的监护人朱庇特投降，因为朱庇特也要听从命运的安排。简而言之，理智还没有获得充分的启蒙，不能发现那一系列已经确定的因素，这些因素会允许它准确地预测人类活动可喜或可悲的结局。它只会希望结果与愿望相符。但是，理智总是清晰地告诉我们，如何做才能行走在责任的轨道上，正如智慧规则所要求的那样，给我们指明达到最终目标的道路。

但是，对其而言道德是纯理论的实干家冷漠拒绝我们的善意的愿

望，即使他承认我们能做我们应当做的事。他将其论点建立在如此断言之上，即从人性的角度我们能够事先断言，人类永远不会做必要的事以便达到永久和平的目标。所有遵循自由原则，生活在一个符合法律的框架内（全体意志的个别统一）的个体，对于达到这个目的还不够，这是千真万确的。在这个如此困难的问题解决之前，所有人必须一起渴望达到这个目标，只有这样公民社会才能作为一个整体存在。由于在一个共同的愿望出现之前，一个特别的统一的事业必须能够统一所有个体的不同愿望，因为没有一个个体能够创造这样一个事业，实践中唯一的一种执行意愿的办法、一个开创国家权利的途径就是武力。在武力的一致权威之下，公权利最终得到保障。

我们事先当然期望实际的经验与原始的理论观点将会存在不小的偏差。因为我们不能假设立法者的道德观点是这样的，即无序的民众在统一成为一个民族后，立法者会让他们依据自己的公共意愿创造一个符合法律的体制。

或许可以这样说，一旦一个人自己手上掌握了权力，他就不会让人们给他立法。同样道理，一个自治的、不受外部法律约束的国家也不会让自身依赖于其他国家的评判；甚至于整个大洲，如果感觉自身比另一个大洲优越，它就会毫不犹豫地扩展自己的地盘，不管另一个国家是否挡了自己的路，它也要统治那个国家。这样，理论为政治的、国际的或者世界公民权利所设计的所有计划演变成了空洞和不切实际的想法。但是，基于人性原则的实践可以希望为其政治机会主义体系找到一个坚实的基础。

当然，如果既没有自由又没有基于自由的道德法则，只有当一切发生了或者能够发生的事简单遵循自然的机械的工作机制，政治才是利用自然治理人的艺术。这构成了实践的智慧的整体。那么，权利的概念仅仅是一个空洞的想法。但是，如果我们认为非常有必要将权利的概念与

政治结合，或者甚至使权利成为政治的限制条件，那就必须承认这两者相互兼容。我也的确可以想象一个讲道德的政治家，例如，某人将政治权宜之计的原则运用完美使其与道德共存；但是我难以想象一个政治的道德家，例如，一个人运用其道德规则去适应作为政治家的优势。

道德的政治家会遵循这样的原则：如果在国家关系中或是在政治体制中犯了不可避免的错误，国家元首有义务尽可能迅速地改正错误。应当确认这些政治制度是为确保自然权利——它在实践理性的观念中是树立在我们面前的一个模型——而建立的，甚至于必须牺牲自我的利益。与所有政治权宜之计背道而驰的原则是：在没有一个更好的体制取而代之的情况下破坏现有政治或世界公民的联盟。在这种情况下，这一原则与道德一致。尽管要求立刻用暴力的手段修订宪法中的错误是荒谬的，但是要求当权者警醒并向正确方向改进依然是必要的，这是为宪法能够不断地接近权利法律所规定的最佳状态。即使一个国家现有宪法规定的是一个专制的统治政权，它也可以用共和的方式自治。这个国家将逐渐地到达一个阶段，人民会受到法律权威思想的影响，如同国家有着武力作为支撑一样，人民将能够创造一种基于权利的司法体系。然而，如果一个更合法的体制是通过不合法的方式获得的，例如，由于以前糟糕的体制导致了暴力革命而建立起来的，即使采用暴力或者叛变破坏旧宪法的每个人在革命过程中应当得到处罚，也不允许带领人民恢复原来的状态。但是，关于国家间的外部关系，即使国家是专制的体制（因此在与外敌的关系中处于强势），只要这个国家随时有可能被其他国家吞并，则该国家不得被要求废弃其体制；因此，在必须有政治改进计划的同时，也要允许等待一个更好的时机执行这个计划。[15]

可能出现这样的情况：专制的道德学家，例如，那些在实践中犯了错误，屡屡有悖于政治的深谋远虑，采纳或者推荐不成熟的措施，经验必然会将他们逐渐带出与自然对立的状态，使他们采纳更好的办法。但是，道德化的政治家试图掩盖有悖于权利的政治原则，以人性没有能力

获得理性所认定的一个理念为借口。他们因此使进步成为不可能，使对权利的侵犯永久化。

这些老于世故的政治家没有采纳他们所吹嘘的正确的实践，而是固守着令人厌恶的把戏，因为他们仅仅是为了剥削人民（倘若可能的话就剥削整个世界），通过用这种方式影响当权者以确保其一己之私利。他们就像进军政治的律师一样（例如，对这些人而言，法律是一份职业，不是立法的事情）。他们的职责不是探讨立法本身，而是遵循当前法律的指引，他们总是认为现有的法律构成最好，因为它遵循一个合适的机械的秩序。但是，这种技能或许给他们一种幻觉：他们也能够根据权利的概念（先验而非经验的）判断任何政治体制的原则。他们或许吹嘘说他们了解人们（因为他们不得不与许多人相处，这也是意料之中的），尽管他们不了解人及其潜能，因为这要求站在更高的人类学制高点上。

他们继续依据理性所规定的政治法和国际法行事，用诸如此类的概念武装头脑。但是他们只能在欺骗的状态下走这一步，因为他们会遵循一贯的程序，用机械的方式运用在专制统治下形成的强制性法律，甚至在理性观念只考虑合法强制的领域，与自由的原则相一致。这一自由的原则自身就可以使公正建立的政治体制成为可能。这位实践者相信他能实地解决这个问题，忽略理性的观念，从迄今为止仍然幸存的那些体制（很大程度上是不合法的）的结构中获得经验。尽管没有公开，但是他为着这个目的遵循了一些准则，这些准则可以粗略地表述为如下的诡辩术。

1.先做然后解释这样做的理由。抓住任何国家自身享有或者是对邻国人民享有的侵犯权利的有利机会，正当的理由可以更容易、更简洁地提出。这比事先想出说服的理由，然后等待出现反驳的理由来得更现成，而使用暴力的事实可以更轻而易举地掩盖过去。这在第一个案例中尤其显得正确。国家的最高权力机构也是立法机构，必须无可争议地服

从。这样鲁莽行事本身呈现出的是内在的信念，即这种行为是正确与公正的。成功之神就是最好的支持者。

2.倘若你是暴君，否认这一点。例如，如果你犯了罪，为了诱导你的人民走向绝望进而造反，否认你有罪。反过来，坚持这是对方不妥协造成的；或者如果你掌控了对相邻民族的控制权，就说人性应当对此负责，因为如果他不先于其他人付诸暴力，他或许会确信这些人将先行动并压制他。

3.离间和统治。如果在选择你作为其统治者的人群中有一些特权者，确保离间他们，并且让他们与人民产生对立。如果你用虚假的承诺给他们以更大的自由，一切将依靠你的绝对意愿。如果你为了同外国打交道，在它们中间制造纷争是一个接一个征服它们行之有效的方法，而这表面看起来是为弱者提供帮助。

必须承认，没有人会被这些政治准则所蒙蔽，因为它们人所共知。人们不会为这些准则而感到羞耻，仿佛它们的不公平都太过显而易见。因为执掌大权者从不为公众如何评价他们而感到尴尬，只会在意对彼此的评价。关于上面列举的那些原则，即使它们为公众所知，掌权者也不会感到羞耻。只有当他们失败时才会感到羞耻，因为他们都认同这些准则的道德地位。他们拥有政治荣誉。如果他们采用想要采用的办法扩充权力，[16]他们总能依靠这些准则。人们如何在国家好战的本性中创造和平，从所有这些不道德、机会主义的信条的迂回曲折中，至少这些是清楚的：人们很少能像在私人领域那样在公共领域逃避权利的概念，他们也不敢公开地将政治仅仅依托在机会主义的机理中，从而全然拒绝遵守公权利的概念（这一点在国际权利中特别显著）。相反，他们给这些概念所有的荣耀，尽管他们或许也找出一百条理由和诡计在实践中逃避它们，并假装承认唯有残酷的暴力和诡计能够获得政权，而政权是所有权利的来源，也是凝聚权力的纽带。

为了结束这种诡辩术（它掩盖了事实上的不公平），也为了让那些制造假象却又发号施令的人承认，是他们在宣传权势而不是权利（他们用的是发号施令者的口气），发现永久和平产生的最终原则是好的，由此能使人们对自我或者是对别人看法的幻影破灭。应当表明，所有挡在永久和平之路上的魔鬼源自这样的事实，即政治道德家的出发点正是道德政治家的中止点。他（政治道德家）因此视目的第一，原则第二（即原则服从于目的，例如，如同把马车放在马之前），因此，挫败了他自己想使政治和道德协调一致的目的。

为确保实践哲学自身的一致性，首先有必要解决一个问题，即在实践理性的问题上，我们是否应当从它的实体原则出发，也就是，作为一个意志对象的目的，或者还是应当从它的形式原则，即人们在外部关系上的自由出发。后一种原则表述为“用这样的方式行动，就是你能够希望你的信条成为一个宇宙法则（不管最终的结果是什么）”。

后一项原则必须毫无疑问地占据领先地位。作为权利的一项原则，它有绝对的必要性。只有当允许目的实现的经验主义的条件假定存在时，前者是有必要的。如果这个目的也同永久和平的目标一样是一项义务的话，那它自身应当从引导外在行为的准则之形式上的原则中产生。现在前者（也就是，实体的）的原则是政治道德家的原则，它把政治的、国际的、世界公民的权利问题仅仅当作技术任务处理。但是后者的（也就是，形式的）原则却是讲道德的政治家的原则，是一个道德任务。道德任务与技术问题在带来永久和平方面完全不同。永久和平值得拥有，不仅因为它有现实的好处，还因为它是出于人的责任意识而必须发生的事态。

对于第一个（政治权宜之计的问题）问题的解答，需要更多自然的知识，以便人们运用其运行机制实现想要达到的目的。然而，以其对永久和平的影响而言，无论涉及公权利三部分中的哪一部分，所有这些并

不确定。在长时间内很好地维持人民的顺从和成功是靠严格的纪律约束，还是靠满足他们的虚荣心；是给每一个体或者是几位领袖以最大权力，还是通过设立贵族办公室或者是受人欢迎的内部政府，历史提供了各种各样效果相反的例子。共和制是唯一的例外，它只能是一位讲道德的政治家的目标。基于大臣们草拟的法律的一项国际权利的情形就更具有不确定性，因为这项权利实际上仅仅是空洞的文字，因为它是依靠含有秘密保留条款的条约，而这些秘密条款是可以被违背的。另一方面，第二个问题，即政治智慧的问题，仿佛自动地解决了一样。显而易见，它战胜了所有的诡计，直达目标，只要我们牢记，它不可能通过暴力的、鲁莽的方式实现，必须在有利机会到来之时稳步地实现。

我们或许因此可以提出如下的建议：首先寻求纯粹实践理性的王国及其正当性，你的目标（永久和平的保佑）将会添加给你们。对道德而言，关于它的公权利的原则（因此涉及一个可推断的政治准则）有一个特别的特点，即越少将行为绑定想要达到的目的（不管是物质的还是道德的优势），它就越多地与目标相协调一致。其中的缘由正是公众的愿望，在一个人群或者由各色人等组成的共同关系中，决定人群中什么是对的。但是，这个所有人意愿的组合，倘若用一种持续的方式付诸实践，它也能成为导致目的结果的动因，并对权利概念产生影响。例如，一个民族应当以自由、平等作为权利的唯一核心，这是道德政治的一个原则。这个原则不是基于权宜之计而是出于义务。另一方面，政治的道德家们不值得聆听，不管他们如何争论进入社会的一群人的自然技巧或者声称这一技巧会使上面的原则无效，从而阻碍其实施，或者试图用古代和现代的糟糕体制证明他们的观点（例如，没有代表制度的民主政体）。这样的理论特别具有破坏性，因为他们可能自身制造出他们所预测的那个魔鬼。由于把人类与其他有生命的机体归为一类，他们仅仅需要清醒地认识到，他们不是自由生物，就能成为他们眼中所有地球生物中最可怜的那一类。

“即使世界上所有的流氓都必须死亡也要让正义当政”的名言听上去有些夸张，但它是真实的。这是一项明智的权利原则，它堵塞了狡诈或者暴力的邪恶之路。但是，不能把这误解为，例如，这是一种允许人们以最严苛的态度运用自己权利（这与伦理义务相冲突）的许诺，而应当把它看作是当权者不能拒绝的职责，或者是出于对他人的怜悯或厌恶而剥夺的权利。这就要求国家应当有一部依据权利原则制定的宪法。它统一其他邻国甚至是更遥远的国度，就其分歧达成一个合法的解决方案，从而形成类似一个统一的世界性国家的实体。这一主张只是意味着无论结果如何，政治信条不能被因信奉这些信条而逐渐增长的利益或幸福的前景所影响，例如，每个国家把政治智慧看作最高经验原则。它们应当仅仅被正确职责的纯粹概念所影响，例如，被一种基于纯粹的理性演绎原则而产生的职责所影响。如果这世界上鲜有坏人，世界的末日也不会到来。道德上的魔鬼天生就有自我毁灭和自相矛盾的遗传特性（特别是在有类似头脑的人们的关系中），因此善的道德准则有出路，尽管这种进步是缓慢的。

因此，从客观或者是理论的角度而言，道德与政治之间没有冲突。从主观的角度说（也就是，关于自私的性情，由于其不是建立在理性的格言的基础上，因此它不能被称作实践），这个冲突将会也应当保持活跃，因为它扮演着美德磨刀石的角色。依据“你不能对麻烦投降，要更加大胆地挑战它”的原则，美德的真正勇气在于必须面对我们自身的邪恶并战胜它的诡计，而不在于坚定地对抗魔鬼并且作出牺牲。这个原则太过危险、太过背信弃义，因为它易于利用人性的弱点为侵犯正义的行为作辩解。

政治的道德家或许确实可以说，统治者和人民之间，或者一个民族和另一个民族之间，即使因为暴力或者狡诈陷入冲突状态也不会彼此不公平地对待，尽管他们完全不公平地拒绝尊重权利的概念，而权利概念是唯一能够建立永久和平的。如果一方侵犯了另一方的利益，而这另一

方恰好在无法无天地针对他，那么确实发生在他们身上、使双方耗尽力量的事就是完全公正的。他们的民族将得以生存并继续不间断地延续这一过程，一直到最遥远的未来，于是，后代人可以把他们当作警示的榜样，以此为戒。这样安排世界事务的天意成为理所当然。人类的道德准则从来就不会泯灭。依据这个原则运用权利想法的理性，随着文化的不断进步而不断增强，与此同时，侵权的负罪感随之增加。如果我们假设人类永远不能或不愿达到更好的状态，地球创造出如此一个道德败坏的种类这样一个事实，是任何神义论都无法解释的。但是，这样一种判断对我们来说还是太得意了。我们理论上不能把智慧的构想归于我们无法理解其特性的最高权力。

如果我们不假设权利的纯粹原则具有客观现实性，也就是，这些原则不能够应用于实践，我们会不自觉地得出这样的结论。不管经验主义政治会如何唱反调，一国的人民，连同相关的国家必须相应地照此行事。因此，一个真正的政治体制如果不首先对道德表示敬意就会寸步难行。政治本身是一门颇具难度的艺术，因为没有其他艺术要求与道德结合。一旦道德与政治产生冲突，道德就会解开政治无法解开的结。

人的权利必须被看作是神圣的，不管统治者可能会作出怎样巨大的牺牲。这里没有折衷的办法。开发混合的办法，诸如介于权利和实用之间、附条件的权利，毫无用处。所有政治家在权利面前必须屈膝跪倒，尽管政治或许希望到达一个持久辉煌的阶段作为回报，无论这一过程多么缓慢。

第二部分　依据公权利的先验概念论政治与道德的一致性

如果从法理学家通常定义的公权利考虑，我从其物质方面摘录要点（如同一个国家内人们之间各种各样的经验关系或者是国家间彼此的关系），我得到的是公共性的正式属性。由于每次要求权利都潜在地拥有这种属性，没有这种属性就不会有正义（这种正义会被设想为是众所周

知的），也不会有权利，因为权利只会来自正义。

权利的每次诉求都必须具有这一公共品质。由于能够轻易评判权利诉求是否以某种特殊的情况呈现，也就是，是否能与相关行为人的原则相结合，它提供给我们一个现成、可见的现象，能够在理性中发现推论。如果它不能与行为人的原则协调一致，我们立刻看出这一诉求的错误（也就是，不正当性），像是纯粹理性的一个实验。

我们在政治和国际权利的概念中提取了所有经验主义的成分之后（包括人性中导致高压政治的罪恶一面），我们可以列举如下公权利的"先验规则"的主张：影响他人权利的所有行为都是错误的，假如其准则不能与公开的准则相一致。

这一原则不仅仅应当被看作是伦理上的（也就是，属于美德理论），而且应当被看作是法理上的（也就是，影响到人权）。一个我没有挫败感就不能公开宣布的准则，一个要成功就要不惜一切代价保密的准则，一个我一旦公开宣布就会不可避免地引起抵触的准则，只会引发这种必然、普遍的对我的反对，因为它本身是非正义的，因此对每个人都构成威胁。除此之外，这纯粹是一个消极的测试，例如，它只是测试什么是不正确的一种手段。如同任何功利一样，它不证自明，此外，它也非常容易运用，这一点在下面关于公权利的例子中可以看到。

1.在一个国家的内部权利中，或许有一个许多人认为难以回答的问题，尽管运用公开性的先验原理能轻而易举地解决这个问题。表述如下："一个民族用反叛来推翻所谓暴君的强权统治是不是一个正确的方法？"人民的权利被侵犯了，毫无疑问，如果暴君被罢黜的话，他就没有受到不公正的待遇。然而，如果臣民用这种方式寻求他们的权利，那就是大错特错了。如果他们在后来的冲突中被击败，继而不得不忍受最残酷的惩罚，那么他们就不能有一丝一毫对于不公正的抱怨。

如果我们试图用权利原则的教条推论解决这个问题，对于这种做法赞成和反对意见的争论能有很多种说法。但是权利问题公开性的先验原则能够绕开这种冗长的讨论。依据这一原则，在缔结公民契约之前，人们会问是否胆敢在特定场合下将反叛的意图公之于众。显而易见，如果针对一国的首脑最终使用暴力，这成为建立一个政治实体的条件的话，人民应当宣布有权统治其统治者。但是，如果是这样的话，统治者就不会是统治者了；或者作为建立国家的先决条件，双方都被授予权力，那么，国家自身的存在就成为不可能，这也是人民的愿望。如果反叛依据的准则众所周知，它会战胜自身的目的，不会成功。这一准则因此不得不保密。从这个事实看，反叛的非正义性因此显现。

但是，对于一国之主而言隐藏其意图是没有必要的。他或许会公开说将惩罚任何反叛行为，把元凶处死，尽管人们相信这一国之主自己才是第一个违反基本法的人。如果他意识到自己掌控着不可抗拒的最高权力（任何市民宪法都必须以此为前提，因为一名统治者如果没有足够的权力，无法保护他的每一个子民，令他们不受伤害，那么这位统治者也无权对人民发号施令），他不必担心如果其准则人人皆知，自己就无法达到目的。如果人民反叛成功，一国之主便成为臣民；但是如果他开始一轮新的反叛以夺回王位，那其行为是不正当的，他也不必害怕承担其在位时应承担的责任。

2.我们现在谈谈国际权利。我们只有在假设一些法律条件存在的基础上谈及国际权利，例如，赋予一个人某项权利是因为外部环境许可。作为公权利的一种形式，就定义而言，它预示着一种普遍的愿望，这种愿望公开地分给每一个个体，这是他应有的权利。这个法理状态一定来自某种契约，与一个国家如何起源不同，一个必须不能依据强制性的法律，但是在很大程度上呈现一种永久的、自由的联合状态，如同上面所提及不同国家的联盟。如果没有某种法定条件，积极地将各种各样物理上或者道德上的人联系在一起，权利唯一可能的形式是私密的。这里又

一次牵扯到了政治与道德的冲突（后者以权利理论的形式出现）。在相关准则中，公开性的标准又一次得以轻松适用，条件是合约的单一目的是在缔约国之间及其有关他国之间维护和平，决不考虑军事占领。我们因此面对政治和道德的自相矛盾，以及与其相应的解决办法。

（a）如果这些国家中的一个国家向另一个国家承诺了什么，不管是提供协助、割让部分国土、提供救助或者是其他类似行为，当其自身利益处于危险之中时，是否可以不承担信守承诺的责任？它应当被看作是双面人：一方面，作为一国之君主，他不对国土内任何人负责；另一方面，仅仅作为最高政治官员，他又对国家负责。这样得出的结论是国家（或者是其统治者）可以免于承担责任。但是，如果一个国家的统治者想要让人知道这是他的行为准则，其他人会自然远离他，或者是团结其他国家以对抗他的主张。这证明，这样的政治体系，尽管极其狡诈，如果在公开的基础上运作会打败其自身的目的，因此上述的准则一定是错误的。

（b）如果一个邻国成长到一定规模而引起其他国家的不安，人们能假定说，因为它能够压迫其他国家了，所以它就会希望压迫其他国家吗？尽管还没有冒犯的行为发生，这是否给予了弱势一方积蓄准备进攻它的力量的权利？如果一个国家公诸天下，称其遵循这一准则，它一定只会更快地招致魔鬼的到来。因为强权者能够先于弱者行动，弱者或许可以联合，而这种联合，对于知道如何运用分而治之策略的国家而言，只是不堪一击的苇草。因此，这种政治利己的准则，倘若公之于众，就不会实现自己的目的，这就证明这个准则是不正义的。

（c）如果一个小国，就其地理位置而言，地处一个大国的领土之内，而这个大国需要这片领土为己所用，那么，这个大国吞并这个小国就是合理的吗？很容易看到，大国无论如何不能让人知道它遵循这样的准则。因为，一来那些小国会适时联合，二来其他大国会对此举争论不

休，使这个计划一经公开就不可实行。这是不正义的表现。事实上，这是非常严重的不正义，因为，对象的弱小并不意味着对它采取的不正义行为就不严重。

3.至于世界公民的权利问题，我这里就悄悄略过了，因为与国际权利的准则相比，它的准则容易形成，也容易评定。国际权利的准则或许与公共性不匹配，我们因此能够得出一个好的判断：（就权利的理论而言）政治和道德并不一致。我们也应当有必要知道与国际权利相一致的准则是什么。我们不能简单地得出结论说所有公开的准则就是正义的，因为有决定权的人没有必要隐藏其准则。任何国际权利实现的前提是一个法制国家的存在，因为没有国家的存在就没有公权利。在国家之外存在的权利，例如，处于原始状态的权利，则仅仅是私权利。现在我们从以上论述已经看到，为减少战争而建立的国家联盟是唯一合法的安排，是能够与自由相一致的。政治与道德只有在一个联盟中才能相一致，因此，建立一个联盟是有必要的，并且应当给予优先地位，这点已经由权利原则说明了。所有政治精明的正确的基础就是以尽可能全面的形式建立这样一个联盟。因为没有这个目标，所有的推论都是不智慧且蒙着面纱的所谓的正义。这种虚伪的政治有其诡辩术，堪与虚伪狡诈的学者们相媲美。它包括思想上的保留，因此公共契约的形成是这样的：人们可以根据自己的需要诠释这些契约（例如，在事实的现状和权利的现状之间作出区别）。这也包括盖然论，也就是，它试图把罪恶的企图栽赃给他国，或者是用他国获得统治地位的可能性作为破坏其他和平国家的合法理由。最后，它还有哲学之罪的原则，即如果一个大得多的国家在这个过程中获得了所谓的世界普遍利益的话，那么，霸占一个小国就可以被看作是一件可以原谅的小事。[17]

所有这些都与政治的复杂性及其与道德的关系相关，政治总是利用道德的分支以期达到目的。但是博爱和尊重人权这两个方面是义务。博爱仅仅是一个有条件的义务，而尊重人权则是无条件、绝对势在必行

的。任何一个人，如果他希望体验正义行为的甜蜜感觉，就必须首先完全确信他没有侵犯人权。政治能轻易地向道德妥协，因为两者都要求人们放弃他们的权利而屈从统治者。但是当轮到讲道德时（也就是，权利理论），道德要求政治应当积极地顺从它，而政治发现不被任何合约所限制更可取，从而倾向于不承认权利理论有任何实际价值，并且将所有责任减化为仅仅是善意的行为。这种政治体系的神秘花招能够轻易地被打败，如果哲学将其准则公之于众，它会允许哲学家公开他们自己的准则吗？

我现在呈现另一个先验的、积极的公权利原则。它可以表述如下：“所有要求公开的准则，如果想要实现自己的目的，就既能够与政治也能够与权利协调一致。”

如果他们只能通过公开才能达到目的，那么他们必须遵循公众的目标，即幸福。政治的特殊任务是与公众的目标相和谐。但是，倘若这个目标的实现仅仅是通过公开（例如，分解对所采纳的准则的不信任）就能达到，那么遭到质疑的准则也必须同公权利谐调一致，因为只有在这个权利范围内才能满足每个人的需要。然而，我必须等待另一个场合对这一原则进行进一步解释和讨论。我们已经看到，如果一个人抽掉与幸福相联系的所有条件，例如，法律的实质，而单单看到普遍的有法律状态的形式，那么这是一个先验的公式。

如果在现实中实现公权利是一项义务（通过一个不确定的渐进过程），如果也有坚实的基础希望我们将会成功，那么，永久和平终将取代迄今为止被错误地称作和平条约的想法将不再只是空想。相反，随着解决的办法被逐渐找到，这个任务也在不断地向完成迈进，因为我们可以希望达到同样程度的进步所需要的时间会越来越短。

回答“人类是否在持续地改进”问题的新尝试

1　我们在寻求什么样的知识？

我们所寻求的是人类历史的一部分。然而，它不是一部过去的历史，而是一部未来的历史，即一部预见性的历史。但是，如果它不是可知的自然法则（如同可预知的自然法则，如日食和月食一样），只能通过超自然的发现才能获得。它必须是可占卜或先知的历史。 [18]除此之外，我们这里不考虑人类的自然史（我们应当问，是否有新的种族会在未来的时间里出现），而是人类的文明史。我们不是研究具体的人类的概念，而是整个的人类，以种族分布，以尘世的社团相聚。所有这些都表明，我们在问人类作为一个整体是否正不断地进步。

2　我们如何能获得这样的知识？

我们能够通过描述这些事件获得对于事物预示性、历史性的描述。这些事件的推论预示它们实际上会发生。但是怎么才能先验地有一个历史推论呢？答案是如果先知本身导致和制造了他所预示的事件，这是可能的。

犹太先知预测他们的国家迟早会面临衰退和完全的解体。他们是自身命运的建造者。作为人民的领袖，他们将如此繁重的负担载入宪法，以至于他们的国家就其自身权利而言变得不适合生存，特别是在与其邻国的关系中。因此，祭祀的哀歌自然没有人听，因为这些雷同的牧师固执地坚持他们自己在宪法中创造的信条，以便他们自己能够万无一失地、确定地预知结果。

我们的政治家的表现完全一样。随着他们影响力的扩大，他们在其

教区越来越成功。人们必须接受他们的现状。他们告诉我们，事实并不像世界上消息闭塞的学究或者是好性情的幻想家想象的那样。但是，他们应当被解读为我们用不公平的胁迫、用政府所擅长的奸诈的诡计使他们变成了现在的样子。他们不妥协并且倾向于造反，如果约束稍稍松弛一些的话，就会有令人遗憾的结果发生。这样，聪明的预言家的使命就完成了。

各种各样的占卜也不时地预示着宗教的完全衰退、反基督者的立刻出现，他们做着最精确地测算到的事情为的是创造自己所描述的事态。因为他们并不关心教区的道德准则，而道德准则是能够直接引发进步的。取而代之的是，他们把历史信仰作为中心任务，假设这些会间接地产生同样的结果。尽管他们或许引致机械的遵从，但是他们不能制造道德观念的一致。因此，这些牧师们开始抱怨他们自己制造的对宗教的漠视。这是他们不需要预言的特殊天赋就能够预料到的。

3　我们希望了解的未来概念的划分

我们的预言可能有三种形式：与其他的生物种类相联系，在其当前的道德水准上（即如同不停地围绕一个固定点旋转），人类或者是不断地倒退和衰退，或者是不断地进步和改进，或者处于一种永久的静止状态。

第一种情况可以定为道德恐怖主义。第二种情况是快乐说（如果人类进步的目标已经远观可见的话，这种情况可以定为千年至福说）。第三种情况可以被称作阿布德里主义。因为后一种情况，由于普遍的静止在道德事件中是不可能的，在无休止的流动中并不能产生更多的效果，如果其主体在一个地方保持静止不动的话。

a.人类历史的恐怖主义概念

人类退化的过程不可能无限期地继续，因为人类在达到一定的节点后会就会灭亡。结果是当滔天罪行不断地积累又积累，由此产生的恶持续增加时，我们说，“不能变得更糟了”。这时候，似乎审判的日子就到了。虔诚的狂热者已经梦想着一切的重生。当前一个世界被一把火烧掉之时，一个崭新的世界就此诞生。

b.人类历史的快乐概念

我们或许很容易同意这样的观点，善和恶的总量能够保持不变，在任何一个个体中也不会增加亦不会减少。一个人善的品质如何增加？这只能通过其自身的作用，在他能够这样做之前，他首先需要储存更多的善才行。毕竟，没有任何效应能超出其生效因素的制约。人的善必须因此保持在一定水平之下，与其相混合的恶的水平相协调，以便人类不能超越一个限度而做进一步的改进。因此，快乐说，怀揣着快乐的希望，看上去不堪一击。它的人类不断进步和改进的想法对于人类可预见的历史似乎没有什么用处。

c.人类阿布德里主义的假设作为未来历史的定义

这一观点可能有众多的拥护者。沿着“善”的道路快速前行却又不能坚持走下去，相反，他们会修订进步的计划，不惜一切代价避免被一个单一的目标所束缚（甚至仅仅出于渴望变化）。建设为的是破坏。担负起从山下滚石上山的任务，仅仅是为了让石头再滚下来。这就是我们种族的因勤奋导致的愚蠢行为。综上所述，人类自然特征中恶与善的融合是彼此中和的过程，结果是单调乏味的（或者是静止，如同下面要谈到的）。这种前进和后退的空洞运动，伴随着罪与善的不断交替，意味着我们地球上的成员们的互动应当仅仅被看作是一场闹剧。以理性的眼光看，这并不能带给人类更高的价值，其他动物种类的互动代价更小，并且是无意识的。

4　进步的问题不能直接由经验解决

尽管人们发现，人类作为一个整体在一个不确定的长时间内前进和进步，就我们种族的身体特点而言，没有人能够保证其衰退的时代在特殊时刻没有开始。与此相反，如果它加速地衰退，那么我们就没有理由放弃希望，希望我们正要达到一个转折点，凭借我们种族的道德特点，我们的事情将向好的方向转变。我们与自由行动的生物打交道，他们能够事先预测应该做什么，但是不能预测他们实际上将会做什么，谁有能力做，如果事情变坏了，他们因自身的行动蒙受了罪恶，他们认为这些罪恶是改进的强大动力。正如埃贝·阔亚所说："可怜的人类！你们中间没有什么是永恒的，只有反复无常。"

或许因为我们已经选择了错误的观点来思考人类事务的过程，后者对我们来说如此的荒唐。从地球上看，星球有时候向前运动，有时候向后运动，有时保持静止不动。但是从太阳上看，从理性的角度考虑，它们如同哥白尼猜想所说持续地沿着惯常的轨道运行。然而，有些并不缺乏智慧的思想家喜欢坚持自己对事物的解释，坚持他们最初的观点，甚至甘愿冒着将自身陷入地谷圆和周转圆的荒唐境地。然而，这是我们的不幸，我们在试图预测自由运动时不能采取一种极端的观点。在所有人类智慧之上是上帝的旨意，其效力甚至扩展到使人类的行动获得自由。尽管人们或许能看到后者，却不能准确地预测未来（在神的眼中这一差别不存在），因为在其预测任何事情之前，在需要获得被自然法则掌控的一个关联时，在处理未来的自由行动时，必须在没有暗示和指导的情况下进行。

如果有可能给人类有限的、天生的、不变的善，我们当然能够预测人类的普遍进步，因为这包含着人类自己能控制的事。但是，如果人类的自然属性中就有不明比例的善与恶，便没有人能够知道自身的行动会带来什么后果。

5　人类的预言史必须始于某种经验

在人类事务中，必然存在着一些经验或者其他的东西。一个实际发生的事件或许显示人类具有自我改善的素质和力量（因为其行动应当有自由）。但是，只有当帮助这一事件产生的情形出现时，这一事件才能被预测为一个现存原因的结果。总的来说，这些情形一定在某一时间会出现（如同计算游戏机会的可能性），这是可以预料的，但是不可能确定此事是否在我的人生中出现，我是否会经历此事，因此就不能够证实原始的判断。

我们因此必须寻找一个事件，它能显示这样一个原因的存在。这个原因在人类中漫不经心地活跃着，也不管何时会发生作用。它或许会使我们得出这样的结论：作为其活动的一个不可避免的结果，人类正在作出改进。这个推论能扩展到以前的历史，以便展示人类一直是在进步；用这种方式，被选作一个事例的这一事件本身不会被看作是过去进步的原因，只会被看作是历史的印记。它或许用来证实人类这一整体存在的趋势，不是一系列的个体（因为这样会导致没完没了的列举和计算），而是散布在地球上的国家和种族群体。

6　发生在我们时代的能证实人类道德倾向的事件

讨论的事件不包括任何这些人类的重大行为或过错。这些行为或过错以前很大，在他们的眼中微不足道；甚或是以前很小但在他们的眼中变得很重大。这些事件导致古老的、显赫一时的国家像中了魔咒一般消失了，而其他的国家则从地球深处崛起取代了它们的地位。不，与这些毫无关系。我们这里考虑的仅仅是在重大政治事件发生时旁观者在公众场合的态度。因为他们公开地对事件参与者的一方表示无私的同情，甚至冒着他们的偏心会给自身带来很大不利的风险。他们的反应表明人类作为一个整体分享着一些共同特征，它同时表明，（因为它的无私性）人类拥有其道德特征，或者至少是在制造道德特征。这不仅仅允许我们

期盼人类的进步，其本身就是一种进步，其影响力对当前也是很大的。

我们看到的发生在我们这个时代的由智慧的人民所组成的民族正发起的革命，它可能成功，也可能失败。革命可能充满了悲惨和残暴以至于一个思维正常的人不敢付出如此代价作同样的尝试，即使他期望作第二次的尝试时会获得成功。

但是我认为，这种革命在所有没有赶上它的观众心中燃起渴望，引起没有参加者的同情，尽管表达这种同情的口号充满着危险。因此，除了人类的道德性情之外，不可能有其他什么能够引起这种同情心了。

这里起作用的道德原因由两个因素构成。其一，每个人都有权给自己建立一个自己认为合适的公民体制，不受其他力量的影响。其二，人们能够拥有的、唯一本质上正确的、道德上良好的体制的出现是为了避免侵略战争（例如，惟一可能的宪法是共和制宪法，至少就其概念而言）。 [19]服从于这些条款并由此杜绝战争这一造成灾难和道德腐化的源头，就不仅是一个目标，而且也是一项义务了。倘若这一目的得到承认，人类，由于其脆弱性，就有了一个被动的保障。它将逐渐地改进，或者至少它不会在进步的过程中受到干扰。

所有这些，连同人们拥抱美德的激情与热情，（尽管不能为激情鼓掌，因为所有如此的激情是该受到指责的），给下面的主张以历史性的支持。这一主张具有人类学的意义。真正的热情总是单纯指向理想，特别是指向纯道德（例如，权利的概念），它不会掺杂着自私的利益。金钱上的奖赏不能激励革命志士的激情和灵魂的强大，而权利的概念本身就可以激励他们，甚至旧的军事贵族的荣誉概念在革命军面前也不值一提。他们 [20]属于人民，将全部热情倾注在人民的权利上，并自视为人民的保护者。因此，身处局外的旁观者对他们的兴奋报以同情，但没有丝毫的意图积极参与他们的事务。

7　人类的预言史

在这些原则中，一定存在着某种道德的东西，理性认为它不仅纯粹而且（因为其伟大而划时代的影响）人类的灵魂将之视为一种责任。再有，它视人类为一个完完全全的人的联盟（不是个体，而是人类作为一个整体），因为他们为普遍、无私的同情必将获得成功而欢欣鼓舞，并不遗余力地促使其成功。

然而，正谈及的这个事不是革命的现象，而是（正如埃尔哈特所说）被自然权利所规定的宪法的演变。这样的一部宪法不能通过激烈的斗争获得，因为内外战争将会毁灭迄今为止一切的法定秩序；但是，它会引领我们为了一个不好战的宪法而奋斗，例如，一个共和宪法。人们所渴望的国家的实际形式可能是共和制，或者它可能只是在治理模式上是共和制的。而国家可能被一个单一的统治者（君主）依法统治，依据一个民族根据普遍的权利原则制定的法律执政。

即使没有预言家的头脑，我现在也坚持认为自己能够通过我们这个时代的方方面面和种种迹象预测人类将会达到这个目的，它将一步步地进步而不会退步。发生在人类历史上的这种现象是不会被忘记的，因为它显示了人性中一种改进的天赋和力量。这种改进是没有哪一个政治家能够通过研究过去的事件想出来的。只有天性和自由，结合权利的原则才能够使我们预测这些。但是事件发生的确切时间必须是不确定的，要看机会。

但是，即使我们所描述事件的预想目的不能在目前情况下实现，或者一个民族的革命或宪法性改革最终失败了，或者如果宪法性改革持续了一段时间，一切将回复其原来的状态（正如政治家现在所预言的那样），我们自身的哲学预言将不会失去其力量。因为发生的事件太重大了，与人类的利益又紧密相连，其广泛影响遍及世界的各个国家，当适宜条件允许的情况下，各个民族都会尝试做同样的事情。由于它是人类

一个如此重大的关切，所设想的宪法必定在某个时刻最终达到稳定的程度，不断重复的经验将会植入每个人的心田。

因此，人类总是在进步并将继续以同样方式发展这一命题，这不仅仅是一个为了实际目的而推出的美好说法。无论不信服者说些什么，它都能在最严格的理论论证中站得住脚。如果一个人不仅考虑可能发生在一个特定国家的事件，而且考虑该事件给地球上可能逐渐参与其中的所有民族带来的影响，那么，一幅远景图就向着无边的未来展开了。当然，这不会是真的。如果自然改变的第一个时代在人类出现之前（根据卡姆帕与布鲁门巴赫所说的）淹没了动物和植物王国的话，那么，随之而来的第二个时代给予人类同样的待遇，以便其他生物可能占领这个舞台，诸如此类。对于全能的自然或者不如说与其难以理解的最高原因相比，人是微不足道的。但是，如果人类的统治者视人为微不足道，并且这样对待他，要么像对待牲畜一样对待他，或者是将其用作达到自己目的的工具，或者是为他设下圈套让他在争斗中厮杀，残害他的同胞，这就不仅仅是一件小事，而是对创造天地的终极目的背叛。

8　针对世界不断进步的准则公开性方面的困难

普遍的启蒙是对于公众就其所属国家的权利和义务的公开指导。由于这只涉及自然权利，以及能够从公众意识中产生的权利，权利的倡导者和诠释者不是国家指定的官员，而是权利教师，也就是，哲学家。后者（权利教师），鉴于他们给予自己的充分自由，是国家的绊脚石，它唯一的愿望是统治；他们因此被授予了启蒙者的称号，被看作是对国家的威胁。然而，他们并不用熟稔的口吻对人民（人民对他们及其作品并不太注意），但是用尊敬的口吻对国家，请求国家把人民的合理需求放在心上。如果一个民族希望诉说自己的疾苦，这样做的唯一办法就是公开性。因此，在关于自然权利的诉求问题上，哪怕仅仅涉及它最低限度的要求，禁止公开将阻碍一个民族的进步。

被某个民族的合法措施所隐瞒的另一件事（这是足够明显的）是宪法的真正属性。对大不列颠的人民说他们生活在绝对君主制下是对其尊严的一种冒犯。据说，其宪法通过两院限制君王的意愿。两院代表的是人民的利益。然而，每个人都清楚地知道君王对这些代表的影响如此之大、如此之万无一失，以至于前面提到的两院根本不作决定，除了殿下所希望和通过大臣们推荐的决定除外。后者不时地推出决定，知道并且确实确认其决定涉及矛盾问题（例如奴隶买卖的废除），仅仅为了证明议会的虚假自由。但是，这种方法暗藏着不鼓励人民寻求真正的、正确的宪法的效果，因为他们以为已经从发生在面前的事例中发现了宪法。因此，一个虚假形式的公开性用君主制受到法律限制[21]的假象欺骗人们，与此同时那些用贿赂赢得的代表秘密地将他们置于一个君主的统治之下。

所有形式的国家都是基于宪法思想建立的。宪法的思想与人的自然权利相一致，因此，那些遵守法律的人也应当与立法者步调一致。如果我们从纯粹理性的角度思考共同体，它可能被称作是不切合实际的理想。这个不切合实际的理想是想象的、空洞的、虚构的事物，是所有市民宪法的外在现象，是停止所有战争的一种手段。建立在此种思想之上并用自由的法律治理的公民社会是实践的一个范例。它只会通过一个费力的过程，并且经过无数次的战争和冲突才会实现。宪法，一旦作为一个整体获得通过，是最有权威阻止战争的，也是所有美好事物的摧毁者。因此，缔造这样一部宪法是我们的责任。与此同时，创立宪法将是一个相当长的过程。君王有责任采取共和的方式治理国家，尽管他们或许会采取独裁统治。换句话说，他们应当依据自由法律的精神对待人民，一个成熟理智的民族会给自己开这样的处方，尽管这些法律在表面上并未征得人民的同意。

9　人类从不断的改进中得到什么益处？

随着人类的前行，其积蓄的好处利益并不是不断增长的道德能量。其态度的合法性将产生不断增长的基于责任的行动，不管这些行动背后的动机是什么。换言之，益处将源自人们更多、更成功的善行，也就是，源自人们道德品质的外在现象。因为我们只有依赖经验数据（我们的经验），而我们的推测依据的是经验数据。也就是说，我们推测的依据是行动的物质上的起因，而不是包含什么应该发生的责任概念的道德动机。道德动机能够由纯粹的推断性思维的过程所决定。

当权者会越来越少地使用暴力，而越来越多地遵从法律。毫无疑问，一个共同体内部在司法行动中会有更多的仁慈，更少的争吵，更多的对信守承诺的信任等等，部分原因是对荣誉的热爱，部分原因是对一个人长处的深刻认识。这最终会延伸到不同人之间的外部关系上，直至一个世界公民社会的建立。然而，这样的进步并不意味着人类道德能力有丝毫的增加，因为这会要求一种新的创造或者超自然的影响。我们不应该对人类不断改进的过程期望太高。我们应当鄙视那些把人民希望进步的愿望看成是头脑过热的政治家。[22]

10　对于进步遵从的顺序，我们期待的是什么？

答案是：不是通常的从下而上，而是从上而下的顺序。

期待在知识和道德文化中教育年轻人，并佐之以宗教教义，先通过家庭指导，然后是由低级到高级的一系列的学校教育，最终不仅把他们变成了合格公民，而且使他们成长为能够不断持续行善的人，这样的计划极少能获得期望的成功。一方面，人们相信教育孩子的费用不应当由他们出，而应当由国家担负。另一方面，国家（正如比兴哀叹的）又没有钱支付给合格的老师，使他们满怀激情地履行职责，因为国家需要把全部的钱用于战争。除此之外，上面所述教育的整个体制将会崩溃，除非它是依据深思熟虑的计划和国家最高权力的意图所设计的，然后不断维持统一的行动。这就意味着国家也要不时改革自己，寻求改革而不是

革命，这样才能不断地进步。但是那些掌管教育者也是人，他们自己也应接受过良好的教育。从人性的脆弱和能够强化其效果的角度看，我们能够期望人类对于进步的希望只有在一个更高智慧的积极条件下才能够实现（我们是看不见的，这叫天佑）。在人类能够完成的一切事务的范围内，或者说可以期待的任何事情，只能通过他们被动的智慧达到目的。在后一种情况下，他们发现他们被迫确保战争的发生，这是道德的最大障碍，进步的始终不变的敌人，首先渐渐变得更加慈善，然后更加不频繁，最后作为侵略的模式而完全消失。他们将进入基于权利基本原则的宪法时代，其特征即为不需要伪装其力量而又有能力不断进步和改进。

结论

一个医生天天都安慰病人，希望他们尽快康复，告诉这个病人他的脉搏好多了，那个病人他的粪便或者是分泌物有了很大改善，等等。这个医生的一个朋友有一天来访，医生的第一个问题是：“你怎么样？我的朋友！你的病怎么样了？”他的朋友回答：“你觉着呢，单单是康复就整得我半死了！”

如果政治上的灾难使得他开始对人类的福利和进步失望，我不会指责他。但是，我对休谟提到的药物抱有信心，因为它应当能够加速病人的痊愈。他说：“当我现在看到卷入战争的各个民族时，就仿佛目睹了两个醉汉在一家瓷器店相互攻击。因为不仅仅是他们彼此造成的伤害需要很长时间康复，他们还必须赔偿造成的所有损失（弗里吉亚人学习智慧太晚了）。”但是当前战争的痛楚将迫使政治预言家们承认，人类必须很快转向更好的方向，而这个转机已经在眼前。

关于人类历史开端的猜想

为了填补历史纪录的空白，在历史纪录叙述的过程中，在各种各样的切入点引入猜想当然是允许的。因为这些空白之前和之后有什么，也就是，较为遥远的原因和相对的后果，能够使我们有合理的自信发现其过程中的原因，因此，进行可以使人理解的干涉。但是，仅仅依靠猜想完成一个历史性的描述比为一部小说草拟出一个计划也强不了多少。的确，这样一种历史记述不能被看作是猜想的历史，仅仅只能被看作是虚构的作品。然而，在涉及那段历史的起点时，自以为是地介绍人类行动的历史也是允许的，因为如果开始是一个自然的产品，它或许可以用猜想的方法获得发现。换言之，这可以不通过创造，而可以从经验中推断，假设历史之初所经历的与现在所经历的相差无几，也谈不上什么不妥。人性中关于自由的最初的发展历史与其后来的发展历史确有不同，因此，必须只依据历史纪录。

然而，猜想不应当提出不恰当的要求，要求我们对其表示赞同。正相反，他们不应当将猜想看作严肃的活动示人，而应当仅仅作为一种练习。这种以理性作支撑的想象或许是一种健康的脑力活动。结果是，这些猜想不能与那些历史描述相提并论。历史描述是对同一事件的记录，这些经过事物检验的记录与出自自然哲学的东西大相径庭。由于这个原因，又由于我要踏上的旅程仅仅是一场愉快之旅，我或许会希望获得一个神圣的文件作为我的地图，同时预测这个插上了想象翅膀的旅程。尽管没有理智的经验的指引，我也将准确地遵循与神圣的历史记录相同的轨迹。读者将把这个文件放在面前，可能会每一步都参照它，看看哲学家在概念的帮助下遵循的路径是否与《圣经》故事所描述的一致。

如果我们不沉湎于漫无边际的猜想，我们必须从人类理智难以推断

出的自然原因入手，即人类的存在入手。这些人类也必须完完全全是成熟的，因为他们没有母亲的养育。他们必须是一对夫妻，这样他们才能够繁衍后代。除此之外，必须是只有一对夫妻，以免这些人是陌生人但彼此接近时发生战争，以免大自然被指责已经遭遇失败，因为它允许来自祖先的后代采取最适当的方法促进社会性，这是人类使命的最终目的。毫无疑问，出自同一个家庭的所有人类的共同后代才是达到这一目的的最好办法。然后，我把这对夫妻放在一个免受野生动物袭击，而大自然提供了一切生存的条件的地方，比如，一个气候温和的花园中。还有，我想象他们并没有处在最原始的状态，而是处在有技巧地使用其自身力量的相当的进化阶段。如果我试图填补这个有相当长时间的鸿沟的话，读者或许会发现太多的推测、太少的可能性。第一人类可以站立和行走。他可以说话， [23]的确能说话，也就是，在有条理的概念的帮助下说话，最终思考。这些都是他必须为自己着想要获得的技能（如果技能是特有的，也是能继承的，这与经验不一样）。我假设他已经拥有了这些技能，因为我希望仅仅从道德的角度考虑人类行为的发展。这有必要假设他们已经拥有了这些技能。

最初，新来者必须完全依靠本能的指引，即所有动物都听从上帝的命令：允许其享用某些东西，如食物，但是同时禁止他使用其他的东西（《创世纪》，III，2-3）。然而，这也没有必要假定某种特别的本能已经失去。它可能只是嗅觉和味觉器官，还有存在于后者和消化器官之间的某种通感。换句话说，是一种时至今日仍明显存在的能力，即事先能够意识到一种食物是否适合食用的能力。我们甚至不用假定这种感知在第一对夫妻身上比现在的人更敏锐，因为众所周知，只运用感知的人的感知能力与那些还进行思考的人差别巨大，后者对自身的感知较少注意。

只要缺乏经验的人遵循自然的召唤，他就是幸福的。但是，理性很快会让人感到它的存在，并且寻求超越本能的界限扩大食物的知识。它

通过比较平时饮食和不同于本能的、在属性上却相似的官能，例如视觉感受（《创世纪》，III，6），做到了这一点。即使本能没有建议做这些，这个实验也有成功的可能，只要本能没有与之背道而驰。但是，正是理性的特性使得理性在想象力的帮助下能够产生欲望，这欲望不仅缺乏相应的自然的推动力，而且与后者不一致。这种欲望，被认为是淫荡，渐渐地造成一整套多余的、甚至是不自然的淫荡倾向。最初想摒弃这种自然冲动的倾向或许很微弱。但是第一次实验的结果是具有重大意义的，人类开始意识到其理性的存在，这种天赋可以超越所有动物所受的限制。这对人类的生活方式起着决定性的作用。这或许只是一种果子，因为它与他之前品尝到的那些果子看上去相似，这鼓励着他去尝试。或许还有一个动物的例子，尽管某种食物对人类有相反或是有害的影响，这种食物对这种动物有着天然的对抗。然而，这给了理性最初的诱导，让它与自然的命令相对抗（《创世纪》，III，1），尽管这遭到自然的反对，但是自由地选择做尝试，又因为尝试是第一次，或许并不能获得期望的结果。不管伤害多么微小，它已足够让人们的眼界大开（《创世纪》，III，7）。他发现了自身选择生活道路的一种能力，不必像其他动物一样被某种生存方式所束缚。但是，实现这种优势的短暂快感瞬间被他应当如何运用新发现的能力所引起的焦虑和恐惧所替代，因为他不知道这隐藏的财富或者其长远的影响是什么。跟以前一样，他站在了一个悬崖的边缘。本能指引他得到所渴望得到的每个物体，现在众多的物体展现在面前，他还不知道如何在它们中间作出选择。现在既然他已经尝到了自由的滋味，再让他回到本能支配的状态已经不可能了。

大自然给予每个个体的本能除了对食物的本能以外还有性的本能。大自然通过性的本能确保每种生物的生存。一旦理性觉醒，它在这一领域的影响也会被感受到。男人们很快发现性的驱动力对动物来说仅仅是阶段性的，而对他们来说不仅可以延长，甚至可以由于想象力的作用而变得更为兴奋。尽管想象力的对象离感觉越远，它发挥的作用就越小，

但是它更加频繁地起作用，从而避免纯粹的动物欲望得到满足之后所产生的厌倦感。无花果树叶与其说是发展的第一个阶段的佐证，不如说是更加强大的理性的产物。因为将物体撤离感官以制造一种更加紧密和长久的趋势本身已经显示了对于冲动的某种理性的控制，这不像在理性第一阶段那样仅仅是一种能力，多多少少地听从冲动的摆布。拒绝是一种办法。它是理想主义的助推器：它展现了从纯粹的动物欲望发展成爱情的过程，也展现了从单纯是惬意的感觉到对美的欣赏（最初只限于对人本身的美的欣赏，后来也包括欣赏大自然的美）。进一步来说，人类作为一个有道德的生物发展的第一个动力是他的彬彬有礼，他通过礼仪赢得其他人的尊重（例如，藏起一切可能引起蔑视的举动），也作为所有社交的适宜的基础。像这样一个小小的开端，对于开启思想的新方向具有划时代意义的效果，这比随后的、一系列的文化发展更为重要。

理性在介入人基本的、立即感受到的需求之后，它所采取的第三个步骤反映在对未来的预测上。这一能力不仅仅是享受现在的生活，而且是看到未来——常常是不久的将来。这是人类优势最具决定性的证据。因为具有了这种预见性，人类能够为长远的目标做好准备。但是由于这同样的能力，当它预见到不确定性时，会产生最无穷无尽的担心和焦虑。这一点所有其他动物都不必承受（《创世纪》，III，13-19）。那些需要供养自己、妻子、和未来的孩子的男人们预料到了他们工作的负担。女人们预料到了大自然给她们的性别添加上的辛苦（生养孩子），还有更有权势的丈夫们要其承受的困苦。男女两性都理解并预料到了，在辛劳工作一生的尽头，在这幅图画的背景中，所有动物都需要面临却并不被关注的命运，即死亡。他们仿佛谴责自己，把用理智给自己带来的所有病痛看作是一种罪过。或许他们唯一的安慰和保证是在后代身上延续。他们后代的命运或许好于他们，或许作为一个家庭的成员，能够消除父母们的痛苦（《创世纪》，III，16—20）。

理智走的第四步也是最后一步，是把人类提升到了高于动物世界的

境地，即理性意识到人是大自然真正的目的，地球上没有谁能够在这一点上与其抗衡。当他第一次对着羊群说“你身上的羊毛是大自然给你的，但不是给你用的，而是给我的”，然后他剥下羊皮穿在自己身上（《创世纪》，III，21），他意识到凭借人性他比所有的动物都享有优先权。他现在不再把这些动物看成是同胞了，而把它们看作是他达到目的的手段和工具。这一动向表明，对如下区别的认识，即人不能像对待动物一样对待其他的人，而应当把他们看作能够平分大自然礼物的人。这就作了一个铺垫，为理性在对待同胞时强加在人类意愿中的种种限制作个铺垫。这种铺垫对建立一个社会更重要，比爱情和天生的倾向更重要。

因此，人类与所有理性的生物享有平等的地位，不管他们处于什么等级，因为他可以宣称自己就是目的，也让别人接受他，不被其他生物用作达到其目的的工具。这不能仅仅被看作是满足种种倾向的一个手段，是人与更高级生物无条件平等的基础。因为即使更高级生物在天赋上无可比拟地比他优越，他们也没有权利随心所欲地利用他。结果是，这个理智的第四步就是人类从自然的子宫中释放出来。这种地位上的改变毫无疑问地带给他荣耀，与此同时也带来了危险。因为这种改变把他从无害的、安全的童年的保护花园中赶出来扔到了广阔的世界上。这个花园不需要他做什么而给他提供了一切，而在这个世界上则有那么多的忧虑、劳作和未知的魔鬼在静候着他。在未来，生活的艰辛将唤起他对伊甸园的向往，在那里他可以在安静和永久和平的环境中做梦或者虚度光阴。但是，焦躁不安的理性无法抗拒地驱使他发展天生的能力，它站在他和想象中天赐的福祉中间，不让他回到粗野的简单的状态中去（《创世纪》，III，24）。理性要求他耐心听命于他所厌恶的劳作，完成他所鄙视的琐事，甚至忘记对死亡的恐惧进而喜欢所有那些琐事，并害怕失去它们。

注解

从对人类最早的历史记述中可以得出如下的结论：人类从伊甸园——这个人类理性的第一个家园——中出现是人类从粗鲁、纯粹的动物状态过渡到人类的状态，从本能主导的状态到理性主导的状态，一言以蔽之，从自然庇护的状态到自由的状态。当我们考虑人类的目的地时，他通过这样的变化使有所失还是有所得不再是一个问题，而是相当简单地通向完美的进步过程。不管他的第一次尝试有多少缺点，即使他们被允许作一系列进一步的尝试，当这一事业代表的是整个种群由坏到好的进程，而就个体而言，情况却不是这样。在理性觉醒之前，没有禁忌和戒条，因此，触犯禁忌也是不可能的。但是，当理性不顾其自身的弱小开始起作用，不遗余力地与兽性发生激烈冲突之时，罪恶可能因而产生。更为糟糕的是，随着理性的增长，灾难出现了；这些灾难与幼稚天真的状态完全不同。因此，从道德的角度说，这个国家的第一步是一种衰退。从自然的角度来说，这种衰退是一种惩罚，因为它导致了迄今为止许多不为人知的罪恶的出现。然而，自然的历史始于善，因为这是上帝的作品；但是，自由的历史始于恶，因为这是人类的作品。对于只看个人自由的行使的个体而言，这样的转变代表的是失去。对于关注种群结果的大自然，它代表的是获得。因此，个体有理由为自己忍受的所有苦难和所犯的所有罪行而责怪自己。但是与此同时，作为人类种群的一个成员，他有理由敬佩并且赞扬这个总体安排的智慧与目的性。这样才有可能相互和解，并且有理由使常常遭到误解、显然自相矛盾的让·雅克·卢梭的主张相互协调。在其论文《关于科学的影响》和《关于人的不平等》中，他相当正确地展示了在文化和人类种族之间存在着不可避免的矛盾。人类每个个体是要完成各自使命的。在他的《爱弥儿》《社会契约论》和其他作品中，卢梭试图逐一地解决更加困难的问题，例如，文化应当采取什么样的动因才能确保人的能力适当地发展，才能确保与他们的目标保持一致，以便这个道德的目标不再与他作为自然种类的特性相矛盾。因为文化或许还没有真正地开始，更不要说完善了。它的发展与人作为人类和公民真正的教化原则相一致，上述矛盾是压迫人

类生活的所有罪恶的来源，是使人类蒙羞的一切罪恶的来源。[24]与此同时，那些被指责为恶行的原因的冲动本身是善的，是在发挥自然赋予的能力。但是，因为这些能力是适应于自然状态的，它们随着文化的发展受到了削弱，它们自身又削弱了文化，直到艺术达到完美，又一次成为自然为止，而这是人类道德命运的最高目标。

历史的终结

下面的一个阶段，人类开始从休闲和平时代转向到劳作不和谐时代，这成为社会整合的前奏。这里我们必须制造另一个飞跃，突然地让人类拥有家禽和庄稼，让他们能够为了繁衍而播种（《创世纪》，IV，2）。事实上，从野蛮的狩猎生活到田园生活，从挖树根摘野果到第二阶段的农耕状态，这个过程也可能是逐渐发生的。正是在这时，矛盾不可避免地出现在了那些一直和平共处的人们中间，结果是这些生活方式不一样的人们分开并分布到了全世界。田园生活不仅悠闲而且在人烟稀少的国度里，动物们也不缺乏草料。农业或者说种庄稼需要相当的劳作，而且因恶劣天气的影响而没有保障。农业也要求定居，拥有土地，要有足够的力量保护土地。然而，牧民们厌恶这样的财产权，因为这限制了他们放牧的自由。由于农业的这些特点，农民或许嫉妒牧民，认为牧民受到上帝的宠爱（《创世纪》，IV，4）。但是，事实上牧民给农民造成了诸多不便，只要牧民在邻里活动，吃草的动物也不会放过农民的庄稼。牧民很容易地赶着他的动物逃走，从而避免为造成的损失支付任何赔偿，因为他什么也没有留下，他能轻易地在另一个地方找到他所需要的。因此，农民毫无疑问地不得不采用武力避免受到侵犯，而他的对手并不认为侵入是非法的。由于如此的侵入不能完全得到杜绝，毫无疑问，他最终被迫尽可能地远离那些过着放牧生活的人们，除非他希望失去长时间辛勤努力的成果（《创世纪》，IV，16）。这种农民与牧民的分离标志着第三阶段的开始。

当人们依靠耕种土地谋生时（特别是种植树木），他们需要永久的住处，而保护这些财产免于被侵占需要一大群人相互帮助。因此，采取这种生活方式的人就不能分散居住，而是聚集在一起建立的村庄里（这被不太确切地称为城镇），以便保护他们的财产免遭野蛮的狩猎者或者游牧部落的破坏。生活模式的变化使得交换成为第一需要（《创世纪》，IV，20）。这使得文化和艺术起源不仅仅是一种消磨时光的手段，而且是一种职业（《创世纪》，21f）。但是首先这也意味着需要采取步骤建立一个市民宪法以及公开地监管公平。最初，这些事情毫无疑问仅仅关注大的暴力行为。而惩罚这种行为的权利现在不再像野蛮时代那样留给个人解决，而是指定给了一个能够服务并团结大众的合法政府，也就是，这样的一个政府，其本身不受暴力的统治（《创世纪》，IV，23f）。从这些最初的原始的开端开始，所有人类的天资现在渐渐地发展了，其中最为有益的是社会性和公众安全。人类能够繁衍，像蜂巢里的蜜蜂一样繁殖，从中心向各个方向输送经过文明教化的殖民者。这个时期还见证了人类不平等的开始；人类的不平等是种种罪恶之源，也是种种善行之源。此后不平等继续加深。

只要信奉上帝为主人的诺曼底的牧民继续成群地围着受一个人类主人或者公民权力的统治（《创世纪》，IV，4）[25]的城市居民和农民打转，并且宣称自己是所有土地拥有者的敌人，不友好地对待后者，同时也被后者憎恨，那么，这两者之间就会不停地陷入战争，或者至少是存在战争的危险。但是，作为敌对状态的一个结果，两国至少享受着内部自由这一无价财产（因为，即便是在现在，战争的危险也是唯一防止独裁统治的办法，因为一个国家必须有财富才会强大，没有自由就不能进行财富产生活动。一个穷国会用大量的努力来保持公共财富以补偿财富的缺乏，除非这个国家意识到这种努力只能够由人们自由创造，否则也是不可能的）。然而，随着时间的推移，城市居民的奢侈不断增长，特别是城市妇女充满诱惑力的艺术超过了原野上粗野的通奸，对于牧民一定是一个强大的诱惑，使他们与城市妇女建立关系，并使他们加入到城

镇生活的悲惨中（《创世纪》，IV，2）。这两个以前敌对人群的最终融合结束了战争的危险，但是，也终结了自由。一方面，这导致了强大的暴政的毁灭，因为文化对于那些毫无灵魂的奢侈和最为卑鄙的奴隶制只是刚刚开始，并且掺杂着不文明国家的不道德行为。另一方面，人类也偏离了大自然为其设定好的事业，即不断培养自己向善的能力。人类的目标是统治地球而不是过着沉溺于粗鲁和奴役的生活，因此，这种状态根本与人类不匹配（《创世纪》，IV，17）。

结束语

善于思考的人们会感到不适，这种不适甚至可能导致道德沦丧。对于那些不思考的人来说，他们对这种不适全然不知。这种不适是因为考虑不周引起的，即对天意的不满，而作为一个整体世界的进程是由天意主宰的。当他们思考着如此严重压制人类的罪恶时，他们感受到了一种毫无希望改进的情绪。然而，最为重要的是我们应当对天意感到满足，尽管天意给我们在地球上铺就的道路是艰辛的。我们应当对天意感到满足，一方面为了让我们即使身处困难之中仍然具有勇气，一方面为了不让我们去责怪这些罪恶，从而也不让我们看到对罪恶应负的责任，因而失去提高自己以补救罪恶的机会。

我们不得不承认，压迫文明民族的最大罪恶是战争，不是过去或者现在的实际战争，而是不断增长的对未来战争的准备。国家的所有资源，所有应当用于进一步增进文化发展的成果都被用于为这一目的服务。自由在很多地区蒙难，国家本应当对于其每个成员进行母亲般的照料，却被粗暴的苛政所取代（尽管这种苛政是以害怕外部的危险为理由）。但是如果对战争的实时恐惧不能迫使一国之君表现出对人性的尊重的话，那么我们会达到现在的文明程度吗？会形成为了增进人们的福利而出现一个共同体内不同的社会阶层之间密切合作的局面吗？我们是不是仍遭遇同样的人们，遭遇即使有很严格的法律仍依然存在的那种程

度的自由吗？我们只需要看看中国就明了了。中国的地理位置偶尔将其暴露在难以预料的侵入中，却不会让其受到一个强大的敌人所攻击。我们看到，由于这个原因，中国哪怕一点点的自由都被剥夺了。只要人类文明仍然保持在现阶段，战争就是使其发展的一个不可避免的手段。只有当文明达到其完全发展阶段——只有上帝知道这个阶段何时到来——永久的和平才能够实现并且惠及我们。与此相联，我们当然也只有为那些我们如此痛恨的罪恶而责怪自己。《圣经》相当公正地承认，如果在各民族间的文化还未融合之际，将各国融合为一个社会，使其能从外部危险中彻底解放，那么这样做只会阻碍文明的进一步发展，使社会衰退到不可补救的腐败中。

人类对大自然规律的另一个不满是生命的短暂。的确，任何一个人，如果不停地希望生命或许比它实际的长度要长，那他一定不欣赏生命的价值，因为延长生命仅仅是增加了由无休止的挣扎所组成的一部戏剧的长度。然而，我们或许应该原谅那些恐惧死亡而又不热爱生命的天真的看法，那些连每天对生存感到某种程度的满意都困难的人，却又总是对重复这一痛苦经历的日子过不够的人。但是如果我们停下来想一想寻求如何度过如此短暂一生的办法所受到的所有关照，还有强加在仅仅持续很短的一段时间的享乐之上的所有不公平，那么我们因此有理由得出结论说八百年或者更长的生命时长对我们没有好处。父亲们生活在害怕儿子的恐惧中；弟兄们生活在害怕弟兄的恐惧中；朋友们生活在害怕朋友们的恐惧中。如此长寿的一个种族可能达到这样的境地，它的命运不会好，倒不如让一场全球性的水灾将他们冲离地球（《创世纪》VI，12f）。

第三个愿望是回忆诗歌中高度赞扬的那一个黄金时代（这个愿望实际上是一个空洞的渴望，因为这个目标不会实现）。在那样的时代里，我们假定从所有想象的需求中解脱，我们满足于大自然提供的必需品，人与人之间有着完全的平等和永久的和平。一句话，有一种纯粹的无忧

无虑的生活享受，在懒散的梦境和孩童般的天真玩耍中挥霍时间。这种渴望使得鲁宾逊·克鲁索的奇遇和南海各岛之行如此的富有魅力。但是，广义上说，它们是种表象，即善于思索的人们在愉悦中寻求价值时所感受到的文明生活的疲惫，还有一旦理智提醒他们应当通过行动给生命以意义的时候，则他们会退回到慵懒状态。这种渴望回归简单和无知的过去的愿望，其空虚和无聊已经在前面对于人类原始状态的描述中得到展现。我们看到人类不可能一直保持这种状态，因为这种状态不会使他满足。一旦离开这种状态，他就不会回去。结果是他必须继续将他现在的条件和困难归因于自己和自己的选择。

对于人类历史的描述对人有益，倘若这历史中有下面的内容，这也将指导和改进他的行为：这历史必须告诉他不要为压迫他的罪恶而责怪上苍，并且他没有权利把自己的错误归咎于前辈；例如，指责前辈把犯同样错误传递给了后代，因为没有什么武断的行动是可以遗传的。这部历史应当展示给他的是，他有理由感谢其先辈，并且对错误地运用理智而犯下的罪恶负责，因为他完全有能力意识到在同等条件下他会有同样的表现，并且他第一次运用理智会犯错误（即使大自然建议他不要那样做）。一旦关于道德罪恶的这一点得到正确理解，客观存在的罪恶就很难破坏成就与错误相互权衡的这一平衡。

因此，在哲学的帮助下，从描述人类最早历史的尝试中可以得出如下结论：我们应当对上帝和其对人类事务的整体安排感到满意。这个事业并不是始于善，然后走向恶，而是逐渐地由坏发展到更好。大自然感召每一个人尽其所能对这一进步的历程作出贡献。

[1]我今天（9月30日）在比兴9月13日的《每周消息》（Wöchentliche Nachrichten）上读到关于这个月《柏林月评》（Berlinische Monatsschrift）的一个通告。通告提到雅科布·路德维希·费利克斯·门德尔松·巴托尔迪（德国犹太裔作曲家——译者注）对我已经回答的同一个问题的回答。我还没有看到这本杂志，否则的话我会犹豫是否发表上述看法。我只想让他们发现两个个体的想法会碰巧一致。

[2]一个可继承的王国并不是一个可以被另一个国家继承的国家。只有统治这个国家的权力可以遗赠给另一个人。在这种情况下，国家需要一个统治者，但是这样的一个统治者（也就是，一个已经有另一个王国的人）并不拥有这个国家。

[3]迄今为止，人们仍在怀疑除了禁止性法律和劝诫性法律之外是否还有许可性法律。因为所有法律都包含一个客观的、实践中可行的因素作为某种行动的理由，而一个许可只靠实际的偶发事件。因此，一个许可性法律是强制某事，但这件事无法强迫人去做，如果这种法律的对象与许可的对象一致，那么矛盾就出现了。但是，上面第二条提到的许可性法律，最初的禁止仅适用于未来要求权利的模式（例如，继承），而禁止的例外情况（也就是，法律的许可性部分）适用于国家的政治财产。依据以自然权利为基础的许可性法律，当前的国家可以被许可保持平稳即使自然状态已经被公民社会所取代。即使当前的财产是不合法的，他们也是诚实的。一旦推定的财产被认定为推定的，则此财产是被禁止的，不仅在自然状态中而且在公民社会中也是如此（如果财物的状态是推定的）。如果是在公民社会中，继续占有是不被允许的，假定的占有物一旦被发现是非法占有，则必须立刻停止占有，因为这是一种侵权行为。
我这里的意图仅仅只是简要地向自然权利的鼓吹者指出许可性法律的概念。这个概念在理性的系统性分工中自动地展现了自己。它特别值得一提，因为它时常被用在国内法和成文法中，有一个不同就是法律中禁止的部分独立地存在，许可性部分作为限制性条件不包括法律条文本身，而是在附加的条款中以囊括个案。这样的法律通常表述为这个或那个是被禁止的，除非是在个案一、二、三以至无穷。许可性条款仅仅偶然地加在法律中，并不依据任何确定的原则，而是通过对某个个案的回顾附加到法律上。否则，限制性条款只得包括在禁止性法律中，它由此可能成为许可性条款。因此，那个由智慧而思路清晰的绅士温狄史格里兹伯爵提出的精巧但尚未解决的竞赛问题很快被放弃真是一种遗憾，因为它可能解决我们现在讨论的司法困境。找到一个像数学公式一样的世界性模式的可能性是对立法的一致性的真正考验。没有它，所谓的确切的法律必然仅仅是一个善良的愿望。否则，我们只能有一般的法（例如，在一般情况下有效的法），但是却没有普遍的法（即普遍有效的法律），而普遍的法这一概念是一部法律要求具有的。

[4]一般的假定是一个人不能对另一个人采取敌对性行为，除非他已经被他人伤害。如果双方都是在一个合法的公民状态时，这是完全正确的。一个人已经进入了这样一种状态，就给另一个人提供了保障，因为双方都服从同一个权威。但是，人（或者一个民族）在一个纯粹自然的状态中让我感觉不到这种安全。他和我共存的这种状态伤害了我。他或许没有主动地（事实上）伤害我，但是，他处于无法律约束的状态伤害了我，因为他对我是一种永久的威胁。我能够要求他或者与我一起进入一个共同的法治状态，或者离开我。下面所列条款依据的假设是所有相

互影响的人必须遵循某种市民宪法。但是任何宪法，就生活在其下的人们而言，将归属于下面三种类型：
（1）依据一国内个人的公民权利的宪法；（2）依据国家间相互关系的国际权利的宪法；（3）依据世界性公民权利的宪法，个体和国家在一个相互影响的关系中共存，他们或许被看作是一个世界性国家的公民。这个分类，谈及永久和平的想法，并非随心所欲，而是必然的。即使一方能够影响另一方，而他自己却保持一种自然状态，这就会有战争危险。这正是上述条款所要禁止的。

[5]正当的（例如，外部的）自由，不能像通常所想的那样，定义为一个想做什么就做什么的授权令，除非它意味着对他人做不公平的事。授权令意味着什么？它意味着以某种方式行事的可能性，只要这种举动不会对别人造成不公平。因此，授权令的定义可以表述如下：自由是行动的可能性，其行动不会给他人造成不公平。也就是说，我们不做对别人不公平的事（不管我们实际上会做什么）。然而，这个定义是一个空洞的赘述。事实上，我的外部的、正当的自由应当被定义为一个授权令，除非我自己同意，否则我不遵守任何外部的法律。同样，一个国家内的外部的、正当的平等是公民之间没有人能够将他人置于法律责任之下而自己同时不被置于相同的法律责任之下（我们不需要界定司法依赖的原则，因为它总是隐含在一个政治性宪法的概念之中）。这些与生俱来、不可分割的权利的有效性，人类必然的属性，被一个原则所确认和强化，即人可能与更高层次的生物产生法律关系（如果他相信有后者的话）。因为他或许认为自己是先验世界的一个公民，同样的原则也适用于这个世界。至于我的自由，我甚至不承担神法规定给我的任何义务（我只能靠理性识别它们），除非我自己能够对它们表示我的同意，因为我能形成神法的观念也是基于自己理性的自由法则。至于我能想象到的、与最高贵的生物相联系的平等的原则，除上帝之外，如果我和这一高等生物都在我们自己的岗位上履行我们的职责，为什么是我有责任遵守法律而他享受命令的特权？这是没有道理的。但是，这一平等的原则（不像自由的原则）不能运用到我与上帝的关系中，因为上帝是唯一的生物，对他来说，责任的概念在其身上不再有效。
但是，关于作为主体所有公民的平等权利，我们或许要问一个世袭的贵族是否有资格享用。对这个问题的回答完全取决于哪一个更被看重，是国家授予的高级地位还是本人所取得的成就。现在很显然的是，如果等级是生而就被授予的，那么是否成就（在某人岗位上的技能和贡献）会与等级相伴而来则是非常不确定的。这相当于赋予一个得到偏爱的人领导地位而不管他是否在其岗位上取得成绩，在原始契约中，这不会被公众意愿所接受，毕竟这是所有权利背后的原则，因为一个贵族并不一定是一个高尚的人。至于一个掌权的贵族，例如，因为成绩所获得的地方高级治安官品级，品级对这个人而言不是附属的财产，而是这个人所占有的位置，这并不违反平等的原则。当一个人放弃了他的职位之后，他同时也辞去了他的品级而重新成为人民中的一员。

[6]许多人批评高调地授予统治者称号是奢侈的奉承，但是这对我来说是没有道理的事。因为让这片土地的统治者变得高傲倒不如让他们的心灵怀有谦卑。如果他是一个有知性的人（我们必须这样假定），他将会反思他接管了一个对人类而言太过巨大的办公室。这个办公室掌管着上帝在这个地球上最为神圣的机构即人的权利。他将始终活在惊恐中，害怕以什么方式伤害了上

帝最为有价值的个人财产。

[7]马莱·迪·旁在他华丽而空洞的写作中吹嘘说，他根据多年的经验最终被大主教的名言所征服：“让蠢蛋们就政府的形式争论不休吧，管理最好的政府就是最好的。”如果这意味着管理最好的政府就是管理得最好的政府，那么他就打开了一个坚果（正如斯威福特所做的那样）而得到了一个虫子的奖赏。如果这意味着管理最好的政府也是最好类型的政府（也就是，最好的宪法），那就完全错了。好的政府并不能说明是好的类型的政府。的确，谁能比提图斯或者马可·奥勒留统治得要好，然而，一个将王位传给了多米提安，另一个传给了康茂德；这在有一部完善宪法的国家中是不会发生的，因为他们不适合统治者这个职位的事实早为人所知，他们的继任者也足够强大，能够把不称职者排除在继承的行列之外。

[8]一个保加利亚的王子对友善地提出用决斗解决纠纷的希腊皇帝说：“一个有钳子的铁匠不会用双手把滚烫的铁从炭火中取出。”

[9]当战争结束，当和平降临，一个民族在感恩节之后指定一天为赎罪日也不为过。上天会以国家的名义饶恕人类，饶恕他们不断犯下的大罪，因为国家就是不在国际关系中遵从一个有法律的体制。每个国家以独立而引以为豪，愿意采用野蛮的战争手段，尽管战争不能产生出国家所渴望的权利结果。在战争中每次胜利的感恩节，每次对万军之主（用以色列人的方式）哼唱的赞歌，都很明显地与人类之父的道德概念恰恰相反。因为除了展示国家在追求他们共同权利的方式上的冷漠之外，他们实际上还为毁灭数不清的人及其幸福的行为而高兴。

[10]如果我们希望给这个伟大的帝国起个名字，以它称呼自己的方式给它命名（例如，China，而非Sina或者任何其他的类似形式），我们只需借鉴一下吉奥尔基写的《藏语字母表》的第651页到654页。根据彼得堡的费舍教授所说，它实际上没有一个自己的固定名字。最为常见的一个名字是金，意思是金子（藏族人称它为Ser）。这就解释了为什么皇帝被称作黄金之王（世界上最辉煌之地）。这个字显然在中国发Chin的音，但是被意大利传教士读为Kin，是因为意大利人不会发喉音。同样也应当看到，罗马人称之为Ser的国家实际上就是中国。丝绸就是从中国途经大西藏到达欧洲的（或许穿过小西藏、布哈拉和波斯）。这引发了关于这个古老而特别的国家的众多猜测，将它与印度相比较，猜测它与西藏地区和日本的关系。但是相邻国家称之为Sina或者Tschina却没有什么道理。

或许古老但迄今为止奇怪的位于欧洲和西藏的群落可以解释为海西基记录的圣职者的呐喊。根据吉奥尔基的《藏语字母表》，Concioa一字的意思是上帝。这个字看上去像Konx，希腊人或许轻易地发音为pax。但是Om被拉·克洛泽翻译为“保佑”，如果说涉及神性的话就是有福之人的意思。当弗朗西斯科问西藏喇嘛他们如何看待上帝时，他总是得到这样的答案：“上帝是所有那些神圣的人的群体。”因此，神秘的Konx Ompax或许是“神圣上帝的智慧”的意思，即遍及世界的至高存在，也就

是，自然人格化。我们最初的考虑应当有助于解释这个神秘的名字如何从西藏传到希腊。同样，这种影响可能是这样，即欧洲最早经西藏地区与中国发生了联系，或许比与印度交往更早。

[11]人是自然界的一部分。在自然界的机制中，其生存依靠某种基本的形式。我们只有将它归结为一个世界性的创造者事先决定了这一切，（大自然的）这种形式对我们来说才变得容易理解。我们把这种已定的影响称作上天的旨意，进一步定义为原始天意，因为它从远古时期延续。因为它根据有目的的宇宙法则延续自然的使命，我们称之为统治的天意。如果天意实现了某种目的，而人不能预示到其存在只能由结果猜测，这被称作指导性天意。最后，如果单个事件被看作是天意使然，我们便不再说是天意，而是一种特殊的施与。但是，如果有人宣称他能认识到这一点，那就是一种愚蠢的狂妄自大，因为这就意味着一个奇迹的诞生，即使发生的事件没有被特别地描述为奇迹性的话。因为不管它如何神奇或卑微，从一个单个事件中得出结论说，事件由一个特别的原则所左右，或者说事件本身是一个结果，不仅仅是另一个我们所全然不知的自然、机械的结果所导致，这是荒唐而自负的。同样，根据世界上的物体将天意分类，将它分为普遍的和特指的，就像文字记载中所提到的天意照看着各种各样的生物种类，但是也留下机会照顾个体，这样也是错误和自相矛盾的。说天意普遍存在的意思是没有哪一个个体应当被排除在外。然而，这种分类方式或许意味着表示天意由不同的方式实现。这也许是普遍性的（例如，每年出现的死亡和由于季节变化而产生的自然的复苏），或者是特殊性的（例如，海洋流将树木运送到北极海岸，而这种树在当地无法生长，从而给当地居民提供了生存资料）。后一种情况，我们能够解释某种现象的自然机制（例如，河床被森林覆盖，于是树可能掉入河里，被诸如墨西哥湾流的水流带走）。另一方面，我们必须不能忽视目的论（认为事物的发生和发展都是为了达到一定目的——译者注），它显示掌管自然的一个智慧的机构的前瞻性。但是，这个天佑和天意的概念，在当前的学术界，是过剩的。第一，试图给迥然不同的事物戴上挽具（如同给神话传说中的狮身鹰首兽戴上给马戴的挽具一样）是自相矛盾的，指出一个生物其本身是世界发展的完全动因就必须在世界性事件发生期间提供他自己的先决天意。例如，说医生作为上帝的助理治愈病人就是荒唐的。如果我们上升到那个最高的原始原因，上帝是医生及其所有药物的制造者，效果必须完全归因于他。这个原因理论上说我们理解不了。换句话说，它也可以完全上升到医生，只要我们把遭质疑的事件当作自然的规律对待，当作在地球上发生的事物的系列事件来解释。第二，如果我们采取这样的态度，我们就被剥夺了所有一定的原则，而我们通过这些原则评判效果。但是神的赞同概念是完全可以接受的，的确在道德和实践上是必要的，这是指玄奥的精神世界。例如，我们可以说我们不应当停止朝着善的方向努力，因为我们相信上帝会弥补我们所缺乏的正直，甚至是以我们所不能理解的方式，只要我们的态度足够诚恳。然而，没有人会用这样的论点去解释一个好的、被当作一个世俗事件的举动，因为这会假定玄奥的理论知识，我们如此宣称是很荒唐的。

[12]在所有的生活方式中，猎人的生活方式是与一个文明宪法最格格不入的。对于一个家庭来说，不得不分离地生活很快就会彼此成为陌生人，最终在广阔的森林中分散开来，彼此之间充满敌意，因为每个人都需要一大片区域以获得衣食。对诺亚提出的禁止食血的命令（《创世

纪》VIIII，2—6）看上去不为别的，而是专为禁止猎人的生活方式而设立。这一定包括吃生肉，假如禁止吃生肉，食血就不可能了。这种禁忌常常被强调，后来被犹太基督教徒强加在新入教的异教徒身上，但是有着不同的意图（第15、20、21、25条）。

[13]下面的问题或许会被提出。如果大自然的意图是让这些寒冷的海岸无人居住，如果大自然不再给他们提供漂浮的树木，这种情况的确可能发生，那么会对当地居民产生怎样的影响？因为我们可以相信随着当地文化的进步，温带地区的居民会更好地利用生长在河岸两边的树木，不让这些树木倒入水中并漂流到大海里。我应当回答说：那些住在鄂毕河、叶尼塞河、勒拿河等沿岸的人会以贸易的方式提供，用树木换取动物产品。北冰洋岸边出产丰富的动物产品。他们只会在大自然迫使他们彼此和平地一起生活的时候才会这么做。

[14]宗教差别——一个古怪的表达！仿佛我们要谈论不同的道德观。当然有不同的历史信条，虽然这些与宗教本身没有关系，只是与深化宗教途径的办法相关，因此属于历史研究的范畴。或许有多种不同的宗教书，但是，只能有一个宗教对所有人在所有的时间内有效。因此，不同的信条只可能是宗教的工具。这些是偶发的，可能随着时间和地点的变化而变化。

[15]这些是理性的许可法。它允许一个公权利的国家持续存在，即使它受到了不公正的影响，直到导致一场彻底革命的一切条件成熟，或者是为一场和平方式的革命做好了准备。任何合法的体制，即使它仅仅是在小范围内属于合法的，也比什么都没有要好一些。不成熟的改革的命运即为无政府状态。因此，政治上的深谋远虑，正如目前情况所表明的，就是将进行适合公权利理想的改革作为一项任务。但是，当革命是被自然本身所引发的时候，就不能将革命当作进行更大压迫的理由，而应当将其看作是自然的召唤，召唤建立一个基于自由原则之上的合法体制，因为这样一个彻底的改革才是惟一能够持续下去的。

[16]人们或许会怀疑是否植根于人性中的与生俱来的邪恶影响了共同生活在一个国度的人们，因为一个人或许会引证他们尚未发展的文化（例如，他们的野蛮性）作为其想法的不合法因素的成因。但是，在国家间的外部关系中，这种邪恶是相当不加掩饰、无可辩驳地明显存在的。在每一个国家中，这种邪恶被体现在国内法中的高压政治所掩盖，因为公民间彼此动武的倾向被更加强大的力量——政府所抵消。这不仅仅使整体蒙上了一层道德的遮羞布，而且也终结了无法无天状况的爆发。它使得人们的道德能力发展为一种对权利的即时尊重变得容易了很多；因为每一个人都相信他能够保持权利概念的神圣并且忠诚地遵守它，但愿他能确定所有其他的人会做同样的事，并且政府又部分地能为他作出保障。这就向道德准则迈了一大步，向一个义务的概念得到承认的国家迈了一大步，不管能否有可能的收获作为回报。但是，由于每个个人，尽管自认为很好，却假设其他人不忠诚，人们因此彼此评价，结果是他们自己都没有多少价值，尽管“为什么是这样”的讨论没有意义，我们不能责怪人类作为一个自由生物的天性。对于权利概念的尊重，以及人类绝对没有能力拒绝权利概念的现实给以下理论一个最庄严的认可，即每个人都明白他自己必须遵循权利原则，不管其他人会如何表现。

[17]人们能在加尔费1788年的专著《关于道德与政治的结合》一书中找到类似准则的例证。这位值得尊敬的学者承认，从一开始他就无法针对这个问题给出一个令人满意的答案。但是宽恕

如此的程序，同时承认一个人不能完全回答针对他们提出的反对意见的做法似乎对那些注定要滥用它的人是一个很大的让步，这种做法对任何人来说都是不可取的。

[18]那些，从女巫到吉卜赛人，既没有知识又不诚实的预言人被称作假先知。

[19]然而，这并不意味着一个有着君主宪法的民族因此能要求推翻它，或者是有一个秘密的愿望这样做。在欧洲占据一片延伸的领土的民族或许会感觉到君主制是惟一的一种体制能够在强大的邻国中保持自身的存在。如果臣民们抱怨，不是因为他们的内部政府，而是因为他们的政府对待外国公民的表现（例如，如果该国不鼓励国外的共和主义），这并不能证明人民对他们自己的体制不满意，而是他们非常地依赖这个体制，因为随着越来越多的民族成为共和国，该国逐渐变得更安全。然而，致力于扩大自身重要性的造谣的献媚者们试图把这些无害的政治谣言说成是革新主义、雅各宾主义和阴谋，构成对国家的危胁。但是，这种指控是没有丝毫道理的，特别是对一个远离革命中心一百英里的国家就更没有道理了。

[20]对于主张人的权利如此有热情，为什么没有统治者胆敢公开表明他不承认任何人民反对他的权利？或者说人民只把幸福寄托在政府的善行上，而任何臣民标榜自己有权利反对政府都是谎谬的、甚至会遭受惩罚，因为他们表明对于政府的抵抗是可以得到允许的。原因是任何公开的声明都会唤起民众对于统治者的反抗，即使他们像驯服的绵羊，喂得好，保护得好，并且由一个善良而善解人意的主人领着，不必因为缺乏福利而抱怨。被赋予了自由的生物不会仅仅满足于享受存在的舒适，这一点别人也会很好地提供（这里是由政府提供）。这完全依赖于控制这种舒适的原则。但是，福利没有任何统治原则，提供者和接受者也没有这样的原则，因为每个个体对此的定义不同。事实上，它依赖于这个愿望的物质方面，完全是经验性的，因此不可能成为一个普遍规则。被赋予了自由的一个生物，意识到其较之非理性动物所拥有的有利条件，能够并且必须遵循其意愿中正规的原则，要求他的人民不能缺乏政府。在政府中，人民是共同的立法者。换句话说，人要遵循的权利必须排在他们的康乐之上，因为人权是一项神圣的制度，超过所有功利主义的价值。不管政府如何乐善好施，它都不能背离人权。然而，这些权利总是一个理念。这个理念实现的条件是所采用的方法与道德相一致。这个限制条件必须不被人们所践踏，即通过革命实现他们的权利，这在任何时候都是不公平的。使一个民族遵守其体制的最好办法是自主地统治，同时用共和的形式管理，例如，用共和主义的精神统治，并以此类推。

[21]一项其特性无法直接预测的事业可以通过伴随它的效果来发现。什么是纯粹的君主？他是说战争将要爆发战争就会爆发的那个人。与此相反，什么样的君主是受限制的？他必须先询问人民是否应该有战争，如果人民说不应该有战争，那就不会有战争。在战争条件下，所有的国家权利都必须由国家元首处理。
现在，大不列颠的君主在没有征得人民同意的情况下发动了无数的战争。这个国王因此是一个不折不扣的君主，尽管根据宪法他不应当这么做。但是，他总是会忽视宪法，因为他总是确信只要控制着国家不同的力量，人民的代表们就会与他保持一致，因为他有权力嘉奖所有的权贵。这个腐朽的制度要想继续维持就自然不能曝光；它因此笼罩着一层神秘的面纱。

[22]人们都一致认为应当设计符合理智要求的政治体制（特别是在权利的问题上）。但是把它们严肃地提出是鲁莽的行为，而煽动人民抛弃现有的体制是要受到惩罚的。
柏拉图的《亚特兰蒂斯》、莫尔的《乌托邦》、哈林顿的《大洋国》、阿莱的《塞维亚姆比亚》相继问世，但是他们从没有在实践中检验过（克伦威尔试图建立专制共和国的失败尝试是个例外）。这些政治创造跟创造世界是一样的。没有人亲眼看到，也不可能有人亲眼看到，否则他就成为自身的创造者了。无论时光如何变化，在我们脑海中的这种政治产品某一天会变得完美仅仅是一个愉快的梦想。但是，我们会不断地接近这样的一种状态，只要它能与道德法取得一致，这就不仅仅是想象，这也是一国之君（不是公民）的责任。

[23]交流的冲动一定是孤独的人类向他们之外的其他动物宣告其存在的原始动力，特别是那些能发出可以模仿的声音的人们，这些声音后来成了名字。与这种冲动类似的效果现在还能在孩子们和智力低下的成年人身上看到。他们敲打、喊叫、唱歌、吹口哨，制造其他噪音（甚至常常是吵闹的宗教活动）打断人们的思考。他们这样做，除了在这大千世界宣告他们的存在，我看不出这些人还有其他的什么动机会这样做。

[24]下面的内容可能成为这一矛盾仅有的几个例子被引用。一方面是人对于道德目标的激情，另一方面是他本性中不变的对于法律的遵从和对于残酷环境的适应。
大自然有一个固定的时间表。就他们的要求和制造同类的能力而言，人类达到成熟大约是在十六岁或者是十七岁。这个年龄，在大自然界，是一个年轻人成为成人的年龄。这时他有能力照看自己，生育后代，照顾他的妻子和孩子。他需求的简单化使得这一切变得容易。但是，在一个文明的国家，为了实现这些功能，在技术和有利的外部环境方面他需要多种支持。在公民社会的语境下，相应的阶段因此要延长至少平均十年。然而，大自然没有更改进入青春期的年龄以适应社会的进步，而是固执地遵守其为了人类作为一个动物物种的生存而规定的法则。结果是，社会习俗对于自然的影响，或者是自然对社会习俗的影响明显存有偏见。在自然状态中达到一定年龄就已经成熟的人，在文明状态下却养活不了自己，更不要说抚养妻子和儿女，尽管按照自然的要求他有生育后代的冲动与能力。大自然当然没有赋予生物以本能和能力，为的是它能够压制他们。如此的能力不是为文明状态而设计，而是为人类作为一个动物品种的生存而设计。文明的状态因此与后者产生了矛盾，这个矛盾只有文明的最终目标——一个完善的公民体制才能够解决。与此同时，在自然状态和完美状态之间充满了邪恶及邪恶所带来的后果，也就是，以各种各样的形式呈现的人类悲剧。 另一个例子或许能够确认这样的事实，即大自然为了两个截然不同的目的赋予我们两种不同的能力：人作为一个动物物种以及人作为一个道德物种。例子就是希波克拉底所说的“生命短暂，艺术永恒”。当一个拥有才智的人通过长期实践和知识积累获得了必要的成熟的判断力的时候，艺术和科学就能够得到进一步的发展。只要这个人能够生存并在整个一代人的时间里保持他年轻的脑力，他发展艺术和科学的能量要比整整一代学者的能量大。如今，很明显大自然固定了人生的长度，意在终结而不是推动科学的进步。正当最幸运的思想家处于伟大发现的边缘时，暮年已至，他失去了洞察力，必须让下一代（下一代重新从ABC开始，不得不再次重走已经走过的整个路程）在文化的进步中走下一步。因此，人类实现使命的旅程显示出不断受到干扰，随时有倒退回原始野蛮状态的危险。希腊哲学家有这样的抱怨：“当我们开始认识到我们应当如何活时，我们却不得不面对死亡，这真是一个

遗憾。” 第三个例子，我们可以引用人的不平等的例子——不是命运赋予人的自然天赋或者善行的不平等，而是从世界人权的角度出发，关于这一点，卢梭的抱怨是极具真实性的。然而，这种不平等与文明不可分割，只要文明毫无规划地发展（在相当长的一段时间内，情况就是这样）。但是，这种不平等当然不是大自然强加给人的，因为大自然给予他自由和理智。理智裁定这种自由受到其自身外部的、世界的法律的限制，这就是民权。人意图通过自己的努力上升到超越其自然能力的野蛮状态，但是，即使是超越野蛮也要小心不触犯它们。他期待在经过了许多次成功尝试之后获得这个技能。与此同时，人类由于自身缺乏经验而吃尽苦头，在罪恶的压迫下痛苦地呻吟。

[25]阿拉伯的贝都因人依然自认为是部落的创始人——前酋长的孩子们。但是，酋长毫无疑问不是他们的主人。他不能将自己的意愿强加在其臣民的身上。在一个游牧民族中，没有人拥有他带不走的固定资产，因此任何一个对自己部落不满意的家庭都能轻而易举地离开这个部落而加入其他的部落。

Immanuel Kant

An Answer to the Question: 'What is Enlightenment?'

TRANSLATED BY H. B. NISBET

PENGUIN BOOKS — GREAT IDEAS

Contents

An Answer to the Question: 'What is Enlightenment?'

Enlightenment is man's emergence from his self-incurred immaturity. Immaturity is the inability to use one's own understanding without the guidance of another. This immaturity is self-incurred if its cause is not lack of under-standing, but lack of resolution and courage to use it without the guidance of another. The motto of enlightenment is therefore: Sapere aude! [Dare to be wise!] Have courage to use your own understanding!

Laziness and cowardice are the reasons why such a large proportion of men, even when nature has long emancipated them from alien guidance（naturaliter maiorennes [Those who have come of age by virtue of nature]）, nevertheless gladly remain immature for life. For the same reasons, it is all too easy for others to set themselves up as their guardians. It is so convenient to be immature! If I have a book to have understanding in place of me, a spiritual adviser to have a conscience for me, a doctor to judge my diet for me, and so on, I need not make any efforts at all. I need not think, so long as I can pay; others will soon enough take the tiresome job over for me. The guardians who have kindly taken upon themselves the work of supervision will soon see to it that by far the largest part of mankind（including the entire fair sex）should consider the step forward to maturity not only as difficult but also as highly dangerous. Having first infatuated their domesticated animals, and carefully pre-vented the docile creatures from daring to take a single step without the leading-strings to which they are tied, they next show them the danger which threatens them if they try to walk unaided. Now this danger is not in fact so very great, for they would certainly learn to walk eventually after a few falls. But an example of this kind is intimidating, and usually frightens them off from further attempts.

Thus it is difficult for each separate individual to work his way out of the immaturity which has become almost second nature to him. He has even grown fond of it and is really incapable for the time being of using his own understanding, because he was never allowed to make the attempt. Dogmas and formulas, those mechanical instruments for rational use（or rather misuse） of his natural endowments, are the ball and chain of his permanent immaturity. And if anyone did throw them off, he would still be uncertain about jumping over even the narrowest of trenches, for he would be unaccustomed to free movement of this kind. Thus only a few, by cultivating their own minds, have succeeded in freeing themselves from immaturity and in continuing boldly on their way.

There is more chance of an entire public enlightening itself. This is indeed almost inevitable, if only the public concerned is left in freedom. For there will always be a few who think for themselves, even among those appointed as guardians of the common mass. Such guardians, once they have themselves thrown off the yoke of immaturity, will disseminate the spirit of rational respect for personal value and for the duty of all men to think for themselves. The remarkable thing about this is that if the public, which was previously put under this yoke by the guardians, is suitably stirred up by some of the latter who are incapable of enlightenment, it may subsequently compel the guardians themselves to remain under the yoke. For it is very harmful to propagate prejudices, because they finally avenge themselves on the very people who first encouraged them（or whose predecessors did so）. Thus a public can only achieve enlightenment slowly. A revolution may well put an end to autocratic despotism and to rapacious or powerseeking oppression, but it will never produce a true reform in ways of thinking. Instead, new prejudices, like the ones they replaced, will serve as a leash to control the great unthinking mass.

For enlightenment of this kind, all that is needed is freedom. And the freedom in question is the most innocuous form of all - freedom to make public use of one's reason in all matters. But I hear on all sides the cry: Don't argue! The officer says: Don't argue, get on parade! The tax-official: Don't argue, pay! The clergyman: Don't argue, believe!（Only one ruler in the world says: Argue as much as you like and about whatever you like, but obey!） All this means restrictions on freedom everywhere. But which sort of restriction prevents enlightenment, and which, instead of hindering it, can actually promote it? I reply: The public use of man's reason must always be free, and it alone can bring about enlightenment among men; the private use of reason may quite often be very narrowly restricted, however, without undue hindrance to the progress of enlightenment. But by the public use of one's own reason I mean that use which anyone may make of it as a man of learning addressing the entire reading public. What I term the private use of reason is that which a person may make of it in a particular civil post or office with which he is entrusted.

Now in some affairs which affect the interests of the commonwealth, we require a certain mechanism whereby some members of the commonwealth must behave purely passively, so that they may, by an artificial common agreement, be employed by the government for public ends（or at least deterred from vitiating them）. It is, of course, impermissible to argue in such cases; obedience is imperative. But in so far as this or that individual who acts as part of the machine also considers himself as a member of a complete commonwealth or even of cosmopolitan society, and thence as a man of learning who may through his writings address a public in the truest sense of the word, he may indeed argue without harming the affairs in which he is employed for some of the time in a passive capacity. Thus it would be very harmful if an officer receiving an order from his superiors were to quibble openly, while on duty, about the appropriateness or usefulness of the order in question. He must simply obey. But he cannot reasonably be banned from making observations as a man of learning on the errors in the military service, and from submitting these to his public for judgement. The citizen cannot refuse to pay the taxes imposed upon him; presumptuous criticisms of such taxes, where someone is called upon to pay them, may be punished as an outrage which could lead to general insubordination. Nonetheless, the same citizen does not contravene his civil obligations if, as a learned individual, he publicly voices his thoughts on the impropriety or even injustice of such fiscal measures. In the same way, a clergyman is bound to instruct his pupils and his congregation in accordance with the doctrines of the church he serves, for he was employed by it on that condition. But as a scholar, he is completely free as well as obliged to impart to the public all his carefully considered, well-intentioned thoughts on the mistaken aspects of those doctrines, and to offer suggestions for a better arrangement of religious and ecclesiastical affairs. And there is nothing in this which need trouble the conscience. For what he teaches in pursuit of his duties as an active servant of the church is presented by him as something which he is not empowered to teach at his own discretion, but which he is employed to expound in a prescribed manner and in someone else's name. He will say: Our church teaches this or that, and these are the arguments it uses. He then extracts as much practical value as possible for his congregation from precepts to which he would not himself subscribe with full conviction, but which he can nevertheless undertake to expound, since it is not in fact wholly impossible that they may contain truth. At all events, nothing opposed to the essence of religion is present in such doctrines. For if the clergyman thought he could find anything of this sort in them, he would not be able to carry out his official duties in good conscience, and would have to resign. Thus the use which someone employed as a teacher makes of his reason in the presence of his congregation is purely private, since a congregation, however large it is, is never any more than a domestic gathering. In view of this, he is not and cannot be free as a priest, since he is acting on a commission imposed from out-side. Conversely, as a scholar addressing the real public（i.e. the world at large） through his writings, the clergy-man making public use of his reason enjoys unlimited freedom to use his own reason and to speak in his own person. For to maintain that the guardians of the people in spiritual matters should themselves be immature, is an absurdity which amounts to making absurdities permanent.

But should not a society of clergymen, for example an ecclesiastical synod or a venerable presbytery（as the Dutch call it）, be entitled to commit itself by oath to a certain unalterable set of doctrines, in order to secure for all time a constant guardianship over each of its members, and through them over the people? I reply that this is quite impossible. A contract of this kind, concluded with a view to preventing all further enlightenment of mankind for ever, is absolutely null and void, even if it is ratified by the supreme power, by Imperial Diets and the most solemn peace treaties. One age cannot enter into an alliance on oath to put the next age in a position where it would be impossible for it to extend and correct its knowledge, particularly on such important matters, or to make any progress whatsoever in enlightenment. This would be a crime against human nature, whose original destiny lies precisely in such progress. Later generations are thus perfectly entitled to dismiss these agreements as unauthorized and criminal. To test whether any particular measure can be agreed upon as a law for a people, we need only ask whether a people could well impose such a law upon itself. This might well be possible for a specified short period as a means of introducing a certain order, pending, as it were, a better solution. This would also mean that each citizen, particularly the clergyman, would be given a free hand as a scholar to comment publicly, i.e. in his writings, on the inadequacies of current institutions. Meanwhile, the newly established order would continue to exist, until public insight into the nature of such matters had progressed and proved itself to the point where, by general consent（if not unanimously）, a proposal could be submitted to the crown. This would seek to protect the congregations who had, for instance, agreed to alter their religious establishment in accordance with their own notions of what higher insight is, but it would not try to obstruct those who wanted to let things remain as before. But it is absolutely impermissible to agree, even for a single lifetime, to a permanent religious constitution which no one might publicly question. For this would virtually nullify a phase in man's upward progress, thus making it fruitless and even detrimental to subsequent generations. A man may for his own person, and even then only for a limited period, postpone enlightening himself in matters he ought to know about. But to renounce such enlightenment completely, whether for his own person or even more so for later generations, means violating and trampling underfoot the sacred rights of mankind. But something which a people may not even impose upon itself can still less be imposed on it by a monarch; for his legislative authority depends precisely upon his uniting the collective will of the people in his own. So long as he sees to it that all true or imagined improvements are compatible with the civil order, he can otherwise leave his subjects to do whatever they find necessary for their salvation, which is none of his business. But it is his business to stop anyone forcibly hindering others from working as best they can to define and promote their salvation. It indeed detracts from his majesty if he interferes in these affairs by subjecting the writings in which his subjects attempt to clarify their religious ideas to governmental supervision. This applies if he does so acting upon his own exalted opinions – in which case he exposes himself to the reproach: Caesar non est supra Grammaticos [Caesar is not above the Grammarians] – but much more so if he demeans his high authority so far as to support the spiritual despotism of a few tyrants within his state against the rest of his subjects.

If it is now asked whether we at present live in an enlightened age, the answer is: No, but we do live in an age of enlightenment. As things are at present, we still have a long way to go before men as a whole can be in a position（or can even be put into a position） of using their own understanding confidently and well in religious matters, without outside guidance. But we do have distinct indications that the way is now being cleared for them to work freely in this direction, and that the obstacles to universal enlightenment, to man's emergence from his self-incurred immaturity, are gradually becoming fewer. In this respect our age is the age of enlightenment, the century of Frederick.

A prince who does not regard it as beneath him to say that he considers it his duty, in religious matters, not to prescribe anything to his people, but to allow them complete freedom, a prince who thus even declines to accept the presumptuous title of tolerant, is himself enlightened. He deserves to be praised by a grateful present and posterity as the man who first liberated mankind from immaturity（as far as government is concerned）, and who left all men free to use their own reason in all matters of conscience. Under his rule, ecclesiastical dignitaries, notwithstanding their official duties, may in their capacity as scholars freely and publicly submit to the judgement of the world their verdicts and opinions, even if these deviate here and there from orthodox doctrine. This applies even more to all others who are not restricted by any official duties. This spirit of freedom is also spreading abroad, even where it has to struggle with outward obstacles imposed by governments which misunderstand their own function. For such governments can now witness a shining example of how freedom may exist without in the least jeopardizing public concord and the unity of the commonwealth. Men will of their own accord gradually work their way out of barbarism so long as artificial measures are not deliberately adopted to keep them in it.

I have portrayed matters of religion as the focal point of enlightenment, i.e. of man's emergence from his self-incurred immaturity. This is firstly because our rulers have no interest in assuming the role of guardians over their subjects so far as the arts and sciences are concerned, and secondly, because religious immaturity is the most pernicious and dishonourable variety of all. But the attitude of mind of a head of state who favours freedom in the arts and sciences extends even further, for he realizes that there is no danger even to his legislation if he allows his subjects to make public use of their own reason and to put before the public their thoughts on better ways of drawing up laws, even if this entails forthright criticism of the current legislation. We have before us a brilliant example of this kind, in which no monarch has yet surpassed the one to whom we now pay tribute.

But only a ruler who is himself enlightened and has no fear of phantoms, yet who likewise has at hand a well-disciplined and numerous army to guarantee public security, may say what no republic would dare to say: Argue as much as you like and about whatever you like, but obey! This reveals to us a strange and unexpected pattern in human affairs（such as we shall always find if we consider them in the widest sense, in which nearly every-thing is paradoxical）. A high degree of civil freedom seems advantageous to a people's intellectual freedom, yet it also sets up insuperable barriers to it. Conversely, a lesser degree of civil freedom gives intellectual freedom enough room to expand to its fullest extent. Thus once the germ on which nature has lavished most care – man's inclination and vocation to think freely – has developed within this hard shell, it gradually reacts upon the mentality of the people, who thus gradually become increasingly able to act freely. Eventually, it even influences the principles of governments, which find that they can themselves profit by treating man, who is more than a machine, in a manner appropriate to his dignity.[1]

Königsberg in Prussia, 30th September, 1784.

---

[1] I read today on the 30th September in Büsching's Wöchentliche Nachrichten of 13th September a notice concerning this month's Berlinische Monatsschrift. The notice mentions Mendelssohn's answer to the same question as that which I have answered. I have not yet seen this journal, otherwise I should have held back the above reflections. I let them stand only as a means of finding out by comparison how far the thoughts of two individuals may coincide by chance.

Perpetual Peace: A Philosophical Sketch

‘The Perpetual Peace’

A Dutch innkeeper once put this satirical inscription on his signboard, along with the picture of a graveyard. We shall not trouble to ask whether it applies to men in general, or particularly to heads of state（who can never have enough of war）, or only to the philosophers who blissfully dream of perpetual peace. The author of the present essay does, however, make one reservation in advance. The practical politician tends to look down with great complacency upon the political theorist as a mere academic. The theorist's abstract ideas, the practitioner believes, cannot endanger the state, since the state must be founded upon principles of experience; it thus seems safe to let him fire off his whole broadside, and the worldly-wise statesman need not turn a hair. It thus follows that if the practical politician is to be consistent, he must not claim, in the event of a dispute with the theorist, to scent any danger to the state in the opinions which the theorist has randomly uttered in public. By this saving clause, the author of this essay will consider himself expressly safeguarded, in correct and proper style, against all malicious interpretation.

FIRST SECTION

Which Contains the Preliminary Articles of a Perpetual Peace Between States

1.'No conclusion of peace shall be considered valid as such if it was made with a secret reservation of the material for a future war.'

For if this were the case, it would be a mere truce, a suspension of hostilities, not a peace. Peace means an end to all hostilities, and to attach the adjective 'perpetual' to it is already suspiciously close to pleonasm. A conclusion of peace nullifies all existing reasons for a future war, even if these are not yet known to the contracting parties, and no matter how acutely and carefully they may later be pieced together out of old documents. It is possible that either party may make a mental reservation with a view to reviving its old pretensions in the future. Such reservations will not be mentioned explicitly, since both parties may simply be too exhausted to continue the war, although they may nonetheless possess sufficient ill will to seize the first favourable opportunity of attaining their end. But if we consider such reservations in themselves, they soon appear as Jesuitical casuistry; they are beneath the dignity of a ruler, just as it is beneath the dignity of a minister of state to comply with any reasoning of this kind.

But if, in accordance with 'enlightened' notions of political expediency, we believe that the true glory of a state consists in the constant increase of its power by any means whatsoever, the above judgement will certainly appear academic and pedantic.

2.‘No independently existing state, whether it be large or small, may be acquired by another state by inheritance, exchange, purchase or gift.’

For a state, unlike the ground on which it is based, is not a possession（patrimonium）. It is a society of men, which no one other than itself can command or dispose of. Like a tree, it has its own roots, and to graft it on to another state as if it were a shoot is to terminate its existence as a moral personality and make it into a commodity. This contradicts the idea of the original contract, without which the rights of a people are unthinkable.[1] Everyone knows what danger the supposed right of acquiring states in this way, even in our own times, has brought upon Europe（for this practice is unknown in other continents）. It has been thought that states can marry one another, and this has provided a new kind of industry by which power can be increased through family alliances, without expenditure of energy, while landed property can be extended at the same time. It is the same thing when the troops of one state are hired to another to fight an enemy who is not common to both; for the subjects are thereby used and misused as objects to be manipulated at will.

3.‘Standing armies（miles perpetuus） will gradually be abolished altogether.’

For they constantly threaten other states with war by the very fact that they are always prepared for it. They spur on the states to outdo one another in arming unlimited numbers of soldiers, and since the resultant costs eventually make peace more oppressive than a short war, the armies are themselves the cause of wars of aggression which set out to end burdensome military expenditure. Furthermore, the hiring of men to kill or to be killed seems to mean using them as mere machines and instruments in the hands of someone else（the state）, which cannot easily be reconciled with the rights of man in one's own person. It is quite a different matter if the citizens undertake voluntary military training from time to time in order to secure themselves and their fatherland against attacks from outside. But it would be just the same if wealth rather than soldiers were accumulated, for it would be seen by other states as a military threat; it might compel them to mount preventive attacks, for of the three powers within a state – the power of the army, the power of alliance and the power of money – the third is probably the most reliable instrument of war. It would lead more often to wars if it were not so difficult to discover the amount of wealth which another state possesses.

4.‘No national debt shall be contracted in connection with the external affairs of the state.’

There is no cause for suspicion if help for the national economy is sought inside or outside the state（e.g. for improvements to roads, new settlements, storage of foodstuffs for years of famine, etc.）. But a credit system, if used by the powers as an instrument of aggression against one another, shows the power of money in its most dangerous form. For while the debts thereby incurred are always secure against present demands（because not all the creditors will demand payment at the same time）, these debts go on growing indefinitely. This ingenious system, invented by a commercial people in the present century, provides a military fund which may exceed the resources of all the other states put together. It can only be exhausted by an eventual tax-deficit, which may be postponed for a considerable time by the commercial stimulus which industry and trade receive through the credit system. This ease in making war, coupled with the warlike inclination of those in power（which seems to be an integral feature of human nature）, is thus a great obstacle in the way of perpetual peace. Foreign debts must therefore be prohibited by a preliminary article of such a peace, otherwise national bankruptcy, inevitable in the long run, would necessarily involve various other states in the resultant loss without their having deserved it, thus inflicting upon them a public injury. Other states are therefore justified in allying themselves against such a state and its pretensions.

5. ‘No state shall forcibly interfere in the constitution and government of another state.’

For what could justify such interference? Surely not any sense of scandal or offence which a state arouses in the subjects of another state. It should rather serve as a warning to others, as an example of the great evils which a people has incurred by its lawlessness. And a bad example which one free person gives to another（as a scandalum acceptum） is not the same as an injury to the latter. But it would be a different matter if a state, through internal discord, were to split into two parts, each of which set itself up as a separate state and claimed authority over the whole. For it could not be reckoned as interference in another state's constitution if an external state were to lend support to one of them, because their condition is one of anarchy. But as long as this internal conflict is not yet decided, the interference of external powers would be a violation of the rights of an independent people which is merely struggling with its internal ills. Such interference would be an active offence and would make the autonomy of all other states insecure.

6.‘No state at war with another shall permit such acts of hostility as would make mutual confidence impossible during a future time of peace. Such acts would include the employment of assassins（percussores） or poisoners（venefici）, breach of agreements, the instigation of treason（perduellio）within the enemy state, etc.’

These are dishonourable stratagems. For it must still remain possible, even in wartime, to have some sort of trust in the attitude of the enemy, otherwise peace could not be concluded and the hostilities would turn into a war of extermination（bellum internecinum）. After all, war is only a regrettable expedient for asserting one's rights by force within a state of nature, where no court of justice is available to judge with legal authority. In such cases, neither party can be declared an unjust enemy, for this would already presuppose a judge's decision; only the outcome of the conflict, as in the case of a so-called ‘judgement of God’, can decide who is in the right. A war of punishment（bellum punitivum） between states is inconceivable, since there can be no relationship of superior to inferior among them. It thus follows that a war of extermination, in which both parties and right itself might all be simultaneously annihilated, would allow perpetual peace only on the vast graveyard of the human race. A war of this kind and the employment of all means which might bring it about must thus be absolutely prohibited. But the means listed above would inevitably lead to such a war, because these diabolical arts, besides being intrinsically despicable, would not long be confined to war alone if they were brought into use. This applies, for example, to the employment of spies（uti exploratoribus）, for it exploits only the dishonesty of others（which can never be completely eliminated）. Such practices will be carried over into peacetime and will thus completely vitiate its purpose.

All of the articles listed above, when regarded objectively or in relation to the intentions of those in power, are prohibitive laws（leges prohibitivae）. Yet some of them are of the strictest sort（leges strictae）, being valid irrespective of differing circumstances, and they require that the abuses they prohibit should be abolished immediately（Nos. 1, 5 and 6）. Others（Nos. 2, 3 and 4）, although they are not exceptions to the rule of justice, allow some subjective latitude according to the circumstances in which they are applied（leges latae）. The latter need not necessarily be executed at once, so long as their ultimate purpose（e.g. the restoration of freedom to certain states in accordance with the second article） is not lost sight of. But their execution may not be put off to a non-existent date（ad calendas graecas, as Augustus used to promise）, for any delay is permitted only as a means of avoiding a premature implementation which might frustrate the whole purpose of the article. For in the case of the second article, the prohibition relates only to the mode of acquisition, which is to be forbidden hereforth, but not to the present state of political possessions. For although this present state is not backed up by the requisite legal authority, it was considered lawful in the public opinion of every state at the time of the putative acquisition.[2]

SECOND SECTION

Which Contains the Definitive Articles of a Perpetual Peace Between States

A state of peace among men living together is not the same as the state of nature, which is rather a state of war. For even if it does not involve active hostilities, it involves a constant threat of their breaking out. Thus the state of peace must be formally instituted, for a suspension of hostilities is not in itself a guarantee of peace. And unless one neighbour gives a guarantee to the other at his request（which can happen only in a lawful state）, the latter may treat him as an enemy.[3]

First Definitive Article of a Perpetual Peace: The Civil Constitution of Every State shall be Republican

A republican constitution is founded upon three principles: firstly, the principle of freedom for all members of a society（as men）; secondly, the principle of the dependence of everyone upon a single common legislation（as subjects）; and thirdly, the principle of legal equality for everyone（as citizens）.[4] It is the only constitution which can be derived from the idea of an original contract, upon which all rightful legislation of a people must be founded. Thus as far as right is concerned, republicanism is in itself the original basis of every kind of civil constitution, and it only remains to ask whether it is the only constitution which can lead to a perpetual peace.

The republican constitution is not only pure in its origin（since it springs from the pure concept of right）; it also offers a prospect of attaining the desired result, i.e. a perpetual peace, and the reason for this is as follows.

– If, as is inevitably the case under this constitution, the consent of the citizens is required to decide whether or not war is to be declared, it is very natural that they will have great hesitation in embarking on so dangerous an enterprise. For this would mean calling down on themselves all the miseries of war, such as doing the fighting themselves, supplying the costs of the war from their own resources, painfully making good the ensuing devastation, and, as the crowning evil, having to take upon themselves a burden of debt which will embitter peace itself and which can never be paid off on account of the constant threat of new wars. But under a constitution where the subject is not a citizen, and which is therefore not republican, it is the simplest thing in the world to go to war. For the head of state is not a fellow citizen, but the owner of the state, and a war will not force him to make the slightest sacrifice so far as his banquets, hunts, pleasure palaces and court festivals are concerned. He can thus decide on war, without any significant reason, as a kind of amusement, and unconcernedly leave it to the diplomatic corps（who are always ready for such purposes） to justify the war for the sake of propriety.

The following remarks are necessary to prevent the republican constitution from being confused with the democratic one, as commonly happens. The various forms of state（civitas）may be classified either according to the different persons who exercise supreme authority, or according to the way in which the nation is governed by its ruler, whoever he may be. The first classification goes by the form of sovereignty（forma imperii）, and only three such forms are possible, depending on whether the ruling power is in the hands of an individual, of several persons in association, or of all those who together constitute civil society（i.e. autocracy, aristocracy and democracy – the power of a prince, the power of a nobility, and the power of the people）. The second classification depends on the form of government（forma regiminis）, and relates to the way in which the state, setting out from its constitution（i.e. an act of the general will whereby the mass becomes a people）, makes use of its plenary power. The form of government, in this case, will be either republican or despotic. Republicanism is that political principle whereby the executive power（the government） is separated from the legislative power. Despotism prevails in a state if the laws are made and arbitrarily executed by one and the same power, and it reflects the will of the people only in so far as the ruler treats the will of the people as his own private will. Of the three forms of sovereignty, democracy, in the truest sense of the word, is necessarily a despotism, because it establishes an executive power through which all the citizens may make decisions about（and indeed against） the single individual without his consent, so that decisions are made by all the people and yet not by all the people; and this means that the general will is in contradiction with itself, and thus also with freedom.

For any form of government which is not representative is essentially an anomaly, because one and the same person cannot at the same time be both the legislator and the executor of his own will, just as the general proposition in logical reasoning cannot at the same time be a secondary proposition subsuming the particular within the general. And even if the other two political constitutions（i.e. autocracy and aristocracy） are always defective in as much as they leave room for a despotic form of government, it is at least possible that they will be associated with a form of government which accords with the spirit of a representative system. Thus Frederick II at least said that he was merely the highest servant of the state,[5] while a democratic constitution makes this attitude impossible, because everyone under it wants to be a ruler. We can therefore say that the smaller the number of ruling persons in a state and the greater their powers of representation, the more the constitution will approximate to its republican potentiality, which it may hope to realize eventually by gradual reforms. For this reason, it is more difficult in an aristocracy than in a monarchy to reach this one and only perfectly lawful kind of constitution, while it is possible in a democracy only by means of violent revolution. But the people are immensely more concerned with the mode of government[6] than with the form of the constitution, although a great deal also depends on the degree to which the constitution fits the purpose of the government. But if the mode of government is to accord with the concept of right, it must be based on the representative system. This system alone makes possible a republican state, and without it, despotism and violence will result, no matter what kind of constitution is in force. None of the so-called 'republics' of antiquity employed such a system, and they thus inevitably ended in despotism, although this is still relatively bearable under the rule of a single individual.

Second Definitive Article of a Perpetual Peace: The Right of Nations shall be based on a Federation of Free States

Peoples who have grouped themselves into nation states may be judged in the same way as individual men living in a state of nature, independent of external laws; for they are a standing offence to one another by the very fact that they are neighbours. Each nation, for the sake of its own security, can and ought to demand of the others that they should enter along with it into a constitution, similar to the civil one, within which the rights of each could be secured. This would mean establishing a federation of peoples. But a federation of this sort would not be the same thing as an international state. For the idea of an international state is contradictory, since every state involves a relationship between a superior（the legislator） and an inferior（the people obeying the laws）, whereas a number of nations forming one state would constitute a single nation. And this contradicts our initial assumption, as we are here considering the right of nations in relation to one another in so far as they are a group of separate states which are not to be welded together as a unit.

We look with profound contempt upon the way in which savages cling to their lawless freedom. They would rather engage in incessant strife than submit to a legal constraint which they might impose upon themselves, for they prefer the freedom of folly to the freedom of reason. We regard this as barbarism, coarseness, and brutish debasement of humanity. We might thus expect that civilized peoples, each united within itself as a state, would hasten to abandon so degrading a condition as soon as possible. But instead of doing so, each state sees its own majesty（for it would be absurd to speak of the majesty of a people） precisely in not having to submit to any external legal constraint, and the glory of its ruler consists in his power to order thousands of people to immolate themselves for a cause which does not truly concern them, while he need not himself incur any danger whatsoever.[7] And the main difference between the savage nations of Europe and those of America is that while some American tribes have been entirely eaten up by their enemies, the Europeans know how to make better use of those they have defeated than merely by making a meal of them. They would rather use them to increase the number of their own subjects, thereby augmenting their stock of instruments for conducting even more extensive wars.

Although it is largely concealed by governmental constraints in law-governed civil society, the depravity of human nature is displayed without disguise in the unrestricted relations which obtain between the various nations. It is therefore to be wondered at that the word right has not been completely banished from military politics as superfluous pedantry, and that no state has been bold enough to declare itself publicly in favour of doing so. For Hugo Grotius, Pufendorf, Vattel and the rest（sorry comforters as they are） are still dutifully quoted in justification of military aggression, although their philosophically or diplomatically formulated codes do not and cannot have the slightest legal force, since states as such are not subject to a common external constraint. Yet there is no instance of a state ever having been moved to desist from its purpose by arguments supported by the testimonies of such notable men. This homage which every state pays（in words at least） to the concept of right proves that man possesses a greater moral capacity, still dormant at present, to overcome eventually the evil principle within him（for he cannot deny that it exists）, and to hope that others will do likewise. Otherwise the word right would never be used by states which intend to make war on one another, unless in a derisory sense, as when a certain Gallic prince declared:'Nature has given to the strong the prerogative of making the weak obey them.' The way in which states seek their rights can only be by war, since there is no external tribunal to put their claims to trial. But rights cannot be decided by military victory, and a peace treaty may put an end to the current war, but not to that general warlike condition within which pretexts can always be found for a new war. And indeed, such a state of affairs cannot be pronounced completely unjust, since it allows each party to act as judge in its own cause. Yet while natural right allows us to say of men living in a lawless condition that they ought to abandon it, the right of nations does not allow us to say the same of states. For as states, they already have a lawful internal constitution, and have thus outgrown the coercive right of others to subject them to a wider legal constitution in accordance with their conception of right. On the other hand, reason, as the highest legislative moral power, absolutely condemns war as a test of rights and sets up peace as an immediate duty. But peace can neither be inaugurated nor secured without a general agreement between the nations; thus a particular kind of league, which we might call a pacific federation（foedus pacificum）, is required. It would differ from a peace treaty（pactum pacis） in that the latter terminates one war, whereas the former would seek to end all wars for good. This federation does not aim to acquire any power like that of a state, but merely to preserve and secure the freedom of each state in itself, along with that of the other confederated states, although this does not mean that they need to submit to public laws and to a coercive power which enforces them, as do men in a state of nature. It can be shown that this idea of federalism, extending gradually to encompass all states and thus leading to perpetual peace, is practicable and has objective reality. For if by good fortune one powerful and enlightened nation can form a republic（which is by its nature inclined to seek perpetual peace）, this will provide a focal point for federal association among other states. These will join up with the first one, thus securing the freedom of each state in accordance with the idea of international right, and the whole will gradually spread further and further by a series of alliances of this kind.

It would be understandable for a people to say:‘There shall be no war among us; for we will form ourselves into a state, appointing for ourselves a supreme legislative, executive and juridical power to resolve our conflicts by peaceful means.’ But if this state says:‘There shall be no war between myself and other states, although I do not recognize any supreme legislative power which could secure my rights and whose rights I should in turn secure’, it is impossible to understand what justification I can have for placing any confidence in my rights, unless I can rely on some substitute for the union of civil society, i.e. on a free federation. If the concept of international right is to retain any meaning at all, reason must necessarily couple it with a federation of this kind.

The concept of international right becomes meaningless if interpreted as a right to go to war. For this would make it a right to determine what is lawful not by means of universally valid external laws, but by means of one-sided maxims backed up by physical force. It could be taken to mean that it is perfectly just for men who adopt this attitude to destroy one another, and thus to find perpetual peace in the vast grave where all the horrors of violence and those responsible for them would be buried. There is only one rational way in which states coexisting with other states can emerge from the lawless condition of pure warfare. Just like individual men, they must renounce their savage and lawless freedom, adapt themselves to public coercive laws, and thus form an international state（civitas gentium）, which would necessarily continue to grow until it embraced all the peoples of the earth. But since this is not the will of the nations, according to their present conception of international right（so that they reject in hypothesi what is true in thesi）, the positive idea of a world republic cannot be realized. If all is not to be lost, this can at best find a negative substitute in the shape of an enduring and gradually expanding federation likely to prevent war. The latter may check the current of man's inclination to defy the law and antagonize his fellows, although there will always be a risk of it bursting forth anew. Furor impius intus – fremit horridus ore cruento（Virgil） [‘Wicked Frenzy rages savagely with blood-stained mouth’].[8]

Third Definitive Article of a Perpetual Peace: Cosmopolitan Right shall be limited to Conditions of Universal Hospitality

As in the foregoing articles, we are here concerned not with philanthropy, but with right. In this context, hospitality means the right of a stranger not to be treated with hostility when he arrives on someone else's territory. He can indeed be turned away, if this can be done without causing his death, but he must not be treated with hostility, so long as he behaves in a peaceable manner in the place he happens to be in. The stranger cannot claim the right of a guest to be entertained, for this would require a special friendly agreement whereby he might become a member of the native household for a certain time. He may only claim a right of resort, for all men are entitled to present themselves in the society of others by virtue of their right to communal possession of the earth's surface. Since the earth is a globe, they cannot disperse over an infinite area, but must necessarily tolerate one another's company. And no one originally has any greater right than anyone else to occupy any particular portion of the earth. The community of man is divided by uninhabitable parts of the earth's surface such as oceans and deserts, but even then, the ship or the camel（the ship of the desert） make it possible for them to approach their fellows over these ownerless tracts, and to utilize as a means of social intercourse that right to the earth's surface which the human race shares in common. The inhospitable behaviour of coastal dwellers（as on the Barbary coast） in plundering ships on the adjoining seas or enslaving stranded seafarers, or that of inhabitants of the desert（as with the Arab Bedouins）, who regard their proximity to nomadic tribes as a justification for plundering them, is contrary to natural right. But this natural right of hospitality, i.e. the right of strangers, does not extend beyond those conditions which make it possible for them to attempt to enter into relations with the native inhabitants. In this way, continents distant from each other can enter into peaceful mutual relations which may eventually be regulated by public laws, thus bringing the human race nearer and nearer to a cosmopolitan constitution.

If we compare with this ultimate end the inhospitable conduct of the civilized states of our continent, especially the commercial states, the injustice which they display in visiting foreign countries and peoples（which in their case is the same as conquering them） seems appallingly great. America, the negro countries, the Spice Islands, the Cape, etc. were looked upon at the time of their discovery as ownerless territories; for the native inhabitants were counted as nothing. In East India（Hindustan）, foreign troops were brought in under the pretext of merely setting up trading posts. This led to oppression of the natives, incitement of the various Indian states to widespread wars, famine, insurrection, treachery and the whole litany of evils which can afflict the human race.

China[9] and Japan（Nippon）, having had experience of such guests, have wisely placed restrictions on them. China permits contact with her territories, but not entrance into them, while Japan only allows contact with a single European people, the Dutch, although they are still segregated from the native community like prisoners. The worst（or, from the point of view of moral judgements, the best） thing about all this is that the commercial states do not even benefit by their violence, for all their trading companies are on the point of collapse. The Sugar Islands, that stronghold of the cruellest and most calculated slavery, do not yield any real profit; they serve only the indirect（and not entirely laudable） purpose of training sailors for warships, thereby aiding the prosecution of wars in Europe. And all this is the work of powers who make endless ado about their piety, and who wish to be considered as chosen believers while they live on the fruits of iniquity.

The peoples of the earth have thus entered in varying degrees into a universal community, and it has developed to the point where a violation of rights in one part of the world is felt everywhere. The idea of a cosmopolitan right is therefore not fantastic and overstrained; it is a necessary complement to the unwritten code of political and international right, transforming it into a universal right of humanity. Only under this condition can we flatter ourselves that we are continually advancing towards a perpetual peace.

First Supplement: On the Guarantee of a Perpetual Peace

Perpetual peace is guaranteed by no less an authority than the great artist Nature herself（natura daedala rerum [Nature the contriver of things]）. The mechanical process of nature visibly exhibits the purposive plan of producing concord among men, even against their will and indeed by means of their very discord. This design, if we regard it as a compelling cause whose laws of operation are unknown to us, is called fate. But if we consider its purposive function within the world's development, whereby it appears as the underlying wisdom of a higher cause, showing the way towards the objective goal of the human race and predetermining the world's evolution, we call it providence.[10] We cannot actually observe such an agency in the artifices of nature, nor can we even infer its existence from them. But as with all relations between the form of things and their ultimate purposes, we can and must supply it mentally in order to conceive of its possibility by analogy with human artifices. Its relationship to and conformity with the end which reason directly prescribes to us（i.e. the end of morality） can only be conceived of as an idea. Yet while this idea is indeed far-fetched in theory, it does possess dogmatic validity and has a very real foundation in practice, as with the concept of perpetual peace, which makes it our duty to promote it by using the natural mechanism described above. But in contexts such as this, where we are concerned purely with theory and not with religion, we should also note that it is more in keeping with the limitations of human reason to speak of nature and not of providence, for reason, in dealing with cause and effect relationships, must keep within the bounds of possible experience. Modesty forbids us to speak of providence as something we can recognize, for this would mean donning the wings of Icarus and presuming to approach the mystery of its inscrutable intentions.

But before we define this guarantee more precisely, we must first examine the situation in which nature has placed the actors in her great spectacle, for it is this situation which ultimately demands the guarantee of peace. We may next inquire in what manner the guarantee is provided.

Nature's provisional arrangement is as follows. Firstly, she has taken care that human beings are able to live in all the areas where they are settled. Secondly, she has driven them in all directions by means of war, so that they inhabit even the most inhospitable regions. And thirdly, she has compelled them by the same means to enter into more or less legal relationships. It is in itself wonderful that moss can still grow in the cold wastes around the Arctic Ocean; the reindeer can scrape it out from beneath the snow, and can thus itself serve as nourishment or as a draft animal for the Ostiaks or Samoyeds. Similarly, the sandy salt deserts contain the camel, which seems as if it had been created for travelling over them in order that they might not be left unutilized. But evidence of design in nature emerges even more clearly when we realize that the shores of the Arctic Ocean are inhabited not only by fur-bearing animals, but also by seals, walruses and whales, whose flesh provides food and whose fat provides warmth for the native inhabitants. Nature's care arouses most admiration, however, by carrying driftwood to these treeless regions, without anyone knowing exactly where it comes from. For if they did not have this material, the natives would not be able to construct either boats or weapons, or dwellings in which to live. And they have enough to do making war on the animals to be able to live in peace among themselves. But it was probably nothing but war which drove them into these regions. And the first instrument of war among all the animals which man learned to domesticate in the course of peopling the earth was the horse. For the elephant belongs to that later age of luxury which began after states had been established. The same applies to the art of cultivating certain kinds of grasses known as cereals, whose original nature is now unknown to us, and to the production and refinement of various fruits by transplanting and grafting（in Europe, perhaps only two species were involved, the crab-apple and the wild pear）. Such arts could arise only within established states in which landed property was secure, after men had made the transition to an agricultural way of life, abandoning the lawless freedom they had enjoyed in their previous existence as hunters,[11] fishers and shepherds. Salt and iron were next discovered, and were perhaps the first articles of trade between nations to be in demand everywhere. In this way, nations first entered into peaceful relations with one another, and thus achieved mutual understanding, community of interests and peaceful relations, even with the most distant of their fellows.

In seeing to it that men could live everywhere on earth, nature has at the same time despotically willed that they should live everywhere, even against their own inclinations. And this obligation does not rest upon any concept of duty which might bind them to fulfil it in accordance with a moral law; on the contrary, nature has chosen war as a means of attaining this end.

We can observe nations which reveal the unity of their descent by the unity of their language. This is the case with the Samoyeds on the Arctic Ocean and another people with a similar language living two hundred miles away in the Altai Mountains; another people of Mongol extraction, given to horsemanship and hence to warlike pursuits, has pushed its way between them, thus driving the one part of the tribe far away from the other into the most inhospitable Arctic regions, where it would certainly not have gone by its own inclinations.[12] In the same way, the Finns in the northernmost region of Europe（where they are known as Lapps） are now far separated from the Hungarians, to whom they are linguistically related, by Gothic and Sarmatian peoples who have pushed their way in between them. And what else but war, nature's means of peopling the whole earth, can have driven the Eskimos so far North – for they are quite distinct from all other American races, and are perhaps descended from European adventurers of ancient times; the Pesherae have been driven South into Tierra del Fuego in the same manner. War itself, however, does not require any particular kind of motivation, for it seems to be ingrained in human nature, and even to be regarded as something noble to which man is inspired by his love of honour, without selfish motives. Thus warlike courage, with the American savages as with their European counterparts in medieval times, is held to be of great and immediate value– and not just in times of war（as might be expected）, but also in order that there may be war. Thus wars are often started merely to display this quality, so that war itself is invested with an inherent dignity; for even philosophers have eulogized it as a kind of ennobling influence on man, forgetting the Greek saying that ‘war is bad in that it produces more evil people than it destroys’. So much, then, for what nature does to further her own end with respect to the human race as an animal species.

We now come to the essential question regarding the prospect of perpetual peace. What does nature do in relation to the end which man's own reason prescribes to him as a duty, i.e. how does nature help to promote his moral purpose? And how does nature guarantee that what man ought to do by the laws of his freedom（but does not do） will in fact be done through nature's compulsion, without prejudice to the free agency of man? This question arises, moreover, in all three areas of public right–in political, international and cosmopolitan right. For if I say that nature wills that this or that should happen, this does not mean that nature imposes on us a duty to do it, for duties can only be imposed by practical reason, acting without any external constraint. On the contrary, nature does it herself, whether we are willing or not: fata volentem ducunt, nolentem trahunt [‘the fates lead him who is willing, but drag him who is unwilling’].

1. Even if people were not compelled by internal dissent to submit to the coercion of public laws, war would produce the same effect from outside. For in accordance with the natural arrangement described above, each people would find itself confronted by another neighbouring people pressing in upon it, thus forcing it to form itself internally into a state in order to encounter the other as an armed power. Now the republican constitution is the only one which does complete justice to the rights of man. But it is also the most difficult to establish, and even more so to preserve, so that many maintain that it would only be possible within a state of angels, since men, with their self-seeking inclinations, would be incapable of adhering to a constitution of so sublime a nature. But in fact, nature comes to the aid of the universal and rational human will, so admirable in itself but so impotent in practice, and makes use of precisely those self-seeking inclinations in order to do so. It only remains for men to create a good organization for the state, a task which is well within their capability, and to arrange it in such a way that their self-seeking energies are opposed to one another, each thereby neutralizing or eliminating the destructive effects of the rest. And as far as reason is concerned, the result is the same as if man's selfish tendencies were non-existent, so that man, even if he is not morally good in himself, is nevertheless compelled to be a good citizen. As hard as it may sound, the problem of setting up a state can be solved even by a nation of devils（so long as they possess understanding）. It may be stated as follows:‘In order to organize a group of rational beings who together require universal laws for their survival, but of whom each separate individual is secretly inclined to exempt himself from them, the constitution must be so designed that, although the citizens are opposed to one another in their private attitudes, these opposing views may inhibit one another in such a way that the public conduct of the citizens will be the same as if they did not have such evil attitudes.' A problem of this kind must be soluble. For such a task does not involve the moral improvement of man; it only means finding out how the mechanism of nature can be applied to men in such a manner that the antagonism of their hostile attitudes will make them compel one another to submit to coercive laws, thereby producing a condition of peace within which the laws can be enforced. We can even see this principle at work among the actually existing（although as yet very imperfectly organized） states. For in their external relations, they have already approached what the idea of right prescribes, although the reason for this is certainly not their internal moral attitudes. In the same way, we cannot expect their moral attitudes to produce a good political constitution; on the contrary, it is only through the latter that the people can be expected to attain a good level of moral culture. Thus that mechanism of nature by which selfish inclinations are naturally opposed to one another in their external relations can be used by reason to facilitate the attainment of its own end, the reign of established right. Internal and external peace are thereby furthered and assured, so far as it lies within the power of the state itself to do so. We may therefore say that nature irresistibly wills that right should eventually gain the upper hand. What men have neglected to do will ultimately happen of its own accord, albeit with much inconvenience. As Bouterwek puts it:'If the reed is bent too far, it breaks; and he who wants too much gets nothing.'

2. The idea of international right presupposes the separate existence of many independent adjoining states. And such a state of affairs is essentially a state of war, unless there is a federal union to prevent hostilities breaking out. But in the light of the idea of reason, this state is still to be preferred to an amalgamation of the separate nations under a single power which has overruled the rest and created a universal monarchy. For the laws progressively lose their impact as the government increases its range, and a soulless despotism, after crush-ing the germs of goodness, will finally lapse into anarchy. It is nonetheless the desire of every state（or its ruler） to achieve lasting peace by thus dominating the whole world, if at all possible. But nature wills it otherwise, and uses two means to separate the nations and prevent them from intermingling–linguistic and religious[13] differences. These may certainly occasion mutual hatred and provide pretexts for wars, but as culture grows and men gradually move towards greater agreement over their principles, they lead to mutual understanding and peace. And unlike that universal despotism which saps all man's energies and ends in the graveyard of freedom, this peace is created and guaranteed by an equilibrium of forces and a most vigorous rivalry.

3. Thus nature wisely separates the nations, although the will of each individual state, even basing its arguments on international right, would gladly unite them under its own sway by force or by cunning. On the other hand, nature also unites nations which the concept of cosmopolitan right would not have protected from violence and war, and does so by means of their mutual self-interest. For the spirit of commerce sooner or later takes hold of every people, and it cannot exist side by side with war. And of all the powers（or means） at the disposal of the power of the state, financial power can probably be relied on most. Thus states find themselves compelled to promote the noble cause of peace, though not exactly from motives of morality. And wherever in the world there is a threat of war breaking out, they will try to prevent it by mediation, just as if they had entered into a permanent league for this purpose; for by the very nature of things, large military alliances can only rarely be formed, and will even more rarely be successful.

In this way, nature guarantees perpetual peace by the actual mechanism of human inclinations. And while the likelihood of its being attained is not sufficient to enable us to prophesy the future theoretically, it is enough for practical purposes. It makes it our duty to work our way towards this goal, which is more than an empty chimera.

Second Supplement: Secret Article of a Perpetual Peace

In transactions involving public right, a secret article（regarded objectively or in terms of its content） is a contradiction. But in subjective terms, i.e. in relation to the sort of person who dictates it, an article may well contain a secret element, for the person concerned may consider it prejudicial to his own dignity to name himself publicly as its originator.

The only article of this kind is embodied in the following sentence: 'The maxims of the philosophers on the conditions under which public peace is possible shall be consulted by states which are armed for war.'

Although it may seem humiliating for the legislative authority of a state, to which we must naturally attribute the highest degree of wisdom, to seek instruction from subjects（the philosophers） regarding the principles on which it should act in its relations with other states, it is nevertheless extremely advisable that it should do so. The state will therefore invite their help silently, making a secret of it. In other words, it will allow them to speak freely and publicly on the universal maxims of warfare and peace-making, and they will indeed do so of their own accord if no one forbids their discussions. And no special formal arrangement among the states is necessary to enable them to agree on this issue, for the agreement already lies in the obligations imposed by universal human reason in its capacity as a moral legislator. This does not, however, imply that the state must give the principles of the philosopher precedence over the pronouncements of the jurist（who represents the power of the state）, but only that the philosopher should be given a hearing. The jurist, who has taken as his symbol the scales of right and the sword of justice, usually uses the latter not merely to keep any extraneous influences away from the former, but will throw the sword into one of the scales if it refuses to sink（vae victis!）. Unless the jurist is at the same time a philosopher, at any rate in moral matters, he is under the greatest temptation to do this, for his business is merely to apply existing laws, and not to inquire whether they are in need of improvement. He acts as if this truly low rank of his faculty were in fact one of the higher ones, for the simple reason that it is accompanied by power（as is also the case with two of the other faculties）. But the philosophical faculty occupies a very low position in face of the combined power of the others. Thus we are told, for instance, that philosophy is the handmaid of theology, and something similar in relation to the others. But it is far from clear whether this handmaid bears the torch before her gracious lady, or carries the train behind.

It is not to be expected that kings will philosophize or that philosophers will become kings; nor is it to be desired, however, since the possession of power inevitably corrupts the free judgement of reason. Kings or sovereign peoples（i.e. those governing themselves by egalitarian laws） should not, however, force the class of philosophers to disappear or to remain silent, but should allow them to speak publicly. This is essential to both in order that light may be thrown on their affairs. And since the class of philosophers is by nature incapable of forming seditious factions or clubs, they cannot incur suspicion of disseminating propaganda.

---

[1] A hereditary kingdom is not a state which can be inherited by another state. Only the right to rule over it may be bequeathed to another physical person. In this case, the state acquires a ruler, but the ruler as such（i.e. as one who already has another kingdom） does not acquire the state.

[2] It has hitherto been doubted, not without justification, whether there can be permissive laws（leges permissivae） in addition to preceptive laws（leges praeceptivae） and prohibitive laws（leges prohibitivae）. For all laws embody an element of objective practical necessity as a reason for certain actions, whereas a permission depends only upon practical contingencies. Thus a permissive law would be a compulsion to do something which one cannot be compelled to do, and if the object of the law were the same as that of the permission, a contradiction would result. But in the permissive law contained in the second article above, the initial prohibition applies only to the mode of acquiring a right in the future（e.g. by inheritance）, whereas the exemption from this prohibition（i.e. the permissive part of the law） applies to the state of political possessions in the present. For in accordance with a permissive law of natural right, this present state can be allowed to remain even although the state of nature has been abandoned for that of civil society. And even if these present possessions are unlawful, they are nevertheless honest（possessio putativa）. A putative possession is prohibited, however, as soon as it has been recognized as such, both in the state of nature and after the subsequent transition to civil society（if the mode of acquisition is the same）. And continued possession could not be permitted if the supposed acquisition had been made in the state of civil society, for it would then have to end immediately, as an offence against right, as soon as its unlawfulness had been discovered.

My intention here was merely to point out briefly to exponents of natural right the concept of a permissive law, which automatically presents itself within the systematic divisions of reason. It is especially noteworthy since it is frequently used in civil or statutory law, with the one difference that the prohibitive part of the law exists independently, and the permissive part is not included within the law itself as a limiting condition（as it ought to be）, but added to cover exceptional cases. Such laws usually state that this or that is prohibited, except in cases 1, 2 or 3, and so on ad infinitum, for permissive clauses are only added to the law fortuitously, by a random review of particular cases, and not in accordance with any definite principle. Otherwise, the limiting conditions would have had to be included in the actual formula of the prohibitive law, whereby it would have become a permissive law in itself. It is therefore to be regretted that the ingenious but unsolved competition question submitted by that wise and clear-sighted gentleman, Count Windischgrätz, was so soon abandoned, for it might have solved the legal difficulty we are at present discussing. For the possibility of finding a universal formula like those of mathematics is the only true test of consistent legislation, and without it, the so-called ius certum must remain no more than a pious hope. Otherwise, we shall only have general laws（i.e. laws valid in general）, but no universal laws（i.e. laws which are generally valid） such as the concept of a law seems to demand.

[3] It is usually assumed that one cannot take hostile action against anyone unless one has already been actively injured by them. This is perfectly correct if both parties are living in a legal civil state. For the fact that the one has entered such a state gives the required guarantee to the other, since both are subject to the same authority. But man（or an individual people） in a mere state of nature robs me of any such security and injures me by virtue of this very state in which he coexists with me. He may not have injured me actively（facto）, but he does injure me by the very lawlessness of his state（statu iniusto）, for he is a permanent threat to me, and I can require him either to enter into a common lawful state along with me or to move away from my vicinity. Thus the postulate on which all the following articles are based is that all men who can at all influence one another must adhere to some kind of civil constitution. But any legal constitution, as far as the persons who live under it are concerned, will conform to one of the three following types:

（1） a constitution based on the civil right of individuals within a nation（ius civitatis）.

（2） a constitution based on the international right of states in their relationships with one another（ius gentium）.

（3） a constitution based on cosmopolitan right, in so far as individuals and states, coexisting in an external relationship of mutual influences, may be regarded as citizens of a universal state of mankind（ius cosmopoliticum）. This classification, with respect to the idea of a perpetual peace, is not arbitrary, but necessary. For if even one of the parties were able to influence the others physically and yet itself remained in a state of nature, there would be a risk of war, which it is precisely the aim of the above articles to prevent.

[4] Rightful（i.e. external） freedom cannot, as is usually thought, be defined as a warrant to do whatever one wishes unless it means doing injustice to others. For what is meant by a warrant? It means a possibility of acting in a certain way so long as this action does not do any injustice to others. Thus the definition would run as follows: freedom is the possibility of acting in ways which do no injustice to others. That is, we do no injustice to others（no matter what we may actually do） if we do no injustice to others. Thus the definition is an empty tautology. In fact, my external and rightful freedom should be defined as a warrant to obey no external laws except those to which I have been able to give my own consent. Similarly, external and rightful equality within a state is that relationship among the citizens whereby no one can put anyone else under a legal obligation without submitting simultaneously to a law which requires that he can himself be put under the same kind of obligation by the other person.（And we do not need to define the principle of legal dependence, since it is always implied in the concept of a political constitution.） The validity of these innate and inalienable rights, the necessary property of mankind, is confirmed and enhanced by the principle that man may have lawful relations even with higher beings（if he believes in the latter）. For he may consider himself as a citizen of a transcendental world, to which the same principles apply. And as regards my freedom, I am not under any obligation even to divine laws（which I can recognize by reason alone）, except in so far as I have been able to give my own consent to them; for I can form a conception of the divine will only in terms of the law of freedom of my own reason. As for the principle of equality in relation to the most exalted being I can conceive of, apart from God（e.g. a power such as Aeon）, there is no reason, if I and this higher being are both doing our duty in our own stations, why it should be my duty to obey while he should enjoy the right to command. But the reason why this principle of equality（unlike that of freedom） does not apply to a relationship towards God, is that God is the only being for whom the concept of duty ceases to be valid.

But as for the right of equality of all citizens as subjects, we may ask whether a hereditary aristocracy is admissible. The answer to this question will depend entirely on whether more importance is attached to the superior rank granted by the state to one subject over another than is attached to merit, or vice versa. Now it is obvious that if rank is conferred according to birth, it will be quite uncertain whether merit（skill and devotion within one's office） will accompany it; it will be tantamount to conferring a position of command upon a favoured individual without any merit on his part, and this could never be approved by the general will of the people in an original contract, which is, after all, the principle behind all rights. For it does not necessarily follow that a nobleman is also a noble man. And as for a nobility of office, i.e. the rank of a higher magistracy which can be attained by merit, the rank does not attach as a possession to the person, but to the post occupied by the person, and this does not violate the principle of equality. For when a person lays down his office, he simultaneously resigns his rank and again becomes one of the people.

[5] Many have criticized the high-sounding appellations which are often bestowed on a ruler（e.g.‘the divine anointed’, or‘the executor and representative of the divine will on earth’） as gross and extravagant flatteries, but it seems to me without reason. Far from making the ruler of the land arrogant, they ought rather to fill his soul with humility. For if he is a man of understanding（which we must certainly assume）, he will reflect that he has taken over an office which is too great for a human being, namely that of administering God's most sacred institution on earth, the rights of man; he will always live in fear of having in any way injured God's most valued possession.

[6] Mallet du Pan, in his flamboyant but hollow and empty style, boasts of having at last, after many years of experience, become convinced of the truth of Pope's famous saying:‘For forms of government let fools contest; Whate'er is best administered is best.’If this means that the best administered government is the best administered, he has cracked a nut（as Swift puts it） and been rewarded with a worm. But if it means that the best administered government is also the best kind of government（i.e. the best constitution）, it is completely false, for examples of good governments prove nothing whatsoever about kinds of government. Who, indeed, governed better than a Titus or a Marcus Aurelius, and yet the one left a Domitian as his successor, and the other a Commodus. And this could not have happened under a good constitution, since their unsuitability for the post of ruler was known early enough, and the power of their predecessors was great enough to have excluded them from the succession.

[7] Thus a Bulgarian prince, replying to the Greek Emperor who had kindly offered to settle his dispute with him by a duel, declared:‘A smith who possesses tongs will not lift the glowing iron out of the coals with his own hands.’

[8] At the end of a war, when peace is concluded, it would not be inappropriate for a people to appoint a day of atonement after the festival of thanksgiving. Heaven would be invoked in the name of the state to forgive the human race for the great sin of which it continues to be guilty, since it will not accommodate itself to a lawful constitution in international relations. Proud of its independence, each state prefers to employ the barbarous expedient of war, although war cannot produce the desired decision on the rights of particular states. The thanksgivings for individual victories during a war, the hymns which are sung（in the style of the Israelites） to the Lord of Hosts, contrast no less markedly with the moral conception of a father of mankind. For besides displaying indifference to the way in which nations pursue their mutual rights（deplorable though it is）, they actually rejoice at having annihilated numerous human beings or their happiness.

[9] If we wish to give this great empire the name by which it calls itself（i.e. China, not Sina or any similar form）, we need only consult Georgi's Alphabetum Tibetanum, pp. 651–654, note b in particular. According to Professor Fischer of Petersburg, it actually has no fixed name which it might apply to itself; the commonest one is still the word Kin, which means gold（the Tibetans, however, call this Ser）, which explains why the emperor is called King of Gold（i.e. of the fairest land in the world）. The word is apparently pronounced Chin in the land itself, but expressed as Kin by the Italian missionaries, who cannot pronounce the correct guttural sound. It can also be seen that what the Romans called the land of the people of Ser was in fact China, and silk was brought from there to Europe via Greater Tibet（probably crossing Lesser Tibet, Bukhara and Persia）. This led to numerous speculations on the antiquity of this extraordinary state as compared with that of Hindustan, and on its relations with Tibet as well as with Japan. But the name Sina or Tschina, which neighbouring countries allegedly use of it, leads nowhere.

Perhaps the ancient but hitherto obscure community between Europe and Tibet can be explained from what Hesychius has recorded of the hierophant's cryΚονζ'Ομπαζ（Konx Ompax） in the Eleusinian Mysteries（cf. Journey of the Younger Anacharsis, Part Ⅴ, p. 447 et seq.）. For according to Georgi's Alphabetum Tibetanum, the word Concioa means god, and it markedly resembles Konx, while Pahcio（ibid. p. 520）, which the Greeks might easily have pronounced pax, means promulgator legis, the divinity which pervades the whole of nature（also called Cencresi, p. 177）. But Om, which La Croze translates as benedictus（blessed）, can scarcely mean anything other than beatific if applied to the deity（p. 507）. When P. Francisco Orazio asked the Tibetan lamas how they conceived of god （Concioa）, he always received the answer:'God is the community of all the holy ones'（i.e. the community of blessed souls, at last reunited in the deity by being reborn as lamas after numerous migrations through all kinds of bodies, and thereby transformed into beings worthy of adoration – p.223）. Thus the mysterious name Konx Ompax might designate that holy（Konx）, heavenly（Om） and wise（Pax） supreme being who pervades the whole world, i.e. nature personified. As used in the Greek mysteries, it may well have signified monotheism to the epopts, as distinct from the polytheism of the uninitiated mass, although it savoured of atheism to P. Orazio（loc. cit.）. Our earlier considerations should help to explain how this mysterious name reached the Greeks from Tibet; conversely, this influence makes it appear probable that Europe at an early date had contact with China by way of Tibet, perhaps even earlier than with India.

[10] In the mechanism of nature, of which man（as a sensory being） is a part, there is evident a fundamental form on which its very existence depends. This form becomes intelligible to us only if we attribute it to the design of a universal creator who has determined it in advance. We call this predetermining influence divine providence, and further define it as original providence in so far as it is active from the earliest times onwards（providentia conditrix; semel iussit, semper parent [As soon as he has given the command, they obey without fail] – Augustine）. In as much as it sustains the course of nature in accordance with purposive universal laws, we call it ruling providence（providentia gubernatrix）. If it realizes particular ends which man could not have foreseen and whose existence can only be guessed at from the results, it is termed guiding providence（providentia directrix）. And finally, if individual events are regarded as divinely intended, we no longer speak of providence but of a special dispensation（directio extraordinaria）. But it is foolish presumption for man to claim that he can recognize this as such, since it implies that a miracle has taken place, even if the events are not specifically described as miraculous. For however pious and humble it may sound, it is absurd and self-conceited for anyone to conclude from a single event that the efficient cause is governed by a special principle, or that the event in question is an end in itself and not just the natural and mechanical consequence of another end which is completely unknown to us. Similarly, it is false and self-contradictory to classify providence in terms of worldly objects（materialiter）, dividing it up into general and particular, as occurs in the doctrine that providence takes care to preserve the various species of creatures, but leaves chance to look after the individuals; for the whole point of saying that providence applies in general is that no single object should be excepted from it. This classification, however, was probably meant to indicate that the intentions of providence are carried out in different ways（formaliter）. These might be ordinary（e.g. the annual death and revival of nature with the changes of seasons） or extraordinary（e.g. the transporting of wood by Ocean currents to Arctic coasts where it cannot grow, thus providing for the native inhabitants, who could not live without it）. In the latter case, while we can well explain the physico-mechanical cause of the phenomena in question（e.g. by the fact that the riverbanks in temperate lands are covered in forests, so that the trees may fall into the rivers and be carried further a field by currents like the Gulf Stream）, we must not on the other hand overlook teleology, which indicates the foresight of a wise agency governing nature. But the conception, current in the academic world, of a divine participation or collaboration（concursus） in effects experienced in the world of the senses, is superfluous. For firstly, it is self-contradictory to try to harness disparates together（gryphes iungere equis [to harness griffins with horses]）, and to imply that a being who is himself the complete cause of the world's developments has to supplement his own predetermining providence during the course of world events（so that it must originally have been inadequate）; for example, it is absurd to say that after God, the doctor acted as an assistant in curing the patient – causa solitaria non invat [a single cause does not suffice]. God is the creator of the doctor and of all his medicaments, so that the effect must be ascribed entirely to him if we are to ascend to that supreme original cause which is theoretically beyond our comprehension. Alternatively, it can be ascribed entirely to the doctor, in so far as we treat the event in question as belonging to the order of nature and as capable of explanation within the causal series of earthly occurrences. And secondly, if we adopt such attitudes, we are deprived of all definite principles by which we might judge effects. But the concept of a divine concursus is completely acceptable and indeed necessary in the moral and practical sense, which refers exclusively to the transcendental world. For example, we may say that we should never cease to strive towards goodness, for we believe that God, even by means which we cannot comprehend, will make up for our own lack of righteousness so long as our attitude is sincere. It is, however, self-evident that no one should use such arguments to explain a good deed, regarded as a secular event, for this would presuppose theoretical knowledge of the transcendental, which it is absurd for us to claim.

[11] Of all ways of life, that of the hunter is undoubtedly most at odds with a civilized constitution. For families, having to live in separation, soon become strangers to each other, and subsequently, being scattered about in wide forests, they treat each other with hostility, since each requires a large area to provide itself with food and clothing. The command addressed to Noah forbidding the eating of blood（Genesis 9, 4–6） seems to have been originally nothing else but a prohibition of the hunter's way of life. For this must often involve eating uncooked meat, and if the latter is forbidden, the first is automatically ruled out too. This prohibition, often reiterated, was a condition later imposed by the Jewish Christians upon the newly accepted Christians of heathen origin, albeit with a different intention（Acts 15, 20 and 21, 25）.

[12] The following question might be raised. If nature intended that these frozen shores should not remain uninhabited, what will happen to their inhabitants if nature, as indeed may well happen, ceases to provide them with driftwood? For we may well believe that the natives of temperate zones, as their culture progresses, will make better use of the wood which grows on the banks of their rivers, and will not allow it to fall into them and be swept out to sea. I should reply that those who live on the Ob, the Yenisei, the Lena etc. will supply them with it commercially, bartering it for the animal products in which the Arctic coasts are so plentiful – but only after nature has compelled them to live in peace with one another.

[13] Religious differences – an odd expression! As if we were to speak of different moralities. There may certainly be different historical confessions, although these have nothing to do with religion itself but only with changes in the means used to further religion, and are thus the province of historical research. And there may be just as many different religious books（the Zend-Avesta, the Vedas, the Koran, etc.）. But there can only be one religion which is valid for all men and at all times. Thus the different confessions can scarcely be more than the vehicles of religion; these are fortuitous, and may vary with differences in time or place.

Appendix

I

On the Disagreement between Morals and Politics in Relation to Perpetual Peace

Morality, as a collection of absolutely binding laws by which our actions ought to be governed, belongs essentially, in an objective sense, to the practical sphere. And if we have once acknowledged the authority of this concept of duty, it is patently absurd to say that we cannot act as the moral laws require. For if this were the case, the concept of duty would automatically be dropped from morals（ultra posse nemo obligatur [no one is obliged to do anything he is incapable of doing]）. Hence there can be no conflict between politics, as an applied branch of right, and morality, as a theoretical branch of right（i.e. between theory and practice）; for such a conflict could occur only if morality were taken to mean a general doctrine of expediency, i.e. a theory of the maxims by which one might select the most useful means of furthering one's own advantage – and this would be tantamount to denying that morality exists.

If politics were to say: ‘Be ye therefore wise as serpents’, morality might add, by way of qualification: ‘and harmless as doves’. If these two precepts cannot exist together within a single commandment, then there is indeed a disagreement between politics and morality. But if the two are to be united, it is absurd to suppose that they are in opposition, and the question of how such a conflict could be resolved cannot even be posed as a mental exercise. It is true, alas, that the saying ‘Honesty is the best policy’ embodies a theory which is frequently contradicted by practice. Yet the equally theoretical proposition ‘Honesty is better than any policy’ infinitely transcends all objections, and it is indeed an indispensable condition of any policy whatsoever. The god of morality does not yield to Jupiter, the custodian of violence, for even Jupiter is still subject to fate. In short, reason is not sufficiently enlightened to discover the whole series of predetermining causes which would allow it to predict accurately the happy or unhappy consequences of human activities as dictated by the mechanism of nature; it can only hope that the result will meet with its wishes. But reason at all times shows us clearly enough what we have to do in order to remain on the paths of duty, as the rules of wisdom require, and thus shows us the way towards our ultimate goal.

But the man of practice, to whom morality is pure theory, coldly repudiates our well-intentioned hopes, even if he does concede that we can do what we ought to do. He bases his argument on the claim that we can tell in advance from human nature that man will never want to do what is necessary in order to attain the goal of eternal peace. It is perfectly true that the will of all individual men to live in accordance with principles of freedom within a lawful constitution（i.e. the distributive unity of the will of all） is not sufficient for this purpose. Before so difficult a problem can be solved, all men together（i.e. the collective unity of the combined will） must desire to attain this goal; only then can civil society exist as a single whole. Since an additional unifying cause must therefore overrule the differences in the particular wishes of all individuals before a common will can arise, and since no single individual can create it, the only conceivable way of executing the original idea in practice, and hence of inaugurating a state of right, is by force. On its coercive authority, public right will subsequently be based.

We can certainly expect in advance that there will be considerable deviations in actual experience from the original theoretical idea. For we cannot assume that the moral attitude of the legislator will be such that, after the disorderly mass has been united into a people, he will leave them to create a lawful constitution by their own common will.

It might thus be said that, once a person has the power in his own hands, he will not let the people prescribe laws for him. Similarly, a state which is self-governing and free from all external laws will not let itself become dependent on the judgement of other states in seeking to uphold its rights against them. And even a whole continent, if it feels itself in a superior position to another one, will not hesitate to plunder it or actually to extend its rule over it, irrespective of whether the other is in its way or not. In this way, all the plans which theory lays for political, international or cosmopolitan right dissolve into empty and impracticable ideals; but a practice which is based on empirical principles of human nature, and which does not consider it beneath its dignity to shape its maxims according to the way of the world, can alone hope to find a solid foundation for its system of political opportunism.

If, of course, there is neither freedom nor any moral law based on freedom, but only a state in which everything that happens or can happen simply obeys the mechanical workings of nature, politics would mean the art of utilizing nature for the government of men, and this would constitute the whole of practical wisdom; the concept of right would then be only an empty idea. But if we consider it absolutely necessary to couple the concept of right with politics, or even to make it a limiting condition of politics, it must be conceded that the two are compatible. And I can indeed imagine a moral politician, i.e. someone who conceives of the principles of political expediency in such a way that they can co-exist with morality, but I cannot imagine a political moralist, i.e. one who fashions his morality to suit his own advantage as a statesman.

The moral politician will make it a principle that, if any faults which could not have been prevented are discovered in the political constitution or in the relations between states, it is a duty, especially for heads of state, to see to it that they are corrected as soon as possible; it should be ensured that these political institutions are made to conform to natural right, which stands before us as a model in the idea of practical reason, and this should be done even if selfish interests have to be sacrificed. It would be contrary to all political expediency, which in this case agrees with morality, to destroy any of the existing bonds of political or cosmopolitan union before a better constitution has been prepared to take their place. And while it would be absurd to demand that their faults be repaired at once and by violent measures, it can still be required of the individual in power that he should be intimately aware of the maxim that changes for the better are necessary, in order that the constitution may constantly approach the optimum end prescribed by laws of right. A state may well govern itself in a republican way, even if its existing constitution provides for a despotic ruling power; and it will gradually come to the stage where the people can be influenced by the mere idea of the law's authority, just as if it were backed up by physical force, so that they will be able to create for themselves a legislation ultimately founded on right. If, however, a more lawful constitution were attained by unlawful means, i.e. by a violent revolution resulting from a previous bad constitution, it would then no longer be permissible to lead the people back to the original one, even although everyone who had interfered with the old constitution by violence or conspiracy would rightly have been subject to the penalties of rebellion during the revolution itself. But as for the external relationship between states, no state can be required to relinquish its constitution, even if the latter is despotic（and hence stronger in relation to external enemies）, so long as this state is in danger of being engulfed at any moment by other states; hence while plans must be made for political improvement, it must be permissible to delay their execution until a better opportunity arises.[14]

It may well be the case that despotic moralists, i.e. those who err in practice, frequently act contrary to political prudence by adopting or recommending premature measures, yet experience must gradually bring them out of their opposition to nature and make them adopt better ways. But moralizing politicians, for what they are worth, try to cover up political principles which are contrary to right, under the pretext that human nature is incapable of attaining the good which reason prescribes as an idea. They thereby make progress impossible, and eternalize the violation of right.

Instead of applying the correct practice they boast of, these worldly-wise politicians resort to despicable tricks, for they are only out to exploit the people（and if possible the whole world） by influencing the current ruling power in such a way as to ensure their own private advantage. They are just like lawyers（i.e. those for whom law is a profession, not a matter of legislation） who have found their way into politics. For since it is not their business to argue over legislation itself, but to fulfil the present instructions of the law of the land, they will always regard the existing legal constitution（or, if this is altered by a higher authority, the subsequent one） as the best, because everything in it will follow a proper mechanical order. But this skill in being all things to all men may give them the illusion that they can also pass judgement, in accordance with concepts of right（i.e. a priori, not empirically）, on the principles of any political constitution whatsoever. And they may boast that they know men（which is certainly to be expected, since they have to do with so many of them）, although they do not know man and his potentialities, for this requires a higher anthropological vantage-point.

Armed with concepts such as these, they proceed to take up political and international law as prescribed by reason. But they cannot take this step except in a spirit of chicanery, for they will follow their usual procedure of applying despotically formulated coercive laws in a mechanical manner, even in a sphere where the concepts of reason only allow for lawful coercion, in keeping with the principles of freedom, which alone make possible a rightfully established political constitution. The supposed practitioner believes he can solve this problem empirically, ignoring the idea of reason and drawing on experience of how the（largely unlawful） constitutions which have hitherto survived best were organized. And the maxims which he employs for this purpose, although he does not make them public, can roughly be expressed in the following sophistries:

1. Fac et excusa [Act first and justify your actions later]. Seize any favourable opportunity of arbitrarily expropriating a right which the state enjoys over its own or over a neighbouring people; the justification can be presented far more easily and elegantly and the use of violence can be glossed over far more readily after the fact than if one were to think out convincing reasons in advance and then wait for counter-arguments to be offered. This is particularly true of the first case, where the highest power in the state is also the legislative authority which must be obeyed without argument. Such audacity itself gives a certain appearance of inner conviction that the deed is right and just, and the god of success（bonus eventus） will then be the best of advocates.

2. Si fecisti, nega [If you are the perpetrator, deny it]. If you have committed a crime, for instance, in order to lead your people to desperation and thence to rebellion, deny that the guilt is yours. Maintain instead that it arose from the intransigence of the subjects; or if you have seized control of a neighbouring people, say that the very nature of man is responsible, for if he does not anticipate others in resorting to violence, he may count on it that they will anticipate and overpower him.

3. Divide et impera [Divide and rule]. That is, if there are certain privileged persons among the people who have chosen you for their ruler merely as primus inter pares [the chief among his peers], make sure to disunite them among themselves and set them at odds with the people. And if you back up the people with false promises of greater freedom, everything will be dependent on your absolute will. Or if you are dealing with foreign states, to stir up discord among them is a fairly certain method of subjugating them one by one while merely appearing to lend support to the weaker.

No one, it must be confessed, will be taken in by these political maxims, for they are all generally known. And it is not the case that men are ashamed of them, as if their injustice were all too obviously visible. For great powers are never embarrassed about how the common mass might judge them, but only about one another's opinions. And as for the principles listed above, the powers will feel no shame if they become publicly known, but only if they fail to succeed, for they are all agreed on the moral status of the maxims. They are left with political honour, on which they can always rely if they enlarge their power by whatever means they care to use.[15] From all these twists and turns of an immoral and opportunistic doctrine of how to create peace among men out of the warlike state of nature, this much at least is clear: men can as little escape the concept of right in their private relations as in their public ones, and they will not openly dare to base their politics on opportunistic machinations alone and thus to refuse altogether to obey any concept of public right（which is particularly remarkable in the case of international right）. Instead, they pay such concepts all the honour they deserve, even although they may also devise a hundred excuses and subterfuges to get out of observing them in practice and to pretend that brute force and cunning can possess that authority which is the source and unifying bond of all right.

In order to end this sophistry（if not the actual injustice which it covers over） and to make the false representatives of those who wield power on earth confess that they are advocating might instead of right（adopting as they do the tone of persons entitled to give orders）, it will be well to discover the ultimate principle from which the end of perpetual peace is derived, and thus to destroy the illusions with which men deceive themselves and others. It must likewise be demonstrated that all the evil which stands in the way of perpetual peace results from the fact that the political moralist starts out from the very point at which the moral politician rightly stops; he thus makes his principles subordinate to his end（i.e. puts the cart before the horse）, thereby defeating his own purpose of reconciling politics with morality.

To ensure that practical philosophy is at one with itself, it is first necessary to resolve the question of whether, in problems of practical reason, we should begin with its material principle, i.e. its end, as an object of the will, or with its formal principle, i.e. the principle which rests on man's freedom in his external relations and which states:‘Act in such a way that you can wish your maxim to become a universal law（irrespective of what the end in view may be）.’

The latter principle must undoubtedly take precedence. For as a principle of right, it has absolute necessity, whereas the former is necessary only if the empirical conditions which permit the proposed end to be realized can be assumed to exist. And if this end were also a duty, as with the end of perpetual peace, it would itself have to be deduced from the formal principle of the maxims governing external action. Now the former（i.e. material） principle is that of the political moralist, and it treats the problems of political, international and cosmopolitan right as mere technical tasks; but the latter（i.e. formal） principle is that of the moral politician, for whom it is a moral task, totally different in its execution from technical problems, to bring about perpetual peace, which is desirable not just as a physical good, but also as a state of affairs which must arise out of recognizing one's duty.

For the solution of the first problem（that of political expediency）, much knowledge of nature is required, so that one can use its mechanism to promote the intended end. Nevertheless, all this is uncertain so far as its repercussions on perpetual peace are concerned, no matter which of the three departments of public right one considers. For it is uncertain whether the obedience and prosperity of the people can be better maintained over a long period by strict discipline or by appeals to their vanity, by conferring supreme power upon a single individual or upon several united leaders, or perhaps merely by means of an aristocracy of office or by popular internal government. History offers examples of the opposite effect being produced by all forms of government, with the single exception of genuine republicanism, which, however, could be the object only of a moral politician. And it is even more uncertain in the case of an international right supposedly based on statutes worked out by ministers, for it is in fact a mere word with nothing behind it, since it depends upon treaties which contain in the very act of their conclusion the secret reservation that they may be violated. On the other hand, the solution of the second problem, that of political wisdom, presents itself as it were automatically; it is obvious to everyone, it defeats all artifices, and leads straight to its goal, so long as we prudently remember that it cannot be realized by violent and precipitate means, but must be steadily approached as favourable opportunities present themselves.

We may therefore offer the following advice:‘Seek ye first the kingdom of pure practical reason and its righteousness, and your object（the blessing of perpetual peace） will be added unto you.’ For morality, with regard to its principles of public right（hence in relation to a political code which can be known a priori）, has the peculiar feature that the less it makes its conduct depend upon the end it envisages（whether this be a physical or moral advantage）, the more it will in general harmonize with this end. And the reason for this is that it is precisely the general will as it is given a priori, within a single people or in the mutual relationships of various peoples, which alone determines what is right among men. But this union of the will of all, if only it is put into practice in a consistent way, can also, within the mechanism of nature, be the cause which leads to the intended result and gives effect to the concept of right. For example, it is a principle of moral politics that a people should combine to form a state in accordance with freedom and equality as its sole concepts of right, and this principle is based not on expediency, but on duty. Political moralists, on the other hand, do not deserve a hearing, however much they argue about the natural mechanism of a mass of people who enter into society, or claim that this mechanism would invalidate the above principles and frustrate their fulfilment, or try to prove their assertions by citing examples of badly organized constitutions of ancient and modern times（e.g. of democracies without a system of representation）. Such theories are particularly damaging, because they may themselves produce the very evil they predict. For they put man into the same class as other living machines, which only need to realize consciously that they are not free beings for them to become in their own eyes the most wretched of all earthly creatures.

The proverbial saying fiat iustitia, pereat mundus（i.e. let justice reign, even if all the rogues in the world must perish） may sound somewhat inflated, but it is nonetheless true. It is a sound principle of right, which blocks up all the devious paths followed by cunning or violence. But it must not be misunderstood, or taken, for example, as a permit to apply one's own rights with the utmost rigour（which would conflict with ethical duty）, but should be seen as an obligation of those in power not to deny or detract from the rights of anyone out of disfavour or sympathy for others. And this requires above all that the state should have an internal constitution organized in accordance with pure principles of right, and also that it unite with other neighbouring or even distant states to arrive at a lawful settlement of their differences by forming something analogous to a universal state. This proposition simply means that whatever the physical consequences may be, the political maxims adopted must not be influenced by the prospect of any benefit or happiness which might accrue to the state if it followed them, i.e. by the end which each state takes as the object of its will（as the highest empirical principle of political wisdom）; they should be influenced only by the pure concept of rightful duty, i.e. by an obligation whose principle is given a priori by pure reason. The world will certainly not come to an end if there are fewer bad men. Moral evil has by nature the inherent quality of being self-destructive and self-contradictory in its aims（especially in relations between persons of a like mind）, so that it makes way for the moral principle of goodness, even if such progress is slow.

Thus in objective or theoretical terms, there is no conflict whatsoever between morality and politics. In a subjective sense, however（i.e. in relation to the selfish disposition of man, which, since it is not based on maxims of reason, cannot however be called practice）, this conflict will and ought to remain active, since it serves as a whetstone of virtue. The true courage of virtue, according to the principle tu ne cede malis, sed contra audentior ito

[‘You for your part must not give way to troubles, but confront them the more boldly’], does not so much consist, in the present case, in resolutely standing up to the evils and sacrifices which must be encountered, as in facing the evil principle within ourselves and overcoming its wiles. For this principle is far more dangerous, since it is deceitful, treacherous, and liable to exploit the weakness of human nature in order to justify any violation of justice.

The political moralist may indeed say that the ruler and people, or one people and another people, do no injustice to each other if they enter into mutual conflict through violence or cunning, although they act completely unjustly in refusing to respect the concept of right, which would alone be capable of establishing perpetual peace. For if one party violates his duty towards another who is just as lawlessly disposed towards him, that which actually happens to them in wearing each other out is perfectly just, and enough of their kind will always survive to keep this process going without interruption into the most distant future, so that later generations may take them as a warning example. Providence is justified in disposing the course of world events in this way; for the moral principle in man is never extinguished, and reason, which is pragmatically capable of applying the ideas of right according to this principle, constantly increases with the continuous progress of culture, while the guilt attending violations of right increases proportionately. If we suppose that mankind never can or will be in a better condition, it seems impossible to justify by any kind of theodicy the mere fact that such a race of corrupt beings could have been created on earth at all. But this kind of judgement is far too exalted for us; we cannot theoretically attribute our conception of wisdom to the supreme power whose nature is beyond our understanding.

Such are the desperate conclusions to which we are inevitably driven if we do not assume that the pure principles of right have an objective reality, i.e. that they can be applied in practice. And whatever empirical politics may say to the contrary, the people within the state, as well as the states in their relations with one another, must act accordingly. A true system of politics cannot therefore take a single step without first paying tribute to morality. And although politics in itself is a difficult art, no art is required to combine it with morality. For as soon as the two come into conflict, morality can cut through the knot which politics cannot untie.

The rights of man must be held sacred, however great a sacrifice the ruling power may have to make. There can be no half measures here; it is no use devising hybrid solutions such as a pragmatically conditioned right half-way between right and utility. For all politics must bend the knee before right, although politics may hope in return to arrive, however slowly, at a stage of lasting brilliance.

II
On the Agreement Between Politics and Morality According to the Transcendental Concept of Public Right

If, in considering public right as the jurists usually conceive of it, I abstract from all its material aspects（as determined by the various empirically given relationships of men within a state, or of states with one another）, I am left with the formal attribute of publicness. For every claim upon right potentially possesses this attribute, and without it, there can be no justice（which can only be conceived of as publicly knowable） and therefore no right, since right can only come from justice.

Every claim upon right must have this public quality, and since it is very easy to judge whether or not it is present in a particular instance, i.e. whether or not it can be combined with the principles of the agent concerned, it provides us with a readily applicable criterion which can be discovered a priori within reason itself. If it cannot be reconciled with the agent's principles, it enables us to recognize at once the falseness（i.e. unrightfulness） of the claim（praetensio iuris） in question, as if by an experiment of pure reason.

After we have abstracted in this way from all the empirical elements contained within the concept of political and international right（including that evil aspect of human nature which makes coercion necessary）, we may specify the following proposition as the transcendental formula of public right:‘All actions affecting the rights of other human beings are wrong if their maxim is not compatible with their being made public.’

This principle should be regarded not only as ethical（i.e. pertaining to the theory of virtue） but also as juridical（i.e. affecting the rights of man）.For a maxim which I may not declare openly without thereby frustrating my own intention, or which must at all costs be kept secret if it is to succeed, or which I cannot publicly acknowledge without thereby inevitably arousing the resistance of everyone to my plans, can only have stirred up this necessary and general（hence a priori foreseeable） opposition against me because it is itself unjust and thus constitutes a threat to everyone. Besides, this is a purely negative test, i.e. it serves only as a means of detecting what is not right in relation to others. Like any axiom, it is valid without demonstration, and besides, it is easy to apply, as can be seen from the following examples of public right.

1. In the internal right of a state（ius civitatis）, a question may arise which many people consider difficult to answer, although it can be resolved quite easily by means of the transcendental principle of publicness. It runs as follows:‘Is rebellion a rightful means for a people to use in order to overthrow the oppressive power of a so-called tyrant（non titulo, sed exercitio talis）?’ The rights of the people have been violated, and there can be no doubt that the tyrant would not be receiving unjust treatment if he were dethroned. Nevertheless, it is in the highest degree wrong if the subjects pursue their rights in this way, and they cannot in the least complain of injustice if they are defeated in the ensuing conflict and subsequently have to endure the most severe penalties.

Much can be said in arguments both for and against such a course of action if we try to settle the matter by dogmatic deduction of the principles of right. But the transcendental principle of publicness in questions of right can get round such long-winded discussion. According to this principle, the people, before establishing the civil contract, asks itself whether it dares to make public the maxim of its intention to rebel on certain occasions. It is easily seen that if one were to make it a condition of founding a political constitution that force might in certain eventualities be used against the head of state, the people would have to claim rightful authority over its ruler. But if this were so, the ruler would not be the head of state; or if both parties were given authority as a prior condition of establishing the state, the existence of the state itself, which it was the people's intention to establish, would become impossible. The injustice of rebellion is thus apparent from the fact that if the maxim upon which it would act were publicly acknowledged, it would defeat its own purpose. This maxim would therefore have to be kept secret.

But it would not be necessary for the head of state to conceal his intentions. He may say quite openly that he will punish any rebellion by putting the ringleaders to death, even if they believed that he was himself the first to infringe the fundamental law. For if he is aware that he possesses irresistible supreme power（and this must be assumed in any civil constitution, for a ruler who does not have sufficient power to protect each individual among the people against the others cannot have the right to give the people orders either）, he does not have to worry that his own aims might be frustrated if his maxim became generally known. And it is perfectly consistent with this argument that if the people were to rebel successfully, the head of state would revert to the position of a subject; but he would not be justified in starting a new rebellion to restore his former position, nor should he have to fear being called to account for his previous administration.

2. We now come to international right.– We can speak of international right only on the assumption that some kind of lawful condition exists, i.e. that external circum-stances are such that a man can genuinely be accorded his rights. For as a form of public right, it implies by definition that there is a general will which publicly assigns to each individual that which is his due. And this status iuridicus must be derived from some sort of contract, which, unlike that from which a state originates, must not be based on coercive laws, but may at most be a state of permanent and free association like the above-mentioned federation of different states. For without some kind of lawful condition which actively links together the various physical or moral persons（as is the case in the state of nature）, the only possible form of right is a private one. This again involves a conflict between politics and morality（the latter in the shape of a theory of right）. The criterion of publicness in the relevant maxims can, however, once again be easily applied, but only on condition that the contract binds the states for the single purpose of preserving peace amongst themselves and in relation to other states, and on no account with a view to military conquest. We can thus envisage the following instances of an antinomy between politics and morality, along with the appropriate solution in each case.

（a）‘If one of these states has promised something to another, whether it be assistance, cession of certain territories, subsidies, or the like, it may be asked whether this state, on occasions when its own welfare is at stake, may free itself from the obligation to keep its word, maintaining that it ought to be regarded as a dual person–on the one hand, as a sovereign who is not responsible to anyone within the state, and on the other, merely as the highest political official who is responsible to the state; and the conclusion to be drawn from this is that the state（or its ruler） can be exempted in the latter capacity from obligations it incurred in the first.’ But if the ruler of a state were to let it be known that this was his maxim, everyone else would naturally flee from him, or unite with others in order to resist his pretensions; which proves that such a system of politics, for all its cunning, would defeat its own purpose if it operated on a public footing, so that the above maxim must be wrong.

（b）‘If a neighbouring power which has grown to a formidable size（potentia tremenda） gives cause for anxiety, can one assume that it will wish to oppress other states because is is able to do so, and does this give the less powerful party a right to mount a concerted attack upon it, even if no offence has been offered?’ If a state were to let it be known that it affirmed this maxim, it would merely bring about more surely and more quickly the very evil it feared. For the greater power would anticipate the lesser ones, and the possibility that they might unite would be but a feeble reed against one who knew how to use the tactics of divide et impera. Thus this maxim of political expediency; if acknowledged publicly, necessarily defeats its own purpose and is consequently unjust.

（c）‘If a smaller state, by its geographical situation, constitutes a gap in the territory of a larger state, and this larger state requires the intrusive territory for its own preservation, is not the larger state justified in subjugating the smaller one and in annexing its territory?’ One can easily see that the larger state must on no account let it be known that it has adopted such a maxim. For the smaller states would either unite in good time, or other powerful states would quarrel over the proposed prey, so that the plan would be rendered impracticable if it were made public. This is a sign that it is unjust, and it would in fact be an injustice of very great magnitude; for the fact that the object of an injustice is small does not mean that the injustice done to it may not be very great.

3. As for cosmopolitan right, I pass over it here in silence, for its maxims are easy to formulate and assess on account of its analogy with international right.

In the principle that the maxims of international right may be incompatible with publicity, we thus have a good indication that politics and morality（in the sense of a theory of right） are not in agreement. But it is also necessary that we should know what the condition is under which its maxims will agree with international right. For we cannot simply conclude by a reverse process that all maxims which can be made public are therefore also just, because the person who has decisive supremacy has no need to conceal his maxims. The condition which must be fulfilled before any kind of international right is possible is that a lawful state must already be in existence. For without this, there can be no public right, and any right which can be conceived of outside it, i.e. in a state of nature, will be merely a private right. Now we have already seen above that a federative association of states whose sole intention is to eliminate war is the only lawful arrangement which can be reconciled with their freedom. Thus politics and morality can only be in agreement within a federal union, which is therefore necessary and given a priori through the principles of right. And the rightful basis of all political prudence is the founding of such a union in the most comprehensive form possible; for without this aim, all its reasonings are unwisdom and veiled injustice. This kind of false politics has its own casuistry to match that of the best Jesuit scholars. For it includes the reservatio mentalis whereby public contracts are formulated in terms which one can interpret to one's own advantage as required（for example, the distinction between the status quo of fact and the status quo of right）; it also includes the probabilismus, i.e. it tries to think out evil intentions which it might attribute to others, or uses the likelihood of their gaining predominance as a legal justification for undermining other peaceful states; and finally, it has the principle of the philosophical sin（peccatum philosophicum, peccatillum, or bagatelle）, whereby it can be regarded as a readily pardonable trifle to seize a small state if a much larger state gains in the process, to the supposed advantage of the world in general.[16]

All this is occasioned by the duplicity of politics in relation to morality, for it makes use of whatever branch of morality suits its purposes. But both aspects, philanthropy and respect for the rights of man, are obligatory. And while the former is only a conditional duty, the latter is an unconditional and absolutely imperative one; anyone must first be completely sure that he has not infringed it if he wishes to enjoy the sweet sense of having acted justly. Politics can easily be reconciled with morality in the former sense（i.e. as ethics）, for both demand that men should give up their rights to their rulers. But when it comes to morality in its second sense（i.e. as the theory of right）, which requires that politics should actively defer to it, politics finds it advisable not to enter into any contract at all, preferring to deny that the theory of right has any reality and to reduce all duties to mere acts of goodwill. This subterfuge of a secretive system of politics could, however, easily be defeated if philosophy were to make its maxims public, would it but dare to allow the philosopher to publicize his own maxims.

With this in mind, I now put forward another transcendental and affirmative principle of public right. It might be formulated as follows:‘All maxims which require publicity if they are not to fail in their purpose can be reconciled both with right and with politics.’

For if they can only attain their end by being publicized, they must conform to the universal aim of the public（which is happiness）, and it is the particular task of politics to remain in harmony with the aim of the public through making it satisfied with its condition. But if this end is to be attained only through publicity（i.e. by dispelling all distrust of the maxims employed）, the maxims in question must also be in harmony with public right; for only within this right is it possible to unite the ends of everyone. I must, however, postpone the further elaboration and discussion of this principle until another occasion, although it can already be seen that it is a transcendental formula if one removes all the empirical conditions relating to happiness, i.e. the substance of the law, and looks exclusively to the form of universal lawfulness.

If it is a duty to bring about in reality a state of public right（albeit by an infinite process of gradual approximation）, and if there are also good grounds for hoping that we shall succeed, then it is not just an empty idea that perpetual peace will eventually replace what have hitherto been wrongly called peace treaties（which are actually only truces）. On the contrary, it is a task which, as solutions are gradually found, constantly draws nearer fulfilment, for we may hope that the periods within which equal amounts of progress are made will become progressively shorter.

---

[14] These are permissive laws of reason, which allow a state of public right to continue, even if it is affected by injustice, until all is ripe for a complete revolution or has been prepared for it by peaceful means. For any legal constitution, even if it is only in small measure lawful, is better than none at all, and the fate of a premature reform would be anarchy. Thus political prudence, with things as they are at present, will make it a duty to carry out reforms appropriate to the ideal of public right. But where revolutions are brought about by nature alone, it will not use them as a good excuse for even greater oppression, but will treat them as a call of nature to create a lawful constitution based on the principles of freedom, for a thorough reform of this kind is the only one which will last.

[15] It might be doubted whether any inherent wickedness rooted in human nature influences men who live together within a single state, for one might instead（with some plausibility） adduce the deficiencies of their as yet underdeveloped culture（i.e. their barbarism） as the cause of the unlawful elements in their thinking. But in the external relationships between states, this wickedness is quite undisguisedly and irrefutably apparent. Within each individual state, it is concealed by the coercion embodied in the civil laws, for the citizens' inclination to do violence to one another is counteracted by a more powerful force – that of the government. This not only gives the whole a veneer of morality（causae non causae）, but by putting an end to outbreaks of lawless proclivities, it genuinely makes it much easier for the moral capacities of men to develop into an immediate respect for right. For each individual believes of himself that he would by all means maintain the sanctity of the concept of right and obey it faithfully, if only he could be certain that all the others would do likewise, and the government in part guarantees this for him; thus a great step is taken towards morality（although this is still not the same as a moral step）, towards a state where the concept of duty is recognized for its own sake, irrespective of any possible gain in return. But since each individual, despite his good opinion of himself, assumes bad faith in everyone else, men thereby pass judgement on one another to the effect that they are all in point of fact of little worth – although it is a moot point why this should be so, since we cannot blame it on the nature of man as a free being. Since, however, that respect for the concept of right which man is absolutely incapable of renouncing gives the most solemn sanction to the theory that man is also capable of conforming to this concept, everyone can see that he must himself act in accordance with it, no matter how others may behave.

[16] One can find examples of such maxims in Garve's treatise Über die Verbindung der Moral mit der Politik（On Combining Morality with Politics）, 1788. This estimable scholar admits from the very outset that he is unable to offer a satisfactory answer to this question. But to condone such procedures while admitting that one cannot fully answer the objections which can be raised against them seems to constitute a greater concession to those who are most inclined to misuse it than it is advisable for anyone to make.

A Renewed Attempt to Answer the Question: ‘Is the Human Race Continually Improving?’

1

What Sort of Knowledge are we Looking For?

What we are seeking to know is a portion of human history. It is not a history of the past, however, but a history of future times, i.e. a predictive history. But if it is not discoverable from known laws of nature（as with eclipses of the sun and moon, which can be foretold by natural means） and can only be learnt through additional insight into the future supplied by supernatural revelation, it must be termed prognosticative or prophetic.[1] Besides, we are here concerned not with the natural history of mankind（as we should be if we asked, for example, whether new races of man might emerge in future times）, but with the history of civilization. And we are not dealing with any specific conception of mankind（singulorum）, but with the whole of humanity（universorum）, united in earthly society and distributed in national groups. All this is implied if we ask whether the human race（as a whole） is continually improving.

2

How can we Attain Such Knowledge?

We can obtain a prophetic historical narrative of things to come by depicting those events whose a priori possibility suggests that they will in fact happen. But how is it possible to have history a priori? The answer is that it is possible if the prophet himself occasions and produces the events he predicts.

It was all very well for the Jewish prophets to foretell that the state to which they belonged would sooner or later suffer not only decline, but also complete dissolution; for they were themselves the architects of their fate. As leaders of the people, they had loaded their constitution with so many ecclesiastical（and thence also civil） burdens that their state became completely unfit to exist in its own right, particularly in its relations with neighbouring nations. Thus the jeremiads of the priests naturally went unheeded, because these same priests stubbornly stuck to their belief in the untenable constitution they had themselves created, so that they were themselves able to foresee the consequences with infallible certainty.

Our politicians, so far as their influence extends, behave in exactly the same way, and they are just as successful in their prophecies. One must take men as they are, they tell us, and not as the world's uninformed pedants or good-natured dreamers fancy that they ought to be. But ‘as they are’ ought to read ‘as we have made them by unjust coercion, by treacherous designs which the government is in a good position to carry out’. For that is why they are intransigent and inclined to rebellion, and why regrettable consequences ensue if discipline is relaxed in the slightest. In this way, the prophecy of the supposedly clever statesmen is fulfilled.

Various divines also at times prophesy the complete decline of religion and the imminent appearance of the Antichrist, all the while doing the very things that are best calculated to create the state of affairs they describe. For they are not taking care to impress on the hearts of their congregation moral principles which would directly lead to an improvement. Instead, they see observances and historical beliefs as the essential duties, supposing that these will indirectly produce the same results; but although they may lead to mechanical conformity（as within a civil constitution）, they cannot produce conformity in moral attitudes. Nevertheless, these divines complain at the irreligion which they have themselves created, and which they could accordingly have foretold without any special gift of prophecy.

3

Subdivisions Within the Concept of what we Wish to Know of the Future

There are three possible forms which our prophecy might take. The human race is either continually regressing and deteriorating, continually progressing and improving, or at a permanent standstill, in relation to other created beings, at its present level of moral attainment（which is the same as continually revolving in a circle around a fixed point）.

The first statement might be designated moral terrorism, the second eudaemonism（which, if the goal of human progress were already visible from afar, might also be termed chiliasm）, while the third could be called abderitism. For in the latter case, since a genuine standstill is impossible in moral affairs, rises and falls of equal magnitude constantly alternate, in endless fluctuation, and produce no more effect than if the subject of them had remained stationary in one place.

a

The terroristic conception of human history

A process of deterioration in the human race cannot go on indefinitely, for mankind would wear itself out after a certain point had been reached. Consequently, when enormities go on piling up and up and the evils they produce continue to increase, we say:‘It can't get much worse now.’ It seems that the day of judgement is at hand, and the pious zealot already dreams of the rebirth of everything and of a world created anew after the present world has been destroyed by fire.

b

The eudaemonistic conception of human history

We may readily agree that the sum total of good and evil of which our nature is capable always remains unchanged, and can neither be augmented nor reduced within any one individual. And how could the quantity of good of which a person is capable possibly be increased? For it would have to be done by his own free agency as a subject, and before he could do it, he would in turn require a greater store of goodness than he already possessed in the first place. After all, no effects can exceed the capacity of their effective cause; and the quantity of goodness in man must therefore remain below a certain level in proportion to the amount of evil with which it is intermixed, so that man cannot work his way beyond a given limit and go on improving further. Thus eudaemonism, with its sanguine hopes, appears to be untenable. Its ideas of constant human progress and improvement would seem of little use to a prophetic history of mankind.

c

The hypothesis of abderitism in the human race as a definition of its future history

This point of view probably has the majority of subscribers on its side. To start off swiftly along the way of goodness without persevering on it, and instead, to reverse the plan of progress in order at all costs to avoid being tied to a single aim（even if only from a desire for variety）; to construct in order to demolish; to take upon ourselves the hopeless task of rolling the stone of Sisyphus uphill, only to let it roll back down again: such is the industrious folly which characterizes our race. In view of all this, it does not so much seem that the principle of evil within the natural character of mankind is amalgamated or fused with that of goodness, but rather that the one is neutralized by the other, with inactivity as the result（or a standstill, as in the case under discussion）. This empty activity of backward and forward motion, with good and evil continually alternating, would mean that all the interplay of members of our species on earth ought merely to be regarded as a farce. And in the eyes of reason, this cannot give any higher a value to mankind than to the other animal species, whose interaction takes place at less cost and without any conscious understanding.

4

The Problem of Progress Cannot be Solved Directly from Experience

Even if it were found that the human race as a whole had been moving forward and progressing for an indefinitely long time, no one could guarantee that its era of decline was not beginning at that very moment, by virtue of the physical character of our race. And conversely, if it is regressing and deteriorating at an accelerating pace, there are no grounds for giving up hope that we are just about to reach the turning point（punctum flexus contrarii）at which our affairs will take a turn for the better, by virtue of the moral character of our race. For we are dealing with freely acting beings to whom one can dictate in advance what they ought to do, but of whom one cannot predict what they actually will do, and who are capable, if things go really badly and they experience evils incurred through their own actions, of regarding these evils as a greater incentive to do better than they did in the past. But as the Abbé Coyer says:'Poor mortals! Nothing is constant among you but inconstancy.'

Perhaps it is because we have chosen the wrong point of view from which to contemplate the course of human affairs that the latter seems so absurd to us. The planets, as seen from the earth, sometimes move backward, sometimes forward, and at other times remain motionless. But seen from the sun – the point of view of reason – they continually follow their regular paths as in the Copernican hypothesis. Yet some thinkers, otherwise not deficient in wisdom, prefer to stick firmly to their own interpretation of phenomena and to the point of view they originally adopted, even at the price of involving themselves to an absurd degree in Tychonic cycles and epicycles. It is our misfortune, however, that we are unable to adopt an absolute point of view when trying to predict free actions. For this, exalted above all human wisdom, would be the point of view of providence, which extends even to free human actions. And although man may see the latter, he cannot foresee them with certainty（a distinction which does not exist in the eyes of the divinity）; for while he needs to perceive a connection governed by natural laws before he can foresee anything, he must do without such hints or guidance when dealing with free actions in the future.

If it were possible to credit human beings with even a limited will of innate and unvarying goodness, we could certainly predict a general improvement of mankind, for this would involve events which man could himself control. But if man's natural endowments consist of a mixture of evil and goodness in unknown proportions, no one can tell what effects he should expect from his own actions.

5

A Prophetic History of the Human Race Must Nevertheless Start from Some Sort of Experience

In human affairs, there must be some experience or other which, as an event which has actually occurred, might suggest that man has the quality or power of being the cause and（since his actions are supposed to be those of a being endowed with freedom） the author of his own improvement. But an event can be predicted as the effect of a given cause only when the circumstances which help to shape it actually arise. And while it can well be predicted in general that these circumstances must arise at some time or another（as in calculating probabilities in games of chance）, it is impossible to determine whether this will happen during my lifetime, and whether I shall myself experience it and thus be able to confirm the original prediction.

We must therefore search for an event which would indicate that such a cause exists and that it is causally active within the human race, irrespective of the time at which it might actually operate; and it would have to be a cause which allowed us to conclude, as an inevitable consequence of its operation, that mankind is improving. This inference could then be extended to cover the history of former times so as to show that mankind has always been progressing, yet in such a way that the event originally chosen as an example would not in itself be regarded as the cause of progress in the past, but only as a rough indication or historical sign（signum rememorativum, demonstrativum, prognostikon）. It might then serve to prove the existence of a tendency within the human race as a whole, considered not as a series of individuals（for this would result in interminable enumerations and calculations） but as a body distributed over the earth in states and national groups.

6

An Occurrence in our Own Times Which Proves This Moral Tendency of the Human Race

The occurrence in question does not involve any of those momentous deeds or misdeeds of men which make small in their eyes what was formerly great or make great what was formerly small, and which cause ancient and illustrious states to vanish as if by magic, and others to arise in their place as if from the bowels of the earth. No, it has nothing to do with all this. We are here concerned only with the attitude of the onlookers as it reveals itself in public while the drama of great political changes is taking place: for they openly express universal yet disinterested sympathy for one set of protagonists against their adversaries, even at the risk that their partiality could be of great disadvantage to themselves. Their reaction（because of its universality） proves that mankind as a whole shares a certain character in common, and it also proves（because of its disinterestedness） that man has a moral character, or at least the makings of one. And this does not merely allow us to hope for human improvement; it is already a form of improvement in itself, in so far as its influence is strong enough for the present.

The revolution which we have seen taking place in our own times in a nation of gifted people may succeed, or it may fail. It may be so filled with misery and atrocities that no right-thinking man would ever decide to make the same experiment again at such a price, even if he could hope to carry it out successfully at the second attempt. But I maintain that this revolution has aroused in the hearts and desires of all spectators who are not themselves caught up in it a sympathy which borders almost on enthusiasm, although the very utterance of this sympathy was fraught with danger. It cannot therefore have been caused by anything other than a moral disposition within the human race.

The moral cause which is at work here is composed of two elements. Firstly, there is the right of every people to give itself a civil constitution of the kind that it sees fit, without interference from other powers. And secondly, once it is accepted that the only intrinsically rightful and morally good constitution which a people can have is by its very nature disposed to avoid wars of aggression（i.e. that the only possible constitution is a republican one, at least in its conception）,[2] there is the aim, which is also a duty, of submitting to those conditions by which war, the source of all evils and moral corruption, can be prevented. If this aim is recognized, the human race, for all its frailty, has a negative guarantee that it will progressively improve or at least that it will not be disturbed in its progress.

All this, along with the passion or enthusiasm with which men embrace the cause of goodness（although the former cannot be entirely applauded, since all passion as such is blameworthy）, gives historical support for the following assertion, which is of considerable anthropological significance: true enthusiasm is always directed exclusively towards the ideal, particularly towards that which is purely moral（such as the concept of right）, and it cannot be coupled with selfish interests. No pecuniary rewards could inspire the opponents of the revolutionaries with that zeal and greatness of soul which the concept of right could alone produce in them, and even the old military aristocracy's concept of honour（which is analogous to enthusiasm） vanished before the arms of those who had fixed their gaze on the rights of the people to which they belonged,[3] and who regarded themselves as its protectors. And then the external public of onlookers sympathized with their exaltation, without the slightest intention of actively participating in their affairs.

7

The Prophetic History of Mankind

In these principles, there must be something moral which reason recognizes not only as pure, but also（because of its great and epoch-making influence） as something to which the human soul manifestly acknowledges a duty. Moreover, it concerns the human race as a complete association of men（non singulorum, sed universorum [‘Not of individuals, but of mankind as a whole’]）, for they rejoice with universal and disinterested sympathy at its anticipated success and at all attempts to make it succeed.

The occurrence in question is not, however, a phenomenon of revolution, but（as Erhard puts it） of the evolution of a constitution governed by natural right. Such a constitution cannot itself be achieved by furious struggles – for civil and foreign wars will destroy whatever statutory order has hitherto prevailed – but it does lead us to strive for a constitution which would be incapable of bellicosity, i.e. a republican one. The actual form of the desired state might be republican, or alternatively, it might only be republican in its mode of government, in that the state would be administered by a single ruler（the monarch） acting by analogy with the laws which a people would give itself in conformity with universal principles of right.

Even without the mind of a seer, I now maintain that I can predict from the aspects and signs of our times that the human race will achieve this end, and that it will henceforth progressively improve without any more total reversals. For a phenomenon of this kind which has taken place in human history can never be forgotten, since it has revealed in human nature an aptitude and power for improvement of a kind which no politician could have thought up by examining the course of events in the past. Only nature and freedom, combined within mankind in accordance with principles of right, have enabled us to forecast it; but the precise time at which it will occur must remain indefinite and dependent upon chance.

But even if the intended object behind the occurrence we have described were not to be achieved for the present, or if a people's revolution or constitutional reform were ultimately to fail, or if, after the latter had lasted for a certain time, everything were to be brought back onto its original course（as politicians now claim to prophesy）, our own philosophical prediction still loses none of its force. For the occurrence in question is too momentous, too intimately interwoven with the interests of humanity and too widespread in its influence upon all parts of the world for nations not to be reminded of it when favourable circumstances present themselves, and to rise up and make renewed attempts of the same kind as before. After all, since it is such an important concern of the human race, the intended constitution must at some time or another finally reach that degree of stability which the lessons of repeated experience will not fail to instil into the hearts of everyone.

Thus the proposition that the human race has always been progressively improving and will continue to develop in the same way is not just a well-meant saying to be recommended for practical purposes. Whatever unbelievers may say, it is tenable within the most strictly theoretical context. And if one considers not only the events which may happen within a particular nation, but also their repercussions upon all the nations of the earth which might gradually begin to participate in them, a view opens up into the unbounded future. This would not be true, of course, if the first epoch of natural convulsions, which（according to Camper and Blumenbach） engulfed the animal and vegetable kingdoms before the era of man, were to be followed by a second in which the human race were given the same treatment so that other creatures might take the stage instead, etc. For man in turn is a mere trifle in relation to the omnipotence of nature, or rather to its inaccessible highest cause. But if the rulers of man's own species regard him as such and treat him accordingly, either by burdening him like a beast and using him as a mere instrument of their ends, or by setting him up to fight in their disputes and slaughter his fellows, it is not just a trifle but a reversal of the ultimate purpose of creation.

8

The Difficulty of Maxims Directed Towards the World's Progressive Improvement as Regards Their Publicity

Popular enlightenment is the public instruction of the people upon their duties and rights towards the state to which they belong. Since this concerns only natural rights and rights which can be derived from ordinary common sense, their obvious exponents and interpreters among the people will not be officials appointed by the state, but free teachers of right, i.e. the philosophers. The latter, on account of the very freedom which they allow themselves, are a stumbling-block to the state, whose only wish is to rule; they are accordingly given the appellation of‘enlighteners’, and decried as a menace to the state. And yet they do not address themselves in familiar tones to the people（who themselves take little or no notice of them and their writings）, but in respectful tones to the state, which is thereby implored to take the rightful needs of the people to heart. And if a whole people wishes to present its grievance（gravamen）, the only way in which this can be done is by publicity. A ban on publicity will therefore hinder a nation's progress, even with regard to the least of its claims, the claim for natural rights.

Another thing which is concealed（transparently enough） by legal measures from a certain people is the true nature of its constitution. It would be an affront to the majesty of the people of Great Britain to say that they lived under an absolute monarchy. Instead, it is said that their constitution is one which limits the will of the monarch through the two houses of parliament, acting as representatives of the people. Yet everyone knows very well that the influence of the monarch upon these represenatives is so great and so infallible that the afore-said houses make no decisions except those which His Majesty wishes and recommends through his minister. Now and again, the latter will certainly recommend decisions wherein he knows and indeed ensures that he will meet with contradiction（as with the abolition of the slave trade）, simply in order to furnish ostensible proof of parliamentary freedom. But this sort of approach has the insidious effect of discouraging people from looking for the true and rightfully established constitution, for they imagine they have discovered it in an instance which is already before them. Thus a mendacious form of publicity deceives the people with the illusion that the monarchy is limited[4] by a law which emanates from them, while their representatives, won over by bribery, secretly subject them to an absolute monarch.

All forms of state are based on the idea of a constitution which is compatible with the natural rights of man, so that those who obey the law should also act as a unified body of legislators. And if we accordingly think of the commonwealth in terms of concepts of pure reason, it may be called a Platonic ideal（respublica noumenon）, which is not an empty figment of the imagination, but the eternal norm for all civil constitutions whatsoever, and a means of ending all wars. A civil society organized in conformity with it and governed by laws of freedom is an example representing it in the world of experience（respublica phaenomenon）, and it can only be achieved by a laborious process, after innumerable wars and conflicts. But its constitution, once it has been attained as a whole, is the best qualified of all to keep out war, the destroyer of everything good. Thus it is our duty to enter into a constitution of this kind; and in the meantime, since it will be a considerable time before this takes place, it is the duty of monarchs to govern in a republican（not a democratic） manner, even although they may rule autocratically. In other words, they should treat the people in accordance with principles akin in spirit to the laws of freedom which a people of mature rational powers would prescribe for itself, even if the people is not literally asked for its consent.

9
What Profit will the Human Race Derive from Progressive Improvement?

The profit which will accrue to the human race as it works its way forward will not be an ever increasing quantity of morality in its attitudes. Instead, the legality of its attitudes will produce an increasing number of actions governed by duty, whatever the particular motive behind these actions may be. In other words, the profit will result from man's good deeds as they grow ever more numerous and successful, i.e. from the external phenomena of man's moral nature. For we have only empirical data（our experiences） on which to base this prediction – that is, we base it on the physical cause of our actions in so far as they actually take place as phenomena, not on the moral cause which contains the concept of duty as applied to what ought to happen, and which can be determined by processes of pure a priori thinking.

Violence will gradually become less on the part of those in power, and obedience towards the laws will increase. There will no doubt be more charity, less quarrels in legal actions, more reliability in keeping one's word, and so on in the commonwealth, partly from a love of honour, and partly from a lively awareness of where one's own advantage lies; and this will ultimately extend to the external relations between the various peoples, until a cosmopolitan society is created. Such developments do not mean, however, that the basic moral capacity of mankind will increase in the slightest, for this would require a kind of new creation or supernatural influence. For we must not expect too much of human beings in their progressive improvements, or else we shall merit the scorn of those politicians who would gladly treat man's hopes of progress as the fantasies of an overheated mind.[5]

10

What Sequence can Progress be Expected to Follow?

The answer is: not the usual sequence from the bottom upwards, but from the top downwards.

To expect that the education of young people in intellectual and moral culture, reinforced by the doctrines of religion, firstly through domestic instruction and then through a series of schools from the lowest to the highest grade, will eventually not only make them good citizens, but will also bring them up to practise a kind of goodness which can continually progress and maintain itself, is a plan which is scarcely likely to achieve the desired success. For on the one hand, the people believe that the expense of educating their children should be met not by them but by the state; and on the other, the state itself（as Büsching laments） has no money left over to pay qualified teachers who will carry out their duties with enthusiasm, since it needs it all for war. But apart from this, the whole mechanism of education as described above will be completely disjointed unless it is designed on the considered plan and intention of the highest authority in the state, then set in motion and constantly maintained in uniform operation thereafter. And this will mean that the state too will reform itself from time to time, pursuing evolution instead of revolution, and will thus make continuous progress. But those responsible for the desired education are also human beings who will therefore have to have had a suitable education themselves. And in view of the frailty of human nature and the fortuitous circumstances which can intensify its effects, we can expect man's hopes of progress to be fulfilled only under the positive condition of a higher wisdom（which, if it is invisible to us, is known as providence）; and in so far as human beings can themselves accomplish anything or anything can be expected of them, it can only be through their negative wisdom in furthering their own ends. In the latter event, they will find themselves compelled to ensure that war, the greatest obstacle to morality and the invariable enemy of progress, first becomes gradually more humane, then more infrequent, and finally disappears completely as a mode of aggression. They will thereby enter into a constitution based on genuine principles of right, which is by its very nature capable of constant progress and improvement without forfeiting its strength.

Conclusion

A doctor who used to console his patients from day to day with hopes of imminent recovery, telling one that his pulse was better, and others that their faeces or perspiration heralded an improvement, etc., received a visit from one of his friends. ‘How are you, my friend, and how is your illness?’ was the first question. ‘How do you think,’ was the reply. ‘I am dying of sheer recovery!’

I do not blame anyone if political evils make him begin to despair of the welfare and progress of mankind. But I have confidence in the heroic medicine to which Hume refers, for it ought to produce a speedy cure. ‘When

I now see the nations engaged in war', he says, 'it is as if I witnessed two drunken wretches bludgeoning each other in a china-shop. For it is not just that the injuries they inflict on each other will be long in healing; they will also have to pay for all the damage they have caused.' Sero sapiunt Phryges ['The Phrygians learn wisdom too late']. But the after-pains of the present war will force the political prophet to admit that the human race must soon take a turn for the better, and this turn is now already in sight.

---

[1] Those, from pythonesses to gypsies, who dabble in prophecy with neither knowledge nor honesty, are known as false prophets.

[2] This does not mean, however, that a people which has a monarchic constitution can thereby claim the right to alter it, or even nurse a secret desire to do so. For a people which occupies extended territories in Europe may feel that monarchy is the only kind of constitution which can enable it to preserve its own existence between powerful neighbours. And if the subjects should complain, not because of their internal government but because of their government's behaviour towards the citizens of foreign states（for example, if it were to discourage republicanism abroad）, this does not prove that the people are dissatisfied with their own constitution, but rather that they are profoundly attached to it; for it becomes progressively more secure from danger as more of the other nations become republics. Nevertheless, slanderous sycophants, bent on increasing their own importance, have tried to portray this innocuous political gossip as innovationism, Jacobinism and conspiracy, constituting a menace to the state. But there was never the slightest reason for such allegations, particularly in a country more than a hundred miles removed from the scene of the revolution.

[3] It may be said of such enthusiasm for asserting the rights of man: postquam ad arma Vulcania ventum est, – mortalis mucro glacies ceu futilis ictu dissiluit [Now that he was faced by Vulcan's arms, his mortal blade was shattered by the blow like brittle ice]. – Why has no ruler ever dared to say openly that he does not recognize any rights of the people against himself ? Or that the people owe their happiness only to the beneficence of a government which confers it upon them, and that any pretensions on the part of the subject that he has rights against the government are absurd or even punishable, since they imply that resistance to authority is permissible? The reason is that any such public declaration would rouse up all the subjects against the ruler, even although they had been like docile sheep, well fed, powerfully protected and led by a kind and understanding master, and had no lack of welfare to complain of. For beings endowed with freedom cannot be content merely to enjoy the comforts of existence, which may well be provided by others（in this case, by the government）; it all depends on the principle which governs the provision of such comforts. But welfare does not have any ruling principle, either for the recipient or for the one who provides it, for each individual will define it differently. It depends, in fact, upon the will's material aspect, which is empirical and thus incapable of becoming a universal rule. A being endowed with freedom, aware of the advantage he possesses over non-rational animals, can and must therefore follow the formal principle of his will and demand for the people to which he belongs nothing short of a government in which the people are co-legislators. In other words, the rights of men who are expected to obey must necessarily come before all considerations of their actual wellbeing, for they are a sacred institution, exalted above all utilitarian values; and no matter how benevolent a government is, it may not tamper with them. These rights, however, always remain an idea which can be fulfilled only on condition that the means employed to do so are compatible with morality. This limiting condition must not be overstepped by the people, who may not therefore pursue their rights by revolution, which is at all times unjust. The best way of making a nation content with its constitution is to rule autocratically and at the same time to govern in a republican manner, i.e. to govern in the spirit of republicanism and by analogy with it.

[4] A cause whose nature is not directly perceptible can be discovered through the effect which invariably accompanies it. What is an absolute monarch? He is one at whose command war at once begins when he says it shall do so. And conversely, what is a limited monarch? He is one who must first ask the people whether or not there is to be a war, and if the people say that there shall be no war, then there will be none. For war is a condition in which all the powers of the state must be at the head of state's disposal.

Now the monarch of Great Britain has waged numerous wars without asking the people's consent. This king is therefore an absolute monarch, although he should not be so according to the constitution. But he can always bypass the latter, since he can always be assured, by controlling the various powers of the state, that the people's representatives will agree with him; for he has the authority to award all offices and dignities. This corrupt system, however, must naturally be given no publicity if it is to succeed. It therefore remains under a very transparent veil of secrecy.

[5] It is certainly agreeable to think up political constitutions which meet the requirements of reason（particularly in matters of right）. But it is foolhardy to put them forward seriously, and punishable to incite the people to do away with the existing constitution.

Plato's Atlantis, More's Utopia, Harrington's Oceana and Allais' Severambia have successively made their appearance, but they have never（with the exception of Cromwell's abortive attempt to establish a despotic republic） been tried out in practice. It is the same with these political creations as with the creation of the world: no one was present at it, nor could anyone have been present, or else he would have been his own creator. It is a pleasant dream to hope that a political product of the sort we here have in mind will one day be brought to perfection, at however remote a date. But it is not merely conceivable that we can continually approach such a state; so long as it can be reconciled with the moral law, it is also the duty of the head of state（not of the citizens） to do so.

Conjectures on the Beginning of Human History

To introduce conjectures at various points in the course of a historical account in order to fill gaps in the record is surely permissible; for what comes before and after these gaps – i.e. the remote cause and the effect respectively – can enable us to discover the intermediate causes with reasonable certainty, thereby rendering the intervening process intelligible. But to base a historical account solely on conjectures would seem little better than drawing up a plan for a novel. Indeed, such an account could not be described as a conjectural history at all, but merely as a work of fiction. – Nevertheless, what it may be presumptuous to introduce in the course of a history of human actions may well be permissible with reference to the first beginning of that history, for if the beginning is a product of nature, it may be discoverable by conjectural means. In other words, it does not have to be invented but can be deduced from experience, assuming that what was experienced at the beginning of history was no better or worse than what is experienced now – an assumption which accords with the analogy of nature and which has nothing presumptuous about it. Thus, a history of the first development of freedom from its origins as a predisposition in human nature is something quite different from a history of its subsequent course, which must be based exclusively on historical records.

Nevertheless, conjectures should not make undue claims on our assent. On the contrary, they should not present themselves as a serious activity but merely as an exercise in which the imagination, supported by reason, may be allowed to indulge as a healthy mental recreation. Consequently, they cannot stand comparison with a historical account which is put forward and accepted as a genuine record of the same event, a record which is tested by criteria quite different from those derived merely from the philosophy of nature. For this very reason, and because the journey on which I am about to venture is no more than a pleasure trip, I may perhaps hope to be granted permission to employ a sacred document as my map, and at the same time to speculate that the journey which I shall make on the wings of imagination – although not without the guidance of experience as mediated by reason – will follow precisely the same course as that which the sacred text records as history. The reader will have the document in question before him（Genesis, Chapters Ⅱ–Ⅵ）, and may consult it at every step to see whether the route which philosophy follows with the help of concepts accords with that which the Bible story describes.

If we are not to indulge in wild conjectures, we must begin with something which human reason cannot deduce from prior natural causes – that is, with the existence of human beings. These human beings must also be fully developed, for they have no mother to support them, and they must be a pair in order that they may reproduce their kind. Besides, there must be only one couple if war is not to break out at once – as would happen if the people in question were close to one another yet strangers – and if nature is not to be accused of having failed, by permitting descent from different ancestors, to take the most appropriate measures to promote sociability as the principal end of human destiny; for the common descent of all human beings from a single family unit was undoubtedly the best means of attaining this end. I then place this couple in a setting secure from the attacks of wild beasts and amply provided by nature with every means of sustenance – a garden, so to speak, in a climate of constant mildness. What is more, I imagine them not in their wholly primitive natural state, but only after they have made significant advances in the skilful use of their powers. For the reader might well find too many conjectures and too few probabilities if I were to try to fill this gap, which presumably occupied a considerable interval of time. The first human being could therefore stand and walk; he could speak（cf. Genesis Ⅱ. 20）[1] and indeed talk – i.e. speak with the help of coherent concepts（Ⅱ. 23） – and consequently think. These are all skills which he had to acquire for himself（for if they were innate, they would also be inherited, which does not tally with experience）; I assume, however, that he is already in possession of them, for I wish merely to consider the development of human behaviour from the ethical point of view, and this necessarily presupposes that the skills in question are already present.

Initially, the newcomer must have been guided solely by instinct, that voice of God which all animals obey. It permitted him to use some things as food and forbade him to use others（Ⅲ. 2–3）. – It is unnecessary, however, to assume for this purpose a particular instinct which has now been lost. It could simply have been the sense of smell and its affinity with the organ of taste, along with that sympathy which is known to exist between the latter and the digestive organs – in other words an ability, which is still in evidence today, to sense in advance whether a given food is suitable for consumption or not. We need not even assume that this sense was more acute in the first couple than it is now; for it is common knowledge that the perceptive powers of those who employ only their senses differ greatly from those of people who are also engaged in thought, and who accordingly pay less attention to their sensations.

So long as inexperienced man obeyed this call of nature, his lot was a happy one. But reason soon made its presence felt and sought to extend his knowledge of foodstuffs beyond the bounds of instinct; it did so by comparing his usual diet with anything which a sense other than that to which his instinct was tied – for example, the sense of sight – represented as similar in character（Ⅲ. 6）. Even if instinct did not recommend it, this experiment had a chance of succeeding so long as instinct did not contradict it. But it is a peculiarity of reason that it is able, with the help of the imagination, to invent desires which not only lack any corresponding natural impulse, but which are even at variance with the latter. Such desires, which are known primarily as lasciviousness, gradually engender a whole host of superfluous or even unnatural inclinations to which the term luxuriousness applies. The initial incentive to abandon natural impulses may have been quite trivial. But the outcome of that first experiment whereby man became conscious of his reason as a faculty which can extend beyond the limits to which all animals are confined was of great importance, and it influenced his way of life decisively. Thus, it may have been only a fruit which, because it looked similar to other agreeable fruits which he had previously tasted, encouraged him to make the experiment. There may also have been the example of an animal to which such food was naturally congenial, although it had an opposite and harmful effect on human beings, whose natural instinct was consequently opposed to it. Nevertheless, this was enough to give reason the initial inducement to quibble with the voice of nature（Ⅲ. 11）, and despite the latter's objections, to make the first experiment in free choice–an experiment which, since it was the first, probably did not turn out as expected. No matter how trivial the harm it did may have been, it was nevertheless enough to open man's eyes（Ⅲ. 7）. He discovered in himself an ability to choose his own way of life without being tied to any single one like the other animals. But the momentary gratification which this realization of his superiority may have afforded him was inevitably followed at once by anxiety and fear as to how he should employ his newly discovered ability, given that he did not yet know the hidden properties or remote effects of anything. He stood, as it were, on the edge of an abyss. For whereas instinct had hitherto directed him towards individual objects of his desire, an infinite range of objects now opened up, and he did not yet know how to choose between them. Yet now that he had tasted this state of freedom, it was impossible for him to return to a state of servitude under the rule of instinct.

Next to the instinct for food by which nature preserves each individual, the sexual instinct, by which nature ensures the survival of each species, is the most prominent. Once reason had awakened, it was not slow to make its influence felt in this area either. Man soon discovered that the sexual stimulus, which in the case of animals is based merely on a transient and largely periodic urge, could in his case be prolonged and even increased by means of the imagination. For although the imagination performs its function with greater moderation the further its object is withdrawn from the senses, it also functions more constantly and uniformly, thereby avoiding that satiety which follows the satisfaction of a purely animal desire. The fig-leaf was accordingly the product of a much stronger assertion of reason than had been evident in the first phase of its development. For to render an inclination more intense and lasting by withdrawing its object from the senses already displays a consciousness of some rational control over the impulses, and not just an ability, as in the first stage of rationality, to obey the impulses to a greater or lesser extent. Refusal was the device which invested purely sensuous stimuli with an ideal quality, and which gradually showed the way from purely animal desire to love, and so also from a feeling for the merely agreeable to a taste for beauty（initially only in human form, but subsequently also in nature）. Furthermore, the first incentive for man's development as a moral being came from his sense of decency, his inclination to inspire respect in others by good manners（i.e. by concealing all that might invite contempt） as the proper foundation of all true sociability. – A small beginning such as this, which nevertheless has epoch-making effects in imparting a wholly new direction to thought, is more important than the whole endless series of subsequent cultural developments.

The third step which reason took after its intervention in man's basic and immediately felt needs was to reflect in anticipation of the future. This ability not just to enjoy the present moment of life but also to visualize what is yet to come, often in the distant future, is the most decisive proof of man's advantage, in that he is able to prepare for remote objectives in keeping with his destiny. But this same ability is also the most inexhaustible source of cares and worries which an uncertain future evokes, and from which all animals are exempt（Ⅲ. 13–19）. The man who had to provide for himself, his wife, and his future children foresaw the increasing laboriousness of his work; the woman foresaw the hardships to which nature had subjected her sex, as well as those which the more powerful man would inflict upon her. Both foresaw with apprehension, at the end of a life of toil and as yet in the background of the picture, the fate which must befall all animals but which causes them no concern, namely death; and they seemed to reproach themselves for, and regard as a crime, that use of reason which had brought all these ills upon them. Perhaps the only comfort and reassurance they had was the prospect of living through their offspring, whose lot might be better than theirs or who might even, as members of one family, alleviate their parents' troubles（Ⅲ. 16–20）.

The fourth and last step which reason took, thereby raising man completely above animal society, was his（albeit obscure） realization that he is the true end of nature, and that nothing which lives on earth can compete with him in this respect. When he first said to the sheep*'the fleece which you wear was given to you by nature not for your own use, but for mine'* and took it from the sheep to wear it himself（Ⅲ. 21）, he became aware of a prerogative which, by his nature, he enjoyed over all the animals; and he now no longer regarded them as fellow creatures, but as means and instruments to be used at will for the attainment of whatever ends he pleased. This notion implies（if only obscurely） an awareness of the following distinction: man should not address other human beings in the same way as animals, but should regard them as having an equal share in the gifts of nature. This was a distant preparation for those restrictions which reason would in future impose on man's will in relation to his fellows, a preparation which is much more essential for the establishment of society than is inclination or love.

Thus, man had attained a position of equality with all rational beings, whatever their rank（Ⅲ. 22）, because he could claim to be an end in himself, to be accepted as such by all others, and not to be used by anyone else simply as a means to other ends. This, rather than reason considered merely as an instrument for the satisfaction of various inclinations, is the basis of man's unconditional equality even with higher beings; for even if the latter are incomparably superior to him in natural gifts, they do not have a right to use him as they please. Consequently, this fourth step of reason is also associated with man's release from the womb of nature, a change of status which undoubtedly does him honour, but is at the same time fraught with danger; for it expelled him from the harmless and secure condition of a protected childhood – from a garden, as it were, which provided for him without any effort on his part（Ⅲ. 23） – and thrust him out into the world at large, where so many cares, labours, and unknown evils awaited him. In the future, the hardships of life would often arouse in him the wish for a paradise created by his imagination, a paradise where he could dream or idle away his existence in quiet inactivity and everlasting peace. But restless reason, irresistibly driving him on to develop his innate capacities, stands between him and that imagined seat of bliss, and does not allow him to return to the state of rude simplicity from which it had originally extracted him（Ⅲ. 24）. It urges him to submit patiently to the labours he detests, to pursue the trivialities he despises, and to forget even his terror of death in favour of all those trifles whose loss he fears even more.

Note

From this account of the earliest history of man, the following conclusion can be drawn. Man's emergence from that paradise which reason represents to him as the first abode of his species was nothing other than his transition from a rude and purely animal existence to a state of humanity, from the leading-strings of instinct to the guidance of reason – in a word, from the guardianship of nature to the state of freedom. Whether he gained or lost through this change is no longer a question when we consider the destiny of his species, which consists quite simply in progress towards perfection, however flawed his first attempts to attain this end – even if they are followed by a long series of further attempts – may prove to be. – But while this course represents a progression from worse to better for the species as a whole, this is not so in the case of the individual. Before reason awoke, there were no commandments or prohibitions, so that violations of these were also impossible. But when reason began to function and, in all its weakness, came into conflict with animality in all its strength, evils necessarily ensued; and even worse, as reason grew more cultivated, vices emerged which were quite foreign to the state of ignorance and hence of innocence. From the moral point of view, therefore, the first step beyond this state was a fall; and from the physical point of view, this fall was a punishment, for it led to a host of hitherto unknown evils. Thus, the history of nature begins with goodness, for it is the work of God; but the history of freedom begins with evil, for it is the work of man. For the individual, who looks only to himself in the exercise of his freedom, a change of this kind represented a loss; for nature, whose end in relation to man concerns the species, it represented a gain. The individual therefore has cause to blame himself for all the ills which he endures and for all the evil which he perpetrates; but at the same time, as the member of a whole（of a species）, he has cause to admire and praise the wisdom and purposiveness of the overall arrangement. – In this way, it is possible to reconcile with each other and with reason the often misunderstood and apparently contradictory pronouncements of the celebrated J. J. Rousseau. In his esays On the Influence of the Sciences and On the Inequality of Man, he shows quite correctly that there is an inevitable conflict between culture and the nature of the human race as a physical species each of whose individual members is meant to fulfil his destiny completely. But in his Émile, his Social Contract, and other writings, he attempts in turn to solve the more difficult problem of what course culture should take in order to ensure the proper development, in keeping with their destiny, of man's capacities as a moral species, so that this [moral] destiny will no longer conflict with his character as a natural species. Since culture has perhaps not yet really begun – let alone completed – its development in accordance with the true principles of man's education as a human being and citizen, the above conflict is the source of all the genuine evils which oppress human life, and of all the vices which dishonour it.[2] At the same time, the very impulses which are blamed as the causes of vice are good in themselves, fulfilling their function as abilities implanted by nature. But since these abilities are adapted to the state of nature, they are undermined by the advance of culture and themselves undermine the latter in turn, until art, when it reaches perfection, once more becomes nature – and this is the ultimate goal of man's moral destiny.

The End of History

The following period began with man's transition from the age of leisure and peace to the age of labour and discord as the prelude to social union. Here, we must make another major leap and suddenly put him in possession of domestic animals and of crops which he can propagate himself for his own consumption by sowing and planting（Ⅳ. 2）. In fact, the transition from the savage life of the hunter to the former [pastoral] state, and from sporadic digging for roots or gathering of fruit to the second [agricultural] state, may have taken place very gradually. It was at this point that strife inevitably arose between those who had hitherto lived together in peace, with the result that those whose ways of life were different became separated and dispersed throughout the world. Pastoral life is not only leisurely, but also the most reliable means of support, for there is no lack of fodder for animals in a largely uninhabited country. Agriculture or the planting of crops, on the other hand, is extremely laborious, subject to the vagaries of climate, and consequently insecure; it also requires permanent settlements, ownership of land, and sufficient strength to defend the latter. The herdsman, however, abhors such property because it limits his freedom of pasture. As far as agriculture is concerned, the farmer may have seemed to envy the herdsman as someone more favoured by heaven（Ⅳ. 4）; but in fact, the herdsman caused him great inconvenience so long as he remained in the neighbourhood, for grazing animals do not spare the farmer's crops. It is also easy for the herdsman to move further afield with his animals, thus avoiding the need to make any restitution for the damage he has done, for he leaves nothing behind which he could not just as easily find elsewhere. Thus, the farmer no doubt had to use force to prevent these incursions, which were not considered unlawful by his adversary; and since the cause of such incursions could never be entirely eliminated, he was no doubt eventually compelled to distance himself as far as possible from those who lived a pastoral existence, unless he wished to lose the fruits of his long and diligent efforts（Ⅳ. 16）. This separation marks the beginning of the third epoch.

Where people depend for their livelihood on the cultivation of the soil（and on the planting of trees in particular）, they require permanent accommodation; and the defence of such property against all encroachment requires a large number of people who are prepared to assist one another. Hence those who adopted this way of life could no longer live in scattered family units, but had to stick together and set up village communities（incorrectly described as towns） in order to protect their property against savage hunters or tribes of pastoral nomads. The first essentials of life which a changed mode of living makes necessary（Ⅳ. 20） could now be acquired by mutual exchange. This inevitably gave rise to culture and the beginnings of art, both as a pastime and as an occupation（Ⅳ. 21f）; but first and foremost, it also meant that certain steps were taken to establish a civil constitution and the public administration of justice. Initially, the latter was no doubt concerned only with major acts of violence, the avenging of which was now no longer left to individuals as in the savage state, but assigned to a lawful authority which served to unite the whole – i.e. to a kind of government which was not itself subject to the rule of force（Ⅳ. 23f.）. – From these first crude beginnings, all human aptitudes could now gradually develop, the most beneficial of these being sociability and civil security. The human race could multiply and, like a beehive, send out colonists in all directions from the centre – colonists who were already civilized. This epoch also saw the beginning of human inequality, that abundant source of so much evil but also of everything good; this inequality continued to increase thereafter.

So long as the nations of nomadic herdsmen, who recognize only God as their master, continued to swarm around the town-dwellers and farmers, who are governed by a human master or civil authority（Ⅵ. 4）,[3] and, as declared enemies of all land ownership, treated the latter with hostility and were hated by them in turn, the two sides were continually at war, or at least at constant risk of war. But as a consequence, both nations could at least enjoy the priceless asset of internal freedom.（For even now, the risk of war is the only thing which keeps despotism in check, because a state must now have wealth before it can be powerful, and there can be no wealth-producing activity without freedom. In a poor nation, this lack of wealth must be compensated for by widespread efforts to preserve the commonwealth, and this is again impossible unless the nation feels that such efforts can be freely made.） – In the course of time, however, the growing luxury of the town-dwellers, and in particular the seductive arts in which the women of the towns surpassed the unkempt wenches of the wilderness, must have been a powerful temptation to the herdsmen to enter into relations with them and to let themselves be drawn into the glittering misery of the towns（Ⅵ. 2）. The consequent amalgamation of two formerly hostile populations put an end to the danger of war, but it also put an end to freedom. This led on the one hand to a despotism of powerful tyrants, and – since culture had only just begun – to soulless extravagance and the most abject slavery, combined with all the vices of the uncivilized state. On the other hand, the human race was irresistibly deflected from the course marked out for it by nature, namely the progressive cultivation of its capacities for goodness. It thus became unworthy of its very existence as a species whose destiny was to rule over the earth rather than to live in brutish indulgence and grovelling servitude（Ⅵ. 17）.

Concluding Note

Thinking people are subject to a malaise which may even turn into moral corruption, a malaise of which the unthinking are ignorant – namely discontent with that providence by which the course of the world as a whole is governed. They feel this sentiment when they contemplate the evils which so greatly oppress the human race, with no hope（as it seems） of any improvement. Yet it is of the utmost importance that we should be content with providence, even if the path it has laid out for us on earth is an arduous one. We should be content with it partly in order that we may take courage even in the midst of hardships, and partly in order that we should not blame all such evils on fate and fail to notice that we may ourselves be entirely responsible for them, thereby losing the chance to remedy them by improving ourselves.

We have to admit that the greatest evils which oppress civilized nations are the result of war – not so much of actual wars in the past or present as of the unremitting, indeed ever-increasing preparation for war in the future. All the resources of the state, and all the fruits of its culture which might be used to enhance that culture even further, are devoted to this purpose. Freedom suffers greatly in numerous areas, and the state's maternal care for its individual members is replaced by demands of implacable harshness（even if this harshness is justified by fear of external threats）. But if the constant fear of war did not compel even heads of state to show this respect for humanity, would we still encounter the same culture, or that close association of social classes within the commonwealth which promotes the well-being of all? Would we still encounter the same population, or even that degree of freedom which is still present in spite of highly restrictive laws? We need only look at China, whose position may expose it to occasional unforeseen incursions but not to attack by a powerful enemy, and we shall find that, for this very reason, it has been stripped of every vestige of freedom. – So long as human culture remains at its present stage, war is therefore an indispensable means of advancing it further; and only when culture has reached its full development – and only God knows when that will be – will perpetual peace become possible and of benefit to us. In this connection, therefore, we surely have only ourselves to blame for the evils which we so bitterly lament; and the Holy Scripture is quite justified in regarding the amalgamation of nations into one society, and their complete liberation from external danger at a time when their culture had scarcely emerged, as an obstacle to all further cultural progress and a descent into irremediable corruption.

The second source of man's dissatisfaction with the order of nature is the shortness of life. It is true that anyone who continues to wish that life might last longer than it actually does must have little appreciation of its value, for to prolong it would merely add to the length of a drama made up of endless struggles with adversity. Nevertheless, we may excuse those of childish judgement who fear death but have no love of life, and who find it hard to complete each day of their existence with some degree of contentment, yet can never have days enough in which to repeat this painful experience. But if we stop to think of all the care that afflicts us in our search for ways of passing a life as short as this, and of all the injustice that is done in the hope of a future enjoyment which will last for so short a time, it is reasonable to conclude that a life-expectancy of 800 years or more would not be to our advantage. Fathers would live in mortal fear of their sons, brothers of brothers, and friends of friends, and the vices of a human race of such longevity would necessarily reach such a pitch that it would deserve no better a fate than to be wiped from the face of the earth by a universal flood（Ⅵ.

12f.）.

The third wish（which is in fact an empty yearning, for it knows that its object can never be attained） is a reflection of that golden age which poets have praised so highly. In it, we are supposedly relieved of all those imaginary needs with which luxury encumbers us, we are content with the bare necessities of nature, and there is complete equality and perpetual peace among men – in a word, there is pure enjoyment of a carefree life, frittered away in idle dreams or childish play. It is yearnings such as these which make tales of Robinson Crusoe and voyages to the South Sea islands so attractive; but in a wider sense, they are symptoms of that weariness of civilized life which thinking people feel when they seek its value in pleasure alone, and when they resort to idleness as an antidote as soon as reason reminds them that they ought to give value to their life through their actions. The vacuity of this wish for a return to the past age of simplicity and innocence is adequately demonstrated by the foregoing account of man's original state. For as we have seen, man cannot remain in this state because it does not satisfy him, and he is even less inclined to go back to it once he has left it. Consequently, he must continue to ascribe his present condition and all its hardships to himself and his own choice.

An account of human history will be of benefit to man and will serve to instruct and improve him if it contains the following lessons. It must show him that he should not blame providence for the evils which oppress him, and that he is not entitled to ascribe his own misdemeanours to an original crime committed by his earliest ancestors, by alleging, for example, that a disposition to commit similar offences has been passed down to their descendants; for there can be nothing inherited about arbitrary actions. It should show him instead that he has every justification for acknowledging the action of his first ancestors as his own, and that he should hold himself wholly responsible for all the evils which spring from the misuse of his reason; for he is quite capable of realizing that, in the same circumstances, he would have behaved in exactly the same way, in that his first act in using reason would have been to misuse it（even if nature advised him otherwise）. Once this point concerning moral evils has been correctly understood, the strictly physical evils will scarcely tip the balance in our favour when merits and faults are weighed against each other.

The conclusion to be drawn from this attempt to describe the earliest history of mankind with the help of philosophy is therefore as follows. We should be content with providence and with the course of human affairs as a whole, which does not begin with good and then proceed to evil, but develops gradually from the worse to the better; and each individual is for his own part called upon by nature itself to contribute towards this progress to the best of his ability.

---

[1] The urge to communicate must have been the original motive for human beings who were still alone to announce their existence to living creatures outside themselves, especially to those which emit sounds which can be imitated and which can subsequently serve as a name. A similar effect of this urge can still be seen in children and thoughtless people who disturb the thinking section of the community by banging, shouting, whistling, singing and other noisy pastimes（and often even by noisy religious devotions）. For I can see no motive for such behaviour other than a desire on the part of those concerned to proclaim their existence to the world at large.

[2] The following may be cited as only a few examples of this conflict between man's aspiration towards his moral destiny on the one hand, and his unchanging obedience to laws inherent in his nature and appropriate to a crude and animal condition on the other.

Nature has fixed the time at which human beings reach maturity – in terms of their urge and ability to reproduce their kind – at the age of approximately sixteen or seventeen. This is the age at which, in the raw state of nature, a youth literally becomes a man; for he then has the capacity to look after himself, to reproduce his kind, and to look after his children as well as his wife. The simplicity of his needs makes this an easy task. But in a civilized state, he requires numerous means of support, in terms both of skill and of favourable external circumstances, in order to perform these functions. In the context of civil society, the corresponding stage is therefore postponed – at least on average – by a further ten years. Nevertheless, nature has not altered the age of puberty to match the progressive refinement of society, but sticks stubbornly to the law which it has imposed on the survival of the human race as an animal species. As a result, the effect of social customs on the end of nature – and vice versa – is inevitably prejudicial. For in the state of nature, a human being is already a man at an age when civilized man（who nevertheless still retains his character as natural man） is merely a youth, or even only a child; for we may well describe as a child someone who, in the civil state, is unable because of his age to support even himself, let alone others of his kind, despite having the urge and capacity to produce offspring as called upon by nature. For nature has certainly not endowed living creatures with instincts and capacities in order that they should resist and suppress them. Such abilities were consequently not designed for a state of civilization, but merely for the survival of the human race as an animal species; and the civilized state thus inevitably comes into conflict with the latter, a conflict which only a perfect civil constitution – the ultimate goal of culture – can resolve. Meanwhile, the intervening period [between the state of nature and the state of perfection] is filled as a rule with vices and their consequences, i.e. with human misery in its various forms.

A further example may confirm the truth of the proposition that nature has endowed us with two distinct abilities for two distinct purposes, namely that of man as an animal species and that of man as a moral species. The example in question is the saying of Hippocrates ‘ars longa, vita brevis’. The arts and sciences could be advanced much further by one individual with the appropriate talents, once he had attained the necessary maturity of judgement through long practice and the acquisition of knowledge, than by whole generations of scholars in succession, provided that this individual could live and retain his youthful mental capacities for the total lifetimes of the generations in question. Now it is evident that nature has fixed the length of human life with a view to ends other than that of the advancement of the sciences. For just when the most fortunate of thinkers is on the verge of the greatest discoveries which his skill and experience entitle him to expect, old age intervenes; he loses his acuteness and must leave it to the next generation（which starts once more from the ABC and must again traverse the entire distance which had already been covered） to take a further step in the progress of culture. Thus, the course which the human race follows on the way to fulfilling its destiny appears subject to incessant interruptions, with a constant risk of reverting to the original barbarism; and the Greek philosopher had some justification when he complained that it is a pity that we have to die just when we have begun to realize how we ought to have lived.

As a third example, we may cite the inequality of men – not their inequality in terms of natural gifts or goods bestowed on them by fortune, but it terms of universal human rights, about which Rousseau complains with a great deal of truth. Yet this inequality is inseparable from culture, so long as the latter proceeds, as it were, without a plan（and this is inevitably the case for a considerable period of time）. But it was surely not imposed on man by nature, for nature gave him both freedom and reason, and reason decreed that this freedom is subject to no other limits than those of its own universal and external legality, which is known as civil right. Man was meant to rise, by his own efforts, above the barbarism of his natural abilities, but to take care not to contravene them even as he rises above them. He can expect to attain this skill only at a late stage and after many unsuccessful attempts; and in the meantime, the human race groans under the evils which it inflicts on itself as a result of its own inexperience.

[3] The Bedouins of Arabia still describe themselves as children of a former sheikh, the founder of their tribe（such as Beni Haled and others）. But the sheikh is by no means their master, and he cannot force his will upon them as he chooses. For in a nation of herdsmen, no one has fixed property which he cannot take with him, so that any family which is discontented with its tribe can easily leave it and join forces with another.

TAO TE CHING

道德经

［春秋］老子　著

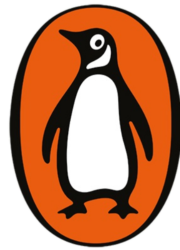
章婉凝　白话文翻译、注释

中国出版集团
中译出版社

道德经

（春秋）老子/著

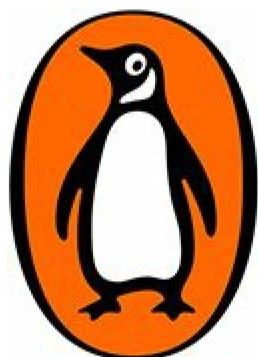
章婉凝　白话文/译



企鹅图书 | PENGUIN BOOKS

UK | USA | Canada | Ireland | Australia
New Zealand | India | South Africa | North Asia

Penguin Books is part of the Penguin Random House group of companies whose addresses can be found at:
global.penguinrandomhouse.com.

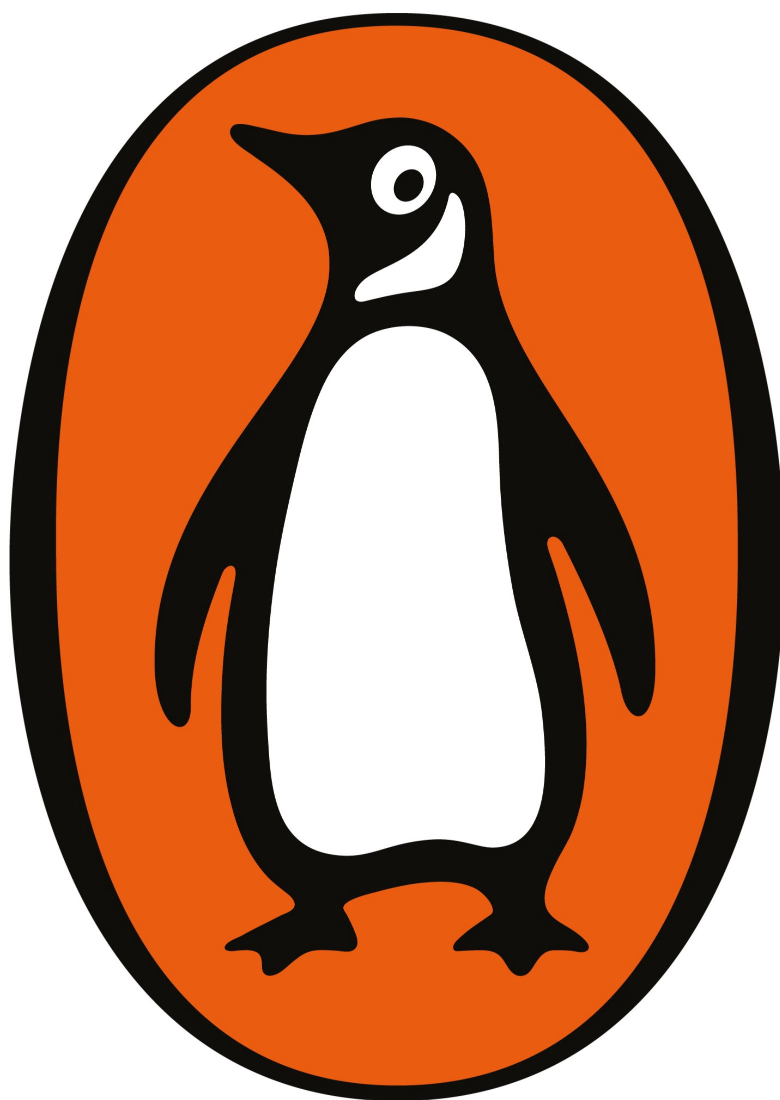


Penguin Random House North Asia

www. penguin. com
This translation first published 1963
This edition first published in Penguin Books 2009

Set by Rowland Phototypesetting Ltd, Bury St Edmunds, Suffolk

企鹅兰登电子书 | PENGUIN RANDOM HOUSE EBOOKS



目录

“伟大的思想”中文版序

企鹅“伟大的思想”系列丛书自2004年开始陆续面世，在英国、美国和德国均有出版。在英国出版品种最多，已付梓八十种，尚有二十种计划出版。该丛书在全球众多读者间，尤其是学生当中，普及了哲学和政治学，销量已远超二百万册。中文版“伟大的思想”的推出，是该系列的又一延续和发展，令人欢欣鼓舞。

推出这套丛书旨在让读者再次与一些伟大的非小说类经典著作面对面地交流。长久以来，此类书籍的出版都建立在这样一个假设之上——此类著作供学生课堂学习之用，因此需辅以导读、详尽的注释及参考书目等。此类版本无疑十分有用，但我想，如果某一版本能够重建托马斯·潘恩的《常识》或约翰·罗斯金的《艺术与人生》初版时的环境，为读者与作者营造更为亲密无间的氛围，使读者除了原作者及其自身的思考外没有其他参照，也许会更有吸引力。

但是，这一做法亦存在严重缺陷：每位作者的表述难免有难解或不可解之处，一些重要的背景知识或许也有所缺失。例如，读者对亨利·梭罗创作时的情形毫无头绪，也不了解该书的反响及影响。不过，这样做的优点也显而易见，最为显著的便是作者的初衷又一次受到重视——托马斯·潘恩的愤怒、查尔斯·达尔文的灵光、塞内加的隐逸。他们给许多国家的众多读者带来的生活影响难以估量，有的影响甚至长达几个世纪，几乎没有什么比阅读这些作家更令人拍案叫绝的了。倘若没有亚当·斯密或阿图尔·叔本华，将无法想象我们今天的世界。这些小书创作年代久远，但其中的话语彻底改变了我们的政治学、经济学、精神世界、社会规划和宗教信仰。

“伟大的思想”系列一直求新求变，地域不同，收录的作家亦不同。一些作家在中国或美国更受欢迎，而英国版“伟大的思想”收录的一些作家在其他国家和地区则鲜有人知。称其为“伟大的思想”，我们亦是慎之又慎。这些思想之所以伟大，在于其影响深远，但这并不意味着这些思想都是“好”思想，实际上一些书或可列入“坏”思想之列。丛书中收录的很多作家受到同样收录于该丛书的其他作家的巨大影响，例如，马塞尔·普鲁斯特承认受约翰·罗斯金影响很大，米歇尔·德·蒙田也承认深受塞内加影响。但也有些作家彼此憎恶，若发现彼此都被收录于同一丛书，一定会深感苦恼。至于他们思想的或“好”或“坏”，读者可自行判明。我们衷心希望，您可以享受阅读这些著作的乐趣。

“伟大的思想”出版者

西蒙·温德尔

导读

李耳（前571—前471），字聃，后世尊称为“老子”，楚国苦县厉乡曲仁里人（今河南省鹿邑县），春秋时期著名思想家，被尊奉为道家与道教的始祖。在《史记》等正统史料中对其身世经历的描述只有寥寥数语，野史杂传中则多为传说，不足全信，故而在今人眼中，老子是一位颇有着神秘色彩的仙风道骨式的人物。相传老子担任周王室管理藏书的官员，师从商容；之后治学传道，开创道家学派，被广为推崇。孔子还曾专程拜访老子问道问礼，但鉴于老子心中“自隐无名”的追求，故而始终不曾著书立说。之后，老子有感于周王朝衰微，于心不忍，故而决意西行离去，途中受函谷关令尹喜的诚意邀托，终于留下《道德经》五千言以讲道德之事，分上下两卷，之后便翩翩离去，隐匿于世。本书也即成为老子的唯一著述，更是道家学派和道教中至高无上的宝典圣经，是“三洞”之精华。关于老子之后的去向众说纷纭，自汉代开始，有传说认为老子携尹喜前往西域，教化胡人，创立佛教，此即为“老子化胡”说，不过这种说法并无确凿佐证。在道教神仙体系中，老子被神话为“三清”之一的“太清道德天尊”，也就是我们所熟知的“太上老君”。

《道德经》，又被称为《老子》《道德真经》《五千言》《老子五千文》等，这是因为在官方史料《史记》中并未正式提及其书名，而是后世根据其内容主旨附会而得。《道德经》分上下两卷，共五千多字，分八十一章，传世本上卷名为《道经》，讲述道之所传；下卷名为《德经》，讲述修养自身心意。《道德经》一书的文字，具有言简意赅、句式平整、音韵协调、修辞多样、字字珠玑、论点精辟、意蕴深远等特点，以五千的字量，囊括尽了老子一生的哲学智慧，可谓是哲学史、文学史与宗教史上的一部旷世经典，至今仍然流行于世界各个国家的读者群体之中。根据联合国教科文组织统计，《道德经》是除《圣经》之外

被翻译成外国文字发行量最多的文化名著，其影响力可见一斑！

《道德经》可谓是东方式传统哲学的源起，即一种朴素的辩证思想与形而上学，在内容上既包藏对宇宙万象的探求，也蕴含对处世哲学的思索，真真正正称得上是一本“奇书”，无数能士贤圣哪怕穷尽一生却依然无法悉知一二。“道”在《道德经》中多次出现，是书的核心思想，同时也是一个不可言说的抽象概念，开篇第一句所谓“道可道，非常道；名可名，非常名”。“道”，是世界的究极本质，是万物的宗主；而且，“道生一，一生二，二生三，三生万物”的观念，更是将来源于“三易”中的世界观系统化，道出了万物的演变与世界的秩序。基于这种“人法地，地法天，天法道，道法自然”的世界观，更是逐渐孕育出了中国影响力与规模最大的本土宗教——道教。道教溯源于春秋道家，在汉末时初具规模，于南北朝时吸收“儒”“释”二家之长，终于在唐朝时最终确立宗教系统，其在华人社会中的地位更是与日俱增。除此之外，《道德经》中还蕴含着丰富的政治智慧及文学智慧，比如“无为而治”“小国寡民”等理念，我们不得不叹服数千年前古人思想的伟大。

作为道家学派的不朽代表，《道德经》的思想成就是众所周知、不容辩驳的，其影响力甚至早已超出中国乃至东亚范围，成为世界思想宝库中的一颗璀璨明珠。《道德经》生于春秋乱世，成于百家争鸣，流传千年至今依然熠熠生辉。今人重读《道德经》，无须再执着于究其全貌，更重要的是一字一句中受用一生的收获，切身体会这中华民族亘古流传的文化精髓。

柴尔

卷一

一章

道可道，非常道[1]；名可名，非常名[2]。无名天地之始，有名万物之母[3]。故常无，欲以观其妙[4]；常有，欲以观其徼[5]；此两者，同出而异名[6]，同谓之玄[7]。玄之又玄，众妙之门[8]。

译文：凡是可以言说的道，都不是永恒的自然之道；凡是可以命名的名，都不是永恒的名。天地之始原本无名，而万物却源于有名。所以，只有修养到“无”的境界，才能看到自然的奥妙，但必须要从“有”来观察，才能看到万物的边际。其实，“有”和“无”本质上相同，有着共同的起源，只是表现形式和名称不同罢了；因为是同体同源，所以都可称之为“玄”，它们幽深远大，是理解天地自然众多奥妙秘密的大门。

二章

天下皆知美之为美，斯恶矣[9]；皆知善之为善，斯不善矣。故有无相生，难易相成，长短相形，高下相倾，音声相和，前后相随[10]。是以圣人处无为之事[11]，行不言之教[12]。万物作焉而不辞，生而不有，为而不恃，功成而弗居[13]。夫唯弗居，是以不去[14]。

译文：如果天下的人都知道什么是美，那么丑就显露出来了；如果天下的人都知道什么是善，那么恶就显露出来了。所以，有与无在对应中相生互变，难与易在对应中互为成功的条件，长与短只是在对应中相互比较而言，高与下在对应中相互倾斜而归于平等，音与声在对应中相互构成自然界和谐的音律，前与后是在对应中相随而来去的。因此，圣人做事只是顺其自然；他用行为自然而然地影响人们，用不着发号令强

行向人们灌输什么道理。他化生万物，但并不统治万物；他使万物生存，却不去占有万物；他慷慨赐予万物一切，而不以此为自己的功绩。正是因为他不居功，他的功绩才永远不会被抹杀。

三章

不尚贤[15]，使民不争[16]；不贵难得之货，使民不为盗[17]；不见可欲，使民心不乱[18]。是以圣人之治，虚其心，实其腹，弱其志，强其骨[19]；常使民无知无欲，使夫智者不敢为也。为无为，则无不治[20]。

译文：不标榜贤才，使人民不去争逐名位。不看重稀有难得的物品，使人民不去用非正常手段获得它们。不炫耀可以引起贪欲的事物，使民心不被扰乱。因此，圣人管理人民的方法是：净化他们的思想，满足他们的安饱需求，淡化他们的志向欲望，强健他们的筋骨肌肉。始终使人民无欺诈争盗的心智和欲念，处于返朴守淳的状态，这样一来，个别的“智者”也就不敢有所作为了。所有人的行为都顺其自然，也就没有什么不能治理的了。

四章

道冲，而用之或不盈[21]。渊兮，似万物之宗[22]。挫其锐，解其纷，和其光，同其尘[23]。湛兮，似或存[24]。吾不知谁之子，象帝之先[25]。

译文：道虚空而不满，但它却取之不尽、用之不竭。它渊深澄寂，就好像是天下万物的主宗一样。顿挫它的坚锐、化解它的纷扰、涵敛它的光芒、混同它于尘俗。它依然是澄澄湛湛，似无或存。我不知道它是谁的后代，它好像比能主宰万有的大帝要早。

五章

天地不仁[26]，以万物为刍狗[27]；圣人不仁[28]，以百姓为刍狗。天地之间，其犹橐籥乎[29]？虚而不屈[30]，动而愈出。多言数穷[31]，不如守中[32]。

译文：天地无所偏私、偏倚，它对万物同等看待，万物按春夏秋冬自然地生长和消亡，好像人们祭祀用的刍狗一样。圣人也无所偏爱、亲疏，他对所有人都同等看待，人们按照自然规律自作自息，好像人们祭祀用的刍狗一样。天地犹如一只嘘吸不已的大风箱，看似空虚，其实无穷，静而藏之，动而用之便有，越动越生生不已。圣人也应当与天地一样，持守中正虚静，不必对人对事多作肯定或否定，才能使人们生生不息。

六章

谷神不死[33]，是谓玄牝[34]。玄牝之门，是谓天地根[35]。绵绵若存[36]，用之不勤[37]。

译文：谷神虚空而奥妙无穷、永不失灭，可称为“微妙的母性”。微妙的母性是天地万物生命源泉的根本。它在时间的长河中，好像是绵绵不绝的存在，化育万物的功能，也是用之不尽的。

七章

天长地久。天地所以能长且久者，以其不自生[38]，故能长生[39]。是以圣人后其身而身先[40]，外其身而身存。非以其无私邪？故能成其私[41]。

译文：天是长在地是久存的。天地之所以能够长久存在，是因为天地不为自己的需要而生，因而能够长久存在。因此，圣人将自己的肉体生命价值放在众人之后，结果反而能使自己处于众人之先；将自己的肉

体生命置之度外，结果反而能使生命长存。并非圣人没有私心，只是因为圣人彻悟了大道，所以才能够成就自己的生命长存。

八章

上善若水[42]。水善利万物而不争，处众人之所恶，故几于道[43]。居善地[44]，心善渊[45]，与善仁[46]，言善信，政善治[47]，事善能，动善时。夫唯不争，故无尤[48]。

译文：一个人如果要合乎道的意识、行为，就要做到如水一样。水有利于万物而不与万物相争，宁愿自居在众人所厌恶的低下、隐蔽的地方，所以，水具有非常接近于道的特性。一个人如果能做到如水一样，就要善于自处而甘居下地，心胸虚静深沉，与人与物宽厚仁慈，说话遵守诚信，为政精简清明，处事调剂融和，行动遵从恰当的天时节令。正是由于不与人相争、不与物相争，才能永无过患而安然处顺。

九章

持而盈之[49]，不如其已[50]；揣而棁之[51]，不可长保。金玉满堂，莫之能守。富贵而骄，自遗其咎[52]。功遂身退[53]，天之道[54]。

译文：物品装得太满必定会流失，不如不要装满；锤锻得太尖，尖端不可能长久保持。金玉财宝聚积了满屋满堂，未必能够守住；富贵之人若处处骄横，必定会给自己招来灾难。功成名就之后，主动隐身退后，这才符合自然规律。

十章

载营魄抱一[55]，能无离乎？专气致柔[56]，能如婴儿乎[57]？涤除玄览[58]，能无疵乎[59]？爱民治国，能无为乎？天门开阖，能为雌乎[60]？明白四达，能无知乎？生之畜之，生而不有，为而不恃，长而不宰，是

谓玄德[61]。

译文：将灵魂和精神合抱为一，永不分离；专注于凝聚精气，达到平静柔和，好像无私无欲的婴儿一样；清除心灵中的任何邪念，心如明镜，照见万象；用无为的心态去爱护人民、治理国家；在心神与物相接之际恬然守静；不需要知识、智慧等人为地机巧，便能够明白与万物相通相识。生养万物，却不去占有万物；慷慨赐予万物一切，却不以此为功绩；化生万物，却不去统治万物；这就是玄妙的德行。

十一章

三十辐共一毂[62]，当其无，有车之用[63]。埏埴以为器[64]，当其无，有器之用。凿户牖以为室[65]，当其无，有室之用。故有之以为利，无之以为用[66]。

译文：车轮的三十根辐条汇集到车轮中心的毂上，中空无一物，却能合众辐条之力，使车轮旋转不息，实现车的功用。用黏土制作器皿，中间空空，才能装盛东西，达到使用的效果。建造一间房屋，必须开辟门窗，光线空气流通，才能住人。所以，“有”给人便利，“无”发挥了它的作用。

十二章

五色令人目盲[67]；五音令人耳聋[68]；五味令人口爽[69]；驰骋畋猎，令人心发狂[70]；难得之货，令人行妨[71]。是以圣人为腹不为目[72]，故去彼取此[73]。

译文：五色俱来，会使我们像盲人一样什么也看不清楚；五音同出，会使我们像聋子一样什么也听不清楚；五味一起品尝，只会损伤舌头的味觉功能。骑马驰骋、猎取野物，会使人心情狂乱；追求难得之

物、稀有之物，会使人行为不端。因此，圣人只使用有限的物品来养育自己，而不会去占有过多的物品，但求恬淡安饱，而不以物役己追逐声色之愉。

十三章

宠辱若惊，贵大患若身[74]。何谓宠辱若惊？宠为下[75]，得之若惊，失之若惊，是谓宠辱若惊。何谓贵大患若身？吾所以有大患者，为吾有身；及吾无身[76]，吾有何患？故贵以身为天下[77]，若可寄天下；爱以身为天下，若可托天下[78]。

译文：得宠或受辱便感到惊恐，把荣辱这样的大患看得与自身生命一样珍贵。什么是得宠或受辱便感到惊恐呢？得宠者相对宠者往往是卑下的，得到宠爱就格外惊喜，失去宠爱就惊慌不安，这就叫作得宠或受辱便感到惊恐。什么是把荣辱这样的大患看得与自身生命一样珍贵呢？我之所以有重大的忧患，是因为我有血肉之躯；如果我没有血肉之躯，那么我还有什么值得忧患的事情呢？因此，看重自身是为了天下，这样的人就可以把天下寄交给他；爱护自身是为了天下，这样的人就可以把天下托付给他。

十四章

视之不见名曰夷[79]；听之不闻名曰希[80]；搏之不得名曰微[81]。此三者不可致诘[82]，故混而为一[83]。其上不皦，其下不昧[84]，绳绳兮不可名[85]，复归于无物。是谓无状之状，无物之象，是谓恍惚[86]。迎之不见其首；随之不见其后。执古之道，以御今之有[87]。能知古始，是谓道纪[88]。

译文：睁大眼睛看仍看不见的东西，称之为“夷”；仔细倾听仍听不到的东西，称之为“希”；认真摸索仍触不到的东西，称之为“微”。这三

种东西无法追究推问到底，本来就是同一种东西。这种东西上不耀眼，下不昏暗，它纷绵不息无法描述，说它是一个具体的物质，它又不是物质。所以，它没有固定的形状，也不能用任何一种东西来比拟它的形象，只好称之为“恍惚”。迎面而来时看不到它的前部；跟随其后时看不见它的后部。遵循古老的“道”的规律，就可以驾驭今天的现实，也可以溯知远古万物的起源，这就是“道”的纲纪。

十五章

古之善为道者[89]，微妙玄通，深不可识。夫唯不可识，故强为之容[90]：豫兮若冬涉川[91]；犹兮若畏四邻[92]；俨兮其若客[93]；涣兮其若凌释[94]；敦兮其若朴[95]；旷兮其若谷[96]；混兮其若浊[97]；孰能浊以静之徐清？孰能安以久，动之徐生[98]？保此道者不欲盈[99]。夫唯不盈，故能蔽而新成[100]。

译文：古代修道之人，精微到妙不可言、无所不通的境界，一般人简直没有办法认识他。正是由于一般人没有办法认识他，所以，只好勉强地描述一些他的外在形象：他小心谨慎，时时像冬天过河；他待人恭敬，好像畏惧周围的人；他严肃拘谨，似乎总是在做客；他融和疏脱，像冰水消融一样；他敦厚朴素，像未经雕琢的木一样；他心胸开阔，像深幽的山谷一样；他浑然纯厚，像一潭浊水一样。谁能使混浊动荡的状态平静下来，然后慢慢变得澄清？又有谁能使平静的状态变动起来，然后慢慢显出生机？保持这个道的人不求盈满。正因为他不求盈自满，所以他能够使敝旧的事物转化为新的事物。

十六章

致虚极[101]，守静笃[102]。万物并作，吾以观复[103]。夫物芸芸[104]，各复归其根[105]。归根曰静，是谓复命[106]。复命曰常[107]，知常曰明[108]。不知常，妄作凶。知常容[109]，容乃公[110]，公乃王[111]，王

乃天，天乃道，道乃久，没身不殆。

译文：心态达到极度的空明无欲，持守彻底的无为安静，才得以反复观察万物生长活动的循环规律。万物生长茂盛到极致，必渐枯靡，终归寂灭，回归到原本状态，这就是“归根”；归根也就是归于“静”，这就叫“复命”，复命叫“常”，体悟天地万物的“常道”，属于明智之人。没有体悟天地万物的“常道”，乱作妄为，必然大凶大害，没有好结果。认识到“常道”的人才能包容一切，具有宽容的心怀，才能处事公正；公正才能为天下之王，这样的王才符合天地自然法则，符合自然的“道”，符合自然的道才能长久，终生不会遭到危险。

十七章

太上，下知有之[112]；其次[113]，亲而誉之；其次，畏之；其次，侮之。信不足焉，有不信焉[114]。悠兮，其贵言[115]。功成事遂[116]，百姓皆谓：“我自然。”[117]

译文：最好的世代君主，人们只知道有他这么一个人而已；次一等的君主，人们亲近他，然后赞誉他；再次一等的君主，人们畏惧他；最次的君主，人们辱骂他。失信于民的君主，人们不信任服从他。君主悠然而不轻易发号施令，等事情成功之后，人们就说这本来就合于自然之道，没有什么好大惊小怪的。

十八章

大道废，有仁义；智慧出，有大伪[118]；六亲不和[119]，有孝慈；国家昏乱[120]，有忠臣。

译文：合乎自然规律的大道废弛了，便提出了仁义道德。智慧产生之后，世间便出现了虚伪和欺骗。父子、兄弟、夫妻不和，才产生所谓

的孝慈。当国家昏乱的时候，便会有忠臣出现。

十九章

绝圣弃智[121]，民利百倍；绝仁弃义，民复孝慈；绝巧弃利，盗贼无有。此三者，以为文不足[122]，故令有所属[123]，见素抱朴[124]，少私寡欲。

译文：抛弃掉那些卖弄聪明才智的做法，人们的生活可以和平安静百倍；抛弃掉那些假仁假义的做法，人们自然会复归于孝慈；抛弃掉那些取巧获利的做法，自然不会有盗贼作奸犯科。圣智、仁义、巧利这三种东西都是巧饰，不足以治理天下。所以要使人有所归属，怀抱原始天然的朴素；随时保持纯净无杂，淡化欲望的思想观念。

二十章

绝学无忧[125]。唯之与阿[126]，相去几何？善之与恶，相去若何？人之所畏，不可不畏。荒兮其未央[127]哉！众人熙熙[128]，如享太牢[129]，如春登台[130]。我独泊兮其未兆[131]，如婴儿之未孩[132]；儽儽兮若无所归[133]。众人皆有余，而我独若遗[134]。我愚人之心也哉[135]，沌沌兮！俗人昭昭，我独昏昏[136]。俗人察察，我独闷闷[137]。澹兮其若海，飂兮若无止[138]。众人皆有以，而我独顽且鄙[139]。我独异于人，而贵食母[140]。

译文：不要一切学问，就会无忧无虑。唯唯诺诺与大声呵斥，两者之间有什么区别呢？善的事物与恶的事物，又有多大差别呢？众人所畏惧的，不能不畏惧。像荒原大沙漠一样广大无边，永无尽头！众人那么喜乐欢悦，有如在享受牛、羊、豕的祭奉一样，又好像春光明媚时登台眺望春色。我却独自如一潭清水，恬淡、宁静，不炫耀自己；又像一个还不懂事的婴儿，天真烂漫，无忧无虑；我平常的心疲惫闲散，好像是

找不到归宿。众人都追求更多的财物显得富足有余，唯独我只取维持生命所需而显得贫困匮乏。我多么淳朴、浑厚！普通人对任何事情都非常明白，只有我昏昧不明；普通人对所有事情都精打细算，只有我混混沌沌。胸襟要像大海一样，宽阔无际；境界要像清风一样，清远徐吹。众人对人生都有目的，都要为世所用、为人所用、为己所用；唯独有我顽冥不化，表现很糟糕。我之所以与众人不同，是因为我看重的是吸取大道来滋养自身。

二十一章

孔德之容[141]，惟道是从。道之为物，惟恍惟惚[142]。惚兮恍兮，其中有象[143]；恍兮惚兮，其中有物；窈兮冥兮[144]，其中有精[145]；其精甚真，其中有信[146]。自今及古，其名不去，以阅众甫[147]。吾何以知众甫之状哉？以此[148]。

译文：大德的样态，随着道而转移。“道”这个东西，是模糊不清、似有似无的。在似有似无、模糊不清中，有它的形象；在模糊不清、似有似无中，有它的实物；在深远而不可测中，有它的精质；这种精质非常真切，有它的信验。从今天推及远古，“道”这个名称不能舍去，否则便不能认识万事万物。我凭什么知道万事万物起始的情况呢？就是依据于道。

二十二章

曲则全，枉则直，洼则盈，敝则新，少则得，多则惑[149]。是以圣人抱一为天下式[150]。不自见[151]，故明；不自是，故彰[152]；不自伐[153]，故有功；不自矜[154]，故长。夫唯不争，故天下莫能与之争。古之所谓“曲则全”者，岂虚言哉！诚全而归之。

译文：委曲可以保全，弯曲可以伸直，低洼的地方可以充盈，敝旧

可以生新，求多需从求少开始，贪多反而令人迷惑，以致一无所获。因此，圣人以固守道作为天下人的榜样。不显露自己，才更为突出；不自以为是，才更为彰明；不自我夸耀，才会有更多的成功；不自我骄矜，才能更为长久。正是由于顺其自然，不人为地去争取，因此天下人都无法与他相争。古人所说“委曲可以保全”的道理，怎能是空话啊！实实在在走“委曲可以保全”的道路，才能够得上为天下之所归，众望之所属。

二十三章

希言自然[155]。故飘风不终朝[156]，骤雨不终日[157]。孰为此者？天地。天地尚不能久[158]，而况于人乎？故从事于道者，同于道；德者同于德；失者同于失[159]。同于道者，道亦乐得之；同于德者，德亦乐得之；同于失者，失亦乐得之。信不足焉，有不信焉[160]！

译文：“道”是不说话、不发号施令的，一切自然而然。狂风刮不过半天，暴雨下不过一日。这是谁做的事情呢？天地。天地尚不能持久，何况于人呢？因此，从事于道的人合于道；从事于德的人合于德；从事于天的人合于天。合于道的人，道也高兴地接受他；合于德的人，德也高兴地接受他；合于天的人，天也高兴地接受他。人要是诚信不足，就会有不信任的事情发生。

二十四章

企者不立[161]；跨者不行[162]。自见者不明；自是者不彰；自伐者无功；自矜者不长。其在道也，曰余食赘行[163]。物或恶之[164]，故有道者不处。

译文：踮起脚跟站者不能久立；跨大步走者不能远行。自逞己现者反而不突出；自以为是者反而不昭彰；自我夸耀者不会成功；自我骄矜者不会长久。这些行为，从道的观点来看，都是多余、无用的，因而也

是有害的。对此，常人都会感到厌恶，所以有道的人不采取这些方式。

二十五章

有物混成[165]，先天地生。寂兮寥兮[166]，独立而不改[167]，周行而不殆[168]，可以为天地母[169]。吾不知其名，强字之曰道[170]，强为之名曰大[171]。大曰逝，逝曰远，远曰反[172]。故道大，天大，地大，人亦大。域中有四大[173]，而人居其一焉。人法地，地法天，天法道，道法自然[174]。

译文：有一个东西涌流长在、源源不断，先天地万物而存在。它没有形象、没有声音，独立存在，始终如一，不为一切外来势力的干扰而改变本性。它无所不在，运行不息，永远无穷无尽。可以称之为天地的母亲。我不知道它的名称，姑且称其为“道”；或者勉强称其为“大”。它无所不在、无所不包而运行不息，运行不息而无边无际，无边无际而循环往复。因此，道无所不包，天无所不包，地无所不包，人亦无所不包。宇宙中有四种无所不包的事物，而人占有其中之一。因此，人要效法大地，地要效法天，天要效法道，道本来就是自然。

二十六章

重为轻根，静为躁君[175]。是以圣人终日行不离辎重[176]，虽有荣观，燕处超然[177]。奈何万乘之主而以身轻天下[178]？轻则失根，躁则失君。

译文：重是轻的根源，静是躁的主宰。因此，圣人随时随地要有负重致远的精神，不忘济世救人的责任感，即便燕然安处在荣华富贵之中，也依然能超然物外，不为荣华富贵所累。为什么贵为万乘之主的君王，却轻举妄动，只图眼前攫取功利，不顾丧失生命的后果？轻则会丧失根基，躁则会丧失主宰。

二十七章

善行无辙迹[179]；善言无瑕谪[180]；善数不用筹策[181]；善闭无关楗而不可开[182]；善结无绳约而不可解[183]。是以圣人常善救人，故无弃人；常善救物，故无弃物。是谓袭明[184]。故善人者，不善人之师；不善人者，善人之资[185]。不贵其师，不爱其资，虽智大迷，是谓要妙[186]。

译文：真正善于行走的，不会留下痕迹；真正话说得好的人，不会留下话柄；真正善于计算的人，用不着计算的工具；真正善于关门的人，不用门栓却使人打不开。真正会打结的人，不结绳扣，也无法解开。事实上，圣人常常救助人，不抛弃任何人；圣人常常救助物，不抛弃任何事物。这可以说是将光明延伸出来。因此，善人是不善人的老师；不善人可以作为善人的借鉴。不崇拜老师，不爱惜可作借鉴的人，虽然各怀聪明，但还是最大的糊涂。这就是幽深而精妙的道理。

二十八章

知其雄[187]，守其雌，为天下溪[188]。为天下溪，常德不离[189]，复归于婴儿。知其白，守其黑，为天下式[190]。为天下式，常德不忒[191]，复归于无极。知其荣，守其辱，为天下谷[192]，为天下谷，常德乃足，复归于朴[193]。朴散则为器[194]，圣人用之[195]，则为官长[196]，故大制不割[197]。

译文：知道什么是强雄，却仍然要安守雌柔，甘愿为天下的溪涧。甘愿为天下的溪涧，才可以做到保有人的德行，重新回归到婴儿那样淳朴无邪的状态。知道什么是明亮，却仍然要安守昏黑，甘愿为天下的模式。甘愿为天下的模式，才不会偏离人的德行，才能够回归到大道。知道什么是荣乐，却仍然要安守卑辱，甘愿为天下的低谷。甘愿为天下的低谷，才能够充实人的德行，从而恢复人的本来面目。人没有了淳朴本

性，就变成了器物工具，圣人懂得这个道理，则成为百官之长；因此，国家大法是不割舍人的本性的。

二十九章

将欲取天下而为之[198]，吾见其不得已[199]。天下神器[200]，不可为也。为者败之[201]，执者失之。夫物或行或随[202]，或歔或吹[203]，或强或羸[204]，或载或隳[205]。是以圣人去甚，去奢，去泰[206]。

译文：想要治理天下而强行去做，我看这种人是不会得逞的。天下这个东西，是一个神妙不可思议的东西，不可过分执着强力妄为。过分执着强力妄为必将遭遇失败。事实上，万物的前行和后随，急动或缓作，强壮或柔弱，安稳或危殆，都是自然而然的事情。因此，圣人会去除过分的行为，去除奢华的行为，去除极端的行为。

三十章

以道佐人主者[207]，不以兵强天下[208]，其事好还[209]。师之所处，荆棘生焉[210]。大军之后，必有凶年。善者果而已[211]，不敢以取强。果而勿矜[212]，果而勿伐[213]，果而勿骄，果而不得已，果而勿强。物壮则老[214]，是谓不道[215]，不道早已。

译文：用自然之道辅佐君主的人，不会赞成使用武力去侵略别人，每件事都必定有还报。军队所到的地方，荆棘就长满了；大战过后，一定会变成荒年。善用兵者，仅仅谋取胜利而已，没有必要继续逞强。胜利了不要自我骄矜，胜利了不要自我夸耀，胜利了不要自我骄傲；打仗只是为了保卫自己的生存，是不得已而为之，胜利了不能继续逞强好胜。少壮的事物伤害老弱，这不是自然之道，不遵从自然之道，只能加速自己的灭亡。

三十一章

夫兵者[216]，不祥之器，物或恶之，故有道者不处[217]。君子居则贵左，用兵则贵右[218]。兵者，不祥之器，非君子之器，不得已而用之，恬淡为上[219]。胜而不美，而美之者，是乐杀人。夫乐杀人者，则不可以得志于天下矣。吉事尚左，凶事尚右[220]。偏将军居左，上将军居右。言以丧礼处之。杀人之众，以哀悲泣之[221]，战胜，以丧礼处之。

译文：杀人的武器是不祥的工具，大家都厌恶它，因此有道之人不肯轻易使用它。君子平常生活工作时以左边为贵，用兵打仗时以右边为贵。武器是不祥的工具，不是君子的工具。万不得已时才会使用它，使用它时恬静平淡为上，胜利了也不要洋洋得意。胜利了洋洋得意的人，纯粹是以杀人为乐。那些以杀人为乐的人，终归是要失败的，不可能逞行于天下。吉祥的事情以左为上，凶丧的事情以右为上。偏将军在左边，上将军在右边。这就是按照办丧事的礼仪去处理。战争中若伤亡较多，应当以悲哀的心情为死伤者送葬。对于获胜归来的将士，要用丧礼来迎接他们。

三十二章

道常无名[222]，朴虽小[223]，天下莫能臣[224]。侯王若能守之，万物将自宾[225]。天地相合，以降甘露，民莫之令而自均[226]。始制有名[227]，名亦既有，夫亦将知止，知止可以不殆[228]。譬道之在天下，犹川谷之于江海。

译文：道本来无名，极其微妙，天下没有谁能主宰它。侯王如果能遵守自然之道，万物将会自动归附于他。就像天地间阴阳之气相合，自然会降下甘露一样，不用发布政令，人们自己就会平等地协调均匀。治理天下就要建立各种制度确定各种名分，各种制度、名分出来了，要知

道适可而止，知道适可而止，就没有什么危险了。可以这样比喻，道对天下的作用，好像川溪汇聚成江海一样。

三十三章

知人者智，自知者明。胜人者有力，自胜者强[229]。知足者富，强行者有志[230]。不失其所者久，死而不亡者寿[231]。

译文：能够清楚认识别人的人，是有智慧的人；能够了解自己的人，是明白人。能够战胜别人，不过是有力量罢了；能够战胜自己，才称得上坚强。知足的人总是富有的，把做不到的事硬做到了，这叫作有志气。守住本分的人可以长久，精神不死的人可以永存。

三十四章

大道泛兮，其可左右[232]。万物恃之以生而不辞，功成不名有[233]。衣养万物而不为主[234]。常无欲，可名于小；万物归焉而不为主[235]，可名为大。以其终不自为大，故能成其大。

译文：大道广博，无往而不在。万物依赖它生长，而它却对万物不加干涉，它滋养万物生长却不以此为己功。它庇护着万物却并不想做万物的主人。它无欲无求，因此可以随便为它定名，称之为小。万物归附于它，它仍然不去主宰万物，包容了万物，这可以叫它为大。由于它始终没有自高自大，所以才能成为伟大。

三十五章

执大象，天下往[236]。往而不害，安平太[237]。乐与饵[238]，过客止。道之出口，淡乎其无味，视之不足见，听之不足闻，用之不足既[239]。

译文：持守自然之道的人，天下都将来归附。归附于道，不互相伤害，于是大家都永远平和安泰。动听的音乐和美味的佳肴，能够吸引住过往的客人。而“道”这个东西，讲起来平淡而无味，看也看不见，听也听不到，但万物都在用它而用之不尽。

三十六章

将欲歙之，必固张之[240]；将欲弱之，必固强之；将欲废之，必固兴之；将欲取之，必固与之[241]。是谓微明[242]。柔弱胜刚强。鱼不可脱于渊，国之利器不可以示人[243]。

译文：要想收敛一个东西，必须先扩张它。要想削弱它，必须先加强它。要想废弃它，必须先兴举它。要想夺取它，必须先给予它。这就是从微弱、渺小的地方看出大道理来。柔弱可以战胜刚强。就像鱼不能离开水一样，国家的生存命脉，也不能轻易展示给别人。

三十七章

道常无为而无不为[244]。侯王若能守之[245]，万物将自化。化而欲作[246]，吾将镇之以无名之朴[247]。无名之朴，夫亦将无欲[248]。不欲以静，天下将自定。

译文：永恒的大道始终无所作为，但是却能够取得无所不为的成果。侯王如果能持守自然之道，万物将自行调节转化。转化后如果又萌生欲望，我将用道来使他们安定。用道来使他们安定，人们又归于完全无欲的状态。处于无欲状态便会静守本分，天下就会自行进入安定状态。

卷二

三十八章

上德不德，是以有德；下德不失德，是以无德[249]。上德无为而无以为[250]；下德为之而有以为。上仁为之而无以为；上义为之而有以为[251]。上礼为之而莫之应，则攘臂而扔之[252]。故失道而后德，失德而后仁，失仁而后义，失义而后礼。夫礼者，忠信之薄，而乱之首[253]。前识者[254]，道之华，而愚之始[255]。是以大丈夫处其厚，不居其薄[256]；处其实，不居其华。故去彼取此[257]。

译文：有上品德行的人做善事很自然，不外在表现有德让别人知道，这才是真正有德行；达不到上品德行的人，做善事总要外在表现出不离德而让别人看出来，这已经不是真正有德行了。有上品德行的人顺应自然，无心作为却无所不为；达不到上品德行的人，行为有目的却不一定有成效。上仁之人的行为是自然无目的的；上义之人的行为是有人为目的的。上礼之人的行为如果没有人响应，他会卷起袖子强拉硬拽别人来赞同自己。因此，“道”渐行消失了以后，才产生了“德”，“德”消失了以后，才产生了“仁”；“仁”消失了之后，才产生了“义”；“义”消失了之后，才产生了“礼”。虚伪之礼是世风日下、忠信式微，乃至天下祸乱的根源。花巧之智是道的虚华，愚昧的开始。所以，君子淳厚，而不会陷入浇薄之境；或者，注重于朴实，而不至于被表面的虚华所欺骗。因此要舍弃虚华、浇薄而采取朴实、淳厚。

三十九章

昔之得一者[258]：天得一以清；地得一以宁；神得一以灵；谷得一

以盈[259]；万物得一以生；侯王得一以为天下贞。其致之[260]，天无以清将恐裂；地无以宁将恐废[261]；神无以灵将恐歇[262]；谷无以盈将恐竭[263]；万物无以生将恐灭；侯王无以贞将恐蹶[264]。故贵以贱为本，高以下为基。是以侯王自称孤、寡、不谷[265]。此非以贱为本邪？非乎？故至数誉无誉。不欲琭琭如玉，珞珞如石。

译文：从前得到过道的：天得到道便可以清明；地得到道便可以安宁；神得到道便可以灵妙；河谷得到道便可以充盈；万物得到道便可以生存；侯王得到道便可以使天下安定。推而言之：天不清明恐怕会导致破裂；地不安宁恐怕会导致崩陷；神不灵异恐怕会导致消失；河谷不充盈恐怕会导致枯竭；万物不生存恐怕会导致毁灭；侯王不使天下安定恐怕会导致败亡。因此，贵以贱为根本，高以下为基础。侯王自称孤、寡、不谷。这不正是以贱为根本吗？不是吗？所以最高的荣誉无需赞美称誉。不求琭琭晶莹像宝玉，只愿珞珞坚硬像山石。

四十章

反者道之动[266]，弱者道之用[267]。天下万物生于有[268]，有生于无[269]。

译文：道的运动规律是循环往复的，道的作用是微妙、柔弱的。天下的万物产生于有，而有产生于无。

四十一章

上士闻道，勤而行之[270]；中士闻道，若存若亡；下士闻道，大笑之。不笑不足以为道。故建言有之[271]：明道若昧[272]；进道若退；夷道若颣[273]。上德若谷[274]；大白若辱；广德若不足；建德若偷[275]；质真若渝[276]。大方无隅[277]；大器晚成；大音希声[278]；大象无形；道隐无名[279]。夫唯道，善贷且成[280]。

译文：贤能之士听到道，会积极努力去修道；中等才德的人听到后，会有时去有时又不去；才德差的人听到后，会哈哈大笑。如果他们不嘲笑的话，那道也就称不上是道了。事实上，古语中已经阐明：光明的大道看起来似乎暗昧；进步的大道看起来似乎在退步；平坦的大道似乎崎岖不平。高尚的品德好像溪谷；纯洁的心灵能够忍辱；广博的德行总感到自我不足；强健的意志总显得怠惰懒散；质朴而纯真却好像含有污垢。特别大的四方形是没有边角的；特殊高明的器物往往是最后出现的；巨大的声音通常是听不见的；庞大的形象也是很难看得见的；道幽隐不可见而没有名称。但是，唯有道才最善于对万物施加影响，并促成万物的生成运转变化。

四十二章

道生一[281]，一生二[282]，二生三[283]，三生万物。万物负阴而抱阳[284]，冲气以为和[285]。人之所恶，唯孤、寡、不谷[286]，而王公以为称。故物或损之而益，或益之而损。人之所教，我亦教之：强梁者不得其死[287]。吾将以为教父[288]。

译文：道是独一无二的，道本身包含着阴阳二气，阴阳二气相交中和形成一种和谐状态，万物在这种状态中产生。万物背着阴而向着阳，阴阳二气互相交冲而成协调和谐的状态。人们最厌恶的就是“孤”、“寡”、“不谷”，但王公却用这些字来称呼自己。所以一切事物，如果减损它，它反而得到增益；如果增益它，它却反而受到减损。别人这样教导我，我也这样去教导别人：恃力强行的人不会有好下场。我把这个道理当作教育的最高原则。

四十三章

天下之至柔[289]，驰骋天下之至坚[290]。无有入无间[291]，吾是以知无为之有益。不言之教，无为之益，天下希及之[292]。

译文：天下最柔弱的东西，可以穿越天下最坚硬的东西；看不见形象的东西可以穿透没有间隙的东西。由此原理，我可以知道无为是一种有益的处世方法。我所提倡的不言之教、无为之益，天下很少有人能达到这个境界。

四十四章

名与身孰亲？身与货孰多[293]？得与亡孰病[294]？甚爱必大费[295]，多藏必厚亡[296]。知足不辱，知止不殆[297]，可以长久。

译文：名利与生命，我们更爱哪一个？生命与财物，哪个更重要？得到与失去它们之中的哪一个，对我们害处更大？过分珍爱某个事物，必然要为它耗费大量的精力；过于积敛财富，必定会招致惨重的损失。所以，懂得知足，就不会受到屈辱；懂得适可而止，就不会遇到危险，这样才可以保持长久的平安。

四十五章

大成若缺[298]，其用不弊[299]。大盈若冲[300]，其用不穷。大直若屈[301]，大巧若拙，大辩若讷[302]。躁胜寒[303]，静胜热。清静为天下正[304]。

译文：完美的东西好像是有缺陷的，但它的作用不会衰竭。充盈的东西好像是空虚的，但它的作用不会穷尽。直的东西好像是弯曲的，精巧的好像是笨拙的；卓越的辩才，仿佛有些口吃。清寒可以克服躁动，安静可以克服暑热。清静无为才能统治天下。

四十六章

天下有道，却走马以粪[305]；天下无道，戎马生于郊[306]。罪莫大于可欲，祸莫大于不知足，咎莫大于欲得[307]。故知足之足，常足矣

[308]。

译文：天下的人奉行自然之道，战马都可以退还到田间用来耕种。天下的人背离自然之道，连怀胎的母马也要送上战场，产仔于战地的郊外。最大的罪过就是有太多的欲望，最大的祸害就是不知足，最大的过失就是想占有。所以，只有知足者才能够常常处于满足状态。

四十七章

不出户，知天下；不窥牖[309]，见天道。其出弥远，其知弥少。是以圣人不行而知，不见而明，不为而成。

译文：不出门就能知道天下的事情；不望窗外，就能知道日月星辰运行的自然规律。出门走得越远，反而知道的事情越少。所以，圣人不用出行便能推知天下的事情，不必亲自观看，便能明了日月星辰的运行情况及其规律，不妄为就能成就无所不为的功绩。

四十八章

为学日益[310]，为道日损[311]。损之又损，以至于无为，无为而无不为。取天下常以无事[312]，及其有事，不足以取天下。

译文：追求学问，知识一天比一天增加。遵循自然之道，欲望一天比一天减少。这样一天天地减少下去，最后便可以达到无为的境地，达到无为的境地便可以无所不为了。因此，治理天下，常常不是用谋略和手段的；用谋略和手段的，是不能治理天下的。

四十九章

圣人无常心[313]，以百姓心为心[314]。善者，吾善之；不善者，吾亦善之，德善[315]。信者，吾信之，不信者，吾亦信之，德信。圣人在

天下歙歙[316]，为天下浑其心[317]。百姓皆注其耳目[318]，圣人皆孩之[319]。

译文：圣人没有私心，而是以百姓的心为自己的心。对于善良的人，我善待他；对于不善良的人，我也善待他；这样可使人人向善。对于守信的人，我信任他；对不守信的人，我也信任他，这样可使人人守信。圣人治理天下，收敛自己的意欲，使天下人归于浑厚朴素。人们都专注于自己的耳目，圣人使他们都回到婴孩般纯真质朴的状态。

五十章

出生入死[320]。生之徒十有三[321]；死之徒十有三[322]；人之生，动之于死地[323]，亦十有三。夫何故？以其生生之厚[324]。盖闻善摄生者[325]，陆行不遇兕虎[326]，入军不被甲兵[327]。兕无所投其角，虎无所措其爪，兵无所容其刃[328]。夫何故？以其无死地。

译文：从出生到死亡，属于长寿的占总数的十分之三，属于短寿的占总数的十分之三，人本来可以得生却走向了死路的，也占总数的十分之三。为什么呢？这是因为他们太放纵欲望而不懂得加以克制。据说，善于养护自己生命的人，在陆地行走不会遇到凶恶的犀牛和猛虎，在战争中也不会受到武器的伤害。犀牛的尖角触不到他，猛虎的利爪抓不到他，武器的利刃刺不到他。为什么会这样呢？因为他没有进入死亡的范围。

五十一章

道生之[329]，德畜之[330]，物形之，势成之[331]。是以万物莫不尊道而贵德。道之尊，德之贵，夫莫之命而常自然[332]。故道生之，德畜之，长之育之，亭之毒之[333]，养之覆之[334]。生而不有，为而不恃，长而不宰，是谓玄德。

译文：道赋予万物生命，用大道至玄德来养育万物，形成万物形象，完成万物的发展。因此，万物没有不尊敬道的，也没有不尊重德的。道之所以受到尊敬，德之所以受到尊重，并不是依靠什么命令，而是出于自然。因而，道化生万物之后，便用德来养育万物、成长万物、繁育万物，形成万物、成熟万物，抚养万物、保护万物。道化生万物却不去占有万物，赐予万物一切而不以此为自己的功绩，使万物生长而不去主宰万物；这就是玄妙的德行。

五十二章

天下有始[335]，以为天下母[336]。既得其母，以知其子[337]；既知其子，复守其母，没身不殆[338]。塞其兑，闭其门[339]，终身不勤[340]。开其兑，济其事[341]，终身不救。见小曰明[342]，守柔曰强。用其光，复归其明，无遗身殃[343]。是谓袭常[344]。

译文：天下万事万物都有本始，这个本始就是天地万物的根源。既然知道根源，就能认识万物。既然认识万物，又把握着万物的根本，那么终身都不会有危险。关门闭户，闭目塞听，不说不听，终身都可从容不迫。如果打开感官满足欲念，就会忙忙碌碌，终身都不可救药。能够察见到细微的，才称得上明白，能够持守柔弱的，才称得上坚强。运用光亮，返照自己，使视力、脑力、智慧恢复过来，不会给自己带来灾难。这就是透过大道认识了永恒的自然规律。

五十三章

使我介然有知[345]，行于大道[346]，唯施是畏[347]。大道甚夷[348]，而民好径[349]。朝甚除[350]，田甚芜[351]，仓甚虚[352]。服文彩，带利剑，厌饮食，财货有余，是谓盗夸[353]。非道也哉！

译文：假使我掌握知识，在大道上行走，唯一担心害怕的就是走了

邪路。大道虽然平坦，但人却喜欢走邪径。朝廷腐败坏了，农田荒芜无人耕种，国库空虚，但有人却仍身着彩绣绸衣，佩带锋利的宝剑，饱餐美味佳肴，搜刮占有太多的财货，这就叫作强盗头子。多么的无道呀！

五十四章

善建者不拔，善抱者不脱，子孙以祭祀不辍[354]。修之于身，其德乃真；修之于家，其德乃余；修之于乡，其德乃长[355]；修之于国，其德乃丰[356]；修之于天下，其德乃普。故以身观身，以家观家，以乡观乡[357]，以国观国，以天下观天下。吾何以知天下然哉？以此。

译文：善于建树的人所建的东西永远不可能被拔掉，善于抱持的人抱住一个东西怎么也不会脱落，如果子孙能够遵循、守持这个道理，就可以世世代代祭祀，永不断绝。用这个道理陶冶自己的身心，他的品德便可以返璞归真；用这个道理治理家事，这一家人的品德便可高尚有余；用这个道理治理乡村，这个乡的影响就更大了；用这个道理治理国家，这个国家的德政会兴盛起来；用这个道理治理天下，高尚的道德便可以普及于天下。因此，从一个人可以推知其他人，从一个家庭可以观知其他家庭，从一个乡村可以观知其他乡村，从一个国家可以观知其他国家，从一个天下可以观知其他天下。我怎么会知道天下的情况之所以然呢？就是用以上的方法和道理。

五十五章

含德之厚，比于赤子。毒虫不螫[358]，猛兽不据[359]，攫鸟不搏[360]。骨弱筋柔而握固，未知牝牡之合而朘作[361]，精之至也。终日号而不嗄[362]，和之至也[363]。知和曰常，知常曰明，益生曰祥[364]，心使气曰强[365]。物壮则老[366]，谓之不道，不道早已。

译文：一个品德纯厚的人，好比初生的婴儿。毒虫不去螫他，猛兽

也不伤害他，凶鸟不扑抓他。他的筋骨柔弱，但拳头却握得很牢固。他没有男女的欲念，但小生殖器却自动勃起，这是精气充足的缘故。他整天号哭不止，却不会哭哑声音，这是身体和谐造成的。认识和谐的道理叫作“常”。认识“常”叫作“明”。贪生纵欲就会遭殃；意志役使天地和谐，就是逞强。强壮的事物伤害老弱，是违背自然之道；违背自然之道，就会很快灭亡。

五十六章

知者不言，言者不知[367]。塞其兑，闭其门[368]；挫其锐，解其纷；和其光，同其尘[369]，是谓玄同[370]。故不可得而亲，不可得而疏；不可得而利，不可得而害；不可得而贵，不可得而贱[371]，故为天下贵。

译文：真正有智慧的人是不轻易说话的，轻易说话的人是没有智慧的。关门闭户，闭目塞听、不听不说；磨炼人们的锐气、化解他们的纷争、收敛他们的光芒、认同他们尘俗。这就是玄妙齐同的“道”。达到玄妙齐同境界的人，已经超脱亲疏、利害、贵贱的世俗范围，所以就为天下人所尊重。

五十七章

以正治国[372]，以奇用兵[373]，以无事取天下[374]。吾何以知其然哉？以此：天下多忌讳[375]，而民弥贫[376]；民多利器[377]，国家滋昏；人多伎巧[378]，奇物滋起[379]；法令滋彰[380]，盗贼多有。故圣人云：我无为而民自化[381]；我好静而民自正[382]；我无事而民自富；我无欲而民自朴[383]。

译文：治理国家要靠光明磊落，用兵打仗要靠奇巧谋略，治理天下要不搅扰人民。我怎么知道这个道理呢？是因为以下理由：天下的规则

禁忌越多，人们就越贫穷；人们的利器越多，国家就越陷于混乱；人们的奇巧淫技越多，各种邪奇的事物也就越不断滋生；法规条令越多，盗贼的行为就越不断增加。因此，圣人说：“我无为，人们自然被感化；我静定，人们就自然端正；我无为而治，人们就自然生活富裕；我没有私欲，人们就自然淳朴。”

五十八章

其政闷闷[384]，其民淳淳[385]；其政察察[386]，其民缺缺[387]。祸兮，福之所倚[388]；福兮，祸之所伏[389]。孰知其极？其无正也。正复为奇，善复为妖[390]。人之迷，其日固久。是以圣人方而不割[391]，廉而不刿[392]，直而不肆[393]，光而不耀[394]。

译文：政治平和渐进，人民就淳朴安分；政治明察秋毫，人民就狡猾奸诈。灾祸，可能会转化为幸福；幸福，则可能隐藏着灾祸。谁能知道终极的结果呢？没有永远的正。正可以转化为邪，善可以转化为恶。可惜，世人迷惑于此，历时已经非常久远了。因此，有道的圣人方正而不伤害人，有棱角而不刺痛人，直率而不放肆，光明而不刺耀。

五十九章

治人事天，莫若啬[395]。夫唯啬，是谓早服[396]；早服谓之重积德[397]；重积德则无不克[398]；无不克则莫知其极[399]；莫知其极，可以有国；有国之母[400]，可以长久。是谓深根固柢[401]，长生久视之道[402]。

译文：治理人民、养护身心最好的办法莫过于节省了。只有节省精神和生命，才可以早早地把自己的生命功能保持住；早早地把自己的生命功能保持住就是不断积德；不断积德就没有什么不能攻克的；达到攻无不克的水平，别人便无法估量他的力量极限；具备了无法估量的力量，他就可以担负治理国家的重任。掌握治理国家的根本，便可以长治

久安。这就是所谓的根深蒂固，做到根深蒂固，便可获得长久生存。

六十章

治大国若烹小鲜[403]。以道莅天下[404]，其鬼不神[405]；非其鬼不神，其神不伤人；非其神不伤人，圣人亦不伤人。夫两不相伤，故德交归焉。

译文：治理大国，好像用文火小心、慢慢地烹制小鱼。用道治理天下，鬼神便无法施展灵通；不是鬼神没有灵通，而是他们的灵通不会去伤害人。不但他们不会去伤害人，圣人也不会去伤害人。这样，鬼神和人彼此互不相伤，就可以让人民享受到德的恩泽。

六十一章

大国者下流[406]，天下之交[407]，天下之牝[408]。牝常以静胜牡，以静为下。故大国以下小国，则取小国；小国以下大国，则取大国[409]。故或下以取，或下而取[410]。大国不过欲兼畜人[411]，小国不过欲入事人。夫两者各得其所欲，大者宜为下。

译文：大国要像居于江河下游那样，使天下百川河流在这里交汇。天下各种事物的雌雄相交，雌柔往往以安静夺定而战胜雄强，这种安静夺定就是居于下流。因此，大国若谦下待小国，则可以争取小国的归附；小国若谦下待大国，则可以取得大国的容纳。因此，或者谦让而取得对方的信任，或者谦让而见容于对方。大国的欲望不过是接纳吸收别国加入自己的联盟，小国的欲望不过是加入别国的同盟。这样，双方都各得其所欲求的，因此大国还是以居于下流为好。

六十二章

道者，万物之奥[412]，善人之宝，不善人之所保[413]。美言可以市

尊，美行可以加人[414]。人之不善，何弃之有？故立天子，置三公[415]。虽有拱璧以先驷马[416]，不如坐进此道[417]。古之所以贵此道者何？不曰：求以得[418]，有罪以免邪？故为天下贵。

译文：道是万物的庇荫，善良的人保护它、珍惜它，不善的人得到它的保护和救助。美丽动听的语言可以换来别人的尊敬，美好的行为可以获得别人的拥戴。即使是不善的人，道也不会抛弃他！因此，人们设立天子，配置三公。虽然有拱璧驷马这些价值连城的珍宝，但不如“道”重要。古人为什么把“道”看得那么珍贵？为什么不说：有要求就可以得到满足，犯了罪要求免罪就可以免吗？所以，道才是天下最崇高伟大、至高无上、至贵无上的。

六十三章

为无为[419]，事无事，味无味[420]。大小多少，抱怨以德[421]。图难于其易[422]，为大于其细。天下难事必作于易[423]；天下大事必作于细。是以圣人终不为大，故能成其大。夫轻诺必寡信[424]，多易必多难。是以圣人犹难之，故终无难矣。

译文：以无为的态度去有所作为，以不滋事的方法去处理事物，把恬淡无味当作有味。大生于小，多起于少，以恩德来报怨恨。解决难题，要从最容易的地方入手；实现远大，要从细微的地方入手。天下的难事一定要从容易的地方做起，天下的大事一定要从细小的地方做起。因此，圣人从来不企图做大事，却能够做成大事。凡是轻易允诺的人常常是不可信的，总把事情看得太容易的人必然会遇到很多的困难。因此，圣人总是重视天下事，所以才不会有困难了。

六十四章

其安易持[425]，其未兆易谋[426]，其脆易泮[427]，其微易散。为之于

未有，治之于未乱。合抱之木，生于毫末[428]；九层之台[429]，起于累土[430]；千里之行，始于足下。为者败之，执者失之。是以圣人无为故无败，无执故无失。民之从事，常于几成而败之[431]。慎终如始，则无败事。是以圣人欲不欲，不贵难得之货[432]；学不学，复众人之所过[433]，以辅万物之自然而不敢为[434]。

译文：局面安定才容易保持长久，还没有出现混乱的征兆时容易谋求预防措施。脆弱的东西容易破碎，细微的东西容易失散。做事情要在还没开始之前就把基础都打好了；治理国政，要在天下未乱时就把乱根除掉。双手合抱的大树，生长于细小的嫩芽；九层的高台，是由一筐土一筐土堆筑起来的；千里的远行，是从脚下一步一步走出来的。有所作为的会招致失败，过于执着的会遭受失败。因此圣人无所作为而不致失败，不过于执着而不致失败。人们做事情，常常是在接近于成功时遭到失败。所以，做事情，在接近完成时也要像开始时那样慎重，就不至于失败。因此，圣人追求的是无所欲求，不看重难以得到的东西；做学问达到好像是没有学问的境界，恢复到比一般人还平凡，圣人只是辅助万物顺其自然而不妄为。

六十五章

古之善为道者，非以明民[435]，将以愚之[436]。民之难治，以其智多[437]。故以智治国，国之贼；不以智治国，国之福。知此两者亦稽式[438]。常知稽式，是谓玄德[439]。玄德深矣，远矣，与物反矣[440]，然后乃至大顺[441]。

译文：古代善于行道的人，不是教导人民知晓智巧伪诈，而是教导人民淳厚朴实。人民之所以难于统治，是因为他们的智巧心机太多。因此，用智巧心机治理国家，就必然会危害到国家，不用智巧心机治理国家，那才有益于国家。这两种都是治理国家的一个法则，时刻不忘这个

法则，就叫作玄妙的德行。玄妙的德行真是太深妙了，太幽远了，它与具体的事物看起来是相反的，正因为相反，然后才能完全顺乎自然。

六十六章

江海之所以能为百谷王者[442]，以其善下之[443]，故能为百谷王。是以欲上民[444]，必以言下之；欲先民[445]，必以身后之。是以圣人处上而民不重[446]，处前而民不害[447]。是以天下乐推而不厌[448]。以其不争，故天下莫能与之争。

译文：江海所以能够成为百川河流所归往的地方，是因为江海能够居于低处，因而它能够成为百川汇集之处。所以，要想做居上位的人，言语态度一定要谦虚；要想领导人民，必须把自身的利益摆在后面。所以，圣人虽然地位居于人民之上，而人民并不感觉有重压，居于人民之前，而人民并不感觉受到妨害。天下人都乐意推举拥戴他而不感到厌倦。因为他不与人民相争，所以天下没有人能和他相争。

六十七章

天下皆谓我道大，似不肖[449]。夫唯大，故似不肖。若肖，久矣其细也夫。我有三宝，持而保之：一曰慈[450]，二曰俭[451]，三曰不敢为天下先。慈故能勇[452]，俭故能广[453]，不敢为天下先，故能成器长[454]。今舍慈且勇，舍俭且广，舍后且先，死矣。夫慈，以战则胜，以守则固。天将救之[455]，以慈卫之。

译文：天下的人都说我讲的“道”很大，它不像什么具体的事物。就是因为它很大，所以才不像具体的事物。如果像一个什么具体的事物，这个道就不伟大了。我有三件法宝执守而且保全它：第一件是仁慈；第二件是节俭；第三件是不敢居于天下人之先。有了仁慈才能有勇气；有了节俭才能广博；不敢居于天下人之先，才能成为万物的领导。现在丢

弃仁慈而追求勇气；丢弃节俭而追求广大；舍弃居后而追求争先，结果是走向死亡。拥有仁慈之心，打仗就能够胜利，防守就能够巩固。天要救助谁，就用仁慈来保护他。

六十八章

善为士者不武[456]；善战者不怒[457]；善胜敌者不与[458]；善用人者为之下[459]。是谓不争之德，是谓用人之力，是谓配天古之极[460]。

译文：真正的勇武之士，不会有粗暴行为；善于打仗的人，不轻易动怒；善于战胜敌人的人，不与敌人正面冲突；善于用人的人，对人态度谦和。这就是不与人争的品德，这就叫作运用别人的能力，这就是与天一样伟大的古老而不变的原则。

六十九章

用兵有言：吾不敢为主而为客[461]；不敢进寸而退尺[462]。是谓行无行[463]，攘无臂[464]，扔无敌[465]，执无兵[466]。祸莫大于轻敌，轻敌几丧吾宝[467]。故抗兵相若[468]，哀者胜矣[469]。

译文：精通军事理论的人曾经说过：“带兵打仗，我不主动进攻，而采取被动防守；在双方交战时，我不轻易前进一寸，而宁肯后退一尺。”这就叫作有阵势却又不像有阵势，想奋臂打人却又不伸出臂膀，与敌对抗却没有敌手，使用兵器却像没拿兵器。最大的灾祸莫过于轻敌，一旦轻敌便丧失了我的“三宝”。当交战双方实力相当时，慈悲的一方可以获得胜利。

七十章

吾言甚易知，甚易行。天下莫能知，莫能行。言有宗[470]，事有君[471]。夫唯无知[472]，是以不我知。知我者希[473]，则我者贵[474]。是

以圣人被褐而怀玉[475]。

译文：我说的话非常容易理解，也非常容易施行。可是天下却没有人能够真正理解，也没有人能够完全施行。其实，我说的话都有宗旨，我做的事都有根据。然而，由于人们不理解这个道理，因此也就无法理解我这个人。能够理解我的人就不多，而能够效法我的人就更难能可贵了。所以，真正得道的大圣人总是身着粗布衣服而怀揣无价美玉的。

七十一章

知不知，上[476]；不知知，病[477]。夫唯病病[478]，是以不病。圣人不病，以其病病，是以不病。

译文：知道很多东西，却认为自己知道不多的人，最好；不知道多少东西，却以为自己什么都知道了，这是人生的大病。只有知道这是一种病的人，才不会得这种病。圣人没有这种毛病，那是因为他把这种病看作病，所以才不会犯这种病。

七十二章

民不畏威，则大威至[479]。无狎其所居[480]，无厌其所生[481]。夫唯不厌，是以不厌[482]。是以圣人自知不自见[483]，自爱不自贵。故去彼取此[484]。

译文：当人民不畏惧权威的时候，可怕的祸乱就要到来。不要逼迫人民使他们不得安居，不要阻挡他们谋生的道路。只有为政者不压迫人民，人民才不厌恶统治者。所以，圣人有自知之明而不表现自己，有自爱之心而不自以为贵；也就是说，排除自我表现、自以为贵而保留自知之明、自爱之心。

七十三章

勇于敢则杀；勇于不敢则活。此两者，或利或害。天之所恶[485]，孰知其故？是以圣人犹难之。天之道，不争而善胜，不言而善应，不召而自来，然而善谋[486]。天网恢恢[487]，疏而不失[488]。

译文：有勇气并什么事情都敢干，难免招来杀身之祸；有勇气但谨慎不妄为，却可以平安地存活下来。这两种情况，结果是有利或者有害。上天为什么要厌恶前者？谁知道其中的缘故？这个问题圣人也难以回答。自然的规律是，不与物争、不与人争，然而却更精通如何取胜；无需言语却善于作出反应；不用召唤却会自动到来；看上去像一张网张开但其中却有谋略。天网宽广无边，尽管网眼稀疏，实际上却不会遗漏任何东西。

七十四章

民不畏死，奈何以死惧之[489]？若使民常畏死，而为奇者[490]，吾得执而杀之，孰敢[491]？常有司杀者杀[492]，夫代司杀者杀，是谓代大匠斫[493]。夫代大匠斫者，希有不伤其手者矣[494]。

译文：人民不畏惧死，那为什么要用死来吓唬他们呢？假如说人民真的都畏惧死，我们可以把少数邪恶之人抓来处死，谁还敢再为非作歹？天地间有专管生杀权的，只有它可以行使杀人的任务，但谁如果代替了专管杀人的人去杀人，就如同不懂木匠活的人却来代替高明的木匠去砍木头。凡是代替高明的木匠去砍木头的人，很少有不砍伤自己的手的。

七十五章

民之饥，以其上食税之多[495]，是以饥。民之难治，以其上之有为[496]，是以难治。民之轻死[497]，以其上求生之厚[498]，是以轻死。夫唯无以生为者[499]，是贤于贵生[500]。

译文：人民之所以遭受饥荒，是因为统治者吞吃赋税太多，所以人民才陷于饥饿。人民之所以难以统治，是因为统治者政令繁苛、喜欢有所作为，所以人民就难以统治。人民之所以把死看得那么轻，是因为统治者贪得无厌，只去满足自己奢侈的生活，而不顾及人民的死活，所以人民觉得死了也不算什么。只有不去追求生活享受的人，才比过分看重自己生命的人高明。

七十六章

人之生也柔弱[501]，其死也坚强[502]。草木之生也柔脆[503]，其死也枯槁[504]。故坚强者死之徒，柔弱者生之徒[505]。是以兵强则灭，木强则折。坚强处下，柔弱处上。

译文：人活着的时候身体是柔软的，死了以后身体就变得僵硬了。草木生长时是柔软脆弱的，死了以后就变得干枯了。所以坚强的东西属于死亡的一类，柔弱的东西属于生长的一类。因此，用兵逞强就会遭到灭亡，树木强大了就会遭到砍伐摧折。凡是强大的，总是处于下位，凡是柔弱的，反而居于上位。

七十七章

天之道[506]，其犹张弓与[507]？高者抑之，下者举之。有余者损之，不足者补之。天之道，损有余而补不足。人之道则不然[508]，损不足以奉有余。孰能有余以奉天下[509]？唯有道者。是以圣人为而不恃，功成而不处[510]，其不欲见贤[511]。

译文：自然的规律，不是很像张弓射箭吗？弓对准目标射，太高了就往下压一点，太低了就拉高一点，超出了就少拉满一点，不够远就多拉紧一点。自然的规律，是减少有余的补给不足的。可是人类社会的法则却不是这样，贫困不足的人民却还要拿出财物奉供侈奢有余的权贵。

那么，谁能把自己有余的东西供献给天下的人呢？唯有得道之人。因此，圣人慷慨赐予万物一切，而不以此为自己的功绩。他是不愿意显示自己的贤能。

七十八章

天下莫柔弱于水，而攻坚强者莫之能胜[512]，以其无以易之[513]。弱之胜强，柔之胜刚，天下莫不知，莫能行。是以圣人云：受国之垢[514]，是谓社稷主；受国不祥[515]，是为天下王。正言若反。

译文：天下万物没有比水更柔弱的了，然而攻克坚强却没有什么东西能比得过水，因为没有什么东西能够代替水的地位。弱小的可以战胜强大的，柔弱的可以战胜刚强的；天下没有人不知道这个道理，但是却没有人能够做得到。所以圣人说：“能够承受全国的屈辱，才称得上是国家的君主；能够承担全国的灾难，才称得上是天下人的君王。”正面的话才是真话，可是往往做不到，就像是在说反话。

七十九章

和大怨，必有余怨，安可以为善？是以圣人执左契，而不责于人[516]。有德司契[517]，无德司彻[518]。天道无亲[519]，常与善人[520]。

译文：深重的怨恨和解以后，必然还会留有余怨；怎么样才是最妥善的办法呢？因此，要像圣人那样，只把握住大原则，不必苛责别人。有德的人就像圣人那样只把握住大原则，没有德的人处处设置规则。自然的规律对任何人都没有偏爱，永远帮助有德的善人。

八十章

小国寡民[521]。使有什伯之器而不用[522]；使民重死而不远徙[523]。虽有舟舆，无所乘之[524]；虽有甲兵，无所陈之[525]。使民复结绳而用

之[526]。甘其食，美其服，安其居，乐其俗。邻国相望，鸡犬之声相闻[527]，民至老死不相往来。

译文：国土狭小人民稀少。即使拥有各种各样的器具也不使用；人民尊重生命而不向远方迁徙。尽管拥有船只车辆却不乘坐；虽然有武器装备，却没有必要去布阵打仗。使人民再回到远古结绳记事的早期原始状态之中。人民拥有自认为最甜美的食品，最美观的服装，最安适的居所，最欢乐自在的社会风俗。邻国之间可以互相望见，鸡犬的叫声都可以听得见，但人民从生到死，也不互相往来。

八十一章

信言不美，美言不信[528]。善者不辩，辩者不善[529]。知者不博，博者不知[530]。圣人不积[531]，既以为人己愈有[532]，既以与人己愈多[533]。天之道，利而不害。圣人之道，为而不争[534]。

译文：真实可信的话不漂亮，漂亮的话不真实可信。善良的人不太会说话，能说会道的人不善良。具有真知灼见的人不卖弄，卖弄的人不会有真知灼见。圣人不积聚财物，他尽力去帮助别人，自己反而拥有更多，尽力去奉献给别人，自己反而更为富有。自然的规律是让万事万物都得到好处，而不伤害它们。圣人的行为准则是，做什么事都尽力给予而不与人与物相争。

[1]这句中第一个“道”字是名词，指可言之道，即万事万物的规律；第二个“道”字是动词，指言说；第三个“道”字是名词，指通达于万事万物的一种境界。常：永恒。

[2]这句中第二个“名”字是动词，指命名；第三个“名”字是名词，是老子“道”之名。

[3]无：无形体，指形而上的“道”。始：开端、根源，有原始纯朴之意。有：有形体，指天地自然。母：开始。

[4]妙：奥妙。

[5]徼：边，引申为边际。

[6]此两者：“有”与“无”。同出：同出于“道”。

[7]玄：幽昧深远，其色黝然，是老子《道德经》思想中的一个重要的概念，有深远看不透的意思。

[8]众妙之门：一切变化的门户。

[9]斯：则、就。恶：丑。

[10]此处“有无、难易、长短、高下、音声、先后”六者都是在对应中相互转换、相依相存的。

[11]是以：连词，承上启下，通过总结上文得出结论。圣人：道家最高的理想人物：此处指符合道家政治原则的统治者。处：处居、执行。无为：顺其自然、不妄为。事：政事。

[12]行：做、办。不言：不待语言；此处指为政治理者少发号令和政令。

[13]不辞：任其自然而不加干涉。不有：不占有、不据有。不恃：不期待回报。弗居：于事不居其功。

[14]不去：不会失去。

[15]尚：崇尚、推崇。贤：才、能。尚贤：好名。标榜贤良，崇尚有为。

[16]不争：不争功名，回归自然。

[17]难得之货：凭借正常手段从正常渠道难以得到的东西，凡指钱财。盗：偷、窃。

[18]见：通“现”，呈现、炫耀的意思。可欲：可以惹引人之欲望的事或物，如美色、美味、美物等。

[19]虚：虚寂、净化。实：哺饱。弱：减弱、削弱。强：强壮、强化。

[20]知：通“智”。无知无欲：无欺诈争盗的心智和欲念，返朴守淳。

[21]冲：“虚”的意思。盈：满、溢、尽。

[22]渊：幽深，形容道境深远，找不到边际。宗：祖。

[23]挫：锉，锉磨。锐：锐气。纷：忿，不切合实际的纷纷之想。和：涵、合。同：混同。尘：尘埃，此处指尘世、尘俗。

[24]湛：澄（沉）、没；此处指“道”隐而无形。

[25]象：似、像。帝：大帝、天帝。

[26]仁：亲、爱，此处指有私心的偏爱。

[27]刍狗：古人用谷草扎成的用以祭祀天地神灵的狗。祭祀时，祭者将盖上花布的“刍狗”恭敬地放在神前，祭祀完毕即扔弃，任人践踏，无顾惜之意。

[28]圣人不仁：圣人无所偏爱、亲疏。

[29]橐籥：古人用手操作的鼓风器具，犹如今日的风箱。

[30]不屈：不尽、不竭。

[31]多言：指政令繁多。数：通“速”。穷：尽，不通，引申为行不通、碰壁。

[32]中：通“冲”，“虚”的意思。守中：保持中正虚静。

[33]谷：山谷，指两山夹峙间中空低洼地，可以喻虚空或中空无物。神：神妙莫测。不死：不穷竭，此处喻变化无穷。

[34]玄：微妙难知。牝：母体。玄牝：微妙的母性。

[35]门：门户。根：根源。

[36]绵绵：微微而不绝。

[37]勤：尽。不勤：不穷尽。

[38]自生：为自己谋生，此处指为自己私利而生存运作。

[39]长生：长久生存。

[40]后其身而身先：置自身于最后，结果反而能占先。

[41]成其私：成就他自己。

[42]上善：合乎道的意识、行为。

[43]几：接近，相似。几于道：接近于道或相似于道。

[44]地：低卑的意思。

[45]渊：深静的意思。

[46]与：予，指和别人相交。

[47]政：有行政的意思。

[48]尤：过失。

[49]持：持有。盈：充盈、盈满。

[50]已：停、止、休。

[51]揣：读“捶”，捶打的意思。棁之：使之坚挺。

[52]咎：灾祸。

[53]遂：成。

[54]天之道：指自然规律。

[55]载：载负。也有说载为“哉”。营魄：喻灵魂。

[56]专：集中、结聚的意思。专气：结聚精气。

[57]婴儿：用作动词，成为婴儿。

[58]涤除：洗涤。览：通“鉴”，指镜子。

[59]疵：弊病、瑕疵。

[60]天门：耳目口鼻等感官。开阖：动静开合。雌：阴。

[61]畜：养。宰：主宰、宰制。

[62]辐：车轮上连接轴心和轮圈的直条。毂：车轮中心的孔型部件，外连辐条，内装车轴。

[63]无：指车轮中心的圆孔，是车轮的枢纽。也有的解释为“空处”。

[64]埏：糅合、和泥的意思。埴：黏土。

[65]凿：打孔、打洞。牖：窗户。户牖：门窗。

[66]之：助词。有之以为利，无之以为用："有"（器的实体）给人便利，"无"（器的空处）发挥它的作用。

[67]五色：红、黄、蓝、白、黑五种颜色，这里指代有形世界的颜色。

[68]五音：宫、商、角、徵、羽五种声音，这里指代有形世界的声音。

[69]五味：酸、甜、苦、辣、咸五种味道，这里指有形物质的味道。

[70]驰骋：骑马奔驰，喻动之极。畋猎：猎取野物。发狂：心浮放荡，处于疯狂状态。

[71]行妨：伤害行为。

[72]为腹不为目：以物养己，但求恬淡安饱，而不以物役己追逐声色之愉。

[73]去彼：舍弃"为目"的生活。取此：选择"为腹"的生活。

[74]宠：宠爱、得宠。辱：侮辱、受辱。若：乃、便。惊：惊慌、惊恐。贵：重视、看重。

[75]宠为下：得宠者相对宠者来说往往是下人。

[76]及：如果。无身：与"有身"相对，意义相反。

[77]贵以身为天下：看重自身是为了天下。

[78]若：乃；相当于才、就。

[79]夷：平坦无阻的意思，形容无形。

[80]希：静的意思，形容无声。

[81]搏：抚、摹。微：细微的意思，形容无。

[82]致诘：推问追究的意思。

[83]故：本来的意思。混：混然，合而未分。一：这里指"道"。

[84]皦：明。昧：暗，"皦"的反义词。

[85]绳绳兮：形容纷绵不息。

[86]恍惚：若存若亡、似有似无。

[87]御：驾驭的意思。

[88]古始：原初、太初。道纪：“道”的纲纪，喻规律。

[89]道：老子之道。

[90]容：形容、形象。

[91]豫：一种野兽的名称；兽性多疑。“豫兮”引申为迟疑谨慎的意思。冬涉川：冬天涉水过河，怕冷、小心翼翼不敢贸然下水。

[92]犹：是猴子之属的一种动物。“犹兮”引申为做事胆子很小，犹豫不决的意思。

[93]俨：敬；形容态度恭谨端凝。

[94]涣：疏散。释：释解。

[95]敦：敦厚质朴。朴：指未经砍削雕琢的原状木头。

[96]旷：空豁。

[97]浊：水浊、浊水。

[98]孰：谁。

[99]盈：满。不欲盈：不求盈满。

[100]蔽而新成：敝旧能更新。

[101]虚：心灵空明无欲。极：极度、极点。

[102]静：无为安静。笃：彻底。

[103]作：生长活动。复：往复、回复、循环。

[104]芸芸：草木繁盛纷杂。

[105]根：根本、本原。

[106]归根：回归本原。复命：复归原赋予的本性。

[107]常：天地万物运动变化中的不变法则（原则）。

[108]明：认识、了解事物运动变化中的法则，叫作“明”。

[109]容：包容的意思。

[110]公：大公、公平。

[111]王：为天下之王。

[112]太上：指最好的世代君主。下：民众、百姓。之：代词，代人君、统治者。以下三个“之”作同解。

[113]其次：等而下之。

[114]焉：于是。

[115]贵言：不轻易说话；可引申为君主、统治者说话慎重，不轻易发号施令。

[116]遂：成。

[117]我：老百姓自称。

[118]智：智巧。伪：伪诈，虚伪和欺骗。

[119]六亲：父子兄弟夫妇。

[120]昏：黑暗、昏庸。乱：混乱、动乱。

[121]圣：自作聪明。

[122]此三者：指圣智、仁义、巧利。文：文饰，巧饰。

[123]属：从属、归属。

[124]素：不染色的丝。朴：未加工的木。

[125]绝学：指弃绝仁义圣智之学。

[126]唯：指服从听命的语声，其语声低。阿：呵斥的声音，其声音高。

[127]荒：广漠开阔。央：尽的意思。

[128]熙熙：喜乐、高兴。

[129]享：通古字“饗”，指吃、食。太牢：古代祭祀社稷时隆重丰盛的具有牛羊猪三牲之肉筵席。

[130]如春登台：就像登上春和景明的亭台眺望春色。

[131]我：此处泛指体道修己之士。泊：恬淡、宁静。兆：显示炫耀征兆、迹象。

[132]孩：古文作“咳”，小儿笑的意思。

[133]儽：疲惫闲散的意思。

[134]有余：有剩余。遗：不足。

[135]愚：一种淳朴、浑厚的状态。

[136]昭昭：明白一切的样子。昏：昏昧。

[137]察察：对于名利斤斤计较、精于算计。闷：浊。

[138]澹：水深。飂：高风，形容行迹飘逸。

[139]以：用的意思。

[140]母：指“道”。食母：吃母亲的饭，吸取大道来滋养自身。

[141]孔：大的意思。孔德：指大德之人。容：样态。

[142]恍惚：不清楚，似有似无。

[143]象：形象。

[144]窈：通“幽”，深远的意思。冥：暗昧，深不可测，不清楚。

[145]精：细微的原质。

[146]信：征信、信验。

[147]阅：有认识、观察、检查的意思。甫：起始。众甫：万事万物的起始。

[148]此：指“道”。

[149]枉：弯曲。洼：低凹、低洼。惑：迷惑。

[150]一：指“道”。抱一：守道。式：范式、模式。

[151]自见：自现、自炫、自显于众。

[152]彰：昭彰、显著。

[153]伐：夸耀。

[154]矜：骄满、傲物。

[155]希：稀。希言：少说话。

[156]飘风：狂风。

[157]骤雨：暴雨。

[158]天地尚不能久：天地所为的暴风骤雨尚不能久。

[159]失："天"字的形似而误，应作"天"。

[160]信不足焉，有不信焉：统治者要是诚信不足，人民自然不相信他。

[161]企：踮着脚，脚跟不着地。

[162]跨：张开两腿，跨越而行。

[163]其：上文列举的行为。

[164]物：指人。物或恶之：谁（大家）都厌恶它。

[165]物：指"道"这个东西。混：混然、混融。混成：浑然一体。

[166]寂：没有声音。寥：没有形体。

[167]独立而不改：独立存在，始终如一，不为一切外来势力干扰而改变本性。

[168]周行：指"道"无所不至而循环运行。不殆：不息、不竭。

[169]天地：天下。

[170]强：勉强。

[171]大：指"道"无所不包、无所不在。

[172]逝：指"道"运行不息。曰：而、则、就。远：无边无际、弥漫远到。反：有循环往复的意思。

[173]域中：宇宙、世界。

[174]法：动词；有效法、学习的意思。自然：自然而然、自然如此。

[175]躁：急躁、躁动。君：主宰。

[176]辎重：古代军中载军需物资的车。

[177]荣观：荣华、繁华的生活。燕处：安居。超然：不陷在里面，超然物外。

[178]万乘之主：喻指大国的君主。

[179]辙迹：车辆在泥土地上行走，车轮碾过后留下的痕迹。

[180]瑕谪：缺点、过失。

[181]筹策：古代用于计数的工具。

[182]关楗：门闩；楗通“键”。

[183]约：绳扣。绳约：用绳束物。

[184]袭明：将光明延伸出来，以己之明引导人、物自明。

[185]资：资取、借鉴。

[186]要妙：幽深而精妙。

[187]其：本章六个“其”字都是指明白其“雌雄”“白黑”“荣辱”道理的人。

[188]溪：溪涧；有融汇、融合的意思。

[189]常德：人的德行。

[190]式：模式、楷式。

[191]忒：差错。

[192]谷：山谷、低谷；比喻人心谦虚。

[193]朴：未加工的木。

[194]器：器具、器物。

[195]之：指朴。

[196]官长：百官之长。

[197]大制：国家大法。割：割舍、割裂。

[198]取：治。取天下：指治理天下。为：有为、作为；指强力、勉强去做。

[199]已：语气词。不得已：指得不到或不能得到。

[200]神器：神圣的器物、东西。

[201]之：助词，无实义。

[202]物：人物、事物。行：前。随：后。

[203]歔：缓慢吐气用以温血。

[204]羸：弱。

[205]载：安。隳：危。

[206]甚：过分。奢：奢侈。泰：极端。

[207]佐：辅佐、辅助。

[208]强：逞强。

[209]好：易。还：还报、报复。

[210]荆棘：指带刺的灌木、酸枣等。

[211]果：成果、效果、战果。已：止。

[212]矜：自满。

[213]伐：自夸。

[214]壮：强盛。

[215]不道：不合于规律大道。

[216]兵：兵器、兵事、兵力。

[217]处：依靠、使用。

[218]贵左、贵右：古时候的礼仪。

[219]恬淡：恬静平淡。

[220]凶事：丧事。尚：上。

[221]泣：“莅”的误写，莅临，有到场、参加的意思。

[222]常：原本、本来。

[223]朴虽小：是说“道”幽微无形。

[224]臣：动词，服从。

[225]宾：归附。

[226]均：均匀。

[227]始：开始。制：建立，确定。

[228]殆：危险。

[229]智：机智。明：聪明。力：有力量。强：坚强、强大。

[230]知足：不贪。强行者：有坚强意志的人。

[231]亡：死。

[232]泛：充满、遍布的意思。

[233]辞：有管理、干涉的意思。

[234]衣养：包育、养育。

[235]归：依靠、归附。

[236]执：掌握。大象：指“道”。往：归往、归附。

[237]安：乃。太：通“泰”，有安、宁的意思。

[238]乐：音乐。饵：美味。

[239]既：尽。

[240]歙：通“翕”，收敛的意思。固：通“故”“姑”。

[241]取：夺取。

[242]微明：明于微，即明于“道”。

[243]利器：有利于国家的“器具”。示：显示、耀示、炫耀。

[244]无为：顺其自然，无所作为，不妄为。

[245]守之：守道。

[246]欲：欲望。作：生。

[247]无名：指“道”。朴：形容“道”的真朴。

[248]夫：指人。

[249]德：指一种德行。

[250]无为：顺其自然、因循自然。以：有心、有意。

[251]义：宜；行事得当。

[252]攘：卷袖子露出手臂。扔：引、拉。

[253]薄：衰退、不足。首：开端。

[254]前识：先见之明，即所谓“智”。

[255]华：虚华、浮华。

[256]厚：淳厚，指“道”。薄：浇薄，指“礼”。

[257]去彼取此：舍弃虚华、浇薄而采取朴实、淳厚。

[258]一：“道”的别名。得一：得道。

[259]谷：河谷。盈：满。

[260]致：推。致之：推而言之。

[261]废：崩陷。

[262]歇：消失。

[263]竭：尽、干。

[264]蹶：跌倒。

[265]孤：单。寡：独。不谷：没有饭吃。

[266]反：借为“返”“复”；指“道”的去而回复的循环运动。又一说法：反：相反、对立。

[267]弱：柔弱、柔和。

[268]有：指天地万物。

[269]无：指“道”。道无形体。

[270]士：古代知识分子；士分三类：上士、中士、下士。勤：积极努力。

[271]建言：立言、设言。古人建立的格言。之：代表所列的格言。

[272]昧：暗，不明。

[273]夷：平坦。颣：引申为不平的意思。

[274]上：高。谷：溪谷：喻指卑下。

[275]偷：怠惰。

[276]渝：变污。

[277]隅：角。

[278]大：高妙。希：稀、少。

[279]隐：幽隐不可见。

[280]贷：施。

[281]道生一：道就是一，所以说“道生一”。

[282]二：自古传说指阴、阳二气。

[283]三：阴阳二气相交形成一种和谐状态。

[284]负：背。阴：阴气。抱：在前面、胸前。阳：阳气。

[285]冲气：阴阳之间存在的气场，形成空间距离。阴阳二气互相交冲而成协调和谐状态。

[286]孤、寡、不谷：见第三十九章注释。

[287]强梁：多力。

[288]以：用作。父：老人的统称。这里指最好的教育，教育的最高原则。

[289]至柔：最柔弱。

[290]驰骋：驰驱，形容马的奔跑、穿越。

[291]无有：指看不见形象的东西（一种力量）。无间：没有间隙。

[292]希：稀、少的意思。及：做得到。

[293]身：指生命。孰：哪个。多：不是多少的“多”，而是指贵重的“重”。

[294]亡：失。病：害。

[295]甚爱：过分珍爱、爱惜。费：耗费、破费。

[296]厚亡：惨重的损失。

[297]止：停止。殆：危害、危险。

[298]大成：完美。

[299]弊：敝；有破败、衰竭、衰败的意思。

[300]冲：虚、空。

[301]屈：曲。

[302]讷：不善说话。

[303]躁：躁动、运动的意思。

[304]清净：指无欲无为。正：通“贞”“政”；引申为政治上的首长、首领。

[305]却：止、退。走马：指善奔跑的战马。粪：名词作动词用，指耕种，播种。

[306]戎马：战马。生于郊：指母马产仔于战地的郊外。

[307]咎：过失、罪过。

[308]足：满足。

[309]窥：指看、望。牖：窗户。

[310]为学：向外追求学问。日益：一天比一天增加。

[311]为道：遵循自然之道。日损：（指情欲妄为）一天比一天减少。

[312]取：治。无事：无为。

[313]无常心：没有私心。

[314]百姓：民众。

[315]德：假借为“得”。

[316]歙：意为吸气，此处指收敛。

[317]浑其心：使人归于浑厚朴素。

[318]注其耳目：专注于自己的耳目。

[319]孩之：使他们都回到婴孩般纯真质朴的状态。

[320]出生入死：从生到死。

[321]徒：类、属的意思。十有三：占三成。

[322]死之徒：短命夭折之类。

[323]动之于死地：走向了死路。

[324]生生：养生。

[325]盖：承接上文的起语词。摄生：养生保命。

[326]陆：指山地丘陵。

[327]被：受。

[328]容：用。

[329]之：指万物。

[330]畜：畜养、养育。

[331]势：势力、势能。

[332]命：命令、干涉。自然：顺其自然。

[333]亭：成。毒：熟。

[334]养：给养、供给生活资料。覆：覆灭的意思。

[335]始：本始、原始，指“道”。

[336]母：根源、本源，指“道”。

[337]子：指天下万物。

[338]殆：危险。

[339]兑：口；引申为孔窍。门：与“兑”均指耳目口鼻诸窍穴。

[340]勤：劳疾。

[341]济：助成。

[342]明：目明；明白。

[343]遗：招致、带来。殃：祸害。

[344]袭：因袭。

[345]介然：或作“挈然”，意为持握或掌握。

[346]道：指老子的道。

[347]施：是“邪”字，指邪路。

[348]夷：平。

[349]径：斜径。

[350]除：腐败。

[351]芜：荒芜。

[352]虚：空虚。

[353]盗夸：盗魁、强盗头子。

[354]辍：停止。

[355]长：长久。

[356]丰：大。

[357]以身观身，以家观家，以乡观乡：以我之一身而可以观他人之身，我之一家而可以观他人之家，我之一乡而可以观他人之乡。

[358]螫：用毒虫尾端刺人肆毒。

[359]据：指兽类用爪足拿按抓物。

[360]搏：读“捕”，捉的意思。

[361]作：挺举、翘起。

[362]嗄：嗓音嘶哑。

[363]和：指阴阳调和，身体和谐。

[364]益生：纵欲贪生。祥：妖祥，不祥。

[365]心：思想、意志。强：逞强、强暴。

[366]壮：强壮。

[367]知：智。

[368]参见五十二章注释5。

[369]参见四章注释3。

[370]玄同：指玄妙齐同的“道”。

[371]不可得而亲，不可得而疏，不可得而利，不可得而害，不可得而贵，不可得而贱：指超越亲疏、利害、贵贱的范围。

[372]正：走正道。

[373]奇：奇巧，诡秘。

[374]无事：指不搅扰人民。

[375]忌讳：不许做、不许说，即禁令。

[376]弥：越、更加。

[377]利器：锐利武器。

[378]伎：与“技”同，指机巧、智巧。

[379]奇物：邪奇的事物。

[380]彰：明白、明显。

[381]自化：自然顺化。

[382]自正：自然端正。

[383]自朴：自然淳朴。

[384]闷闷：借为“潣”，水浑浊的意思；这里借指国家政治的宽厚、广大。

[385]淳淳：淳厚、忠厚。

[386]察察：清、明。

[387]缺缺：狡诈的意思。

[388]倚：倚靠。

[389]伏：藏伏。

[390]奇：奇怪、反常。妖：恶、不善。

[391]方而不割：行为方正而不割人。

[392]廉：棱。刿：用刀尖刺物；割。

[393]直：正直、直率。肆：放肆。

[394]耀：光炫目，过分明亮。

[395]事：侍奉、奉行。事天：意为养生，保养天赋。啬：俭啬。

[396]早服：早早地把自己的生命功能保持住。

[397]德：指“啬”德。重：多、厚、不断。

[398]克：胜。

[399]极：边际、顶点。

[400]母：根基、根本。

[401]根：树根向四边伸的叫根。柢：树根向下扎的叫柢。

[402]久视：指长久生存。

[403]烹：煎。小鲜：小鱼。

[404]莅：临。

[405]神：动词；起作用。

[406]者：居。下流：地位。

[407]交：会集。

[408]牝：雌、母。

[409]取大国：意指小国谦下待大国，则可取得大国的容纳。

[410]以取：取别国。而取：为别国所取。

[411]畜：蓄养。兼畜人：指兼聚或兼并小国。

[412]奥：帛书甲、乙本皆为“注”，意为藏，庇荫。“奥”或为后人改写。

[413]不善人之所保：不善的人得到它的保护和救助。

[414]市：取、买。加：使……超越。

[415]三公：指古代天子以下的太师、太傅、太保。

[416]拱璧：指一种圆镜形状中间有孔的玉器，为古代贵重礼品。驷马：四匹马驾的车，古代只有天子、大臣才能乘坐。

[417]进：古代地位低的人送给地位高的人的东西，叫作“进”。

[418]求以得：指有求即可获得。

[419]为无为：任其自然，把无为当作为。

[420]味无味：把无味当作味。

[421]怨：怨恨。德：恩德。

[422]图：考虑、处理。

[423]作：开始。

[424]诺：允诺、应许。

[425]持：维持、掌握、保持。

[426]兆：征兆、端倪。未兆：尚未出现征兆。

[427]泮：通“判”，分解、分裂的意思。

[428]毫末：细小的萌芽。

[429]台：古代建筑物，可供人游玩眺望。

[430]累土：一筐土。

[431]几：近，指差不多的意思。

[432]难得之货：指珍贵的珠玉宝器。

[433]复：返、回。

[434]辅：辅助。

[435]明：多智巧诈。

[436]愚：淳朴、守真。

[437]智多：多智巧诈。

[438]两者：智与不智。稽式：法则、法式。

[439]玄德：玄妙的德行。

[440]物：事物。

[441]大顺：自然。

[442]谷：溪、小河流。百谷：百川河流。王：归往的意思。

[443]善：善于、能够。

[444]上民：指把自己摆在人民之上，即统治人民。

[445]先民：指站在人民的前面，即领导人民。

[446]重：负累、压迫、负担。

[447]害：妨害、受害。

[448]厌：厌倦、不喜欢。

[449]肖：相似、像。

[450]慈：慈心。

[451]俭：节俭。

[452]勇：勇于谦退、勇于防御。

[453]广：宽广、广博。

[454]器：万物。

[455]天：天道。

[456]士：勇武之士。不武：指不以武力相尚、不轻易动武。

[457]怒：愤怒的意思。不怒：不被激怒。

[458]与：对斗、相接。

[459]为之下：居人下。

[460]配天：与天一样伟大。极：原则。

[461]主：指战争时主动进攻。客：指战争时被动防守。

[462]进：指进攻别国的领土。退：指退守本国的领土。

[463]行：行列、阵势。

[464]攘：伸出、举起。

[465]扔：对抗。

[466]兵：兵器。

[467]宝：指慈、俭、不敢为天下先的“三宝”。

[468]相若：相当、对等。

[469]哀：慈爱、慈悲。

[470]宗：宗旨、纲领、主旨。

[471]君：主，本，根据。

[472]无知：指别人不理解。

[473]希：稀，少的意思。

[474]则：法则、效法。贵：难得。

[475]被：披、着，指穿在身上。褐：粗布。怀：指放在怀里。

[476]知不知：知道自己有所不知道。

[477]不知知：不知道而自以为知道。

[478]病病：第一个“病”是动词，即承认病；第二个“病”是名词。指疾病。“病病”的意思是把这种病看作病。

[479]威：第一个威是威压的意思；第二个威是祸乱的意思。

[480]狎：通“狭”、“闸”，有逼迫、封闭的意思。

[481]厌：有压迫之义，引申为阻塞。

[482]厌：厌弃。

[483]见：读“现”，表现。

[484]彼：指自见、自贵。此：指自知、自爱。

[485]恶：讨厌、厌恶。

[486]：宽缓。

[487]恢：广大。

[488]疏：稀疏、不密。失：漏失、遗失。

[489]惧：吓唬、惧怕。

[490]奇：邪恶、诡异。

[491]孰：谁。

[492]司杀者：指天主生杀。

[493]斫：砍。

[494]希：少。

[495]上：统治者、君王。食税：指统治者以税收自养，如同取食物以自养一样。

[496]有为：有为之治。

[497]轻：看轻、不重视。

[498]以其上求生之厚：统治者奉养奢厚。

[499]无以生为者：恬淡虚静，不贵生。

[500]贤：胜过、胜于。贵生：厚养生命。

[501]柔弱：指人体的柔弱。

[502]坚强：指人体的僵硬。

[503]柔脆：指草木枝条的柔软脆弱。

[504]枯槁：指草木死后变得干枯。

[505]徒：类。

[506]天之道：自然界的规律。

[507]张：用弓箭将弦加载弓上称为“张”。与：语气词。

[508]人之道：社会中的规律。

[509]孰：谁。

[510]处：居。

[511]见：现，指表现。

[512]之：水。莫之能胜：莫能胜之。

[513]易：代替。

[514]受：承担、承受。垢：屈辱。

[515]不祥：灾难、祸殃。

[516]执：持有、保存、掌握。契：契据。古人刻木为契，分左右两半，左契是财产所有权的凭证，右契是财产使用权的凭证；这里的“左契”是指大的原则。责：责备、追究。

[517]司：主。

[518]彻：治的意思，指管理。

[519]无亲：无所偏爱，没有亲疏之别。

[520]与：助。

[521]国：国家。

[522]什伯之器：各种器具。

[523]重死：重视生命。徙：迁移。

[524]舟：船。舆：通“车”。

[525]陈：阵，指陈列、阵势。

[526]结绳：古代文字没有形成前的结绳记事，最初只用绳结来记物的数量，后来也表示物的性质。

[527]犬：狗。

[528]信：真诚、诚实。信言：真话。美：华丽、华美。美言：漂亮的话。

[529]善者：善良的人。辩：指能说会道。

[530]博：显示知道的事情多。

[531]积：积累、贮存、私藏。

[532]既：尽。为人：帮助人。

[533]与：给予。

[534]为：施为。

Lao Tzu

Tao Te Ching

TRANSLATED BY D. C. LAU

PENGUIN BOOKS — GREAT IDEAS

Contents

Book One

I

The way that can be spoken of
Is not the constant way;
The name that can be named
Is not the constant name.
The nameless was the beginning of heaven and earth;
The named was the mother of the myriad creatures.
Hence always rid yourself of desires in order to observe its secrets;
But always allow yourself to have desires in order to observe its manifestations.
These two are the same
But diverge in name as they issue forth.
Being the same they are called mysteries,
Mystery upon mystery —
The gateway of the manifold secrets.

II

The whole world recognizes the beautiful as the beauti-ful, yet this is only the ugly; the whole world recognizes the good as the good, yet this is only the bad.

Thus Something and Nothing produce each other;
The difficult and the easy complement each other;
The long and the short offset each other;
The high and the low incline towards each other;
Note and sound harmonize with each other;
Before and after follow each other.

Therefore the sage keeps to the deed that consists in taking no action and practises the teaching that uses no words.

The myriad creatures rise from it yet it claims no authority;
It gives them life yet claims no possession;
It benefits them yet exacts no gratitude;
It accomplishes its task yet lays claim to no merit.

It is because it lays claim to no merit
That its merit never deserts it.

III

Not to honour men of worth will keep the people from contention; not to value goods which are hard to come by will keep them from theft; not to display what is desirable will keep them from being unsettled of mind. Therefore in governing the people, the sage empties their minds but fills their bellies, weakens their wills but strengthens their bones. He always keeps them innocent of knowledge and free from desire, and ensures that the clever never dare to act.

Do that which consists in taking no action, and order will prevail.

IV

The way is empty, yet use will not drain it.
Deep, it is like the ancestor of the myriad creatures.
Blunt the sharpness;
Untangle the knots;
Soften the glare;
Let your wheels move only along old ruts.
Darkly visible, it only seems as if it were there.
I know not whose son it is.
It images the forefather of God.

V

Heaven and earth are ruthless, and treat the myriad creatures as straw dogs; the sage is ruthless, and treats the people as straw dogs.

Is not the space between heaven and earth like a bellows?

It is empty without being exhausted:
The more it works the more comes out.
Much speech leads inevitably to silence.
Better to hold fast to the void.

VI

The spirit of the valley never dies.
This is called the mysterious female.
The gateway of the mysterious female
Is called the root of heaven and earth.
Dimly visible, it seems as if it were there,
Yet use will never drain it.

VII

Heaven and earth are enduring. The reason why heaven and earth can be enduring is that they do not give themselves life. Hence they are able to be long-lived.

Therefore the sage puts his person last and it comes first,
Treats it as extraneous to himself and it is preserved.

Is it not because he is without thought of self that he is able to accomplish his private ends?

VIII

Highest good is like water. Because water excels in benefiting the myriad creatures without contending with them and settles where none would like to be, it comes close to the way.

In a home it is the site that matters;
In quality of mind it is depth that matters;
In an ally it is benevolence that matters;
In speech it is good faith that matters;
In government it is order that matters;
In affairs it is ability that matters;
In action it is timeliness that matters.

It is because it does not contend that it is never at fault.

IX

Rather than fill it to the brim by keeping it upright
Better to have stopped in time;
Hammer it to a point
And the sharpness cannot be preserved for ever;
There may be gold and jade to fill a hall
But there is none who can keep them.
To be overbearing when one has wealth and position
Is to bring calamity upon oneself.
To retire when the task is accomplished
Is the way of heaven.

X

When carrying on your head your perplexed bodily soul can you embrace in your arms the One
And not let go?
In concentrating your breath can you become as supple As a babe?
Can you polish your mysterious mirror
And leave no blemish?
Can you love the people and govern the state
Without resorting to action?
When the gates of heaven open and shut
Are you capable of keeping to the role of the female?
When your discernment penetrates the four quarters
Are you capable of not knowing anything?
It gives them life and rears them.
It gives them life yet claims no possession;
It benefits them yet exacts no gratitude;
It is the steward yet exercises no authority.
Such is called the mysterious virtue.

XI

Thirty spokes
Share one hub.

Adapt the nothing therein to the purpose in hand, and you will have the use of the cart. Knead clay in order to make a vessel. Adapt the nothing therein to the purpose in hand, and you will have the use of the vessel. Cut out doors and windows in order to make a room. Adapt the nothing therein to the purpose in hand, and you will have the use of the room.

Thus what we gain is Something, yet it is by virtue of Nothing that this can be put to use.

XII

The five colours make man's eyes blind;
The five notes make his ears deaf;
The five tastes injure his palate;
Riding and hunting
Make his mind go wild with excitement;
Goods hard to come by
Serve to hinder his progress.
Hence the sage is
For the belly
Not for the eye.
Therefore he discards the one and takes the other.

XIII

Favour and disgrace are things that startle;

High rank is, like one's body, a source of great trouble.

What is meant by saying that favour and disgrace are things that startle? Favour when it is bestowed on a subject serves to startle as much as when it is withdrawn. This is what is meant by saying that favour and disgrace are things that startle. What is meant by saying that high rank is, like one's body, a source of great trouble? The reason I have great trouble is that I have a body. When I no longer have a body, what trouble have I?

Hence he who values his body more than dominion over the empire can be entrusted with the empire. He who loves his body more than dominion over the empire can be given the custody of the empire.

XIV

What cannot be seen is called evanescent;
What cannot be heard is called rarefied;
What cannot be touched is called minute.
These three cannot be fathomed
And so they are confused and looked upon as one.
Its upper part is not dazzling;
Its lower part is not obscure.
Dimly visible, it cannot be named
And returns to that which is without substance.
This is called the shape that has no shape,
The image that is without substance.
This is called indistinct and shadowy.
Go up to it and you will not see its head;
Follow behind it and you will not see its rear.
Hold fast to the way of antiquity
In order to keep in control the realm of today.
The ability to know the beginning of antiquity
Is called the thread running through the way.

XV

Of old he who was well versed in the way
Was minutely subtle, mysteriously comprehending,
And too profound to be known.
It is because he could not be known
That he can only be given a makeshift description:
Tentative, as if fording a river in winter,
Hesitant, as if in fear of his neighbours;
Formal like a guest;
Falling apart like thawing ice;
Thick like the uncarved block;
Vacant like a valley;
Murky like muddy water.
Who can be muddy and yet, settling, slowly become limpid?
Who can be at rest and yet, stirring, slowly come to life?
He who holds fast to this way
Desires not to be full.
It is because he is not full
That he can be worn and yet newly made.

XVI

I do my utmost to attain emptiness;
I hold firmly to stillness.
The myriad creatures all rise together
And I watch their return.
The teeming creatures
All return to their separate roots.
Returning to one's roots is known as stillness.
This is what is meant by returning to one's destiny.
Returning to one's destiny is known as the constant.
Knowledge of the constant is known as discernment.
Woe to him who wilfully innovates
While ignorant of the constant,
But should one act from knowledge of the constant
One's action will lead to impartiality,
Impartiality to kingliness,
Kingliness to heaven,
Heaven to the way,
The way to perpetuity,
And to the end of one's days one will meet with no danger.

XVII

The best of all rulers is but a shadowy presence to his subjects.
    Next comes the ruler they love and praise;
    Next comes one they fear;
    Next comes one with whom they take liberties.
When there is not enough faith, there is lack of good faith.
    Hesitant, he does not utter words lightly.
    When his task is accomplished and his work done
    The people all say, 'It happened to us naturally.'

XVIII

When the great way falls into disuse
There are benevolence and rectitude;
When cleverness emerges
There is great hypocrisy;
When the six relations are at variance
There are filial children;
When the state is benighted
There are loyal ministers.

XIX

Exterminate the sage, discard the wise,
And the people will benefit a hundredfold;
Exterminate benevolence, discard rectitude,
And the people will again be filial;
Exterminate ingenuity, discard profit,
And there will be no more thieves and bandits.
These three, being false adornments, are not enough
And the people must have something to which they can attach themselves:
Exhibit the unadorned and embrace the uncarved block,
Have little thought of self and as few desires as possible.

XX

Exterminate learning and there will no longer be worries.
Between yea and nay
How much difference is there?
Between good and evil
How great is the distance?
What others fear
One must also fear.
And wax without having reached the limit.
The multitude are joyous
As if partaking of the t'ai lao offering
Or going up to a terrace in spring.
I alone am inactive and reveal no signs,
Like a baby that has not yet learned to smile,
Listless as though with no home to go back to.
The multitude all have more than enough.
I alone seem to be in want.
My mind is that of a fool - how blank!
Vulgar people are clear.
I alone am drowsy.
Vulgar people are alert.
I alone am muddled.
Calm like the sea;
Like a high wind that never ceases.
The multitude all have a purpose.
I alone am foolish and uncouth.
I alone am different from others

And value being fed by the mother.

XXI

In his every movement a man of great virtue
Follows the way and the way only.
As a thing the way is Shadowy, indistinct.
Indistinct and shadowy,
Yet within it is an image;
Shadowy and indistinct,
Yet within it is a substance.
Dim and dark,
Yet within it is an essence.
This essence is quite genuine
And within it is something that can be tested.
From the present back to antiquity
Its name never deserted it.
It serves as a means for inspecting the fathers of the multitude.

How do I know that the fathers of the multitude are like that? By means of this.

XXII

Bowed down then preserved;
Bent then straight;
Hollow then full;
Worn then new;
A little then benefited;
A lot then perplexed.
Therefore the sage embraces the One and is a model for the empire.
He does not show himself, and so is conspicuous;
He does not consider himself right, and so is illustrious;
He does not brag, and so has merit;
He does not boast, and so endures.

It is because he does not contend that no one in the empire is in a position to contend with him.

The way the ancients had it, 'Bowed down then pre—served', is no empty saying. Truly it enables one to be preserved to the end.

XXIII

To use words but rarely
Is to be natural.

Hence a gusty wind cannot last all morning, and a sudden downpour cannot last all day. Who is it that produces these? Heaven and earth. If even heaven and earth cannot go on for ever, much less can man. That is why one follows the way.

A man of the way conforms to the way; a man of virtue conforms to virtue; a man of loss conforms to loss. He who conforms to the way is gladly accepted by the way; he who conforms to virtue is gladly accepted by virtue; he who conforms to loss is gladly accepted by loss.

When there is not enough faith, there is lack of good faith.

XXIV

He who tiptoes cannot stand; he who strides cannot walk.

He who shows himself is not conspicuous;
He who considers himself right is not illustrious;
He who brags will have no merit;
He who boasts will not endure.

From the point of view of the way these are 'excessive food and useless excrescences'. As there are Things that detest them, he who has the way does not abide in them.

XXV

There is a thing confusedly formed,
Born before heaven and earth.
Silent and void
It stands alone and does not change,
Goes round and does not weary.
It is capable of being the mother of the world.
I know not its name
So I style it 'the way'.
I give it the makeshift name of 'the great'.
Being great, it is further described as receding,
Receding, it is described as far away,
Being far away, it is described as turning back.

Hence the way is great; heaven is great; earth is great; and the king is also great. Within the realm there are four things that are great, and the king counts as one.

Man models himself on earth,
Earth on heaven,
Heaven on the way,
And the way on that which is naturally so.

XXVI

The heavy is the root of the light;
The still is the lord of the restless.
Therefore the gentleman when travelling all day
Never lets the heavily laden carts out of his sight.
It is only when he is safely behind walls and watchtowers
That he rests peacefully and is above worries.
How, then, should a ruler of ten thousand chariots
Make light of his own person in the eyes of the empire?
If light, then the root is lost;
If restless, then the lord is lost.

XXVII

One who excels in travelling leaves no wheel tracks;
One who excels in speech makes no slips;
One who excels in reckoning uses no counting rods;
One who excels in shutting uses no bolts yet what he has shut cannot be opened;
One who excels in tying uses no cords yet what he has tied cannot be undone.

Therefore the sage always excels in saving people, and so abandons no one; always excels in saving things, and so abandons nothing.

This is called following one's discernment.

Hence the good man is the teacher the bad learns from;
And the bad man is the material the good works on.
Not to value the teacher
Nor to love the material
Though it seems clever, betrays great bewilderment.

This is called the essential and the secret.

XXVIII

Know the male
But keep to the role of the female
And be a ravine to the empire.
If you are a ravine to the empire,
Then the constant virtue will not desert you
And you will again return to being a babe.
Know the white
But keep to the role of the black
And be a model to the empire.
If you are a model to the empire,
Then the constant virtue will not be wanting
And you will return to the infinite.
Know honour
But keep to the role of the disgraced
And be a valley to the empire.
If you are a valley to the empire,
Then the constant virtue will be sufficient
And you will return to being the uncarved block.

When the uncarved block shatters it becomes vessels.
The sage makes use of these and becomes the lord over the officials.

Hence the greatest cutting
Does not sever.

XXIX

Whoever takes the empire and wishes to do anything to it I see will have no respite. The empire is a sacred vessel and nothing should be done to it. Whoever does anything to it will ruin it; whoever lays hold of it will lose it.

Hence some things lead and some follow;
Some breathe gently and some breathe hard;
Some are strong and some are weak;
Some destroy and some are destroyed.

Therefore the sage avoids excess, extravagance, and arrogance.

XXX

One who assists the ruler of men by means of the way does not intimidate the empire by a show of arms.

This is something which is liable to rebound.

Where troops have encamped
There will brambles grow;
In the wake of a mighty army
Bad harvests follow without fail.

One who is good aims only at bringing his campaign to a conclusion and dare not thereby intimidate. Bring it to a conclusion but do not boast; bring it to a conclusion but do not brag; bring it to a conclusion but do not be arrogant; bring it to a conclusion but only when there is no choice; bring it to a conclusion but do not intimidate.

A creature in its prime doing harm to the old
Is known as going against the way.
That which goes against the way will come to an early end.

XXXI

It is because arms are instruments of ill omen and there are Things that detest them that one who has the way does not abide by their use. The gentleman gives pre-cedence to the left when at home, but to the right when he goes to war. Arms are instruments of ill omen, not the instruments of the gentleman. When one is compelled to use them, it is best to do so without relish. There is no glory in victory, and to glorify it despite this is to exult in the killing of men. One who exults in the killing of men will never have his way in the empire. On occasions of rejoicing precedence is given to the left; on occasions of mourning precedence is given to the right. A lieuten-ant's place is on the left; the general's place is on the right. This means that it is mourning rites that are observed. When great numbers of people are killed, one should weep over them with sorrow. When victorious in war, one should observe the rites of mourning.

XXXII

The way is for ever nameless.
Though the uncarved block is small
No one in the world dare claim its allegiance.
Should lords and princes be able to hold fast to it
The myriad creatures will submit of their own accord,
Heaven and earth will unite and sweet dew will fall.
And the people will be equitable, though no one so decrees.
Only when it is cut are there names.
As soon as there are names
One ought to know that it is time to stop.
Knowing when to stop one can be free from danger.

The way is to the world as the River and the Sea are to rivulets and streams.

XXXIII

He who knows others is clever;
He who knows himself has discernment.
He who overcomes others has force;
He who overcomes himself is strong.
He who knows contentment is rich;
He who perseveres is a man of purpose;
He who does not lose his station will endure;
He who lives out his days has had a long life.

XXXIV

The way is broad, reaching left as well as right.
The myriad creatures depend on it for life yet it claims no authority.
It accomplishes its task yet lays claim to no merit.
It clothes and feeds the myriad creatures yet lays no claim to being their master.

For ever free of desire, it can be called small; yet, as it lays no claim to being master when the myriad creatures turn to it, it can be called great.

It is because it never attempts itself to be great that it succeeds in becoming great.

XXXV

Have in your hold the great image
And the empire will come to you.
Coming to you and meeting with no harm
It will be safe and sound.
Music and food
Will induce the wayfarer to stop.
The way in its passage through the mouth is without flavour.
It cannot be seen,
It cannot be heard,
Yet it cannot be exhausted by use.

XXXVI

If you would have a thing shrink,
You must first stretch it;
If you would have a thing weakened,
You must first strengthen it;
If you would have a thing laid aside,
You must first set it up;
If you would take from a thing,
You must first give to it.
This is called subtle discernment:
The submissive and weak will overcome the hard and strong.
The fish must not be allowed to leave the deep;
The instruments of power in a state must not be revealed to anyone.

XXXVII

The way never acts yet nothing is left undone.
Should lords and princes be able to hold fast to it,
The myriad creatures will be transformed of their own accord.
After they are transformed, should desire raise its head,
I shall press it down with the weight of the nameless uncarved block.
The nameless uncarved block
Is but freedom from desire,
And if I cease to desire and remain still,
The empire will be at peace of its own accord.

Book Two

XXXVIII

A man of the highest virtue does not keep to virtue and that is why he has virtue. A man of the lowest virtue never strays from virtue and that is why he is without virtue. The former never acts yet leaves nothing undone. The latter acts but there are things left undone. A man of the highest benevolence acts, but from no ulterior motive. A man of the highest rectitude acts, but from ulterior motive. A man most conversant in the rites acts, but when no one responds rolls up his sleeves and resorts to persuasion by force.

Hence when the way was lost there was virtue; when virtue was lost there was benevolence; when benevolence was lost there was rectitude; when rectitude was lost there were the rites.

The rites are the wearing thin of loyalty and good faith
And the beginning of disorder;
Foreknowledge is the flowery embellishment of the way
And the beginning of folly.

Hence the man of large mind abides in the thick not in the thin, in the fruit not in the flower.

Therefore he discards the one and takes the other.

XXXIX

Of old, these came to be in possession of the One:
Heaven in virtue of the One is limpid;
Earth in virtue of the One is settled;
Gods in virtue of the One have their potencies;
The valley in virtue of the One is full;
The myriad creatures in virtue of the One are alive;
Lords and princes in virtue of the One become leaders in the empire.
It is the One that makes these what they are.
Without what makes it limpid heaven might split;
Without what makes it settled earth might sink;
Without what gives them their potencies gods might spend themselves;
Without what makes it full the valley might run dry;
Without what keeps them alive the myriad creatures might perish;
Without what makes them leaders lords and princes might fall.

Hence the superior must have the inferior as root; the high must have the low as base.

Thus lords and princes refer to themselves as 'solitary', 'desolate', and 'hapless'. This is taking the inferior as root, is it not?

Hence the highest renown is without renown,
Not wishing to be one among many like jade
Nor to be aloof like stone.

XL

Turning back is how the way moves;
Weakness is the means the way employs.

The myriad creatures in the world are born from Something, and Something from Nothing.

XLI

When the best student hears about the way
He practises it assiduously;
When the average student hears about the way
It seems to him one moment there and gone the next;
When the worst student hears about the way
He laughs out loud.
If he did not laugh
It would be unworthy of being the way.

Hence the Chien yen has it:

The way that is bright seems dull;
The way that leads forward seems to lead backward;
The way that is even seems rough.
The highest virtue is like the valley;
The sheerest whiteness seems sullied;
Ample virtue seems defective;
Vigorous virtue seems indolent;
Plain virtue seems soiled;
The great square has no corners.
The great vessel takes long to complete;
The great note is rarefied in sound;
The great image has no shape.
The way conceals itself in being nameless.
It is the way alone that excels in bestowing and in accomplishing.

XLII

The way begets one; one begets two; two begets three; three begets the myriad creatures.

The myriad creatures carry on their backs the yin and embrace in their arms the yang and are the blending of the generative forces of the two.

There are no words which men detest more than 'soli—tary', 'desolate', and 'hapless', yet lords and princes use these to refer to themselves.

Thus a thing is sometimes added to by being diminished and diminished by being added to.

What others teach I also teach. 'The violent will not come to a natural end.' I shall take this as my precept.

XLIII

The most submissive thing in the world can ride roughshod over the hardest in the world - that which is without substance entering that which has no crevices.

That is why I know the benefit of resorting to no action.

The teaching that uses no words, the benefit of resorting to no action, these are beyond the understanding of all but a very few in the world.

XLIV

Your name or your person,
Which is dearer?
Your person or your goods,
Which is worth more?
Gain or loss,
Which is a greater bane?
That is why excessive meanness
Is sure to lead to great expense;
Too much store
Is sure to end in immense loss.
Know contentment
And you will suffer no disgrace;
Know when to stop
And you will meet with no danger.
You can then endure.

XLV

Great perfection seems chipped,
Yet use will not wear it out;
Great fullness seems empty,
Yet use will not drain it;
Great straightness seems bent;
Great skill seems awkward;
Great eloquence seems tongue-tied.

Restlessness overcomes cold; stillness overcomes heat.

Limpid and still,
One can be a leader in the empire.

XLVI

When the way prevails in the empire, fleet-footed horses are relegated to ploughing the fields; when the way does not prevail in the empire, war-horses breed on the border.

There is no crime greater than having too many desires;
There is no disaster greater than not being content;
There is no misfortune greater than being covetous.

Hence in being content, one will always have enough.

XLVII

Without stirring abroad
One can know the whole world;
Without looking out of the window
One can see the way of heaven.
The further one goes
The less one knows.
Therefore the sage knows without having to stir,
Identifies without having to see,
Accomplishes without having to act.

XLVIII

In the pursuit of learning one knows more every day; in the pursuit of the way one does less every day. One does less and less until one does nothing at all, and when one does nothing at all there is nothing that is undone.

It is always through not meddling that the empire is won. Should you meddle, then you are not equal to the task of winning the empire.

XLIX

The sage has no mind of his own. He takes as his own the mind of the people. Those who are good I treat as good. Those who are not good I also treat as good. In so doing I gain in goodness.Those who are of good faith I have faith in. Those who are lacking in good faith I also have faith in. In so doing I gain in good faith.

The sage in his attempt to distract the mind of the empire seeks urgently to muddle it. The people all have something to occupy their eyes and ears, and the sage treats them all like children.

L

When going one way means life and going the other means death, three in ten will be comrades of life, three in ten will be comrades of death, and there are those who value life and as a result move into the realm of death, and these also number three in ten. Why is this so? Because they set too much store by life. I have heard it said that one who excels in safeguarding his own life does not meet with rhinoceros or tiger when travelling on land nor is he touched by weapons when charging into an army. There is nowhere for the rhinoceros to pitch its horn; there is nowhere for the tiger to place its claws; there is nowhere for the weapon to lodge its blade. Why is this so? Because for him there is no realm of death.

LI

The way gives them life;
Virtue rears them;
Things give them shape;
Circumstances bring them to maturity.

Therefore the myriad creatures all revere the way and honour virtue. Yet the way is revered and virtue honoured not because this is decreed by any authority but because it is natural for them to be treated so.

Thus the way gives them life and rears them;
Brings them up and nurses them;
Brings them to fruition and maturity;
Feeds and shelters them.
It gives them life yet claims no possession;
It benefits them yet exacts no gratitude;
It is the steward yet exercises no authority.
Such is called the mysterious virtue.

LII

The world had a beginning
And this beginning could be the mother of the world.
When you know the mother
Go on to know the child.
After you have known the child
Go back to holding fast to the mother,
And to the end of your days you will not meet with danger.
Block the openings,
Shut the doors,
And all your life you will not run dry.
Unblock the openings,
Add to your troubles,
And to the end of your days you will be beyond salvation.
To see the small is called discernment;
To hold fast to the submissive is called strength.
Use the light
But give up the discernment.
Bring not misfortune upon yourself.
This is known as following the constant.

LIII

Were I possessed of the least knowledge, I would, when walking on the great way, fear only paths that lead astray.

The great way is easy, yet people prefer by-paths.

The court is corrupt,
The fields are overgrown with weeds,
The granaries are empty;
Yet there are those dressed in fineries,
With swords at their sides,
Filled with food and drink,
And possessed of too much wealth.
This is known as taking the lead in robbery.

Far indeed is this from the way.

LIV

What is firmly rooted cannot be pulled out;
What is tightly held in the arms will not slip loose;
Through this the offering of sacrifice by descendants will never come to an end.
Cultivate it in your person
And its virtue will be genuine;
Cultivate it in the family
And its virtue will be more than sufficient;
Cultivate it in the hamlet
And its virtue will endure;
Cultivate it in the state
And its virtue will abound;
Cultivate it in the empire
And its virtue will be pervasive.

Hence look at the person through the person; look at the family through the family; look at the hamlet through the hamlet; look at the state through the state; look at the empire through the empire.

How do I know that the empire is like that? By means of this.

LV

One who possesses virtue in abundance is comparable to a new born babe:
Poisonous insects will not sting it;
Ferocious animals will not pounce on it;
Predatory birds will not swoop down on it.
Its bones are weak and its sinews supple yet its hold is firm.
It does not know of the union of male and female yet its male member will stir:
This is because its virility is at its height.
It howls all day yet does not become hoarse:
This is because its harmony is at its height.
To know harmony is called the constant;
To know the constant is called discernment.
To try to add to one's vitality is called ill-omened;
For the mind to egg on the breath is called violent.
A creature in its prime doing harm to the old
Is known as going against the way.
That which goes against the way will come to an early end.

LVI

One who knows does not speak; one who speaks does not know.

Block the openings;
Shut the doors.
Blunt the sharpness;
Untangle the knots;
Soften the glare;
Let your wheels move only along old ruts.

This is known as mysterious sameness.

Hence you cannot get close to it, nor can you keep it at arm's length; you cannot bestow benefit on it, nor can you do it harm; you cannot ennoble it, nor can you debase it.

Therefore it is valued by the empire.

LVII

Govern the state by being straightforward; wage war by being crafty; but win the empire by not being meddlesome.

How do I know that it is like that? By means of this.

The more taboos there are in the empire
The poorer the people;
The more sharpened tools the people have
The more benighted the state;
The more skills the people have
The further novelties multiply;
The better known the laws and edicts
The more thieves and robbers there are.

Hence the sage says,

I take no action and the people are transformed of themselves;
I prefer stillness and the people are rectified of themselves;
I am not meddlesome and the people prosper of themselves;
I am free from desire and the people of themselves become simple like the uncarved block.

LVIII

When the government is muddled
The people are simple;
When the government is alert
The people are cunning.
It is on disaster that good fortune perches;
It is beneath good fortune that disaster crouches.

Who knows the limit? Does not the straightforward exist?

The straightforward changes again into the crafty, and the good changes again into the monstrous. Indeed, it is long since the people were perplexed.

Therefore the sage is square-edged but does not scrape,
Has corners but does not jab,
Extends himself but not at the expense of others,
Shines but does not dazzle.

LIX

In ruling the people and in serving heaven it is best for a ruler to be sparing.
It is because he is sparing
That he may be said to follow the way from the start;
Following the way from the start he may be said to accumulate an abundance of virtue;
Accumulating an abundance of virtue there is nothing he cannot overcome;
When there is nothing he cannot overcome, no one knows his limit;
When no one knows his limit
He can possess a state;
When he possesses the mother of a state
He can then endure.
This is called the way of deep roots and firm stems by which one lives to see many days.

LX

Governing a large state is like boiling a small fish.
When the empire is ruled in accordance with the way,
    The spirits lose their potencies.
    Or rather, it is not that they lose their potencies,
    But that, though they have their potencies, they do not harm the people.
    It is not only they who, having their potencies, do not harm the people,
    The sage, also, does not harm the people.
As neither does any harm, each attributes the merit to the other.

LXI

A large state is the lower reaches of a river -
The place where all the streams of the world unite.
In the union of the world,
The female always gets the better of the male by stillness.
Being still, she takes the lower position.
Hence the large state, by taking the lower position, annexes the small state;
The small state, by taking the lower position, affiliates itself to the large state.
Thus the one, by taking the lower position, annexes;
The other, by taking the lower position, is annexed.
All that the large state wants is to take the other under its wing;
All that the small state wants is to have its services accepted by the other.
If each of the two wants to find its proper place,
It is meet that the large should take the lower position.

LXII

The way is the refuge for the myriad creatures.
It is that by which the good man protects,
And that by which the bad is protected.
Beautiful words when offered will win high rank in return;
Beautiful deeds can raise a man above others.

Even if a man is not good, why should he be abandoned? Hence when the emperor is set up and the three ducal ministers are appointed, he who makes a present of the way without stirring from his seat is preferable to one who offers presents of jade disks followed by a team of four horses. Why was this way valued of old? Was it not said that by means of it one got what one wanted and escaped the consequences when one transgressed?

Therefore it is valued by the empire.

LXIII

Do that which consists in taking no action; pursue that which is not meddlesome; savour that which has no flavour.

Make the small big and the few many; do good to him who has done you an injury.

Lay plans for the accomplishment of the difficult before it becomes difficult; make something big by starting with it when small.

Difficult things in the world must needs have their beginnings in the easy; big things must needs have their beginnings in the small.

Therefore it is because the sage never attempts to be great that he succeeds in becoming great.

One who makes promises rashly rarely keeps good faith; one who is in the habit of considering things easy meets with frequent difficulties.

Therefore even the sage treats some things as difficult.

That is why in the end no difficulties can get the better of him.

LXIV

It is easy to maintain a situation while it is still secure;
It is easy to deal with a situation before symptoms develop;
It is easy to break a thing when it is yet brittle;
It is easy to dissolve a thing when it is yet minute.
Deal with a thing while it is still nothing;
Keep a thing in order before disorder sets in.
A tree that can fill the span of a man's arms
Grows from a downy tip;
A terrace nine storeys high
Rises from hodfuls of earth;
A journey of a thousand miles
Starts from beneath one's feet.

Whoever does anything to it will ruin it; whoever lays hold of it will lose it.

Therefore the sage, because he does nothing, never ruins anything; and, because he does not lay hold of anything, loses nothing.

In their enterprises the people
Always ruin them when on the verge of success.
Be as careful at the end as at the beginning
And there will be no ruined enterprises.
Therefore the sage desires not to desire
And does not value goods which are hard to come by;
Learns to be without learning
And makes good the mistakes of the multitude
In order to help the myriad creatures to be natural and to refrain from daring to act.

LXV

Of old those who excelled in the pursuit of the way did not use it to enlighten the people but to hoodwink them. The reason why the people are difficult to govern is that they are too clever.

Hence to rule a state by cleverness
Will be to the detriment of the state;
Not to rule a state by cleverness
Will be a boon to the state.
These two are models.
Always to know the models
Is known as mysterious virtue.
Mysterious virtue is profound and far-reaching,
But when things turn back it turns back with them.

Only then is complete conformity realized.

LXVI

The reason why the River and the Sea are able to be king of the hundred valleys is that they excel in taking the lower position. Hence they are able to be king of the hundred valleys.

Therefore, desiring to rule over the people,
One must in one's words humble oneself before them;
And, desiring to lead the people,
One must, in one's person, follow behind them.

Therefore the sage takes his place over the people yet is no burden; takes his place ahead of the people yet causes no obstruction. That is why the empire supports him joyfully and never tires of doing so.

It is because he does not contend that no one in the empire is in a position to contend with him.

LXVII

The whole world says that my way is vast and resembles nothing. It is because it is vast that it resembles nothing. If it resembled anything, it would, long before now, have become small.

I have three treasures
Which I hold and cherish.
The first is known as compassion,
The second is known as frugality,
The third is known as not daring to take the lead in the empire;
Being compassionate one could afford to be courageous,
Being frugal one could afford to extend one's territory,
Not daring to take the lead in the empire one could afford to be lord over the vessels.

Now, to forsake compassion for courage, to forsake frugality for expansion, to forsake the rear for the lead, is sure to end in death.

Through compassion, one will triumph in attack and be impregnable in defence. What heaven succours it protects with the gift of compassion.

LXVIII

One who excels as a warrior does not appear formidable;
One who excels in fighting is never roused in anger;
One who excels in defeating his enemy does not join issue;
One who excels in employing others humbles himself before them.
This is known as the virtue of non-contention;
This is known as making use of the efforts of others;
This is known as matching the sublimity of heaven.

LXIX

The strategists have a saying,
I dare not play the host but play the guest,
I dare not advance an inch but retreat a foot instead.
This is known as marching forward when there is no road,
Rolling up one's sleeves when there is no arm,
Dragging one's adversary by force when there is no adversary,
And taking up arms when there are no arms.

There is no disaster greater than taking on an enemy too easily. So doing nearly cost me my treasure. Thus of two sides raising arms against each other, it is the one that is sorrow-stricken that wins.

LXX

My words are very easy to understand and very easy to put into practice, yet no one in the world can understand them or put them into practice.

Words have an ancestor and affairs have a sovereign.

It is because people are ignorant that they fail to understand me.

Those who understand me are few;
Those who imitate me are honoured.

Therefore the sage, while clad in homespun, conceals on his person a priceless piece of jade.

LXXI

To know yet to think that one does not know is best;
Not to know yet to think that one knows will lead to difficulty.

It is by being alive to difficulty that one can avoid it. The sage meets with no difficulty. It is because he is alive to it that he meets with no difficulty.

LXXII

When the people lack a proper sense of awe, then some awful visitation will descend upon them.

Do not constrict their living space; do not press down on their means of livelihood. It is because you do not press down on them that they will not weary of the burden.

Hence the sage knows himself but does not display himself, loves himself but does not exalt himself.

Therefore he discards the one and takes the other.

LXXIII

He who is fearless in being bold will meet with his death;
He who is fearless in being timid will stay alive.
Of the two, one leads to good, the other to harm.
Heaven hates what it hates,
Who knows the reason why?

Therefore even the sage treats some things as difficult.

The way of heaven
Excels in overcoming though it does not contend,
In responding though it does not speak,
In attracting though it does not summon,
In laying plans though it appears slack.

The net of heaven is cast wide. Though the mesh is not fine, yet nothing ever slips through.

LXXIV

When the people are not afraid of death, wherefore frighten them with death? Were the people always afraid of death, and were I able to arrest and put to death those who innovate, then who would dare? There is a regular executioner whose charge it is to kill. To kill on behalf of the executioner is what is described as chopping wood on behalf of the master carpenter. In chopping wood on behalf of the master carpenter, there are few who escape hurting their own hands instead.

LXXV

The people are hungry:
It is because those in authority eat up too much in taxes
That the people are hungry.
The people are difficult to govern:
It is because those in authority are too fond of action
That the people are difficult to govern.
The people treat death lightly:
It is because the people set too much store by life
That they treat death lightly.

It is just because one has no use for life that one is wiser than the man who values life.

LXXVI

A man is supple and weak when living, but hard and stiff when dead. Grass and trees are pliant and fragile when living, but dried and shrivelled when dead. Thus the hard and the strong are the comrades of death; the supple and the weak are the comrades of life.

Therefore a weapon that is strong will not vanquish;
A tree that is strong will suffer the axe.
The strong and big takes the lower position,
The supple and weak takes the higher position.

LXXVII

Is not the way of heaven like the stretching of a bow?

The high it presses down,
The low it lifts up;
The excessive it takes from,
The deficient it gives to.

It is the way of heaven to take from what has in excess in order to make good what is deficient. The way of man is otherwise. It takes from those who are in want in order to offer this to those who already have more than enough. Who is there that can take what he himself has in excess and offer this to the empire? Only he who has the way.

Therefore the sage benefits them yet exacts no gratitude,
Accomplishes his task yet lays claim to no merit.

Is this not because he does not wish to be considered a better man than others?

LXXVIII

In the world there is nothing more submissive and weak than water. Yet for attacking that which is hard and strong nothing can surpass it. This is because there is nothing that can take its place.

That the weak overcomes the strong,
And the submissive overcomes the hard,
Everyone in the world knows yet no one can put this knowledge into practice.

Therefore the sage says,

One who takes on himself the humiliation of the state
Is called a ruler worthy of offering sacrifices to the gods of earth and millet;
One who takes on himself the calamity of the state
Is called a king worthy of dominion over the entire empire.
Straightforward words
Seem paradoxical.

LXXIX

When peace is made between great enemies,
Some enmity is bound to remain undispelled.
How can this be considered perfect?

Therefore the sage takes the left-hand tally, but exacts no payment from the people.

The man of virtue takes charge of the tally;
The man of no virtue takes charge of exaction.
It is the way of heaven to show no favouritism.
It is for ever on the side of the good man.

LXXX

Reduce the size and population of the state. Ensure that even though the people have tools of war for a troop or a battalion they will not use them; and also that they will be reluctant to move to distant places because they look on death as no light matter.

Even when they have ships and carts, they will have no use for them; and even when they have armour and weapons, they will have no occasion to make a show of them.

Bring it about that the people will return to the use of the knotted rope,

Will find relish in their food
And beauty in their clothes,
Will be content in their abode
And happy in the way they live.

Though adjoining states are within sight of one another, and the sound of dogs barking and cocks crowing in one state can be heard in another, yet the people of one state will grow old and die without having had any dealings with those of another.

LXXXI

Truthful words are not beautiful; beautiful words are not truthful. Good words are not persuasive; persuasive words are not good. He who knows has no wide learning; he who has wide learning does not know.

The sage does not hoard.

Having bestowed all he has on others, he has yet more;
Having given all he has to others, he is richer still.

The way of heaven benefits and does not harm; the way of the sage is bountiful and does not contend.

GREAT IDEAS

伟大的思想

第6辑

中国出版集团
中译出版社

41 与孤独为伍

［德］弗里德里希·尼采 著 孙若颖 译

中国出版集团 中译出版社

42 非同寻常的大众幻想

［英］查尔斯·麦基 著 郝瑞丽 译

中国出版集团 中译出版社

43 艺术与人生

［英］约翰·罗斯金 著 华亭 译

中国出版集团 中译出版社

44 论内心生活

［德］托马斯·厄·肯培 著 孙平华 曲欣 译

中国出版集团 中译出版社

45 奇迹和偶像崇拜

［法］伏尔泰 著 孙平华 曾娟 译

中国出版集团 中译出版社

46 澡盆故事

［英］乔纳森·斯威夫特 著 黄宜思 译

中国出版集团 中译出版社

47 论人类

［英］托马斯·霍布斯 著 汪涛 译

中国出版集团 中译出版社

48 现代生活的画家

［法］波德莱尔 著 胡晓凯 译

中国出版集团 中译出版社

目录

MAN ALONE WITH HIMSELF

与孤独为伍

［德］弗里德里希·尼采　著

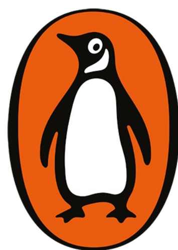
孙若颖　译

中国出版集团
中 译 出 版 社

与孤独为伍

（德）弗里德里希·尼采/著

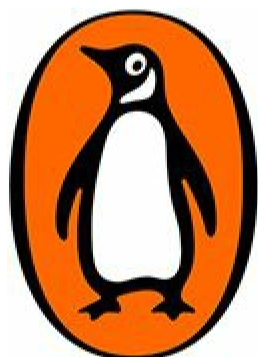
孙若颖/译



企鹅图书 | PENGUIN BOOKS

UK | USA | Canada | Ireland | Australia
New Zealand | India | South Africa | North Asia

Penguin Books is part of the Penguin Random House group of companies whose addresses can be found at:
global.penguinrandomhouse.com.



www.penguin.com.cn
‘Man Alone with Himself’ taken from Human, All Too Human, first published in 1878 and first published as a Penguin Classic in this translation by Marion Faber and Stephen Lehmann, 1984.
‘The Free Spirit’ and‘ From High Mountains: Epode’ taken from Beyond Good and Evil: Prelude to a Philosophy of the Future, first published in 1886 and first published as a Penguin Classic in this translation by R.J. Hollingdale, 1973.
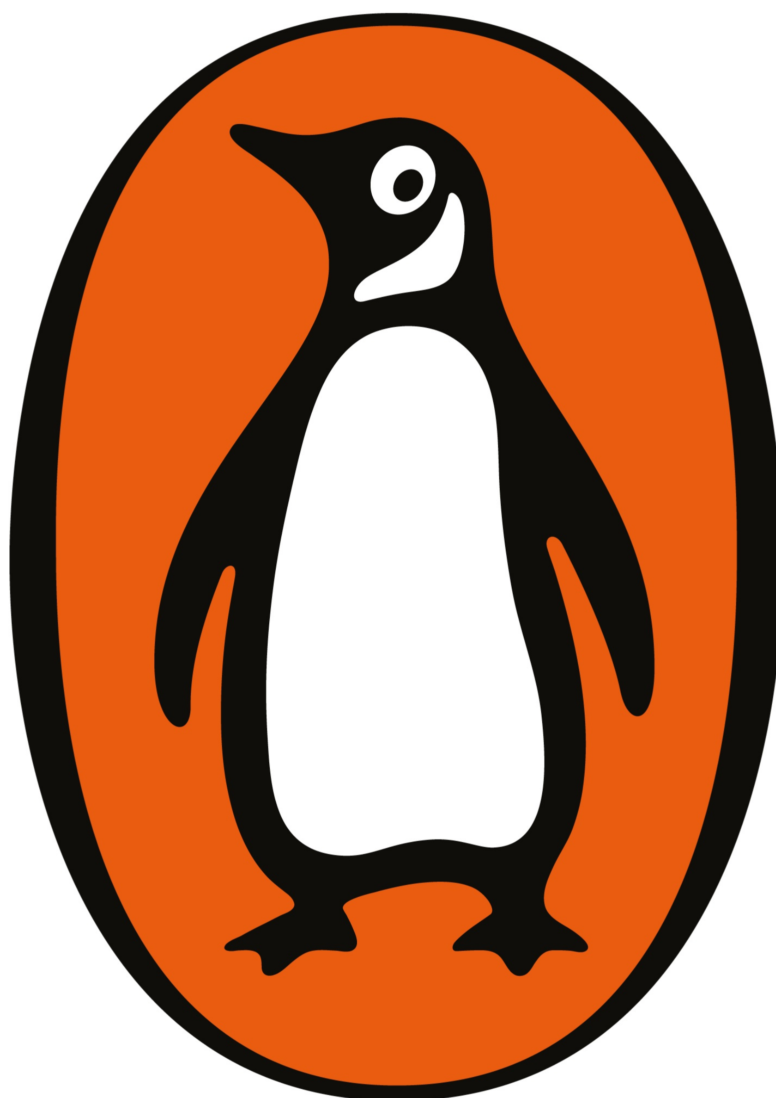
This selection first published 2008

Set by Rowland Phototypesetting Ltd, Bury St Edmunds, Suffolk

企鹅兰登电子书 | PENGUIN RANDOM HOUSE EBOOKS



目录

“伟大的思想”中文版序

企鹅“伟大的思想”系列丛书自2004年开始陆续面世，在英国、美国和德国均有出版。在英国出版品种最多，已付梓八十种，尚有二十种计划出版。该丛书在全球众多读者间，尤其是学生当中，普及了哲学和政治学，销量已远超二百万册。中文版“伟大的思想”的推出，是该系列的又一延续和发展，令人欢欣鼓舞。

推出这套丛书旨在让读者再次与一些伟大的非小说类经典著作面对面地交流。长久以来，此类书籍的出版都建立在这样一个假设之上——此类著作供学生课堂学习之用，因此需辅以导读、详尽的注释及参考书目等。此类版本无疑十分有用，但我想，如果某一版本能够重建托马斯·潘恩的《常识》或约翰·罗斯金的《艺术与人生》初版时的环境，为读者与作者营造更为亲密无间的氛围，使读者除了原作者及其自身的思考外没有其他参照，也许会更有吸引力。

但是，这一做法亦存在严重缺陷：每位作者的表述难免有难解或不可解之处，一些重要的背景知识或许也有所缺失。例如，读者对亨利·梭罗创作时的情形毫无头绪，也不了解该书的反响及影响。不过，这样做的优点也显而易见，最为显著的便是作者的初衷又一次受到重视——托马斯·潘恩的愤怒、查尔斯·达尔文的灵光、塞内加的隐逸。他们给许多国家的众多读者带来的生活影响难以估量，有的影响甚至长达几个世纪，几乎没有什么比阅读这些作家更令人拍案叫绝的了。倘若没有亚当·斯密或阿图尔·叔本华，将无法想象我们今天的世界。这些小书创作年代久远，但其中的话语彻底改变了我们的政治学、经济学、精神世界、社会规划和宗教信仰。

“伟大的思想”系列一直求新求变，地域不同，收录的作家亦不同。一些作家在中国或美国更受欢迎，而英国版“伟大的思想”收录的一些作家在其他国家和地区则鲜有人知。称其为“伟大的思想”，我们亦是慎之又慎。这些思想之所以伟大，在于其影响深远，但这并不意味着这些思想都是“好”思想，实际上一些书或可列入“坏”思想之列。丛书中收录的很多作家受到同样收录于该丛书的其他作家的巨大影响，例如，马塞尔·普鲁斯特承认受约翰·罗斯金影响很大，米歇尔·德·蒙田也承认深受塞内加影响。但也有些作家彼此憎恶，若发现彼此都被收录于同一丛书，一定会深感苦恼。至于他们思想的或“好”或“坏”，读者可自行判明。我们衷心希望，您可以享受阅读这些著作的乐趣。

“伟大的思想”出版者
西蒙·温德尔

导读

尼采，全名弗里德里希·威廉·尼采（Friedrich Wilhelm Nietzsche，1844—1900），西方现代哲学的开创者。除了在哲学上的造诣，他还是语言学家、诗人、评论家和作曲家。尼采五岁丧父，家中的五个女人（母亲、妹妹、祖母、两个姑姑）便将所有的爱倾注于他。成长环境使然，他从小敏感而脆弱，早熟又孤僻。家庭对他来说，是幸福的港湾，但尼采心中始终有一个使命：探索人生的真谛。他自知在暖巢中得不到答案，便毅然舍弃这一切，在风雨飘摇的世界里四处漂泊。一生带着对真理的究极追求，最终以发疯去世谢幕，留下经典无数。他的一生，充满艺术。只需读几页他的书，你就能发现：想法标新立异的是他；言语充满辛辣讽刺的是他；抨击时不经意流露出自我沉醉的还是他。如柏拉图、阿里斯托芬一般，这些都是天才作家的“标配”。

据说，尼采的晚年，因受不了长期不被理解的孤独，在都灵大街发疯，失去了理智。本书的名字由此显得意味深长。他在书中说：“适合独立的人寥寥无几，那是强者的特权。”独立必然伴随着孤独，但孤独赠予了他深邃的思考、超脱的人格。初读《与孤独为伍》，像所有哲学书给人的体验一样，似是品一杯酒，晕晕乎乎、云里雾里。但在尼采制造的云雾缭绕背后，有一把尖刀，时刻替你剖开社会的本质、揭露内心的真实。它太过于真实，甚至有时你还想矢口否认，试图为自己留一层颜面。但他的语气太过于笃定和自信，让你羞愧过后不得不暗暗承认他的睿智和透彻。

他说：“要求别人爱自己是最大的傲慢。”“寻求机智的人没有机智。”他还说，“要明白普通人的行为就必须明白，他们很少花费精力去摆脱糟糕的境遇。”经典之所以为经典，正是在于这些针砭时弊的话语

放到现代社会依然不会过时：那些渴望被爱的人，是否一直吝啬自己的爱？那些寻求捷径的人，是否有过踏实的付出？那些深陷困境的人，是否曾努力挣扎？求而不得的原因，尼采在十九世纪就给出了答案。

书中的讽刺浑然天成，犀利的话语夹裹在幽默中，抽打人的同时给予了最后一层颜面："想成为榜样的人，必须给自己的德行添点愚蠢，这样别人就可以模仿并且超过模仿的对象——人们喜欢做这样的事。""一知半解比彻底了解更受欢迎：事情在一知半解的人那里被简化，结果得到了更容易让人理解和信服的观点。""视力不好的人，看到的东西往往比别人少一些；听力不好的人，听到的东西往往比别人多一些。"寥寥几句，思索良久。读者似乎在和尼采对话，更多的，则像是在辩论——和尼采辩论、和自己辩论。说服自己，又扳倒自己，渐渐陷入尼采构建的哲学世界，常常在看完几页后一抬头，世界都变得不真实了。

除了这些讽刺和批判，关于做人做事，他也有自己的见解和章法："瀑布在跌落时，变得舒缓飘逸；实干家在行动时，将强烈的渴望化为彻底的冷静。""某些人的本领看起来比实际小，是因为他们给自己安排的任务太庞大。"这些话，可以引起多少人的共鸣！他在幽默中不乏机敏的思考。不过，除了领略其中的智慧，现代人或许更需要批判的思维。阅读不是为了思想的膜拜和自我的否定，而是用清醒的头脑追寻自己的真理。有时，他会把人性看得过于深刻，甚至有些激进："某人故去时，我们通常需要令人安慰的解释，与其说是平复痛苦，不如说是为自己的痛苦轻易得到平复寻找借口。"读这句话，仿佛可以看到尼采紧皱的眉头倔强地表达着对人类的不满。但有时，这些安慰的解释，只是悲伤流出的窗口，麻痹内心巨大的伤痛。不是为了忘记而惺惺作态，而是为了更好地铭记。人生的真相是残酷，但残酷的尽头也有温柔。书中后半段摘有尼采的诗，读起来更像是即兴而为，他说：我已找到的和正在寻找的——可曾在书里存在过？那么，亲爱的读者，你找到的和正

在寻找的，是否也藏匿在尼采的文字和思想中呢？

何博文

一、与孤独为伍

1.真理之敌。信仰是比谎言更危险的真理之敌。

2.颠倒的世界。我们常会因为不喜欢某人的某个说法而严加苛责，其实我们更应该在相反的情况下这么做。

3.有个性的人。一个人看上去有个性，是因为他办事总是依着自己的性情，而不是遵照原则。

4.必居其一。一个人如果生来不具有平易的性格，那么艺术与知识的陶冶必定可以使他变得性格平易。

5.对事业的激情。热爱事业（如科学、国家利益、文化、艺术）的人，往往对人比较冷漠（即便对其事业的代表，如政客、哲学家、艺术家也是如此）。

6.行动的冷静。瀑布在跌落时，变得舒缓飘逸；实干家在行动时，将强烈的渴望化为彻底的冷静。

7.浅显为妙。如果彻底了解，就很难忠诚。因为了解越深入，就越会接触到黑暗面。

8.理想主义者的误区。理想主义者们幻想自己投身的是天底下最伟大的事业，他们不愿相信，自己事业的壮大，也需要其他事业所必需的气味难闻的粪肥。

9.自我观察。人最善于防备自己，抵御自己的窥探和围攻；通常，他最多只能看清自己的外围城池。真正的堡垒他不但进不去，甚至看不

见，除非朋友或敌人变成内应，带他从密道去那里。

10.合适的职业。男人们很少会忍受一项职业，除非他们相信或者说服自己相信，这项职业比其他的更重要。女人们在对待所爱的人时也是一样。

11.高尚的情操。高尚的情操大体上由善良和轻信构成，这正是贪婪和成功的人所不屑和鄙视的。

12.目的地和路。很多人会坚持走已经走上的路，对他们的目的地却很少这样坚持。

13.特立独行令人反感的地方。特立独行的人总是令人反感，因为他们与众不同的方式使周围的人感到自卑。

14.名人的特权。通过微不足道的礼物带给人无上的快乐，是名人的特权。

15.不经意的高尚。习惯给予而非索取的人，就具备了不经意的高尚。

16.成为英雄的条件。人如果想成为英雄，他的对手必须先从蛇变成龙，否则他就缺少一个合适的敌人。

17.朋友。分享喜悦而非同情，使人们成为朋友。

18.利用高潮与低潮。为了获得知识，要学会利用内在的潮汐，让自己顺势接近一件事物，一段时间以后，再顺势从那件事物上撤离。

19.爱自己。人们常说“爱事业”，实际上是爱自己，“爱事业”只是“爱自己”的表达方式。

20.谦逊之人。对人谦逊的人，往往对事物（城市、国家、社会、时代，或者人类）表现得格外傲慢。那是他的报复。

21.羡慕和嫉妒。羡慕和嫉妒是人类灵魂的私处。这个比方或许可以被推至更远。

22.最优雅的伪君子。完全不谈论自己是一种形式优雅的伪善。

23.烦恼。烦恼是一种生理疾病，不可能仅仅通过消灭其根源而消除它。

24.真理的代表。很难找到真理的拥趸，并非因为说出真理很危险，而是因为这件事本身很乏味。

25.比敌人还麻烦。当我们因为某些原因（比如感激）必须和话不投机的人维持热络的表象时，这些人对我们想象力的折磨比我们的敌人更甚。

26.走进大自然。我们喜欢走进大自然，因为它从不对我们评头论足。

27.寸有所长。在文明状态下，所有人都感到自己至少在某一方面比别人强，这是形成社会普遍亲善的基础：由于每个人在特定的情形下都可以向他人提供帮助，因而在接受他人的帮助时也就不会感到羞耻。

28.令人安慰的解释。某人故去时，我们通常需要令人安慰的解释，与其说是为了平复痛苦，不如说是为自己的痛苦轻易得到平复寻找借口。

29.忠实于信仰。事务繁忙的人，通常会保持基本理念和观点不变，这和为某种信念服务的人一样。他不再检验自己的信念，他没有时

间这么做。事实上，连就此事进行考虑都与他的兴趣相违。

30.道德和数量。一个人比另一个更有道德，常常因为他的目标更多，后者因为在狭窄的圈子里忙于琐事而处于下风。

31.生命作为生命的作品。无论一个人在知识上多么广博，在他本人眼里多么客观，他最终只能收获自己的自传。

32.铁定的必然。透过历史的进程，人类了解到所谓“铁定的必然”，既非铁定也非必然。

33.经验之谈。不合理性不是一件事物消亡的理由，反而是其存在的条件。

34.真相。如今，没有人会因为某个致命的真相死去，因为解药太多。

35.基本观点。在真理的推广和人类的幸福之间，不存在预设的和谐。

36.人的宿命。进行过深入思考的人都知道，任何行为和判断都只能导致错误的结果。

37.真理如女巫。错误让动物变成人，真理是否会把人变回动物？

38.文化的危机。在我们的时代，文化面临被文化的手段摧毁的危险。

39.伟大意味着指出方向。没有哪条河流的伟大和充盈是单凭自身，能够吸纳众多的支流并带领它们前行才是其伟大之处。伟人也是一样。关键在于能指出一个众人追随的方向，至于他本人有没有足够的天赋，并不重要。

40.问心有愧。大谈自己对人类重要性的资本家，在信守约定或誓言方面会感到问心有愧。

41.要求被爱。要求别人爱自己是最大的傲慢。

42.蔑视他人。蔑视他人最明显的标志是只有在为了达成自己的目的时才会容忍他人。

43.政见相左的追随者。谁让别人对他暴跳如雷，谁就找到了追随自己的同伙。

44.忘记自己的经历。经常进行客观思考的人，容易忘记自己的经历，但不会忘记这些经历引发的思考。

45.固执己见。一个人固执己见，要么是因为他自己发现了这个观点而为之骄傲，要么是因为他经过努力理解了这个观点而为之骄傲，二者都出自于虚荣。

46.害怕曝光。善行同恶行一样害怕曝光。后者担心曝光会招致痛苦（作为惩罚）；前者担心曝光会让快乐（纯粹的快乐一旦掺杂了虚荣心的满足就会终止）消失。

47.一天的长度。如果一个人有很多事要往一天里塞，一天就会变出一百个口袋来装。

48.暴君天才。如果灵魂翻腾起无法遏制的欲望，想确立自己的绝对权威，并且一直保持着这股狂热，那么即便不值一提的天分（在政治家或艺术家中），也能演变成几乎无法抗拒的自然力。

49.敌人的生命。如果一个人活着是为了同敌人战斗，那么敌人活着对他来说就非常重要。

50.更重要的事。无法解释、晦暗不明的事常被认为比可以解释、清晰明朗的事更重要。

51.评估服务。我们评估某项服务，依据的是这项服务的标价，而不是服务本身对于我们的价值。

52.不幸。不幸是如此的光荣（幸福反而像是一种浅薄、平庸和缺乏抱负的标志），如果有人说“你肯定非常幸福”时，我们通常都会表示抗议。

53.恐惧的幻象。恐惧的幻象是一个骨瘦如柴的邪恶小妖，专拣人的承受力达到极限时跳到他的背上。

54.令人生厌的反对者的价值。有时我们保持对某项事业的忠诚，只是因为反对它的人总是令我们生厌。

55.职业的价值。职业使我们变得没有思想，而这正是它最伟大的赐福。它仿佛一道防御工事，我们陷入疑虑和不安的围攻时，就可以撤退到它的后面。

56.本领。某些人的本领看起来比实际上小，是因为他们给自己安排的任务太庞大。

57.年轻。人年轻时是令人不快的，想在任何方面获得成就，在当时既不可能也不合理。

58.过于宏大的目标。当众夸下海口的人，在意识到无法兑现承诺时，通常不会有勇气重提旧事，最终无可避免地变成伪君子。

59.在溪流中。强劲的水流会带走石子和灌木，强大的思想也会吸引许多愚蠢和昏乱的头脑。

60.思想解放的危险。当一个人热切地试图解放思想时，他的激情和欲望也暗暗希望能从中得利。

61.精神的体现。如果一个人经常进行聪明的思考，他的脸和身体也会看起来很聪明。

62.视力不好和听力不好。视力不好的人，看到的东西往往比别人少一些；听力不好的人，听到的东西往往比别人多一些。

63.虚荣的自得其乐。虚荣的人不但想高人一等，而且希望感觉到高人一等，因此不惜自欺欺人。他关心的不是别人的意见，而是他对别人意见的看法。

64.格外虚荣。自大的人在生病时会变得格外虚荣，更加在乎名声和赞誉。他在多大程度上迷失了自己，就会从外界利用他人的观点重新赢回来。

65.“机智”的人。寻求机智的人没有机智。

66.给党派领袖的提示。如果能迫使人们公开宣誓效忠，就基本等于让他们在私下里宣誓效忠，因为人们总是希望显得表里如一。

67.轻蔑。通常，人们对来自别人的轻蔑比对来自自己的轻蔑更加敏感。

68.感激的绳索。某些有奴性思想的人，感恩戴德过了头，无异于用感激的绳索将自己活活勒死。

69.预言家的诀窍。要预言普通人的行为就必须明白，他们很少花费精力去摆脱糟糕的境遇。

70.唯一的人权。背离传统的人成为传统的祭品，坚守传统的人成

为传统的奴隶。无论哪种情况，毁灭都随之而来。

71.比动物还不如。一个人纵声大笑时的粗俗超过了所有动物。

72.不求甚解。只会说一点外文的人比外文说得好的人更乐在其中，愉悦与不求甚解相得甚欢。

73.勤奋和负责。勤奋和负责往往是对头。勤奋想在果实青涩的时候就把它们从树上摘下，负责则让果实过久地挂在树上，直到它们掉下来，落得一场空。

74.怀疑。对于无法忍受的人，我们就把他们变得可疑。

75.缺乏机遇。很多人一辈子都在等待施展抱负的机会。

76.缺乏朋友。缺乏朋友通常是因为嫉妒或者傲慢。很多人有朋友只是幸运地因为没有可以嫉妒的理由。

77.多的危险。多一件本事不如少一件容易有稳固的立足，好比四条腿的桌子不如三条腿的站得稳。

78.他人的榜样。想成为榜样的人，必须给自己的德行添点愚蠢，这样别人就可以模仿并且超过模仿的对象——人们喜欢做这样的事。

79.当作靶子。通常别人的恶毒言论并非真的针对我们，而是发泄他们由于其他原因感到的烦恼和不悦。

80.轻易认输。如果人能说服自己憎恨过去，就不会再受到未了心愿的折磨。

81.身处危险。我们刚刚躲过一辆汽车的时候最容易被车撞倒。

82.声音对应的角色。不得不违背习惯大声说话的人（比如面对一大群人或者听力不好的人），通常会夸大他要表达的东西。

某些人之所以成为恶毒的诽谤者、阴谋家或者同谋，只是因为他们的声音最适合轻声细语。

83.爱与恨。爱与恨本身并不盲目，只是被它们怀里的火焰蒙蔽了双眼。

84.于己有利的树敌。无法获得世人认可的人，设法四处树敌。这样他就可以宽慰自己，是外界的敌意妨碍他的价值被承认，并且别人也有同感。这么做大大加强了他的自信。

85.忏悔。忏悔之后，我们将罪行忘却，听取忏悔的人却记住了。

86.自负。自负就像传说中的金羊毛，能保护你免受鞭笞，却抵御不住微小的刺痛。

87.火焰中的阴影。火焰在自己的眼里没有在被它照耀的人眼里那样明亮：智者也是如此。

88.自己的观点。我们突然被提问时第一个想到的观点，通常不是自己的，而是与我们的身份、地位或出身相符的习惯性答案；我们自己的观点很少浮出水面。

89.勇气的来源。普通人在看不到危险的时候，会像英雄那样英勇无畏、刀枪不入。相反的，英雄唯一容易受到伤害的地方在背部，因为那里他无法看到。

90.就医的危险。人要么因医生而生，要么因医生而死。

91.神奇的虚荣心。准确预言天气三次的人，多少会迷信自己拥有

预言的天赋。一旦虚荣心得到满足，我们就不再争论那到底是天赋还是巧合。

92.职业。职业是生活的脊梁。

93.个人影响的危险性。感到自己对他人有巨大影响的人，必须给予对方充分的自由，对于对方偶尔的反抗应该表示支持甚至鼓励，否则他会不可避免地成为那个人的敌人。

94.让接班人得到他应得的。拥有无私胸襟、创立伟大事业的人，会用心培养接班人。在所有可能的接班人身上看到对手的影子并严加防范，是专制和卑鄙的标志。

95.一知半解。一知半解比彻底了解更受欢迎：事情在一知半解的人那里被简化，结果得到了更容易让人理解和信服的观点。

96.不适合做党派成员。经常思考的人不适合做党派成员，因为他的思想很快就洞穿并且超越了党派。

97.糟糕的记性。糟糕记性的好处，在于同一件美事，可以像头次经历一样享受好几次。

98.令自己感到痛苦。不替别人考虑往往标志着渴望麻木的不和谐的内心状况。

99.殉道者。殉道者的信徒所承受的痛苦甚于殉道者本人。

100.残留的虚荣心。一些没必要虚荣的人虚荣，是由某个残留的习惯发展而来，这一习惯源自于他们尚无自信、只能通过乞求从别人那里一点一点获得信仰的时期。

101.激情引爆点。对于即将陷入愤怒或热恋的人来说，此时此刻他

的灵魂犹如注满水的容器。只差最后一滴，即引爆激情的善的意志（通常也被称为恶的意志）。只有这一小滴是必不可少的，之后容器里的水就开始溢出。

102.暴躁的想法。人或许可以被比作树林中堆积的炭木。年轻人只有在停止发红发热，并且化成炭后，才能变得有用。只要它们还在闷烧、冒烟，或许会更有趣，但一定毫无用处，并且经常带来麻烦。

人类无情地将每个人当作燃料，加热它庞大的机器。但是如果所有的人（也就是全人类）只是起到维持机器运转的作用，机器的意义何在？机器成为人类的最终目标——这就是人间喜剧吗？

103.生命的时针。生命中有一些罕见、孤立却意义非凡的时刻，还有不可胜数的间隔。最美好的间隔也不过是关于那些时刻的回味。爱情、春光、优美的旋律、山峦、月光、大海，所有这一切与心灵畅所欲言的机会只有一次，如果这样的机会确实存在的话，因为许多人根本没有经历过那样的时刻，他们本身就是生命这支交响曲中的间隔和幕间休息。

104.反对还是建设。我们通常犯的错误，是不顾一切地反对某个路线、党派或者时代，因为我们刚好撞见了它肤浅、不完善的一面，即所谓“美玉中的瑕疵”——或许是因为我们自己曾深入参与其中。于是我们背离它们，朝截然相反的方向走去。尽管去伪存真，取长补短才是更好的做法。当然，推进一项发展中的、不完善的事业，要比攻击它的不完善或抛弃它，需要更强的洞察力和意志力。

105.谦逊。真正的谦逊（即懂得我们不是自己的创造者）是有的，并且非常适合大人物，因为他最明白自己没有任何功劳（不管他作出过多么大的贡献）。大人物的自负之所以可憎，不是因为他在体验自己的力量，而是因为他在这样做时总是通过伤害和专横地对待他人或是试探

对方承受力底线的方式。通常这只能证明他对自己的实力缺乏自信，反而令人质疑他的伟大。所以，明智的人要尽量避免自负。

106.一天的头一个想法。开始一天的最好方式，是在睡醒时思考我们能否在这一天给至少一个人带来欢乐。如果能用这种做法替代祈祷，所有人都会从这项改变中受益。

107.傲慢作为最后的安慰。如果一个人将自身的不幸、智障或疾病，视为命中注定的劫难，或是对自己曾经做过的某件事的神秘惩罚，他等于是在拔高自己，幻想自己比别人优越。这种傲慢的罪人，在各种宗教派系中比比皆是。

108.幸福的生长。在人间的不幸经常光顾的火山带，人类建筑起小小的幸福花园。不论他以怎样的方式生活，是从存在中汲取知识，还是选择让步和屈从，抑或是以攻克难关为乐，他都会发现，幸福就在困境的边缘生长。越靠近危险的地方，越能收获巨大的幸福。不过，如果因此认为受苦是理所当然的，却很可笑。

109.祖辈之路。发展祖辈的技能而非另起炉灶是有道理的。否则就会失去在某一项技能上臻于完美的可能性。因此人们常说：该走哪条路？——走祖辈走过的路。

110.虚荣心和野心的教化。只要一个人尚未成为全人类正义事业的工具，野心就会折磨他；一旦他实现了这个野心，不得不像机器一样为大家服务，虚荣心又会来拜访。在野心完成了它那份艰苦的工作（让这个人变得有用）之后，虚荣心会在细小处感化他，让他变得更随和、宽容和周到。

111.哲学新手。刚刚从哲人那里分享了智慧的我们，走在大街上也能感觉到自己已经脱胎换骨，已变成伟人。既然碰到的人对这份智慧一

无所知，我们就必须发布关于一切的闻所未闻的新评判。因为对某部律法之书推崇备至，我们就认为自己也必须表现得像法官一样。

112.取悦与令人不悦。有些人想被关注，于是采取令人不悦的方式，这些人同那些不想被关注、只想取悦他人的人，需要的是同样的东西，只是程度上更强，方式上更间接，虽然这么做看似将他们带离了目标。由于想获得权力和影响力，他们表现得居高临下，尽管这会让人感到不悦。因为他们知道，最终得到权力的人，不论说或做什么，都会令人愉悦。即便他令人不悦，看上去也使人愉快。

自由精神的信奉者也想得到权力，为的是用来愉悦大众。如果他们由于自己的信仰而遭到威胁、迫害、监禁或者处决，他们会因为这有助于自己的信仰被铭刻在人类的丰碑上而欢喜。虽然那是推迟的奖赏，他们也欣然接受，并将其作为获取权力过程中痛苦而有效的途径。

113.宣战的借口以及诸如此类。为事先做好的决定寻找借口向邻国开战的君主，好比一个将继母作为既成事实强加给孩子的父亲。所有公开宣告的动机，不都是这类被强加于人的继母吗？

114.激情与权利。谈到权利，没有什么人比那个持怀疑态度的人更富于激情。他试图通过将激情拉到自己一边来削弱理智和疑虑。他因此无愧于良心并获得了人们的支持。

115.弃绝者的把戏。像某些教士那样反对婚姻的人，会从最低级、庸俗的意义上理解婚姻。同样，拒绝同时代人尊敬的人，会从卑鄙的角度揣度人们的尊敬；唯有如此，他的弃绝和抗争才会变得相对容易。在大的方面克己的人，容易在小的方面纵容自己。可以想见，不为同时代人掌声所动的人，无法拒绝小的虚荣带来的满足。

116.傲慢年纪。有才能的人的傲慢年纪在二十六至三十岁之间到

来。这是人的第一个成熟期，还带有很重的青涩味。这个年纪的人往往根据自身的感受，要求那些对其才能不甚了解或一无所知的人，表现出尊敬和谦卑。由于这些表示并非总能如期而至，他有时会通过一个眼神，一个傲慢的手势或者某种声调来实施报复。观察细致的人能在他这个年纪的所有作品，不论诗歌、哲学还是绘画和音乐中，辨认出这种痕迹。阅历丰富的长者往往对此会心一笑，同时满怀感触地回忆起这段美好时光。处于这个年纪的人总感觉自己被大材小用了。或许他后来真的有所作为，但那种不可一世的自信已经一去不返，除非这个人一辈子都是虚荣心驱使下的不折不扣的小丑。

117.虚幻然而坚实。在深渊边缘行走或者跨越溪堑时，我们需要一个护栏，不是为了抓住它（因为它会立即同我们一起坠落），而是为了在视觉上感到安全。同样，我们年轻时，也需要那些能在无意中充当我们护栏的人；虽然如果我们真的碰到危险、需要依靠时，他们提供不了什么帮助，但是他们给了我们仿佛保护就在身边的那种安慰（比如父亲、老师、朋友，这三种人通常带给我们的感受）。

118.学会去爱。我们必须学会去爱，学会仁慈待人，而且要从小学起。如果教育和人生际遇没有提供给我们操练这些情感的机会，那么我们的灵魂就会变得干涸，甚至于无法理解关爱别人这样一件温柔的事。同样，仇恨也需要学习和培养，如果有人想精通此道的话。否则，仇恨的萌芽也会渐渐枯萎。

119.装饰性废墟。精神上历尽沧桑的人，早年留下的一些观点和习惯，会在他新的思考和行为中凸现出来，就像那些无法解释的古迹、灰色石雕，常常装点了整个地区。

120.爱与尊敬。爱使人渴望；害怕使人规避。这就是为什么我们不可能对同一个人既爱又尊敬。尊敬一个人、承认他的权威就等于畏惧他：这是一种敬畏之情。但是爱不承认权威，不接受任何区分，例如地

位的高下。因为被爱意味着不被尊敬，所以野心家们或公开或私下里在爱的面前踌躇不前。

121.对冷漠者的偏爱。感情上热得快的人凉得也快，所以大体上不可靠。因此那些一直表现冷漠的人反而受到人们的偏爱，被认为靠得住和值得信赖。实际上，这是将他们同那些慢热并能长久保持热度的人搞混了。

122.自由见解的危险。自由见解那种娱乐性的随意，有如搔痒，如果你忍不住去挠它，最后就会赫然出现一个痛楚的伤口；换句话说，自由见解最终会搅扰我们对生活和人际关系的态度，造成我们在这方面的痛苦。

123.对强烈痛苦的渴望。猛烈的情感消逝之后，留下的是对她本身的隐秘渴望，消逝是她抛给我们的最后媚眼。受她的鞭笞，必定有令人感到快意的地方。与此相反，温和的情感令人感到索然无味。显然，在强烈的痛苦与微弱的愉悦之间，我们更倾向于选择前者。

124.对他人和世界的不满。我们经常迁怒于人，虽然我们烦恼的对象是自己。归根结底，我们是在努力混淆和欺骗自己的判断，用别人的疏忽和不足充当自己烦恼的根源，这样我们就可以不去追究自己。

自律甚严、经常苛责自己的人，最经常说人类的坏话。从来没有哪个圣人情愿将罪恶自己揽，美德全部让给别人。这样的人，恐怕和那种谨遵菩萨教诲、于众人前隐匿起自己的长处而示人以不足的人，一样鲜见。

125.混淆因果。我们会不经意地找出符合自己脾胃的准则和信条，仿佛是那些准则和信条塑造了我们的性格，赋予它稳定性和确定性。真实的情形恰好相反。表面上，思考和判断塑造了我们的性格，事实上，

正是性格决定了我们以何种方式思考和判断。

在这场无意识的喜剧中，是什么在操纵我们？除了懒惰和图省事的心理，还有在一切事情上维持前后一致、保持个性和思想上的统一的妄想：因为那会为我们赢得尊敬，带给我们信任和权力。

126.年纪与真相。年轻人喜欢有趣和古怪的东西，是真是假倒不关心。相对成熟的人喜欢真相中有趣和古怪的部分。完全成熟的人喜欢真相，即便真相显得平淡无奇、在普通人眼里枯燥而乏味。因为他们发现，真相倾向于透过朴素的伪装传递最高的智慧。

127.和蹩脚诗人一样的人们。正如蹩脚诗人在一句诗的后半段搜寻思想而迁就韵脚那样，人们在后半生，出于焦虑，也寻求起符合他们早年生活印记的活动、观点和朋友圈子，以便留下协调一致的外部印象。与此同时，他们不再拥有强大的思想来驾驭和重新定义他们的生命，取而代之的是搜寻韵脚的意向。

128.无聊与游戏。需求迫使我们从事能让需求得到满足的工作，我们习惯于在不断苏醒的新的需求下工作。但是在某些闲散的时刻，当我们的需求变得平静，仿佛睡去时，我们又开始受到无聊的侵扰。这是什么？这其实是工作的惯性，以一种新增的需求的形式表现出来。这种需求越大，工作的惯性也越大，需求带给我们的折磨也越大。为了摆脱无聊，人们要么在需求被满足的基础上继续工作，要么发明游戏，后者是一种为了满足工作的需要而设计的工作。厌烦了游戏，并且没有受新的需求烦恼的人，有时会充满了迈入第三种境界的渴望。这第三种境界同游戏的关系，就像飘浮同舞蹈，舞蹈同行走的关系，是一种喜悦、平和状态下的运动：这就是艺术家和哲学家眼中的幸福。

129.来自相片的启示。如果我们观察从孩童到成年的一系列相片，我们会欣喜地发现，成年后的我们更像童年时代而非青少年时代的我

们。其可能的解释是，我们曾一度背离自己的本性，这种背离最终在意志力成熟的成年得到克服。青少年时代的我们，往往受到来自激情、导师或政治事件等强大影响的摆布，这些影响在成年后被压缩到一个有限的范围内。当然它们还会继续伴随并影响我们，但我们的内心感受和思考会占据主导。这些影响将被作为我们的力量源泉，但我们不会再像二十几岁时那样受其操控。就这样，我们在思想和情感上都与童年时代的我们更为接近——这一内在的回归，通过相片得到外化。

130.岁月的声音。少年人陈述、赞赏、谴责或撒谎的声音往往令上了年纪的人感到不悦，因为他们嗓门太大，同时又吐字不清，仿佛穹窿中的回音，因为空洞而引起共振。原来，少年人思考的东西，大部分不是个性丰盈的自然流露，而是在附和周围人的思想、言论和褒贬。由于情感（好恶）在他们内心引起的波澜，比伴随这些情感的理性思考来得更加猛烈，当他们表达自己时，就出现了这种含混、空洞的效果，暗示理性的缺席或匮乏。成年使人的声音变得铿锵有力、抑扬顿挫，声音虽不大，但像所有吐字清晰的发声一样，可以传递得很远。最后，老年通常会让声音带上一种温和与包容，闻之悦耳，当然某些时候也会变得乖戾。

131.逆行之人和先行之人。那些不讨人喜欢的人，对人充满了不信任，妒忌对手和邻居的成功，听到不同意见就光火。这一切表明他处于文化发展的早期阶段，像是个出土文物。他同别人打交道的方式，适用于霸权统治盛行的时代，所以他是个逆行之人。第二种人，豪爽地分享他人的喜悦，到哪里都能赢得伙伴，热爱所有蓬勃发展的事物，欣赏别人的荣誉和成功，不但不妄称只有自己掌握真理，反而充满了谦逊的怀疑主义——这样的人是先行之人，他在朝更高阶段的人类文化迈进。前者生活的时期，人类交流的基础尚未建立；而后者则生活在这栋大厦的最顶端，离那些被锁在文化地基以下、在地窖中发狂、咆哮的野蛮生物，要多远有多远。

132.疑心病患者的慰藉。当一个伟大的思想者暂时性地受到疑心病的折磨时，他可能会这样宽慰自己：“这只寄生虫滋生于你的伟大，倘若你没有那么伟大，你所受的苦就会少些。”一名政客，当他的妒忌和复仇之心（即他作为一国代表必然谙熟的“一切人反对一切人的战争”的情绪）侵入到他的私人关系中、令他举步维艰时，也会说出同样的话。

133.从现实中抽离。偶尔从现实中抽离有莫大的好处。从现实的岸边驶离，进入旧有世界观的海洋，从那里反观岸边，会使我们第一次有幸一睹它的全貌。再次回到岸边的我们，比起那些从没有离开过的人，获得了对现实更好的理解。

134.用个人的不足来播种和收获。像卢梭这样的人，懂得如何利用自身的弱点、不足和罪愆，仿佛这些是滋养天才的沃土。卢梭哀叹社会的腐败和堕落，视其为文化导致的恶果，皆基于其自身的经历，其中的苦涩使他的批判一针见血，入木三分。他从个人角度寻求救治，认为自己找寻的药方能直接医治社会，并通过社会间接地医治自身。

135.哲学上的思维定式。人们总是力求在多变的人生境遇和事件面前保持不变的情感立场和观点，我们称之为哲学上的思维定式。但是与其维持自身的统一，不如聆听来自不同生命境遇、观点各异的低语，以丰富我们的阅历。通过拒绝成为僵化、不变通和孤立的个人，我们承认并分享了芸芸众生的生命和特质。

136.轻蔑之火。一旦一个人敢于发表会使自己蒙羞的观点，他就朝独立迈进了一步。那时，甚至他的朋友和熟人也开始感到焦虑不安。有天分的人必须迈过这道火焰，那以后，他就是自己的主人了。

137.牺牲。如果有选择，人们更愿意选择大的牺牲而不是小的，因为对于大的牺牲，我们可以用自我崇拜来补偿自己，而对于小的牺牲这却是不可能的。

138.爱作为一种手段。无论谁想真正了解一件新事物（不管是一个人、一件事，还是一本书），都需要用全部可能的爱来接纳它，尽可能忽视、忘记它的所有不友好、令人反感或虚假的部分。比如，我们会给予某本书的作者最大的起跑优势，接下来就像观看赛跑一样，心情忐忑地盼望他能到达终点。通过这么做，我们得以深入新事物的内核，进入它的动力中心，而这正是了解一件事物的内涵所在。一旦到达那个阶段，理智就会设定它的限度。过高的评价和批判机制的偶尔失衡，都是将事物的灵魂引诱到开阔地的手段。

139.把世界想象得太好或太坏。不管我们把世界想象得太好还是太坏，我们都会收获巨大的喜悦：如果预想得太好，我们等于给世界（经历）注入了比实际更多的美好；如果预想得太糟，我们会得到一个令人愉快的失望：世界的美好，会因为我们的惊喜而加倍放大。

顺便一提，病态的脾性在这两种情形下的经历正好相反。

140.深刻的人。以印象深刻见长的人（他们通常被称为“深刻的人”），在遭遇突发性事件时，通常会表现得相对有控制力和决断性。这是因为反应时间太短，印象尚未形成。然而长久期待的人或事，最能刺激这种个性的人，会使他们几乎无法在等候结束时保持镇定自若。

141.同“高我”的交流。每个人在找到自己的“高我”时，都有过辉煌。真正的人道，要求我们仅在一个人的这种时刻，而非在他仍处于受束缚、受奴役的状态下时对他进行评判。比如说，我们应该就一名画家领会和呈现的最高妙的图景给予评价或荣誉。但是人们自己在对待“高我”时，却采取了非常不同的做法。他们经常装腔作势，以致后来不断模仿自己在辉煌时期的样子。有些人面对自己的理想时会感到羞惭，想要否定它：他们害怕自己的“高我”，因为当“高我”发言时，它的要求很高。此外，“高我”拥有影子般的自由，可以自主去留。为此，它经常被称为神灵的礼物，而实际上其他的一切也都是神灵（机遇）的礼物：那

就是人自身。

142.喜欢独处的人。有些人如此喜欢独处，他们从不拿自己与他人比较，而是平静、愉快地吐露生命的独白，与自己进行美好的交谈，甚至还会大笑起来。但是如果被迫和他人比较，他们多半会忧郁地得出一个过低的自我评价，并因此不得不从旁人那里学习关于自己的积极、公正的评价。甚至从这习得的评价中，他们也总是想做些减损。

所以我们必须允许某些人保留他们独处的习惯，而不是像经常发生的那样，愚蠢地对他们施以怜悯。

143.没有旋律。有些人拥有一种持续、内在的宁静，他们所有的能力和谐地分布，任何目的性很强的活动都与他们格格不入。他们就像一首乐曲，完全由连续、悦耳的和弦组成，没有一丁点旋律经过编排的痕迹。他们的小船会随着外界的任何动向，立即在由和谐之音构筑的海洋上获得新的平衡。现代人碰到这种天性的人通常极端没有耐心，因为他们不会成就任何事，虽然不能说他们啥也不是。某些情形下，他们的存在让人不禁发问：为何一定要有旋律？为何我们不满足于生命在深潭上投下宁静的倒影？

中世纪要比现在更盛产这种天性的人。现在我们很少有机会碰到这类人，他们即便身处乱世也能保持平和、愉悦的心态，像歌德对自己说的那样：最好的东西莫过于我在众人之中体验和养成的深深宁静，而我的收获则是他们无论用火还是剑都无法夺去的。

144.生活与经验。你是否注意到，有些人知道如何将自己的经历（他们微不足道的日常经历）变成一年收获三茬的富饶之地；而另一些人（他们的队伍如此壮大！），即便经历过最跌宕起伏的命运洗礼，见证过最变化莫测的时代或民族风云，却仍然轻飘飘地像木塞一样浮于表面。所以最终我们倾向于将人划分为两类：懂得如何变少为多的少数人

和懂得如何变多为少的大多数。真的，那些变态的魔术师确有其人，他们非但不能无中生有，反而将有归于无。

145.游戏的严肃性。热那亚的日落时分，我听得一座高塔上钟声长鸣。它绵延不绝，盖过后街的嘈杂，仿佛总也听不够自己的声音。钟声在黄昏的天空和海边的空气中回荡，既可怕又孩子气，同时还很忧郁。我想起柏拉图的话，突然在心底里产生了共鸣：“说到底，人间之事没有一样值得当真；尽管如此……”

146.关于信仰与正义。冷静而清醒地兑现一个人在激情状态下作出的承诺和决定，是人类最可怕的重负之一。要人们永远为愤怒、狂热的复仇、炽烈的爱承担后果，会加剧对这类情感的抵触，特别是当这类情感已经广泛地成为人们尤其是艺术家崇拜的对象。艺术家们坚持不懈地播种着对激情的尊崇；当然他们没少为激情释放的可怕过程增添效果，诸如复仇导致的死亡、伤害，自我放逐和心碎后的弃绝。不管怎样，艺术家们维持着人们对激情的好奇，他们似乎想说：没有经历过激情，你就根本没有活过。

是否因为我们曾向某个纯粹想象的产物，比如上帝，宣誓效忠，或是曾在狂喜的盲目疯狂中将心交给某个君王、政党、女人、上帝，或是某个艺术家、思想家，认为他们配得上一切荣誉和牺牲，我们就永远负有义务？难道我们不是在自欺欺人？这样的承诺难道不应有个前提，即我们为之献身的对象真的如我们想象的一样？我们必须忠实于我们的过错吗，即便发现这种忠诚只能损害我们的“高我”？

不，不存在这样的约定、这样的义务。我们必须成为叛徒，采取不忠的做法，再三背弃我们的理想。我们从生命的一个阶段过渡到另一个，势必会带来背叛的痛楚，并为之受苦。我们是否必须严防情感的波澜以避免这类痛苦？世界难道不会因此变得过于黯淡和可怖？我们宁可自问，由信仰改变引发的痛苦是否必要，其依据是否是种错误的看法和

判断？为什么我们钦佩坚守信仰的人而鄙视改变信仰的人？恐怕答案就在于，所有人都认为这种改变源自卑下的利益驱动或个人恐惧。也就是说，我们骨子里认为，如果一个人的信仰对其有利无害，没有人会改变信仰。但如果真是这样，就否定了一切信仰在精神层面的意义。让我们检视一下各种信仰产生的过程，看看它们是否被过分夸大，并借由这个办法揭示出，衡量信仰改变的标准的谬误，以及到目前为止，我们为这类改变所蒙受的不白之冤。

147.信仰就是相信某人在某项知识上拥有绝对真理。它假定：首先，绝对真理是存在的；此外，得出绝对真理的正确方法已经找到；最后，持有信仰的人运用的方法是正确的。此三项假定一出，即证明信仰之人不具备科学的思想方法；不管在别的方面有多成熟，他在理论上仍然处于幼稚阶段，还是个孩子。然而数千年来，人们一直生活在这种孩子气的假定中，它成为人类最强大的力量源泉。无数为信仰献身的人，认为自己是在为某种绝对真理服务。他们都错了：或许根本就没有人为真理作出过牺牲；其信仰武断的表述方式至少是不科学或不完全科学的。但实际上，人们不想出错是因为知道自己不可以出错。剥除他们的信仰，意味着动摇他们永恒的福祉。在意义如此重大的事情上，“意志”成为理智鲜明的指挥棒。每个教派的信徒都认为自己不可能被驳倒。如果反论据显得过于强大，他仍然可以从普遍意义上诋毁理智，甚至举起极端宗教狂热的大旗——“不合理故我信”。历史如此暴戾，不是因为理念之争，而是由于对理念的信仰之间的冲突，即信仰之争。如果那些将信仰视如珍宝、不惜牺牲荣誉、身体甚至生命为之服务的人，愿意花一半气力弄明白，他们凭什么恪守这样或那样的信仰，他们何以得出这样或那样的结论，人类历史就会变得平和许多！知识也会增进许多！所有对于异教徒的残酷迫害都可以被避免。原因有二：其一，宗教法官会首先扪心自问，从而不再傲慢地认为自己是在捍卫绝对真理；其二，异教徒们在研究过那些宗派主义者和所谓“正统派”漏洞百出的信条之后，不会再屑于去关注它们。

148.在人们以为他们掌握着绝对真理的时代，任何涉及到知识层面上的怀疑主义和相对主义立场都会招致深刻的不安。通常我们倾向于无条件地臣服于权威们（父亲、朋友、导师、君主）的信仰。如果我们不那么做，反而会感到良心不安。这种倾向情有可原，但我们不能因为它的影响就对人类理性的发展大加批判。最终人类的科学精神会引导出审慎的克制，这种中庸的美德在实践上比在理论上更为人所知。比如歌德笔下的安东尼奥，就是这种美德的典范，他成为代表愚昧、消极个性的塔索们共同憎恶的对象。信仰之人有权不去理解那个思维审慎、满腹经纶的安东尼奥；另一方面，讲求科学的人却没有权力因此斥责信仰之人；安东尼奥谅解塔索，并且知道这个人有可能信靠他，就像最终发生的那样。

149.如果一个人没有经历过不同的信仰，而是陷在第一个信仰的罗网里，那么无论如何，就因为这个不变性，他都是落后文化的代表。和此人在教育（总是以可教育性为前提）上的匮乏相一致的是，他刻薄、不明智、不可教、粗暴、生性多疑、无所顾忌，为了推行自己的观点而不择手段，因为他无法理解别的观点也有权存在。在这一方面，他可能成为力量的源泉，在变得过于自由和松散的文化中甚至是有益的，但这仅仅是因为他有效地激起了反抗：新兴文化的稚嫩结构正是在同他的对抗中变得强壮起来。

150.本质上，我们和宗教改革时代的人没什么两样——怎么会不一样呢？不过我们不再允许自己使用某些手段以证明自己是对的：这使得我们有别于那个时代，并表明我们属于一个更高的文化层面。现在，如果一个人仍然像宗教改革时代的人那样，通过怀疑和发怒来攻击和压制不同的意见，就表明如果他生活在别的时代，他可能会烧死他的反对者；如果他是一名宗教改革的反对者，他可能会动用宗教裁判所的全部手段。宗教裁判所在自己所处的时代是合理的，因为它不过是以整个教会领域为对象的普通军事管制，而且就像所有的军事管制一样，它为极

端手段的采取作了辩护，即假定（如今我们已经不再苟同那些人的假定）教会拥有真理并且为了人类的救赎必须不惜一切代价捍卫它。不过现在，我们不再轻易地认为任何人拥有真理；宗教侦审的严酷做法已经播下了足够的不信任和警惕，任何通过激烈言行推行其观点的人，都让我们感到有可能是现有文化的敌人，或者至少是个逆行之人。事实上，拥有真理的热情，在今天同另一种热情比起来已经乏善可陈，这种热情更加柔和、安静，那就是孜孜不倦地学习、验证新知识的寻找真理的热情。

151.顺便一提，对于真理研究方法的追寻，是信仰自相残杀时代的产物。如果个人对于自己的“真理”，即他最终的正确性，不关心，就根本不会存在对方法的调查。但是，正因为存在不同个人关于绝对真理归属的永恒争夺，人类才一步步前行，试图找到那无可辩驳的方法来验证这些言论的公正性，以结束争端。起初，决定是由权威们作出的；后来，各种伪真理就彼此发现的方式和手段展开相互攻讦；中间有一个时期，人们总结出敌对教义的影响，证明它们有害无益；结果所有人都认为对手的信仰有错误。最终，思想家们的个人奋斗磨练了他们的方法，以至于真理真的可以被发现，于是早期方法的偏差也就大白于天下。

152.总而言之，科学的方法至少和任何调查的结果一样重要。因为科学精神建立在对方法的深入了解之上，如果那些方法丢失了，科学的全部结论也无法阻止迷信和谬论的新一轮胜利。聪明人可以尽情学习科学的结论，但我们仍然能从他们的对话，尤其是对话的假设中看出其科学精神的匮乏。他们不具备对错误思维方式本能的不信任，这种不信任，作为长期操练的结果，已经深深地扎根于每一个具有科学态度的人的灵魂。对前者来说，一件事物只要找到一种假设就足够了；他们会为之热血沸腾，认为大功告成。对他们而言，拥有观点意味着为它疯狂，并像对待信仰一样将其珍藏心中。如果一件事物没有解释，他们会为头一个进入脑海的类似于解释的概念兴奋不已；而这往往会导致最恶劣的

后果，尤其是在政治领域。

因此，所有人都应该至少掌握一门科学的基础；然后他就会知道什么是方法，以及最极端的审慎有多么必要。这个忠告尤其应该给予女人，她们现在是各种臆测，尤其是那些貌似睿智、令人兴奋、激动、蛊惑人心的臆测的无助的牺牲品。事实上，如果仔细观察，我们会发现大部分受过教育的人仍然渴望信仰，但仅限于从思想家那里获得的信仰，只有极少数人想得到确定性。前者想获得当头棒喝，借以提升自身的力量；后者则带有就事论事的兴趣，无视私人利益，甚至上面提到的力量的提升。不论何处，只要思想家表现得像个天才，并自诩为天才，像个理应获得权威的更高存在那样俯视众人，他就在依靠那个占有压倒性多数的群体。这种天才维持着信仰的热度，引起了具有科学审慎和谦逊精神的人的不信任，在这个意义上，他是真理之敌，不管他如何认为自己是真理的追随者。

153.当然，还有另一种类型的天才，那就是公正的天才。没有任何理由认为这类天才不及哲学、政治或是艺术方面的天才。他回避任何有可能妨碍和混淆我们对事物的判断的东西，并从心底里感到憎恶。所以他是信仰的敌人。因为他希望公平对待一切事物，不管是活的还是死的，真实的还是虚构的。为了这么做，他必须洞察一切。因此他将每一样事物放置在最明亮的光线下，然后从各个角度用心观察。最后，他甚至会给他的敌人——那盲目或短视的“信仰”（这是男人的叫法；女人管它叫“忠诚”）一个公平的机会——为了真理的缘故。

154.主张从激情中产生；精神上的懒惰使这些主张僵化为信仰。

不过，谁要是感到自己拥有无拘无束、活力四射的精神，他可以通过不断地变化来避免这种僵化；谁要是在思维上是个不折不扣的滚雪球的人，那么他的头脑中就根本不会有任何观点，有的只是确定性和精确计算过的可能性。

但是像我们这样性质混合的人，有时激情似火，有时却又被理智冷却，我们想跪在公正的面前，尊奉她为我们唯一的女神。通常，内心的火焰会令我们不公正，在女神的眼里，也就是不纯洁；处于这种状态下的我们，永远无法触摸女神的手，她也永远不会愉悦地对我们露出庄严的微笑。我们敬拜她为我们生命中戴着面纱的伊希斯[1]。当内心之火烧灼我们，试图吞噬我们时，羞愧的我们将自身的痛苦作为赎罪品和牺牲品祭献给她。是理智拯救了我们，使我们免于化为焦炭。它不断地将我们从公正的祭坛上拉走，或者将我们置于石棉的包裹之中。从火中得到拯救的我们，在理智的驱使下，在不同的主张之间大步前行，变换着阵营，我们是高尚的变节者，背叛所有可以背叛的一切，同时问心无愧。

155.流浪者。仅仅在一定程度上获得理性自由的人，只能感到自己是一名流浪者——而不是朝着某个终极目标行进的旅行者，因为这目标不存在。不过他确实想睁大眼睛观察在这个世界上真实发生的一切。因此他不可以将心太紧地束缚在某一件私人物品上，他的内心必有东西在游走，这种东西以变化和转瞬即逝为乐。当然，这样的人会经历糟糕的夜晚：精疲力竭之时，却发现原本应该为他提供休息的城市已经关上了大门。也许除此之外，就像在东方那样，沙漠一直延伸到城门脚下，掠食性动物的嚎叫时远时近，狂风肆虐，强盗牵走了他的驮畜。对他而言，可怕的夜晚犹如第二座沙漠降临在沙漠之上，而他的心已厌倦了漂泊。接着，早晨的太阳升起来，像愤怒的神灵一样发着光，城市敞开了大门，如果他在城市居民的脸上看到的沙漠、灰尘、欺骗、犹疑比城市外面还要多——那么白天几乎比夜晚还要糟糕。流浪者有时会碰到这样的情形，但是作为补偿，他在别的地方迎来了令人欣喜的早晨。就在附近，在黎明的曙光中，他看见一群群缪斯跳着舞在山岚中从他的身边经过。那之后，他在上午灵魂的平衡状态下安静地散步，从枝繁叶茂的树上撒下来的都是美好、明亮的东西，那是所有那些在山上、林间、在孤寂中甘之若饴的自由精灵的馈赠，他们和他一样，时而欢欣时而沉思，既是流浪者也是哲学家。在黎明的神秘中诞生的他们，思考着怎样才能

让这一天在十点和十二点之间拥有纯净、清澈、美妙而欢欣的脸孔——他们在寻找上午的哲学。

二、在朋友们中间：结语

1

彼此沉默，很好

相视而笑，更好——

天空如丝的帐幔下

斜倚着书本和青苔

朋友们纵声大笑

大家都露出雪白的牙齿。

如果我做得好，让我们保持沉默，

如果我做得不好，让我们开怀大笑

一分为二，再次弄糟，

做得越糟糕，笑得越厉害，

直到我们钻进墓穴。

好啦，朋友们，你们觉得怎样？

阿门！来日再相逢！

2

不要找寻借口！不要宽恕！

你们这些开心的，不为爱所困的人

请给予我这本荒唐的书

你们的耳朵、心灵和庇护！

真的，朋友们，我自身的愚蠢

并没有全然白费！

我已经找到的和正在寻找的——

可曾在书里存在过？

向这个愚人阵营的来客致敬吧！

从这本愚人的书中了解

理性如何被教会——“推理”！

那么，朋友们，你们觉得怎样？

阿门！来日再相逢。

三、自由精神

1.噢，神圣的单纯！人类生活在怎样的天真和虚妄中啊！一旦我们认识到这一点，就会对此连连称奇。我们是怎样将周遭的一切变得简单明了、自由随意！我们是如何让感觉对一切肤浅之物敞开大门，让思想耽溺于天马行空的联想和错误的推断！——我们是如何设法从一开始就保留无知，以享受生命那难以想象的磅礴恣肆、酣畅淋漓，亦即享受生命本身！而只有在无知那如花岗岩般坚实的地基上，知识才能巍然屹立；求知的意志是以更为强大的求无知、求不确定性、求不真实的意志为基础！不是作为后者的对立面，而是作为其升华！即便语言在此处就像在别处一样无法克服自身的粗鄙，将程度的不同和细微的差别说成对立，即便人类根深蒂固的伪善，扭曲了我们之中智者的话语，我们也能不时心领神会，然后抚掌大笑：正是最高妙的知识试图将我们束缚在这个被简化的，不自然的，伪造的和被扭曲的世界。它义无反顾地热爱错误，因为作为一个生命体，它热爱生活。

2.欢快的绪言之后是庄严的敬告：这是说给最严肃的人听的。要小心，哲学家和热爱知识的朋友们，警惕殉道者的做法！警惕"为真理之故"受苦，警惕为自己辩驳！它会损毁你良心全部的纯真和公正，使你无法容忍任何不同和反对的意见；它会使你在同危险、诽谤、猜忌、驱逐甚至更大的敌意作斗争时变得愚蠢、野蛮和无情，你不得不摆出人间真理守护人的姿态——仿佛"真理"如此幼稚、无能，以至于需要人守护！而你，我亲爱的无所事事的朋友和精神上的阴谋家，就成了众人中那个面露愁苦的骑士！毕竟你心里清楚，众人之中你自己正确与否根本不重要；你知道迄今为止没有哲学家能够被证明是正确的，而你在钟爱的词句和学说（有时是你自己）后面打上的每个问号，或许比你在控诉人和法庭面前作出的所有肃穆的手势和狡黠的答辩，都更为诚实和令人

钦佩。不如避开！逃走，躲起来！运用你的面具和手腕，让自己受到误解或是别人的敬畏！别忘了花园，那个有着金色棚架的花园！接近那些像花园一样的人，或是那些让你想起黄昏时分水面上飘过的音乐的人。选择有益的独处，自由、随意、惬意的独处会让你在某种程度上保持美好！每一场漫长而隐秘的战争都会让人变得无比恶毒、狡猾和卑鄙！在时刻警惕敌人和可能的敌人中被拉伸的恐惧，让人变得富于攻击性！这些被社会驱逐的人，受到长期迫害和大力追捕的人，还有像斯宾诺莎[2]和乔尔丹诺·布鲁诺[3]那样被迫遁世的人，最终都会变成精明的复仇者和恶念的传播者，即便他们顶着最超凡脱俗的伪装，甚至于自己也蒙在鼓中（让我们揭示斯宾诺莎的伦理学和神学基础吧！）——更不用说道德义愤的愚蠢性，它准确无误地表明一个哲学家已经丧失其哲学式幽默。一个哲学家的殉道，他的“为真理之故牺牲”，暴露出他人格中潜藏的煽动者和演员的一面。如果到目前为止，我们只是出于艺术的好奇在审视他，结合众多哲学家的案例，很容易理解那种想偶尔瞥见堕落状态下的他（堕落成“殉道者”，堕落成在舞台和讲坛上豪言壮语的人）的危险欲望。只是有必要澄清我们将要看到的是什么：不过是一场“羊人剧”[4]，一出放在正剧结尾的闹剧，不过是再次证明那个真正的绵长的悲剧已经结束：假定每部哲学起初都是一部长长的悲剧的话。

3.每个优秀的人都会本能地寻求一座秘密堡垒，在那里他可以摆脱人群、民众和大多数；在那里，置身事外的他可以忘记人类的规则——除非，作为一名卓尔不群的博学之士，他会在更强大的本能驱使下，径直奔向这一规则。任何在和人打交道时没有流露出沮丧，表现出嫌恶、厌腻、怜悯、阴郁和孤单情绪的人，必定不具备精致的品位；但是如果他不去主动承担这份不快而是不断地规避它，坚持安静而骄傲地躲在自己的堡垒里，那么可以肯定：知识不适合他。否则总有一天，他会不得不对自己说：让我的品位见鬼去吧！规则比例外——比我这个例外本身，更有趣！他会选择走“下来”和走“进去”。哲学家对普通人的研究漫长而严肃，其中充斥着的掩饰、自我征服、亲昵和不良结交——和不相

称的人结交都可以算作不良结交——构成了他人生经历中不可或缺的部分，并且可能是最令人不快、发狂和失望的部分。如果哲学家像知识最钟爱的孩子那样足够幸运，他就会遇见帮助他完成任务的捷径——即所谓的玩世不恭者，这些人早已看穿了自身的蒙昧、平庸和驯顺，却仍能保持在人前谈论自己的冲动——有时他们甚至在书中打滚，就像在自己的排泄物中一样。玩世不恭是普通人接近真诚的唯一形式；杰出的人必须在玩世不恭面前竖起耳朵，不论它是粗俗还是高雅；而在某个丑角或者科学"羊人"不知羞耻地夸夸其谈时，暗自感到庆幸。当然有时厌恶中会混合着着迷：因为某些不可知的原因，这些不知天高地厚的山羊和猴子有时颇具天分。比如加利亚尼神父[5]，这个思想无比深刻、目光无比犀利的人，同时也可能是他那个世纪最肮脏的人——他远比伏尔泰更深刻，因此也更沉默。科学的头颅经常被安到猴子身上，超凡的领悟力常被装配到平庸的灵魂上——这在物理学家和伦理生理学家中比比皆是。不论何时，如果有人以不含私怨、无伤大雅的方式将人类比喻成有两种需求的肚子和一种需求的头脑；不论何处，如果有人看到、寻求和想看到的只有食、色和虚荣，仿佛这些是人类行为真实和唯一的动机；总之，任何时候，如果有人对人类大加嘲讽但并非中伤诽谤时，热爱知识的人就应该认真倾听；只要有人不带情绪地说话，他就应该关注。那些处于激愤状态，不停地用牙齿撕扯自己（或者世界、上帝、社会）的人，从道德上讲，也许确实比那些哈哈大笑、洋洋自得的"羊人"站得更高，但在任何别的意义上，他都更加平庸、乏味和无益，而且愤怒的人比任何人说的谎都更多。

4.人们很难理解我们：尤其当你像急逝的恒河之水一样思考和生活，而周围的人却采取截然不同的方式：他们像乌龟一样缓慢，或者至多是"像青蛙那样蹦跳"——当然我这是在努力让自己难于被理解！——我们应该对旁人委婉善意的诠释表示由衷的感激。至于我们的"好友"，他们总是太懒惰，认为作为好友，他们有权好逸恶劳：如果我们从一开始就给他们一些误解的空间和自由会好得多——这样我们就可以对他们

大加嘲笑；——或者索性摆脱掉这些好友，而仍然保持欢笑！

5.从一种语言翻译成另一种语言，最难传递的莫过于风格的节奏感，它源自于种族的个性，用生理学上的话说，就是“新陈代谢”的平均速度。有一些以忠实于原文为初衷的翻译，结果不自觉地将原文庸俗化，几乎成为歪曲，就是因为要同时翻译出勇敢而欢快的节奏（它跳跃着将一切事物和词语中暗含的危险抛在身后）是不可能的。德国人几乎无法用自己的语言快速说话，由此可以推断，他们对于表达自由、无拘无束的思想中那些最大胆、愉悦的情绪也大多无能为力。例如歌剧中的滑稽男低音和戏剧中的“羊人”，无论是在形体还是道德上都会令德国人感到陌生，所以阿里斯托芬[6]和佩特罗尼乌斯[7]对他们来说是不可翻译的。一切以静止、慵懒、肃穆、冗长和乏味为特征的风格，在德国蓬勃发展——请原谅我指出，即便是歌德的散文，融合了优雅与生硬，也不例外。它是其所属的那个“辉煌年代”的映象，是对“德国趣味”尚存的年代的一种德国式的表达：即道德和艺术上的洛可可式风格。莱辛是个例外，这要归功于他的历史性，他博古通今并且在很多方面造诣很高：他成为贝尔的译者并非偶然，他喜欢狄德罗和伏尔泰，更喜爱罗马喜剧家——在节奏感方面，莱辛崇尚无拘无束，竭力摆脱德国式的拘谨。但即便在他的散文中，德语也无法模仿马基雅维里的节奏感，后者的《君主论》让我们呼吸到佛罗伦萨的干爽空气，并且忍不住要将最严肃的事用最活泼、最轻快的方式表达。其中或许不无居心叵测的艺术家对反差效果的追求——一边是冗长、艰深、危险的思想，一边是飞驰的节奏和恣意的欢娱。谁会冒险用德文翻译佩特罗尼乌斯呢，他在创作、理念、词汇方面比迄今的任何一位音乐家都更深谙快板的精髓——如果我们能拥有他那风一样的轻盈步履，那样的气流和呼吸，那种风的解放性的藐视，以及风的那种让一切奔跑起来而获得健康的力量，所有那些邪恶病态世界中的沼泽，甚至“古代世界”中的沼泽又算得了什么？至于阿里斯托芬，由于他的贡献和补充，我们可以原谅希腊的存在（假定我们非常清楚需要原谅和改观的是什么）。临终前的柏拉图，枕下放的既不是

《圣经》，也不是任何一本埃及的书，更不是毕达哥拉斯或柏拉图自己的著作，而是一本阿里斯托芬喜剧。没有什么比这个流传的轶事更能激发我对柏拉图那讳莫如深的行为方式和他那斯芬克斯式个性的思考。如果没有阿里斯托芬，即便是柏拉图，也无法忍受他的人生——那被他否定的希腊式人生！

6.适合独立的人寥寥无几——那是强者的特权。任何人，即便有充分的理由，只要不是迫于无奈而主动尝试独立，就证明他不但是个强者，而且大胆到近乎莽撞的地步。他会从此踏进一座迷宫，在这里，生活本身的危险被放大了一千倍，没有人清楚他是怎样和在哪里迷了路，变得孑然一身，最后被良心的牛头怪[8]撕成碎片。假使这样的人被摧毁，人们将难以理解、无法感受也不会寄予同情——而他则再也回不去！甚至连人们的怜悯也得不到！

7.当我们最了不起的见解，未经允许就出现在不喜欢它们和不适合听到它们的人的耳朵里时，听上去肯定会像是疯话，甚至是罪恶。哲学家们曾在希腊人、波斯人和穆斯林中分别进行“显白教诲”和“隐微教诲”，发现只要人们信仰等级秩序而非权利平等，二者的区分并不在于“显白教诲”是从外部而非内部观察、评价、估量和判断。其根本区别在于，“显白教诲”是从下面看事物，而“隐微教诲”是从上面看事物！在灵魂的某些高度上，连悲剧看起来也不可悲；即便集合世上所有的惨状，谁又敢确定它们一定会令我们心生怜悯，从而分外悲伤？……在高层次的人看来是营养品的东西，对于低层次和全然不同的人来说可能是毒药。普通人的美德在哲学家身上可能恰恰意味着恶习和缺陷；一个高层次的人可能只有在堕落和毁灭时，才会获得某些令俗世尊奉他为圣人的属性。同样的书，对于不同层次人的灵魂和健康，作用可能正好相反，要看读者究竟是低层次、生命力暗弱的人，还是高层次、生命力强悍的人。在前一种情形下，这些书是危险的，有可能导致人的崩溃和毁灭；在后一种情形下，它们会成为先驱的号角，激励勇者鼓起他们的勇

气。给所有人读的书总是令人掩鼻：因为有渺小者的气味吸附在上面。凡是众人吃喝乃至敬拜的地方，都有臭味。谁要想呼吸纯净的空气，就不要去教堂。

8.人年轻时，无论是崇拜还是鄙视，都缺乏分寸，善于掌握分寸是生命最大的奖赏。我们必须为自己用简单的对错来评判人和事付出高昂的代价，也只有这样才算公平。在这段时期，最差的品位，即对于绝对的偏好，总是被残忍地滥用，出尽洋相，直到我们学会在感情中加入一点艺术，甚至冒险尝试一些刻意的东西：就像真正的生活艺术家做的那样。年轻人高涨的愤怒和虔敬，似乎一定要把人和事伪造成他们情感的宣泄对象方才罢休——在这一点上，年轻意味着伪造和欺骗。待年轻的灵魂被失望磨折，最终将怀疑的矛头指向自己，那处于自我怀疑和良心拷问中的自己，依然血性而野蛮。现在它是多么地痛恨自己，它是那么不耐烦地撕扯自己，它要为长期以来的自我欺骗狠狠地报复自己，仿佛这是有预谋的自我蒙蔽！在这一转变中，我们通过不信任自己的感情来惩罚自己；我们用怀疑来折磨自己的热情；事实上，连问心无愧也会被感到是种危险，仿佛这也是一种自我蒙蔽，是正义感开始变得倦怠的标志。最重要的是，我们开始划分阵营，并从原则上与年轻为敌。——十年以后，我们才知道，所有这些仍然是年轻的举动。

9.在人类历史中最漫长的一段时期——即所谓的史前时期——一件行为是否有价值，由它的结果来决定。行为本身及其动机并不在人们的考虑范围之内，就像在中国，儿女的荣辱直接反映到父母身上，人们通过追溯成败的根源来对行为作出肯定或否定的评价。让我们把这个时期叫作人类的道德前期：那时“了解你自己！”这句训诫尚不为人知。另一方面，地球上的某些地方在过去一万年中逐步改变认识，认为决定行为价值的不再是结果而是动机。总体上，这是一件大事，是视野和标准上精进的结果，体现了处于统治地位的贵族价值观和血统迷信所带来的影响，它标志着狭义上的道德时期的到来：这是人们自我认知的初步尝

试。人们不再考虑结果而是动机：多么伟大的视角转换！这是在经历了长期挣扎和游移之后才取得的！当然，一种灾难性的新迷信，即狭隘的诠释从此成为主导：一件行为的动机被明确地诠释为意图的动机。人们达成共识，认为行为的价值即存在于其背后的意图的价值。意图被看作是行为的全部动机和背景——正是在这种偏见的左右下，人们进行道德上的褒贬、裁夺和哲学式推究直至今日。可是，伴随着人类新一轮自省和见解的深化，我们今天难道不是有必要再次作出价值颠覆和翻转的决定？我们难道不是应该站在一个被称为超道德时期（这个叫法起初有点贬义）的起点？今天，至少在我们这些“非道德者”中间，出现了一种猜测，即决定性的行为价值恰恰存在于它的非意图部分；而所有意图部分，所有可以被看见、了解和“感知”的部分，仍然停留于它的表层和皮毛——像所有的皮毛那样，它泄露出一些秘密，但隐藏的更多。简言之，我们认为意图只是一种有待诠释的符号，由于表征的对象太过丰富而致使本意丧失。传统意义上的道德，即意图的道德，是一种偏见，一种仓促、苟且之举，类似天文学、炼金术，无论如何都必须被征服。征服道德，某种意义上也是道德的自我征服，就让它作为灵魂的试金石，成为最敏锐、最诚挚和最恶毒的良心长期秘密劳作的代名词。

10.全心奉献、为他人牺牲自己，整套关于无私的伦理都缺乏确凿的论据支持，必须受到严厉的诘问和审判；同样还有宣扬“视角公正”的美学，它被今日的艺术解放运动用来装点门面，以令其心安理得。

在“舍己为人”这类情感中存有太多的糖分和妖术，让人不得不起双倍的戒心，自问：“这些会不会是诱饵？”确实，这类情感能够取悦拥有这类情感的人、从中获益的人以及观众，但这并不能提供于其有利的论据，反而提醒我们要戒备。所以还是让我们小心些吧！

11.无论今日我们在哲学上采取何种立场，从任何角度看，这个世界的错误性是我们能见到的最确定无疑的东西——层出不穷的解释诱使我们认为“事物本质”就具有欺骗性。而自觉或不自觉的“上帝代言人”，

认为我们的思考本身，即“理性”，要为世界的虚假性负责，这是他们在这个问题上选择的体面出路。他们认为这个世界，包括空间、时间、结构、运动在内的一切，都是一种错误的推断。这样的人有充分的理由对思考产生怀疑：不正是思考本身让我们蒙受更大的欺骗吗？谁能保证思考不会再犯同样的错误？说实在的，思想者们的天真令人感动并心生敬意，今天他们依然会走上前去请求意识给予他们诚实的回答，比如它是否是“真的”，比如为什么它坚决拒外部世界于千里之外，等等诸如此类的问题。对于“直接的确定性”的信仰是一种道德上的天真，是我们哲学家的光荣：但是，我们不应成为“仅仅是道德的”人！除去道德的层面，这种信仰是一种蠢行，没有给我们带来任何荣耀！在日常生活中，如果有人总是抱着怀疑的态度，会被看作是“不良个性”的表现，因此是不明智的。而我们这些人，既然超越了世俗世界及其是非评判，为什么不可以冒昧地说：哲学家，作为目前为止世上受骗最多的生物，有权拥有这个“不良个性”——他有义务抱持怀疑态度，从每个怀疑的深渊狞笑着向外窥探。——请大家务必原谅我用这副幽默的嘴脸来进行表述：长期以来，在对待欺骗和被欺骗的问题上，我学会采取与以往不同的方式进行思考和评判；对于某些盲目抗拒被欺骗的哲学家，我也准备了几句友善的提醒。为什么不呢？认为“真相比表象更有价值”，不过是道德上的偏见，甚至是世界上论证得最差的假定。让我们至少承认：如果没有全面的评估和表象作为基础，根本不会有生命；如果我们像某些哲学家那样，仅凭一腔热情就笨拙地想要废止整个“表象世界”，好吧，假设你可以这么做——但你的“真相”也会化为乌有！说实在的，是什么让我们认为在“真”与“假”之间存在着实质性的不同？难道承认存在清晰程度上的不同还不够吗，就好比外观上不同程度的深浅和色调，用画家的术语来说就是不同的值？为什么我们的世界不能是虚构的？有人反对道：可是所有虚构的东西都有作者。对此，我们何不简单地反问：为什么？这种“都有”不也是一种虚构吗？现在我们不可以对主语，也像对谓语和宾语那样感到一丝讽刺吗？难道哲学家不应当凌驾于对语法的信仰之上

吗？家庭教师们请恕我冒昧，可是现在，不正是哲学同家庭教师们的信仰，决裂的时候了吗？

12.噢，伏尔泰！噢，人性！噢，愚钝！“真相”和关于真相的寻求需要注意。如果一个人以太人性的方式来寻求——“他找寻真相只是为了行善”——我敢打赌，他什么也找不到！

13.假设除我们的欲望和情感世界以外，没有东西“生来”是真的，假设我们不可能上升或下降到除了冲动以外的任何其他“现实”——因为思维只是这些冲动之间的相互联系。是不是可以尝试着这样提问：这种“生来”的东西是否足以提供对所谓客观（或者“物质”）世界的理解？我不是指贝克莱[9]、叔本华[10]口中的假象、“表象”或者“观念”，而是和我们的情感拥有相同真实程度的——一种形式更为原始的情感世界，这个世界中的一切仍然处于高度的统一中，然后在有机过程中实现分化和发展（自然也变得更脆弱和敏感），作为一种本能的生命，它的全部有机功能诸如自我调节、同化、吸收、排泄和新陈代谢，仍然被综合绑定在一起——犹如生命的早期形式？——最终，这个实验不仅被允许，而且受到方法的道义的驱策。不要设想有几种因果律，只要拿一种因果律进行尝试的实验还没有被推至极端（到荒唐的地步，如果可以这么说的话）。那是一种我们现在无法驳斥的方法的道义——它由“定义”而来，像数学家说的那样。最后，问题变成我们是否真的认为意志是有效的，我们是否相信意志的因果律。如果我们相信——从根本上说，对这一点的相信正是对因果律本身的相信——那么我们就必须试着假设意志的因果律为唯一的因果律。“意志”当然只能作用于“意志”——而不能作用于“物质”（不能作用于“神经”，比如说）。总而言之，我们必须冒险试一下那个假设，即只要发现“效果”的地方，意志就正在作用于意志——而一切机械现象，只要有力活跃于其中，都是意志的力量，意志的效果。——假设最终我们成功地将我们整个本能的生命解释为意志一种基本形式的发展和衍生——即我所提出的强力意志；——假设我们可以从

一切有机过程中追溯到这个强力意志，并且能够在其中找到繁殖和营养问题——它们其实是同一个问题——的解决办法，我们就有权将一切有效力量毫不含糊地定义为：强力意志。从内部观察到的世界，根据其“悟性”描述和定义的世界——只能是“强力意志”而非任何别的东西。

14.“什么？说难听点不就是：上帝被驳倒了，而魔鬼没有？”正相反！正相反，我的朋友！见鬼，谁让你说得那么难听！

15.在我们这个时代发生的法国大革命是一场可怕的闹剧，从近处审视则会发现完全是多余的。然而全欧洲高尚而热情的观众，却远隔千里，长久而富于激情地用自己的义愤和狂喜诠释着这场革命，以至于文本在诠释之下消失了。这样，高尚的后代就可以再次误读整个过去，或许只有这样，历史的样貌才可以被忍受。还是说：这一切已经发生？我们自己是否就是那“高尚的后代”？根据我们的理解，这个过程岂不是在此刻已经完成？

16.没有人会因为一个学说仅仅有助于改善人的心情和品德，就认为它是真理。或许可爱的“理想主义者们”除外，这些人为一切真善美的事物激动不已，让各种五颜六色的一厢情愿在他们的池塘里游来游去。快乐和美德并不能令人信服。不过即便思维缜密的人也倾向于忘记，不快和邪恶同样是站不住脚的抗辩。有些事尽管极为有害和危险，却可能蕴含着真相。事实上，这或许是存在的基本特性，即获得关于它的全部真相，会毁掉一个人——因此，一个人精神力量的大小可以通过他所能接受的“真相”的多少来衡量，或者说，他需要“真相”在多大程度上被稀释、遮掩、粉饰、钝化和篡改。无疑，对于某些真相的发现，邪恶而不快乐的人处于更为有利的位置，成功的可能性更大。更不用说那些邪恶并快乐的人——对于这类人，道德学家们只能保持缄默。也许严酷和狡猾的个性在造就坚强、独立的人格和哲学家方面更有优势，而温和亲切、谦恭礼让、举重若轻这些品质在学者身上更受珍视，也更有意义。

假设“哲学家”这个概念并不局限于写书的哲学家——或者更糟，就自己的哲学写书的哲学家！——司汤达为具有自由精神的哲学家的形象添上了这最后一笔，鉴于德国趣味，我不得不进行强调——因为它同德国趣味背道而驰。这位最后的伟大的心理学家说：要成为好的哲学家，必须眼光犀利透彻，不受幻象所左右。一个发迹的银行家，具有进行哲学发现的一个必备特质，那就是甄别事物本质的能力。

17.所有深刻的东西都喜欢面具。最深刻的东西甚至憎恶映像和比喻。难道上帝掩饰其羞耻的伪装不正应是某种同羞耻截然相反的东西吗？这是一个可疑的疑问，如果某些神秘主义者没有思考过这些事，反而是奇怪的。有些事情表述起来如此微妙，我们宁可粗鲁地进行掩饰，使其面目全非。有时在富于爱和慷慨的举动后，最明智的做法莫过于拿起棍棒，把目击者一顿好揍，以混淆其记忆。有些人懂得如何混淆和虐待自己的记忆，这样至少可以报复这个唯一的知情者——羞辱感是富于创造力的。令我们最感羞耻的并非是最糟糕的事：面具背后不只有欺瞒——狡猾中有诸多良善。我能想象有珍贵、脆弱之物需要守护的人，在生活中可能表现得粗枝大叶，好像一只陈旧、发绿，上着厚厚铁箍的酒桶——他精致的羞耻感使他不得不如此。一个有着深刻羞耻感的人，他与命运狭路相逢的地方人迹罕至，这种地方连他的至交和邻人也一无所知。他不让他们看到自己的致命之处，以及他重新获得的对生命的把握。这样一个深藏不露的人，本能地用言语掩饰沉默和隐瞒，想方设法规避交流，他需要一个面具代替他进入朋友的大脑和内心游荡，并确保它切实有效。假设有一天他不想再要这个面具，但他会发现面具已经在那儿了——而这是一件好事。每个深刻的人都需要一个面具：不但如此，在深刻思想的周围，面具会不断扩大，这要感谢那不停编织着的谎言，即对于他所说的每个词，走过的每一步，给出的每一个生命迹象的肤浅诠释。

18.我们必须考验自己是否适合独立和掌控；而且必须在合适的时

间这样做。我们不应该规避这项考验，虽然它是一个人可能碰到的最危险的游戏，并且我们自己才是最终唯一的裁判。不要成为他人的附庸，即便是你最心爱的人——每个人都是监狱，也是庇护所；不要成为祖国的附庸，即便它正在遭受苦难，亟待援助——既然胜利的祖国很少令人牵挂；不要成为怜悯的附庸，即便怜悯的对象是大人物，我们只是碰巧撞见了他少有的磨难和无助；不要成为一门科学的附庸，即便它用最珍贵的发现作为诱饵，并且看似专为我们而预备；不要成为超脱的附庸，那种鸟类的超然绝尘，为了视野更开阔而越飞越高——这是飞行者的危险；不要变成自身美德的附庸，成为我们某个部分的牺牲品，比如"好客"的牺牲品，这是富有而高尚的人面临的危险中的危险，他们出手阔绰，几乎无动于衷，将慷慨这一美德推至不道德的境地。我们必须知道如何保重自己：这就是独立人格最严苛的考验。

19.一类新的哲学家正在出现：我冒昧地给这类哲学家起个不无危险的名字。根据我对他们的猜测，以及他们允许别人对他们的猜测——他们在本性上希望保留某些方面的神秘——这些未来的哲学家可以被正确地，但也许是错误地，描述为尝试者。这个名字本身也仅仅是个尝试，或者是个引诱，如果你愿意的话。

20.这些未来的哲学家是"真理"的新朋友吗？很可能是：因为迄今为止所有的哲学家都爱他们的真理。不过当然，他们不会成为独断论者。如果他们的真理成为所有人的真理，这对他们的骄傲和品味来说是个侮辱，而这恰恰是迄今为止所有独断论者的隐秘欲望和潜台词。"我的判断是我个人的判断：别人不能轻易拥有它"——一位未来的哲学家可能会这样说。我们必须改掉希望和多数人意见一致的坏毛病。当"善"从你邻居的口中说出时，"善"将不再是善。怎么可能存在一种"共同的善"？这个表述本身就是自相矛盾的，共同的东西从来就少有价值。最终还是和现在以及过去一直以来的情形一样：伟大的人收获伟大，深刻的人窥见深刻，讲究的人得到战栗和精致。总而言之，罕见的人得到罕见的东

西。

21.说了上述这些话后，我觉得没必要再说明，这些未来的哲学家也会成为自由、非常自由的精灵——同样可以肯定，他们将超越自由精灵本身，变得更加高贵、伟大、卓尔不群，根本不会被误认为是任何别的东西。不过这么说了以后，我感到自己有责任——不仅对他们也对作为他们的前驱和先行者的我们，我们这些自由的精灵——从我们所有人身上消除一种古老而愚蠢的偏见和误解，长久以来它像雾霭一样遮蔽了“自由精神”这个概念。在现今的欧洲各国和美国，这个名词遭到一类非常狭隘、封闭和奴性的人滥用，他们想要的东西和我们的意图乃至本能截然相反——更不用说对于初露头角的新型哲学家们，他们就好比关上的窗、插上的门。简言之，他们令人遗憾地属于平均主义者，这些被错误地定名为“自由精灵”的人——是民主趣味及其“现代理念”伶牙俐齿、笔耕不辍的奴隶，这些人都没有孤独，没有属于自己的孤独，他们好心而笨拙，既不缺乏勇气也不缺乏令人尊敬的体面，只是他们不自由，肤浅得可笑，尤其是他们试图在现存的社会形态中找到所有人类失败和不幸的症结的固有倾向：而这正好颠倒了事实真相！他们努力奋斗的目标是绿色牧场上羊群的普遍幸福，即每个人都拥有稳定、放心、舒适和安逸的生活。他们最经常挂在嘴边的两句口号是“权利平等”和“同情一切受苦受难的人”——他们认为受苦本身是需要被废止的。我们，作为这一观点的反对者，在“人”这种植物究竟在哪里和怎样才能生长得最茁壮这个问题上，已经茅塞顿开。我们认为个人的成长总是发生在相反的情形下，他所处的境遇必须变得异常艰险，他的创造力和掩饰力（也就是他的“精神”）必须在长期的压力和约束下演化成精明和大胆，他的生命意志必须被强化为无条件的强力意志——我们认为街道上和内心里都存在的严酷、力量、奴性、危险，以及各色伪装、禁欲主义，实验艺术，各种恶行，人身上所有的邪恶、可怕、暴戾、凶残和恶毒的东西，都能像它们的反面一样，起到提升人类的作用——即便说了这么多，我们也没有说得完全。不管怎样，在我们就这一点发表和未发表的

言论中，我们都站在所有现代意识形态和羊群急需品的另一端：或许与之截然对立？难怪我们这些“自由精灵”并不一定是最健谈的人，我们不想透露一丁点儿关于自由精灵享受的自由和受到的制约。至于那句危险的惯用语“超越善恶”，我们用它来避免自己的意思被曲解：我们是和这些可敬的“现代理念”代言人自称的“自由思想者”，或者诸如此类的称谓，不同的人。我们以自由精神的国度为家，或至少曾在那里做客；我们一次次逃离那些散发着霉味的舒适的庇护所；我们曾因偏好、偏见、年轻、出身、邂逅的人、读过的书，甚至流浪的疲惫而羁留于此。对于荣誉、金钱、地位、感官享受中的奴性诱惑，我们充满憎恶；对于悲苦和变化无常的疾病，我们心存感激，因为它们总能将我们从某些规则及其“偏见”中解放出来；我们对身体里的上帝、魔鬼、绵羊和蛀虫同样感念，我们好奇到堕落的地步，穷根究底到残忍的地步，拥有捉住难以捉摸事物的大胆手指，消化不易消化事物的牙齿和肠胃；多亏了“自由意志”的丰盈，我们作好准备从事一切要求敏锐洞察力的工作，以及参与一切冒险。我们拥有正、反两面灵魂，没有人能够轻易参透我们的最终意图，我们拥有前、后双重背景，没有人能穷尽它的边缘；藏在灯罩背后的我们是征服者，尽管我们一天到晚看上去像是继承人、浪荡子、收藏家和经办人，是自家财宝和橱柜的守财奴，在学习与遗忘之间精打细算，在设想上敢于创新，有时为各类数据洋洋自得，有时显得迂腐，有时甚至勤勉得像大白天里的夜猫子。是的，如果有必要，我们还是稻草人——而现在就有这个必要：我们生来就是自身最深沉、最黑暗、最明亮的孤独那宣了誓的、富于妒忌心的朋友——我们这些自由精灵，就是这样一类人！也许你们这些后来者，你们这些新型哲学家，也会有些类似之处？

四、来自高山：古抒情诗

噢，生命的正午！噢，节日！噢，夏日的花园！我在不安的狂喜中等待，我站立着，观望着，等候着——朋友们，你们在哪儿？我日夜殷勤等候的就是你们。现在来吧！是你们出现的时候了！

难道不是因为你，冰川在今日将它的灰白换成了玫瑰红？溪流追随着你，风和云朵不断爬上蓝天更高处，满怀热望地寻找你。

为了你，我在最高的高处摆好了筵席——和我一样，你生活的地方和星星相隔咫尺，或者说和深渊的深处相隔咫尺？我的帝国——可曾有帝国如此幅员辽阔？我的蜜汁——可曾有人尝到过它的甜蜜？

——朋友们，你们来了！——但是，哎呀，我不就是你们要拜访的那个人吗？你们踌躇着，瞪大眼睛——不，还是愤怒好了！我不再是——我了吗？我的手、步伐和面孔改变了吗？在你们眼里，我不是——我了吗？

我是另一个人吗？一个我自己的陌生人？从我自身里冒出来？一个经常打败自己的摔跤运动员？经常自己和自己过不去，被自己的胜利制约和伤害？

我曾寻找风刮得最猛烈的地方，学会在不毛之地生存，忘记祈祷和诅咒，忘记人和神，变成冰川之上飞掠而过的幽灵？

——老朋友们！你们看上去多么苍白，充满爱与惊恐！不——走吧！不要生气！在这里——你们不会感觉宾至如归：在这片坚冰与岩石的遥远国度，你必须成为一名猎手，并且喜欢阿尔卑斯山的山羊。

我变成了一名邪恶的猎手！——瞧瞧我的弓有多满，拉满这张弓的必定是男人中最强有力的那一个——可是那支箭，哎呀——啊，没有哪支箭比那一支更危险——闪开！快走！为了你们自己的性命！……

你转过脸来？——噢，心脏，你表现得很坚强，你的希望仍然强大：现在让你的心扉向新朋友敞开吧！不要抓住过去不放！不要抓住回忆不放！如果你曾经年轻，那么现在——你更加年轻！

曾经联结我们的东西，那由一个希望构成的纽带——谁还能读懂曾镌刻其上、如今业已模糊的爱的符号？它就像一张羊皮纸——褪色，枯黄——伸过去的手也会缩回来。

不再是朋友，可是——我该如何称呼他们？——他们是朋友的幽灵，暗夜里叩响我的心扉，注视着我说："我们曾经是朋友吗？"——噢，褪色的词句，曾经如玫瑰一般芬芳！

噢，青春的憧憬，往往并不自知！那些我曾经仰慕和崇敬的人，变成了我的亲人——他们的老去成为他们被放逐的理由：只有那不断变化的人才保持着和我的相似。

噢，生命的正午！噢，第二次青春！噢，夏日的花园！我在不安的狂喜中等待，我站立着，观望着，等候着——我在等候朋友，新的朋友，不分日夜殷勤守候。现在来吧！是你们出现的时候了！

这首歌已经完成——欲望的甜蜜喊叫死在了嘴唇上：这是一个男巫干的，一个适时的朋友，正午之友——不！不要问他是谁——它在正午时发生，在正午时，一个人变成了两个……

现在，对胜利成竹在胸的我们，庆祝盛事中的盛事：我们的朋友查拉图斯特拉[11]来了，他是贵宾中的贵宾！既然全世界都在大笑，可怖的幕布被租来，婚礼之日迎来光明与黑暗……

[1]伊希斯是埃及古代宗教里的女神，被认为是贤妻良母的典范、自然和魔法的保护者，受到统治阶级和劳苦大众的一致欢迎，被尊奉为生育、魔法和丰产女神。

[2]巴鲁赫·斯宾诺莎，十七世纪荷兰哲学家。因怀有异端思想被犹太教会革除教籍、逐出社团，以磨镜片为生，在隐居中进行哲学研究。

[3]乔尔丹诺·布鲁诺，意大利文艺复兴时期的思想家和哲学家，因反对地心说、坚持日心说，被宗教裁判所囚禁八年，后被烧死在罗马鲜花广场。

[4]“羊人剧”，古希腊悲剧的雏形，由装扮成半人半兽的演员演出而得名。一般是轻松的短剧，在一个悲剧三联剧后上演，作为调剂和对悲剧的讽刺。

[5]费迪南多·加利亚尼，意大利经济学家。尼采曾称他为十八世纪“最精致、最挑剔的头脑”。

[6]阿里斯托芬，古希腊早期喜剧代表作家，相传写有四十四部喜剧，有“喜剧之父”之称。

[7]佩特罗尼乌斯，古罗马作家，暴君尼禄的廷臣，主管宫中娱乐，著有长篇讽刺小说《萨蒂利孔》。

[8]牛头怪（弥诺陶洛斯），古希腊神话中的人身牛头怪物，被禁闭在弥诺斯的迷宫中，吞食雅典进贡的童男童女。

[9]乔治·贝克莱，英国主观唯心主义哲学家、主教。他认为世界上只存在能进行思考的心灵，和不能进行思考、只存在于心灵之中的观念。

[10]亚瑟·叔本华，德国哲学家。他认为世界分为两部分：一方面是表象，一方面是控制表象世界的意志。

[11]查拉图斯特拉，公元前七到六世纪的古代波斯宗教改革者。尼采在其作品《查拉图斯特拉如是说》中假借他的名义说出自己的哲学思想。

Friedrich Nietzsche

Man Alone with Himself

TRANSLATED BY MARION FABER, STEPHEN LEHMANN AND R. J. HOLLINGDALE

PENGUIN BOOKS - GREAT IDEAS

Contents

The numbering system, starting at one, used for the individual sections is specific to this edition, as it was too cumbersome to begin the book with, for example, Enemies of Truth as number 483 as in the original work.

1 Man Alone with Himself

1

Enemies of truth. Convictions are more dangerous enemies of truth than lies.

2

Topsy-turvy world. We criticize a thinker more sharply when he proposes a tenet that is disagreeable to us; and yet it would be more reasonable to do this when we find his tenet agreeable.

3

A person of character. It is much more common for a person to appear to have character because he always acts in accord with his temperament, rather than because he always acts in accord with his principles.

4

The one necessary thing. A person must have one or the other: either a disposition which is easygoing by nature, or else a disposition eased by art and knowledge.

5

Passion for things. He who directs his passion to things (the sciences, the national good, cultural interests, the arts) takes much of the fire out of his passion for people (even when they represent those things, as statesmen, philosophers, and artists represent their creations).

6

Calm in action. As a waterfall becomes slower and more floating as it plunges, so the great man of action will act with greater calm than could be expected from his violent desire before the deed.

7

Not too deep. People who comprehend a matter in all its depth seldom remain true to it forever. For they have brought its depths to the light; and then there is always much to see about it that is bad.

8

Idealists' delusion. All idealists imagine that the causes they serve are significantly better than the other causes in the world; they do not want to believe that if their cause is to flourish at all, it needs exactly the same foul-smelling manure that all other human undertakings require.

9

Self-observation. Man is very well defended against himself, against his own spying and sieges; usually he is able to make out no more of himself than his outer fortifications. The actual stronghold is inaccessible to him, even invisible, unless friends and enemies turn traitor and lead him there by a secret path.

10

The right profession. Men seldom endure a profession if they do not believe or persuade themselves that it is basically more important than all others. Women do the same with their lovers.

11

Nobility of mind. To a great degree, nobility of mind consists of good nature and lack of distrust, and thus contains precisely that which acquisitive and successful people so like to treat with superiority and scorn.

12

Destination and paths. Many people are obstinate about the path once it is taken, few people about the destination.

13

The infuriating thing about an individual way of living. People are always angry at anyone who chooses very individual standards for his life; because of the extraordinary treatment which that man grants to himself, they feel degraded, like ordinary beings.

14

Privilege of greatness. It is the privilege of greatness to grant supreme pleasure through trifling gifts.

15

Unwittingly noble. A man's behavior is unwittingly noble if he has grown accustomed never to want anything from men, and always to give to them.

16

Condition for being a hero. If a man wants to become a hero, the snake must first become a dragon: otherwise he is lacking his proper enemy.

17

Friend. Shared joy, not compassion, makes a friend.

18

Using high and low tides. For the purpose of knowledge, one must know how to use that inner current that draws us to a thing, and then the one that, after a time, draws us away from it.

19

Delight in oneself. 'Delight in an enterprise,' they say; but in truth it is delight in oneself, by means of an enterprise.

20

The modest one. He who is modest with people shows his arrogance all the more with things (the city, state, society, epoch, or mankind). That is his revenge.

21

Envy and jealousy. Envy and jealousy are the pudenda of the human soul. The comparison can perhaps be pursued further.

22

The most refined hypocrite. To speak about oneself not at all is a very refined form of hypocrisy.

23

Annoyance. Annoyance is a physical illness that is by no means ended simply by eliminating the cause of the annoyance.

24

Representatives of truth. The champions of truth are hardest to find, not when it is dangerous to tell it, but rather when it is boring.

25

More troublesome than enemies. When some reason (e.g., gratitude) obliges us to maintain the appearance of unqualified congeniality with people about whose own congenial behavior we are not entirely convinced, these people torment our imagination much more than do our enemies.

26

Out in nature. We like to be out in nature so much because it has no opinion about us.

27

Everyone superior in one thing. In civilized circumstances, everyone feels superior to everyone else in at least one way; this is the basis of the general goodwill, inasmuch as everyone is someone who, under certain conditions, can be of help, and need therefore feel no shame in allowing himself to be helped.

28

Reasons for consolation. When someone dies, we usually need reasons to be consoled, not so much to soften the force of our pain, as to excuse the fact that we feel consoled so easily.

29

Loyal to their convictions. The man who has a lot to do usually keeps his general views and opinions almost unchanged; as does each person who works in the service of an idea. He will never test the idea itself any more; he no longer has time for that. Indeed, it is contrary to his interest even to think it possible to discuss it.

30

Morality and quantity. One man's greater morality, in contrast to another's, often lies only in the fact that his goals are quantitatively larger. The other man is pulled down by occupying himself with small things, in a narrow sphere.

31

Life as the product of life. However far man may extend himself with his knowledge, however objective he may appear to himself - ultimately he reaps nothing but his own biography.

32

Iron necessity. Over the course of history, men learn that iron necessity is neither iron nor necessary.

33

From experience. That something is irrational is no argument against its existence, but rather a condition for it.

34

Truth. No one dies of fatal truths nowadays: there are too many antidotes.

35

Basic insight. There is no pre-established harmony between the furthering of truth and the good of mankind.

36

Human lot. Whoever thinks more deeply knows that he is always wrong, whatever his acts and judgments.

37

Truth as Circe. Error has turned animals into men; might truth be capable of turning man into an animal again?

38

Danger of our culture. We belong to a time in which culture is in danger of being destroyed by the means of culture.

39

Greatness means: to give a direction. No river is great and bounteous through itself alone, but rather because it takes up so many tributaries and carries them onwards: that makes it great. It is the same with all great minds. All that matters is that one man give the direction, which the many tributaries must then follow; it does not matter whether he is poorly or richly endowed in the beginning.

40

Weak conscience. Men who talk about their importance for mankind have a weak conscience about their common bourgeois honesty in keeping contracts or promises.

41

Wanting to be loved. The demand to be loved is the greatest kind of arrogance.

42

Contempt for people. The least ambiguous sign of a disdain for people is this: that one tolerates everyone else only as a means to his end, or not at all.

43

Disciples out of disagreement. Whoever has brought men to a state of rage against himself has always acquired a party in his favor, too.

44

Forgetting one's experiences. It is easy for a man who thinks a lot - and objectively - to forget his own experiences, but not the thoughts that were evoked by them.

45

Adhering to an opinion. One man adheres to an opinion because he prides himself on having come upon it by himself; another because he has learned it with effort, and is proud of having grasped it: thus both out of vanity.

46

Shunning the light. The good deed shuns the light as anxiously as the evil deed: the latter fears that, if it is known, pain (as punishment) will follow; the former fears that, if it is known, joy (that pure joy in oneself, which ceases as soon as it includes the satisfaction of one's vanity) will disappear.

47

The day's length. If a man has a great deal to put in them, a day will have a hundred pockets.

48

Tyrant-genius. If the soul stirs with an ungovernable desire to assert itself tyranically, and the fire is continually maintained, then even a slight talent (in politicians or artists) gradually becomes an almost irresistible force of nature.

49

The life of the enemy. Whoever lives for the sake of combating an enemy has an interest in the enemy's staying alive.

50

More important. The unexplained, obscure matter is taken as more important than the explained, clear one.

51

Evaluating services rendered. We evaluate services someone renders us according to the value that person places on them, not according to the value they have for us.

52

Unhappiness. The distinction that lies in being unhappy (as if to feel happy were a sign of shallowness, lack of ambition, ordinariness) is so great that when someone says, 'But how happy you must be!' we usually protest.

53

Fantasy of fear. The fantasy of fear is that malevolent, apelike goblin which jumps onto man's back just when he already has the most to bear.

54

Value of insipid opponents. Sometimes we remain true to a cause only because its opponents will not stop being insipid.

55

Value of a profession. A profession makes us thoughtless: therein lies its greatest blessing. For it is a bulwark, behind which we are allowed to withdraw when qualms and worries of a general kind attack us.

56

Talent. The talent of some men appears slighter than it is because they have always set themselves tasks that are too great.

57

Youth. The time of youth is disagreeable, for then it is not possible, or not reasonable, to be productive in any sense.

58

Goals too great. Who publicly sets himself great goals, and later realizes privately that he is too weak to accomplish them, does not usually have enough strength to revoke those goals publicly, either, and then inevitably becomes a hypocrite.

59

In the stream. Strong currents draw many stones and bushes along with them; strong minds many stupid and muddled heads.

60

Danger of intellectual liberation. When a man tries earnestly to liberate his intellect, his passions and desires secretly hope to benefit from it also.

61

Embodiment of the spirit. When a man thinks much and cleverly, not only his face, but also his body takes on a clever look.

62

Seeing poorly and hearing poorly. He who sees little, always sees less; he who hears poorly, always hears something more.

63

Self-enjoyment in vanity. The vain man wants not only to stand out, but also to feel outstanding, and therefore rejects no means to deceive and outwit himself. Not the opinion of others, but his opinion of their opinion is what he cares about.

64

Vain by way of an exception. When he is physically ill, the man who is usually self-sufficient is vain by way of an exception and responsive to fame and praise. In the proportion that he is losing himself, he must try to regain himself from the outside, using strangers' opinions.

65

The 'witty' ones. The man who seeks wit has no wit.

66

Hint for party chiefs. If we can force people to declare themselves publicly for something, we have usually also brought them to the point of declaring themselves for it privately; they want to continue to be perceived as consistent.

67

Contempt. Man is more sensitive to contempt from others than to contempt from himself.

68

Rope of gratitude. There are slavish souls who carry their thanks for favors so far that they actually strangle themselves with the rope of gratitude.

69

Trick of the prophet. In order to predict the behavior of ordinary men, we must assume that they always expend the least possible amount of intellect to free themselves from a disagreeable situation.

70

The only human right. He who strays from tradition becomes a sacrifice to the extraordinary; he who remains in tradition is its slave. Destruction follows in any case.

71

Lower than the animal. When man howls with laughter, he surpasses all animals by his coarseness.

72

Superficial knowledge. He who speaks a bit of a foreign language has more delight in it than he who speaks it well; pleasure goes along with superficial knowledge.

73

Dangerous helpfulness. There are people who want to make men's lives more difficult for no other reason than afterwards to offer them their prescriptions for making life easier - their Christianity, for example.

74

Industriousness and conscientiousness. Industriousness and conscientiousness are often antagonists, in that industriousness wants to take the fruits off the tree while still sour, but conscientiousness lets them hang too long, until they drop off the tree and come to nothing.

75

Suspicion. People whom we cannot tolerate, we try to make suspect.

76

Lacking the circumstances. Many men wait all their lives for the opportunity to be good in their way.

77

Want of friends. A want of friends points to envy or arrogance. Many a man owes his friends simply to the fortunate circumstance that he has no cause for envy.

78

Danger in multiplicity. With one talent the more, one often stands less secure than with one talent the less: as the table stands better on three legs than on four.

79

Model for others. He who wants to set a good example must add a grain of foolishness to his virtue; then others can imitate and, at the same time, rise above the one being imitated - something which people love.

80

Being a target. Often, other people's vicious talk about us is not actually aimed at us, but expresses their annoyance or ill humor arising from quite different reasons.

81

Easily resigned. A man suffers little from unfulfilled wishes if he has trained his imagination to think of the past as hateful.

82

In danger. When we have just gotten out of the way of a vehicle, we are most in danger of being run over.

83

The role according to the voice. He who is forced to speak more loudly than is his habit (as in front of someone hard of hearing, or before a large audience) generally exaggerates what he has to communicate.

Some people become conspirators, malicious slanderers, or schemers, merely because their voice is best suited to a whisper.

84

Love and hatred. Love and hatred are not blind, but are blinded by the fire they themselves carry with them.

85

Made an enemy to one's advantage. Men who are unable to make their merit completely clear to the world seek to awaken an intense enmity towards themselves. Then they have the comfort of thinking that this stands between their merit and its recognition - and that other people assume the same thing, which is of great advantage to their own importance.

86

Confession. We forget our guilt when we have confessed it to another, but usually the other person does not forget it.

87

Self-sufficiency. The golden fleece of self-sufficiency protects against thrashings, but not against pin-pricks.

88

Shadow in the flame. The flame is not so bright to itself as to those on whom it shines: so too the wise man.

89

Our own opinions. The first opinion that occurs to us when we are suddenly asked about a matter is usually not our own, but only the customary one, appropriate to our caste, position, or parentage; our own opinions seldom swim near the surface.

90

Origin of courage. The ordinary man is courageous and invulnerable like a hero when he does not see the danger, when he has no eyes for it. Conversely, the hero's one vulnerable spot is on his back; that is, where he has no eyes.

91

Danger in the doctor. A man is either born for his doctor, or else he perishes by his doctor.

92

Magical vanity. He who has boldly prophesied the weather three times and has been successful, believes a bit, at the bottom of his heart, in his own prophetic gift. We do not dispute what is magical or irrational when it flatters our self-esteem.

93

Profession. A profession is the backbone of life.

94

Danger of personal influence. He who feels that he exercises a great inner influence on another must leave him quite free rein, indeed must look with favor on his occasional resistance and even bring it about: otherwise he will inevitably make himself an enemy.

95

Giving the heir his due. Whoever has established something great with a selfless frame of mind takes care to bring up heirs. It is the sign of a tyrannical and ignoble nature to see one's opponents in all the possible heirs of one's work and to live in a state of self-defense against them.

96

A little knowledge. A little knowledge is more successful than complete knowledge: it conceives things as simpler than they are, thus resulting in opinions that are more comprehensible and persuasive.

97

Not suited to be a party member. He who thinks much is not suited to be a party member: too soon, he thinks himself through and beyond the party.

98

Bad memory. The advantage of a bad memory is that, several times over, one enjoys the same good things for the first time.

99

Causing oneself pain. Inconsiderate thinking is often the sign of a discordant inner state which craves numbness.

100

Martyr. The disciple of a martyr suffers more than the martyr.

101

Residual vanity. The vanity of some people, who should not need to be vain, is the left-over and full-grown habit stemming from that time when they still had no right to believe in themselves, and only acquired their belief from others, by begging it in small change.

102

Punctum saliens of passion. He who is about to fall into a state of anger or violent love reaches a point where his soul is full like a vessel; but it needs one more drop of water: the good will to passion (which is generally also called the bad will). Only this little point is necessary; then the vessel runs over.

103

Bad-tempered thought. People are like piles of charcoal in the woods. Only when young people have stopped glowing, and carbonized, as charcoal does, do they become useful. As long as they smolder and smoke they are perhaps more interesting, but useless, and all too often troublesome.

Mankind unsparingly uses every individual as material to heat its great machines; but what good are the machines when all individuals (that is, mankind) serve only to keep them going? Machines that are their own end - is that the umana commedia?

104

The hour-hand of life. Life consists of rare, isolated moments of the greatest significance, and of innumerably many intervals, during which at best the silhouettes of those moments hover about us. Love, springtime, every beautiful melody, mountains, the moon, the sea - all these speak completely to the heart but once, if in fact they ever do get a chance to speak completely.

For many men do not have those moments at all, and are themselves intervals and intermissions in the symphony of real life.

105

To set against or set to work. We often make the mistake of actively opposing a direction, or party, or epoch, because we coincidentally get to see only its superficial side, its stunted aspect, or the inescapable 'faults of its virtues,' - perhaps because we ourselves have participated to a large degree in them. Then we turn our back on them and seek an opposite direction; but it would be better to look for the strong, good sides, or to develop them in ourselves. To be sure, it takes a stronger gaze and a better will to further that which is evolving and imperfect, rather than to penetrate its imperfection and reject it.

106

Modesty. True modesty (that is, the knowledge that we are not our own creations) does exist, and it well suits the great mind, because he particularly can comprehend the thought of his complete lack of responsibility (even for whatever good he creates). One does not hate the great man's immodesty because he is feeling his strength, but rather because he wants to feel it primarily by wounding others, treating them imperiously and watching to see how much they can stand. Most often, this actually proves that he lacks a secure sense of his strength, and makes men doubt his greatness. To this extent, cleverness would strongly advise against immodesty.

107

The first thought of the day. The best way to begin each day well is to think upon awakening whether we could not give at least one person pleasure on this day. If this practice could be accepted as a substitute for the religious habit of prayer, our fellow men would benefit by this change.

108

Arrogance as the last means of comfort. If a man accounts for a misfortune, or his intellectual inadequacies, or his illness by seeing them as his predetermined fate, his ordeal, or mysterious punishment for something he had done earlier, he is thereby making his own nature interesting, and imagining himself superior to his fellow men. The proud sinner is a familiar figure in all religious sects.

109

Growth of happiness. Near to the sorrow of the world, and often upon its volcanic earth, man has laid out his little gardens of happiness; whether he approaches life as one who wants only knowledge from existence, or as one who yields and resigns himself, or as one who rejoices in a difficulty overcome - everywhere he will find some happiness sprouting up next to the trouble. The more volcanic the earth, the greater the happiness will be - but it would be ludicrous to say that this happiness justified suffering per se.

110

The street of one's ancestors. It is reasonable to develop further the talent that one's father or grandfather worked hard at, and not switch to something entirely new; otherwise one is depriving himself of the chance to attain perfection in some one craft. Thus the saying: 'Which street should you take? - that of your ancestors.'

111

Vanity and ambition as educators. So long as a man has not yet become the instrument of the universal human good, ambition may torment him; but if he has achieved that goal, if of necessity he is working like a machine for the good of all, then vanity may enter; it will humanize him in small matters, make him more sociable, tolerable, considerate, once ambition has completed the rough work (of making him useful).

112

Philosophical novices. If we have just partaken of a philosopher's wisdom, we go through the streets feeling as if we had been transformed and had become great men; for we encounter only people who do not know this wisdom, and thus we have to deliver a new, unheard-of judgment about everything; because we have acknowledged a book of laws, we also think we now have to act like judges.

113

Pleasing by displeasing. People who prefer to be noticed, and thereby displease, desire the same thing as those who do not want to be noticed, and want to please, only to a much greater degree and indirectly, by means of a step that seems to be distancing them from their goal. Because they want to have influence and power, they display their superiority, even if it is felt as disagreeable: for they know that the man who has finally gained power pleases in almost everything he does and says, that even when he displeases, he seems nevertheless to be pleasing.

Both the free spirit and the true believer want power, too, in order to use it to please; if they are threatened because of their doctrines with a dire fate, persecution, prison, or execution, they rejoice at the thought that this will enable their doctrines to be engraved and branded upon mankind; although it is delayed acting, they accept it as a painful but potent means to attain power after all.

114

Casus belli and the like. The prince who discovers a casus belli for an earlier decision to wage war against his neighbor is like a father who imposes a mother upon his child, to be henceforth accepted as such. And are not almost all publicly announced motives for our actions such imposed mothers?

115

Passions and rights. No one speaks more passionately about his rights than the man who, at the bottom of his heart, doubts them. In drawing passion to his side, he wants to deaden reason and its doubts: he thus gains a good conscience, and, along with it, success with his fellow men.

116

The renouncing man's trick. He who protests against marriage, in the manner of Catholic priests, will seek to understand it in its lowest, most vulgar sense. Likewise, he who refuses the respect of his contemporaries will conceive it in a base way; he thus makes his renunciation of it and the fight against it easier for himself. Incidentally, he who denies himself much in large matters will easily indulge himself in small matters. It is conceivable that the man who is above the applause of his contemporaries is nevertheless unable to refuse himself the satisfaction of little vanities.

117

The age of arrogance. The true period of arrogance for talented men comes between their twenty-sixth and thirtieth year; it is the time of first ripeness, with a good bit of sourness still remaining. On the basis of what one feels inside himself, one demands from other people, who see little or nothing of it, respect and humility; and because these are not at first forthcoming, one takes vengeance with a glance, an arrogant gesture, or a tone of voice. This a fine ear and eye will recognize in all the products of those years, be they poems, philosophies, or paintings and music. Older, experienced men smile about it, and remember with emotion this beautiful time of life, in which one is angry at his lot of having to be so much and seem so little. Later, one really seems to be more - but the faith in being much has been lost, unless one remain throughout his life vanity's hopeless fool.

118

Deceptive and yet firm. When walking around the top of an abyss, or crossing a deep stream on a plank, we need a railing, not to hold on to (for it would collapse with us at once), but rather to achieve the visual image of security. Likewise, when we are young, we need people who unconsciously offer us the service of that railing; it is true that they would not help us if we really were in great danger and wanted to lean on them; but they give us the comforting sensation of protection nearby (for example, fathers, teachers, friends, as we generally know all three).

119

Learning to love. We must learn to love, learn to be kind, and this from earliest youth; if education or chance give us no opportunity to practice these feelings, our soul becomes dry and unsuited even to understanding the tender inventions of loving people. Likewise, hatred must be learned and nurtured, if one wishes to become a proficient hater: otherwise the germ for that, too, will gradually wither.

120

Ruins as decoration. People who go through many spiritual changes retain some views and habits from earlier stages, which then jut out into their new thinking and acting like a bit of inexplicable antiquity and gray stonework, often ornamenting the whole region.

121

Love and respect. Love desires; fear avoids. That is why it is impossible, at least in the same time span, to be loved and respected by the same person. For the man who respects another, acknowledges his power; that is, he fears it: his condition is one of awe. But love acknowledges no power, nothing that separates, differentiates, ranks higher or subordinates. Because the state of being loved carries with it no respect, ambitious men secretly or openly balk against it.

122

Prejudice in favor of cold people. People who catch fire rapidly quickly become cold, and are therefore by and large unreliable. Therefore, all those who are always cold, or act that way, benefit from the prejudice that they are especially trustworthy, reliable people: they are being confused with those others who catch fire slowly and burn for a long time.

123

What is dangerous about free opinions. The casual entertainment of free opinions is like an itch; giving in to it, one begins to rub the area; finally there is an open, aching wound; that is, the free opinion finally begins to disturb and torment us in our attitude to life, in our human relationships.

124

Desire for deep pain. When it has gone, passion leaves behind a dark longing for itself, and in disappearing throws us one last seductive glance. There must have been a kind of pleasure in having been beaten with her whip. In contrast, the more moderate feelings appear flat; apparently we still prefer a more violent displeasure to a weak pleasure.

125

Annoyance with others and the world. When, as happens so often, we let our annoyance out on others, while we are actually feeling it about ourselves, we are basically trying to cloud and delude our judgment; we want to motivate our annoyance a posteriori by the oversights and inadequacies of others, so we can lose sight of ourselves.

Religiously strict people, who judge themselves without mercy, are also those who have most often spoken ill of mankind in general. There has never been a saint who reserves sins to himself and virtues to others: he is as rare as the man who, following Buddha's precept, hides his goodness from people and lets them see of himself only what is bad.

126

Cause and effect confused. Unconsciously we seek out the principles and dogmas that are in keeping with our temperament, so that in the end it looks as if the principles and dogmas had created our character, given it stability and certainty, while precisely the opposite has occurred. It seems that our thinking and judging are to be made the cause of our nature after the fact, but actually our nature causes us to think and judge one way or the other.

And what decides us on this almost unconscious comedy? Laziness and convenience, and not least the vain desire to be considered consistent through and through, uniform both in character and thought: for this earns us respect, brings us trust and power.

127

Age and truth. Young people love what is interesting and odd, no matter how true or false it is. More mature minds love what is interesting and odd about truth. Fully mature intellects, finally, love truth, even when it appears plain and simple, boring to the ordinary person; for they have noticed that truth tends to reveal its highest wisdom in the guise of simplicity.

128

People as bad poets. Just as bad poets, in the second half of a line, look for a thought to fit their rhyme, so people in the second half of their lives, having become more anxious, look for the actions, attitudes, relationships that suit those of their earlier life, so that everything will harmonize outwardly. But then they no longer have any powerful thought to rule their life and determine it anew; rather, in its stead, comes the intention of finding a rhyme.

129

Boredom and play. Need forces us to do the work whose product will quiet the need; we are habituated to work by the ever-new awakening of needs. But in those intervals when our needs are quieted and seem to sleep, boredom overtakes us. What is that? It is the habit of working as such, which now asserts itself as a new, additional need; the need becomes the greater, the greater our habit of working, perhaps even the greater our suffering from our needs. To escape boredom, man works either beyond what his usual needs require, or else he invents play, that is, work that is designed to quiet no need other than that for working in general. He who is tired of play, and has no reason to work because of new needs, is sometimes overcome by the longing for a third state that relates to play as floating does to dancing, as dancing does to walking, a blissful, peaceful state of motion: it is the artist's and philosopher's vision of happiness.

130

Instruction from pictures. If we consider a series of pictures of ourselves from the time of childhood to that of manhood, we are agreeably surprised to find that the man resembles the child more than the adolescent: probably corresponding to this occurrence, then, there has been a temporary alienation from our basic character, now overcome again by the man's collected, concentrated strength. This perception agrees with the one that all those strong influences of our passions, our teachers, or political events, which pull us about in our adolescence, later seem to be reduced to a fixed measure. Certainly, they continue to live and act in us, but our basic feeling and basic thinking have the upper hand; these influences are used as sources of power, but no longer as regulators, as happens in our twenties. Thus man's thinking and feeling appear again more in accord with that of his childhood years - and this inner fact is expressed in the external one mentioned above.

131

Voice of the years. The tone adolescents use to speak, praise, blame, or invent displeases older people because it is too loud and yet at the same time muffled and unclear, like a tone in a vault, which gains resonance because of the emptiness. For most of what adolescents think has not flowed out of the fullness of their own nature, but rather harmonizes and echoes what is thought, spoken, praised, or blamed around them. But because the feelings (of inclination and disinclination) reverberate in them much more strongly than the reasons for these feelings, there arises, when they give voice to their feeling again, that muffled, ringing tone that indicates the absence or paucity of reasons. The tone of the more mature years is rigorous, sharply punctuated, moderately loud, but like everything clearly articulated, it carries very far. Finally, old age often brings a certain gentleness and indulgence to the sound and seems to sugar it: of course, in some cases it makes it sour, too.

132

Backward and anticipating people. The unpleasant personality who is full of mistrust, who reacts with envy to his competitors' and neighbors' successes, who flares up violently at divergent opinions, is showing that he belongs to an earlier stage of culture, and is thus a relic. For the way in which he interacts with people was proper and appropriate for the conditions of an age when rule by force prevailed: he is a backward person. A second personality, who shares profusely in others' joy, who wins friends everywhere, who is touched by everything that grows and evolves, who enjoys other people's honors and successes, and makes no claim to the privilege of alone knowing the truth, but instead is full of modest skepticism - he is an anticipator who is reaching ahead towards a higher human culture. The unpleasant personality grows out of times when the unhewn foundation of human intercourse had still to be laid; the other lives on its highest floors, as far away as possible from the wild animal that rages and howls locked up in the cellars, beneath the foundations of culture.

133

Comfort for hypochondriacs. When a great thinker is temporarily subjected to hypochondriacal self-torments, he may say to comfort himself: 'This parasite is feeding and growing from your great strength; if that strength were less, you would have less to suffer.' The statesman may speak likewise when his jealousy and vengeful feelings, in short, the mood of a bellum omnium contra omnes, for which he as a nation's representative must necessarily have a great gift, occasionally intrude into his personal relations and make his life difficult.

134

Alienated from the present. There are great advantages in for once removing ourselves distinctly from our time and letting ourselves be driven from its shore back into the ocean of former world views. Looking at the coast from that perspective, we survey for the first time its entire shape, and when we near it again, we have the advantage of understanding it better on the whole than do those who have never left it.

135

Sowing and reaping on personal inadequacies. People like Rousseau know how to use their weaknesses, deficiencies, or vices as if they were the fertilizer of their talent. When Rousseau laments the depravity and degeneration of society as the unpleasant consequence of culture, this is based on his personal experience, whose bitterness makes his general condemnation so sharp, and poisons the arrows he shoots. He is relieving himself first as an individual, and thinks that he is seeking a cure that will directly benefit society, but that will also indirectly, and by means of society, benefit him too.

136

A philosophical frame of mind. Generally we strive to acquire one emotional stance, one viewpoint for all life situations and events: we usually call that being of a philosophical frame of mind. But rather than making oneself uniform, we may find greater value for the enrichment of knowledge by listening to the soft voice of different life situations; each brings its own views with it. Thus we acknowledge and share the life and nature of many by not treating ourselves like rigid, invariable, single individuals.

137

In the fire of contempt. It is a new step towards independence, once a man dares to express opinions that bring disgrace on him if he entertains them; then even his friends and acquaintances begin to grow anxious. The man of talent must pass through this fire, too; afterwards he is much more his own person.

138

Sacrifice. If there is a choice, a great sacrifice will be preferred to a small one, because we compensate ourselves for a great sacrifice with self-admiration, and this is not possible with a small one.

139

Love as a device. Whoever wants really to get to know something new (be it a person, an event, or a book) does well to take up this new thing with all possible love, to avert his eye quickly from, even to forget, everything about it that he finds inimical, objectionable, or false. So, for example, we give the author of a book the greatest possible head start, and, as if at a race, virtually yearn with a pounding heart for him to reach his goal. By doing this, we penetrate into the heart of the new thing, into its motive center: and this is what it means to get to know it. Once we have got that far, reason then sets its limits; that overestimation, that occasional unhinging of the critical pendulum, was just a device to entice the soul of a matter out into the open.

140

To think too well or too ill of the world. Whether we think too well or too ill of things, we will always gain the advantage of reaping a greater pleasure: if our preconceived opinion is too good we are generally investing things (experiences) with more sweetness than they actually possess. If a preconceived opinion is overly negative, it leads to a pleasant disappointment: what was pleasurable in those things in and of themselves is increased through the pleasure of our surprise.

Incidentally, a morose temperament will experience the opposite in both cases.

141

Profound people. Those people whose strength lies in the profundity of their impressions (they are generally called 'profound people') are relatively controlled and decisive when anything sudden happens: for in the first moment the impression was still shallow; only later does it become profound. But long-foreseen, anticipated things or people excite such natures most, and make them almost incapable of maintaining presence of mind when their wait is over.

142

Traffic with one's higher self. Everyone has his good day, when he finds his higher self; and true humanity demands that we judge someone only when he is in this condition, and not in his workdays of bondage and servitude. We should, for example, assess and honor a painter according to the highest vision he was able to see and portray. But people themselves deal very differently with this, their higher self, and often act out the role of their own self, to the extent that they later keep imitating what they were in those moments. Some regard their ideal with shy humility and would like to deny it: they fear their higher self because, when it speaks, it speaks demandingly. In addition, it has a ghostly freedom of coming or staying away as it wishes; for that reason it is often called a gift of the gods, while actually everything else is a gift of the gods (of chance): this, however, is the man himself.

143

Solitary people. Some people are so used to solitude with themselves that they never compare themselves to others, but spin forth their monologue of a life in a calm, joyous mood, holding good conversations with themselves, even laughing. But if they are made to compare themselves with others, they tend to a brooding underestimation of their selves: so that they have to be forced to learn again from others to have a good, fair opinion of themselves. And even from this learned opinion they will always want to detract or reduce something.

Thus one must grant certain men their solitude, and not be silly enough, as often happens, to pity them for it.

144

Without melody. There are people for whom a constant inner repose and a harmonious ordering of all their capabilities is so characteristic that any goal-directed activity goes against their grain. They are like a piece of music consisting entirely of sustained harmonious chords, with no evidence of even the beginning of a structured, moving melody. At any movement from the outside, their boat at once gains a new equilibrium on the sea of harmonic euphony. Modern people are usually extremely impatient on meeting such natures, who do not become anything - though it may not be said that they are not anything. In certain moods, however, their presence evokes that rare question: why have melody at all? Why are we not satisfied when life mirrors itself peacefully in a deep lake?

The Middle Ages was richer in such natures than we are. How seldom do we now meet a person who can keep living so peacefully and cheerfully with himself even amidst the turmoil, saying to himself like Goethe: 'The best is the deep quiet in which I live and grow against the world, and harvest what they cannot take from me by fire or sword.'

145

Life and experience. If one notices how some individuals know how to treat their experiences (their insignificant everyday experiences) so that these become a plot of ground that bears fruit three times a year; while others (and how many of them!) are driven through the waves of the most exciting turns of fate, of the most varied currents of their time or nation, and yet always stay lightly on the surface, like cork: then one is finally tempted to divide mankind into a minority (minimality) of those people who know how to make much out of little and a majority of those who know how to make a little out of much; indeed, one meets those perverse wizards who, instead of creating the world out of nothing, create nothing out of the world.

146

Seriousness in play. At sunset in Genoa, I heard from a tower a long chiming of bells: it kept on and on, and over the noise of the back streets, as if insatiable for itself, it rang out into the evening sky and the sea air, so terrible and so childish at the same time, so melancholy. Then I thought of Plato's words and felt them suddenly in my heart: all in all, nothing human is worth taking very seriously; nevertheless ...

147

On convictions and justice. To carry out later, in coolness and sobriety, what a man promises or decides in passion: this demand is among the heaviest burdens oppressing mankind. To have to acknowledge for all duration the consequences of anger, of raging vengeance, of enthusiastic devotion - this can incite a bitterness against these feelings all the greater because everywhere, and especially by artists, precisely these feelings are the object of idol worship. Artists cultivate the esteem for the passions, and have always done so; to be sure, they also glorify the frightful satisfactions of passion, in which one indulges, the outbursts of revenge that have death, mutilation, or voluntary banishment as a consequence, and the resignation of the broken heart. In any event, they keep alive curiosity about the passions; it is as if they wished to say: without passions you have experienced nothing at all.

Because we have vowed to be faithful, even, perhaps, to a purely imaginary being, a God, for instance; because we have given our heart to a prince, a party, a woman, a priestly order, an artist, or a thinker, in the state of blind madness that enveloped us in rapture and let those beings appear worthy of every honor, every sacrifice: are we then inextricably bound? Were we not deceiving ourselves then? Was it not a conditional promise, under the assumption (unstated, to be sure) that those beings to whom we dedicated ourselves really are the beings they appeared to be in our imaginations? Are we obliged to be faithful to our errors, even if we perceive that by this faithfulness we do damage to our higher self?

No - there is no law, no obligation of that kind; we must become traitors, act unfaithfully, forsake our ideals again and again. We do not pass from one period of life to another without causing these pains of betrayal, and without suffering from them in turn. Should we have to guard ourselves against the upsurging of our feeling in order to avoid these pains? Would not the world then become too bleak, too ghostly for us? We want rather to ask ourselves whether these pains at a change of conviction are necessary, or whether they do not depend on an erroneous opinion and estimation. Why do we admire the man who remains faithful to his conviction and despise the one who changes it? I fear the answer must be that everyone assumes such a change is caused only by motives of baser advantage or personal fear. That is, we believe fundamentally that no one changes his opinions as long as they are advantageous to him, or at least as long as they do him no harm. But if that is the case, it bears bad testimony to the intellectual meaning of all convictions. Let us test how convictions come into being and observe whether they are not vastly overrated: in that way it will be revealed that the change of convictions too is in any case measured by false standards and that until now we have tended to suffer too much from such changes.

148

Conviction is the belief that in some point of knowledge one possesses absolute truth. Such a belief presumes, then, that absolute truths exist; likewise, that the perfect methods for arriving at them have been found; finally, that every man who has convictions makes use of these perfect methods. All three assertions prove at once that the man of convictions is not the man of scientific thinking; he stands before us still in the age of theoretical innocence, a child, however grown-up he might be otherwise. But throughout thousands of years, people have lived in such childlike assumptions, and from out of them mankind's mightiest sources of power have flowed. The countless people who sacrificed themselves for their convictions thought they were doing it for absolute truth. All of them were wrong: probably no man has ever sacrificed himself for truth; at least, the dogmatic expression of his belief will have been unscientific or half-scientific. But actually one wanted to be right because one thought he had to be right. To let his belief be torn from him meant perhaps to put his eternal happiness in question. With a matter of this extreme importance, the 'will' was all too audibly the intellect's prompter. Every believer of every persuasion assumed he could not be refuted; if the counterarguments proved very strong, he could still always malign reason in general and perhaps even raise as a banner of extreme fanaticism the 'credo quia absurdum est.' It is not the struggle of opinions that has made history so violent, but rather the struggle of belief in opinions, that is, the struggle of convictions. If only all those people who thought so highly of their conviction, who sacrificed all sorts of things to it and spared neither their honor, body nor life in its service, had devoted only half of their strength to investigating by what right they clung to this or that conviction, how they had arrived at it, then how peaceable the history of mankind would appear! How much more would be known! All the cruel scenes during the persecution of every kind of heretic would have been spared us for two reasons: first, because the inquisitors would above all have inquired within themselves, and got beyond the arrogant idea that they were defending the absolute truth; and second, because the heretics themselves would not have granted such poorly established tenets as those of all the sectarians and 'orthodox' any further attention, once they had investigated them.

149

Stemming from the time when people were accustomed to believe that they possessed absolute truth is a deep discomfort with all skeptical and relativistic positions on any questions of knowledge; usually we prefer to surrender unconditionally to a conviction held by people of authority (fathers, friends, teachers, princes), and we have a kind of troubled conscience if we do not do so. This inclination is understandable and its consequences do not entitle us to violent reproaches against the development of human reason. But eventually the scientific spirit in man must bring forth that virtue of cautious restraint, that wise moderation that is better known in the realm of practical life than in the realm of theoretical life, and that Goethe, for example, portrayed in his Antonio, as an object of animosity for all Tassos, that is, for those unscientific and also passive natures. The man of conviction has in himself a right not to understand the man of cautious thinking, the theoretical Antonio; the scientific man, on the other hand, has no right to scold him for this; he makes allowances for him and knows besides that, in certain cases, the man will cling to him as Tasso finally does to Antonio.

150

If one has not passed through various convictions, but remains caught in the net of his first belief, he is in all events, because of just this unchangeability, a representative of backward cultures; in accordance with this lack of education (which always presupposes educability), he is harsh, injudicious, unteachable, without gentleness, eternally suspect, a person lacking scruples, who reaches for any means to enforce his opinion because he simply cannot understand that there have to be other opinions. In this regard, he is perhaps a source of power, and even salutary in cultures grown too free and lax, but only because he powerfully incites opposition: for in that way the new culture's more delicate structure, which is forced to struggle with him, becomes strong itself.

151

Essentially, we are still the same people as those in the period of the Reformation - and how should it be otherwise? But we no longer allow ourselves certain means to gain victory for our opinion: this distinguishes us from that age and proves that we belong to a higher culture. These days, if a man still attacks and crushes opinions with suspicions and outbursts of rage, in the manner of men during the Reformation, he clearly betrays that he would have burnt his opponents, had he lived in other times, and that he would have taken recourse to all the means of the Inquisition, had he lived as an opponent of the Reformation. In its time, the Inquisition was reasonable, for it meant nothing other than the general martial law which had to be proclaimed over the whole domain of the church, and which, like every state of martial law, justified the use of the extremest means, namely under the assumption (which we no longer share with those people) that one possessed truth in the church and had to preserve it at any cost, with any sacrifice, for the salvation of mankind. But now we will no longer concede so easily that anyone has the truth; the rigorous methods of inquiry have spread sufficient distrust and caution, so that we experience every man who represents opinions violently in word and deed as any enemy of our present culture, or at least as a backward person. And in fact, the fervor about having the truth counts very little today in relation to that other fervor, more gentle and silent, to be sure, for seeking the truth, a search that does not tire of learning afresh and testing anew.

152

Incidentally, the methodical search for truth itself results from those times when convictions were feuding among themselves. If the individual had not cared about his 'truth,' that is, about his being right in the end, no method of inquiry would exist at all; but, given the eternal struggle of various individuals' claims to absolute truth, man proceeded step by step, in order to find irrefutable principles by which the justice of the claims could be tested and the argument settled. At first decisions were made according to authorities, later the ways and means with which the ostensible truth had been found were mutually criticized; in between, there was a period when the consequences of the opposing tenet were drawn and perhaps experienced as harmful and saddening; this was to result in everyone's judging that the opponent's conviction contained an error. Finally, the thinkers' personal struggle sharpened their methods so much that truths could really be discovered, and the aberrations of earlier methods were exposed to everyone's eye.

153

All in all, scientific methods are at least as important as any other result of inquiry; for the scientific spirit is based on the insight into methods, and were those methods to be lost, all the results of science could not prevent a renewed triumph of superstition and nonsense. Clever people may learn the results of science as much as they like, one still sees from their conversation, especially from their hypotheses in conversation, that they lack the scientific spirit. They do not have that instinctive mistrust of the wrong ways of thinking, a mistrust which, as a consequence of long practice, has put its roots deep into the soul of every scientific man. For them it is enough to find any one hypothesis about a matter; then they get fired up about it and think that puts an end to it. For them, to have an opinion means to get fanatical about it and cherish it in their hearts henceforth as a conviction. If a matter is unexplained, they become excited at the first notion resembling an explanation that enters their brain; this always has the worst consequences, especially in the realm of politics.

Therefore everyone should have come to know at least one science in its essentials; then he knows what method is, and how necessary is the most extreme circumspection. This advice should be given to women particularly, who are now the hopeless victims of all hypotheses, especially those which give the impression of being witty, thrilling, invigorating, or energizing. In fact, if one looks closer, one notices that the majority of all educated people still desire convictions and nothing but convictions from a thinker, and that only a slight minority want certainty. The former want to be forcibly carried away, in order to thus increase their own strength; the latter few have that matter-of-fact interest that ignores personal advantage, even the above-mentioned increase of strength. Wherever the thinker behaves like a genius, calling himself one, and looking down like a higher being who deserves authority, he is counting on the class in the overwhelming majority. To the extent that that kind of genius keeps up the heat of convictions and awakens distrust of the cautious and modest spirit of science, he is an enemy of truth, however much he may believe he is its suitor.

154

To be sure, there is also quite another category of genius, that of justice; and I can in no way see fit to esteem that kind lower than any philosophical, political, or artistic genius. It is its way to avoid with hearty indignation everything which blinds and confuses our judgment about things; thus it is an enemy of convictions, for it wants to give each thing its due, be it living or dead, real or fictive - and to do so it must apprehend it clearly. Therefore it places each thing in the best light and walks all around it with an attentive eye. Finally it will even give its due to its opponent, to blind or shortsighted 'conviction' (as men call it; women call it 'faith') - for the sake of truth.

155

Out of passions grow opinions; mental sloth lets these rigidify into convictions.

However, if one feels he is of a free, restlessly lively mind, he can prevent this rigidity through constant change; and if he is on the whole a veritable thinking snowball, then he will have no opinions at all in his head, but rather only certainties and precisely measured probabilities.

But we who are of a mixed nature, sometimes aglow with fire and sometimes chilled by intellect, we want to kneel down before justice, as the only goddess whom we recognize above us. Usually the fire in us makes us unjust, and in the sense of that goddess, impure; never may we touch her hand in this condition; never will the grave smile of her pleasure lie upon us. We honor her as our life's veiled Isis; ashamed, we offer her our pain as a penance and a sacrifice, when the fire burns us and tries to consume us. It is the intellect that saves us from turning utterly to burnt-out coals; here and there it pulls us away from justice's sacrificial altar, or wraps us in an asbestos cocoon. Redeemed from the fire, we then stride on, driven by the intellect, from opinion to opinion, through the change of sides, as noble traitors to all things that can ever be betrayed - and yet with no feeling of guilt.

156

The wanderer. He who has come only in part to a freedom of reason cannot feel on earth otherwise than as a wanderer - though not as a traveler towards a final goal, for this does not exist. But he does want to observe, and keep his eyes open for everything that actually occurs in the world; therefore he must not attach his heart too firmly to any individual thing; there must be something wandering within him, which takes its joy in change and transitoriness. To be sure, such a man will have bad nights, when he is tired and finds closed the gates to the city that should offer him rest; perhaps in addition, as in the Orient, the desert reaches up to the gate; predatory animals howl now near, now far; a strong wind stirs; robbers lead off his pack-animals. Then for him the frightful night sinks over the desert like a second desert, and his heart becomes tired of wandering. If the morning sun then rises, glowing like a divinity of wrath, and the city opens up, he sees in the faces of its inhabitants perhaps more of desert, dirt, deception, uncertainty, than outside the gates - and the day is almost worse than the night. So it may happen sometimes to the wanderer; but then, as recompense, come the ecstatic mornings of other regions and days. Then nearby in the dawning light he already sees the bands of muses dancing past him in the mist of the mountains. Afterwards, he strolls quietly in the equilibrium of his forenoon soul, under trees from whose tops and leafy corners only good and bright things are thrown down to him, the gifts of all those free spirits who are at home in mountain, wood, and solitude, and who are, like him, in their sometimes merry, sometimes contemplative way, wanderers and philosophers. Born out of the mysteries of the dawn, they ponder how the day can have such a pure, transparent, transfigured and cheerful face between the hours of ten and twelve - they seek the philosophy of the forenoon.

2 Among Friends: An Epilogue

1

Fine, with one another silent,
Finer, with one another laughing -
Under heaven's silky cloth
Leaning over books and moss
With friends lightly, loudly laughing
Each one showing white teeth shining.

If I did well, let us be silent,
If I did badly, let us laugh
And do it bad again by half,
More badly done, more badly laugh,
Until the grave, when down we climb.

Friends! Well! What do you say?
Amen! Until we meet again!

2

Don't excuse it! Don't forgive!
You happy, heart-free people, give
This unreasonable book of mine
Ear and heart and sheltering!
Truly, friends, my own unreason
Did not grow to earn a curse!

What I find, what I am seeking -
Was that ever in a book?
Honor one from the fools' legion!
Learn from out of this fool's book
How reason can be brought - 'to reason'!

So then, friends, what do you say?
Amen! Until we meet again.

3 The Free Spirit

1

Osancta simplicitas! What strange simplification and falsification mankind lives in! One can never cease to marvel once one has acquired eyes for this marvel! How we have made everything around us bright and free and easy and simple! How we have known how to bestow on our senses a passport to everything superficial, on our thoughts a divine desire for wanton gambolling and false conclusions! - how we have from the very beginning understood how to retain our ignorance so as to enjoy an almost inconceivable freedom, frivolity, impetuosity, bravery, cheerfulness of life, so as to enjoy life! And only on this now firm and granite basis of ignorance has knowledge hitherto been able to rise up, the will to knowledge on the basis of a far more powerful will, the will to non-knowledge, to the uncertain, to the untrue! Not as its antithesis but - as its refinement! For even if, here as elsewhere, language cannot get over its coarseness and continues to speak of antitheses where there are only degrees and many subtleties of gradation; even if likewise the incarnate tartuffery of morals which is now part of our invincible 'flesh and blood' twists the words in the mouths even of us men of knowledge: here and there we grasp that fact and laugh at how it is precisely the best knowledge that wants most to hold us in this simplified, altogether artificial, fabricated, falsified world, how it is willy-nilly in love with error because, as a living being, it is - in love with life!

2

After so cheerful an exordium a serious word would like to be heard: it addresses itself to the most serious. Take care, philosophers and friends of knowledge, and beware of martyrdom! Of suffering 'for the sake of truth'! Even of defending yourselves! It spoils all the innocence and fine neutrality of your conscience, it makes you obstinate against rebuffs and red rags, it makes you stupid, brutal and bullish if in the struggle with danger, slander, suspicion, casting out and even grosser consequences of hostility you finally even have to act as defenders of truth on earth - as if 'truth' were so innocuous and inept a person she stood in need of defending! And precisely by you, you knights of most sorrowful countenance, you idlers and cobweb-spinners of the spirit! After all, you know well enough that it cannot matter in the least whether precisely you are in the right, just as no philosopher hitherto has been in the right, and that a more praiseworthy veracity may lie in every little question-mark placed after your favourite words and favourite theories (and occasionally after yourselves) than in all your solemn gesticulations and smart answers before courts and accusers! Better to step aside! Flee away and conceal yourselves! And have your masks and subtlety, so that you may be misunderstood! Or feared a little! And do not forget the garden, the garden with golden trellis-work. And have about you people who are like a garden - or like music on the waters in the evening, when the day is already becoming a memory; - choose the good solitude, the free, wanton, easy solitude which gives you too a right to remain in some sense good! How poisonous, how cunning, how bad every protracted war makes one when it cannot be waged with open force! How personal a protracted fear makes one, a protracted keeping watch for enemies, for possible enemies! These outcasts of society, long persecuted and sorely hunted - also the enforced recluses, the Spinozas and Giordano Brunos - in the end always become refined vengeance-seekers and brewers of poison, even if they do so under the most spiritual masquerade and perhaps without being themselves aware of it (just dig up the foundation of Spinoza's ethics and theology!) - not to speak of the stupidity of moral indignation, which is in the philosopher an unfailing sign that he has lost his philosophical sense of humour. The martyrdom of the philosopher, his 'sacrifice for truth', brings to light what there has been in him of agitator and actor; and if one has hitherto regarded him only with artistic curiosity, in the case of many a philosopher it is easy to understand the dangerous desire to see him for once in his degeneration(degenerated into 'martyr', into stageand platform ranter). But if one does harbour such a desire, one has to be clear what it is one will get to see-merely a satyr play, merely a farcical after-piece, merely a continuing proof that the long tragedy has come to an end: supposing that every philosophy was in its inception a long tragedy. -

3

Every superior human being will instinctively aspire after a secret citadel where he is set free from the crowd, the many, the majority, where, as its exception, he may forget the rule 'man' - except in the one case in which, as a man of knowledge in the great and exceptional sense, he will be impelled by an even stronger instinct to make straight for this rule. He who, when trafficking with men, does not occasionally glisten with all the shades of distress, green and grey with disgust, satiety, sympathy, gloom and loneliness, is certainly not a man of an elevated taste; but if he does not voluntarily assume this burden and displeasure, if he continually avoids it and, as aforesaid, remains hidden quietly and proudly away in his citadel, then one thing is sure: he is not made, not predestined for knowledge. For if he were, he would one day have to say to himself: 'The devil can take my good taste! the rule is more interesting than the exception - than I, the exception!' - and would go down, would above all 'go in'. The study of the average human being, protracted, serious, and with much dissembling, self-overcoming, intimacy, bad company - all company is bad company except the company of one's equals -: this constitutes a necessary part of the life story of every philosopher, perhaps the most unpleasant and malodorous part and the part most full of disappointments. If he is lucky, however, as a favourite child of knowledge ought to be, he will encounter means of facilitating and cutting short his task - I mean so-called cynics, that is to say people who recognize the animal, the commonness, the 'rule' in themselves and yet still possess a degree of spirituality and appetite which constrains them to speak of themselves and their kind before witnesses - sometimes they even wallow in books as in their own dung. Cynicism is the only form in which common souls come close to honesty; and the higher man must prick up his ears at every cynicism, whether coarse or refined, and congratulate himself whenever a buffoon without shame or a scientific satyr speaks out in his presence. There are even cases in which fascination mingles with the disgust: namely where, by a caprice of nature, such an indiscreet goat and monkey is touched with genius, as in the case of the Abbé Galiani, the profoundest, most sharp-sighted and perhaps also dirtiest man of his century - he was far more profound than Voltaire and consequently also a good deal more silent. It is more often the case that, as already indicated, a scientific head is set on a monkey's body, a refined exceptional understanding on a common soul - no rare occurrence, for instance, among physicians and moral physiologists. And whenever anyone speaks, without bitterness, rather innocuously, of man as a belly with two needs and a head with one; wherever anyone sees, seeks and wants to see only hunger, sexual desire, and vanity, as though these were the actual and sole motives of human actions; in brief, whenever anyone speaks 'badly' of man - but does not speak ill of him - the lover of knowledge should listen carefully and with diligence, and he should in general lend an ear whenever anyone speaks without indignation. For the indignant man, and whoever is continually tearing and rending himself with his teeth (or, instead of himself, the world, or God, or society) may indeed morally speaking stand higher than the laughing and self-satisfied satyr, but in every other sense he is the more commonplace, less interesting, less instructive case. And no one lies so much as the indignant man.

4

It is hard to be understood: especially when one thinks and lives gangasrotogati among men who think and live otherwise, namely kurmagati or at best 'as the frog goes', mandeikagati - I am certainly doing everything I can to be hard to understand myself! - and one ought to be heartily grateful even for the will to some subtlety in interpretation. As regards one's 'good friends', however, who are always too indolent and think that because they are one's friends they have a right to indolence: one does well to allow them from the first some room and latitude for misunderstanding - thus one can laugh at their expense; - or get rid of them altogether, these good friends and still laugh!

5

That which translates worst from one language into another is the tempo of its style, which has its origin in the character of the race, or, expressed more physiologically, in the average tempo of its 'metabolism'. There are honestly meant translations which, as involuntary vulgarizations of the original, are almost falsifications simply because it was not possible to translate also its brave and happy tempo, which leaps over and puts behind it all that is perilous in things and words. The German is virtually incapable of presto in his language: thus, it may be fairly concluded, also of many of the most daring and delightful nuances of free, free-spirited thought. Just as the buffo and the satyr is strange to him, in his body and in his conscience, so Aristophanes and Petronius are untranslatable for him. Everything staid, sluggish, ponderously solemn, all long-winded and boring species of style have been developed in profuse multiplicity among the Germans - pardon me for the fact that even Goethe's prose is, in its blend of elegance and stiffness, no exception: it is a reflection of the 'good old days', to which it belongs, and an expression of the German taste of a time when there still was a 'German taste': it was rococo in moribus et artibus. Lessing constitutes an exception, thanks to his histrionic nature, which was versed in and understood much: he, who was not for nothing the translator of Bayle and liked to flee to the neighbourhood of Diderot and Voltaire and even more to that of the Roman writers of comedy - in tempo too Lessing loved freespiritedness, escape from Germany. But how could the German language, even in the prose of a Lessing, imitate the tempo of Machiavelli, who in his Principe lets us breathe the subtle dry air of Florence and cannot help presenting the most serious affairs in a boisterous allegrissimo: not perhaps without a malicious artist's sense of the contrast he is risking - thoughts protracted, difficult, hard, dangerous and the tempo of the gallop and the most wanton good humour. Who, finally, would venture a German translation of Petronius, who was, to a greater degree than any great musician has hitherto been, a master of presto in invention, ideas, words - what do all the swamps of the sick wicked world, even of the 'antique world', matter when one has, like him, the feet of a wind, the blast and breath, the liberating scorn of a wind that makes everything healthy by making everything run! And as for Aristophanes, that transfiguring, complementary spirit for whose sake one excuses all Greece for having existed, assuming one has grasped in all its profundity what there is to be excused and transfigured here - I know of nothing that has led me to reflect more on Plato's concealment and sphinx nature than that happily preserved petit fait that under the pillow of his death-bed there was discovered no 'Bible', nothing Egyptian, Pythagorean, Platonic-but Aristophanes. How could even a Plato have endured life - a Greek life which he had denied - without an Aristophanes!

6

Few are made for independence - it is a privilege of the strong. And he who attempts it, having the completest right to it but without being compelled to, thereby proves that he is probably not only strong but also daring to the point of recklessness. He ventures into a labyrinth, he multiplies by a thousand the dangers which life as such already brings with it, not the smallest of which is that no one can behold how and where he goes astray, is cut off from others, and is torn to pieces limb from limb by some cave-minotaur of conscience. If such a one is destroyed, it takes place so far from the understanding of men that they neither feel it nor sympathize - and he can no longer go back! He can no longer go back even to the pity of men!

7

Our supreme insights must - and should! - sound like follies, in certain cases like crimes, when they come impermissibly to the ears of those who are not predisposed and predestined for them. The exoteric and the esoteric as philosophers formerly distinguished them, among the Indians as among the Greeks, Persians and Moslems, in short wherever one believed in an order of rank and not in equality and equal rights - differ one from another not so much in that the exoteric stands outside and sees, evaluates, measures, judges from the outside, not from the inside: what is more essential is that this class sees things from below - but the esoteric sees them from above! There are heights of the soul seen from which even tragedy ceases to be tragic; and, taking all the woe of the world together, who could venture to assert that the sight of it would have to seduce and compel us to pity and thus to a doubling of that woe? ... What serves the higher type of man as food or refreshment must to a very different and inferior type be almost poison. The virtues of the common man would perhaps indicate vice and weakness in a philosopher; it may be possible that if a lofty type of man degenerated and perished, he would only thus acquire qualities on whose account it would prove necessary in the lower world into which he had sunk henceforth to venerate him as a saint. There are books which possess an opposite value for soul and health depending on whether the lower soul, the lower vitality, or the higher and more powerful avails itself of them: in the former case they are dangerous, disintegrative books, which produces dissolution, in the latter they are herald calls challenging the most courageous to their courage. Books for everybody are always malodorous books: the smell of petty people clings to them. Where the people eats and drinks, even where it worships, there is usually a stink. One should not go into churches if one wants to breathe pure air.

8

In our youthful years we respect and despise without that art of nuance which constitutes the best thing we gain from life, and, as is only fair, we have to pay dearly for having assailed men and things with Yes and No in such a fashion. Everything is so regulated that the worst of all tastes, the taste for the unconditional, is cruelly misused and made a fool of until a man learns to introduce a little art into his feelings and even to venture trying the artificial:

as genuine artists of life do. The anger and reverence characteristic of youth seem to allow themselves no peace until they have falsified men and things in such a way that they can vent themselves on them - youth as such is something that falsifies and deceives. Later, when the youthful soul, tormented by disappointments, finally turns suspiciously on itself, still hot and savage even in its suspicion and pangs of conscience: how angry it is with itself now, how it impatiently rends itself, how it takes revenge for its long self-delusion, as if it had blinded itself deliberately! During this transition one punishes oneself by distrusting one's feelings; one tortures one's enthusiasm with doubts, indeed one feels that even a good conscience is a danger, as though a good conscience were a screening of oneself and a sign that one's subtler honesty had grown weary; and above all one takes sides, takes sides on principle, against 'youth'. - A decade later: and one grasps that all this too - was still youth!

9

Throughout the longest part of human history - it is called prehistoric times - the value or non-value of an action was derived from its consequences: the action itself came as little into consideration as did its origin, but, in much the same way as today in China a distinction or disgrace reflects back from the child onto its parents, so it was the retroactive force of success or failure which led men to think well or ill of an action. Let us call this period the pre-moral period of mankind: the imperative 'know thyself!' was then still unknown. Over the past ten thousand years, on the other hand, one has in a few large tracts of the earth come step by step to the point at which it is no longer the consequences but the origin of the action which determines its value: a great event, taken as a whole, a considerable refinement of vision and standard, the unconscious after-effect of the sovereignty of aristocratic values and of belief in 'origins', the sign of a period which may be called the moral in the narrower sense: the first attempt at self-knowledge has been made. Instead of the consequences, the origin: what an inversion of perspectives! And certainly one achieved only after protracted struggles and vacillations! To be sure, a fateful new superstition, a peculiar narrowness of interpretation therewith became dominant: men interpreted the origin of an action in the most definite sense as origin in an intention; men became unanimous in the belief that the value of an action resided in the value of the intention behind it. The intention as the whole origin and prehistory of an action: it is under the sway of this prejudice that one has morally praised, blamed, judged and philosophized on earth almost to the present day. - But ought we not today to have arrived at the necessity of once again determining upon an inversion and shift of values, thanks to another self-examination and deepening on the part of man - ought we not to stand on the threshold of a period which should be called, negatively at first, the extra-moral: today, when among us immoralists at least the suspicion has arisen that the decisive value of an action resides in precisely that which is not intentional in it, and that all that in it which is intentional, all of it that can be seen, known, 'conscious', still belongs to its surface and skin - which, like every skin, betrays something but conceals still more? In brief, we believe that the intention is only a sign and symptom that needs interpreting, and a sign, moreover, that signifies too many things and which thus taken by itself signifies practically nothing - that morality in the sense in which it has been understood hitherto, that is to say the morality of intentions, has been a prejudice, a precipitancy, perhaps something provisional and precursory, perhaps something of the order of astronomy and alchemy, but in any event something that must be overcome. The overcoming of morality, in a certain sense even the self-overcoming of morality: let this be the name for that protracted secret labour which has been reserved for the subtlest, most honest and also most malicious consciences as living touchstones of the soul.

10

There is nothing for it: the feelings of devotion, self-sacrifice for one's neighbour, the entire morality of self-renunciation must be taken mercilessly to task and brought to court: likewise the aesthetics of 'disinterested contemplation' through which the emasculation of art today tries, seductively enough, to give itself a good conscience. There is much too much sugar and sorcery in those feelings of 'for others', of 'not for me', for one not to have to become doubly distrustful here and to ask: 'are they not perhaps - seductions?' That they give pleasure - to him who has them and to him who enjoys their fruits, also to the mere spectator - does not yet furnish an argument in their favour, but urges us rather to caution. So let us be cautious!

11

Whatever standpoint of philosophy we may adopt today: from every point of view the erroneousness of the world in which we believe we live is the surest and firmest thing we can get our eyes on - we find endless grounds for it which would like to lure us to suppose a deceptive principle in the 'nature of things'. But he who makes our thinking itself, that is to say 'the mind', responsible for the falsity of the world - an honourable way out taken by every conscious or unconscious advocatus dei - : he who takes this world, together with space, time, form, motion, to be the result of a false conclusion: such a one would have good cause, to say the least, to learn finally to mistrust thinking itself: would it not have played on us the biggest hoax ever? and what guarantee would there be that it would not go on doing what it has always done? In all seriousness: the innocence of thinkers has something touching and inspiring of reverence in it which permits them even today to go up to consciousness and ask it to give them honest answers: whether it is 'real', for example, and why it really keeps the external world so resolutely at a distance, and other questions of the sort. The belief in 'immediate certainties' is a piece of moral naivety which does honour to us philosophers: but - we ought not to be 'merely moral' men! Apart from the moral aspect, that belief is a piece of stupidity which does us little honour! In civil life an ever-ready mistrustfulness may count as a sign of 'bad character' and thus be an imprudent thing to have: here among us, beyond the civil world and its Yes and No - what is there to stop us from being imprudent and saying: the philosopher, as the creature which has hitherto always been most fooled on earth, has by now a right to 'bad character' - he has today the duty to be distrustful, to squint wickedly up out of every abyss of suspicion. - You must forgive me this humorous expression and grimace: for I have long since learned to think differently, to judge differently on the subject of deceiving and being deceived, and I keep in readiness at least a couple of jabs in the ribs for the blind rage with which philosophers resist being deceived. Why not? It is no more than a moral prejudice that truth is worth more than appearance; it is even the worst-proved assumption that exists. Let us concede at least this much: there would be no life at all if not on the basis of perspective evaluations and appearances; and if, with the virtuous enthusiasm and awkwardness exhibited by some philosophers, one wanted to abolish the 'apparent world' altogether, well, assuming you could do that - at any rate nothing would remain of your 'truth' either! Indeed, what compels us to assume there exists any essential antithesis between 'true' and 'false'? Is it not enough to suppose grades of apparentness and as it were lighter and darker shades and tones of appearance - different valeurs, to speak in the language of painters? Why could the world which is of any concern to us - not be a fiction? And he who then objects: 'but to the fiction there belongs an author?' - could he not be met with the round retort: why? Does this 'belongs' perhaps not also belong to the fiction? Are we not permitted to be a little ironical now about the subject as we are about the predicate and object? Ought the philosopher not to rise above the belief in grammar? All due respect to governesses: but is it not time that philosophy renounced the beliefs of governesses?

12

Oh Voltaire! Oh humanity! Oh imbecility! There is some point to 'truth', to the search for truth; and if a human being goes about it too humanely - 'il ne cherche le vrai que pour faire le bien' - I wager he finds nothing!

13

Granted that nothing is 'given' as real except our world of desires and passions, that we can rise or sink to no other 'reality' than the reality of our drives - for thinking is only the relationship of these drives to one another - : is it not permitted to make the experiment and ask the question whether this which is given does not suffice for an understanding even of the so-called mechanical (or 'material') world? I do not mean as a deception, an 'appearance', an 'idea' (in the Berkeleyan and Schopenhaueran sense), but as possessing the same degree of reality as our emotions themselves - as a more primitive form of the world of emotions in which everything still lies locked in mighty unity and then branches out and develops in the organic process (also, as is only fair, is made weaker and more sensitive), as a kind of instinctual life in which all organic functions, together with self-regulation, assimilation, nourishment, excretion, metabolism, are still synthetically bound together - as an antecedent form of life? - In the end, it is not merely permitted to make this experiment: it is commanded by the conscience of method. Not to assume several kinds of causality so long as the experiment of getting along with one has not been taken to its ultimate limits (- to the point of nonsense, if I may say so): that is a morality of method which one may not repudiate nowadays - it follows 'from its definition', as a mathematician would say. In the end, the question is whether we really recognize will as efficient, whether we believe in the causality of will: if we do so - and fundamentally belief in this is precisely our belief in causality itself - then we have to make the experiment of positing causality of will hypothetically as the only one. 'Will' can of course operate only on 'will' - and not on 'matter' (not on 'nerves', for example -): enough, one must venture the hypothesis that wherever 'effects' are recognized, will is operating upon will - and that all mechanical occurrences, in so far as a force is active in them, are force of will, effects of will. - Granted finally that one succeeded in explaining our entire instinctual life as the development and ramification of one basic form of will - as will to power, as is my theory -; granted that one could trace all organic functions back to this will to power and could also find in it the solution to the problem of procreation and nourishment - they are one problem - one would have acquired the right to define all efficient force unequivocally as: will to power. The world seen from within, the world described and defined according to its 'intelligible character' - it would be 'will to power' and nothing else.

14

'What? Does that, to speak vulgarly, not mean: God is refuted but the devil is not -?' On the contrary! On the contrary, my friends! And who the devil compels you to speak vulgarly! -

15

As happened lately, in all the clarity of modern times, with the French Revolution, that gruesome and, closely considered, superfluous farce, into which, however, noble and enthusiastic spectators all over Europe interpeted from a distance their own indignations and raptures so long and so passionately that the text disappeared beneath the interpretation: so a noble posterity could once again misunderstand the entire past and only thus perhaps make the sight of it endurable. - Or rather: has this not already happened? have we ourselves not been this 'noble posterity'? And, in so far as we comprehend this, is it not at this moment - done with?

16

No one is likely to consider a doctrine true merely because it makes happy or makes virtuous: excepting perhaps the dear 'idealists', who rapturize over the good, the true and the beautiful and let all kinds of colourful, clumsy and good-natured desiderata swim about together in their pond. Happiness and virtue are no arguments. But even thoughtful spirits like to forget that making unhappy and making evil are just as little counter-arguments. Something might be true although at the same time harmful and dangerous in the highest degree; indeed, it could pertain to the fundamental nature of existence that a complete knowledge of it would destroy one - so that the strength of a spirit could be measured by how much 'truth' it could take, more clearly, to what degree it needed it attenuated, veiled, sweetened, blunted, and falsified. But there can be no doubt that for the discovery of certain parts of truth the wicked and unhappy are in a more favourable position and are more likely to succeed; not to speak of the wicked who are happy - a species about whom the moralists are silent. Perhaps severity and cunning provide more favourable conditions for the formation of the strong, independent spirit and philosopher than does that gentle, sweet, yielding good-naturedness and art of taking things lightly which is prized in a scholar and rightly prized. Supposing in advance that the concept 'philosopher' is not limited to the philosopher who writes books - or, worse, writes books of his philosophy! - A final trait in the image of the free-spirited philosopher is provided by Stendhal, and in view of what German taste is I do not want to fail to emphasize it - for it goes against German taste. 'Pour être bon philosophe', said this last great psychologist, 'il faut être sec, clair, sans illusion. Un banquier, qui a fait fortune, a une partie du caractère requis pour faire des découvertes en philosophic, c'est-à-dire pour voir clair dans ce qui est.'

17

Everything profound loves the mask; the profoundest things of all hate even image and parable. Should not nothing less than the opposite be the proper disguise under which the shame of a god goes abroad? A questionable question: it would be strange if some mystic or other had not already ventured to meditate some such thing. There are occurrences of so delicate a description that one does well to bury them and make them unrecognizable with a piece of coarseness; there are acts of love and extravagant magnanimity after which nothing is more advisable than to take a stick and give the eyewitness a thrashing and so confuse his memory. Some know how to confuse and mistreat their own memory, so as to take revenge at least on this sole confidant - shame is inventive. It is not the worst things of which one is most ashamed: there is not only deceit behind a mask - there is so much goodness in cunning. I could believe that a man who had something fragile and valuable to conceal might roll through life thick and round as an old, green, thick-hooped wine barrel: the refinement of his shame would have it so. A man whose shame has depth encounters his destinies and delicate decisions too on paths which very few ever reach and of whose existence his intimates and neighbours may not know: his mortal danger is concealed from their eyes, as is the fact that he has regained his sureness of life. Such a hidden man, who instinctively uses speech for silence and concealment and is inexhaustible in evading communication, wants a mask of him to roam the heads and hearts of his friends in his stead, and he makes sure that it does so; and supposing he does not want it, he will one day come to see that a mask is there in spite of that - and that that is a good thing. Every profound spirit needs a mask: more, around every profound spirit a mask is continually growing, thanks to the constantly false, that is to say shallow interpretation of every word he speaks, every step he takes, every sign of life he gives.

18

One must test oneself to see whether one is destined for independence and command; and one must do so at the proper time. One should not avoid one's tests, although they are perhaps the most dangerous game one could play and are in the end tests which are taken before ourselves and before no other judge. Not to cleave to another person, though he be the one you love most - every person is a prison, also a nook and corner. Not to cleave to a fatherland, though it be the most suffering and in need of help - it is already easier to sever your heart from a victorious fatherland. Not to cleave to a feeling of pity, though it be for higher men into whose rare torment and helplessness chance allowed us to look. Not to cleave to a science, though it lures one with the most precious discoveries seemingly reserved precisely for us. Not to cleave to one's own detachment, to that voluptuous remoteness and strangeness of the bird which flies higher and higher so as to see more and more beneath it - the danger which threatens the flier. Not to cleave to our own virtues and become as a whole the victim of some part of us, of our 'hospitality' for example, which is the danger of dangers for rich and noble souls who expend themselves prodigally, almost indifferently, and take the virtue of liberality to the point where it becomes a vice. One must know how to conserve oneself: the sternest test of independence.

19

A new species of philosopher is appearing: I venture to baptize these philosophers with a name not without danger in it. As I divine them, as they let themselves be divined - for it pertains to their nature to want to remain a riddle in some respects - these philosophers of the future might rightly, but perhaps also wrongly, be described as attempters. This name itself is in the end only an attempt and, if you will, a temptation.

20

Are they new friends of 'truth', these coming philosophers? In all probability: for all philosophers have hitherto loved their truths. But certainly they will not be dogmatists. It must offend their pride, and also their taste, if their truth is supposed to be a truth for everyman, which has hitherto been the secret desire and hidden sense of all dogmatic endeavours. 'My judgement is my judgement: another cannot easily acquire a right to it' - such a philosopher of the future may perhaps say. One has to get rid of the bad taste of wanting to be in agreement with many. 'Good' is no longer good when your neighbour takes it into his mouth. And how could there exist a 'common good'! The expression is a self-contradiction: what can be common has ever but little value. In the end it must be as it is and has always been: great things are for the great, abysses for the profound, shudders and delicacies for the refined, and, in sum, all rare things for the rare.

21

After all this do I still need to say that they too will be free, very free spirits, these philosophers of the future - just as surely as they will not be merely free spirits, but something more, higher, greater and thoroughly different that does not want to be misunderstood or taken for what it is not. But in saying this I feel I have a duty, almost as much towards them as towards us, their heralds and precursors, us free spirits! - to blow away from all of us an ancient and stupid prejudice and misunderstanding which has all too long obscured the concept 'free spirit' like a fog. In all the countries of Europe and likewise in America there exists at present something that misuses this name, a very narrow, enclosed, chained-up species of spirits who desire practically the opposite of that which informs our aims and instincts - not to mention the fact that in regard to those new philosophers appearing they must certainly be closed windows and bolted doors. They belong, in short and regrettably, among the levellers, these falsely named 'free spirits' - eloquent and tirelessly scribbling slaves of the democratic taste and its 'modern ideas', men without solitude one and all, without their own solitude, good clumsy fellows who, while they cannot be denied courage and moral respectability, are unfree and ludicrously superficial, above all in their fundamental inclination to see in the forms of existing society the cause of practically all human failure and misery: which is to stand the truth happily on its head! What with all their might they would like to strive after is the universal green pasture happiness of the herd, with security, safety, comfort and an easier life for all; their two most oft-recited doctrines and ditties are 'equality of rights' and 'sympathy for all that suffers' - and suffering itself they take for something that has to be abolished. We, who are the opposite of this, and have opened our eyes and our conscience to the question where and how the plant 'man' has hitherto grown up most vigorously, we think that this has always happened under the opposite conditions, that the perilousness of his situation had first to become tremendous, his powers of invention and dissimulation (his 'spirit' -) had, under protracted pressure and constraint, to evolve into subtlety and daring, his will to life had to be intensified into unconditional will to power - we think that severity, force, slavery, peril in the street and in the heart, concealment, stoicism, the art of experiment and devilry of every kind, that everything evil, dreadful, tyrannical, beast of prey and serpent in man serves to enhance the species 'man' just as much as does its opposite - we do not say enough when we say even that much, and at any rate we are, in what we say and do not say on this point, at the other end from all modern ideology and herd desiderata: at its antipodes perhaps? Is it any wonder we 'free spirits' are not precisely the most communicative of spirits? that we do not want to betray in every respect from what a spirit can free itself and to what it is then perhaps driven? And as for the dangerous formula 'beyond good and evil' with which we at any rate guard against being taken for what we are not: we are something different from 'libres-penseurs', 'liberi pensatori', 'Freidenker', or whatever else all these worthy advocates of 'modern ideas' like to call themselves. At home in many countries of the spirit, or at least having been guests there; having again and again eluded the agreeable musty nooks and corners into which predilection and prejudice, youth, origin, the accidents of people and books, or even weariness from wandering seemed to have consigned us; full of malice towards the lures of dependence which reside in honours, or money, or offices, or raptures of the senses; grateful even to distress and changeful illness because it has always liberated us from some rule and its 'prejudice', grateful to the god, devil, sheep and worm in us, curious to the point of vice, investigators to the point of cruelty, with rash fingers for the ungraspable, with teeth and stomach for the most indigestible, ready for every task that demands acuteness and sharp senses, ready for every venture thanks to a superfluity of 'free will', with fore- and back-souls into whose ultimate intentions no one can easily see, with fore- and backgrounds to whose end no foot may go, hidden under mantles of light, conquerors even though we look like heirs and prodigals, collectors and arrangers from morn till night, misers of our riches and our full-crammed cupboards, thrifty in learning and forgetting, inventive in schemata, sometimes proud of tables of categories, sometimes pedants, sometimes night owls of labour even in broad daylight; yes, even scarecrows when we need to be - and today we need to be: in so far, that is, as we are born, sworn, jealous friends of solitude, of our own deepest, most midnight, most midday solitude - such a type of man are we, we free spirits! and perhaps you too are something of the same type, you coming men? you new philosophers?

4 From High Mountains: Epode

Oh life's midday! Oh festival! Oh garden of summer! I wait in restless ecstasy, I stand and watch and wait - where are you, friends? It is you I await, in readiness day and night. Come now! It is time you were here!

Was it not for you the glacier today exchanged its grey for roses? The brook seeks you; and wind and clouds press higher in the blue, longingly they crowd aloft to look for you.

For you have I prepared my table in the highest height - who lives so near the stars as I, or who so near the depths of the abyss? My empire - has an empire ever reached so far? And my honey - who has tasted the sweetness of it?

- And there you are, friends! - But, alas, am I not he you came to visit? You hesitate, you stare - no, be angry, rather! Is it no longer - I? Are hand, step, face transformed? And what I am, to you friends - I am not?

Am I another? A stranger to myself? Sprung from myself? A wrestler who subdued himself too often? Turned his own strength against himself too often, checked and wounded by his own victory?

Did I seek where the wind bites keenest, learn to live where no one lives, in the desert where only the polar bear lives, unlearn to pray and curse, unlearn man and god, become a ghost flitting across the glaciers?

- Old friends! how pale you look, how full of love and terror! No - be gone! Be not angry! Here - you could not be at home: here in this far domain of ice and rocks - here you must be a huntsman, and like the Alpine goat.

A wicked huntsman is what I have become! - See how bent my bow! He who drew that bow, surely he was the mightiest of men - : but the arrow, alas - ah, no arrow is dangerous as that arrow is dangerous - away! be gone! For your own preservation! ...

You turn away? - O heart, you have borne up well, your hopes stayed strong: now keep your door open to new friends! Let the old go! Let memories go! If once you were young, now - you are younger!

What once united us, the bond of one hope - who still can read the signs love once inscribed therein, now faint and faded? It is like a parchment - discoloured, scorched - from which the hand shrinks back.

No longer friends, but - what shall I call them? - they are the ghosts of friends which at my heart and window knock at night, which gaze on me and say: 'were we once friends?' - oh faded word, once fragrant as the rose!

Oh longing of youth, which did not know itself! Those I longed for, those I deemed changed into kin of mine - that they have aged is what has banished them: only he who changes remains akin to me.

Oh life's midday! Oh second youth! Oh garden of summer! I wait in restless ecstasy, I stand and watch and wait - it is friends I await, in readiness day and night, new friends. Come now! It is time you were here!

This song is done - desire's sweet cry died on the lips: a sorcerer did it, the timely friend, the midday friend - no! ask not who he is - at midday it happened, at midday one became two ...

Now, sure of victory together, we celebrate the feast of feasts: friend Zarathrustra has come, the guest of guests! Now the world is laughing, the dread curtain is rent, the wedding day has come for light and darkness...

SOME EXTRAORDINARY
POPULAR DELUSIONS

非同寻常的大众幻想

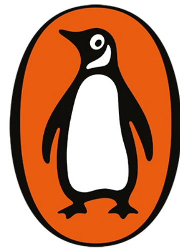
［英］查尔斯·麦基　著
郝瑞丽　译

中国出版集团
中 译 出 版 社

非同寻常的大众幻想

（英）查尔斯·麦基/著

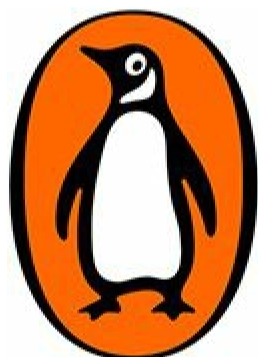
郝瑞丽/译



企鹅图书 | PENGUIN BOOKS

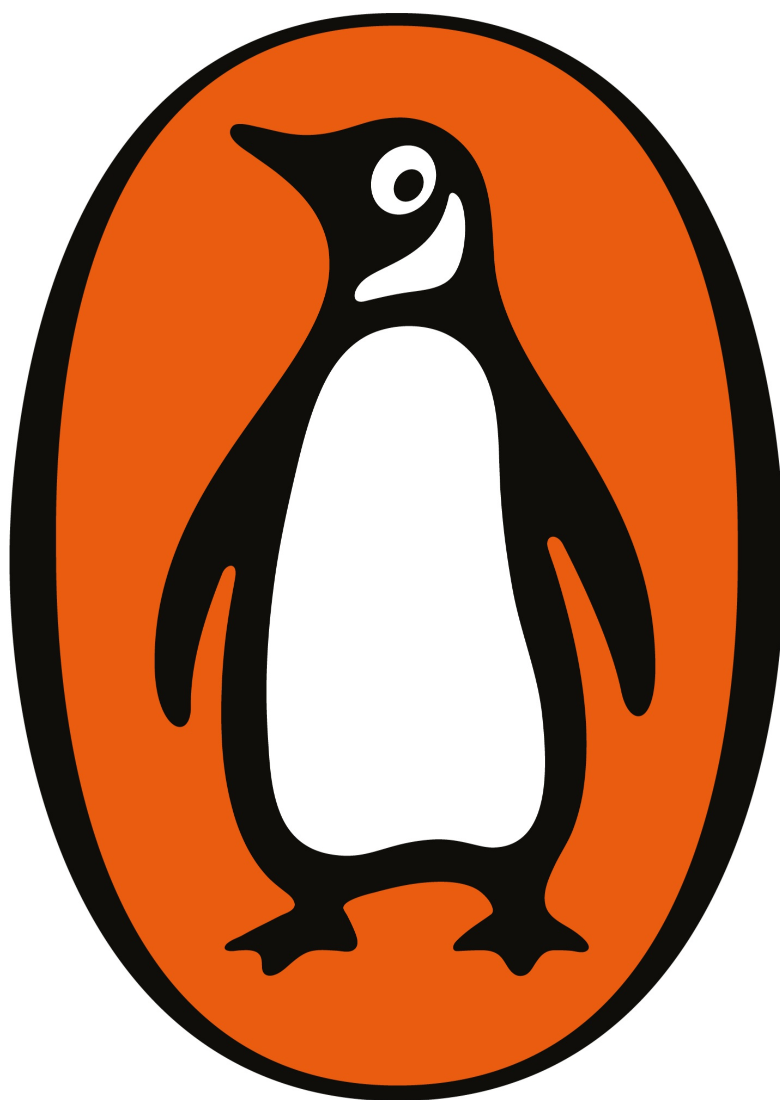
UK | USA | Canada | Ireland | Australia
New Zealand | India | South Africa | North Asia

Penguin Books is part of the Penguin Random House group of companies whose addresses can be found at:
global.penguinrandomhouse.com.



Penguin Books Ltd, Registered Offices: 80 Strand, London WC2R ORL, England
www.penguin.com
Extraordinary Popular Delusions and the Madness of Crowds first published 1841
This selection published in Penguin Books 2010

企鹅兰登电子书 | PENGUIN RANDOM HOUSE EBOOKS



目录

“伟大的思想”中文版序

企鹅“伟大的思想”系列丛书自2004年开始陆续面世，在英国、美国和德国均有出版。在英国出版品种最多，已付梓八十种，尚有二十种计划出版。该丛书在全球众多读者间，尤其是学生当中，普及了哲学和政治学，销量已远超二百万册。中文版“伟大的思想”的推出，是该系列的又一延续和发展，令人欢欣鼓舞。

推出这套丛书旨在让读者再次与一些伟大的非小说类经典著作面对面地交流。长久以来，此类书籍的出版都建立在这样一个假设之上——此类著作供学生课堂学习之用，因此需辅以导读、详尽的注释及参考书目等。此类版本无疑十分有用，但我想，如果某一版本能够重建托马斯·潘恩的《常识》或约翰·罗斯金的《艺术与人生》初版时的环境，为读者与作者营造更为亲密无间的氛围，使读者除了原作者及其自身的思考外没有其他参照，也许会更有吸引力。

但是，这一做法亦存在严重缺陷：每位作者的表述难免有难解或不可解之处，一些重要的背景知识或许也有所缺失。例如，读者对亨利·梭罗创作时的情形毫无头绪，也不了解该书的反响及影响。不过，这样做的优点也显而易见，最为显著的便是作者的初衷又一次受到重视——托马斯·潘恩的愤怒、查尔斯·达尔文的灵光、塞内加的隐逸。他们给许多国家的众多读者带来的生活影响难以估量，有的影响甚至长达几个世纪，几乎没有什么比阅读这些作家更令人拍案叫绝的了。倘若没有亚当·斯密或阿图尔·叔本华，将无法想象我们今天的世界。这些小书创作年代久远，但其中的话语彻底改变了我们的政治学、经济学、精神世界、社会规划和宗教信仰。

“伟大的思想”系列一直求新求变，地域不同，收录的作家亦不同。一些作家在中国或美国更受欢迎，而英国版“伟大的思想”收录的一些作家在其他国家和地区则鲜有人知。称其为“伟大的思想”，我们亦是慎之又慎。这些思想之所以伟大，在于其影响深远，但这并不意味着这些思想都是“好”思想，实际上一些书或可列入“坏”思想之列。丛书中收录的很多作家受到同样收录于该丛书的其他作家的巨大影响，例如，马塞尔·普鲁斯特承认受约翰·罗斯金影响很大，米歇尔·德·蒙田也承认深受塞内加影响。但也有些作家彼此憎恶，若发现彼此都被收录于同一丛书，一定会深感苦恼。至于他们思想的或“好”或“坏”，读者可自行判明。我们衷心希望，您可以享受阅读这些著作的乐趣。

“伟大的思想”出版者

西蒙·温德尔

译者导读

查尔斯·麦基（Charles Mackay）生于1812年3月26日，卒于1889年12月24日，苏格兰诗人、作家、小说家和歌曲作家，以其文集《大众的迷茫与狂热》（Extraordinary Popular Delusions and the Madness of Crowds）而闻名于世。本书所选4篇作品即出自此文集。

《流行在大都市里的荒唐语》讲述了一些毫无意义的表达在都市坊间毫无缘由的起落兴衰；《南海泡沫危机》讲述了南海公司兴起到衰落的全过程，展示了泡沫膨胀时的斑斓和破灭时的黯淡，重现了当年金融市场的疯狂和荒谬；《郁金香狂热》描述了人们如何仅仅为了一棵球形的根茎而倾家荡产，举国上下如何为了这羸弱的花朵而陷入一片混乱；《疯狂的慢性投毒犯》揭露了那些天良尽失之人如何残害朋友和至亲，恶贯满盈之人如何从戕害人命中谋取暴利。

这4篇文章所讲述的故事截然不同，然而，却揭露了人类这个貌似智慧的动物，一不小心就极容易滑进去的一种状态——丧失理智的狂癫状。处于这种状态的所谓人类，已然没有了任何的思考能力和意识，犹如风中柳絮，或飘扬高空，或陷入泥潭，所有一切皆由外力主使。伦敦的市民张口闭口“阔斯”的时候，从来没有去想为什么这个音节具有如此丰富的含义和如此巨大的威力；所有南海公司和一系列泡沫公司的狂热股民，从来没有去想那些难以置信的事实如何产生高额的利润；荷兰的上上下下，也没有一个人去想一个类似洋葱的花根如何可以和祖产画上等号；那些把毒药坦然放进至亲的食物中的人，一样没有去想，亲人死后，人类良心和法律是否会允许他的“坦然”一直持续下去。

这种理智尽失的狂癫状只有两个结局：一种是始于狂癫、终于无形

的“善始善终”，比如盲目热爱一个个表达的伦敦市民，只是在使用中过瘾，而从不去想每一个表达何去何从。而另一种结局便是从狂癫的顶峰跌入现实的谷底，或身败名裂，或粉身碎骨。泡沫公司的股民和股东们不得不面临泡沫破灭的现实，变得一贫如洗，甚至锒铛入狱；郁金香的追随者不得不面临一个“洋葱般根茎”回归本位的现实，家产尽失，血本无归；而那些将至亲置于死地的狂徒必然得接受人间道德和法律的惩罚，被斩首示众，甚至被挫骨扬灰。

文章和文章所讲述的故事都已成为遥远的历史，但是，它们所蕴含的深刻含义，对于今天我们这个充斥着各种欲望的社会，仍旧具有十分深远的教育和警醒意义。那些追求时尚、钟爱名牌、豪掷半年工资买一个名牌包的美女们；那些为求偶像一个签名而心甘情愿排数小时长队的追星族们；那些梦想一夜暴富而倾其所有的炒股迷们；那些所有、所有在迷恋着某种东西的人们，是否应该把文中的这些人作为自己的一面镜子，停下脚步，抓住一丝理智的光芒，照亮自己那因过分迷恋而变得茫然和晦暗的内心，在自我的所作所为中，追寻一下“意义”的痕迹。

在翻译的过程中，一面心中琢磨着久远的文字，一面脑海中闪现着当今社会的一幕幕。这大概就是经典的魅力吧：喻古讽今。而经典的丰富和深刻也绝非译者几句粗浅的解释可以涵盖。相信聪慧的读者在品读的过程中，定会发现另一番洞天。

流行在大都市里的荒唐语

啦！发兮咚呔——啦！发兮咚咚，

万岁！啦！发兮咚呔！

——贝朗热[1]

在大城市中，有一种诙谐无处不在。对于那些富有同情心和包容心的人，这种诙谐是他们永不枯竭的消遣源泉。这些人高贵而优雅，但他们从不会嘲笑酗酒技工的愚笨或怪癖，不会对肮脏的乞丐和恶作剧的顽童嗤之以鼻，也不会对充满大都市大街小巷的游手好闲者、粗鲁莽撞者和人云亦云者趾高气昂。有一种人，他走过了大都市，却发现诸多让人悲泣之事。对于这种人，或许，每一个角落都足以让他们心如刀绞。但是，让这些人带着悲伤独自前行吧——我们绝不会和他结伴。这些人挖出人类的苦难，只是为了表达他们对这些苦难的悲伤，而这对于减轻人类的痛苦毫无益处。这些哭泣的哲学家用心中的悲伤毁掉了他们的视力，人也在眼泪中变得无能。对于那些他们为之痛哭不已的罪恶，他们束手无策。于是，人们发现不流泪的人才是真正的慈善家。他就像一个杰出的医师，无论所面对的病例如何糟糕，他总可以做到带着微笑去乐观面对。

苦难已被无数次地挖掘，罪恶已引得群情激愤，乌合之众的愚蠢也已被无数次地口诛笔伐。所以，我们在这里的写作不再为之“锦上添花”，至少在这一章不会。我们目前的任务没有那么惹人厌烦，就是信步穿过大城市中的人群聚集地，在其中寻求普通大众的乐趣，并且在经过的时候，记下穷人那些无伤大雅的愚蠢行为和奇思怪想。

在此，我们首先要讲的是，无论我们走到哪里，我们总是会听到一个表达被城市中形形色色的人群反复使用。重复这个表达的人总是喜形于色，听到的人总是忍俊不禁。你看不管是那蓬头垢面、老茧满手的男人，粗鲁的屠夫，跑腿的听差，淫荡的女人，赶出租马车的车夫，抑或是在街头的角落里游手好闲的懒虫，所有的人无不如此。这个表达总是具有一触即发的威力，只要有人说起，听者无不捧腹大笑。这个措辞适用于任何一种环境，它是可以回答所有问题的万能答案；简而言之，它是时下最受人欢迎的具有俚语性质的表达。在它如昙花一现般短暂的流行季节里，这个表达给贫穷卑微者，给收入微薄者的生活投了一缕欢乐的亮光，加了一丝嬉戏的乐趣，从而让他们找到了和他们身居高位的同胞一样开怀大笑的理由。

伦敦尤其盛产这种表达。不知在什么地方，一夜之间不期而至；也不知以何种方式，几小时内妇孺皆知。多年以前，人们最爱的一个表达是“阔斯”（虽然只是个单音节词，但它本身足以算作一个表达方式）。这个奇怪的词语在群众中的受欢迎程度无与伦比，迅即便获得了近乎无限的含义。当平民百姓要表达不相信的态度，并且同时想博人一笑时，这个流行的俚语是绝对的不二词选。当一个人被要求施与恩惠，又不打算给予的时候，他总可以大喊一声：“阔斯！”在这一声大喊中，他对请求者极端鲁莽行为的态度表露无遗。当一个喜爱恶作剧的顽童想激怒路人并取悦他的密友的时候，他会直勾勾地盯着他的脸，然后脱口而出：“阔斯！”对于他所期望的效果，这个“阔斯”没有一次不灵验。当一个辩手要表达对对手论点的真实性的怀疑时，当他要尽快摆脱他无法推翻的论点时，他选择“阔斯”，带着口不择言的神态，噘起他轻蔑的嘴唇，耸起他不耐烦的肩膀。这个万能的单音节词传达了他所有的意图。他不仅告诉对手他知道他撒谎了，而且，如果他认为人们会愚蠢到去相信他的地步的话，他就不折不扣地错了。每个酒馆里都回响着“阔斯”，每个街角都喧嚣着“阔斯”，几英里范围内的墙壁上无不涂鸦着“阔斯”。

但是，像世间万物一样，“阔斯”虽盛，却也只能盛极一时。它来得迅猛，去得突然，而且，再也没有享受人们曾经给它的溺爱和崇拜。新来者把它赶跑了，毫无争辩地代替了它的统治地位；而这个新来者也注定在独领一段风骚之后，被它的继任者抛下万人瞩目的宝座。

下一个接踵而至的流行语是：“多么糟糕透顶的帽子啊！”这个表达一流行开来，就有成千上万只看似漫无目的，实则敏锐异常的眼睛四处搜寻戴着旧帽子的过客，不管他帽子露旧的痕迹是多么微乎其微。顷刻间，一呼百应，震耳欲聋的噪音极具印第安人的尖叫特色。如若发现自己身处众人关注的中心，最明智的做法莫过于以逆来顺受的方式来保持自己的尊严。如果对于投向自己帽子的责难表露出一点点的厌恶，那只能是加倍的自取其辱。这群乌合之众马上就会发现一个人是否易怒，而且，如果这个人和他们是一个阶层的，他们就会拿他取乐。在这个表达流行的日子里，如果这样的一个人，戴着这样的一顶帽子走过人群拥挤的邻近社区，如果他的烦恼仅限于这些乌合之众的大呼小叫，他应该意识到他已经很幸运了。然而，事实是这顶倒霉催的帽子经常会被人从他的头顶上一把抓下来，被肆无忌惮的恶作剧者扔到排水沟中，然后，再拿起来，带着淤泥挂到一根棍子上。他们以此来取悦那些旁观者。这些看客们乐得笑弯了腰，在欢笑的间隙大声喊着：“噢！多么糟糕透顶的帽子啊！”“多么糟糕透顶的帽子啊！”有多少可怜的人为此变得紧张兮兮！因此，只要他们的钱包还可以节约出这部分开支，必会在陷入这种窘境之前为自己买顶新帽子。

这个独特的说辞在连续几个月的时间内为伦敦带来了欢乐。然而，和“阔斯”以及其他出身不明的习语不同，它的来历明明白白。南华克区[2]曾经有一场竞争激烈的竞选，竞选人之一是一名著名的帽商。这位绅士为了拉选票，利用职业之便，以巧妙的方式来赢得选民的好感。这种方式就是贿赂选民，却让他们浑然不觉。每当他去拜访或碰见一个选民，而这个选民的帽子不是最好的材料，或者，虽然是最好的材料却早

已不再流行时，他总是会不失时机地说："你戴的帽子多么的糟糕透顶啊！给我的商店打电话，你会得到一顶崭新的帽子！"在竞选当天，这个场景被对手所利用。在这位尊敬的候选人对着选民讲话的时候，他的对手煽动群众不断地大声叫喊："多么糟糕透顶的帽子啊！"这个习语从南华克区传遍整个伦敦，并一度成为最为流行的俚语。

曾一度备受宠爱的"钩子行者"起源于一个流行民谣的副歌。像"阔斯"一样，它也曾是回答所有问题的万能答案。随着时间的推移，仅仅第二个词为人们所专爱，并且这个词的第一个字的发音被特别地拉长，第二个字的音节则急转直下。如果一个可爱的女仆被一个她所不喜欢的人强吻，她一准儿会翘起她的小鼻子，叫道："行者。"如果一个清洁工问他的朋友借一先令，而他的朋友不能或不愿借给他，他得到的答复极有可能是："行者！"如果一个醉鬼在街上踉跄而行时，一个小男孩会去拽他的衣服后摆，或者有人会把他的帽子敲到他的眼上取笑他，而无论是哪种玩笑，必会伴着一声"行者！"2到3个月后，"行者"退出了历史舞台，而且，再也没有重新成为那代人或后来人的消遣用语。

下一个流行习语是最荒谬可笑的。谁发明了它？它是如何流行起来的？人们又是在哪里第一次听到了它？所有的这一切都无从得知。有关它的事情，没有一件可以确定。但是，连续几个月，它一直是伦敦人心中首屈一指的流行语。从它身上，伦敦人获得了巨大的满足感。根据所指对象性别的不同，这句习语是："她/他走时她/他的眼睛都出来了。"那段时间，这个习语在所有熟悉这个城市的人当中口口相传。事实是，这个无厘头的习语给粗俗之人带来了多少欢乐，就给清醒之人带来了多少困惑。智慧的人觉得它很愚蠢，而很多人觉得它很有趣。游手好闲者用粉笔把它写在墙上或者涂在纪念碑上以自娱自乐。但是，"所有的明亮都终将黯淡"，习语也毫不例外。人们终于厌倦了他们的嗜好，随之，"他走时眼睛都出来了"这句习语再也没有在它曾经盛极一时的流行地听到过。

紧随其后的习语很奇怪，流行空间也很有限。这个习语的形式是鲁莽而有些不得体的询问：“你妈把她的轧布机卖了吗？”然而，它的流行程度并不像以前的流行语那样给人带来喧闹的气氛和兴奋的心情，所以，它很快就失宠了。阻碍它流行程度和延续时间的原因是这个习语显然不能用在老人身上。自然而然，它的热度匆匆而逝，随即，被人们抛入遗忘的深渊。相比之下，它的继任者所享盛名要久得多。它的根基是那样的深厚，以至于无论岁月多么久远，时尚如何变迁都无法消除它的痕迹。这个习语是“烧起来啦！”直到今天，它仍是被广泛应用的口语表达。它源于改革暴动时期，那时，愤怒的人们把布里斯托尔烧了将近一半。据说火焰在这个完全陷入暴乱的城市里呼呼乱窜。很难猜测这个习语的流行是因为它的几个词具有美妙的发音，还是因为包含了隽永的涵义。然而，无论原因是什么，事实是确定的，那就是它有力地刺激了大众的幻想，并在刺激中给了他们快感，并且把它之前的习语赶出了流行地带。走遍伦敦，人们听到的只有“烧起来啦！”它回答了所有的问题，解决了所有的争端，适用于所有人、所有事以及所有的场合。它突然间成为英语这个语言中最包罗万象的表达。一个人说话不得体，人们会说他“烧起来了”；一个人过分频繁地去杜松子酒馆，并因此堕落下去，人们也会说他“烧起来了”；让自己陷入深情无法自拔、在深夜出门寻欢、惊扰周围的人们并且制造骚乱，所有的这一切都是当事者“烧起来了”。恋人争吵时“烧起来了”，街上两个恶棍的斗殴也是用的这个表达。那些煽动革命和动乱的传教士让英国像法国一样烧了起来。人们是如此钟爱这个表达，以至于人们重复它就是为了它的声音。很显然，听到他们的器官发出这个声音就足以让他们感到欣欣然。当没有人倾听并回应他们的呼声时，东区的劳工会用这个著名的、常常让西区的贵族感到震惊的习语回应他们。甚至在万物沉寂的深夜，那些值夜班的和无法入睡的人们也总能听到这个声音。蹒跚回家的醉鬼在打嗝儿的间隙叫一声“烧起来了”，以此表明他还属于人类，还是个公民。酒醉让他丧失了整理其他思想的能力，他的智商降到了畜生的水平，但是，他的这声呼喊让他

抓住了他和人类的最后一丝联系。他只要能够大声喊出这个声音，他就有权利做英国人，他就不会像狗一样睡在排水沟里。他大喊大叫着继续前行，惊扰了安静的街道，惊醒了熟睡的人们，直到筋疲力尽一头栽倒在路上。这时，很及时地，一个警察碰巧发现了他，这位治安的捍卫者把灯光照到他脸上，随后惊呼一声："这儿有一个可怜的家伙烧起来了！"然后，有人抬来担架，将这位酩酊大醉者送到哨所，扔进一个肮脏的小屋。在那儿，一群和他一样喝得大醉的倒霉鬼用一个大声的、拉长音的"烧起来啦！"来欢迎他们这个新同志。

这个习语是这样的万能且貌似经久不衰，以至于一位并不了解俚语易逝特性的投机者以此习语为名创办了一个新闻周刊。然而，就像把房屋建在沙地上的人一样，他的地基最终还是坍塌了。那个习语和他所创办的报纸一起被冲进了历史的汪洋。人们最终厌倦了这个单调的"烧起来啦"，这个说法甚至在他们当中也成为粗俗之语。渐渐地，只有不谙世事的小男孩喜欢它，然后，随着时间的流逝，最终被人们完全遗忘了。这个表达已经不是常用的习语，但仍旧用来指突发的火灾、骚乱或恶行。

下一个集万千宠爱的表达不太简洁，它起初的用途是指责早熟的年轻人。他们未成年，却又总是装出一副男子汉十足的气概来。"你妈知道你出来了吗？"是个让人发怒的质问。它用于质问那些吹牛离了谱的，在街上抽烟的，带着假胡子看起来不可一世的年轻人。我们很是见过一些逞能的家伙，只要有女士从他们面前经过，他们必定直勾勾地一直把人家看到惊慌失措；但是，只要对他们一说这句话，他们就立马原形毕露，卑微之极。盛装出行的学徒和伙计对这个习语深恶痛绝，每每听到，必会一脸愤怒。总体而言，这个习语应用的效果是好的，它无数次地告诉那些浮夸的年轻人，他们并非像自己想象的那样优美、动人。然而，除了这个正面效果之外，这个表达所暗含的对对方自制能力的怀疑赋予了它挑衅的特性。一句"你妈知道你出来了吗？"的询问包含了假

装的关心和担忧；言下之意便是这么年轻、对大城市这么没有经验的人竟然在没有父母的陪同下独自出来乱逛，实在令人遗憾和揪心。由此，那些即将成年的年轻人一旦成为被询问的对象，必会马上勃然大怒。甚至，年岁大一点的人也不喜欢这个习语。如果一个车夫在不知道客人显赫身份的情况下，对一个公爵领地或勇士封号的继承人说了这句话，对方必会对这种公然的侮辱怒发冲冠，并一定会和这个胆大妄为的冒犯者对簿公堂。车夫解释说他本来是想跟这位老爷要双倍的钱，结果被拒，所以，他对之施以“你妈知道你出来了吗”的侮辱。迅即，在场的所有车夫都开始大呼小叫着“你妈知道你出来了吗”，然后，这位老爷只好在尽量不失尊严的前提下落荒而逃。公堂之上，车夫求情说他不知道他的客人是个老爷，然而，被冒犯的正义让他为自己的过错付出了代价。

这个习语气数用尽之后，像它的先辈们一样销声匿迹了。随后，“你是谁？”代替了它的统治地位。这个新宠像蘑菇，仿佛一夜之间即可破土而出，迅猛生长；又像齐普赛街上的青蛙，随一阵急雨从天而降。前一天，它还没有被听说、被知晓，甚至没有被发明；后一天，它就已经遍及了整个伦敦。每一条小路都回响着它，每一条大路上都有它的余音萦绕，

街头巷尾，四处传诵

这不变的呼喊。

这个习语的说法很迅捷，第一个词和最后一个词的读音都以喷薄之势而出，中间一个词的读音轻如气息。像它所有可以被广泛应用的同仁一样，这个习语也可以用于几乎各种不同的场合。喜欢对平实的问题作出平实回答的人绝对不会喜欢它。傲慢无礼者用它去冒犯别人；无知者用它去遮掩自己的贫乏；恶作剧者用它来取笑。每一个进入酒吧间的新人都会被人毫不客气地问一句：“你是谁？”如果他呆头呆脑地抓耳挠腮，不知如何应答，人群里肯定会爆发一阵狂笑。面对这一问，再权威

的辩论者也只能张口结舌，再无礼的傲慢也只能偃旗息鼓。在这个习语盛行之时，一个绅士感到有贼在掏他的衣兜，他突然转身，把那个人逮个现形，然后大呼一声："你是谁？"周围的看客必定会随之欢呼，并且认为这是他们听到的最棒的笑话了——堪称智慧的顶峰和幽默的精髓。另一个类似的场景给这个习语增添了额外的趣味，在它即将淡出之时，为它注入了新的生命和活力。这一幕发生在大不列颠王国的刑事大法庭上。一个犯人在接受公开审问，被控告之罪已被证实，他的律师不是为他作无罪辩护，而是请求法庭从轻发落，理由是他以前是个品端行正的好人。"那么你的证人们呢？"尊敬的主持法官问道。这时，旁听席中传来一个粗鲁的声音："求你了，长官！我认识这个受审的犯人，他是有史以来最诚实的人了。"一时间，法庭上的官员们惊得目瞪口呆，那些陌生人压抑不住地咯咯直笑。这时，法官突然抬起头，冷静而威严地说："你是谁？"整个法庭都被震惊了，咯咯窃笑变成了捧腹大笑，几分钟后才重新恢复安静和秩序。引领员平静情绪之后，开始寻找那个胆敢亵渎法庭的家伙，但是却无果而终。没有人认识他，也没有人见过他。一段时间之后，法庭又恢复了正常的审讯。紧接着受审的罪犯对自己的前景十分乐观，因为他得知那张代表正义的、庄严的嘴巴竟然能说出这么草根的习语，仿佛他曾亲身体验，并且很欣赏这个说法。他由此推断，这样的一个法官绝对不会过分严厉。他的心和劳苦大众在一起，他理解他们的语言和做事的方式，所以，对于他们受到诱惑而犯罪这件事，必然能够尽可能地体谅。从后来的事实判断，无数的罪犯都这么想，最后，这个博学的法官突然间受到了大众的极度欢迎，他的智慧被人们到处传颂。就这样，"你是谁？"获得了新生，又接着被大众宠爱了一段时间。

但是，如果你认为两个前后相继的习语之间是没有休止符的你方唱罢我登场的模式，那你就大错特错了。这些习语的兴起并非绵延不断的一条单线，而是在赢得大众青睐的过程中，与歌曲平分秋色。情形如下：当人们沉浸在音乐之中时，习语再怎么高声呼喊，也只能是徒劳无

益；而当人们心向习语时，音乐再甜美，他们也是充耳不闻。大约20年前，整个伦敦回响着一首让所有人神魂颠倒的歌曲。男孩儿、女孩儿、小伙子、老大爷、少女、少妇以及寡妇，所有的人都步调一致地喜欢起了音乐。人们对于歌唱的狂热无与伦比，然而，最糟糕的是，就像传奇小说《修道院》（The Monastery）中的好神父菲利普一样，他们的曲调绝对一成不变。整个城里那些游手好闲的人整齐划一地唱着："樱桃熟了！""樱桃熟了！"每一个歌唱的声音都是那样的不协调，每一把小提琴的演奏都让人疯狂，每一个笛子的演奏都让人崩溃，每一个管乐的演奏都犹如病态的喘息，街道上所有的乐器都在演奏这同样的旋律。最后，那些努力勤学的人和偏爱安静的人不得不绝望地堵上耳朵，甚至，跑到数英里之外的田野里或树林里去寻找安静。这个瘟疫一般无处不在又折磨人的歌曲存在了一年，直到樱桃这个词在这片土地上成为人们厌恶的对象。最终，激情消减了，钟爱的浪潮又朝着新的方向前进。下一个宠儿是一首歌还是一个俚语，现在确定还为时尚早，但是，可以肯定的是，马上，人们又开始对一个戏剧的主题开始痴迷，无论你走到哪儿，总能听到"汤姆和杰米"。仅仅以言语的形式来取悦大众的时间已经很久了，所以，在后来的消遣中，人们开始更加注重实际的行动。城里每一个青年的心中都充斥着要脱颖而出的强烈愿望，而实现这个愿望的方式真是多种多样。他们会选择打倒"查理一家"，整夜被关在拘留所里，在淫荡的女人中间起哄，或者和一群粗鄙的人同被关在圣吉斯大教堂的地穴里。那些小男孩模仿这些年轻人的行动，并且企图在类似的事情上和他们一比高低。这种情形一直持续到这个毫无价值的激情像其他的愚蠢行为一样，走到它生命的尽头。整个城市又开始沉醉于下一个流行时尚。紧接着，把拇指尖放到鼻子尖上，并且在空中迅速转动4个手指成为回答所有问题的方式。在粗俗之人中，这种方式被认为是顶级智慧的象征。如果一个人想侮辱或者激怒另外一个人，他只需使用这个神秘的具有象征意义的手势，即可达到目的。在每一个有人群聚集的街角，如果一个过路者觉得好奇要停下来观察他们的行动，两分钟之内，

他必定可以看到其中有人把手指放到他们的鼻子上，以此来表示他们对这个观察者的怀疑、吃惊、拒绝，或者嘲笑。今天，人们仍能看到这个荒谬习俗的遗留痕迹，但是，不同的是，现在它被认为是低级的行为，甚至在粗俗人群中也不例外。

大约16年之前，伦敦城又毫无道理地迷上了音乐。大众在高声赞扬“海洋，海洋！”的歌声里，喊哑了嗓子。如果一个不知情的陌生人（而且是个哲学家）步行穿过伦敦时听到了这个在全城传唱的歌谣，他一定会建立一个有趣的理论，来阐述英国人对海的喜爱和我们众所周知的海洋霸权地位之间的关系。他可能会说，“毫无疑问，这个民族在海上不可战胜。他们对海洋的热爱渗入了他们的日常思维：他们甚至在市场这种地方赞美海洋，他们的路边歌手通过歌颂海洋来祈求施舍；身份不分贵贱，年龄不分长幼，性别不分男女，所有的人都在歌颂‘啊！海洋！’”在这个热爱战争的民族的歌谣里，爱情不是钟爱的主题——酒神巴斯（Bacchus）不是他们的神；他们的思维模式严厉而冷峻，他们只想着“海洋，海洋！”，以及征服海洋的方式。

如果耳朵是这个哲学家判断事物的唯一依据的话，毫无疑问，这些歌声会给他留下这样的印象。唉！那些日子里，那些真正懂得欣赏音乐的高雅的耳朵们啊！当不和谐的旋律演奏起这个让人震惊的圣歌，当成千上万个不同的曲调随声附和，他们在无处可逃的处境中忍受了多么巨大的折磨啊！萨伏伊的流浪歌手听到了这个旋律，开始在伦敦幽静的长街上大声歌唱，直到最深、最偏僻处的屋子里都回响着他的声音。那些优雅之人不得不忍受着魔鬼般的长嚎，这首歌持续了6个月之久。他们疲惫而绝望，甚至在陆地上开始有海里晕船的感觉。

几首其他歌曲在随后的不同时期相继盛行，但是，除了“都围着我的帽子”这首歌外，其他几首都没有获得特别的宠爱，直到一个美国男演员引入了一首名字叫作“黑人，杰姆·克劳”的低俗歌曲。歌手穿着很

应景的服装，摆着奇怪的手势，而且每当歌曲结束的时候总会突然旋转他的身体。这种风格迅疾抓住了全城人的口味，结果，那些规矩之人的耳朵不得不连续几个月忍受这首毫无意义的歌谣所带来的惊吓：

转啊，摇啊，

就这么做吧——

转啊，摇啊，

跳吧，黑人，杰姆·克劳！

街头的流浪歌手为了增加歌曲的效果，涂黑了他们的脸庞；那些失去父亲的、不得不在偷盗和卖唱这两种谋生方式之间作出选择的流浪儿毫不犹豫地选择了后者，因为这个方式看起来似乎更能赚钱，当然，前提是公众的口味保持这个风格不变。在任何大街的夜市上，都可以看到这首歌的伴舞，把粗野笨拙演绎到了无以复加的地步；而这首歌的歌词，刺透人流的喧嚣，高高飘在空中。在这首打油诗的流行时期，那个安静的旁观者，

坐在公路旁

身上布满夏日的灰尘，看着人流

匆忙地来往

众人犹如黄昏光线下的蠓虫儿

此时此刻的他，可能会像雪莱一样高呼：

成千上万的人在狂歌乱舞

如痴如醉

那个曾经自言自语英国人的国民性格，并且认为这个民族对海洋歌曲情有独钟的哲学理论家会对这种现象作何感想呢？如果再次造访伦敦，他一定会得出另一个貌似真实的理论来说明我们对废除奴隶制所作出的不懈努力。“仁慈的民众啊！”他一定会说，“你们的同情心是多么无限啊！你们不幸的非洲同胞们，他们只是在肤色上和你们不同，但对你们是多么友好啊。你们也毫不吝惜你们为他们贡献的2000万，你们想永远纪念他们。杰姆·克劳是那个受伤害民族的代表，也是你们这个民族的大众偶像！看他们如何赞扬他！——他们如何模仿他的特色！——他们如何在闲暇和放松的时刻重复他的名字！他们甚至把他的形象雕刻出来，用以装饰他们的壁炉！他的事业和他的苦难永远不会被忘记！噢，博爱的英格兰啊！——噢，文化的先锋！”

这些就是伦敦民众的特色，此时此刻，没有动乱、行刑、谋杀、麻烦来打乱他们平静的思绪。这些就是普通民众的奇思怪想——这些毫无恶意的愚蠢行为无形中减轻了生存的压力。对于那些智者，虽然，他们会有点嘲笑这些愚蠢的言行，但是绝对不会毫无同情心。他们一定会说：“如果他们愿意，就让他们尽情享受那些俚语式的表达和歌谣吧；如果他们无法幸福，至少，让他们快活吧。”对于英国人，就像对贝朗热歌中所唱到的法国人一样，在小小的一首歌中蕴含着一些安慰。我们和他一样，共同拥有：

那些忧郁的人们啊，

能够给予他们快乐的，

恰恰是这些没有意义的话语！

啊，他们渡过忧伤之河的渡口啊！

就在这些没有意义的表达里。

南海泡沫危机

最后，腐败，犹如洪水，

铺天盖地、淹没一切，而，贪婪

于不知不觉中，蔓延、伸展，

像低空的雾，遮光蔽日。

政客和爱国者一起孜孜不倦地炒着股票，

贵妇和男仆在交易所里齐头并肩；

法官做着经纪人，主教侵吞民脂民膏，

位高权重的公爵耍尽手段，

却只为，蝇头小利：

整个不列颠陷入了利欲熏心的魔咒里。

——蒲伯

南海公司由声望很高的牛津伯爵哈利（Harley, Earl of Oxford）创建于1711年，其目的是恢复辉格党下台以来一直境遇不佳的政府声誉，清偿国家流动债务中高达近1000万英镑的海陆军的信用债券及其他债券。这个由商人创建的、在那个时候尚未命名的公司主动承担了政府的这些债务。政府保证在一个时期内向他们提供6%的年利率。按此利率计算，政府每年须向他们支付高达60万的利息，为此，政府永久性免收他

们所进口的葡萄酒、醋、印度商品、丝织品、烟草、鲸鱼鳍，以及其他一些商品的关税。同时，他们还获得了南海地区的贸易垄断权，从此，通过国会法案组建的这个公司就以“南海”闻名于世了。伯爵大人因为在事务办理中的贡献而赢得了很高的荣誉，而这项计划总是被那些阿谀奉承者称为“牛津伯爵的杰作”。

即便是在公司建立的早期，公司和公众就对南美西岸的巨大财富形成了极具梦幻色彩的想象。每个人都听说过秘鲁和墨西哥的金矿、银矿；每个人都认为那里的矿藏取之不尽；只要把英国的产品运到那里的海岸，当地居民就会拿上百倍的金锭、银锭来给予回报。有一则消息被人孜孜不倦地传播着：西班牙将让出智利和秘鲁海岸上的4个港口，以便为英国的船只提供交通便利。这则消息大大增强了公众对于南海公司的信心，连续好几年，它的股票炙手可热。

但是，西班牙的菲利普五世从来没有打算让英国在美洲的西班牙殖民地港口享受自由贸易。双方曾经着手谈判，但谈判的结果只是签订奴隶贸易特许条约。条约允许英国垄断美洲西班牙属殖民地的奴隶贸易30年；同时，允许英国每年有一艘商船和墨西哥、西班牙及秘鲁进行贸易，商船的吨位和货物价值都有严格的限定。后一个条款的实现须满足一条刚性条件，那就是西班牙国王享有1/4的利润，同时，对于剩下3/4的利润收取5%的所得税。这个结果让牛津伯爵和他的政党大失所望，这让他们想起“大山临盆，老鼠出世”[3]的故事，现实和希望的巨大落差让他们心灰意冷。但是，公众对南海公司的信心并未动摇。牛津伯爵随后宣布，除合约中规定的每年一艘的船舶外，西班牙允许第一年再加两艘商船；同时，还印发了沿途海岸所有港口的名单，并且高调宣布这些港口统统对大不列颠开放贸易。实际上，合约中规定的每年一次的商船直到1717年才进行第一次航行，而第二年的航行就因为和西班牙决裂而取消了。

国王在1717年议会的开幕式演讲中很明显地暗示了让人担忧的政府信用状态，并且提议采取适当的措施来减少国债。南海公司和英格兰银行这两个金融巨头紧接着在5月20号就对议会提出了建议。南海公司保证他们换购国债的股本可以通过认购或其他方式由1000万增加到1200万；而且，他们同意将年利率由6%降到5%。英格兰银行给出的有利条件也相当诱人。众议院争论了一段时间之后，出台了3个法案，分别是《南海公司法案》、《英格兰银行法案》和《通用基金法案》。在第一个法案中，议会接受了南海公司的提议，而公司也准备好预付增加的200万英镑以清偿安妮女王（Queen Anne）就任第9年和第10年所发行的4个奖券基金的本息。通过第二法案，英格兰同意降低政府欠它的1775027英镑15先令的利息；同意取消多达200万英镑的国库券；同意政府按5%的利率，每年向他们支付10万英镑的年金。同时，在一年期内，这些债券可由政府赎回。除此之外，政府还要求他们在急需的情况下以5%的利率预付不超过2500万英镑的债券，债券可由议会赎回。《通用基金法案》列举了几点缺陷，这些缺陷由前述的资源来完善。

南海公司的名字就是这样不断地出现在公众的视野中。虽然，他们和南美国家的贸易几乎甚至可以说根本没有提高他们的年收入；但是，这并不妨碍它作为一个金融公司继续蓬勃发展。公众对于公司股票的需求空前高涨。董事们受这种胜利景象的鼓舞，甚至开始考虑扩大他们影响的新方式。约翰·劳（John Law）那个曾经让法国人神魂颠倒的密西西比计划[4]给了他们灵感，他们认为在英国也可以玩同样的把戏。他们预料到约翰·劳必定失败的结局，却并没有因此而改变他们自己的计划。他们认为自己的计划足够聪明，可以避免约翰的错误，将这个计划永远进行下去，把信用的弦拉到极限，而且这根弦绝不会突然崩断。

约翰·劳的计划获得了大众极度的欢迎，成千上万的人蜂拥到甘康普瓦大街[5]上，用狂热亲手将自己毁灭。恰在此时，南海公司向议会提出他们著名的清偿国债计划。在欧洲两个最著名的国家，人们想象着无

尽的财富在他们迷醉的眼前漂来浮去。英国人的挥霍事业开始的要比法国人晚，但是这种狂热一旦抓住了他们，就注定其程度的不可超越。1720年1月22日，下议院转组为全院委员会来讨论国王在议会开幕式上涉及国债的演讲，以及南海公司有关偿还国债的提议。提议由几个董事制定，详细地阐述了有关国债的计划。根据提议，公司愿意以每年5%的利率承担30981712英镑的国债直到1727年。1727年之后，国债可由立法机构根据自己的意愿择时赎回，并且利率降到4%。这个提议很受欢迎；但是，英格兰银行在下议院中有很多的朋友，他们希望这个公司也可以在这些有可能产生的利益中分一杯羹。这些朋友代表这个公司，作了如下陈述：英格兰银行在国家处于危难时，曾作出了卓著的贡献，所以，如果这种性质的政府交易可以带来利益的话，相比于一个对国家无所作为的公司，他们至少应该优先受到青睐。对于事态的进一步商议因此推迟了5天。同时，银行的管理层起草了一份计划。因为害怕英格兰银行会给政府提供更优惠的条件，南海公司重新考虑了他们之前的提议，对它作了一些修改，并希望修改后的提议更容易让政府接受。一个重要的变化是，规定政府可以在4年后赎回债券，而非刚开始提出的7年。在这场非凡的竞拍中，银行也不甘服输，管理层又重新考虑了他们最初的提议并提交了更新版本。

这样，在每个公司提交了两份提议后，议院开始仔细考虑。罗伯特·沃波尔（Robert Walpole）是英格兰银行的主要拥护者，而财政大臣艾斯拉比（Aislabie）极力支持南海公司。2月2日，经讨论决定，后者的提议对国家更有利。南海公司的提议被通过了，同时，根据他们的提议，追加了相关法案。

交易所里热情高涨。公司的股票前一天还是130英镑，今天已稳步升到300英镑，然后在所追加法案的讨论期，以惊人的速度一路飙升。沃波尔先生几乎是议院中唯一大胆持反对意见的政府官员。他以极其严肃和富有说服力的语言警告他们可能随之而来的犯罪。他说，这个计划

纵容了“股票行业的危险操作，它让国家精英不再专心从事贸易和工业。它抛出了一个危险的诱饵，让毫无警戒心的人们用他们的劳动所得去换取想象中的财富，从而引诱他们走向毁灭。这个计划的原则可谓恶贯满盈。它通过唤起民众对财富的迷恋心理，以及根本没有足够的本金来保证的红利来人为地增加股票的面值”。他预言：如果计划成功了，公司董事将成为政府的主人，在王国形成全新的贵族统治，并控制立法机构。如果正如他所确信的那样，这个计划失败了，它将在全体民众中产生不满，并给整个国家带来伤害。这是所有人的一场幻梦。当厄运如期而至，人们终将如大梦初醒，不禁自问这一切是否是真的。他为这件事所费的口舌都是徒劳的。他被看成是虚伪的预言家，甚至被比喻成声音嘶哑难听的乌鸦，象征恶兆的嘎嘎叫声让人讨厌。而他的朋友却把他比作希腊神话中的凶事预言家卡珊德拉[6]：只有当不幸登门造访，在人们的家里和他们四目相对的时候，他们才会相信他的预言。虽然议院对他的一字一句都曾洗耳恭听，但是，当议员得知他要谈论南海公司的问题时，立即人去席空。

这个法案在下议院经历了两个月的讨论。在此期间，公司董事和他们的朋友们，尤其是董事会主席，著名的约翰·布朗特（John Blunt）爵士都不遗余力地想方设法提升股票价格。有关英国和西班牙之间签订一系列协议的荒谬流言史无前例地四处流传：西班牙赋予英国它所有殖民地的自由贸易权，波托西——拉——巴兹丰富的银矿将被源源不断地运送到英国，直到英国的银矿和铁一样丰富。墨西哥的居民将为我们倾空他们的金矿，因为我们将为他们提供丰富的棉花和羊毛产品。和南太平洋各国做生意的这个商人公司将成为有史以来最富有的公司，而对于它的股票持有人来说，他们所投资的每100英镑，每年都可以为他们带来几百甚至上千的利润。最后，股票的价格通过这种方式升到了近400英镑，波动了一段时间之后，稳定在330英镑，直到法案在众议院以172票赞成55票反对的比例通过。

法案在上议院以史无前例的速度通过了评审的各个阶段：4月4日第一次宣读，5日第二次宣读，6日交付委员会，7日第三次宣读并通过。

在上议院的讨论中，几位议员强烈反对这个计划，但是人们对他们的警告置若罔闻。一种对投机的狂热迷住了众多议员和普通民众的心。诺斯（North）勋爵和格雷（Grey）说，这个计划旨令少数人富有、陷多数人于贫困，在性质上是不公平的，必然会导致致命的后果。沃顿（Wharton）公爵随后也发了言；但是，因为他只不过是口若悬河地二手兜售沃波尔在下议院提出的观点，他所得到的关注还不及诺斯勋爵和格雷得到的多。考珀（Cowper）伯爵也持同样的立场，他把这个法案比作围攻特洛伊时那匹举世闻名的木马。就像那匹木马一样，人们欢呼雀跃着以无比华丽的场面迎接它，但是，它所带来的却只有背叛和毁灭。桑德兰（Sunderland）伯爵努力回应所有的异议；法案一经提出，只有17名议员持反对意见，83名完全赞成这个计划。就在这个计划在上议院通过的当天，它获得了皇室的同意，成为这个岛国的法律。

顷刻间，全民都成为了股票经纪人。股票交易所天天人满为患，康希尔也被数不清的马车挤得水泄不通。每个人都来购买股票。“每个傻瓜都梦想升级为流氓。”这是当时出版的一个民谣的歌词，在大街小巷里到处传唱：

明星和嘉德勋位获得者

混迹于乌合之众；

他们疯狂地买卖着股票，

还对犹太人和异族人的争吵

喜闻乐见。

最高贵的贵妇也闻风而来，

不辞辛苦，天天乘着马车奔忙，

或者忍痛割爱，把珠宝典当，

原来是为购得股票才这般疯狂。

社会各阶层在对赚钱近乎病态的渴望中备受煎熬。即使在南海公司内部，发财的欲望也同样不可遏制。一系列史上最令人眼花缭乱的阴谋诡计在南海公司一一出炉了。股市行情表被迅速地填满，一笔笔交易在不断地进行；与此同时，南海公司不择手段地哄抬这些股票的市场价格，使其达到一个虚高的水平。

与众人的期望背道而驰，在法案获得皇室的同意后，南海公司的股票价格开始下跌。4月7日的报价是310英镑，第二天就降到了290英镑。董事们已经尝到他们计划的甜头了，所以，他们不可能坐视股票降到它真实的水平而无动于衷。顷刻间，他们的使者们开始奔忙。每一个希望计划成功的人都在他的周围召集一群听众，对他们详细讲述南美各个海洋国家的丰富宝藏。股票交易所里挤满了侧耳倾听的人们。一个谎言，仅仅是因为它以极度自信的方式被讲述出来，便对股票市场产生了立竿见影的影响。据说斯坦霍普（Stanhope）伯爵在法国已经收到了西班牙政府的提议，提议的内容是：为了扩张英国在南太平洋地区的贸易并保证其安全，西班牙政府愿意用直布罗陀海峡和马翁港来交换秘鲁海岸的一些地方。一年只能有一艘贸易船只到那些港口，并允许西班牙国王抽取利润的25%的日子一去不复返了。南海公司可以随心所欲地造船、租船，而且无需向任何外国君主交付任何比例的利润。“人们幻想着元宝在眼前飞舞”，股市一路攀升。4月12日，在上议院通过此法案的第五天，公司管理层以300%的溢价发行了100万新股，每股面值100英镑，售价300英镑。社会各阶层人士蜂拥而至，以至于第一次的股票认购数

量就达200多万原始股。对于每股面值为100英镑的原始股，他们可以分5次付款，每次60英镑。几天之内，股票又飙升到340英镑，认购股票以2倍于首次认购的价格售出。为了进一步提升股票的价格，董事常设会议于4月21日宣布，凡认购仲夏季节发行股票的股民，均可享受10%的红利。这些决议达到了预设的目的，随后，为进一步提高有钱人购买股票的欲望，公司管理层决定以400%的溢价再发行100万股。每一个阶层的人们对这笔资金是如此地热望，以至于几小时内150多万股就被以上述价格认购一空。

同时，数不清的股份公司在各地纷纷成立。这些公司迅即获得了“泡沫”的称号，这是人类想象力所能找到的最合适的词语了。公众总是对使用绰号情有独钟。没有哪个词能比“泡沫”更适合了。有些公司持续了一周，有些两周，然后就音信全无了；而其他的甚至连这个时间长度也持续不了。每天晚上都有新的计划，每天早上都有新的项目。对于利润的狂热追求，贵族的最高层丝毫不亚于康希尔最单调乏味的股票经纪人。威尔士的王子成了一个公司的管理者，并且，据说他通过投机买卖净赚4万英镑。布里奇沃特公爵开启了一个改善伦敦和威斯敏斯特的项目，尚多斯公爵开办了另一个项目。大约有100个不同的项目，一个比一个夸张，一个比一个具有欺骗性。用官方的语言说，这些项目“由狡猾的流氓开办并推销，由贪婪而愚蠢的乌合之众追捧，最终的结果只是证明它们看起来正如它们那个粗俗的称谓所表示的那样——泡沫和欺骗”。据计算，在这些不正当的操作中，有150万英镑被赚取和亏损；一群傻瓜变得一贫如洗，一群流氓变得腰缠万贯。

这些计划中有一些看起来似乎还是可行的。如果人们是在头脑没有发热的情况下进行这些计划，或许参与的各方都会有收益。但是，这些计划设立的目的仅仅是为了增加市场上的股票。这些公司的发起人运用第一次发迹的机会将股票一卖而空；然后，第二天，计划迅即结束。梅特兰（Maitland）在他的《伦敦史》（History of London）中很严肃地告

诉我们，一个受到极大鼓励的计划实际上是要建立一个“用木屑做廉价木板”的公司。这无疑是一个笑话；但是，有足够的证据证明，许许多多的、一点都不合理的计划，昙花一现般消失了，并且在它们消失之前毁掉了成百上千的人。在众多的计划当中，有一个是生产永动轮的——资本金为100万；另一个是“鼓励在英国喂马，改善教会或教堂的土地，修缮并重建牧师住所”。本来应该对后者感兴趣的牧师却对前者青睐有加。对于这个现象的解释只能是：这个计划是由曾经在英国很常见的一群热衷于猎狐的教区牧师设计的。这个公司的股票很快就被认购了。在所有开设的公司中，最荒谬的、最可笑的、最能将人们的极度疯狂暴露无遗的是一个由一位不知名的冒险者开办的，名为“进行获取暴利事业的公司，但没有人知道它是什么”。如果不是有许多目击者确实可靠的陈述，很难有人相信竟然会有人被这样的项目欺骗。这位大胆而成功地利用了公众易骗性的天才只是在他的创办计划书中说所需本金是50万英镑；为此，他们发行5000股面值100英镑的股票，每份股票的保证金是2英镑，每一个认购者在付保证金之后，每年每股可获得100英镑的利润。这笔巨大的利润是如何获得的，那时，他没有屈尊告诉公众；但是他许诺说，1个月以后将披露所有的细节，并且要求补交未支付的98英镑。第二天一早9点钟，这位天才在康希尔开设了办公室。成群的人围在他的门口，下午3点打烊的时候，他发现有3000多股票被认购，而且保证金已付。这样，在5小时内，他赚了2000英镑。他对自己的冒险事业十分满意，并且，很明智地当天晚上就去了欧洲。从此，杳无音信。

斯威夫特（Swift）把股票交易所比作南太平洋里的一个海湾，他高呼道：

认购者成千上万地漂浮在这里

你推我挤

每个人都奋力划着漏船

他们来钓金子，结果却被淹死

一会儿，被深深地淹在下面，

一会儿，又冲上云霄，

他们来来回回，步履蹒跚，

几乎丧失了理智，就像醉鬼一样

同时，在加罗伟的悬崖峭壁上，安然地，

躺着一个以遇难船只为生的野蛮民族，

他们等待着，破漏的小船来临，

等待着，掠夺死难者的财物。

另一个成功的骗局是一种叫作“环球许可证”的东西。这些许可证只不过是方形的扑克牌，牌上有蜡质的印章，印章上刻有位于交易所大街附近的环球酒馆的符号以及“帆布许可证”这几个文字。许可证的拥有者仅仅是享有未来某个时刻认购一个新的帆布工厂股票的权利。有关工厂的创办者，当时只知道是个很有钱的人；但是，后来这个人卷入了南海公司董事贪污和被罚的案件。就是这些许可证竟然在交易所售得60基尼[7]。

人们陷在这些泡沫里四处奔忙，不分贵贱，无论男女。先生们走进酒馆和咖啡馆约见他们的股票经纪人；女士们为了同样的目的穿梭于各个帽子店。但是，实际上这些人并不是都相信他们认购股票的项目的可行性；他们的目的就是他们的股票可以通过股票经营的技巧增值，然后，再把这些股票以最快的速度卖给那些真正轻信的人；对于他们来说，这一个目的就足够了。股票交易所里的人群是如此混乱，以至于同

一个泡沫公司的股票在同一时间，在交易所一端的售价比另一端要高10%。理智的人们悲悯而惊恐地看着人们这种非同寻常的迷恋。议会内外都曾有人清晰地预言行将发生的毁灭。沃波尔先生一直没有停止他悲观的预感。他的担忧为少数几个还能理智思考的人所共有，而且，这份担忧深刻地影响了政府的决策。在6月11日议会休会之日，国王发布公告，宣布所有这些不合法公司都严重妨害了公众利益，所以，应对其提起公诉；同时，禁止任何股票经纪人从这些公司再买卖股票，否则罚款500英镑。但是，那些无耻的投机者无视公告的颁布，一如既往地进行他们的罪恶活动，那些被蒙蔽的人们也依旧在推波助澜。7月12日，聚集在枢密院的上议院法官们发布了一条命令，命令拒绝所有专利和特许权的申请，并解散所有的泡沫公司。法官命令的副本包括了所有这些不法公司的名单。在人人都着迷股票的今天，这个命令也不是毫无趣味的：

1720年7月12日，在白厅会议室里，

与会的诸位上议院大法官阁下提出。

与会的诸位上议院大法官阁下对这些公司给公众带来的诸多麻烦进行了仔细的考量。这些公司为了不同的目的，以股份制的形式成立，为了让公众和他们并肩作战，他们向公众保证他们对专利和特许权的申请肯定能获得批准；国王的臣民们就是被这种虚假的保证所骗，而后和他们的金钱诀别。为了阻止这种欺骗行动，诸位阁下命令把提到的几份申请，以及申请之后商业局和国王的律师及副检察长的报告，一同放到他们面前进行讨论。经过深思熟虑，根据国王枢密院的建议，诸位阁下决定拒绝所有提到的申请，这些申请具体如下：

1.几个人的申请：以“大不列颠宏大渔业”的名义申请进行渔业贸易的专利特许证。

2.“英格兰皇家渔业公司的申请”：申请有利于进一步发展所谓渔业的权力的专利特许证。

3.乔治·詹姆斯的申请，代表他自己及其他涉猎渔业的不同名流：申请能够让他们组建公司，同时进行贸易的专利特许证。

4.几名商人及几位署名者的申请：申请为了恢复并发展格陵兰岛及其他地方的捕鲸业而成立公司。

5.约翰·兰伯特及其他几位署名人士的申请，代表他们自己及其他为数不少的商人：申请为了发展格陵兰岛贸易，尤其发展戴维斯海峡的捕鲸业，成立公司。

6.另外一个有关格陵兰贸易的申请。

7.几位商人、绅士和市民的申请：申请为购买、建造用于出租或货运的轮船而成立公司。

8.塞缪尔·安特里姆和其他几人的申请：申请种植大麻和亚麻的专利特许证。

9.几位商人、轮船主、航海者，及帆布制造商的申请：申请成立公司的特许权，以便让他们能够以股份制的形式继续发展和促进上述制造业。

10.托马斯·柏一德、几百位商人、轮船主、航海者、织工，及其他商业人员的申请：申请成立公司的特许权，特许他们为了生产帆布、优质荷兰亚麻布购地筹资。

11.对已故威廉国王和玛丽王后所批准的特权有兴趣的几位人士的申请：为了制造亚麻布和帆布，政府不得给予任何人——无论身份和地

位——特许权，保证他们现在拥有的权利，而且还应再赋予他们棉以及棉丝制品的生产权。

12.几位市民、商人、伦敦经商者，以及英国股票的认购者和其他一些人的申请：为了避免在英国任何一个地方发生火灾，申请成立公司。

13.伦敦及大不列颠其他地方的几位对国王忠心耿耿的臣民的申请：为避免在英国国内因火灾而造成的损失，申请成立公司。

14.托马斯·伯吉斯，以及其他署名的国王臣民，代表他们自己以及其他认购120万英镑基金的人们的申请：为了开展国王在他的德国领土上的贸易，以哈尔伯公司的名义申请成立公司。

15.一个木材经销商，爱德华·琼斯代表他自己及其他人的申请：申请为了从德国进口木材而组建公司。

16.几个伦敦商人的申请：为开展盐业，申请公司经营特许权。

17.兼做商人的伦敦麦克菲迪斯上尉，代表他自己以及几位商人、呢绒商、帽商、染布商的申请：申请公司经营特许权，以便让他们能够募集足够的资金买地，种植培育一种叫作茜草的植物，供染布商使用。

18.伦敦鼻烟制造商约瑟夫·加仑多的申请：为他所发明的如何在弗吉尼亚以及国王所有的领土上，让弗吉尼亚烟草变得适合制成鼻烟的方法申请专利。

泡沫名单

在同一条法令中，下面的泡沫公司被宣布为非法并予以取缔：

1.瑞典铁进口公司。

2.为伦敦提供海运煤炭的公司。资本金：300万。

3.在全英国新建以及重修房屋公司。资本金：300万。

4.棉布制作公司。

5.发展并提高英国铝制品公司。

6.开发布兰科和萨尔·塔哥塔斯岛定居点的公司。

7.给迪尔镇提供淡水资源的公司。

8.进口弗兰德斯花边的公司。

9.改善大不列颠土地状况的公司。资本金：400万。

10.鼓励在英国养马、改善教堂和教会土地质量、新建以及重修牧师住宅公司。

11.大不列颠钢铁制造公司。

12.改善弗林特郡土地状况公司。资本金：100万。

13.购买土地用来建造房屋的公司。资本金：200万。

14.毛发贸易公司。

15.在霍利岛建立盐制品公司。资本金：200万。

16.房地产买卖，以及按揭贷款公司。

17.进行一项十分盈利的事业，但没人知道是什么的公司。

18.铺设伦敦街道公司。资本金：200万。

19.在大不列颠任何一个地方提供葬礼的公司。

20.土地买卖及有息贷款公司。资本金：500万。

21.大不列颠皇家渔业公司。资本金：1000万。

22.确保海员工资安全公司。

23.为需要帮助的人建立贷款办公室，并鼓励勤勉者的公司。资本金：200万。

24.购买并改善可出租土地公司。资本金：400万。

25.从大不列颠北部及美国进口沥青、柏油，及其他松脂制品的公司。

26.服饰、毡布及波形瓦贸易公司。

27.购买并改善埃塞克斯的一个庄园并获得其矿藏开采权的公司。

28.马匹保险公司。资本金：200万。

29.出口羊毛制品，并进口铜、黄铜以及铁的公司。资本金：400万。

30.建立一个宏伟的救治站的公司。资本金：300万。

31.建立工厂，并购买铅矿的公司。资本金：200万。

32.改进肥皂制造技术公司。

33.有关在圣克鲁兹岛定居事业的公司。

34.在德比郡挖矿井，以及精炼铅矿的公司。

35.制作玻璃瓶子及其他玻璃制品的公司。

36.生产永动轮的公司。资本金：100万。

37.改善花园公司。

38.保证并提高儿童的财富的公司。

39.在海关装货以及为商人协商贸易的公司。

40.在英格兰北部进行羊毛生产的公司。

41.从弗吉尼亚进口胡桃树的公司，资本金：200万。

42.用线和棉花制作有曼彻斯特特色材料的公司。

43.制造具有雅法[8]和卡斯提尔[9]特色的肥皂的公司。

44.改善这个王国的钢铁制造业的公司。资本金：400万。

45.进行花边、荷兰麻布、麻纱，以及细麻等交易的公司。资本金：200万。

46.负责这个王国生产的某些商品的交易和改善以及其他方面的公司。资本金：300万。

47.为伦敦市场提供牲畜的公司。

48.制作穿衣镜、马车镜以及其他种类镜子的公司。资本金：200万。

49.在康沃尔和德比郡加工锡矿和铅矿的公司。

50.生产油菜油的公司。

51.进口海狸皮的公司。资本金：200万。

52.生产厚纸板和包装纸的公司。

53.进口在羊毛制造业中所需要的油及其他材料的公司。

54.改进丝织业并提高产量的公司。

55.以股票、养老金、记账以及其他的方式借钱的公司。

56.以小额折扣，向寡妇及其他人发放津贴的公司。资本金：200万。

57.改进麦芽酒公司。资本金：400万。

58.建立宏伟的美国渔业公司。

59.购买并改善林肯郡沼泽地的公司。资本金：200万。

60.改进大不列颠纸制造业的公司。

61.冒险借贷公司。

62.用热空气烘干麦芽的公司。

63.要在奥鲁诺克河上进行贸易的公司。

64.在科尔切斯特及大不列颠的其他地方，更有效地制作粗呢的公司。

65.购买松脂制品、提供粮食，并为工人发工资的公司。

66.雇佣贫穷的技工，为商人及其他人提供保镖的公司。

67.提高耕作质量，改善牲畜品种的公司。

68.另一个改善马匹育种的公司。

69.又一个为马投保的公司。

70.开展大不列颠谷物贸易的公司。

71.为所有的佣人可能给男女主人带来的损失投保的公司。资本金：300万。

72.建立房屋和医院，接收和抚养私生子的公司。资本金：200万。

73.不用火，不用损失材料的粗糖漂白公司。

74.在大不列颠建立收费关卡和收费码头的公司。

75.针对盗窃和抢劫的保险公司。

76.从铅中提取银的公司。

77.制作瓷器和荷兰代夫特陶器的公司。资本金：100万。

78.进口烟草，然后，再把它出口到瑞典和北欧的公司。资本金：400万。

79.用煤矿井制铁的公司。

80.给伦敦和威斯敏斯特提供干草和稻草的公司，资本金：300万。

81.在爱尔兰制作帆布和包装布的公司。

82.生产压舱物的公司。

83.购买并装配镇压海盗的船只的公司。

84.从威尔士进口木材的公司。资本金：200万。

85.岩盐制作公司。

86.把水银转换成可锻造的纯金属的公司。

除了这些泡沫公司外，天天都有大批新的公司涌现，政府的指责和理智者的嘲弄都丝毫不起作用。印刷所里满是对这些铺天盖地的蠢事的讽刺画，报纸上也都是极具讽刺意味的名言警句。有一个天才的扑克牌制造商发行了一套南海公司的扑克牌，这种扑克牌现在已经很少见了。每一张牌上除了通常的数字外，在一个角上，有一个小尺寸的泡沫公司的讽刺画，并且在讽刺画的下面配有相应的诗句。生产圆形和方形炮弹和子弹的帕扣机器公司完全颠覆了战争的形式，是著名的泡沫公司之一。它迎合公众口味的虚伪和做作言行在黑桃8这张牌上，做了如下总结：

稀世发明，毁灭了

国内的傻瓜，而不是国外的。

但是，我的朋友不要担心，

这个可恶的机器，

只有在这个机器上有股份的人才会受到伤害。

红心9是讽刺英国黄铜公司的漫画，并配有下面的警句：

那个鲁莽的傻瓜，想做金银交易，

却换来了英国的黄铜，

在交易所里，他的愚蠢会被证明，

用贵重的金属换来掺假的烂铜。

方块8用下面的打油诗讽刺殖民阿卡迪亚的公司：

有个愚蠢的富人想一掷千金，

挥霍之地选在北美；

让他去认购股票吧！

只有傻瓜才不会将他耻笑！

每副扑克牌以类似的方式揭露那些欺诈的计划，并嘲笑那些上当受骗的人。据计算，进行这些计划的总资金应超过3亿英镑。

然而，是时候回到之前的话题，继续讲讲吞没了成千上万贪婪者与轻信者的财富的南海公司。5月29日，股价上升到500英镑，2/3的领取政府养老金的人把国债券换成了南海公司的股票。整个5月份，股价持续上升，28号的报价是550英镑。4天之后，股价惊人地从550英镑飙升到890英镑。此时此刻，公众普遍认为股价不会继续上升，所以，许多人利用这个机会卖出，以期实现他们的利润。坐在火车里陪国王去汉诺威的许多贵族及其他人也都急于卖出。6月3日在交易所里，卖家蜂拥而至，买家屈指可数。就这样，股价一下子从890降到了640。董事们震惊了，命令他们的代理人去购买。他们的努力成功了。傍晚时分，信心回

升，股价又升到了750英镑。随后股价稳定下来，仅有小幅波动，直到公司于6月22日休市。

没有必要也没有趣味去详细描述董事们用于提升股价的不同技巧。根据8月初的报价，股票的价格最终抬升至原来的10倍，阐明这一点便足以说明一切。泡沫涨到了极限，开始了破裂前的颤抖和摇晃。

许多领取政府年金的人表达了对董事们的不满，指责他们在股票认购的同时列示股份清单的做法。当公众得知董事长约翰·布朗特爵士已经全部卖出的时候，更大的不安发生了。整个8月，股价一直下跌，到9月2日，报价只有700英镑。

情况变得十分令人担忧。为了防止公众对他们的事业完全丧失信心，董事们于9月8日在泰勒商人大厅召开全公司参加的常规会议。上午九点钟，房间人满为患。齐普赛街上挤满了无法进入房间的人，人群里的激动情绪无法抑制。董事们和他们的朋友们群集在那里。副董事长约翰·弗罗斯爵士被叫到了董事的位置。他向公众解释了他们开会的原因，宣读了董事会的几项决定，并陈述了他们的计划：他们要收回可赎回及不可赎回基金，以及以现金认购股票。秘书长克莱格斯作了简短的演讲，在演讲中他肯定了董事们的做法，并且强调说内部团结是完善计划最有效的方式。演讲结束时，他表达了对董事会的谢意。感谢他们谨慎而有技巧的管理，并希望他们继续以这种方式管理公司以达到公司利益最大化。代表南海公司利益的亨格福德先生在下议院出尽了风头；人们认为他知道卖出股票的正确时机，是个不折不扣的赢家；因此，在今天这个场合，他不免夸夸其谈。他说他见过大风大浪，许多集团沉浮起落；但是，在他看来，没有任何一个团体能像南海公司那样，在那么短的时间内将事情做得那么完美。他们的所作所为超过了王室、教会和法院。他们把所有不同团体的利益统一起来；虽然没有做到完全消灭，但是他们平息了这个民族所有的人与人之间的矛盾和敌意。在他们的股票

增长的过程中，有钱人的财富急剧增长；乡绅看到他们土地的价值在他们的手里双倍甚至三倍地增长。同时，他们的事业也让教堂受益匪浅，很多尊敬的牧师也通过这个计划得到了大笔财富。总之，他们让整个国家都富了起来；此外，他还说他希望这些人不要忘了同时也让自己富有起来。在此番演讲的后半部分，人群中发出不屑一顾的嘶嘶声，无疑是对这种过度赞扬的讽刺。但是，董事们和他们的朋友们，以及在这间屋子里的所有的赢利者都给予了热烈的掌声。波特兰公爵也随声附和，并且对于有些人不满意这个事实表达出极大的震惊。当然他通过投机赚了钱，这种情形简直就是重现了那个老掉牙的笑话：一个胖议员在酒足饭饱之后总是习惯把手放在自己的大肚子上，然后对天下竟然还有饥荒表示出极大的怀疑。

会上通过了几项决议，但是这些决议都对公众毫无影响。在同一天晚上，股票跌到了650；翌日，跌到了540。它的股票就这样一天天跌下去，直到400。9月13日，国会议员布罗德里克先生写给米德尔顿大法官一封信，这封信后来在考克斯沃波尔出版社发表。信中，国会议员说："有关为什么南海公司的董事们那么早就笼罩在破产的阴云的猜想各式各样。我可以肯定的是，只要是他们觉得有利可图的事，他们肯定会去做。他们对信用的过度使用超出了它的承受范围，最终，信用状况极度恶化，储备货币已难以支撑。最举足轻重的人退出了，保证了自己资金的安全；而那些被欺骗的头脑简单的大众却全都血本无归。这些人的思想被贪欲控制，他们希望金钱的小土丘可以变成高耸入云的大山。成千上万的家庭沦为赤贫。惊愕无法表达，愤怒难以名状。整个事情让人绝望透顶。我从来没有见过专门为转嫁危机而制定计划，所以，我不得不猜测下一步要做什么。"10天之后，股价持续下跌，他写道："公司还没有作出决定，因为他们身处丛林之中，不知何去何从。通过最近来镇上的几位绅士，我观察到'南海公司人'这个名字本身在各个国家已经为人们深恶痛绝。很多金匠已经被迫逃跑了，而且每天都继续有更多的人在逃跑。我怀疑他们当中是否有1/3，不，1/4的人能够经受得住这场

灾难。从一开始，我对整个事态的判断建立在那个毫无疑问的原则基础之上，即，1000万现金（这个数字已经远远超过经济运行中的实际现金总额）难以支撑2000万的实体经济正常运转，否则，纸币的信用状况就会恶化。所以，无论何时，只要这一点变得不确定，无论原因如何，我们尊贵的国家机器必会摔得粉身碎骨。”

9月12日，在秘书长克莱格斯的恳求下，南海公司的董事们和银行的董事们举行了几次会议。据传，英国银行同意购买南海公司600万债券，这一消息导致股票急升到670；但是，在下午，人们得知这个消息并不靠谱；于是，股票又跌到了580，第二天570，然后渐渐跌到了400。[10]

政府内阁对事态的发展极为震惊。人们诅咒出现在街头的每一个公司董事，以宣泄心中的愤怒，政府担心时刻都有爆发动乱的危险。特使被派到汉诺威急请国王返回。南海公司派人去请当时在乡间别墅休假的沃波尔先生，希望他利用自己在英格兰银行的董事中的影响力，劝说他们接受为南海公司发行一些债券的建议。

英格兰银行十分不情愿搅进南海公司这摊浑水，因为它害怕让自己陷入无法逃脱的灾难；因此，对于收到的所有提议，它明确表示了自己不情愿的态度；但是，全国上下一致呼吁它出手相救。所有的商界名人都被召来商议如何应对眼下的紧急情况。最后，由沃波尔先生草拟合同作为进一步协商的基础。至此，公众的惊慌才稍微有所平息。

第二天，也就是9月20日，南海公司在泰勒商人大厅召开股东大会，会议作出了几项决定。决定授权董事们与英格兰银行或其他人，就发行公司债券一事达成协议；或者，和银行达成他们认为合适的其他协议。一位叫普尔特尼的先生说，最让人震惊的就是笼罩人们的极度恐慌情绪。人们在惊慌和恐惧中来回奔走，他们的想象中充满了灾难，而这个灾难的形式和规模却无人知晓：

像夜晚，漆黑无边——

像怒火，熊熊燃烧——

像地狱，让人毛骨悚然。

两天后，英国银行举行了股东大会。会上，董事长通知了有关南海公司事件的几次会议的内容，并且指出，董事们还未就此事达成一致意见。会上提出一项决议，并获得一致通过。决议授权董事们与南海公司达成协议，为其发行债券。发行的数量、条件和时间由银行董事们自行掌握。

这样，双方都得以按照他们认为对公众最有利的方式行事。为恢复政府信誉，英格兰银行以15%的定金、3%的保险费和5%的利息认购300万英镑南海公司债券。一大早，人们带着钱急切地赶到广场上，人数之多让人认为债券会被一抢而空。但是，中午前，形势逆转。尽管为防止股票继续下跌作出了所有的努力，但是，南海公司的股票还是急剧下降。他们的债券已没有任何信誉。一些有名的金匠和银行家担心以南海公司股票的形式贷出的巨大款项无法变现，现在不得不关门避债，溜之大吉。南海公司一直以来的承兑商剑锋公司也停止付款。然而，这仅仅是不幸的开端。银行也挤满了兑现的人群，付钱的速度远远快于它上午发售债券时收钱的速度。因为接下来的一天是休息日（9月29日），银行才有稍作喘息的机会。英格兰银行勇敢地面对风暴，但是，他们的前对手南海公司，却被这场暴风雨摧毁了。他们的股票降到了150；而且，渐渐地，几经波动之后，降到了135。

银行发现他们无法恢复公众的信念，也无法阻止毁灭的潮流；所以，为了避免和他们意欲救助的对象一起被彻底毁灭的风险，他们拒绝实施他们本已开始介入的协议。他们没有任何义务，因为，所谓的银行合同只不过是草拟的协议而已。协议中的几项重要细节尚未确定，而

且，协议条款中没有针对银行退出行为的惩罚项。杂志《议会历史》这样形容当时的情形：“就这样，在8个月的时间内，人们目睹了这个庞然大物的崛起、兴盛和倒塌。它由一根上足发条的神秘弹簧带到令人炫目的高空，吸引了整个欧洲的眼球和期待；但是，它的地基建立在欺骗、幻觉、轻信和痴迷之上，这就决定了董事们的阴谋诡计一旦暴露，整座建筑必定顷刻坍塌。”

在南海计划如日中天的时候，在这个危险的欺骗进行的过程中，全国上下礼义廉耻顿失。议会着手调查行为不轨者，以揭露恶行的真相；而这，无论是对于犯罪者的道德标准，还是对于滋生恶行的人的智力水平，都是一种侮辱。探讨恶果是一项很有趣的研究。就像人一样，一个国家如果成为了孤注一掷的赌徒，它必会受到惩罚，惩罚的到来只不过是或迟或早的事而已。一位享有盛名的作家斯莫利特说：“这是一个不讨历史学家喜欢的年代。这些交易的细节不能给那些多情而充满想象力的读者带来任何激情或兴趣；因为，这些交易里没有温暖、没有色彩，也没有装饰。这些细节所展示的无非是一幅充满没滋没味的恶行和卑鄙低劣的堕落的单调画卷。”然而，他说错了，事实恰恰相反。如果斯莫利特曾经身临其境的话，他一定会发现这一点——这个主题对于人们兴趣的激发甚至能够满足小说家的渴望。在被掠夺的人的绝望里，难道没有温暖吗？在由成千上万个因此变得赤贫，并被毁灭的家庭的苦难绘就的画卷里，没有生机和活力吗？昨日膏粱，今日乞丐；昨日位高权重，今日流浪街头；每一个角落里都回响着自责和诅咒之声。所有的这一切都毫无生机可言吗？一个民族突然间全体摆脱了理智的束缚，向着一个金灿灿的前景狂奔，并且固执地拒绝承认这个前景是不存在的；直到，就像一只追逐鬼火的小鹿一样，陷入沼泽地，无法自拔。这个场景很枯燥，很没有教育意义吗？然而，历史就是在这种错误思想的指导下写就的。历史学家绞尽脑汁、极尽巧言之能事，一遍遍描述不称职的朝臣使用伎俩获得更不称职的国王的欢心；或者，不厌其烦地重复战斗围攻的凶残场面；而那些真正深刻影响人们的道德行为和生活福祉的事情，却

被他们忽略了。这些事情只被当作枯燥无趣，没有任何温暖和色彩的材料搁置脑后了。

在这个举世闻名的泡沫经济时代，英国呈现出了一幅非同寻常的景象。公众的头脑处于病态的高涨状态。人们不再满足于通过脚踏实地的辛勤劳动去获得稳定的利益。对于明天无尽财富的希望让今天的他们变得这样没头没脑和骄奢淫逸。伴随前所未闻的奢华而来的是道德的放纵。那些由赌博获胜而一夜暴富的文盲摆出一副不可一世的样子。这让那些无论思想还是举止都极具绅士风度的人感到很羞耻，因为他突然意识到黄金竟然可以让身份卑微、品性恶劣之人骤然变得貌似尊贵。理查德·斯蒂尔爵士称这群人为“精打细算的平民”。他们的傲慢在霉运来临之时成为对自己不利的因素。在议会调查的过程中，董事们往往因其傲慢而非侵吞公款，受到惩罚。在这些愚蠢之极的富人当中，有一个曾经以不可一世的傲慢神情说他要拿金子喂他的马，结果却沦落到了只能拿水和面包勉强充饥的地步。每一个傲慢的表情和每一番盛气凌人的言谈都被毫不留情地压制下去，还之以百倍的贫穷和侮辱。

全国的事态让人惊恐不已。乔治一世不得不提前结束了在汉诺威的访问，匆匆赶回英国。他11月11日到达，议会于12月8日召开。同时，公众集会在全国所有的重要城镇召开。会议通过了人们请立法机构惩罚南海公司董事的请求，原因是这些董事用欺诈行为将整个国家带到了毁灭的边缘。没有人会想到国家本身和南海公司的罪责其实相同；没有人去指责大众的轻信和贪婪——这个让人堕落的获取欲吞噬了国民性格中所有的高贵品质；也没有人去指责大众的痴迷，这种痴迷情绪让他们义无反顾地、疯狂而急切地一头扎进诡计多端的谋划者为他们准备好的网。这些因素从未被人提起。所有的故事只是，民众是淳朴的、朴实的、勤勉的；他们被一伙强盗毁灭了；所以，这伙强盗要毫不留情地被绞死、被开膛破肚、被车裂。

这种感觉几乎笼罩了全国上上下下所有的人。议会两院并没有作出比公众更理智的判断。在南海公司董事的罪责明确之前，惩罚是唯一能够听得到的呐喊。国王登上御座发表庄重的演讲，他希望找到走出苦难的出路并马上付诸实施；而做到这一点，必须要谨慎小心、冷静沉着并且坚决果断。在回应国王讲话的辩论中，几位发言人对设计南海计划的董事们极尽辱骂之能事。莫尔斯沃思勋爵的言辞尤其激烈，“有人说没有法律来惩罚那些制造国家灾难的南海公司的董事。在他看来，在这件事情的处理上，他们应该效法古罗马。在古罗马，没有惩罚弑父杀母罪的法律，因为立法者不相信会有让罪恶之手沾满父亲鲜血的不孝之子。当这个罪行出现的时候，他们立即制定了相关法律来惩罚这种滔天罪行。他们把这个十恶不赦的罪恶之子放在扎紧口的麻袋里，然后，把他活活扔进台伯河。他认为罪恶的南海计划的策划者和执行者就是国家的杀父仇人，他必要亲眼看到他们以同样的方式被装进麻袋，扔进泰晤士河，方解心头之恨。其他人员的讲话一样没有节制且缺乏考虑。沃波尔先生的讲话要理智得多。他建议说当务之急是恢复政府信誉：“如果伦敦着火了，所有的聪明人肯定都是先急着救火，以防止火势蔓延，然后再去找纵火犯。政府信誉已经被刺得遍体鳞伤，鲜血淋漓，所以，人们应该尽快地给予治疗。惩罚刺客的事情稍后进行，时间完全来得及。”12月9日，就回应国王演讲的请愿陈词，人们达成了一致意见。陈词中特别补充并强调了如下内容：众议院不仅要寻求治愈国家灾难的良方，更要惩罚始作俑者。

调查进展迅速。众议院勒令董事们详细交代他们计划进程的每一个细节，最终，达成了一致意见并作出决定，即，灾难的产生源于股票经纪人卑鄙下流的手段，制定法律来阻止这种龌龊行为的再次发生是恢复政府信誉的最佳途径。这时，沃波尔先生起身说，正像他先前暗示的那样，他花了一些时间来研究恢复政府信誉的计划，但是这个计划的成功实施必须以一个条件作为基础。他认为，在他公布计划之前，他还是要首先确定他是否有这个可以依赖的基础条件。这个条件就是：在当前情

况下，原来和南海公司签署的国债申购单、不动产申购单、货币申购单以及其他相关合约是否仍旧具有法律效力？这个问题引起了激烈的讨论。最后，以259比117的比例通过决议——这些合同仍旧有效，只有在以解脱持有者为目的的情况下，可以由南海公司董事会更改，或者通过法定程序撤销。第二天，沃波尔先生就向众议院展示了他恢复政府信誉的计划。他的计划的本质就是在一定的条件下把南海公司900万的股票转给英格兰银行，把同样数目的股票转给东印度公司。这个计划得到了众议院的一致赞成。几乎毫无异议，众议院要求两大公司对此事作出回应并拿出具体计划。它们都不愿伸出援助之手，在以商讨此事为目的召集的董事会上，援助计划遭遇了比较激烈的反对，但是反对无效。他们最终同意了发行南海公司债券的计划。他们的报告一经呈现给委员会，相应法案立即成立；在沃波尔先生的监督下，法案在议会两院顺利通过。

同时，委员会还提交了一项法案。法案禁止南海公司的董事、董事长、副董事长、财政主管、出纳员以及所有职员在12个月内离开英国；另外，法案还规定查明他们的房产和财产以防他们将其转移或转让。众议院最有影响的议员均支持本项法案。希彭先生相信克莱格斯部长和南海公司事件有染的传闻；所以，当他看到克莱格斯部长先生在他的座位上的时候，就决定要触其要害。他说他很高兴看到大不列颠众议院又恢复了往日的精神和元气，又可以全体一心一意地为公众福祉服务了。限制南海公司董事和官员并收押财产是必要的，“但是，”他补充道，“身居高位的其他人和南海公司的董事们一样罪孽深重，而他会在合适的时候直言不讳地指出这个人的名字。”克莱格斯先生怒不可遏，他站起来说如果这种冷嘲热讽之语是针对他而言，他将给质问他的人以满意的答复，无论是在议院内还是议院外。恢复秩序的呼声顿时从每一个角落响起。在这阵喧嚣声中，莫尔斯沃思站了起来并表示他很惊讶于克莱格斯竟然有如此胆量来挑战整个众议院。年过60的莫尔斯沃思确实有点老了，但是，在议会内他仍旧会回应克莱格斯先生，不管需要他说的是什

么；而在议会外，他相信有足够多的年轻人会和他站在一边，毫无畏惧地直视克莱格斯先生。恢复秩序的声音又从四周响起，所有议员同时站起，似乎所有的人都同时在大呼小叫。试图恢复秩序的人只能在那里徒劳地呼喊。混乱持续了几分钟；在此期间，几乎只有莫尔斯沃思爵士和克莱格斯先生坐在自己的位置上。最后，针对克莱格斯先生的呼声变得异常激烈，这使他不得不意识到顺应众议院的普遍民意才是比较明智的选择；所以，他随后解释了自己不合时宜的表达。他解释道，他所说的让众议院中怀疑他行为的人满意，不是指他要和人打架，而是说他要解释他的行为。这件事情到此结束。众议院继续商议他们应该以什么样的方式对南海公司事件进行调查：是常设委员会还是特别委员会。最后，由13人组成的特别委员会成立，拥有调遣人员、文件和记录的权力。

上下两院的议员们都激愤难平、心如刀绞。罗切斯特主教说这项计划就像一场瘟疫。沃顿公爵说众议院无需再去考虑尊重当事人的问题。如果是他，即便是最好的朋友参与了此项计划，他也会毫不留情地把他抛弃。整个国家都陷入了羞愧难当、愤愤不平的状态，如果他可以像人一样做事，他对犯罪者的惩罚必定像其他人一样，绝不姑息。斯坦霍普勋爵说，罪犯拥有的每一分钱都应该充公以弥补公众的损失，无论这个人是否是董事。

在此期间，公众情绪一直处于高涨状态。我们从考克斯的沃波尔得知南海公司董事这个名字已经成为欺骗和罪恶的代名词。来自全国各郡、市、区的请愿书纷至沓来，无不呼吁还受伤的民族以正义，给挪用公款的罪犯以惩罚。那些在惩罚罪犯方面态度中立而不愿走极端的人被控告为同谋。在无尽的侮辱和恶意的谩骂中，这些人被匿名信或公开信控告，成为这个受伤的民族急速复仇的牺牲品。控告财政大臣艾斯拉比先生以及财政部另一官员克莱格斯先生的呼声如此强烈，以至于上议院决定立即着手对他们进行调查。1月21日，政府命令所有和南海公司计划有关的经纪人须将他们自1719年米迦勒节以来为财政部官员买卖、认

购或代管的股票记录悉数呈给众议院。根据上交记录，大量的股票被转到艾斯拉比先生名下。包括著名历史学家[11]的祖父爱德华·吉本先生在内的5位南海公司董事被上院的黑杖侍卫拘留看管。经斯坦霍普伯爵示意，及全体一致同意，议会作出如下决定：在增加或减少股票面值时，凡没有实际支付与受益价值相等的利润的行为；南海公司的董事或经纪人，凡在南海公司法案在议会尚未通过期间，为任何政府官员或国会议员购买股票的行为，均被认为是情节严重、影响恶劣的腐败行为。几天后，通过了另一项决议，内容是几名公司董事或官员秘密地将他们的股票贩卖给公司，犯下了欺骗罪和失信罪。他们的行为导致了整个事态转向不利于政府信誉的方向。艾斯拉比先生辞去财政大臣的职位，直到立法机关正式调查他的个人罪行，他才再次在议会露面。

同时，知晓公司不轨董事所有危险秘密的公司财务主管奈特把所有的书籍和文件打包后逃离了英国。他乔装打扮上了河上的一只小船，驶向专门租用的一艘大船，之后安全抵达法国加来。保密委员会通知了众议院这个情况，众人当即决定应该给国王递交两个申请：第一个申请希望国王发表声明，悬赏缉拿奈特；第二个申请是国王须立即下令封锁所有港口，并依法监管所有海岸，以防奈特之流或其他南海公司官员逃出英国。申请上的字迹尚未干透，就由众议院专门委派的梅修恩先生送到了国王手里。当天晚上国王即发布了皇家声明，悬赏2000英镑缉拿奈特。众议院议员命令紧锁众议院大门并把钥匙放在桌子上。保密委员会的成员之一罗斯将军告诉大家说他们已经发现了一系列只有恶魔能想到的、用来毁灭一个国家的、最为罪孽深重的邪恶和欺骗行为。在适当的时候，他们会将之公布给众议院。同时，为了进一步发现真相，保密委员会认为很有必要拘留南海公司的一些董事和重要官员并查封他们的资料。此示意一经提出，便得到全体同意并立即执行。众议院议员罗伯特·卓别林爵士、希欧多尔·詹森爵士、索布里奇先生、弗·艾尔斯先生和南海公司的董事们被传唤到位，并要求对他们的腐败行为作出解释。希欧多尔·詹森爵士和索布里奇先生在被传唤时，努力为自己辩解。众议院

耐心倾听他们的解释，然后命令他们退出。随即，一项提议提出并马上获得全体一致通过。提议内容为：他们犯有尽人皆知的违反信托罪，这一罪行让国王的许多臣民们损失惨重，让政府信誉蒙羞。因为他们的罪行，众议院随即下达命令，将他们驱逐出众议院并由武装士兵关押。4天后，罗伯特·卓别林爵士和艾尔斯先生在出席议会时，同样被驱逐出众议院。同时，众议院决定请求国王给驻外大使下令，命令他们如果发现奈特逃往他们所在的国家，一定要将他交给英国政府。国王立即同意，当夜，使节们就被派往了欧洲大陆的各个国家。

在被关押的董事当中有约翰·布朗特爵士，人们普遍认为是他一手设计并实施了南海计划。蒲伯在写给巴瑟斯特的勋爵艾伦的信中说，此人自称是个伟大的信徒，行动上也极其符合宗教规范，但实际上却是个不折不扣的异教徒。他总是猛烈抨击这个时代的奢华和腐败、议会的偏袒不公和党派的软弱。在贬斥身份显赫的贵族的贪婪时，他的抨击尤其猛烈。起初，他只是个抄写员，后来不仅成了南海公司的董事，而且成为公司最活跃的管理人。他是否是在这个职位上开始抨击权贵们的贪婪，我们不得而知。可以肯定的是，他所看到的贪婪行为足以证实他这些最严厉的诅咒绝对不失公允。但是，如果这位批判者本人没有犯下他所控诉的那些罪行的话，他的高谈阔论或许会取得更好的效果。在关押期间，他被带到上议院的法庭，并经历了长时间的审查。在此期间，他拒绝回答几个重要的问题。他说他已经被众议院的某个委员会调查过了，并且已经不记得他的回答内容了，为了避免自相矛盾，他拒绝在另一个法庭上回答同样的问题。此番言论即是犯罪的间接证明，在上议院引起了一阵喧闹。当上议院又一次以强硬的态度问及他是否曾将部分股票卖给政府或议会两院的议员以加速法案的通过时，他再次拒绝回答。他说，他对上议院诚惶诚恐，但是，被迫指控自己，他很难做到。几番让他恢复记忆的尝试失败后，议会命令他退下。随后，内阁的支持者和反对者之间进行了一场激烈的讨论。有人声称，政府对约翰·布朗特爵士这种得心应手的沉默早已见怪不怪。沃顿公爵把矛头指向了斯坦霍普

伯爵，这令后者异常气愤。伯爵说话时情绪高涨，这种过分激烈的情绪导致他大脑充血。他感觉十分糟糕，不得不离开议院大厅到他自己的房间内休息。人们立即使用吸杯为他放血，第二天早晨继续放血，但是收效甚微。人们对这个致命的结果始料未及。傍晚时分，他开始昏迷，然后就仰面朝天，与世长辞了。这位政治家的突然死亡让全国上下陷入极大的悲痛之中。乔治一世极为伤感，他把自己关在房间里，为失去这位伟大的人物伤心不已。

公司的财务主管奈特在列日附近的蒂利蒙，被居住在布鲁塞尔的英国人里斯先生的一个秘书抓捕，随后被关在安特卫普城堡内。英国政府多次向奥地利政府申请将他押送回国，但都没有成功。奈特将自己置于布拉班特领地的保护之下，并要求在此地受审。《皇家条目》（Joyeuse Entrée [12]）的条款授予布拉班特领地的特权规定：在此地逮捕的罪犯应该就地审判。领地坚持他们的特权并拒绝把奈特交给英国政府。英国政府不停地诉求。在此期间，奈特从城堡逃跑了。

2月16日，保密委员会向众议院递交了他们的第一份调查报告。在报告中，他们表示他们的调查遇到了很多的困难和挫折。他们所努力调查的每一个人都尽自己最大努力不让法官达到目的。在他们调查的一些账目中，虚假款项被伪造；而在另外一些账目中，有款项，却无股票持有者姓名。在一些账目中有很多擦除和修改的痕迹；在另一些中，有的页面被撕掉。他们还发现一些重要的账目已经被悉数销毁，一些被撕掉或隐藏。在调查之初，他们发现交给他们的事情范围广大，种类繁多。在执行法律的过程中，许多人被分配了不同的任务。在处理成千上万的人高达上百万甚至上千万的财产时，他们不得不借法律之名，以并不合法的方式进行。他们发现在南海法案通过之前，南海公司账面价值1259325英镑已经贬为以股票计价的市场价值574500英镑。经调查，这些股票均为蓄意伪造，其操作目的是为了加速法案的通过。根据标记，这些股票在不同时间，以150%到325%的溢价售出。这么一大笔交易发

生在授权公司增股之前，这让委员会十分震惊；因此，他们决定要十分仔细地考察整个交易过程。董事长、副董事长和几位董事都被带到委员会面前加以严格审问。他们发现，这些账目被制作的时候，公司并没有相当数量的股票，他们所拥有的只是最多不超过3万英镑的一小笔资金。在进一步调查的过程中，他们发现，这些股票被公司伪装成的购买商购买，同时，股票交易中没有任何形式的双方协议、现金支付、保证金或证券。他们的如意算盘是，如果法案没有通过，股票如预期的那样下跌，公司自然不用承担任何损失。相反，如果股价上升（计划成功后，事实确实如此），由股价上升带来的利润必然使他们收益。按照这个思路，在法案通过之后，根据奈特的指示，公司设立并调整了股票账户。那些假定的购买者由于股价的上升，从南海公司得到了收益。这些伪造的股票主要由约翰·布朗特爵士、吉本先生和奈特先生处理；他们以行贿的方式，将这些股票赠送给政府的几名官员及其亲属，以求加速法案的通过。在这些股票中，桑德兰伯爵得到5万英镑，肯德尔公爵夫人得到1万英镑，普拉滕伯爵夫人得到1万英镑，她的两个侄子得到1万英镑，克莱格斯秘书长得到3万英镑，查尔斯·斯坦霍普先生（财政部秘书之一）得到1万英镑，剑锋公司得到5万英镑。在调查的过程中，他们还发现斯坦霍普先生从特纳卡斯沃尔公司收到了25万英镑的股票差价收益，但是，他的名字被从账簿上删除，后改为斯坦盖普。财政大臣艾斯拉比获利的方式更加让人厌恶。他在特纳卡斯沃尔公司开立了一个高达794451英镑的股票账户。此外，他还建议公司在没有任何担保的情况下，自行将第二批新股认购金额由100万英镑提高到150万英镑。第三次发行的方式尤其可耻。艾斯拉比名下7万英镑，克莱格斯先生名下65.9万英镑，桑德兰伯爵16万英镑，斯坦霍普先生4.7万英镑。这个报告完成之后，又有6个其他不太重要的报告。在最后一个报告的末尾，委员会宣布因为没有找到在此案中负有重要责任的奈特，他们的调查无法再继续。

委员会命令，在第三天将第一份报告印刷出来并进行讨论。经过愤

怒而激烈的讨论，达成了一系列协议，协议谴责董事、议会成员及与之相关的行政官员的行为。通过协议，委员会宣布这些人中的每一个都应该用他们自己的财产去弥补他们给公众造成的损失和伤害。他们的所作所为被定性为腐败、无耻和危险的行为。为了解除不幸者的痛苦，委员会命令引入一项法案。

查尔斯·斯坦霍普参与了这些交易并第一个受到了质问。在他的自我辩解中，他强调，在过去的几年里，他把他所拥有的所有钱都寄存到了奈特先生那里，所以，无论奈特先生为他买了多少股票，他已经提前付清了所需的款项。至于特纳卡斯沃尔公司为他所买的股票，他本人一无所知，这件事情中所做的一切都未经过他的授权，所以，他不可能为其负责。特纳公司承担了第二件事情的责任。但是，每一个怀着公正之心的人都知晓这不光彩的事实：斯坦霍普先生得到了25万英镑，并且，以他的名义放在南海公司的账户上。但是，最后以超过3票的微弱优势，他被无罪释放了。友人不遗余力地袒护他，切斯特菲尔德伯爵的儿子，斯坦霍普勋爵在态度摇摆的议员之间游说。他用自己的三寸不烂之舌劝说他们投票释放他或者不出席议会。许多优柔寡断的乡绅被他说服并改变了主意，由此产生了上述结果。无罪释放斯坦霍普的消息在全国引起了极大的不满。气势汹汹的大众聚集在伦敦各处。人们对于发生暴乱的恐惧与日俱增。当许多人认为，对于一个更大的罪犯的审讯很可能会是类似斯坦霍普的结局时，这种担心就更加严重了。即便当地的规则不健全，身居高位、肩负重任的艾斯拉比先生本应以诚实为本；但是，他却被认为是不折不扣的最大的罪犯。释放斯坦霍普先生的第二天，对他的案件的调查正式开始。众议院的大厅里和通道上挤满了人，人人都迫不及待地想知道调查的结果。辩论持续了整整一天。艾斯拉比几乎找不到支持者。他的罪过昭然若揭，而且让人深恶痛绝，没有人有勇气和他站到一边。最后议会达成一致意见：艾斯拉比先生为了获得非法利益，怂恿并推进了损害国家和公众利益的南海公司计划的执行；在这些损人利己的犯罪行为中，他和南海公司的董事们同流合污，损害了国家

的贸易和声誉；因为他所犯下的无耻罪行，他被逐出众议院，收监伦敦塔，并被严密监视；一年之内或直到下次议会召开，他不得出国；他应该清算他所有的财产，用以解救那些因为他的恶行而惨遭损失的人。

这个裁决让人欢欣雀跃。虽然消息在半夜12点半公布，却迅即传遍了全城。几家人张灯结彩以示他们的欢乐。第二天，当艾斯拉比先生被送到伦敦塔的时候，大众聚集在塔山上，准备向他大呼大叫并投掷石块。结果，他们的这个愿望没有实现，于是，他们就点起了一大堆篝火，围着它在无法言说的欢乐里狂舞。几堆篝火在其他的地方也点了起来。伦敦呈现出一派节日景象，全城人共同庆祝，宛如刚刚逃离了一场巨大的灾难。释放斯坦霍普的决定让人们怒不可遏，如果对艾斯拉比先生的裁决也是类似的纵容，很难想象这愤怒将会发展到何种程度。

为了让公众更加满意，任职于特纳卡斯沃尔公司的乔治·卡斯沃尔爵士第二天也被驱逐出议会，囚禁伦敦塔并要求退还25万英镑。

下一步审查的是保密委员会的报告中和桑德兰伯爵有关的部分。为了使他尊贵的身份免受罪责的损害，他的同党作了不遗余力的努力。当不利于他的事实主要来源于约翰·布朗特爵士的口供时，他们费尽心机制造假象，让人觉得约翰爵士的话并不可信，尤其是当这些话指向身居高位的枢密顾问时。众所周知，如果对他作出有罪的判决，那么权力就会落到托利党手中；因此，内阁中所有的朋友都聚集在他的周围，极力保护他的安全。最终，他以233票赞成，172票反对的结果被释放；但是，整个国家对于他的罪行深信不疑。愤怒席卷了每一个角落，气势汹汹的大众又一次聚集在伦敦。所幸，这一次没有暴乱发生。

这一天克莱格斯命丧黄泉。第二天本应是他受审的日子。人们普遍认为他是服毒自尽。但让他痛苦不堪、备受折磨的似乎是5周之前他在财政部任职的儿子死于天花的事实。为了这个宝贝儿子，他聚集了大量的财富。他不停地赚钱，但方式却不正当。为了儿子的利益，他不惜牺

牲他的荣誉和名声；然而，儿子却不复存在了。对于事实真相进一步被揭露的恐惧加剧了他内心的苦痛，最终，他在中风痉挛中一命呜呼。他留下了150万英镑的财产。这些财产被充公，用以安抚那些因为他曾不遗余力地创造的那个幻境而惨遭损失的人们。

公司董事一个接一个受到了审查。从他们的财产中共拿出214万英镑充公以弥补他们所造成的伤害。同时，根据每个人的行为和处境，法律允许每个人保留一部分财产以便他们洗心革面，重新做人。在约翰·布朗特爵士多达18.3万英镑的财产中，允许他保留0.5万英镑；约翰·菲罗斯爵士的总财产为24.3万英镑，允许保留1万英镑；希欧多尔·詹森爵士的总财产为24.3万英镑，允许保留5万英镑；爱德华·吉本先生的总财产为10.6万英镑，允许保留1万英镑；约翰·兰伯特爵士的总财产为7.2万英镑，允许保留0.5万英镑。对于其他在本案中参与不多的人的处理方式更加宽松。历史学家吉本的祖父爱德华·吉本先生受到了严重的处罚。这位历史学家在他的《回忆录和写作》中绘声绘色地描述了当时议会的进程。他坦言他并不是一个没有偏见的目击者；但是，凡是对当时灾难之年的进程有所描述的作家都不可避免地对这些受审者带有偏见，而他们的偏见和吉本的观点正好针锋相对；所以，这位历史学家的描述具有特殊的价值。仅仅根据听取双方证词的原则，他的观点是应当被考虑的。他说："在1716年，我的祖父被选为南海公司的董事之一。他的记录表明在他接受这个致命的职位之前，他已经获得了6万英镑的财产。但是，他的财产在1720年的海难中被淹没。30年的劳动所得在一天内化为乌有。对于他们是利用还是滥用了南海公司计划的分辨，对于我祖父及他的董事同仁们是罪过或是清白的判断，我既不是一个称职的法官也做不到毫无偏袒，但是，现代的公正必须谴责那些充满暴力和武断的审判程序。这些程序足以让正义的事业蒙羞，让不公正的行为更加面目可憎。整个民族刚刚从它的黄金梦中醒来，全体民众，甚至议会就开始为他们的愤怒寻找出气筒。但是，所有的人都承认，无论董事们的罪过有多大，他们都未触及这个国家的现有法律。莫尔斯沃思勋爵处罚当

事人的理念十分偏激，议会并没有按照他的理念行事；但是，一个刑罚法案被制定——这是一条追溯法令，用以惩罚在犯罪之时尚未存在的罪行。立法机关拘禁了各位董事，认为他们的出现不利于治安，给他们的人格加上了与生俱来的耻辱的烙印。他们被迫宣誓交出他们所有的财产，并且禁止转移或转让他们财产中的任何部分。每一个公民都有在法庭上通过他的律师申诉的权利，但是，这个刑罚法案显然违反了这一条。他们请求申诉，但是，他们的请求被拒绝了。他们的压迫者不需要证据，当然也不会听取辩护。最初有人提议诸位董事可以保留各自财产的1/8以支撑他们将来的生活。但是，有人坚决主张，由于每个人的富有程度和犯罪程度的不同，这个比例对于许多人来说过轻，而对于一些人来说则又过重。所以，每一个人的情况和行为应该单独考量。但是，33个英国人的财产和荣誉并没有在法庭上得到冷静而严肃的审判；相反，他们成为草率谈话的主题，成为当时大部分人无法无天行为的娱乐对象。委员会最不道德的人用恶言相向或弃权票来发泄他们心中的公愤或私怨。侮辱加重了伤害，玩笑又让侮辱更加痛苦。平均每人20英镑的津贴被随随便便地取消了。有一个捕风捉影的消息说一个董事以前参与过另一个项目，这个项目让一群不知名的人丢掉了他们的钱，而这则消息竟成为给他定罪的实证。一个人惨遭灭顶之灾只是因为他愚蠢而狂放地说他要让他的马以金子为食；另一个遭殃的人，则是因为某一天，生性高傲的他在财政部拒绝礼貌地回答一个地位远远高于他的人的问话。没有出席法庭，没有经过申诉，然后就被谴责，被武断地处以罚金，充公财产，所有相关人都难逃此劫。他们绝大部分的财富就这样被一扫而空。这样无耻而大胆的压迫几乎得不到万能的议会的庇护。我的祖父和他的同伴一样，没有受到任何礼遇。他所秉承的托利党的理念和周围托利党的人脉关系已经让统治者对他厌恶至极。他的名字在一个疑点颇多的秘密报告中出现。他尽人皆知的能力不能成为他不知情或犯错的借口。在最初对南海公司董事的诉讼中，吉本先生成为第一批被拘禁的人之一。在最终宣判时，对他的罚金数额表明了他的罪大恶极。他承诺，

除去继承的祖产外，他交付给众议院的总金额高达106543英镑5先令6便士。议会许诺给他1.5万英镑或1万英镑作为生活补贴；但是，经过考虑，议会一致决定给他数额较小的津贴。在这种糟糕的情景中，我的祖父，以偌大的年龄，以议会不能从他那里夺走的技巧和信誉，建起了一座新的财富大厦。16年的辛苦付出终于有了回报。所以，我有理由相信，第二个财富大厦不会比第一个低级。”

完成对董事的处罚之后，立法机构下一步考虑的就是如何恢复政府信誉。事实证明，沃波尔的计划收效甚微，而且声誉不佳。在1720年年底，人们清算了南海公司的股金总额。结果发现，南海公司的股金总额为3780万英镑；而其中为股东所持有的仅为2450万英镑。剩下的1330万英镑为公司以法人形式所有，这一部分是他们利用全民痴迷所赚取的利润。从这一笔钱中抽出了800多万英镑，以100英镑获利33英镑6先令8便士的年息分给了股东和认购者。这极大地缓解了当时的形势。同时，议会进一步下达命令，规定那些从南海公司以股票的形式借钱，同时又将这些钱转给公司或抵押给公司，为公司所用的人，只要付出所借总额的10%，就可以免于其他的要求。当股价飞升之时，南海公司以这种方式借出了1100万；现在，当股价降到了正常水平，他们收回了110万。

但是，政府信誉在很久以后才得以恢复。就像伊卡洛斯[13]一样，人们的信心飞升得太高，融化了他蜡质的翅膀；然后，像伊卡洛斯那样跌进了海里；在海浪中挣扎的时候，他意识到他真正的位置是在坚实的地上。从此，他再也不敢尝试飞那么高了。

自此之后，在商业繁荣的伟大时代，又差点发生几次过度投机的事件。一个计划的成功往往会产生其他几个类似的计划。在一个充满商业交易的国度里，民众的模仿能力总是能够抓住这些成功的典范，然后，把利益的狂热追求者拉进万劫不复的深渊。1825年的泡沫公司，就像南海公司所产生的那些泡沫公司一样，在这个恐慌之年昙花一现后就消失

了。这个事件和1720年的事件如出一辙：欺诈之行从贪婪之心那里收获了巨大的利益；但是，当最后的审判日来临之时，双方的损失一样惨重。1836年的计划曾经差点引起灭顶之灾；但是，灾难被及时避免了。[14]

郁金香狂热

噢！我的同胞们啊！

你们为何这般疯狂！

——卢坎[15]

据说郁金香这个花名来源于土耳其语，词形暗合“穆斯林的头巾”一词，意指其花和该头巾的形似。16世纪中期这个词被引入西欧。在让郁金香享有盛名这件事上，康拉德·格斯纳绝对功不可没。但是，他做梦也没有想到这小小的花将让整个世界陷入极度的混乱。他首次见到郁金香是在1559年，在奥格斯堡的一个花园里。花园的主人是博学的赫尔瓦特参赞，当时，此人是收藏稀有外来植物的名人。花的鳞茎由君士坦丁堡的一位朋友送给这位绅士。在君士坦丁堡，这种花一直是人们的最爱。在此后10到11年的时间里，郁金香为富有者所青睐，尤其是在荷兰和德国。阿姆斯特丹的富人派人直接到君士坦丁堡去买鳞茎，并且愿意为之付出天价。在英国种植的第一批球茎于1600年从维也纳运来。自此直到1634年，郁金香的名声与日俱增；甚至，如果一个人有钱，却没有郁金香，他就会被归入品味低下一类。许多有识之士，比如，庞贝·德·安格里斯和《论坚定不移》的著名作者——莱登的利普修斯——都对郁金香情有独钟。拥有郁金香的狂热迅速席卷了整个中产阶级，而那些财产并不是很丰富的商人和商店老板也开始攀比自己手中的郁金香珍品，并互相炫耀他们为之付出的离奇价格。据传，哈勒姆的一个商人花费了他一半的财产来购买一个郁金香的球茎，而其目的并非为了卖掉赚钱，只是为了放在自家温室里让朋友们观赏。

有人可能会想，在精明如荷兰人的眼睛里，可以变得如此珍贵的花

必定有非同寻常的美。然而，它既没有玫瑰的美艳，也不具有它的芬芳——甚至和“小小的甜豌豆”相比，它也稍显逊色。同时，在花朵的持久性上，它亦无法和前两者相比。然而，事实却是考利为郁金香大唱颂歌。他说：

紧接着，郁金香出现了，鲜艳欲滴，

闪烁着高傲的光芒，淫荡二字绝对与她无关；

这里有世上最美的颜色；

而且，通过新的组合，她还可以呈现新的面孔；

紫色和金色织就的华贵衣衫，

是她的最爱，

她唯一的目的就是悦人之目，

和，艳压群芳。

这听起来并不那么具有诗意，却是诗人的描述。贝克曼在他的《发明史》中，以更加忠实的态度，用比考利的诗歌更加让人舒服的散文形式，对郁金香进行了描述。他说：

几乎没有植物像郁金香那样，因为偶然，羸弱，

或者疾病，而获得那么多的色彩。在人工培植之前的自然状态，它只有一种颜色，有大大的叶子和超乎寻常的长茎。当人工培植将它弱化之后，它反而在种花人的眼中变得更加赏心悦目了。花瓣比以前黯淡了，小了；但是，颜色更加丰富了；叶子的绿色也较之以前更加浅淡。人类文明的这件杰作就是这样：体质越羸弱，容颜越漂亮；以至于最后

弱到无论用什么高超的技艺或周全的照料，它都几乎不能被成功移植，甚至被成功养活。

就这样，神不知鬼不觉的，许多人开始迷恋于这个给他们带来很多麻烦的东西，就像母亲总是偏爱体弱多病的孩子一样。我们只能用同样的原则来解释这些脆弱的花朵并不应受到的，而人类却过分慷慨给予的赞颂。1634年，拥有郁金香的狂热在整个荷兰肆虐，以至于国家正常的工业被忽略。全体人民，甚至包括最底层的民众都开始从事郁金香贸易。随着狂热的升级，价格也一路飙升。到1635年，许多人投资10万弗罗林[16]购买40个球茎，然后，再以重量为单位出售，而重量单位是比一粒谷物的重量还要小的派瑞特[17]。一种叫丽芙·肯恩将军的郁金香重400派瑞特，价值4400弗罗林；一种叫婉·得·爱克将军的郁金香重446派瑞特，价值1260弗罗林；一棵贵公子重106派瑞特，价值1615弗罗林；一棵黑蝴蝶重400派瑞特，价值3000弗罗林。在所有的品种中，最珍贵的当属永远的奥古斯都；它重200派瑞特，5500弗罗林的售价也会被认为已经是贱卖了。这个品种的追求者如此众多，以至于一棵质量下等的球茎要价也要高达2000弗罗林。据传，在1636年初，整个荷兰只有两棵这样的球茎；而且，其质量并非上乘。一棵在阿姆斯特丹的一个商人手里，另一棵在哈勒姆。投机商人要获得这两棵球茎的心情是如此急切，以至于一个人为哈勒姆的郁金香足足花费了12英亩建筑用地的绝对所有权。而阿姆斯特丹的那根换得4600弗罗林及一辆新马车、两匹灰色的马和一整套马具。马丁是那个时代很勤勉的一个作家，他就郁金香热写过一本长达1000多页的书。下面的清单中列出了不同的商品及其价值；而这些东西的交付只为换得名叫黑蝴蝶的一个稀有品种的球茎：

	弗罗林
2 拉小麦	448
4 拉黑麦	558
4 只肥牛	480
8 只胖猪	240
12 只胖绵羊	120
2 大桶葡萄酒	70
4 大桶啤酒	32
2 吨黄油	192
1000 磅奶酪	120
1 套床	100
1 套衣服	80
1 个银质的酒杯	60
	2500

那些当时不在荷兰，而又恰在这个荒唐之事最盛行时返回荷兰的人们，往往因为不知情而让自己陷入尴尬的窘境。在布兰维尔的游记中，就记录了这样一件趣事。有一个十分富有的商人，甚是以自己稀有的郁金香为豪。有一次，他收到从利凡特发来的一批很珍贵的货物。货物到达的消息由一个水手通知他，当时二人正在商人那堆满了各式各样货物的账房里。这位商人为了表达对水手传达消息的谢意，十分慷慨地准备了一顿红鲱鱼的早餐赠与他。这个水手似乎很喜欢吃洋葱，并且在这个慷慨商人的柜台上发现了一个类似洋葱的球茎；然后，他很想当然地认为把洋葱放在丝绸和天鹅绒中间是一件很不合适的事情。他机智地抓住一个时机，把这个类似洋葱的东西偷偷放到了他的兜里，并且把它作了他的鲱鱼的调味品。他带着他的收获很快离开了商人家，走到码头上去吃他的早餐。他刚一转身，那个商人就丢失了他宝贵的，价值3000弗罗林，或者说280英镑的，名为永远的奥古斯都的郁金香球茎。顿时，全家陷入了一片混乱。大家到处寻找这个价格不菲的根，但是无果而终。商人的痛苦无法言语。第二次的搜索仍旧以失败告终。最后有人想到了那个水手。

这个伤心满怀的商人一听到这个建议，一下子就冲到了街上。被他吓坏了的家人紧随其后。那个头脑单纯的水手啊！他根本没想到把他的“洋葱”藏起来，而是坐在一堆绳子上，嘴里嚼着最后一块“洋葱”。他几乎做梦都不曾想过，他所吃的这顿早餐的价值足够一艘船上的全体船员吃10个月；或者，正如这位被抢劫的商人自己所描述的一样，“足以十分奢侈地招待奥伦治的王子和所有总督府衙的人员。”安东尼把珍珠融化到酒里，为克利欧佩特拉的健康干杯；理查德·惠廷顿为了取悦亨利五世国王，也做了同样愚蠢而又奢华之事；当伊丽莎白女王开办皇家交易所的时候，托马斯·格雷欣爵士把钻石融在酒里，以表达对女王健康的祝福。但是，这位淘气的荷兰小伙子的早餐和上述两种一样豪华；不仅如此，他的早餐还有一处是他的不知节俭的前辈所不能及的，那就

是：他们的宝石既不能改善酒的美味，也无益于他们的酒的品质；而他的郁金香配上他的红鲱鱼却是十分的美味。他的故事中最不幸的部分就是商人控告他犯了重罪，最终使他在监狱中被囚禁了几个月。

另一个故事为一个英国旅行者的亲历，这个故事的滑稽之处丝毫不逊色于水手的奇遇。这位绅士是位业余的植物学家，他凑巧在一个荷兰富人的家里看到一棵郁金香根躺在他的温室里。因为不知道这到底是什么，他取出他的小刀，把它的皮剥下来，然后，想用它来做实验。当这样一层一层地剥到只有它原来的一半大小的时候，他把它分成了同等的两半，然后，对于这个他所不认识的、有着奇特外观的球茎一直发表学术评论。突然，主人怒火中烧地扑向了他，问他是否知道他已经做了什么。“削了一个十分奇怪的洋葱”，这位学者回答道。“见鬼去吧！”这位荷兰人说道，“这是婉·得·爱克将军。”“谢谢你，”这位旅行者回答，然后，拿出他的笔记本，在上面按照荷兰人所讲记下了这个名字，“这些‘将军’在你们国家普遍吗？”“见鬼去吧，”这位荷兰人抓住这位震惊不已的科学家的领子诅咒说，“跟我去见官！会让你知道的。”无论这位旅行者如何抗议，他还是被这位绅士连拉带扯地走过了街道，身后跟着一群乌合之众。等来到官员的面前，他才吃惊地得知，他用来做实验的那个球茎价值4000弗罗林。无论他如何请求对他从轻发落，最后，还是不得不锒铛入狱。直到他为付这笔资金找到担保，才得以获释。

对于郁金香稀有品种的需求迅速增长。到1636年，销售郁金香的定期市场在多地股票交易所开放；这些地方包括阿姆斯特丹、鹿特丹、哈勒姆、莱顿、阿尔克玛、荷恩以及其他城镇。至此，种种迹象表明郁金香交易已经具备了赌博的特征。尽管有人警告股票经纪人对于新的投资要谨慎，他们还是进行了大量的郁金香交易。在交易中，他们用尽一切所能想到的办法，让价格产生波动。和所有的赌博一样，在郁金香狂热中，人们最初都是信心高涨，而且每个人都可以盈利。郁金香交易的经纪人在郁金香股市的涨跌中投机。他们通过在价跌时买进，在价高时卖

出的方式获得了巨额利润。许多人一夜之间暴富。一个充满诱惑的金色诱饵在人们的眼前摇来晃去。一个接一个地，他们冲向了郁金香交易市场，就像冲向蜜罐的一群苍蝇一样。在每个人的想象中，对郁金香的狂热追求不会停止，而且，全世界每一个角落的富人都会到荷兰，都会为了郁金香倾其所有。欧洲的妇人将会聚集在须德海的岸边，贫穷在荷兰这块福地上将不复存在。贵族、市民、农夫、机械工、水手、男仆、女仆，甚至扫烟囱的工人和做衣服的老妪都开始做郁金香的生意。各个阶层的人们都把他们的财产换成现金，然后把它投在这些花的交易里。房屋和土地以毁灭性的低价出售，或者在郁金香交易中直接转让。许多外国人同样被这种狂热所征服。钱从四面八方涌向荷兰。生活必需品的价格逐步升高：房屋和土地、马匹和马车，以及各种奢侈品的价格都在攀升。连续几个月的时间，荷兰就像是财神爷的接待室。交易变得如此广泛而复杂，以至于有人觉得很有必要起草一份法规来引导这些交易者。政府委派了司法人员和办事职员，这些人都全心全意地为郁金香交易贡献他们的力量。在一些城镇里，人们无视政府委派的公证员，郁金香就是他们的公证员。在更小的、没有交易场所的城镇里，城中主要的酒馆通常被用作“展示地”。在这里，形形色色买卖郁金香的人完成他们的交易，以成全人们奢靡的娱乐。有时，这些宴会有二三百人参加。大瓶大瓶盛开的郁金香以一定的间距放在桌子上和餐柜上，以供他们在席间欣赏。

但是，最后，比较精明的人开始意识到这个愚蠢的行为不可能永远持续下去。富人们买了这些花，不再是为了把它们养在花园里，而是以100%的利润卖出。有人已经预见到，最后，肯定有人会损失惨重。当这个信念开始四处传播的时候，价格下跌了，而且，再也没有重新升起。自信心被摧毁了，铺天盖地的恐慌感折磨着所有交易者的心。A同意在合同签署6周后，以每棵4000弗罗林的价钱从B那里购买10棵名叫永远的奥古斯都的郁金香。B在约定的时间将花准备好；但是价格下降到了三四百弗罗林。A既不同意以不同的价钱购买，也拒绝接受这些郁金

香。在荷兰所有的城镇上，每天都会宣布新的违约者名单。那些成千上万个在几个月前还怀疑在荷兰这块土地上是否存在贫穷这码事的人们，突然间发现他们自己已经是除了几棵球茎之外一无所有的穷光蛋。没有人愿意买这些根。即便卖者愿意以他们所付价钱的1/4出售，也没有人理睬。每一个角落都回响着痛苦的哭声。每一个人都在诅咒他的邻居。那些通过密谋策划富了腰包的少数人悄悄地把他们的财富藏起来，不让和他们同住一城的人发现，然后，把这些钱投资到英国或其他国家的基金。那些就这样简简单单一夜暴富的穷人又回到了原来的贫穷状态；家境殷实的商人几乎沦为乞丐；许许多多的达官贵人眼睁睁地看着他们的房产彻底毁灭。

当第一阵惊慌渐渐平息之后，几个城镇上的郁金香持有者召开公众会议，目的是策划恢复公众信用的好办法。人们一致同意全国各地派代表到阿姆斯特丹，和政府商议解决目前混乱状态的办法。最初，政府拒绝参与，只是建议郁金香持有者自行达成协议。为了达到这个目的，他们召开了几次会议。但是，最终没有商议出让受害人满意的结果，也没有讨论出弥补哪怕只是一点点所受到的伤害的措施。每个人张口就是抱怨和指责，所有的会议都在群情激奋中进行。但是，最终，经过无数次的争吵和僵持，聚集在阿姆斯特丹的代表们达成一致协议。协议规定，所有在狂热高峰期和1636年11月之前签订的合同统统宣告无效；而对于那些在此日期之后签订的合同，只要购买者付给销售者1/10的货款，就可以免除他们的其他债务。这个决定没有让任何人满意。手中持有郁金香的销售者当然不满意，而那些曾许诺购买的人也觉得他们受到的待遇太苛刻。曾价值6000弗罗林的郁金香，现在花500就可以买到；所以，1/10的赔偿金比实际的价值还要多出100弗罗林。这个国家的法庭上每天都充斥着违约法案，但是法庭拒绝审理赌博性质的交易。

事件最终交由海牙省议会解决。人们信心十足地期待，这个机构的智慧能够想出恢复信用的办法。人们翘首企盼最后的决定，但是这个决

定却一直没有到来。与会成员一周接一周地讨论，最后，在思考了3个月之后，宣布除非有更多的信息，否则他们无法作出最后决定。但是，他们建议，销售商应该在有证人的情况下，把他们现有的郁金香以代表们已经商议好的价钱卖给购买者。如果后者拒绝购买，他们可以通过公众拍卖的方式将其出售。而最初的合同签约者应该担负实际的价钱和最后成交价钱之间的差价。这恰恰就是之前代表们曾推荐的计划，而且已经证明是无效的。在荷兰没有负责强制付款的法庭。这个问题在阿姆斯特丹被提出，但是，法官们以法律债务不包括赌博债务为由一致拒绝参与。

事情就这样被搁置了。政府没有能力找到解决的办法。那些在事态逆转之时不幸还存有大量郁金香的倒霉蛋们只能尽量乐观地接受他们的损失；那些盈利者被允许他们保有所得；但是国家的经济经受了严重的打击，很多年后才得以恢复。

英国在某种程度上模仿了荷兰的模式。1636年，郁金香在伦敦交易所公开出售，经销商竭尽所能把价格提高到和阿姆斯特丹那里一样高得荒谬的水平。巴黎的经销商也在努力创造郁金香热。在这两座城市里，他们只是在某种程度上获得了成功。然而，榜样的力量却让这些花大受欢迎。自此，某个阶层内的人们对郁金香的钟爱程度要远远高于其他种类的花。现今，荷兰人仍旧以他们对郁金香的偏爱而闻名于世，并且为郁金香付出的价钱依然高于其他民族所愿意支付的价钱。当富有的英国人吹嘘他的优良赛马和古画的时候，富有的荷兰人则会向人炫耀他的郁金香。

在今天的英国，虽然我们觉得很奇怪，但事实上一棵郁金香比一棵橡树还要值钱。如果黑色的稀世珍品被发现，黑得就像尤维纳尔[18]所说的人间少有的黑天鹅那样，它的价钱就等于12英亩玉米的价钱。根据大英百科全书第三版增补版的一个权威作者所提供的信息，17世纪末，

郁金香在苏格兰的最高价为10个基尼。自此之后，它们的价值似乎慢慢降低了，直到1769年，英国出现了两个最昂贵的品种——唐·科维多和瓦伦丁娜，前者值两个基尼，后者值两个半基尼。这些价钱后来证明是最低价。1800年，一棵球茎的普通价钱是15基尼。1835年，如痴如狂的郁金香迷在伦敦的公开拍卖会上以75英镑的价钱购得一棵叫作法妮·肯布尔小姐的球茎。价钱更惊人的郁金香为切尔西市国王路上的一个园丁所有。根据他的商品目录，这个郁金香的价钱是200个基尼。

疯狂的慢性投毒犯

佩斯卡拉：我从来没听说过类似的事情。

斯特凡诺：在我看来，如果人们仅仅是听别人讲这个故事，肯定会认为这是最不可能发生的荒谬之事。

佩斯卡拉：确实如此。我将尽可能简单地告诉你他们是如何疯狂到这个地步的。

米兰公爵

投毒罪行从古到今一直存在，并且曾一度形成整套的方法。投毒方式是利用毒药发挥作用过程较慢，让普通的观察者认为受害者是死于身体的逐步衰弱。对此事感兴趣者可以参阅贝克曼有关秘密毒药的著作——《发明史》。在这本书里，他收集了希腊和罗马作家所描写的几个有关事例。16世纪早期，此罪行开始逐渐增多；到了17世纪，它就像一场瘟疫一样，蔓延到了整个欧洲。投毒操作通常由假扮的女巫师或男巫师完成。后来，这个技巧在那些声称具有魔力或超自然力量的人中，成为一个专门的学科。亨利八世21年时通过了一项法案，将此投毒行为定性为严重危害国家罪：犯罪者将被沸水煮死。

在时间上，史无前例；在残暴程度上，亦无出其右者的此类投毒案件是对托马斯·奥弗伯里爵士的谋杀。这件事情发生在1613年，成为当时詹姆斯一世王廷的耻辱。对这件事情的梗概稍作描述，恰好可以让人们对50年后在法国和意大利流行的投毒狂潮略知一二。

苏格兰青年罗伯特·克尔很早就引起了詹姆斯一世的注意；并且，

尽人皆知，这个人仅仅凭借他的美貌就享尽了荣耀。即便是在当时，人们也怀疑詹姆斯一世沉迷于最让人鄙视的不轨行为；而在今天，我们越是研究他的历史，这个怀疑就越是强烈。无论这个被怀疑的行为是什么，这位帅气十足的克尔在大庭广众之下让他的皇帝主子亲吻他光滑的脸颊，以这种恶心的方式迅速得宠。1613年他成为苏格兰的王室财政大臣；同时，他还以罗切斯特子爵的身份在英格兰担任同样的官职。不仅如此，无数的荣耀在未来的日子里源源不断地向他涌来。

在他飞黄腾达的过程中，并非无友相助。从国王大臣托马斯·奥弗伯里爵士本人信中的某些线索看，他只是一味地迎合国王的恶习，而且详细了解他秘密从事的所有危险行为。就是他本人竭尽所能，促进克尔的晋升；当然，他从后者那里得到了相应的回报。奥弗伯里对克尔的友谊并不仅限于此，如果这样的两个人之间真的有什么友谊可言的话。他还担当中间人的角色，帮助罗切斯特和埃塞克斯伯爵的妻子弗朗西丝·霍华德夫人通奸。这是一个激情富有到狂野，而羞耻感却无分毫的女人。她的丈夫妨碍了她和罗切斯特的通奸，为了摆脱他，她启动了诉讼离婚程序，离婚的理由是但凡存有些微谦卑或优雅之心的女人宁死也不愿意说出的。她见不得人的诉讼成功了。判决刚刚执行，她和罗切斯特大人规模盛大的婚礼就已准备就绪。

托马斯·奥弗伯里爵士曾经全心全意地帮助他的财神爷和埃塞克斯伯爵夫人私通；而现在，他似乎又认为和这样一个品质下贱的女人结婚将会成为他仕途继续前进的障碍。因此，他便竭尽所能地劝阻克尔选择这个婚姻。但是罗切斯特十分倾心这个结合，他的热情和伯爵夫人的热情一样强烈。一天，当奥弗伯里和罗切斯特子爵在白厅的画廊里散步的时候，有人听见奥弗伯里说：“尊贵的大人，如果您娶了那个卑贱的女人为妻，你将彻底地毁掉你的荣誉和你自己。请听取我的建议，坚决不要这样做。如果你做了，只怕你官位难保，所以，你最好小心为妙。”罗切斯特愤怒地扬袖而去，并且大声发誓道：“这件事情，我会和

你算账的！”这些话成为倒霉的奥弗伯里的死刑执行令。他暗示罗切斯特，他可以影响国王，并降低国王对罗的喜欢程度。他努力想阻止一个人熊熊燃烧的激情，而这个人又是这样的没心没肺、放荡不羁，且无所顾忌。这一切致命地打击了罗切斯特的自尊心。

奥弗伯里不知天高地厚的规劝传到了伯爵夫人那里。从那一刻起，她就发誓她一定要给他最致命的报复。但是，因为他们极端的虚伪，两位都隐藏了他们的实际意图。在罗切斯特的请求下，奥弗伯里成为被派往俄罗斯王廷的大使。这个表面上的举荐却是未来深不可测的致命阴谋的第一步。罗切斯特装作十分关心奥弗伯里的利益的样子，建议他拒绝出使这个任务，并且说这只不过是清除他的一个计谋。同时，他许诺他会对付由奥弗伯里的拒绝所带来的一切不良后果。奥弗伯里就这样中了圈套，拒绝了作为使节出使的任务。詹姆斯国王被激怒了，立即将他囚禁到伦敦塔。

现在，他完完全全地被看管着，他的敌人终于有机会开始他们的复仇行动。罗切斯特所做的第一件事情就是通过他在宫廷里的影响，解雇伦敦塔的副主管，并委派他的傀儡杰维斯·艾尔维斯来填补这个空位。这个人只是个工具；为完成复仇计划，另外一个人必不可少，那就是曾经做过药店伙计的理查德·韦斯顿。他被安排在副看守的职位上，直接看管奥弗伯里。至此为止，所有的一切都为阴谋家的计划作好了准备。

同时，阴险狡诈的罗切斯特以最贴心的文字给奥弗伯里写信，信中要他耐心忍受他的不幸，并且许诺他被囚禁的时间不会很长，因为他的朋友们正在竭尽所能平息国王的不快情绪。他照旧装作极度同情他的样子，因此，随信附上了油酥点心和其他的美味作为礼物，而这些东西在伦敦塔里都是得不到的。送给他的这些点心都被下了毒。偶尔，在没有信的时候，也会有类似的礼物送给杰维斯·艾尔维斯，其目的是让人认为这些东西是没有毒的；但是，那位不幸的囚犯却从没有尝过这些没有

毒的事物。一个叫作特纳的女人被雇来去获得这些毒药。她曾经有一所声名狼藉的房子，并且不止一次地把它借给罗切斯特和埃塞克斯女士，让他们在那里进行罪恶的通奸勾当。这些药都由假装成朗伯斯区算命先生的福尔曼医生负责准备，协助他准备的是一个叫富兰克林的药剂师。这两个人都知道这些毒药的使用目的。他们巧妙地把毒药混合在油酥点心和其他的食品里，混合的量要小，以便能够渐渐消耗受害人的体质。特纳夫人定期将放了毒药的食品送给副看管，然后，副看管再把他们放在奥弗伯里面前。不仅他的食物被投毒，他的饮料也被投了毒。砒霜和他所吃的盐混合，斑蝥和胡椒混合。就这样，在这段时间内，他的健康状况明显下降了。他一天天变得虚弱下来。他的胃口极其奇怪，十分钟情于糖果和果冻。罗切斯特继续安慰他，并且满足他在这方面所有的需要，给他送丰富的油酥点心，偶尔送些松鸡和其他的野味，或者送些乳猪。在这些肉食的调味汁里，特纳夫人混合了一些斑蝥，并且用硝酸银给猪排下毒。就像在审判中所陈述的那样，奥弗伯里以这种方式服下的毒药总量足以毒死20个成年男人；但是，因为他的体质强壮，所以，仍旧可以苟延残喘。药剂师富兰克林承认说他和福尔曼医生准备了7种不同种类的毒药。它们是：硝酸、砒霜、水银、钻石粉、硝酸银、大蜘蛛和斑蝥。奥弗伯里坚持的时间太长了，这让罗切斯特有点不耐烦。在他写给埃塞克斯女士的一封信中，他说事情的解决没有他预料得那么快。埃塞克斯女士立即命令看门人马上处理掉受害人。在这段时间内，虽然奥弗伯里看起来对投毒之事一无所知，他也并非没有怀疑到罗切斯特对他的背叛。他只是怀疑他要被终身囚禁，他们只是让国王更加厌恶他。他在一封信中威胁罗切斯特说，如果他不被立即释放，他就要将他的流氓行为公之于世。他说：“不久后，你和我都将以另一性质的审判面对公众……不要将我逼上绝路，以免我说出让你和我都后悔不已的话……无论我活着还是死了，你的羞耻罪行都不会消失，它们会永远地留在这个世界上，让你成为有史以来最面目可憎的人……令我惊讶的是，你竟然忽视了一个知晓你所有秘密勾当的人……它们是普通的秘密和普通的

危险吗？它们会带来什么样的后果？”

与罗切斯特大人这样不计后果的人打交道时，所有这些警告和掌握危险秘密的暗示都只能成为对自己的不利因素：它们更有可能导致奥弗伯里的死亡而不是救赎。罗切斯特的所想和所为似乎是一致的。他毫不犹豫地采取了谋杀者的理论，即，“人死则死无对证”。就这样，在他收到写有这些话语的信之后，他对他的情人抱怨事情的延迟。他们督促韦斯顿赶紧完成这个罪行。所有人的耐心都耗尽了，终于，1613年10月，一剂氯化汞放到了他的食物里。在这些人的魔爪下被痛苦地囚禁6个月之后，他的生命结束了。就在他断气当天，尸骨未寒之时，他就被匆匆地裹进一个床单，没有举行葬礼，草草地埋在了伦敦塔附近的一个深坑里。

在《詹姆斯一世王廷和人物》一书当中，安东尼·韦尔登爵士对这个悲剧结局的描写和上述内容有些许不同。他说：“富兰克林和韦斯顿来到奥弗伯里的囚室，发现他处于极端的痛苦折磨之中。很显然，是生命本能的力量在和毒药作斗争。看起来很有可能生命的本能要赢得这场争斗，因为奥弗伯里长出了疮、疹斑和水疱。他们害怕医生的检查会让他们的恶行大白于天下。于是，他们都同意用床单将他勒死；然后，就这样做了。就这样，他们结束了他悲惨的生命，并让阴谋者相信他是死于毒药。除了这两个谋杀者之外，其他人不会想到这种方式。”

突然的死亡——过分仓促的埋葬，以及没有进行尸检的事实，都加剧了浮在人们心头的怀疑。传闻，从偷偷泄露转为四处流传；死者的亲眷公开表示他们认为他们的亲人是死于谋杀。但是，罗切斯特在宫廷中的权力依旧如日中天，没有人敢发表哪怕一句对他不利的言论。不久后，他和埃塞克斯伯爵夫人的婚礼在前所未有的豪华气势中进行。国王亲自参加了仪式。

奥弗伯里对詹姆斯性格的了解似乎比罗切斯特所认为的还要深。当

他预言罗切斯特的婚姻将疏远国王和他的关系时，他真是不折不扣的预言家。此时，罗切斯特所受的恩宠却比以往任何时候都高；但是，好景不长——良心，这个忙碌的监视器，开始起作用了。流言的传播从来没有停止过；一直心存内疚的罗切斯特最终变得憔悴不堪。他的脸颊没有了色彩——他的目光黯淡、脾气暴躁、神情恍惚、情绪低沉。看到他的这幅光景，国王终于对他的陪伴不再感兴趣，而后，开始四处寻找新欢。机智、帅气而又放荡不羁的白金汉公爵乔治·维利尔斯正合了国王的心意，仅仅后两个品质就足以让詹姆斯喜欢上他。罗切斯特的影响日渐削弱，白金汉公爵的权力与日俱增。一个失宠之人是没有朋友的。对罗切斯特不利的流言比以往任何时候都更加强烈、更加坚决。这位新宠也不遗余力地落井下石，以加速这位旧爱的堕落。因为急于想彻底毁掉这位享受皇帝宠爱的前任，白金汉怂恿托马斯·奥弗伯里的家人依法质询他们亲人的离奇死亡。

詹姆斯惩罚那些他没有亲自参与的罪行时，绝对足够严厉。此外，他对于自己发现秘密之迅捷十分自以为豪。托马斯·奥弗伯里的案件正中他的下怀。他的行动从逮捕杰维斯·艾尔维斯爵士开始。在诉讼的早期阶段，詹姆斯看上去并不知道罗切斯特在这件事中的纠缠之深。凶残的慢性投毒的全过程让国王感到十分恐怖，为此，他请来了所有的法官。安东尼·威尔顿爵士跪在他们中间说："尊敬的法官大人们，最近，我听说你们正在调查一起投毒案件。上帝啊！如果餐桌变成了陷阱，连吃饭都要危及到每个人的生命，如果我们把意大利的这个恶俗引进到我们这里，那么，这个王国（世上唯一以热情好客著称的民族）将会处于怎样悲惨的境地啊！所以，各位长官，我命令你们对此事严查，没有算计，没有私情，也没有偏袒。在庄严而又令人生畏的宣判日，你们给出此事的答案。如果你姑息了这个犯罪案件中的任何一个罪犯，你和你的后代子孙都将受到上帝的诅咒！如果我姑息了任何罪犯，上帝将会永远诅咒我和我的子孙后代！"

这个诅咒在忠于斯图亚特王朝的家族里完全应验。庄重的誓言被打破了，上帝的诅咒不偏不倚地落在了他和他的子孙后代的头上。

在杰维斯·艾尔韦斯爵士之后，被捕的第二个人是副看守韦斯顿，然后是富兰克林和特纳夫人，最后是萨默赛特郡伯爵及其夫人，也就是罗切斯特。奥弗伯里死后，他荣升到了这个尊贵的位置。

第一个受审的是韦斯顿。公众的好奇心空前强烈，这件事情成为人们口中唯一的话题。审判那一天，法庭被挤得水泄不通。在法庭审判报告上，最高法院首席法官库克向陪审团揭露了投毒者卑鄙和猥琐的行为。面对他们秘密的企图，人的生命没有丝毫的自我保护和防御措施。在英国听说投毒是多么罕见的事情啊！在我们的国民看来，这是多么地让人憎恨啊！但是，魔鬼教会这些胆大妄为之徒诡谲之道，他们能够游刃有余地给人们投毒，让受害者按照他们的意愿在1个月、2个月、3个月或更长的时间段内，慢慢消耗掉生命的精华。他们让受害者中毒的方式有4种，即：闻、饮、尝、触。

当起诉书宣读完毕，韦斯顿唯一的反应就是："主啊！可怜可怜我吧！主啊！可怜可怜我吧！"当被问及他将如何被审判时，他拒绝把自己交给国家的陪审团，并且宣布他只选择接受上帝的审判。他的这种态度持续了一段时间。后来，由于害怕受到藐视法庭罪责[19]的惩罚，他最终屈服，请求"无罪"辩护，并且以应有法律程序接受审判。

他所有的罪证都被完全证实，他被宣判有罪并且在泰伯恩刑场处死。特纳夫人、富兰克林和杰维斯·艾尔维斯爵士也受到了审判。宣判有罪后，于1615年10月19日到12月4日之间被处死。而对萨默赛特伯爵和伯爵夫人的重要审判直到次年5月份才进行。

在审判杰维斯·艾尔维斯的过程中，案件的细节被披露。通过这些细节，人们得知萨默赛特夫人的叔叔，北安普敦公爵和放鹰首领托马斯

·孟勋爵士也参与了投毒。前者已经死去，法庭逮捕并审讯了托马斯·孟勋爵士。出人意料的是，这个人似乎太危险了，因而，并不能把他带上绞刑台。他知道詹姆斯一世太多见不得人的秘密，他的临终演讲很可能会揭露对国王不利的信息。对旧罪过的掩盖必然导致新的过错：对托马斯·孟勋爵士的审讯戛然而止；随即，他被释放。

詹姆斯已经违背了他的誓言。他开始害怕他对于投毒者的惩罚过分草率和疯狂。毫无疑问，萨默赛特将被宣判有罪，而国王也十分明白他必会祈求宽恕和赦免。被囚禁在伦敦塔里的时候，萨默赛特十分自信地肯定詹姆斯不敢审判他。在这一点上，他彻底地错了；但是，詹姆斯确实很痛苦。如今，他们之间的秘密无从确认；但是，猜测可以通过猜测略知一二。一些人认为秘密就是国王所沉迷的恶习；而另外一些人确认这个秘密和亨利王子的死有关。亨利王子是一个善良的年轻人，却深受萨默赛特的厌恶。王子早亡，但是他的父亲并没有为此感到悲伤。据坊间流传，王子为萨默赛特投毒谋杀。或许，国王因担心某个罪行而心情沉重；他不能放心地将他的同谋萨默赛特在公众面前处决。所以，当国王发现他的最爱深陷奥弗伯里谋杀案时，他的痛苦折磨难以言状。备受痛苦煎熬的国王想尽一切办法，让罪犯的精神处于不会胡言乱语的所谓的安全状态。有人悄悄地建议他先认罪，并相信国王的宅心仁厚。同样的建议也传给了伯爵夫人。国王命令培根起草一份包括所有对萨默赛特“有利”的事实的文件，而这些事实须以犯罪证据为基础。有人再次建议萨默赛特认罪，并许诺不祥之事不会降临到他的头上。

伯爵夫人首先被审判。在宣读起诉书的过程中，她浑身颤抖地流着泪，低声认罪。当被问及她为什么不该被处以死刑的时候，她胆怯地回答说：“我已犯了众怒，我知道没有什么能减轻我的罪过；但是，我渴望得到宽恕，希望各位长官为我向国王求情。”最终，她被宣判死刑。

第二天，伯爵受审。他似乎并未相信詹姆斯的承诺，所以拒绝认

罪。可能，根据他对国王性格的了解，他对自己感到自信。他泰然自若地对目击证人进行严厉的交叉询问。经过他顽固的辩解和持续长达11小时的审讯之后，他被证明犯有重罪，并被宣判死刑。

无论罪犯和国王之间的秘密可能是什么，事实是，后者全然不顾他曾经发过的庄重誓言，根本不敢签署死刑执行令。很可能，这个执行令本应该是他自己的。伯爵和伯爵夫人被囚禁伦敦塔，时长将近5年之久。最后，让公众震惊、气愤，让他们的最高长官蒙羞的是，这两个人得到了王室的原谅，只是被命令居住在远离宫廷的地方而已。因为犯有重罪，伯爵的房产被充公；但是詹姆斯从这些充公房产的收入中，每年拿出4000英镑给这位伯爵大人！真是无耻之极！

对这两个罪犯后来的生活，人们不得而知。只是知道他们对彼此曾经的爱变成了厌恶；他们在同一个屋檐下生活了几个月，但是却从未说过一句话。

对于他们暴行的揭露并没有制止投毒的罪行。恰恰相反，就像我们在后面要看到的，真相的揭露引起了疯狂的模仿，而模仿恰是人性中很奇怪的一个特点。有人猜测詹姆斯本人就极有可能成为了投毒的牺牲品。在对哈里斯的《詹姆斯一世的生活和写作》的注释中，就有很多有关这个话题的信息。白金汉的罪名虽然没有完全成立，但是，其疑点足以送成百上千个人上绞刑架。他的犯罪动机是报复国王在统治后期对他的冷淡态度。他害怕詹姆斯要降低他的级别；同时，他又希望他可以通过对皇位继承人思想的影响，在新的统治时期继续保持他在宫廷里的权威，而做到这一点，就必须及时结束旧的统治。

在《哈利父子杂录》第二卷中，有一本名为《复仇先驱》的小册子。这本小册子由医学博士乔治·伊格利沙曼撰写，他是詹姆斯国王的医师之一。在引用这个册子的时候，哈里斯说它的内容充满了仇恨和偏见。册子内容显然有夸大其词之嫌，但是，它绝对是证据链上的一环。

伊格利沙曼说：“国王得了疟疾，公爵就利用了这个机会。当国王的所有医生都在用餐时，他让国王服下了一种白色的粉末。刚开始，国王拒绝了很长时间；但是，在他极尽谄媚的强烈要求下，国王用酒服下。迅即，身体状况开始越来越糟。他多次昏厥，浑身疼痛，疯狂地拉肚子。在重重的折磨中，国王大声喊出了那个白色的粉末，‘上帝啊！我真不应该服下它啊！’”然后，他又告诉我们：“白金汉伯爵夫人（公爵的母亲）用石膏粉涂在国王的心脏上和胸上。从此，他变得虚弱、呼吸短促、痛苦不堪。医生们惊呼国王中毒了；白金汉公爵命令他们出去，并把他们之中的一个囚禁到他自己的房间内，把另一个从宫廷赶走。国王死后，他的身体和头都极其肿胀，头发和头皮都粘到了枕头上，他的手指甲和脚趾甲都已经松动。”克拉兰敦是公爵的党羽，他所给出的詹姆斯的死因完全不同。他说：“国王死于疟疾。这本是痛风后的一点不适，但是，在一个已经58岁，而且身体肥胖又笨重的人身上，这个病有点变本加厉；在经历了四五次晕厥之后，国王离开了这个世界。国王死后，毫无根据的流言四起。这些极尽刻薄和恶毒的流言出现在国王死后人们获得言论特许权的时候；此刻，人们对于激怒权贵没有任何畏惧之心；此刻，人们把对皇室的指责和侮辱看成丰功伟绩。”尽管在这个宣言似的说明里，克拉兰敦充满自信；但是，世人绝对很难相信在四处流传的流言中，毫无真相可言。就像他所断言的那样，来自于人们的质询并不严密，权威的亲信们利用所有能用到的法律以外的影响，将这些质询否决。在布里斯托尔伯爵控告白金汉公爵的著名案件中，詹姆斯国王的中毒案是所控告的罪行之一；然而，在当时，包含证据总结的那几页历史记录被撕去了。

白金汉公爵的毒药据说购自一个叫作兰姆的医生。此人是个巫师兼江湖医生，以算命先生为掩护经营毒药业务。大众把对他的主顾的满腔愤怒统统转移到他的身上；当然，和毒药相比，这种愤怒是无害的。从此，他再也不能安然无恙地在伦敦街头出现。他的最终命运让人悲叹。一天，他走在齐普赛街头，他认为他的乔装足以掩人耳目，但是，他还

是被几个闲逛的男孩子认了出来。他们用垃圾轰赶和袭击他，同时，大声叫喊："投毒者！投毒者！打倒巫师！打倒他！"很快，民众群集而来，这位医生只好撒开了腿，拼命奔逃。在伍德街，人们追上并抓住了他。从那里，他被揪着头发，拖过泥坑，一路走到了圣·保罗十字路口；乱作一团的众人用石头和棍子不停地打他，并且大喊："杀了巫师！杀了投毒者！"

查理一世一听到消息，就立即骑马从白厅出发到出事地去平息暴乱；但是，他到的太晚了，没有来得及挽救这位众怒的牺牲品。他身上的每一根骨头都已断裂，他已经彻底地死去了。查理十分生气。因为伦敦市政府不能把这场暴乱的头目绳之以法，国王只好罚了这个城市600英镑了事。

然而，投毒的盛行之地是在意大利。很久以前，投毒在那里被认为是除掉敌人的十分正当的方式。16、17世纪的意大利人用投毒的方式害死他们的对手，投毒心境之坦然犹如当今英国人以法律程序起诉对他们造成伤害的人一样。根据当代作家的作品中所写，在斯芭拉和托菲尼雅进行这个罪恶交易的时代，女士们就堂而皇之地将毒药瓶放在她们的梳妆台上，并且，可以毫无顾忌地把它们用到别人身上，简直就像现代女士在自己身上使用古龙香水和薰衣草香水一样轻松。这种时尚的影响是如此之大，以至于谋杀竟然可以被认为是可以原谅的小过失。1648年，最后一位吉斯公爵不知天高地厚地想要掌控那不勒斯政府。在他的回忆录中，我们了解到当时人们普遍对投毒的一些奇怪的感觉。一个名叫吉纳罗·安尼斯的人，在马萨尼埃洛做了一段时间的渔夫。时间虽短，却成就辉煌，这让他成为公众眼中的首领人物。吉斯公爵对他的这副模样十分地深恶痛绝，因此，前者的跟随者决定将后者谋杀。公爵本人以十分冷静的态度告诉我们，护卫队队长被安排来承担这项任务。有人给他提建议说匕首是最有效的工具，但是，这个人翻了翻眼睛，对这个提议表示出极其虔诚的畏惧。他准备毒死吉纳罗·安尼斯，只要一声令下，

他绝对毫不犹豫；但是，他说用匕首刺死他实在和护卫队官员的身份不符！最后，人们达成一致意见：同意投毒。一个深受公爵信任的律师奥古斯提诺·莫拉把装有液体的瓶子带到了他的主人面前。下面是公爵自己的描述：

夜晚，奥古斯提诺来到我这里，告诉我："我给你带来了一个东西，他将使你摆脱吉纳罗给你带来的烦恼和不快。他死有余辜，至于采取什么样的形式将他正法并不重要。看看这个盛满了清澈的、美丽的液体的小药瓶。4天后，它就会惩罚他所有的罪过。护卫队长负责把这个药瓶给他；因为药瓶液体没有味道，吉纳罗不会怀疑什么。"

后来，公爵告诉我们说调配药量十分合适。但是，吉纳罗的幸运之处在于他那天的晚餐只吃了卷心菜抹植物油，而这些正好可以作为解毒药。他吃下之后便开始剧烈呕吐，就这样，这些东西救了他的命。他重病5天，但是从来没有怀疑有人给他投毒这件事。

随着时间的推移，兜售毒药成了十分赚钱的生意。此后11年间，投毒行为在罗马十分猖狂，最后，一向懒怠的政府不得不出面干预。贝克曼在他的《发明史》，勒布瑞特在他的《国家教堂物质史杂志》中对此事都有详细的阐释：1659年，教皇亚历山大七世得知，到忏悔室中忏悔的很多年轻妇女都说她们用慢性毒药毒死了她们的丈夫。天主教神职人员普遍认为忏悔秘密神圣不可侵犯，但是，他们为这个罪行的盛行之极感到震惊和恐惧。虽然，他们不愿意透露忏悔者的姓名，但是，他们认为他们应该向教堂首领报告这些人所犯下的滔天大罪。在罗马，十分流行的一个聊天话题就是年轻的寡妇多得有点不正常。同时，人们的议论内容还包括如下内容：如果一对夫妇生活不幸福，那么，不久后，丈夫就会生病，然后死去。罗马教皇机关开始调查，迅即获悉有个年轻夫人协会，协会夜间在一个叫作希罗尼玛·斯芭拉的女人家里聚会，聚会目的十分神秘。这个老太婆是个著名的巫婆和占卜者，担任这群年轻悍妇

的首领。后来证实，这群悍妇中有几个出身上层罗马家庭。

为了获取这个妇女秘密团体实际活动的直接证据，政府雇佣了一位女士以寻求和她们直接接触的机会。这位女士把自己打扮得华丽无比，而且，政府给予她极其丰富的钱财。当她说明自己的目的后，她发现成为斯芭拉的信徒并加入她的团体一点都不难。她装作因为丈夫的不忠和虐待而极其痛苦的模样，并恳求斯芭拉给她几滴受到全罗马女性追捧的、可以让她残酷的丈夫长眠的那种神药。斯芭拉中了圈套，她卖给了她几滴，其价钱和购买者的财富相匹配。

经过化验分析，这些液体就是人们所怀疑的慢性毒药——清澈、无味、透明，和吉斯公爵的描述别无二致。获得这个证据后，警察包围了巫婆的房子，斯芭拉和她的同伴们被拘留。根据人们的描述，斯芭拉是位身材矮小、面目丑陋的老女人。在经受严刑拷打之后，她仍旧顽固地拒绝认罪。另一个叫作格拉提奥萨的女人没有那么坚定的意志，坦白交代了这个罪恶的妇女团体的所有秘密。虽然，她的坦白是经严刑逼供获得的，但是，仍有足够的证据向后世证明她们的罪过。这些人被认定有罪，并且根据她们罪行的不同程度，被判处不同的惩罚。斯芭拉、格拉提奥萨和其他3个毒死她们丈夫的年轻女人在罗马被集体绞死。30多位妇女在众目睽睽中，被鞭笞着穿过所有街道；几个女人的高位让她们免于羞辱的惩罚，但是被驱逐出国，并被罚以重金；几个月之后，又有9位女人因投毒被绞死；而另一群年轻貌美的女孩，半裸着身子在罗马的街道上被鞭笞。

这种严厉的惩罚并没有制止投毒行为。迫不及待地要继承父亲、叔父，或者兄弟财产的妒妇贪夫选择了投毒。因为毒药无色无味，所以投毒时不容易引起怀疑。技艺高超的兜售者将毒药制成药效不同的等级，投毒者只需说明他们想让服毒者在多长时间内死去：一周、一月，或是半年；然后，他们就会得到相应的剂量。兜售者主要是女人，其中最著

名的是叫作托菲尼雅的女巫，她以这种方式成为杀害600多人的帮凶。这个女人似乎从少女时代就开始经营毒药，她刚开始住在巴勒莫，后来搬到了那不勒斯。娱乐旅行家，勒巴老爹在他的《来自意大利的书信》中，对这个人做了很多奇怪的描写。1719年，当他在契维塔韦基亚的时候，那不勒斯的总督发现大量的毒药买卖在当地进行，毒药被冠以“水”或“小水”的称号。通过进一步的调查，他断定托菲尼雅把写有“巴里圣人尼古拉斯甘露”的小瓶大量地发往意大利各地。（当时，这位女人已经有70岁高龄，并且她是在处死斯芭拉之后，马上就开始这个罪恶交易的。）

巴里圣人尼古拉斯的墓闻名整个意大利。据说，从墓中，有一股神奇的油流出，只要服用者有足够的信念，这个油可以包治百病。托菲尼雅巧妙地利用这个名字命名她的毒药，目的是逃避海关官员的警觉，因为，他们和其他人一样，对巴里圣人尼古拉斯和他的神油虔诚而恭敬。

这个毒药和斯芭拉所制作的毒药十分类似。顺势疗法创始人哈奈曼医生，在写到这个物质的时候说，毒药的成分为含砷的中性盐，它让受害者失去食欲、身体衰弱、胃部疼痛、力气消失、肺部衰竭。神父加利亚尔迪说，投毒的做法通常是将它放入茶、巧克力或汤里，它起作用的过程十分缓慢，几乎不会被察觉。奥地利国王的医生加雷利在给霍夫曼的信中说，毒药就是用煎煮的形式融化到大量的水里的晶状砷，然后再加上芯巴草（原因不明）。那不勒斯人称它为托夫妮娜水，很快，这种毒药就以托夫妮娜水之名，在整个欧洲臭名远扬。

虽然，这个女人从事罪恶贸易的范围十分广泛，但是，却很难遇到她。她一直生活在惧怕被发现的担忧里。她不断地更换名字和居住地；有时候，她会假扮成极其虔诚的信徒，在修道院连续待上几个月。每当她担心被发现的时候，她就会到教会里去寻求庇护。她很快得到了那不勒斯总督搜捕她的消息，然后，根据她的经验，躲到了修道院里。或者

是因为搜寻不够严密，或者是因为她的隐藏手段十分高超；总之，持续好几年，她都设法逃过了官方的警觉。更加离奇的是，通过解构她的生意内容，人们发现她的贸易范围和以前一样大。勒巴告诉我们说，她十分同情那些憎恨她们的丈夫、想把她们的丈夫除掉但又没钱买这个神“水”的女人们。对于这些人，她把这些毒水作为礼物送给了她们。

然而，上天是不会允许她一直玩下去的。最后，总督在一个女修道院里发现了她，并且切断了她的退路。总督几次三番抗议，要求修道院院长将其交出。但是，有主教教区大主教支持的修道院院长一再拒绝。因为他们之间的屡次交涉，这个罪犯似乎显得格外重要。公众好奇心大发，成千上万的人到这个修道院里去，只为能看上她一眼。

反反复复的推延终于耗尽了总督的耐心。总督是理智之人，而且并非狂热的天主教徒，所以，他坚决认为即便是教堂也不能庇护罪恶如此深重的罪犯。他选择了无视修道院的权威，派了一个部队，推倒墙壁，用武力将她带走。大主教、红衣主教皮尼亚泰利十分生气。他威胁说要把整个城市逐出教会，并且要封锁整个城市。受团队精神激发的所有下级神职人员都参与到这个争端中，并且对那些迷信而偏执的人施加影响。结果，这些人磨刀霍霍地要攻击总督官府，解救囚犯。

形势十分严峻，但是，总督并不是可以被吓倒的人。实际上，在事件的整个过程中，他都表现出了少有的机智、冷静和活力。为了避免逐出教会的威胁所带来的恶劣后果，他派兵包围了大主教的住所。他断定，主教绝对不会把整个城市逐出教会，饿死包括他自己在内的全市市民。这样的傻事，他是绝对不会做的。只要城市处于封锁之中，那些商人是绝对不敢为这个城市供应食品的。这个措施势必会给他以及他的神职兄弟们带来诸多不便。正如总督所料，这位心地善良的大主教平息了自己的雷霆之怒。

民众的情绪也尚待安抚。为了避免怒气冲天的骚乱和迫在眉睫的暴

乱，政府的代表巧妙地混到民众中，并且到处散布消息说这个城市里所有的井水和泉水都被托菲尼雅施了毒。就此，大功告成。公众的愤怒情绪立即转向了她。那些前一秒还把她看成圣人的人，此刻已把她作为恶魔来诅咒，他们要马上惩罚她的急切心情丝毫不亚于当时希望她逃脱的愿望。随后，托菲尼雅被严刑拷问。她一一承认了她罄竹难书的罪行，并一一列出她的主顾名单。不久，她就被绞死。她的尸体被隔墙扔到她曾住过的修道院的花园里。这个行为似乎是为了安抚那些神职人员。毕竟，这是允许他们去埋葬曾在他们的地盘上避过难的人。

在她死后，投毒的狂热似乎降低了。但是，我们在下面要看一下这股狂热是如何在更早的时期控制法国人的。1670年到1680年间，投毒活动在法国风靡一时，以至于塞维涅夫人在她的一封信中说她十分害怕法国人和投毒者这两个表达方式会成为近义词。

正如在意大利，政府也是从一个牧师那里第一次获悉这个罪行之盛。社会地位从高到低的女性都曾在她们的忏悔中承认她们毒死了她们的丈夫。真相大白后，名为奥克西利和格拉泽的两个意大利人被捕，并被囚禁在巴士底狱，原因是，有人控告他们配制并兜售用于谋杀的毒药。格拉泽死于狱中，但是，奥克西利一连几个月待在狱中，并未受到审判。到监狱后不久，他就认识了一位名叫圣克鲁瓦的狱友。当时，这位圣克鲁瓦所创造的投毒模式仍旧在法国人中流传。

在所有从此人处学得投毒知识的人中，最声名狼藉的当属布兰维利耶夫人。这个人有着极其高贵的出身背景和婚姻背景。她在青年时期似乎就没心没肺、道德败坏。如果我们相信她自己的忏悔的话，那就是，在她还是个小姑娘的时候，她的心中就装满了邪恶。但是，她不但美丽，且外在修养十足；在世人的眼里，她温柔可爱，堪作典范。盖奥特·德·皮塔瓦尔在他的《著名的事业》中，以及赛维纳夫人在她的《书信》中，对她的描述都是举止文雅、得体。从对外貌的描述上，丝毫看

不出其内在灵魂的邪恶。她于1651年嫁给了布兰维利耶侯爵，婚后几年的生活并不愉快。他放荡不羁，沉迷酒色。就是他本人将圣克鲁瓦介绍给了他的夫人。这个人给她的生活蒙上了毁灭的阴影，他拉着她一步步走向犯罪的深渊，直到她的罪过大到让她无法承受，一想起便让她浑身发抖的地步。对这个人，她心中充满激情，为了满足这罪恶的激情，她一头扎进了罪恶的深渊。她被拉到了罪孽的最深处，直到惩罚降临。

到那时为止，她始终以美好的形象示人；然而，她的丈夫却没有能力掩盖自己的恶行；所以，在寻求和她的丈夫合法分居的过程中，她几乎没有遇到阻力。这件事大大地冒犯了她的家人。自此之后，她完全扔掉了她的面具，开始和她的情人圣克鲁瓦堂而皇之地进行她的阴谋。她的父亲为她的行为感到可耻，他获得了逮捕密令，将圣克鲁瓦在巴士底狱囚禁了12个月。

圣克鲁瓦曾生活在意大利，在毒药方面，仅仅是业余水平。他知道罪大恶极的斯芭拉的一些秘密配方。入狱后，他迅速地和奥克西利建立起所谓的友谊，后来，在奥克西利的指导下，迅速提升了他对这些秘方的运用能力。奥克西利不仅向他展示了如何准备液体毒药的技巧，并且教他学会了如何使用其粉末状替代品。后来，这个粉末状的替代品在法国广为人知。像他的情妇一样，他外表谦和、诙谐、智慧；在他的身上，人们绝对看不到他的内心有两种罪恶的激情在熊熊燃烧：复仇和贪婪；这两个激情在折磨着他的心。他的这两个激情要在不幸的德奥布雷家族身上得到满足：满足复仇，是因为他们囚禁了他；满足贪婪，是因为他们很富有。由于他的粗心大意和挥金如土，他总是处于缺钱状态，只有布兰维利耶夫人供给他的开销，但是她所拥有的财产远远不能满足他的需求。一想到他和那些财富之间的障碍，他就十分沮丧；为此，他萌生了可怕的罪恶念头：毒死她的父亲德奥布雷先生和她的两个哥哥，让她继承财产。谋杀3个人对于这样的一个恶棍来说不足挂齿。他把他的计划告诉了布兰维利耶夫人，后者毫不犹豫地同意和他协作：他负责

配制，她负责投放。她着手工作的激情和欣然令人难以置信。圣克鲁瓦发现她很擅长学习。很快，她配制毒药的技巧和他一样具有了专业水准。为了试验第一批剂量的强度，她把这些毒药用在狗、兔子和鸽子身上。随后，为了进一步确认这些毒药的功效，她在各个医院假装慈善，把毒药放到她送给那些穷病人的汤里。所有这些毒药的剂量都不会一次致死，这就使得她在每个人身上尝试一次的方式不会引起谋杀的嫌疑。她还在鸽肉馅饼中投毒，在她父亲邀请的客人身上做这个罪恶的实验。为了进一步确认，她甚至接着给自己投毒！当用这种孤注一掷的方式确认了剂量的功效之后，她服下了从圣克鲁瓦那里得来的解药。所有的疑虑都被解除之后，她开始给她头发灰白的父亲投毒。她亲自将第一剂放到了她父亲的巧克力里，毒药作用发挥良好。这位老人病倒了，他那看起来焦急而体贴的女儿守护在他的床前。第二天，她给她父亲端来她声称很有营养的肉汤，汤内也已投毒。她就以这种方式耗尽了他的体质，不到10天，他就成了一具尸体。他的死看起来确实是疾病带来的后果，没有引起任何人的怀疑。

当俩兄弟悲哀地从外省赶来为他们的父亲办丧事的时候，他们发现他们的妹妹悲哀至极。最起码，从表面看来，最孝顺的感情也莫过于此了。但是，这两位年轻人的到来只不过是送死而已。他们站在了圣克鲁瓦和他已经到手一半的金子之间，他们必须命丧黄泉。一个叫肖斯的人被圣克鲁瓦雇来投放毒药，不到6周的时间，俩兄弟双双进了坟墓。

此时，人们开始怀疑；但是，所有的一切都做得天衣无缝，找不到任何和此事有牵连的人。这位女侯爵有个妹妹，由于亲人的亡故，她有权获得一半的财产。然而，只有全部的财产才能满足圣克鲁瓦的贪欲。所以，他决定：她必须死去，就像她的父兄一样。然而，她实在太多疑了。她最终离开了巴黎，也因此躲过了潜在的生命威胁。

女侯爵所进行的上述谋杀是为了取悦她的情人，现在，她急切地想

再次犯罪，这次，是为她自己。她渴望嫁给圣克鲁瓦，但是，虽然她和丈夫分居，却并未离婚。她认为毒死他比向法院起诉离婚更加简单。因为，在法院，她极有可能被拒绝。但是，圣克鲁瓦不再爱他这个罪恶的工具。恶棍往往并不钟情同类。虽然圣克鲁瓦自己罪孽深重，却并没有再娶一个恶婆的愿望，所以，他一点也不急于让侯爵死去。然而，他看起来还是参与到了这个阴谋中，并为她提供了毒死她丈夫的毒药；但是，他很小心地一并提供了解药。布兰维利耶夫人第一天给她丈夫投毒，圣克鲁瓦第二天就给他解药。他就以这种方式被他们二人反反复复折磨了一段时间之后，最终幸免于难，但是，体质被损，伤心欲绝。

但是，报应之日已近在眼前。一个可怕的灾难让谋杀的真相大白于天下。圣克鲁瓦所配制的毒药毒性极大，所以，当他在实验室工作的时候，他必须带上面罩以防窒息而死。一天，面罩不幸滑落，这个卑鄙小人就这样玩火自焚。第二天，人们在他实验室所在的昏暗住处发现了他的尸体。因为他无亲无友，警察就接管了他的财产。在所有的东西中，他们发现了一个小盒子，盒子中附有下面这个奇怪的文件：

我恳求，无论此盒落入何人之手，请务必帮我把它转给布兰维利耶侯爵夫人，夫人住在纽芬兰·圣·保罗大街。盒中所有之物和她有关，仅属她所有，且仅能为她所用。如若她先我而逝，望将此盒连同内部所有一起焚毁，切勿打开或做任何更改。为避免有人以不知情为由将其打开，我以我所尊敬的上帝和所有圣人之名发誓，我要保证我如下所言事实的应验：如果我合理且正义的意图被违背，我将让他们的良心在今生来世里都不得安宁，并以此换取我内心之平静。这就是我的临终遗嘱。1672年5月25日于巴黎。

圣克鲁瓦

这份急切的恳求并没有带来主人所期望的尊重，反而激起了人们的好奇心。盒子被打开了，人们发现里面装有文件、几个小药瓶和一些粉

末。小药瓶和粉末交给药剂师分析成分，那些文件被警察留下并打开查阅。在这些文件中，有一个布兰维利耶夫人付给圣克鲁瓦的、价值3万法郎的期票。其他的文件更加重要，因为它们暗示了她和她的仆人肖斯参与了最近的谋杀事件。她一得知克鲁瓦圣人的死讯，就企图马上得到他的文件和盒子；但是，她的要求被拒绝了。她感觉没有了犹豫的时间，立即逃跑。第二天清晨，警察奋力追踪，但是，她成功地逃到了英国。而肖斯却没有那么幸运。他对那个将他的罪行大白于天下的致命事件一无所知，他做梦都没想到他会有危险。法院逮捕并审讯了他：在严刑拷问下，他承认他曾给德奥布雷父子投毒，为此，他从圣克鲁瓦和布兰维利耶侯爵夫人那里得到100个金币，以及养老金的承诺。对他的最终判决是活活摔死在车轮上；在侯爵夫人缺席的情况下，对她的宣判是斩首。1673年，在巴黎的格雷夫的广场上，按照宣判，肖斯被处死。

布兰维利耶夫人大概在英国住了3年。1676年初，她觉得严格的追查应该已经结束，她应该可以冒险回到欧洲大陆，随后，她秘密到了列日。尽管她小心翼翼，她返回的消息还是迅速被报告给了法国政府，后者马上和那个城市的政府作出安排，以便法国的警察可以在他们法律允许的范围内将其逮捕。毛利肖斯的警官德格雷按照安排，离开巴黎去往目的地。他一到列日就发现她已经藏在了一个修道院内。在这里，法律是鞭长莫及；但是，德格雷绝非知难而退之人。他巧用智谋完成了法律无法完成的使命。他把自己装扮成教父，获得了进入修道院的许可，然后，寻机和布兰维利耶夫人见面。他说，作为路过列日的法国人，他一定要见一位女士，因为她的美貌和不幸尽人皆知。这些恭维之词满足了她的虚荣心。用稍显粗鲁却十分到位的表述来说，那就是，德格雷已经完全掌控了她，而她却对德格雷无从知晓。他继续巧妙地向她倾吐爱慕之词，直到这位已经被骗上当的侯爵夫人完全失去警觉。无需太多恳求，她就同意在修道院墙外和他幽会，因为，在那里，他们的私通比在里边要方便得多。按照她和她所谓的新情人的约定，她出现在了那里；结果发现等待她的不是勇士的拥抱，而是警察的拘捕。

对她的审判很快就开始进行。罪证充分！肖斯的临终遗言就足以证明她的罪行；除此之外，还有圣克鲁瓦盒子里那些神秘的文件；她逃离法国的行为；以及比其他任何证据都更有说服力，更能将她置于死地的证据：在圣克鲁瓦的财产中发现的由她亲自签署的文件，在这个文件里，她向他详述了她一生所犯下的罪行，而这些罪行就包括她对父兄的谋杀。所有这一切都确凿地证明了她的罪恶。在审判期间，整个巴黎都处于骚乱不安的状态，人们讨论的唯一话题就是布兰维利耶。她犯罪的所有细节都被公之于众，被公众如饥似渴地关注。对于成百上千的人来说，这是他们第一次接触秘密投毒的想法，而这些人在后来也犯下了同样的罪行。

1676年7月16日，巴黎最高刑事法庭对她谋杀父兄以及企图谋杀妹妹的犯罪事实进行宣判，判处死刑。死刑执行前，她被放在一个架子上，光着脚，脖子上套着绳子，手里拿着燃烧的火炬，被一路拉到巴黎圣母院的门口。在这里，她在众目睽睽之下当众谢罪；然后，从那里，她被带到格雷夫广场斩首。死后，她的尸体被烧掉，连灰烬都化为乌有。

在对她进行判决之后，她对自己的罪行供认不讳。看起来似乎对死亡无所畏惧，但，实际上，她的精神支柱是不顾后果的鲁莽而非勇气。塞维涅夫人说，她恳求忏悔牧师利用他对行刑者的影响，让他站在她身边，使他的身体挡住她的视线，以免她会看到“那个设圈套抓她的流氓德格雷”。她还问爬到窗口看游行队伍的女士们，她们在看什么，并且补充道：“你们所看到的景象确实十分美妙！”被放到绞刑台上的时候，她放声大笑；和活着的时候一样，临死，她仍旧不知悔改，没心没肺。第二天，人们成群结队地去搜集她的骨灰，并将它作为纪念物保存下来。人们把她看作是殉难的圣人，认为她的骨灰被神赋予了包治百病的力量。大众的愚蠢总是让他们莫名其妙地去神化某些人，而这些人的所谓神圣之名实在是有待考究；但是，在这件事情上，这些乌合之众的愚

蠢实在是令人作呕、无与伦比。

在她死之前，控告身兼朗格多克省[20]财长及牧师总收款人佩诺捷先生的诉讼程序启动。控告者是一位叫作圣·劳伦的女士。她控告佩诺捷为了获得她丈夫，即前任牧师总收款人的职位，将他毒死。这个案件的详情从未外泄，有人不遗余力地阻止针对此案的审讯。据悉，被告和圣克鲁瓦及布兰维利耶夫人有着密切的联系，所以，人们认为他的毒药是从他们那里获得。但是，布兰维利耶拒绝提供任何有可能牵连到他的细节。佩诺捷在巴士底狱被囚禁几个月之后，审讯最后无果而终。

根据当时的流言所传，红衣主教邦齐被指为佩诺捷的帮凶。红衣主教的财产每年必须为几个人支付几笔数额不菲的年金；而到投毒盛行之时，所有领取年金的人一一死亡。后来提到这些领取年金者时，红衣主教说："多亏了我的福星，我活得比他们都长！"一个头脑机智的人看到他和佩诺捷同乘一辆马车，他大声喊道："那就是红衣主教邦齐和他的福星！"这声呼喊无疑和主教所言遥相呼应。

就在当时，投毒的狂热开始控制普通民众的头脑。自此直到1682年，法国的监狱里挤满了被控告犯有此罪的犯人；同时，让人不可思议的是，其他罪行成比例减少。我们已经看到了它在意大利的疯狂程度，如果这个程度尚未登峰造极，仍旧可以被超越的话，法国绝对远远超越了意大利。这些毫无气味的毒药给谋杀活动带来的轻松如魔鬼般引诱着那些心怀叵测之人。嫉妒、复仇、贪婪，甚至仅仅是小小的怨恨都可能让人选择投毒。有些人因害怕被发现而拒绝使用手枪、匕首，以及大剂量毒药等可以立刻致死的手段，这些人肆无忌惮地选择了慢性毒药。虽然，当时的政府腐败到可以对一个像佩诺捷一样富有而又有影响力的朝臣的暴行视而不见，然而，对这个罪行在民众中的盛行也感到震惊不已。在欧洲人的眼里，耻辱就是法国人的代名词。为了制止这个恶行，路易十四设立了火焰法庭，或者叫燃烧室，在这里，法官拥有审讯和惩

罚罪犯的无上权力。

在当时，有两位女人尤其臭名昭著，她们是杀害成千上万个人的帮凶。这两个人名叫拉瓦辛和拉韦高胡，都住在巴黎。她们模仿斯芭拉和托菲尼雅，像她们俩人一样，她们也是主要把毒药卖给那些想除掉丈夫的女人；偶尔，也会卖给想除掉妻子的丈夫。她们假扮的职业是助产士，同时，她们还假装成算命者，顾客来自社会各个阶层。穷人和富人蜂拥到她们的住处，去寻求未来的秘密。她们的预言主要和死亡有关。她们给女人们预告向她们的丈夫走来的死亡；她们给心情急迫的继承人计算他们富有的亲人的死期，因为正如拜伦所述，这些亲人让他们等得太久了。她们总是小心翼翼地去促成她们所预言之事的应验，做法通常是告诉那些倍受困扰的主人说，预示死亡的迹象将会在屋子里发生，比如摔碎一个瓷器或玻璃器皿；然后，她们就会重金贿赂仆人们，让他们在约定的时间，貌似偶然地摔碎一样东西。助产士的身份让她们了解到许多家庭的秘密，她们随后就把这些秘密变成了可怕的故事。

在被发现之前，她们从事这个罪恶的交易已有多久，人们不得而知。她们最终在1679年底被察觉。经过审判并证实罪行后，两人的手被炽热的烙铁烫穿，用刀砍下。1680年2月22日，两人被活活烧死在格雷夫广场。她们在巴黎和外省的无数同谋也被发现，并经受了审判。一些作者记录为30人，另一些记录为50人，在主要城市被绞死。这些人中大部分为女人。

拉瓦辛留有一份所有到她住处买毒药的顾客的名单。在她被捕后，警察获得了这份名单，并带到法院进行审查。名单包括卢森堡的元帅、苏瓦松伯爵夫人和布永公爵夫人。元帅的罪行似乎只是在于他拜访了这样一位女人，充其量也只能算是个不体面的蠢事；但是，当时民众的呼声给他的定性绝非愚蠢那么简单。《乌得勒支和平后的欧洲事务回忆录》的作者说：“那个经营毒药和预言未来的犯罪团伙声称他已经投奔

了魔鬼。一个叫作杜邦的女孩曾经被他毒死。在其他故事中，她们说，为了让他的儿子和鲁瓦侯爵的女儿成婚，他和魔鬼签订了合同。面对这个恶毒而荒谬的控告，元帅高傲而无辜地说：‘当我的祖先马提厄·德·蒙特默伦西和路易斯·勒·格罗斯的寡妻结婚的时候，他求助的是议会而不是魔鬼，其目的是获得蒙特默伦西家族对未成年国王的支持。’这个时候，这位元帅已经因为第一次的控告而被囚于巴士底狱了。这位勇士被囚禁在长仅6.5英尺的牢房里。他的审讯停滞了几周后，又继续进行了14个月。最终，没有对他进行任何判决。”

苏瓦松伯爵夫人没有冒被审判的危险，直接逃到了布鲁塞尔。她因为企图用粉末状毒药分步毒死西班牙女王的罪行，而将自己永远地钉在了耻辱柱上。布永公爵夫人被捕后被火焰法庭审判。但是，她似乎和慢性投毒没有任何关系，而只是想探究她们可以预知未来的秘密，看一眼魔鬼以满足她的好奇心。火焰法庭的庭长之一雷尼是个面貌丑陋、身材矮小的小男人。他问她是否真的见到了魔鬼。面对这个问题，这位女士眼睁睁地看着他的脸答道：“噢，是的！我现在看到他了。他是一位身材矮小、面貌丑陋的老男人，脾气坏极了，而且还穿着国家级法律顾问的长袍。”面对这样一位头脑机敏、言语犀利的女士，雷尼小心翼翼地停止了对她的审问。公爵夫人在巴士底狱被囚禁了几个月，没有发现任何可以证明她有罪的证据。最后，在她有权势的朋友的干涉下，她被释放了。对于这些有名望的罪犯的惩罚本应降低平民效仿的热度；相反，一些名人免受惩罚的现实对事态的发展起了反作用。佩诺捷和他的雇主红衣主教邦齐的逃跑对社会造成了极其恶劣的影响。在后来长达两年的时间里，这个罪行继续肆虐，直到火刑的火柱熊熊燃烧，绞刑的绳索高高悬挂，100多个人被处死后，罪行才最后被完全镇压。[21]

[1]贝朗热（Pierre-Jean de Béranger），法国抒情诗人。原文：La faridondaine-la faridondon, Vive la faridondaine！法国民谣中的句子，没有实际含义，仅为凑足韵律。——译者注

[2]南华克区（Southwark）位于英国伦敦中心地带，人口密度比较高，被称作伦敦的城中城。——编者注

[3]伊索寓言中的故事：大山有临盆的征兆，结果最后只跑出一只老鼠来。形容期望很高，而结果却十分令人失望。——译者注

[4]密西西比泡沫事件是指法国在1719至1720年的密西西比公司股市泡沫破裂的金融事件。其始作俑者约翰·劳主张通过增加货币供给，可以在不提高物价水平的前提下，增加就业机会并增加国民产出。在约翰·劳的影响下，法国政府为了缓解财政亏空，大量发行纸币，制造虚假经济繁荣，最终引发了剧烈通货膨胀，法国金融体系因此崩溃。——编者注

[5]位于巴黎，密西西比泡沫破灭前，该地进行了大量印度股票交易。——编者注

[6]卡珊德拉（Cassandra）是希腊神话中特洛伊（Troy）的公主，别名为亚历珊德拉（Alexandra）。神话中突出的形象是一名遭诅咒的女先知，预言能力百发百中，然而无人听信。——译者注

[7]英国旧时金币，约合63英镑。——译者注

[8]雅法（Joppa）：以色列中西部的古城。——译者注

[9]卡斯提尔（Castile）：古代西班牙北部一王国。——译者注

[10]在那个灾难之年，诗人盖伊（约翰·盖伊，1685—1732，英国诗人及剧作家。——译者注）从年轻的克莱格斯那里收到一些南海公司的股票作为礼物。他立刻想象自己可以拥有2万英镑。他的朋友们劝他卖掉自己的股份，但是他梦想着荣华富贵，无法忍受自己的财路就此阻断。后来，人们又强烈建议他卖掉一部分，至少可以保证他在有生之年，每年可以有100英镑用来支配。芬顿给他的分析说：“最起码，（接上页）这可以保证你每天有洁净的衬衣穿，有一个羊肩可以享用。”这个建议被拒绝了，结果血本无归。在这场灾难中，盖伊一蹶不振，甚至到了生命垂危的地步。——约翰逊的《诗人的生活》。

[11]指近代英国杰出的历史学家爱德华·吉本（Edward Gibbon，1737—1794），著有影响深远的史学名著《罗马帝国衰之史》，18世纪欧洲启蒙时代史学的卓越代表。——译者注

[12]原文为Foyeuse，为误写。——译者注

[13]伊卡洛斯（Icarus）是希腊神话中代达罗斯的儿子，与代达罗斯使用蜡和羽毛造的翼逃离克里特岛时，他因飞得太高，双翼上的蜡遭太阳融化跌落水中丧生，被埋葬在一个海岛上。——译者注

[14]直到1845年，南海公司计划一直是英国历史上全民迷恋商业赌博的最典型事例。本系列书籍第一版在铁路大狂热发生之前及之后一年出版。

[15]卢坎：罗马诗人（公元39年11月3日——公元65年4月30日）。他最著名的著作是史诗《法沙利亚》，描述凯撒与庞培之间的内战。这部史诗虽是未完成作品，却被誉为是维吉尔《埃涅阿斯》之外最伟大的拉丁文史诗。引文即出自这部作品。——译者注

[16]货币单位：1弗罗林（florin）=2先令（shilling）——译者注

[17]1派瑞特（perit）=1/4608000盎司（ounce）——译者注

[18]公元1世纪末2世纪初的罗马诗人，以擅长写讽刺诗著称，著有《讽刺诗集》（Satires）——译者注

[19]对于违抗法庭命令的罪犯的惩罚可以用3个短语来表示：压死、冻死和饿死。压死指的是，罪犯应该趴在地上；然后，在他的身上压重物，重量慢慢增加，直到他咽气为止。有时候，惩罚并不会达到这个程度，而是允许罪犯恢复，但是要经历第二个部分，即冻死。在第二部分，罪犯要赤身裸体地在众目睽睽之下，站在户外的某个地方。第三种方式，饿死，更加可怕。法令规定："在行刑之前，让罪犯以最粗糙的面包和遇到的下一个阴沟或泥坑里的水为食；一天中，饮水和吃面包他只能选择其中之一。"在这种折磨中，只要罪犯的身体还能撑得住，就只能苟延残喘，死期由天意决定。

[20]古时法国南部一省份。——译者注

[21]不幸的是，慢性投毒这个罪行最近几年在英国死灰复燃，犯罪范围之广足以让整个民族蒙羞。投毒者主要是社会地位较低的女人，而她们的牺牲品是她们的丈夫和孩子。绝大部分的犯罪目的之卑劣让人难以想象：仅为获得他们所属的埋葬社团支付的保险金或埋葬费。人们寄希望于新颁布的限制砒霜及毒药的法令，即使不能彻底消灭这种令人发指的罪行，至少可以减少悲剧的发生。（1851）

Charles Mackay

Some Extraordinary Popular Delusions

PENGUIN BOOKS — GREAT IDEAS

Contents

1
Popular Follies of Great Cities

La faridondaine — la faridondon,

Vive la faridondaine!

Béranger

The popular humours of a great city are a never-failing source of amusement to the man whose sympathies are hospitable enough to embrace all his kind, and who, refined though he may be himself, will not sneer at the humble wit or grotesque peculiarities of the boozing mechanic, the squalid beggar, the vicious urchin, and all the motley group of the idle, the reckless, and the imitative that swarm in the alleys and broadways of a metropolis. He who walks through a great city to find subjects for weeping, may, God knows, find plenty at every corner to wring his heart; but let such a man walk on his course, and enjoy his grief alone — we are not of those who would accompany him. The miseries of us poor earthdwellers gain no alleviation from the sympathy of those who merely hunt them out to be pathetic over them. The weeping philosopher too often impairs his eyesight by his woe, and becomes unable from his tears to see the remedies for the evils which he deplores. Thus it will often be found that the man of no tears is the truest philanthropist, as he is the best physician who wears a cheerful face, even in the worst of cases.

So many pens have been employed to point out the miseries, and so many to condemn the crimes and vices, and more serious follies of the multitude, that our's shall not increase the number, at least in this chapter. Our present task shall be less ungracious, and wandering through the busy haunts of great cities, we shall seek only for amusement, and note as we pass a few of the harmless follies and whimsies of the poor.

And, first of all, walk where we will, we cannot help hearing from every side a phrase repeated with delight, and received with laughter, by men with hard hands and dirty faces — by saucy butcher lads and errand-boys — by loose women — by hackney coachmen, cabriolet drivers, and idle fellows who loiter at the corners of streets. Not one utters this phrase without producing a laugh from all within hearing. It seems applicable to every circumstance, and is the universal answer to every question; in short, it is the favourite slang phrase of the day, a phrase that, while its brief season of popularity lasts, throws a dash of fun and frolicsomeness over the existence of squalid poverty and ill-requited labour, and gives them reason to laugh as well as their more fortunate fellows in a higher stage of society.

London is peculiarly fertile in this sort of phrases, which spring up suddenly, no one knows exactly in what spot, and pervade the whole population in a few hours, no one knows how. Many years ago the favourite phrase (for, though but a monosyllable, it was a phrase in itself) was 'Quoz'. This odd word took the fancy of the multitude in an extraordinary degree, and very soon acquired an almost boundless meaning. When vulgar wit wished to mark its incredulity and raise a laugh at the same time, there was no resource so sure as this popular piece of slang. When a man was asked a favour which he did not choose to grant, he marked his sense of the suitor's unparalleled presumption by exclaiming 'Quoz!' When a mischievous urchin wished to annoy a passenger, and create mirth for his chums, he looked him in the face, and cried out 'Quoz!' and the exclamation never failed in its object. When a disputant was desirous of throwing a doubt upon the veracity of his opponent, and getting summarily rid of an argument which he could not overturn, he uttered the word 'Quoz', with a contemptuous curl of his lip and an impatient shrug of his shoulders. The universal monosyllable conveyed all his meaning, and not only told his opponent that he lied, but that he erred egregiously if he thought that anyone was such a nincompoop as to believe him. Every alehouse resounded with 'Quoz'; every street corner was noisy with it, and every wall for miles around was chalked with it.

But, like all other earthly things, 'Quoz' had its season, and passed away as suddenly as it arose, never again to be the pet and the idol of the populace. A new claimant drove it from its place, and held undisputed sway till, in its turn, it was hurled from its pre-eminence, and a successor appointed in its stead.

'What a shocking bad hat!' was the phrase that was next in vogue. No sooner had it become universal, than thousands of idle but sharp eyes were on the watch for the passenger whose hat showed any signs, however slight, of ancient service. Immediately the cry arose, and, like the what-whoop of the Indians, was repeated by a hundred discordant throats. He was a wise man who, finding himself under these circumstances 'the observed of all observers', bore his honours meekly. He who showed symptoms of ill-feeling at the imputations cast upon his hat, only brought upon himself redoubled notice. The mob soon perceive whether a man is irritable, and, if of their own class, they love to make sport of him. When such a man, and with such a hat, passed in those days through a crowded neighbourhood, he might think himself fortunate if his annoyances were confined to the shouts and cries of the populace. The obnoxious hat was often snatched from his head, and thrown into the gutter by some practical joker, and then raised, covered with mud, upon the end of a stick, for the admiration of the spectators, who held their sides with laughter, and exclaimed in the pauses of their mirth, 'Oh! what a shocking bad hat!' 'What a shocking bad hat!' Many a nervous, poor man, whose purse could but ill spare the outlay, doubtless purchased a new hat before the time, in order to avoid exposure in this manner.

The origin of this singular saying, which made fun for the metropolis for months, is not involved in the same obscurity as that which shrouds the origin of Quoz and some others. There had been a hotly contested election for the borough of Southwark, and one of the candidates was an eminent hatter. This gentleman, in canvassing the electors, adopted a somewhat professional mode of conciliating their goodwill, and of bribing them without letting them perceive that they were bribed. Whenever he called upon or met a voter whose hat was not of the best material, or, being so, had seen its best days, he invariably said, 'What a shocking bad hat you have got; call at my warehouse, and you shall have a new one!' Upon the day of election this circumstance was remembered, and his opponents made the most of it, by inciting the crowd to keep up an incessant cry of 'What a shocking bad hat!' all the time the honourable candidate was addressing them. From Southwark the phrase spread over all London, and reigned, for a time, the supreme slang of the season.

Hookey Walker, derived from the chorus of a popular ballad, was also high in favour at one time, and served, like its predecessor, Quoz, to answer all questions. In the course of time the latter word alone became the favourite, and was uttered with a peculiar drawl upon the first syllable, and a sharp turn upon the last. If a lively servant girl was importuned for a kiss by a fellow she did not care about, she cocked her little nose, and cried 'Walker!' If a dustman asked his friend for the loan of a shilling, and his friend was either unable or unwilling to accommodate him, the probable answer he would receive was 'Walker!' If a drunken man was reeling along the streets, and a boy pulled his coat-tails, or a man knocked his hat over his eyes to make fun of him, the joke was always accompanied by the same exclamation. This lasted for two or three months, and 'Walker!' walked off the stage, never more to be revived for the entertainment of that or any future generation.

The next phrase was a most preposterous one. Who invented it, how it arose, or where it was first heard, are alike unknown. Nothing about it is certain, but that for months it was the slang par excellence of the Londoners, and afforded them a vast gratification. 'There he goes with his eye out!' or 'There she goes with her eye out!' as the sex of the party alluded to might be, was in the mouth of everybody who knew the town. The sober part of the community were as much puzzled by this unaccountable saying as the vulgar were delighted with it. The wise thought it very foolish, but the many thought it very funny, and the idle amused themselves by chalking it upon walls, or scribbling it upon monuments. But, 'all that's bright must fade', even in slang. The people grew tired of their hobby, and 'There he goes with his eye out!' was heard no more in its accustomed haunts.

Another very odd phrase came into repute in a brief space afterwards, in the form of the impertinent and not universally apposite query, 'Has your mother sold her mangle?' But its popularity was not of that boisterous and cordial kind which ensures a long continuance of favour. What tended to impede its progress was, that it could not be well applied to the older portions of society. It consequently ran but a brief career, and then sank into oblivion. Its successor enjoyed a more extended fame, and laid its foundations so deep, that years and changing fashions have not sufficed to eradicate it. This phrase was 'Flare up!' and it is, even now, a colloquialism in common use. It took its rise in the time of the Reform riots, when Bristol was nearly half burned by the infuriated populace. The flames were said to have flared up in the devoted city. Whether there was anything peculiarly captivating in the sound, or in the idea of these words, is hard to say; but whatever was the reason, it tickled the mob-fancy mightily, and drove all other slang out of the field before it. Nothing was to be heard all over London but 'flare up!' It answered all questions, settled all disputes, was applied to all persons, all things, and all circumstances, and became suddenly the most comprehensive phrase in the English language. The man who had overstepped the bounds of decorum in his speech was said to have flared up; he who had paid visits too repeated to the gin-shop, and got damaged in consequence, had flared up. To put oneself into a passion; to stroll out on a nocturnal frolic, and alarm a neighbourhood, or to create a disturbance in any shape, was to flare up. A lovers' quarrel was a flare up; so was a boxing-match between two blackguards in the streets, and the preachers of sedition and revolution recommended the English nation to flare up, like the French. So great a favourite was the word, that people loved to repeat it for its very sound. They delighted apparently in hearing their own organs articulate it; and labouring men, when none who could respond to the call were within hearing, would often startle the aristocratic echoes of the West by the well-known slang phrase of the East. Even in the dead hours of the night, the ears of those who watched late, or who could not sleep, were saluted with the same sound. The drunkard reeling home showed that he was still a man and a citizen, by calling 'flare up' in the pauses of his hiccough. Drink had deprived him of the power of arranging all other ideas; his intellect was sunk to the level of the brute's; but he clung to humanity by the one last link of the popular cry. While he could vociferate that sound, he had rights as an Englishman, and would not sleep in a gutter, like a dog! Onwards he went, disturbing quiet streets and comfortable people by his whoop, till exhausted nature could support him no more, and he rolled powerless into the road. When, in due time afterwards, the policeman stumbled upon him as he lay, that guardian of the peace turned the full light of his lantern on his face, and exclaimed, 'Here's a poor devil who's been flaring up!' Then came the stretcher, on which the victim of deep potations was carried to the watchhouse, and pitched into a dirty cell, among a score of wretches about as far gone as himself, who saluted their new comrade by a loud, long shout of 'flare up!'

So universal was this phrase, and so enduring seemed its popularity, that a speculator, who knew not the evanescence of slang, established a weekly newspaper under its name. But he was like the man who built his house upon the sand; his foundation gave way under him, and the phrase and the newspaper were washed into the mighty sea of the things that were. The people grew at last weary of the monotony, and 'flare up' became vulgar even among them. Gradually it was left to little boys who did not know the world, and in process of time sank altogether into neglect. It is now heard no more as a piece of popular slang; but the words are still used to signify any sudden outburst either of fire, disturbance, or illnature.

The next phrase that enjoyed the favour of the million was less concise, and seems to have been originally aimed against precocious youths who gave themselves the airs of manhood before their time. 'Does your mother know you're out?' was the provoking query addressed to young men of more than reasonable swagger, who smoked cigars in the streets, and wore false whiskers to look irresistible. We have seen many a conceited fellow who could not suffer a woman to pass him without staring her out of countenance, reduced at once into his natural insignificance by the mere utterance of this phrase. Apprentice lads and shopmen in their Sunday clothes held the words in abhorrence, and looked fierce when they were applied to them. Altogether the phrase had a very salutary effect, and in a thousand instances showed young Vanity, that it was not half so pretty and engaging as it thought itself. What rendered it so provoking was the doubt it implied as to the capability of self-guidance possessed by the individual to whom it was addressed. 'Does your mother know you're out?' was a query of mock concern and solicitude, implying regret and concern that one so young and inexperienced in the ways of a great city should be allowed to wander abroad without the guidance of a parent. Hence the great wrath of those who verged on manhood, but had not reached it, whenever they were made the subject of it. Even older heads did not like it; and the heir of a ducal house, and inheritor of a warrior's name, to whom they were applied by a cabriolet driver, who was ignorant of his rank, was so indignant at the affront, that he summoned the offender before the magisterial bench. The fellow had wished to impose upon his Lordship by asking double the fare he was entitled to, and when his Lordship resisted the demand, he was insultingly asked 'if his mother knew he was out?' All the drivers on the stand joined in the query, and his Lordship was fain to escape their laughter by walking away with as much haste as his dignity would allow. The man pleaded ignorance that his customer was a Lord, but offended justice fined him for his mistake.

When this phrase had numbered its appointed days, it died away, like its predecessors, and 'Who are you?' reigned in its stead. This new favourite, like a mushroom, seems to have sprung up in a night, or, like a frog in Cheapside, to have come down in a sudden shower. One day it was unheard, unknown, uninvented; the next it pervaded London; every alley resounded with it; every highway was musical with it,

> And street to street, and lane to lane flung back
>
> The one unvarying cry.

The phrase was uttered quickly, and with a sharp sound upon the first and last words, leaving the middle one little more than an aspiration. Like all its compeers which had been extensively popular, it was applicable to almost every variety of circumstance. The lovers of a plain answer to a plain question did not like it at all. Insolence made use of it to give offence; ignorance, to avoid exposing itself; and waggery, to create laughter. Every new comer into an alehouse tap-room was asked unceremoniously, 'Who are you?' and if he looked foolish, scratched his head, and did not know what to reply, shouts of boisterous merriment resounded on every side. An authoritative disputant was not infrequently put down, and presumption of every kind checked by the same query. When its popularity was at its height, a gentleman, feeling the hand of a thief in his pocket, turned suddenly round, and caught him in the act, exclaiming, 'Who are you?' The mob which gathered round applauded to the very echo, and thought it the most capital joke they had ever heard — the very acme of wit — the very essence of humour. Another circumstance, of a similar kind, gave an additional fillip to the phrase, and infused new life and vigour into it, just as it was dying away. The scene occurred in the chief criminal court of the kingdom. A prisoner stood at the bar; the offence with which he had been charged was clearly proved against him; his counsel had been heard, not in his defence, but in extenuation, insisting upon his previous good life and character, as reasons for the lenity of the court. 'And where are your witnesses?' enquired the learned judge who presided. 'Please you, my Lord, I knows the prisoner at the bar, and a more honester feller never breathed,' said a rough voice in the gallery. The officers of the court looked aghast, and the strangers tittered with ill-suppressed laughter. 'Who are you?' said the Judge, looking suddenly up, but with imperturbable gravity. The court was convulsed; the titter broke out into a laugh, and it was several minutes before silence and decorum could be restored. When the Ushers recovered their self-possession, they made diligent search for the profane transgressor; but he was not to be found. Nobody knew him; nobody had seen him. After a while the business of the court again proceeded. The next prisoner brought up for trial augured favourably of his prospects when he learned that the solemn lips of the representative of justice had uttered the popular phrase as if he felt and appreciated it. There was no fear that such a judge would use undue severity; his heart was with the people; he understood their language and their manners, and would make allowances for the temptations which drove them into crime. So thought many of the prisoners, if we may infer it from the fact, that the learned judge suddenly acquired an immense increase of popularity. The praise of his wit was in every mouth, and 'Who are you?' renewed its lease, and remained in possession of public favour for another term in consequence.

But it must not be supposed that there were no interregna between the dominion of one slang phrase and another. They did not arise in one long line of unbroken succession, but shared with song the possession of popular favour. Thus, when the people were in the mood for music, slang advanced its claims to no purpose, and, when they were inclined for slang, the sweet voice of music wooed them in vain. About twenty years ago London resounded with one chorus, with the love of which everybody seemed to be smitten. Girls and boys, young men and old, maidens and wives, and widows, were all alike musical. There was an absolute mania for singing, and the worst of it was, that, like good Father Philip, in the romance of The Monastery, they seemed utterly unable to change their tune. 'Cherry ripe!' 'Cherry ripe!' was the universal cry of all the idle in the town. Every unmelodious voice gave utterance to it; every crazy fiddle, every cracked flute, every wheezy pipe, every street organ was heard in the same strain, until studious and quiet men stopped their ears in desperation, or fled miles away into the fields or woodlands, to be at peace. This plague lasted for a twelvemonth, until the very name of cherries became an abomination in the land. At last the excitement wore itself away, and the tide of favour set in a new direction. Whether it was another song or a slang phrase, is difficult to determine at this distance of time; but certain it is, that very shortly afterwards, people went mad upon a dramatic subject, and nothing was to be heard of but 'Tom and Jerry'. Verbal wit had amused the multitude long enough, and they became more practical in their recreation. Every youth on the town was seized with the fierce desire of distinguishing himself, by knocking down the 'charlies', being locked up all night in a watchhouse, or kicking up a row among loose women and blackguard men in the low dens of St Giles's. Imitative boys vied with their elders in similar exploits, until this unworthy passion, for such it was, had lasted, like other follies, its appointed time, and the town became merry after another fashion. It was next thought the height of vulgar wit to answer all questions by placing the point of the thumb upon the tip of the nose, and twirling the fingers in the air. If one man wished to insult or annoy another, he had only to make use of this cabalistic sign in his face, and his object was accomplished. At every street corner where a group was assembled, the spectator who was curious enough to observe their movements, would be sure to see the fingers of some of them at their noses, either as a mark of incredulity, surprise, refusal, or mockery, before he had watched two minutes. There is some remnant of this absurd custom to be seen to this day; but it is thought low, even among the vulgar.

About sixteen years ago, London became again most preposterously musical. The vox populi wore itself hoarse by singing the praises of 'The Sea, the Sea!' If a stranger (and a philosopher) had walked through London, and listened to the universal chorus, he might have constructed a very pretty theory upon the love of the English for the sea-service, and our acknowledged superiority over all other nations upon that element. 'No wonder,' he might have said, 'that this people is invincible upon the ocean. The love of it mixes with their daily thoughts: they celebrate it even in the market-place: their street-minstrels excite charity by it; and high and low, young and old, male and female, chant 'Io poeans' in its praise. Love is not honoured in the national songs of this warlike race — Bacchus is no god to them; they are men of sterner mould, and think only of "the Sea, the Sea!" and the means of conquering upon it.'

Such would, doubtless, have been his impression if he had taken the evidence only of his ears. Alas! in those days for the refined ears that were musical! great was their torture when discord, with its thousand diversities of tone, struck up this appalling anthem — there was no escape from it. The migratory minstrels of Savoy caught the strain, and pealed it down the long vistas of quiet streets, till their innermost and snuggest apartments reechoed with the sound. Men were obliged to endure this crying evil for full six months, wearied to desperation, and made seasick on the dry land.

Several other songs sprang up in due succession afterwards, but none of them, with the exception of one, entitled 'All round my Hat', enjoyed any extraordinary share of favour, until an American actor introduced a vile song called 'Jim Crow'. The singer sang his verses in appropriate costume, with grotesque gesticulations, and a sudden whirl of his body at the close of each verse. It took the taste of the town immediately, and for months the ears of orderly people were stunned by the senseless chorus:

Turn about and wheel about,
And do just so —
Turn about and wheel about,
And jump, Jim Crow!

Street-minstrels blackened their faces in order to give proper effect to the verses; and fatherless urchins, who had to choose between thieving and singing for their livelihood, took the latter course, as likely to be the more profitable, as long as the public taste remained in that direction. The uncouth dance, its accompaniment, might be seen in its full perfection on market nights in any great thoroughfare; and the words of the song might be heard, piercing above all the din and buzz of the ever-moving multitude. He, the calm observer, who, during the heyday popularity of this doggerel,

Sat beside the public way,
Thick strewn with summer dust, and saw the stream
Of people there was hurrying to and fro,
Numerous as gnats upon the evening gleam, might have exclaimed with Shelley, whose fine lines we quote, that

The million, with fierce song and maniac dance,

Did rage around.

The philosophic theorist we have already supposed soliloquising upon the English character, and forming his opinion of it from their exceeding love for a sea-song, might, if he had again dropped suddenly into London, have formed another very plausible theory to account for our unremitting efforts for the abolition of the Slave Trade. 'Benevolent people!' he might have said, 'how unbounded are your sympathies! Your unhappy brethren of Africa, differing from you only in the colour of their skins, are so dear to you, and you begrudge so little the twenty millions you have paid on their behalf, that you love to have a memento of them continually in your sight. Jim Crow is the representative of that injured race, and as such is the idol of your populace! See how they all sing his praises! — how they imitate his peculiarities! — how they repeat his name in their moments of leisure and relaxation! They even carve images of him to adorn their hearths, that his cause and his sufferings may never be forgotten! Oh, philanthropic England! — oh, vanguard of civilisation!'

Such are a few of the peculiarities of the London multitude, when no riot, no execution, no murder, no balloon, disturbs the even current of their thoughts. These are the whimseys of the mass — the harmless follies by which they unconsciously endeavour to lighten the load of care which presses upon their existence. The wise man, even though he smile at them, will not altogether withhold his sympathy, and will say, 'Let them enjoy their slang phrases and their choruses if they will; and if they cannot be happy, at least let them be merry.' To the Englishman, as well as to the Frenchman of whom Beranger sings, there may be some comfort in so small a thing as a song, and we may, own with him that

Au peuple attriste
Ce qui rendra la gaîté,

C'est la GAUDRIOLE!
O gué!
C'est la GAUDRIOLE!'

2
The South-Sea Bubble

At length corruption, like a general flood,
Did deluge all, and avarice creeping on,
Spread, like a low-born mist, and hid the sun.
Statesmen and patriots plied alike the stocks,
Peeress and butler shared alike the box;
And judges jobbed, and bishops bit the town,
And mighty dukes packed cards for half a crown:
Britain was sunk in lucre's sordid charms.

Pope

The South-Sea Company was originated by the celebrated Harley, Earl of Oxford, in the year 1711, with the view of restoring public credit, which had suffered by the dismissal of the Whig ministry, and of providing for the discharge of the army and navy debentures, and other parts of the floating debt, amounting to nearly ten millions sterling. A company of merchants, at that time without a name, took this debt upon themselves, and the government agreed to secure them, for a certain period, the interest of six per cent. To provide for this interest, amounting to £600,000 per annum, the duties upon wines, vinegar, India goods, wrought silks, tobacco, whale-fins, and some other articles, were rendered permanent. The monopoly of the trade to the South Seas was granted, and the company, being incorporated by Act of Parliament, assumed the title by which it has ever since been known. The minister took great credit to himself for his share in this transaction, and the scheme was always called by his flatterers 'the Earl of Oxford's masterpiece'.

Even at this early period of its history, the most visionary ideas were formed by the company and the public of the immense riches of the western coast of South America. Everybody had heard of the gold and silver mines of Peru and Mexico; everyone believed them to be inexhaustible, and that it was only necessary to send the manufactures of England to the coast, to be repaid a hundredfold in gold and silver ingots by the natives. A report, industriously spread, that Spain was willing to concede four ports, on the coasts of Chile and Peru for the purposes of traffic, increased the general confidence, and for many years the South-Sea Company's stock was in high favour.

Philip V of Spain, however, never had any intention of admitting the English to a free trade in the ports of Spanish America. Negotiations were set on foot, but their only result was the assiento contract, or the privilege of supplying the colonies with Negroes for thirty years, and of sending once a year a vessel, limited both as to tonnage and value of cargo, to trade with Mexico, Peru, or Chile. The latter permission was only granted upon the hard condition, that the King of Spain should enjoy one-fourth of the profits, and a tax of five per cent on the remainder. This was a great disappointment to the Earl of Oxford and his party, who were reminded much oftener than they found agreeable of the 'Parturiunt montes, nascitur ridiculus mus'. But the public confidence in the South-Sea Company was not shaken. The Earl of Oxford declared that Spain would permit two ships, in addition to the annual ship, to carry out merchandise during the first year; and a list was published, in which all the ports and harbours of these coasts were pompously set forth as open to the trade of Great Britain. The first voyage of the annual ship was not made till the year 1717, and in the following year the trade was suppressed by the rupture with Spain.

The king's speech, at the opening of the session of 1717, made pointed allusion to the state of public credit, and recommended that proper measures should be taken to reduce the national debt. The two great monetary corporations, the South-Sea Company and the Bank of England, made proposals to parliament on the 20th of May ensuing. The South-Sea Company prayed that their capital stock of ten millions might be increased to twelve, by subscription or otherwise, and offered to accept five per cent instead of six upon the whole amount. The bank made proposals equally advantageous. The house debated for some time, and finally three acts were passed, called the South-Sea Act, the Bank Act, and the General Fund Act. By the first, the proposals of the South-Sea Company were accepted, and that body held itself ready to advance the sum of two millions towards discharging the principal and interest of the debt due by the state for the four lottery funds of the ninth and tenth years of Queen Anne. By the second act, the bank received a lower rate of interest for the sum of £1,775,027 15s. due to it by the state, and agreed to deliver up to be cancelled as many exchequer bills as amounted to two millions sterling, and to accept of an annuity of one hundred thousand pounds, being after the rate of five per cent, the whole redeemable at one year's notice. They were further required to be ready to advance, in case of need, a sum not exceeding £2,500,000 upon the same terms of five per cent interest, redeemable by parliament. The General Fund Act recited the various deficiencies, which were to be made good by the aids derived from the foregoing sources.

The name of the South-Sea Company was thus continually before the public. Though their trade with the South American States produced little or no augmentation of their revenues, they continued to flourish as a monetary corporation. Their stock was in high request, and the directors, buoyed up with success, began to think of new means for extending their influence. The Mississippi scheme of John Law, which so dazzled and captivated the French people, inspired them with an idea that they could carry on the same game in England. The anticipated failure of his plans did not divert them from their intention. Wise in their own conceit, they imagined they could avoid his faults, carry on their schemes for ever, and stretch the cord of credit to its extremest tension, without causing it to snap asunder.

It was while Law's plan was at its greatest height of popularity, while people were crowding in thousands to the Rue Quincampoix, and ruining themselves with frantic eagerness, that the South-Sea directors laid before parliament their famous plan for paying off the national debt. Visions of boundless wealth floated before the fascinated eyes of the people in the two most celebrated countries of Europe. The English commenced their career of extravagance somewhat later than the French; but as soon as the delirium seized them, they were determined not to be outdone. Upon the 22nd of January, 1720, the House of Commons resolved itself into a committee of the whole house, to take into consideration that part of the king's speech at the opening of the session which related to the public debts, and the proposal of the SouthSea Company towards the redemption and sinking of the same. The proposal set forth at great length, and under several heads, the debts of the state, amounting to £30,981,712 which the company were anxious to take upon themselves, upon consideration of five per cent per annum, secured to them until Midsummer 1727; after which time, the whole was to become redeemable at the pleasure of the legislature, and the interest to be reduced to four per cent. The proposal was received with great favour; but the Bank of England had many friends in the House of Commons, who were desirous that that body should share in the advantages that were likely to accrue. On behalf of this corporation it was represented, that they had performed great and eminent services to the state in the most difficult times, and deserved, at least, that if any advantage was to be made by public bargains of this nature, they should be preferred before a company that had never done anything for the nation. The further consideration of the matter was accordingly postponed for five days. In the mean time, a plan was drawn up by the governors of the bank. The South-Sea Company, afraid that the bank might offer still more advantageous terms to the government than themselves, reconsidered their former proposal, and made some alterations in it, which they hoped would render it more acceptable. The principal change was a stipulation that the government might redeem these debts at the expiration of four years, instead of seven, as at first suggested. The bank resolved not to be outbidden in this singular auction, and the governors also reconsidered their first proposal, and sent in a new one.

Thus, each corporation having made two proposals, the house began to deliberate. Mr Robert Walpole was the chief speaker in favour of the bank, and Mr Aislabie, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the principal advocate on behalf of the South-Sea Company. It was resolved, on the 2nd of February, that the proposals of the latter were most advantageous to the country. They were accordingly received, and leave was given to bring in a bill to that effect.

Exchange Alley was in a fever of excitement. The company's stock, which had been at a hundred and thirty the previous day, gradually rose to three hundred, and continued to rise with the most astonishing rapidity during the whole time that the bill in its several stages was under discussion. Mr

Walpole was almost the only statesman in the house who spoke out boldly against it. He warned them, in eloquent and solemn language, of the evils that would ensue. It countenanced, he said, 'the dangerous practice of stock-jobbing, and would divert the genius of the nation from trade and industry. It would hold out a dangerous lure to decoy the unwary to their ruin, by making them part with the earnings of their labour for a prospect of imaginary wealth. The great principle of the project was an evil of first-rate magnitude; it was to raise artificially the value of the stock, by exciting and keeping up a general infatuation, and by promising dividends out of funds which could never be adequate to the purpose.' In a prophetic spirit he added, that if the plan succeeded, the directors would become masters of the government, form a new and absolute aristocracy in the kingdom, and control the resolutions of the legislature. If it failed, which he was convinced it would, the result would bring general discontent and ruin upon the country. Such would be the delusion, that when the evil day came, as come it would, the people would start up, as from a dream, and ask themselves if these things could have been true. All his eloquence was in vain. He was looked upon as a false prophet, or compared to the hoarse raven, croaking omens of evil. His friends, however, compared him to Cassandra, predicting evils which would only be believed when they came home to men's hearths, and stared them in the face at their own boards. Although, in former times, the house had listened with the utmost attention to every word that fell from his lips, the benches became deserted when it was known that he would speak on the South-Sea question.

The bill was two months in its progress through the House of Commons. During this time every exertion was made by the directors and their friends, and more especially by the chairman, the noted Sir John Blunt, to raise the price of the stock. The most extravagant rumours were in circulation. Treaties between England and Spain were spoken of, whereby the latter was to grant a free trade to all her colonies; and the rich produce of the mines of Potosi-la-Paz was to be brought to England until silver should become almost as plentiful as iron. For cotton and woollen goods, with which we could supply them in abundance, the dwellers in Mexico were to empty their golden mines. The company of merchants trading to the South Seas would be the richest the world ever saw, and every hundred pounds invested in it would produce hundreds per annum to the stockholder. At last the stock was raised by these means to near four hundred; but, after fluctuating a good deal, settled at three hundred and thirty, at which price it remained when the bill passed the Commons by a majority of 172 against 55.

In the House of Lords the bill was hurried through all its stages with unexampled rapidity. On the 4th of April it was read a first time; on the 5th, it was read a second time; on the 6th, it was committed; and on the 7th, was read a third time and passed.

Several peers spoke warmly against the scheme; but their warnings fell upon dull, cold ears. A speculating frenzy had seized them as well as the plebeians. Lord North and Grey said the bill was unjust in its nature, and might prove fatal in its consequences, being calculated to enrich the few and impoverish the many. The Duke of Wharton followed; but, as he only retailed at second-hand the arguments so eloquently stated by Walpole in the Lower House, he was not listened to with even the same attention that had been bestowed upon Lord North and Grey. Earl Cowper followed on the same side, and compared the bill to the famous horse of the siege of Troy. Like that, it was ushered in and received with great pomp and acclamations of joy, but bore within it treachery and destruction. The Earl of Sunderland endeavoured to answer all objections; and on the question being put, there appeared only seventeen peers against, and eighty-three in favour of the project. The very same day on which it passed the Lords, it received the Royal assent, and became the law of the land.

It seemed at that time as if the whole nation had turned stock-jobbers. Exchange Alley was every day blocked up by crowds, and Cornhill was impassable for the number of carriages. Everybody came to purchase stock. 'Every fool aspired to be a knave.' In the words of a ballad, published at the time, and sung about the streets,

Then stars and garters did appear
Among the meaner rabble;
To buy and sell, to see and hear
The Jews and Gentiles squabble.

The greatest ladies thither came,
And plied in chariots daily,
Or pawned their jewels for a sum

The inordinate thirst of gain that had afflicted all ranks of society was not to be slaked even in the South Sea. Other schemes, of the most extravagant kind, were started. The share-lists were speedily filled up, and an enormous traffic carried on in shares, while, of course, every means were resorted to to raise them to an artificial value in the market.

Contrary to all expectation, South-Sea stock fell when the bill received the royal assent. On the 7th of April the shares were quoted at three hundred and ten, and on the following day at two hundred and ninety. Already the directors had tasted the profits of their scheme, and it was not likely that they should quietly allow the stock to find its natural level, without an effort to raise it. Immediately their busy emissaries were set to work. Every person interested in the success of the project endeavoured to draw a knot of listeners around him, to whom he expatiated on the treasures of the South American seas. Exchange Alley was crowded with attentive groups. One rumour alone, asserted with the utmost confidence, had an immediate effect upon the stock. It was said that Earl Stanhope had received overtures in France from the Spanish Government to exchange Gibraltar and Port Mahon for some places on the coast of Peru, for the security and enlargement of the trade in the South Seas. Instead of one annual ship trading to those ports, and allowing the king of Spain twenty-five per cent out of the profits, the company might build and charter as many ships as they pleased, and pay no percentage whatever to any foreign potentate. 'Visions of ingots danced before their eyes', and stock rose rapidly. On the 12th of April, five days after the bill had become law, the directors opened their books for a subscription of a million, at the rate of £300 for every £100 capital. Such was the concourse of persons of all ranks, that this first subscription was found to amount to above two millions of original stock. It was to be paid at five payments, of £60 each for every £100. In a few days the stock advanced to three hundred and forty, and the subscriptions were sold for double the price of the first payment. To raise the stock still higher, it was declared, in a general court of directors, on the 21st of April, that the midsummer dividend should be ten per cent, and that all subscriptions should be entitled to the same. These resolutions answering the end designed, the directors, to improve the infatuation of the monied men, opened their books for a second subscription of a million, at four hundred per cent. Such was the frantic eagerness of people of every class to speculate in these funds, that in the course of a few hours no less than a million and a half was subscribed at that rate.

In the mean time, innumerable joint-stock companies started up everywhere. They soon received the name of Bubbles, the most appropriate that imagination could devise. The populace are often most happy in the nicknames they employ. None could be more apt than that of Bubbles. Some of them lasted for a week, or a fortnight, and were no more heard of, while others could not even live out that short span of existence. Every evening produced new schemes, and every morning new projects. The highest of the aristocracy were as eager in this hot pursuit of gain as the most plodding jobber in Cornhill. The Prince of Wales became governor of one company, and is said to have cleared £40,000 by his speculations. The Duke of Bridgewater started a scheme for the improvement of London and Westminster, and the Duke of Chandos another. There were nearly a hundred different projects, each more extravagant and deceptive than the other. To use the words of the Political State, they were 'set on foot and promoted by crafty knaves, then pursued by multitudes of covetous fools, and at last appeared to be, in effect, what their vulgar appellation denoted them to be — bubbles and mere cheats'. It was computed that near one million and a half sterling was won and lost by these unwarrantable practices, to the impoverishment of many a fool, and the enriching of many a rogue.

Some of these schemes were plausible enough, and, had they been undertaken at a time when the public mind was unexcited, might have been pursued with advantage to all concerned. But they were established merely with the view of raising the shares in the market. The projectors took the first opportunity of a rise to sell out, and next morning the scheme was at an end. Maitland, in his History of London, gravely informs us, that one of the projects which received great encouragement, was for the establishment of a company 'to make deal boards out of sawdust'. This is no doubt intended as a joke; but there is abundance of evidence to show that dozens of schemes, hardly a whit more reasonable, lived their little day, ruining hundreds ere they fell. One of them was for a wheel for perpetual motion — capital, one million; another was 'for encouraging the breed of horses in England, and improving of glebe and church lands, and repairing and rebuilding parsonage and vicarage houses'. Why the clergy, who were so mainly interested in the latter clause, should have taken so much interest in the first, is only to be explained on the supposition that the scheme was projected by a knot of the foxhunting parsons, once so common in England. The shares of this company were rapidly subscribed for. But the most absurd and preposterous of all, and which showed, more completely than any other, the utter madness of the people, was one started by an unknown adventurer, entitled 'A company for carrying on an undertaking of great advantage, but nobody to know what it is'. Were not the fact stated by scores of credible witnesses, it would be impossible to believe that any person could have been duped by such a project. The man of genius who essayed this bold and successful inroad upon public credulity, merely stated in his prospectus that the required capital was half a million, in five thousand shares of £100 each, deposit £2 per share. Each subscriber, paying his deposit, would be entitled to £100 per annum per share. How this immense profit was to be obtained, he did not condescend to inform them at that time, but promised that in a month full particulars should be duly announced, and a call made for the remaining £98 of the subscription. Next morning, at nine o'clock, this great man opened an office in Cornhill. Crowds of people beset his door, and when he shut up at three o'clock, he found that no less than one thousand shares had been subscribed for, and the deposits paid. He was thus, in five hours, the winner of £2,000. He was philosopher enough to be contented with his venture, and set off the same evening for the Continent. He was never heard of again.

Well might Swift exclaim, comparing Change Alley to a gulf in the South Sea:

Subscribers here by thousands float,
  And jostle one another down,
Each paddling in his leaky boat,
  And here they fish for gold, and drown.

Now buried in the depths below,
  Now mounted up to heaven again,
They reel and stagger to and fro,
  At their wit's end, like drunken men.

Meantime, secure on Garraway cliffs,
  A savage race, by shipwrecks fed,
Lie waiting for the foundered skiffs,
  And strip the bodies of the dead.

Another fraud that was very successful was that of the 'Globe Permits', as they were called. They were nothing more than square pieces of playing-cards, on which was the impression of a seal, in wax, bearing the sign of the Globe Tavern, in the neighbourhood of Exchange Alley, with the inscription of 'Sail-Cloth Permits'. The possessors enjoyed no other advantage from them than permission to subscribe at some future time to a new sail-cloth manufactory, projected by one who was then known to be a man of fortune, but who was afterwards involved in the peculation and punishment of the South-Sea directors. These permits sold for as much as sixty guineas in the Alley.

Persons of distinction, of both sexes, were deeply engaged in all these bubbles; those of the male sex going to taverns and coffee-houses to meet their brokers, and the ladies resorting for the same purpose to the shops of milliners and haberdashers. But it did not follow that all these people believed in the feasibility of the schemes to which they subscribed; it was enough for their purpose that their shares would, by stock-jobbing arts, be soon raised to a premium, when they got rid of them with all expedition to the really credulous. So great was the confusion of the crowd in the alley, that shares in the same bubble were known to have been sold at the same instant ten per cent higher at one end of the alley than at the other. Sensible men beheld the extraordinary infatuation of the people with sorrow and alarm. There were some both in and out of parliament who foresaw clearly the ruin that was impending. Mr Walpole did not cease his gloomy forebodings. His fears were shared by all the thinking few, and impressed most forcibly upon the government. On the 11th of June, the day the parliament rose, the king published a proclamation, declaring that all these unlawful projects should be deemed public nuisances, and prosecuted accordingly, and forbidding any broker, under a penalty of five hundred pounds, from buying or selling any shares in them. Notwithstanding this proclamation, roguish speculators still carried them on, and the deluded people still encouraged them. On the 12th of July, an order of the Lords Justices assembled in privy council was published, dismissing all the petitions that had been presented for patents and charters, and dissolving all the bubble companies. The following copy of their lordships' order, containing a list of all these nefarious projects, will not be deemed uninteresting at the present day, when there is but too much tendency in the public mind to indulge in similar practices:

At the Council Chamber, Whitehall, the 12th day of July, 1720.

Present, their Excellencies the Lords Justices in Council.

Their Excellencies, the Lords Justices, in council, taking into consideration the many inconveniences arising to the public from several projects set on foot for raising of joint-stock for various purposes, and that a great many of his Majesty's subjects have been drawn in to part with their money on pretence of assurances that their petitions for patents and charters, to enable them to carry on the same, would be granted: to prevent such impositions, their excellencies this day ordered the said several petitions, together with such reports from the Board of Trade, and from his majesty's attorney and solicitorgeneral, as had been obtained thereon, to be laid before them; and after mature consideration thereof, were pleased, by advice of his majesty's privy council, to order that the said petitions be dismissed, which are as follow:

1. Petition of several persons, praying letters patent for carrying on a fishing trade, by the name of the Grand Fishery of Great Britain.

2. Petition of the Company of the Royal Fishery of England, praying letters patent for such further powers as will effectually contribute to carry on the said fishery.

3. Petition of George James, on behalf of himself and divers persons of distinction concerned in a national fishery, praying letters patent of incorporation to enable them to carry on the same.

4. Petition of several merchants, traders, and others, whose names are thereunto subscribed, praying to be incorporated for reviving and carrying on a whale fishery to Greenland and elsewhere.

5. Petition of Sir John Lambert, and others thereto subscribing, on behalf of themselves and a great number of merchants, praying to be incorporated for carrying on a Greenland trade, and particularly a whale fishery in Davis's Straits.

6. Another petition for a Greenland trade.

7. Petition of several merchants, gentlemen, and citizens, praying to be incorporated for buying and building of ships to let or freight.

8. Petition of Samuel Antrim and others, praying for letters patent for sowing hemp and flax.

9. Petition of several merchants, masters of ships, sail-makers, and manufacturers of sail-cloth, praying a charter of incorporation, to enable them to carry on and promote the said manufactory by a joint-stock.

10. Petition of Thomas Boyd, and several hundred merchants, owners and masters of ships, sail-makers, weavers, and other traders, praying a charter of incorporation, empowering them to borrow money for purchasing lands, in order to the manufacturing sail-cloth and fine Holland.

11. Petition on behalf of several persons interested in a patent granted by the late King William and Queen Mary, for the making of linen and sail-cloth, praying that no charter may be granted to any persons whatsoever for making sail-cloth, but that the privilege now enjoyed by them may be confirmed, and likewise an additional power to carry on the cotton and cotton-silk manufactures.

12. Petition of several citizens, merchants, and traders in London, and others, subscribers to a British stock for a general insurance from fire in any part of England, praying to be incorporated for carrying on the said undertaking.

13. Petition of several of his majesty's loyal subjects of the city of London and other parts of Great Britain, praying to be incorporated for carrying on a general insurance from losses by fire within the kingdom of England.

14. Petition of Thomas Burges, and others his majesty's subjects thereto subscribing, in behalf of themselves and others, subscribers to a fund of £1,200,000 for carrying on a trade to his majesty's German dominions, praying to be incorporated, by the name of the Harburg Company.

15. Petition of Edward Jones, a dealer in timber, on behalf of himself and others, praying to be incorporated for the importation of timber from Germany.

16. Petition of several merchants of London, praying a charter of incorporation for carrying on a salt-work.

17. Petition of Captain Macphedris of London, merchant, on behalf of himself and several merchants, clothiers, hatters, dyers, and other traders, praying a charter of incorporation empowering them to raise a sufficient sum of money to purchase lands for planting and rearing a wood called madder, for the use of dyers.

18. Petition of Joseph Galendo of London, snuffmaker, praying a patent for his invention to prepare and cure Virginia tobacco for snuff in Virginia, and making it into the same in all his majesty's dominions.

LIST OF BUBBLES

The following Bubble Companies were by the same order declared to be illegal, and abolished accordingly:

1. For the importation of Swedish iron.

2. For supplying London with sea-coal. Capital, three millions.

3. For building and rebuilding houses throughout all England. Capital, three millions.

4. For making of muslin.

5. For carrying on and improving British alum-works.

6. For effectually settling the island of Blanco and Sal Targatus.

7. For supplying the town of Deal with fresh water.

8. For the importation of Flanders lace.

9. For improvement in lands of Great Britain. Capital, four millions.

10. For encouraging the breed of horses in England, and improving the glebe and church lands, and for repairing and rebuilding parsonage and vicarage houses.

11. For making of iron and steel in Great Britain.

12. For improving the land in the county of Flint. Capital, one million.

13. For purchasing lands to build on. Capital, two millions.

14. For trading in hair.

15. For erecting salt-works in holy Island. Capital, two millions.

16. For buying and selling estates, and lending money on mortgage.

17. For carrying on an undertaking of great advantage, but nobody to know what it is.

18. For paving the streets of London. Capital, two millions.

19. For furnishing funerals to any part of Great Britain.

20. For buying and selling lands and lending money at interest. Capital, five millions.

21. For carrying on the Royal Fishery of Great Britain. Capital, ten millions.

22. For assuring of seamen's wages.

23. For erecting loan-offices for the assistance and encouragement of the industrious. Capital, two millions.

24. For purchasing and improving leasable lands. Capital, four millions.

25. For importing pitch and tar, and other naval stores, from North Britain and America.

26. For the clothing, felt, and pantile trade.

27. For purchasing and improving a manor and royalty in Essex.

28. For insuring of horses. Capital, two millions.

29. For exporting the woollen manufacture, and importing copper, brass, and iron. Capital, four millions.

30. For a grand dispensary. Capital, three millions.

31. For erecting mills and purchasing lead mines. Capital, two millions.

32. For improving the art of making soap.

33. For a settlement on the island of Santa Cruz.

34. For sinking pits and smelting lead ore in Derbyshire.

35. For making glass bottles and other glass.

36. For a wheel for perpetual motion. Capital, one million.

37. For improving of gardens.

38. For insuring and increasing children's fortunes.

39. For entering and loading goods at the Customhouse, and for negotiating business for merchants.

40. For carrying on a woollen manufacture in the north of England.

41. For importing walnut trees from Virginia. Capital, two millions.

42. For making Manchester stuffs of thread and cotton.

43. For making Joppa and Castile soap.

44. For improving the wrought-iron and steel manufactures of this kingdom. Capital, four millions.

45. For dealing in lace, hollands, cambrics, lawns, &c. Capital, two millions.

46. For trading in and improving certain commodities of the produce of this kingdom, &c. Capital, three millions.

47. For supplying the London markets with cattle.

48. For making looking-glasses, coach glasses, &c. Capital, two millions.

49. For working the tin and lead mines in Cornwall and Derbyshire.

50. For making rape-oil.

51. For importing beaver fur. Capital, two millions.

52. For making pasteboard and packing-paper.

53. For importing of oils and other materials used in the woollen manufacture.

54. For improving and increasing the silk manufactures.

55. For lending money on stock, annuities, tallies, &c.

56. For paying pensions to widows and others, at a small discount. Capital, two millions.

57. For improving malt liquors. Capital, four millions.

58. For a grand American fishery.

59. For purchasing and improving the fenny lands in Lincolnshire. Capital, two millions.

60. For improving the paper manufacture of Great Britain.

61. The Bottomry Company.

62. For drying malt by hot air.

63. For carrying on a trade in the river Oronooko.

64. For the more effectual making of baize, in Colchester and other parts of Great Britain.

65. For buying of naval stores, supplying the victualling, and paying the wages of the workmen.

66. For employing poor artificers, and furnishing merchants and others with watches.

67. For improvement of tillage and the breed of cattle.

68. Another for the improvement of our breed of horses.

69. Another for a horse-insurance.

70. For carrying on the corn trade of Great Britain.

71. For insuring to all masters and mistresses the losses they may sustain by servants. Capital, three millions.

72. For erecting houses or hospitals, for taking in and maintaining illegitimate children. Capital, two millions.

73. For bleaching coarse sugars, without the use of fire or loss of substance.

74. For building turnpikes and wharfs in Great Britain.

75. For insuring from thefts and robberies.

76. For extracting silver from lead.

77. For making china and delft ware. Capital, one million.

78. For importing tobacco, and exporting it again to Sweden and the north of Europe. Capital, four millions.

79. For making iron with pit coal.

80. For furnishing the cities of London and Westminster with hay and straw. Capital, three millions.

81. For a sail and packing-cloth manufactory in Ireland.

82. For taking up ballast.

83. For buying and fitting out ships to suppress pirates.

84. For the importation of timber from Wales. Capital, two millions.

85. For rock-salt.

86. For the transmutation of quicksilver into a malleable fine metal.

Besides these bubbles, many others sprang up daily, in spite of the condemnation of the government and the ridicule of the still sane portion of the public. The printshops teemed with caricatures, and the newspapers with epigrams and satires, upon the prevalent folly. An ingenious card-maker published a pack of South-Sea playingcards, which are now extremely rare, each card containing, besides the usual figures, of a very small size, in one corner, a caricature of a bubble company, with appropriate verses underneath. One of the most famous bubbles was 'Puckle's Machine Company', for discharging round and square cannon-balls and bullets, and making a total revolution in the art of war. Its pretensions to public favour were thus summed up, on the eight of spades:

A rare invention to destroy the crowd

Of fools at home, instead of fools abroad.

Fear not, my friends, this terrible machine,

They're only wounded who have shares therein.

The nine of hearts was a caricature of the English Copper and Brass Company, with the following epigram:

The headlong fool that wants to be a swopper

Of gold and silver coin for English copper,

May, in Change Alley, prove himself an ass,

And give rich metal for adulterate brass.

The eight of diamonds celebrated the company for the colonisation of Acadia, with this doggerel:

He that is rich and wants to fool away
A good round sum in North America,
Let him subscribe himself a headlong sharer,
And asses' ears shall honour him or bearer.

And in a similar style every card of the pack exposed some knavish scheme, and ridiculed the persons who were its dupes. It was computed that the total amount of the sums proposed for carrying on these projects was upwards of three hundred millions sterling.

It is time, however, to return to the great South-Sea gulf, that swallowed the fortunes of so many thousands of the avaricious and the credulous. On the 29th of May, the stock had risen as high as five hundred, and about two-thirds of the government annuitants had exchanged the securities of the state for those of the South-Sea Company. During the whole of the month of May the stock continued to rise, and on the 28th it was quoted at five hundred and fifty. In four days after this it took a prodigious leap, rising suddenly from five hundred and fifty to eight hundred and ninety. It was now the general opinion that the stock could rise no higher, and many persons took that opportunity of selling out, with a view of realising their profits. Many noblemen and persons in the train of the king, and about to accompany him to Hanover, were also anxious to sell out. So many sellers, and so few buyers, appeared in the Alley on the 3rd of June, that the stock fell at once from eight hundred and ninety to six hundred and forty. The directors were alarmed, and gave their agents orders to buy. Their efforts succeeded. Towards evening confidence was restored, and the stock advanced to seven hundred and fifty. It continued at this price, with some slight fluctuation, until the company closed their books on the 22nd of June.

It would be needless and uninteresting to detail the various arts employed by the directors to keep up the price of stock. It will be sufficient to state that it finally rose to one thousand per cent. It was quoted at this price in the commencement of August. The bubble was then full-blown, and began to quiver and shake, preparatory to its bursting.

Many of the government annuitants expressed dissatisfaction against the directors. They accused them of partiality in making out the lists for shares in each subscription. Further uneasiness was occasioned by its being generally known that Sir John Blunt, the chairman, and some others, had sold out. During the whole of the month of August the stock fell, and on the 2nd of September it was quoted at seven hundred only.

The state of things now became alarming. To prevent, if possible, the utter extinction of public confidence in their proceedings, the directors summoned a general court of the whole corporation, to meet in Merchant Tailors' Hall on the 8th of September. By nine o'clock in the morning, the room was filled to suffocation; Cheapside was blocked up by a crowd unable to gain admittance, and the greatest excitement prevailed. The directors and their friends mustered in great numbers. Sir John Fellowes, the sub-governor, was called to the chair. He acquainted the assembly with the cause of their meeting; read to them the several resolutions of the court of directors, and gave them an account of their proceedings; of the taking in the redeemable and unredeemable funds, and of the subscriptions in money. Mr Secretary Craggs then made a short speech, wherein he commended the conduct of the directors, and urged that nothing could more effectually contribute to the bringing this scheme to perfection than union among themselves. He concluded with a motion for thanking the court of directors for their prudent and skilful management, and for desiring them to proceed in such manner as they should think most proper for the interest and advantage of the corporation. Mr Hungerford, who had rendered himself very conspicuous in the House of Commons for his zeal in behalf of the South-Sea Company, and who was shrewdly suspected to have been a considerable gainer by knowing the right time to sell out, was very magniloquent on this occasion. He said that he had seen the rise and fall, the decay and resurrection of many communities of this nature, but that, in his opinion, none had ever performed such wonderful things in so short a time as the South-Sea Company. They had done more than the crown, the pulpit, or the bench could do. They had reconciled all parties in one common interest; they had laid asleep, if not wholly extinguished, all the domestic jars and animosities of the nation. By the rise of their stock, monied men had vastly increased their fortunes; >country gentlemen had seen the value of their lands doubled and trebled in their hands. They had at the same time done good to the Church, not a few of the reverend clergy having got great sums by the project. In short, they had enriched the whole nation, and he hoped they had not forgotten themselves. There was some hissing at the latter part of this speech, which for the extravagance of its eulogy was not far removed from satire; but the directors and their friends, and all the winners in the room, applauded vehemently. The Duke of Portland spoke in a similar strain, and expressed his great wonder why anybody should be dissatisfied: of course, he was a winner by his speculations, and in a condition similar to that of the fat alderman in Joe Miller's Jests, who, whenever he had eaten a good dinner, folded his hands upon his paunch, and expressed his doubts whether there could be a hungry man in the world.

Several resolutions were passed at this meeting, but they had no effect upon the public. Upon the very same evening the stock fell to six hundred and forty, and on the morrow to five hundred and forty. Day after day it continued to fall, until it was as low as four hundred. In a letter, dated September 13th, from Mr Broderick MP to Lord Chancellor Middleton, and published in Coxe's Walpole, the former says: 'Various are the conjectures why the South-Sea directors have suffered the cloud to break so early. I made no doubt but they would do so when they found it to their advantage. They have stretched credit so far beyond what it would bear, that specie proves insufficient to support it. Their most considerable men have drawn out, securing themselves by the losses of the deluded, thoughtless numbers, whose understandings have been overruled by avarice and the hope of making mountains out of molehills. Thousands of families will be reduced to beggary. The consternation is inexpressible — the rage beyond description, and the case altogether so desperate that I do not see any plan or scheme so much as thought of for averting the blow, so that I cannot pretend to guess what is next to be done.' Ten days afterwards, the stock still falling, he writes: 'The company have yet come to no determination, for they are in such a wood that they know not which way to turn. By several gentlemen lately come to town, I perceive the very name of a South-Sea-man grows abominable in every country. A great many goldsmiths are already run off, and more will daily. I question whether one-third, nay, one-fourth, of them can stand it. From the very beginning, I founded my judgement of the whole affair upon the unquestionable maxim, that ten millions (which is more than our running cash) could not circulate two hundred millions, beyond which our paper credit extended. That, therefore, whenever that should become doubtful, be the cause what it would, our noble state machine must inevitably fall to the ground.'

On the 12th of September, at the earnest solicitation of Mr Secretary Craggs, several conferences were held between the directors of the South Sea and the directors of the Bank. A report which was circulated, that the latter had agreed to circulate six millions of the South-Sea Company's bonds, caused the stock to rise to six hundred and seventy; but in the afternoon, as soon as the report was known to be groundless, the stock fell again to five hundred and eighty; the next day to five hundred and seventy, and so gradually to four hundred.[1]

The ministry were seriously alarmed at the aspect of affairs. The directors could not appear in the streets without being insulted; dangerous riots were every moment apprehended. Despatches were sent off to the king at Hanover, praying his immediate return. Mr Walpole, who was staying at his country seat, was sent for, that he might employ his known influence with the directors of the Bank of England to induce them to accept the proposal made by the South-Sea Company for circulating a number of their bonds.

The Bank was very unwilling to mix itself up with the affairs of the company; it dreaded being involved in calamities which it could not relieve, and received all overtures with visible reluctance. But the universal voice of the nation called upon it to come to the rescue. Every person of note in commercial politics was called in to advise in the emergency. A rough draft of a contract drawn up by Mr Walpole was ultimately adopted as the basis of further negotiations, and the public alarm abated a little.

On the following day, the 20th of September, a general court of the South-Sea Company was held at Merchant Tailors' Hall, in which resolutions were carried, empowering the directors to agree with the Bank of England, or any other persons, to circulate the company's bonds, or make any other agreement with the bank which they should think proper. One of the speakers, a Mr Pulteney, said it was most surprising to see the extraordinary panic which had seized upon the people. Men were running to and fro in alarm and terror, their imaginations filled with some great calamity, the form and dimensions of which nobody knew:

> Black it stood as night —
>
> Fierce as ten furies — terrible as hell.

At a general court of the Bank of England held two days afterwards, the governor informed them of the several meetings that had been held on the affairs of the South-Sea Company, adding that the directors had not yet thought fit to come to any decision upon the matter. A resolution was then proposed, and carried without a dissentient voice, empowering the directors to agree with those of the South Sea to circulate their bonds, to what sum, and upon what terms, and for what time, they might think proper.

Thus both parties were at liberty to act as they might judge best for the public interest. Books were opened at the Bank for a subscription of three millions for the support of public credit, on the usual terms of £15 per cent deposit, £3 per cent premium, and £5 per cent interest. So great was the concourse of people in the early part of the morning, all eagerly bringing their money, that it was thought the subscription would be filled that day; but before noon, the tide turned. In spite of all that could be done to prevent it, the South-Sea Company's stock fell rapidly. Their bonds were in such discredit, that a run commenced upon the most eminent goldsmiths and bankers, some of whom having lent out great sums upon South-Sea stock were obliged to shut up their shops and abscond. The Sword-blade Company, who had hitherto been the chief cashiers of the South-Sea Company, stopped payment. This being looked upon as but the beginning of evil, occasioned a great run upon the Bank, who were now obliged to pay out money much faster than they had received it upon the subscription in the morning. The day succeeding was a holiday (the 29th of September), and the Bank had a little breathing time. They bore up against the storm; but their former rivals, the South-Sea Company, were wrecked upon it. Their stock fell to one hundred and fifty, and gradually, after various fluctuations, to one hundred and thirty-five.

The Bank, finding they were not able to restore public confidence, and stem the tide of ruin, without running the risk of being swept away with those they intended to save, declined to carry out the agreement into which they had partially entered. They were under no obligation whatever to continue; for the so-called Bank contract was nothing more than the rough draught of an agreement, in which blanks had been left for several important particulars, and which contained no penalty for their secession. 'And thus,' to use the words of the Parliamentary History, 'were seen, in the space of eight months, the rise, progress, and fall of that mighty fabric, which, being wound up by mysterious springs to a wonderful height, had fixed the eyes and expectations of all Europe, but whose foundation, being fraud, illusion, credulity, and infatuation, fell to the ground as soon as the artful management of its directors was discovered.'

In the heyday of its blood, during the progress of this dangerous delusion, the manners of the nation became sensibly corrupted. The parliamentary inquiry, set on foot to discover the delinquents, disclosed scenes of infamy, disgraceful alike to the morals of the offenders and the intellects of the people among whom they had arisen. It is a deeply interesting study to investigate all the evils that were the result. Nations, like individuals, cannot become desperate gamblers with impunity. Punishment is sure to overtake them sooner or later. A celebrated writer[2] is quite wrong, when he says, 'that such an era as this is the most unfavourable for a historian; that no reader of sentiment and imagination can be entertained or interested by a detail of transactions such as these, which admit of no warmth, no colouring, no embellishment; a detail of which only serves to exhibit an inanimate picture of tasteless vice and mean degeneracy.' On the contrary — and Smollett might have discovered it, if he had been in the humour — the subject is capable of inspiring as much interest as even a novelist can desire. Is there no warmth in the despair of a plundered people? — no life and animation in the picture which might be drawn of the woes of hundreds of impoverished and ruined families? of the wealthy of yesterday become the beggars of today? of the powerful and influential changed into exiles and outcasts, and the voice of self-reproach and imprecation resounding from every corner of the land? Is it a dull or uninstructive picture to see a whole people shaking suddenly off the trammels of reason, and running wild after a golden vision, refusing obstinately to believe that it is not real, till, like a deluded hind running after an ignis fatuus, they are plunged into a quagmire? But in this false spirit has history too often been written. The intrigues of unworthy courtiers to gain the favour of still more unworthy kings; or the records of murderous battles and sieges have been dilated on, and told over and over again, with all the eloquence of style and all the charms of fancy; while the circumstances which have most deeply affected the morals and welfare of the people have been passed over with but slight notice as dry and dull, and capable of neither warmth nor colouring.

During the progress of this famous bubble, England presented a singular spectacle. The public mind was in a state of unwholesome fermentation. Men were no longer satisfied with the slow but sure profits of cautious industry. The hope of boundless wealth for the morrow made them heedless and extravagant for today. A luxury, till then unheard-of, was introduced, bringing in its train a corresponding laxity of morals. The overbearing insolence of ignorant men, who had arisen to sudden wealth by successful gambling, made men of true gentility of mind and manners blush that gold should have power to raise the unworthy in the scale of society. The haughtiness of some of these 'cyphering cits', as they were termed by Sir Richard Steele, was remembered against them in the day of their adversity. In the parliamentary inquiry, many of the directors suffered more for their insolence than for their peculation. One of them, who, in the full-blown pride of an ignorant rich man, had said that he would feed his horse upon gold, was reduced almost to bread and water for himself; every haughty look, every overbearing speech, was set down, and repaid them a hundredfold in poverty and humiliation.

The state of matters all over the country was so alarming, that George I shortened his intended stay in Hanover, and returned in all haste to England. He arrived on the 11th of November, and parliament was summoned to meet on the 8th of December. In the mean time, public meetings were held in every considerable town of the empire, at which petitions were adopted, praying the vengeance of the Legislature upon the South-Sea directors, who, by their fraudulent practices, had brought the nation to the brink of ruin. Nobody seemed to imagine that the nation itself was as culpable as the South-Sea Company. Nobody blamed the credulity and avarice of the people — the degrading lust of gain, which had swallowed up every nobler quality in the national character, or the infatuation which had made the multitude run their heads with such frantic eagerness into the net held out for them by scheming projectors. These things were never mentioned. The people were a simple, honest, hardworking people, ruined by a gang of robbers, who were to be hanged, drawn, and quartered without mercy.

This was the almost unanimous feeling of the country. The two Houses of Parliament were not more reasonable. Before the guilt of the South-Sea directors was known, punishment was the only cry. The king, in his speech from the throne, expressed his hope that they would remember that all their prudence, temper, and resolution were necessary to find out and apply the proper remedy for their misfortunes. In the debate on the answer to the address, several speakers indulged in the most violent invectives against the directors of the South-Sea project. The Lord Molesworth was particularly vehement. 'It had been said by some, that there was no law to punish the directors of the South-Sea Company, who were justly looked upon as the authors of the present misfortunes of the state. In his opinion they ought upon this occasion to follow the example of the ancient Romans, who, having no law against parricide, because their legislators supposed no son could be so unnaturally wicked as to embrue his hands in his father's blood, made a law to punish this heinous crime as soon as it was committed. They adjudged the guilty wretch to be sown in a sack, and thrown alive into the Tiber. He looked upon the contrivers and executors of the villainous South-Sea scheme as the parricides of their country, and should be satisfied to see them tied in like manner in sacks, and thrown into the Thames.' Other members spoke with as much want of temper and discretion. Mr Walpole was more moderate. He recommended that their first care should be to restore public credit. 'If the city of London were on fire, all wise men would aid in extinguishing the flames, and preventing the spread of the conflagration before they enquired after the incendiaries. Public credit had received a dangerous wound, and lay bleeding, and they ought to apply a speedy remedy to it. It was time enough to punish the assassin afterwards.' On the 9th of December an address, in answer to his majesty's speech, was agreed upon, after an amendment, which was carried without a division, that words should be added expressive of the determination of the house not only to seek a remedy for the national distresses, but to punish the authors of them.

The inquiry proceeded rapidly. The directors were ordered to lay before the house a full account of all their proceedings. Resolutions were passed to the effect that the calamity was mainly owing to the vile arts of stockjobbers, and that nothing could tend more to the reestablishment of public credit than a law to prevent this infamous practice. Mr Walpole then rose, and said, that 'as he had previously hinted, he had spent some time upon a scheme for restoring public credit, but that the execution of it depending upon a position which had been laid down as fundamental, he thought it proper, before he opened out his scheme, to be informed whether he might rely upon that foundation. It was, whether the subscription of public debts and encumbrances, money subscriptions, and other contracts, made with the SouthSea Company should remain in the present state?' This question occasioned an animated debate. It was finally agreed, by a majority of 259 against 117, that all these contracts should remain in their present state, unless altered for the relief of the proprietors by a general court of the South-Sea Company, or set aside by due course of law. On the following day Mr Walpole laid before a committee of the whole house his scheme for the restoration of public credit, which was, in substance, to engraft nine millions of South-Sea stock into the Bank of England, and the same sum into the East India Company, upon certain conditions. The plan was favourably received by the house. After some few objections, it was ordered that proposals should be received from the two great corporations. They were both unwilling to lend their aid, and the plan met with a warm but fruitless opposition at the general courts summoned for the purpose of deliberating upon it. They, however, ultimately agreed upon the terms on which they would consent to circulate the South-Sea bonds, and their report, being presented to the committee, a bill was brought in, under the superintendence of Mr Walpole, and safely carried through both Houses of Parliament.

A bill was at the same time brought in, for restraining the South-Sea directors, governor, sub-governor, treasurer, cashier, and clerks from leaving the kingdom for a twelvemonth, and for discovering their estates and effects, and preventing them from transporting or alienating the same. All the most influential members of the house supported the bill. Mr Shippen, seeing Mr Secretary Craggs in his place, and believing the injurious rumours that were afloat of that minister's conduct in the SouthSea business, determined to touch him to the quick. He said, he was glad to see a British House of Commons resuming its pristine vigour and spirit, and acting with so much unanimity for the public good. It was necessary to secure the persons and estates of the South-Sea directors and their officers; 'but,' he added, looking fixedly at Mr Craggs as he spoke, 'there were other men in high station, whom, in time, he would not be afraid to name, who were no less guilty than the directors.' Mr Craggs arose in great wrath, and said, that if the innuendo were directed against him, he was ready to give satisfaction to any man who questioned him, either in the House or out of it. Loud cries of order immediately arose on every side. In the midst of the uproar Lord Molesworth got up, and expressed his wonder at the boldness of Mr Craggs in challenging the whole House of Commons. He, Lord Molesworth, though somewhat old, past sixty, would answer Mr Craggs whatever he had to say in the House, and he trusted there were plenty of young men beside him, who would not be afraid to look Mr Craggs in the face, out of the House. The cries of order again resounded from every side; the members arose simultaneously; everybody seemed to be vociferating at once. The speaker in vain called order. The confusion lasted several minutes, during which Lord Molesworth and Mr Craggs were almost the only members who kept their seats. At last, the call for Mr Craggs became so violent that he thought proper to submit to the universal feeling of the House, and explain his unparliamentary expression. He said, that by giving satisfaction to the impugners of his conduct in that House, he did not mean that he would fight, but that he would explain his conduct. Here the matter ended, and the House proceeded to debate in what manner they should conduct their inquiry into the affairs of the SouthSea Company, whether in a grand or a select committee. Ultimately, a secret committee of thirteen was appointed, with power to send for persons, papers, and records.

The Lords were as zealous and as hasty as the Commons. The Bishop of Rochester said the scheme had been like a pestilence. The Duke of Wharton said the House ought to show no respect of persons; that, for his part, he would give up the dearest friend he had, if he had been engaged in the project. The nation had been plundered in a most shameful and flagrant manner, and he would go as far as anybody in the punishment of the offenders. Lord Stanhope said, that every farthing possessed by the criminals, whether directors or not directors, ought to be confiscated, to make good the public losses.

During all this time the public excitement was extreme. We learn, from Coxe's Walpole, that the very name of a South-Sea director was thought to be synonymous with every species of fraud and villainy. Petitions from counties, cities, and boroughs, in all parts of the kingdom, were presented, crying for the justice due to an injured nation and the punishment of the villainous peculators. Those moderate men, who would not go to extreme lengths, even in the punishment of the guilty, were accused of being accomplices, were exposed to repeated insults and virulent invectives, and devoted, both in anonymous letters and public writings, to the speedy vengeance of an injured people. The accusations against Mr Aislabie, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Mr Craggs, another member of the ministry, were so loud, that the House of Lords resolved to proceed at once into the investigation concerning them. It was ordered, on the 21st of January, that all brokers concerned in the South-Sea scheme should lay before the house an account of the stock or subscriptions bought or sold by them for any of the officers of the Treasury or Exchequer, or in trust for any of them, since Michaelmas 1719. When this account was delivered, it appeared that large quantities of stock had been transferred to the use of Mr Aislabie. Five of the South-Sea directors, including Mr Edward Gibbon, the grandfather of the celebrated historian, were ordered into the custody of the black rod. Upon a motion made by Earl Stanhope, it was unanimously resolved, that the taking in or giving credit for stock without a valuable consideration actually paid or sufficiently secured; or the purchasing stock by any director or agent of the South-Sea Company, for the use or benefit of any member of the administration, or any member of either House of Parliament, during such time as the South-Sea bill was yet pending in parliament, was a notorious and dangerous corruption. Another resolution was passed a few days afterwards, to the effect that several of the directors and officers of the company having, in a clandestine manner, sold their own stock to the company, had been guilty of a notorious fraud and breach of trust, and had thereby mainly caused the unhappy turn of affairs that had so much affected public credit. Mr Aislabie resigned his office as Chancellor of the Exchequer, and absented himself from parliament until the formal inquiry into his individual guilt was brought under the consideration of the legislature.

In the mean time, Knight, the treasurer of the company, and who was entrusted with all the dangerous secrets of the dishonest directors, packed up his books and documents, and made his escape from the country. He embarked in disguise, in a small boat on the river, and proceeding to a vessel hired for the purpose, was safely conveyed to Calais. The Committee of Secrecy informed the House of the circumstance, when it was resolved unanimously that two addresses should be presented to the king; the first praying that he would issue a proclamation offering a reward for the apprehension of Knight; and the second, that he would give immediate orders to stop the ports, and to take effectual care of the coasts, to prevent the said Knight, or any other officers of the South-Sea Company, from escaping out of the kingdom. The ink was hardly dry upon these addresses before they were carried to the king by Mr Methuen, deputed by the House for that purpose. The same evening a royal proclamation was issued, offering a reward of two thousand pounds for the apprehension of Knight. The Commons ordered the doors of the House to be locked, and the keys to be placed upon the table. General Ross, one of the members of the Committee of Secrecy, acquainted them that they had already discovered a train of the deepest villainy and fraud that hell had ever contrived to ruin a nation, which in due time they would lay before the House. In the mean time, in order to a further discovery, the Committee thought it highly necessary to secure the persons of some of the directors and principal South-Sea officers, and to seize their papers. A motion to this effect having been made, was carried unanimously. Sir Robert Chaplin, Sir Theodore Janssen, Mr Sawbridge, and Mr F. Eyles, members of the House, and directors of the South-Sea Company, were summoned to appear in their places, and answer for their corrupt practices. Sir Theodore Janssen and Mr Sawbridge answered to their names, and endeavoured to exculpate themselves. The House heard them patiently, and then ordered them to withdraw. A motion was then made, and carried nemine contradicente, that they had been guilty of a notorious breach of trust — had occasioned much loss to great numbers of his majesty's subjects, and had highly prejudiced the public credit. It was then ordered that, for their offence, they should be expelled the House, and taken into the custody of the sergeant-at-arms. Sir Robert Chaplin and Mr Eyles, attending in their places four days afterwards, were also expelled the House. It was resolved at the same time to address the king to give directions to his ministers at foreign courts to make application for Knight, that he might be delivered up to the English authorities, in case he took refuge in any of their dominions. The king at once agreed, and messengers were despatched to all parts of the Continent the same night.

Among the directors taken into custody, was Sir John Blunt, the man whom popular opinion has generally accused of having been the original author and father of the scheme. This man, we are informed by Pope, in his epistle to Allen, Lord Bathurst, was a dissenter, of a most religious deportment, and professed to be a great believer. He constantly declaimed against the luxury and corruption of the age, the partiality of parliaments, and the misery of party spirit. He was particularly eloquent against avarice in great and noble persons. He was originally a scrivener, and afterwards became, not only a director, but the most active manager of the South-Sea Company. Whether it was during his career in this capacity that he first began to declaim against the avarice of the great, we are not informed. He certainly must have seen enough of it to justify his severest anathema; but if the preacher had himself been free from the vice he condemned, his declamations would have had a better effect. He was brought up in custody to the bar of the House of Lords, and underwent a long examination. He refused to answer several important questions. He said he had been examined already by a committee of the House of Commons, and as he did not remember his answers, and might contradict himself, he refused to answer before another tribunal. This declaration, in itself an indirect proof of guilt, occasioned some commotion in the House. He was again asked peremptorily whether he had ever sold any portion of the stock to any member of the administration, or any member of either House of Parliament, to facilitate the passing of the bill. He again declined to answer. He was anxious, he said, to treat the House with all possible respect, but he thought it hard to be compelled to accuse himself. After several ineffectual attempts to refresh his memory, he was directed to withdraw. A violent discussion ensued between the friends and opponents of the ministry. It was asserted that the administration were no strangers to the convenient taciturnity of Sir John Blunt. The Duke of Wharton made a reflection upon the Earl Stanhope, which the latter warmly resented. He spoke under great excitement, and with such vehemence as to cause a sudden determination of blood to the head. He felt himself so ill that he was obliged to leave the House and retire to his chamber. He was cupped immediately, and also let blood on the following morning, but with slight relief. The fatal result was not anticipated. Towards evening he became drowsy, and turning himself on his face, expired. The sudden death of this statesman caused great grief to the nation. George I was exceedingly affected, and shut himself up for some hours in his closet, inconsolable for his loss.

Knight, the treasurer of the company, was apprehended at Tirlemont, near Liège, by one of the secretaries of Mr Leathes, the British resident at Brussels, and lodged in the citadel of Antwerp. Repeated applications were made to the court of Austria to deliver him up, but in vain. Knight threw himself upon the protection of the states of Brabant, and demanded to be tried in that country. It was a privilege granted to the states of Brabant by one of the articles of the Foyeuse Entrée, that every criminal apprehended in that country should be tried in that country. The states insisted on their privilege, and refused to deliver Knight to the British authorities. The latter did not cease their solicitations; but in the mean time, Knight escaped from the citadel.

On the 16th of February the Committee of Secrecy made their first report to the House. They stated that their inquiry had been attended with numerous difficulties and embarrassments; everyone they had examined had endeavoured, as far as in him lay, to defeat the ends of justice. In some of the books produced before them, false and fictitious entries had been made; in others, there were entries of money, with blanks for the name of the stockholders. There were frequent erasures and alterations, and in some of the books leaves were torn out. They also found that some books of great importance had been destroyed altogether, and that some had been taken away or secreted. At the very entrance into their inquiry, they had observed that the matters referred to them were of great variety and extent. Many persons had been entrusted with various parts in the execution of the law, and under colour thereof had acted in an unwarrantable manner, in disposing of the properties of many thousands of persons, amounting to many millions of money. They discovered that, before the SouthSea Act was passed, there was an entry in the company's books of the sum of £1,259,325, upon account of stock stated to have been sold to the amount of £574,500. This stock was all fictitious, and had been disposed of with a view to promote the passing of the bill. It was noted as sold at various days, and at various prices, from 150 to 325 per cent. Being surprised to see so large an account disposed of, at a time when the company were not empowered to increase their capital, the Committee determined to investigate most carefully the whole transaction. The governor, sub-governor, and several directors were brought before them, and examined rigidly. They found that, at the time these entries were made, the company was not in possession of such a quantity of stock, having in their own right only a small quantity, not exceeding thirty thousand pounds at the utmost. Pursuing the inquiry, they found that this amount of stock was to be esteemed as taken in or holden by the company for the benefit of the pretended purchasers, although no mutual agreement was made for its delivery or acceptance at any certain time. No money was paid down, nor any deposit or security whatever given to the company by the supposed purchasers; so that if the stock had fallen, as might have been expected, had the act not passed, they would have sustained no loss. If, on the contrary, the price of stock advanced (as it actually did by the success of the scheme), the difference by the advanced price was to be made good to them. Accordingly, after the passing of the act, the account of stock was made up and adjusted with Mr Knight, and the pretended purchasers were paid the difference out of the company's cash. This fictitious stock, which had been chiefly at the disposal of Sir John Blunt, Mr Gibbon, and Mr Knight, was distributed among several members of the government and their connections, by way of bribe, to facilitate the passing of the bill. To the Earl of Sunderland was assigned £50,000 of this stock; to the Duchess of Kendal £10,000; to the Countess of Platen £10,000; to her two nieces £10,000; to Mr Secretary Craggs £30,000; to Mr Charles Stanhope (one of the secretaries of the Treasury) £10,000; to the Swordblade company £50,000. It also appeared that Mr Stanhope had received the enormous sum of £250,000 as the difference in the price of some stock, through the hands of Turner, Caswall, and Co., but that his name had been partly erased from their books, and altered to Stangape. Aislabie, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, had made profits still more abominable. He had an account with the same firm, who were also South-Sea directors, to the amount of £794,451. He had, besides, advised the company to make their second subscription one million and a half, instead of a million, by their own authority, and without any warrant. The third subscription had been conducted in a manner as disgraceful. Mr Aislabie's name was down for £70,000; Mr Craggs, senior, for £659,000; the Earl of Sunderland's for £160,000; and Mr Stanhope for £47,000. This report was succeeded by six others, less important. At the end of the last, the committee declared that the absence of Knight, who had been principally entrusted, prevented them from carrying on their enquiries.

The first report was ordered to be printed, and taken into consideration on the next day but one succeeding. After a very angry and animated debate, a series of resolutions were agreed to, condemnatory of the conduct of the directors, of the members of the parliament and of the administration concerned with them; and declaring that they ought, each and all, to make satisfaction out of their own estates for the injury they had done the public. Their practices were declared to be corrupt, infamous, and dangerous; and a bill was ordered to be brought in for the relief of the unhappy sufferers.

Mr Charles Stanhope was the first person brought to account for his share in these transactions. He urged in his defence that, for some years past, he had lodged all the money he was possessed of in Mr Knight's hands, and whatever stock Mr Knight had taken in for him, he had paid a valuable consideration for it. As to the stock that had been bought for him by Turner, Caswall, and Co., he knew nothing about it. Whatever had been done in that matter was done without his authority, and he could not be responsible for it. Turner and Co. took the latter charge upon themselves; but it was notorious to every unbiassed and unprejudiced person that Mr Stanhope was a gainer of the £250,000 which lay in the hands of that firm to his credit. He was, however, acquitted by a majority of three only. The greatest exertions were made to screen him. Lord Stanhope, the son of the Earl of Chesterfield, went round to the wavering members, using all the eloquence he was possessed of to induce them either to vote for the acquittal or to absent themselves from the House. Many weak-headed country gentlemen were led astray by his persuasions, and the result was as already stated. The acquittal caused the greatest discontent throughout the country. Mobs of a menacing character assembled in different parts of London; fears of riots were generally entertained, especially as the examination of a still greater delinquent was expected by many to have a similar termination. Mr Aislabie, whose high office and deep responsibilities should have kept him honest, even had native principle been insufficient, was very justly regarded as perhaps the greatest criminal of all. His case was entered into on the day succeeding the acquittal of Mr Stanhope. Great excitement prevailed, and the lobbies and avenues of the House were beset by crowds, impatient to know the result. The debate lasted the whole day. Mr Aislabie found few friends: his guilt was so apparent and so heinous that nobody had courage to stand up in his favour. It was finally resolved, without a dissentient voice, that Mr Aislabie had encouraged and promoted the destructive execution of the South-Sea scheme with a view to his own exorbitant profit, and had combined with the directors in their pernicious practices, to the ruin of the public trade and credit of the kingdom: that he should for his offences be ignominiously expelled from the House of Commons, and committed a close prisoner to the Tower of London; that he should be restrained from going out of the kingdom for a whole year, or till the end of the next session of Parliament; and that he should make out a correct account of all his estate, in order that it might be applied to the relief of those who had suffered by his malpractices.

This verdict caused the greatest joy. Though it was delivered at half-past twelve at night, it soon spread over the city. Several persons illuminated their houses in token of their joy. On the following day, when Mr Aislabie was conveyed to the Tower, the mob assembled on Tower-hill with the intention of hooting and pelting him. Not succeeding in this, they kindled a large bonfire, and danced around it in the exuberance of their delight. Several bonfires were made in other places; London presented the appearance of a holiday, and people congratulated one another as if they had just escaped from some great calamity. The rage upon the acquittal of Mr Stanhope had grown to such a height that none could tell where it would have ended, had Mr Aislabie met with the like indulgence.

To increase the public satisfaction, Sir George Caswall, of the firm of Turner, Caswall, and Co., was expelled from the House on the following day, committed to the Tower, and ordered to refund the sum of £250,000.

That part of the report of the Committee of Secrecy which related to the Earl of Sunderland was next taken into consideration. Every effort was made to clear his lordship from the imputation. As the case against him rested chiefly on the evidence extorted from Sir John Blunt, great pains were taken to make it appear that Sir John's word was not to be believed, especially in a matter affecting the honour of a peer and privy councillor. All the friends of the ministry rallied around the earl, it being generally reported that a verdict of guilty against him would bring a Tory ministry into power. He was eventually acquitted by a majority of 233 against 172; but the country was convinced of his guilt. The greatest indignation was everywhere expressed, and menacing mobs again assembled in London. Happily no disturbances took place.

This was the day on which Mr Craggs the elder expired. The morrow had been appointed for the consideration of his case. It was very generally believed that he had poisoned himself. It appeared, however, that grief for the loss of his son, one of the secretaries of the Treasury, who had died five weeks previously of the smallpox, preyed much on his mind. For this son, dearly beloved, he had been amassing vast heaps of riches: he had been getting money, but not honestly; and he for whose sake he had bartered his honour and sullied his fame, was now no more. The dread of further exposure increased his trouble of mind, and ultimately brought on an apoplectic fit, in which he expired. He left a fortune of a million and a half, which was afterwards confiscated for the benefit of the sufferers by the unhappy delusion he had been so mainly instrumental in raising.

One by one the case of every director of the company was taken into consideration. A sum amounting to two millions and fourteen thousand pounds was confiscated from their estates towards repairing the mischief they had done, each man being allowed a certain residue, in proportion to his conduct and circumstances, with which he might begin the world anew. Sir John Blunt was only allowed £5,000 out of his fortune of upwards of £183,000; Sir John Fellows was allowed £10,000 out of £243,000; Sir

Theodore Janssen, £50,000 out of £243,000; Mr Edward Gibbon, £10,000 out of £106,000; Sir John Lambert, £5,000 out of £72,000. Others, less deeply involved, were treated with greater liberality. Gibbon, the historian, whose grandfather was the Mr Edward Gibbon so severely mulcted, has given, in the Memoirs of his Life and Writings, an interesting account of the proceedings in parliament at this time. He owns that he is not an unprejudiced witness; but, as all the writers from which it is possible to extract any notice of the proceedings of these disastrous years were prejudiced on the other side, the statements of the great historian become of additional value. If only on the principle of audi alteram partem, his opinion is entitled to consideration. 'In the year 1716,' he says, 'my grandfather was elected one of the directors of the South-Sea company, and his books exhibited the proof that before his acceptance of that fatal office, he had acquired an independent fortune of £60,000. But his fortune was overwhelmed in the shipwreck of the year 1720, and the labours of thirty years were blasted in a single day. Of the use or abuse of the South-Sea scheme, of the guilt or innocence of my grandfather and his brother directors, I am neither a competent nor a disinterested judge. Yet the equity of modern times must condemn the violent and arbitrary proceedings, which would have disgraced the cause of justice, and rendered injustice still more odious. No sooner had the nation awakened from its golden dream, than a popular, and even a parliamentary clamour demanded its victims; but it was acknowledged on all sides, that the directors, however guilty, could not be touched by any known laws of the land. The intemperate notions of Lord Molesworth were not literally acted on; but a bill of pains and penalties was introduced — a retroactive statute, to punish the offences which did not exist at the time they were committed. The legislature restrained the persons of the directors, imposed an exorbitant security for their appearance, and marked their character with a previous note of ignominy. They were compelled to deliver, upon oath, the strict value of their estates, and were disabled from making any transfer or alienation of any part of their property. Against a bill of pains and penalties, it is the common right of every subject to be heard by his counsel at the bar. They prayed to be heard. Their prayer was refused, and their oppressors, who required no evidence, would listen to no defence. It had been at first proposed, that one-eighth of their respective estates should be allowed for the future support of the directors; but it was especially urged that, in the various shades of opulence and guilt, such a proportion would be too light for many, and for some might possibly be too heavy. The character and conduct of each man were separately weighed; but, instead of the calm solemnity of a judicial inquiry, the fortune and honour of thirty-three Englishmen were made the topics of hasty conversation, the sport of a law-less majority; and the basest member of the committee, by a malicious word, or a silent vote, might indulge his general spleen or personal animosity. Injury was aggravated by insult, and insult was embittered by pleasantry. Allowances of £20 or 1s. were facetiously moved. A vague report that a director had formerly been concerned in another project, by which some unknown persons had lost their money, was admitted as a proof of his actual guilt. One man was ruined because he had dropped a foolish speech, that his horses should feed upon gold; another, because he was grown so proud, that one day, at the Treasury, he had refused a civil answer to persons much above him. All were condemned, absent and unheard, in arbitrary fines and forfeitures, which swept away the greatest part of their substance. Such bold oppression can scarcely be shielded by the omnipotence of parliament. My grandfather could not expect to be treated with more lenity than his companions. His Tory principles and connections rendered him obnoxious to the ruling powers. His name was reported in a suspicious secret. His well-known abilities could not plead the excuse of ignorance or error. In the first proceedings against the South-Sea directors, Mr Gibbon was one of the first taken into custody, and in the final sentence the measure of his fine proclaimed him eminently guilty. The total estimate, which he delivered on oath to the House of Commons, amounted to £106,543 5s. 6d., exclusive of antecedent settlements. Two different allowances of £15,000 and of £10,000 were moved for Mr Gibbon; but, on the question being put, it was carried without a division for the smaller sum. On these ruins, with the skill and credit of which parliament had not been able to despoil him, my grandfather, at a mature age, erected the edifice of a new fortune. The labours of sixteen years were amply rewarded; and I have reason to believe that the second structure was not much inferior to the first.'

The next consideration of the legislature, after the punishment of the directors, was to restore public credit. The scheme of Walpole had been found insufficient, and had fallen into disrepute. A computation was made of the whole capital stock of the South-Sea Company at the end of the year 1720. It was found to amount to thirty-seven millions eight hundred thousand pounds, of which the stock allotted to all the proprietors only amounted to twenty-four millions five hundred thousand pounds. The remainder of thirteen millions three hundred thousand pounds belonged to the company in their corporate capacity, and was the profit they had made by the national delusion. Upwards of eight millions of this were taken from the company, and divided among the proprietors and subscribers generally, making a dividend of about £33 6s. 8d. per cent. This was a great relief. It was further ordered, that such persons as had borrowed money from the South-Sea

Company upon stock actually transferred and pledged at the time of borrowing to or for the use of the company, should be free from all demands, upon payment of ten per cent of the sums so borrowed. They had lent about eleven millions in this manner, at a time when prices were unnaturally raised; and they now received back one million one hundred thousand, when prices had sunk to their ordinary level.

But it was a long time before public credit was thoroughly restored. Enterprise, like Icarus, had soared too high, and melted the wax of her wings; like Icarus, she had fallen into a sea, and learned, while floundering in its waves, that her proper element was the solid ground. She has never since attempted so high a flight.

In times of great commercial prosperity there has been a tendency to over-speculation on several occasions since then. The success of one project generally produces others of a similar kind. Popular imitativeness will always, in a trading nation, seize hold of such successes, and drag a community too anxious for profits into an abyss from which extrication is difficult. Bubble companies, of a kind similar to those engendered by the South-Sea project, lived their little day in the famous year of the panic, 1825. On that occasion, as in 1720, knavery gathered a rich harvest from cupidity, but both suffered when the day of reckoning came. The schemes of the year 1836 threatened, at one time, results as disastrous; but they were happily averted before it was too late.[3]

注　释

〔1〕 Gay (the poet), in that disastrous year, had a present from young Craggs of some South-Sea stock, and once supposed himself to be master of twenty thousand pounds. His friends persuaded him to sell his share, but he dreamed of dignity and splendour, and could not bear to obstruct his own fortune. He was then importuned to sell as much as would purchase a hundred a year for life, 'which,' says Fenton, 'will make you sure of a clean shirt and a shoulder of mutton every day.' This counsel was rejected; the profit and principal were lost, and Gay sunk under the calamity so low that his life became in danger. — Johnson's Lives of the Poets.

〔2〕 Smollett.

〔3〕 The South-Sea project remained until 1845 the greatest example in British history of the infatuation of the people for commercial gambling. The first edition of these volumes was published some time before the outbreak of the Great Railway Mania of that and the following year.

3
The Tulipomania

Quis furor ō cives!

Lucan

The tulip, so named, it is said, from a Turkish word, signifying a turban — was introduced into western Europe about the middle of the sixteenth century. Conrad Gesner, who claims the merit of having brought it into repute — little dreaming of the extraordinary commotion it was to make in the world — says that he first saw it in the year 1559, in a garden at Augsburg, belonging to the learned Counsellor Herwart, a man very famous in his day for his collection of rare exotics. The bulbs were sent to this gentleman by a friend at Constantinople, where the flower had long been a favourite. In the course of ten or eleven years after this period, tulips were much sought after by the wealthy, especially in Holland and Germany. Rich people at Amsterdam sent for the bulbs direct to Constantinople, and paid the most extravagant prices for them. The first roots planted in England were brought from Vienna in 1600. Until the year 1634 the tulip annually increased in reputation, until it was deemed a proof of bad taste in any man of fortune to be without a collection of them. Many learned men, including Pompeius de Angelis and the celebrated Lipsius of Leyden, the author of the treatise 'De Constantia', were passionately fond of tulips. The rage for possessing them soon caught the middle classes of society, and merchants and shopkeepers, even of moderate means, began to vie with each other in the rarity of these flowers and the preposterous prices they paid for them. A trader at Harlaem was known to pay one-half of his fortune for a single root, not with the design of selling it again at a profit, but to keep in his own conservatory for the admiration of his acquaintance.

One would suppose that there must have been some great virtue in this flower to have made it so valuable in the eyes of so prudent a people as the Dutch; but it has neither the beauty nor the perfume of the rose — hardly the beauty of the 'sweet, sweet-pea'; neither is it as enduring as either. Cowley, it is true, is loud in its praise. He says:

> The tulip next appeared, all over gay,
> But wanton, full of pride, and full of play;
> The world can't show a dye but here has place;
> Nay, by new mixtures, she can change her face;
> Purple and gold are both beneath her care,
> The richest needlework she loves to wear;
> Her only study is to please the eye,
> And to outshine the rest in finery.

This, though not very poetical, is the description of a poet. Beckmann, in his History of Inventions, paints it with more fidelity, and in prose more pleasing than Cowley's poetry. He says,

> There are few plants which acquire, through accident, weakness, or disease, so many variegations as the tulip. When uncultivated, and in its natural state, it is almost of one colour, has large leaves, and an extraordinarily long stem. When it has been weakened by cultivation, it becomes more agreeable in the eyes of the florist. The petals are then paler, smaller, and more diversified in hue; and the leaves acquire a softer green colour. Thus this masterpiece of culture, the more beautiful it turns, grows so much the weaker, so that, with the greatest skill and most careful attention, it can scarcely be transplanted, or even kept alive.

Many persons grow insensibly attached to that which gives them a great deal of trouble, as a mother often loves her sick and ever-ailing child better than her more healthy offspring. Upon the same principle we must account for the unmerited encomia lavished upon these fragile blossoms. In 1634, the rage among the Dutch to possess them was so great that the ordinary industry of the country was neglected, and the population, even to its lowest dregs, embarked in the tulip trade. As the mania increased, prices augmented, until, in the year 1635, many persons were known to invest a fortune of 100,000 florins in the purchase of forty roots. It then became necessary to sell them by their weight in perits, a small weight less than a grain. A tulip of the species called Admiral Liefken, weighing 400 perits, was worth 4,400 florins; an Admiral Van der Eyck, weighing 446 perits, was worth 1,260 florins; a Childer of 106 perits was worth 1,615 florins; a Viceroy of 400 perits, 3,000 florins, and, most precious of all, a Semper Augustus, weighing 200 perits, was thought to be very cheap at 5,500 florins. The latter was much sought after, and even an inferior bulb might command a price of 2,000 florins. It is related that, at one time, early in 1636, there were only two roots of this description to be had in all Holland, and those not of the best. One was in the possession of a dealer in Amsterdam, and the other in Harlaem. So anxious were the speculators to obtain them that one person offered the fee-simple of twelve acres of building ground for the Harlaem tulip. That of Amsterdam was bought for 4,600 florins, a new carriage, two grey horses, and a complete suit of harness. Munting, an industrious author of that day, who wrote a folio volume of one thousand pages upon the tulipomania, has preserved the following list of the various articles, and their value, which were delivered for one single root of the rare species called the Viceroy:

	florins
Two lasts of wheat	448
Four lasts of rye	558
Four fat oxen	480
Eight fat swine	240
Twelve fat sheep	120
Two hogsheads of wine	70
Four tuns of beer	32
Two tons of butter	192
One thousand lbs. of cheese	120
A complete bed	100
A suit of clothes	80
A silver drinking cup	60
	2,500

People who had been absent from Holland, and whose chance it was to return when this folly was at its maximum, were sometimes led into awkward dilemmas by their ignorance. There is an amusing instance of the kind related in Blainville's Travels. A wealthy merchant, who prided himself not a little on his rare tulips, received upon one occasion a very valuable consignment of merchandise from the Levant. Intelligence of its arrival was brought him by a sailor, who presented himself for that purpose at the counting-house, among bales of goods of every description. The merchant, to reward him for his news, munificently made him a present of a fine red herring for his breakfast. The sailor had, it appears, a great partiality for onions, and seeing a bulb very like an onion lying upon the counter of this liberal trader, and thinking it, no doubt, very much out of its place among silks and velvets, he slily seized an opportunity and slipped it into his pocket, as a relish for his herring. He got clear off with his prize, and proceeded to the quay to eat his breakfast. Hardly was his back turned when the merchant missed his valuable Semper Augustus, worth three thousand florins, or about £280 sterling. The whole establishment was instantly in an uproar; search was everywhere made for the precious root, but it was not to be found. Great was the merchant's distress of mind. The search was renewed, but again without success. At last someone thought of the sailor.

The unhappy merchant sprang into the street at the bare suggestion. His alarmed household followed him. The sailor, simple soul! had not thought of concealment. He was found quietly sitting on a coil of ropes, masticating the last morsel of his 'onion'. Little did he dream that he had been eating a breakfast whose cost might have regaled a whole ship's crew for a twelvemonth; or, as the plundered merchant himself expressed it, 'might have sumptuously feasted the Prince of Orange and the whole court of the Stadtholder'. Anthony caused pearls to be dissolved in wine to drink the health of Cleopatra; Sir Richard Whittington was as foolishly magnificent in an entertainment to King Henry V; and Sir Thomas Gresham drank a diamond, dissolved in wine, to the health of Queen Elizabeth, when she opened the Royal Exchange; but the breakfast of this roguish Dutchman was as splendid as either. He had an advantage, too, over his wasteful predecessors: their gems did not improve the taste or the wholesomeness of their wine, while his tulip was quite delicious with his red herring. The most unfortunate part of the business for him was that he remained in prison for some months on a charge of felony preferred against him by the merchant.

Another story is told of an English traveller, which is scarcely less ludicrous. This gentleman, an amateur botanist, happened to see a tulip-root lying in the conservatory of a wealthy Dutchman. Being ignorant of its quality, he took out his penknife, and peeled off its coats, with the view of making experiments upon it. When it was by this means reduced to half its original size, he cut it into two equal sections, making all the time many learned remarks on the singular appearances of the unknown bulb. Suddenly the owner pounced upon him, and, with fury in his eyes, asked him if he knew what he had been doing? 'Peeling a most extraordinary onion,' replied the philosopher. 'Hundert tausend duyvel!' said the Dutchman; 'it's an Admiral Van der Eyck.' 'Thank you,' replied the traveller, taking out his notebook to make a memorandum of the same; 'are these admirals common in your country?' 'Death and the devil,' said the Dutchman, seizing the astonished man of science by the collar; 'come before the syndic, and you shall see.' In spite of his remonstrances, the traveller was led through the streets, followed by a mob of persons. When brought into the presence of the magistrate, he learned, to his consternation, that the root upon which he had been experimentalising was worth four thousand florins; and, notwithstanding all he could urge in extenuation, he was lodged in prison until he found securities for the payment of this sum.

The demand for tulips of a rare species increased so much in the year 1636, that regular marts for their sale were established on the Stock Exchange of Amsterdam, in Rotterdam, Harlaem, Leyden, Alkmar, Hoorn, and other towns. Symptoms of gambling now became, for the first time, apparent. The stock-jobbers, ever on the alert for a new speculation, dealt largely in tulips, making use of all the means they so well knew how to employ, to cause fluctuations in prices. At first, as in all these gambling mania, confidence was at its height, and everybody gained. The tulip-jobbers speculated in the rise and fall of the tulip stocks, and made large profits by buying when prices fell, and selling out when they rose. Many individuals grew suddenly rich. A golden bait hung temptingly out before the people, and, one after the other, they rushed to the tulip marts, like flies around a honey-pot. Everyone imagined that the passion for tulips would last for ever, and that the wealthy from every part of the world would send to Holland, and pay whatever prices were asked for them. The riches of Europe would be concentrated on the shores of the Zuyder Zee, and poverty banished from the favoured clime of Holland. Nobles, citizens, farmers, mechanics, seamen, footmen, maidservants, even chimney-sweeps and old clotheswomen, dabbled in tulips. People of all grades converted their property into cash, and invested it in flowers. Houses and lands were offered for sale at ruinously low prices, or assigned in payment of bargains made at the tulip-mart. Foreigners became smitten with the same frenzy, and money poured into Holland from all directions. The prices of the necessaries of life rose again by degrees: houses and lands, horses and carriages, and luxuries of every sort, rose in value with them, and for some months Holland seemed the very antechamber of Plutus. The operations of the trade became so extensive and so intricate, that it was found necessary to draw up a code of laws for the guidance of the dealers. Notaries and clerks were also appointed, who devoted themselves exclusively to the interests of the trade. The designation of public notary was hardly known in some towns, that of tulip-notary usurping its place. In the smaller towns, where there was no exchange, the principal tavern was usually selected as the 'show-place', where high and low traded in tulips, and confirmed their bargains over sumptuous entertainments. These dinners were sometimes attended by two or three hundred persons, and large vases of tulips, in full bloom, were placed at regular intervals upon the tables and sideboards, for their gratification during the repast.

At last, however, the more prudent began to see that this folly could not last for ever. Rich people no longer bought the flowers to keep them in their gardens, but to sell them again at cent per cent profit. It was seen that somebody must lose fearfully in the end. As this conviction spread, prices fell, and never rose again. Confidence was destroyed, and a universal panic seized upon the dealers. A had agreed to purchase ten Sempers Augustines from B, at four thousand florins each, at six weeks after the signing of the contract. B was ready with the flowers at the appointed time; but the price had fallen to three or four hundred florins, and A refused either to pay the difference or receive the tulips. Defaulters were announced day after day in all the towns of Holland. Hundreds who, a few months previously, had begun to doubt that there was such a thing as poverty in the land, suddenly found themselves the possessors of a few bulbs, which nobody would buy, even though they offered them at one quarter of the sums they had paid for them. The cry of distress resounded everywhere, and each man accused his neighbour. The few who had contrived to enrich themselves hid their wealth from the knowledge of their fellowcitizens, and invested it in the English or other funds. Many who, for a brief season, had emerged from the humbler walks of life, were cast back into their original obscurity. Substantial merchants were reduced almost to beggary, and many a representative of a noble line saw the fortunes of his house ruined beyond redemption.

When the first alarm subsided, the tulip-holders in the several towns held public meetings to devise what measures were best to be taken to restore public credit. It was generally agreed, that deputies should be sent from all parts to Amsterdam, to consult with the government upon some remedy for the evil. The government at first refused to interfere, but advised the tulip-holders to agree to some plan among themselves. Several meetings were held for this purpose; but no measure could be devised likely to give satisfaction to the deluded people, or repair even a slight portion of the mischief that had been done. The language of complaint and reproach was in everybody's mouth, and all the meetings were of the most stormy character. At last, however, after much bickering and ill-will, it was agreed, at Amsterdam, by the assembled deputies, that all contracts made in the height of the mania, or prior to the month of November 1636, should be declared null and void, and that, in those made after that date, purchasers should be freed from their engagements, on paying ten per cent to the vendor. This decision gave no satisfaction. The vendors who had their tulips on hand were, of course, discontented, and those who had pledged themselves to purchase, thought themselves hardly treated. Tulips which had, at one time, been worth six thousand florins, were now to be procured for five hundred; so that the composition of ten per cent was one hundred florins more than the actual value. Actions for breach of contract were threatened in all the courts of the country; but the latter refused to take cognisance of gambling transactions.

The matter was finally referred to the Provincial Council at the Hague, and it was confidently expected that the wisdom of this body would invent some measure by which credit should be restored. Expectation was on the stretch for its decision, but it never came. The members continued to deliberate week after week, and at last, after thinking about it for three months, declared that they could offer no final decision until they had more information. They advised, however, that, in the mean time, every vendor should, in the presence of witnesses, offer the tulips in natura to the purchaser for the sums agreed upon. If the latter refused to take them, they might be put up for sale by public auction, and the original contractor held responsible for the difference between the actual and the stipulated price. This was exactly the plan recommended by the deputies, and which was already shown to be of no avail. There was no court in Holland which would enforce payment. The question was raised in Amsterdam, but the judges unanimously refused to interfere, on the ground that debts contracted in gambling were no debts in law.

Thus the matter rested. To find a remedy was beyond the power of the government. Those who were unlucky enough to have had stores of tulips on hand at the time of the sudden reaction were left to bear their ruin as philosophically as they could; those who had made profits were allowed to keep them; but the commerce of the country suffered a severe shock, from which it was many years ere it recovered.

The example of the Dutch was imitated to some extent in England. In the year 1636 tulips were publicly sold in the Exchange of London, and the jobbers exerted themselves to the utmost to raise them to the fictitious value they had acquired in Amsterdam. In Paris also the jobbers strove to create a tulipomania. In both cities they only partially succeeded. However, the force of example brought the flowers into great favour, and amongst a certain class of people tulips have ever since been prized more highly than any other flowers of the field. The Dutch are still notorious for their partiality to them, and continue to pay higher prices for them than any other people. As the rich Englishman boasts of his fine racehorses or his old pictures, so does the wealthy Dutchman vaunt him of his tulips.

In England, in our day, strange as it may appear, a tulip will produce more money than an oak. If one could be found, rara in terris, and black as the black swan alluded to by Juvenal, its price would equal that of a dozen acres of standing corn. In Scotland, towards the close of the seventeenth century, the highest price for tulips, according to the authority of a writer in the supplement to the third edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica, was ten guineas. Their value appears to have diminished from that time till the year 1769, when the two most valuable species in England were the Don Quevedo and the Valentinier, the former of which was worth two guineas and the latter two guineas and a half. These prices appear to have been the minimum. In the year 1800, a common price was fifteen guineas for a single bulb. In 1835, so foolish were the fanciers that a bulb of the species called the Miss Fanny Kemble was sold by public auction in London for seventy-five pounds. Still more remarkable was the price of a tulip in the possession of a gardener in the King's Road, Chelsea; in his catalogues it was labelled at two hundred guineas.

4
The Slow Poisoners

PESCARA	The like was never read of.
STEPHANO	In my judgement, To all that shall but hear it, 'twill appear A most impossible fable.
PESCARA	Troth, I'll tell you, And briefly as I can, by what degrees They fell into this madness.

Duke of Milan

The atrocious system of poisoning, by poisons so slow in their operation, as to make the victim appear, to ordinary observers, as if dying from a gradual decay of nature, has been practised in all ages. Those who are curious in the matter may refer to Beckmann on Secret Poisons, in his History of Inventions, in which he has collected several instances of it from the Greek and Roman writers. Early in the sixteenth century the crime seems to have gradually increased, till, in the seventeenth, it spread over Europe like a pestilence. It was often exercised by pretended witches and sorcerers, and finally became a branch of education amongst all who laid any claim to magical and supernatural arts. In the twenty-first year of Henry VIII an act was passed, rendering it high-treason: those found guilty of it, were to be boiled to death.

One of the first in point of date, and hardly second to any in point of atrocity, is the murder by this means of Sir Thomas Overbury, which disgraced the court of James I, in the year 1613. A slight sketch of it will be a fitting introduction to the history of the poisoning mania, which was so prevalent in France and Italy fifty years later.

Robert Kerr, a Scottish youth, was early taken notice of by James I, and loaded with honours, for no other reason that the world could ever discover than the beauty of his person. James, even in his own day, was suspected of being addicted to the most abominable of all offences, and the more we examine his history now, the stronger the suspicion becomes. However that may be, the handsome Kerr, lending his smooth cheek, even in public, to the disgusting kisses of his royal master, rose rapidly in favour. In the year 1613, he was made Lord High Treasurer of Scotland, and created an English peer, by the style and title of Viscount Rochester. Still further honours were in store for him.

In this rapid promotion he had not been without a friend. Sir Thomas Overbury, the King's secretary — who appears, from some threats in his own letters, to have been no better than a pander to the vices of the King, and privy to his dangerous secrets — exerted all his backstair influence to forward the promotion of Kerr, by whom he was, doubtless, repaid in some way or other. Overbury did not confine his friendship to this, if friendship ever could exist between two such men, but acted the part of an entremetteur, and assisted Rochester to carry on an adulterous intrigue with the Lady Frances Howard, the wife of the Earl of Essex. This woman was a person of violent passions, and lost to all sense of shame. Her husband was in her way, and to be freed from him, she instituted proceedings for a divorce, on grounds which a woman of any modesty or delicacy of feeling would die rather than avow. Her scandalous suit was successful, and was no sooner decided than preparations, on a scale of the greatest magnificence, were made for her marriage with Lord Rochester.

Sir Thomas Overbury, who had willingly assisted his patron to intrigue with the Countess of Essex, seems to have imagined that his marriage with so vile a woman might retard his advancement; he accordingly employed all his influence to dissuade him from it. But Rochester was bent on the match, and his passions were as violent as those of the Countess. On one occasion, when Overbury and the Viscount were walking in the gallery of Whitehall, Overbury was overheard to say, 'Well, my Lord, if you do marry that base woman, you will utterly ruin your honour and yourself. You shall never do it with my advice or consent; and, if you do, you had best look to stand fast.' Rochester flung from him in a rage, exclaiming with an oath, 'I will be even with you for this.' These words were the death-warrant of the unfortunate Overbury. He had mortally wounded the pride of Rochester in insinuating that by his (Overbury's) means he might be lowered in the King's favour; and he had endeavoured to curb the burning passions of a heartless, dissolute, and reckless man.

Overbury's imprudent remonstrances were reported to the Countess; and from that moment, she also vowed the most deadly vengeance against him. With a fiendish hypocrisy, however, they both concealed their intentions, and Overbury, at the solicitation of Rochester, was appointed ambassador to the court of Russia. This apparent favour was but the first step in a deep and deadly plot. Rochester, pretending to be warmly attached to the interests of Overbury, advised him to refuse the embassy, which, he said, was but a trick to get him out of the way. He promised, at the same time, to stand between him and any evil consequences which might result from his refusal. Overbury fell into the snare, and declined the embassy. James, offended, immediately ordered his committal to the Tower.

He was now in safe custody, and his enemies had opportunity to commence the work of vengeance. The first thing Rochester did was to procure, by his influence at court, the dismissal of the Lieutenant of the Tower, and the appointment of Sir Jervis Elwes, one of his creatures, to the vacant post. This man was but one instrument, and another being necessary, was found in Richard Weston, a fellow who had formerly been shopman to a druggist. He was installed in the office of under-keeper, and as such had the direct custody of Overbury. So far, all was favourable to the designs of the conspirators.

In the mean time, the insidious Rochester wrote the most friendly letters to Overbury, requesting him to bear his ill-fortune patiently, and promising that his imprisonment should not be of long duration; for that his friends were exerting themselves to soften the King's displeasure. Still pretending the extreme of sympathy for him, he followed up the letters by presents of pastry and other delicacies, which could not be procured in the Tower. These articles were all poisoned. Occasionally, presents of a similar description were sent to Sir Jervis Elwes, with the understanding that these articles were not poisoned, when they were unaccompanied by letters: of these the unfortunate prisoner never tasted. A woman, named Turner, who had formerly kept a house of ill fame, and who had more than once lent it to further the guilty intercourse of Rochester and Lady Essex, was the agent employed to procure the poisons. They were prepared by Dr Forman, a pretended fortune-teller of Lambeth, assisted by an apothecary named Franklin. Both these persons knew for what purposes the poisons were needed, and employed their skill in mixing them in the pastry and other edibles, in such small quantities as gradually to wear out the constitution of their victim. Mrs Turner regularly furnished the poisoned articles to the under-keeper, who placed them before Overbury. Not only his food, but his drink was poisoned. Arsenic was mixed with the salt he ate, and cantharides with the pepper. All this time, his health declined sensibly. Every day he grew weaker and weaker; and with a sickly appetite, craved for sweets and jellies. Rochester continued to condole with him, and anticipated all his wants in this respect, sending him abundance of pastry, and occasionally partridges and other game, and young pigs. With the sauce for the game, Mrs Turner mixed a quantity of cantharides, and poisoned the pork with lunar-caustic. As stated on the trial, Overbury took in this manner poison enough to have poisoned twenty men; but his constitution was strong, and he still lingered. Franklin, the apothecary, confessed that he prepared with Dr Forman seven different sorts of poisons; viz. aquafortis, arsenic, mercury, powder of diamonds, lunar-caustic, great spiders, and cantharides. Overbury held out so long that Rochester became impatient, and in a letter to Lady Essex, expressed his wonder that things were not sooner despatched. Orders were immediately sent by Lady Essex to the keeper to finish with the victim at once. Overbury had not been all this time without suspicion of treachery, although he appears to have had no idea of poison. He merely suspected that it was intended to confine him for life, and to set the King still more bitterly against him. In one of his letters, he threatened Rochester that, unless he were speedily liberated, he would expose his villainy to the world. He says, 'You and I, ere it be long, will come to a public trial of another nature... Drive me not to extremities, lest I should say something that both you and I should repent... Whether I live or die, your shame shall never die, but ever remain to the world, to make you the most odious man living... I wonder much you should neglect him to whom such secrets of all kinds have passed... Be these the fruits of common secrets, common dangers?'

All these remonstrances, and hints as to the dangerous secrets in his keeping, were ill-calculated to serve him with a man so reckless as Lord Rochester: they were more likely to cause him to be sacrificed than to be saved. Rochester appears to have acted as if he thought so. He doubtless employed the murderer's reasoning that 'dead men tell no tales', when, after receiving letters of this description, he complained to his paramour of the delay. Weston was spurred on to consummate the atrocity; and the patience of all parties being exhausted, a dose of corrosive sublimate was administered to him, in October 1613, which put an end to his sufferings, after he had been for six months in their hands. On the very day of his death, and before his body was cold, he was wrapped up carelessly in a sheet, and buried without any funeral ceremony in a pit within the precincts of the Tower.

Sir Anthony Weldon, in his Court and Character of James I, gives a somewhat different account of the closing scene of this tragedy. He says, 'Franklin and Weston came into Overbury's chamber, and found him in infinite torment, with contention between the strength of nature and the working of the poison; and it being very like that nature had gotten the better in this contention, by the thrusting out of boils, blotches, and blains, they, fearing it might come to light by the judgement of physicians, the foul play that had been offered him, consented to stifle him with the bedclothes, which accordingly was performed; and so ended his miserable life, with the assurance of the conspirators that he died by the poison; none thinking otherwise than these two murderers.'

The sudden death — the indecent haste of the funeral, and the non-holding of an inquest upon the body, strengthened the suspicions that were afloat. Rumour, instead of whispering, began to speak out; and the relatives of the deceased openly expressed their belief that their kinsman had been murdered. But Rochester was still all powerful at court, and no one dared to utter a word to his discredit. Shortly afterwards, his marriage with the Countess of Essex was celebrated with the utmost splendour, the King himself being present at the ceremony.

It would seem that Overbury's knowledge of James's character was deeper than Rochester had given him credit for, and that he had been a true prophet when he predicted that his marriage would eventually estrange James from his minion. At this time, however, Rochester stood higher than ever in the royal favour; but it did not last long — conscience, that busy monitor, was at work. The tongue of rumour was never still; and Rochester, who had long been a guilty, became at last a wretched man. His cheeks lost their colour — his eyes grew dim; and he became moody, careless, and melancholy. The King seeing him thus, took at length no pleasure in his society, and began to look about for another favourite. George Villiers, Duke of Buckingham, was the man to his mind; quickwitted, handsome, and unscrupulous. The two latter qualities alone were sufficient to recommend him to James I. In proportion as the influence of Rochester declined, that of Buckingham increased. A falling favourite has no friends; and Rumour wagged her tongue against Rochester louder and more pertinaciously than ever. A new favourite, too, generally endeavours to hasten by a kick the fall of the old one; and Buckingham, anxious to work the complete ruin of his forerunner in the King's good graces, encouraged the relatives of Sir Thomas Overbury to prosecute their enquiries into the strange death of their kinsman.

James was rigorous enough in the punishment of offences when he was not himself involved. He piqued himself, moreover, on his dexterity in unravelling mysteries. The affair of Sir Thomas Overbury found him congenial occupation. He set to work by ordering the arrest of Sir Jervis Elwes. James, at this early stage of the proceedings, does not seem to have been aware that Rochester was so deeply implicated. Struck with horror at the atrocious system of slow poisoning, the King sent for all the Judges. According to Sir Anthony Weldon, he knelt down in the midst of them, and said, 'My Lords the Judges, it is lately come to my hearing that you have now in examination a business of poisoning. Lord! in what a miserable condition shall this kingdom be (the only famous nation for hospitality in the world) if our tables should become such a snare, as that none could eat without danger of life, and that Italian custom should be introduced among us! Therefore, my Lords, I charge you, as you will answer it at that great and dreadful day of judgement, that you examine it strictly, without layout, affection, or partiality. And if you shall spare any guilty of this crime, God's curse light on you and your posterity! and if I spare any that are guilty, God's curse light on me and my posterity for ever!'

The imprecation fell but too surely upon the devoted house of Stuart. The solemn oath was broken, and God's curse did light upon him and his posterity!

The next person arrested after Sir Jervis Elwes, was Weston, the under-keeper; then Franklin and Mrs Turner; and, lastly, the Earl and Countess of Somerset, to which dignity Rochester had been advanced since the death of Overbury.

Weston was first brought to trial. Public curiosity was on the stretch. Nothing else was talked of, and the court on the day of trial was crowded to suffocation. The State Trials report, that Lord Chief Justice Coke 'laid open to the jury the baseness and cowardliness of poisoners, who attempt that secretly against which there is no means of preservation or defence for a man's life; and how rare it was to hear of any poisoning in England, so detestable it was to our nation. But the devil had taught divers to be cunning in it, so that they can poison in what distance of space they please, by consuming the nativum calidum, or humidum radicale, in one month, two or three, or more, as they list, which they four manner of ways do execute; viz. 'Haustu', 'gustu', 'odore', and 'contactu'.

When the indictment was read over, Weston made no other reply than, 'Lord have mercy upon me! Lord have mercy upon me!' On being asked how he would be tried, he refused to throw himself upon a jury of his country, and declared, that he would be tried by God alone. In this he persisted for some time. The fear of the dreadful punishment for contumacy[1] induced him, at length, to plead 'Not guilty', and take his trial in due course of law.

All the circumstances against him were fully proved, and he was found guilty and executed at Tyburn. Mrs Turner, Franklin, and Sir Jervis Elwes were also brought to trial, found guilty, and executed between the 19th of October and the 4th of December 1615; but the grand trial of the Earl and Countess of Somerset did not take place till the month of May following.

On the trial of Sir Jervis Elwes, circumstances had transpired, showing a guilty knowledge of the poisoning on the part of the Earl of Northampton the uncle of Lady Somerset, and the chief falconer Sir Thomas Monson. The former was dead; but Sir Thomas Monson was arrested, and brought to trial. It appeared, however, that he was too dangerous a man to be brought to the scaffold. He knew too many of the odious secrets of James I, and his dying speech might contain disclosures which would compromise the King. To conceal old guilt it was necessary to incur new: the trial of Sir Thomas Monson was brought to an abrupt conclusion, and himself set at liberty!

Already James had broken his oath. He now began to fear that he had been rash in engaging so zealously to bring the poisoners to punishment. That Somerset would be declared guilty there was no doubt, and that he looked for pardon and impunity was equally evident to the King. Somerset, while in the Tower, asserted confidently, that James would not dare to bring him to trial. In this he was mistaken; but James was in an agony. What the secret was between them will now never be known with certainty; but it may be surmised. Some have imagined it to be the vice to which the King was addicted; while others have asserted, that it related to the death of Prince Henry, a virtuous young man, who had held Somerset in especial abhorrence. The Prince died early, unlamented by his father, and, as public opinion whispered at the time, poisoned by Somerset. Probably, some crime or other lay heavy upon the soul of the King; and Somerset, his accomplice, could not be brought to public execution with safety. Hence the dreadful tortures of James, when he discovered that his favourite was so deeply implicated in the murder of Overbury. Every means was taken by the agonised King to bring the prisoner into what was called a safe frame of mind. He was secretly advised to plead guilty, and trust to the clemency of the King. The same advice was conveyed to the Countess. Bacon was instructed by the King to draw up a paper of all the points of 'mercy and favour' to Somerset which might result from the evidence; and Somerset was again recommended to plead guilty, and promised that no evil should ensue to him.

The Countess was first tried. She trembled and shed tears during the reading of the indictment, and, in a low voice, pleaded guilty. On being asked why sentence of death should not be passed against her, she replied meekly, 'I can much aggravate, but nothing extenuate my fault. I desire mercy, and that the lords will intercede for me with the King.' Sentence of death was passed upon her.

Next day the Earl was brought to trial. He appears to have mistrusted the promises of James, and he pleaded not guilty. With a self-possession and confidence, which he felt, probably, from his knowledge of the King's character, he rigorously cross-examined the witnesses, and made a stubborn defence. After a trial which lasted eleven hours, he was found guilty, and condemned to the felon's death.

Whatever may have been the secrets between the criminal and the King, the latter, notwithstanding his terrific oath, was afraid to sign the death-warrant. It might, perchance, have been his own. The Earl and Countess were committed to the Tower, where they remained for nearly five years. At the end of this period, to the surprise and scandal of the community, and the disgrace of its chief magistrate, they both received the royal pardon, but were ordered to reside at a distance from the court. Having been found guilty of felony, the estates of the Earl had become forfeited; but James granted him out of their revenues an income of £4,000 per annum! Shamelessness could go no further.

Of the after life of these criminals nothing is known, except that the love they had formerly borne each other was changed into aversion, and that they lived under the same roof for months together without the interchange of a word.

The exposure of their atrocities did not put a stop to the practice of poisoning. On the contrary, as we shall see hereafter, it engendered that insane imitation which is so strange a feature of the human character. James himself is supposed, with great probability, to have fallen a victim to it. In the notes to Harris's Life and Writings of James I, there is a good deal of information on the subject. The guilt of Buckingham, although not fully established, rests upon circumstances of suspicion stronger than have been sufficient to lead hundreds to the scaffold. His motives for committing the crime are stated to have been a desire of revenge for the coldness with which the King, in the latter years of his reign, began to regard him; his fear that James intended to degrade him; and his hope that the great influence he possessed over the mind of the heir-apparent would last through a new reign, if the old one were brought to a close.

In the second volume of the Harleian Miscellany, there is a tract, entitled the 'Forerunner of Revenge', written by George Eglisham, doctor of medicine, and one of the physicians to King James. Harris, in quoting it, says that it is full of rancour and prejudice. It is evidently exaggerated; but forms, nevertheless, a link in the chain of evidence. Eglisham says: 'The King being sick of an ague, the Duke took this opportunity, when all the King's doctors of physic were at dinner, and offered to him a white powder to take, the which he a long time refused; but, overcome with his flattering importunity, he took it in wine, and immediately became worse and worse, falling into many swoonings and pains, and violent fluxes of the belly, so tormented, that his Majesty cried out aloud of this white powder, "Would to God I had never taken it!"' He then tells us 'of the Countess of Buckingham (the Duke's mother) applying the plaister to the King's heart and breast, whereupon he grew faint and short-breathed, and in agony. That the physicians exclaimed, that the King was poisoned; that Buckingham commanded them out of the room, and committed one of them close prisoner to his own chamber, and another to be removed from court; and that, after his Majesty's death, his body and head swelled above measure; his hair, with the skin of his head, stuck to his pillow, and his nails became loose on his fingers and toes.' Clarendon, who, by the way, was a partisan of the Duke's, gives a totally different account of James's death. He says, 'It was occasioned by an ague

(after a short indisposition by the gout) which, meeting many humours in a fat unwieldy body of fifty-eight years old, in four or five fits carried him out of the world. After whose death many scandalous and libellous discourses were raised, without the least colour or ground; as appeared upon the strictest and most malicious examination that could be made, long after, in a time of licence, when nobody was afraid of offending majesty, and when prosecuting the highest reproaches and contumelies against the royal family was held very meritorious.' Notwithstanding this confident declaration, the world will hardly be persuaded that there was not some truth in the rumours that were abroad. The enquiries which were instituted were not strict, as he asserts, and all the unconstitutional influence of the powerful favourite was exerted to defeat them. In the celebrated accusations brought against Buckingham by the Earl of Bristol, the poisoning of King James was placed last on the list, and the pages of history bear evidence of the summary mode in which they were, for the time, got rid of.

The man from whom Buckingham is said to have procured his poisons was one Dr Lamb, a conjuror and empiric, who, besides dealing in poisons, pretended to be a fortune-teller. The popular fury, which broke with comparative harmlessness against his patron, was directed against this man, until he could not appear with safety in the streets of London. His fate was melancholy. Walking one day in Cheapside, disguised, as he thought, from all observers, he was recognised by some idle boys, who began to hoot and pelt him with rubbish, calling out, 'The poisoner! the poisoner! Down with the wizard! down with him!' A mob very soon collected, and the Doctor took to his heels and ran for his life. He was pursued and seized in Wood Street, and from thence dragged by the hair through the mire to St Paul's Cross; the mob beating him with sticks and stones, and calling out, 'Kill the wizard! kill the poisoner!'

Charles I, on hearing of the riot, rode from Whitehall to quell it; but he arrived too late to save the victim. Every bone in his body was broken, and he was quite dead. Charles was excessively indignant, and fined the city six hundred pounds for its inability to deliver up the ringleaders to justice.

But it was in Italy that poisoning was most prevalent. From a very early period, it seems to have been looked upon in that country as a perfectly justifiable means of getting rid of an enemy. The Italians of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries poisoned their opponents with as little compunction as an Englishman of the present day brings an action at law against anyone who has done him an injury. The writings of contemporary authors inform us that, when La Spara and La Tophania carried on their infernal trade, ladies put poison bottles on their dressingtables as openly, and used them with as little scruple upon others, as modern dames use Eau de Cologne or lavender-water upon themselves. So powerful is the influence of fashion, it can even cause murder to be regarded as a venial peccadillo. In the memoirs of the last Duke of Guise, who made a Quixotic attempt, in 1648, to seize upon the government of Naples, we find some curious particulars relative to the popular feeling with regard to poisoning. A man, named Gennaro Annese, who, after the short and extraordinary career of Masaniello the fisherman, had established himself as a sort of captain-general of the populace, rendered himself so obnoxious to the Duke of Guise that the adherents of the latter determined to murder him. The captain of the guard, as the Duke himself very coolly informs us, was requested to undertake this office. It was suggested to him that the poniard would be the most effectual instrument, but the man turned up his eyes with pious horror at the proposition. He was ready to poison Gennaro Annese whenever he might be called upon to do so; but to poniard him, he said, would be disgraceful, and unbecoming an officer of the guards! At last poison was agreed upon, and Augustino Molla, an attorney in the Duke's confidence, brought the bottle containing the liquid to show it to his master. The following is the Duke's own account:

Augustino came to me at night, and told me: 'I have brought you something which will free you from Gennaro. He deserves death, and it is no great matter after what fashion justice is done upon him. Look at this vial, full of clear and beautiful water: in four days' time, it will punish all his treasons. The captain of the guard has undertaken to give it him; and as it has no taste at all, Gennaro will suspect nothing.'

The Duke further informs us that the dose was duly administered; but that Gennaro, fortunately for himself, ate nothing for dinner that day but cabbage dressed with oil, which, acting as an antidote, caused him to vomit profusely, and saved his life. He was exceedingly ill for five days, but never suspected that he had been poisoned.

In process of time, poison vending became a profitable trade. Eleven years after this period, it was carried on at Rome to such an extent that the sluggish government was roused to interference. Beckmann, in his History of Inventions, and Lebret, in his Magazin zum Gebrauche der Staaten Kirche Geschichte, or Magazine of Materials for a History of a State Church, relates that, in the year 1659, it was made known to Pope Alexander VII that great numbers of young women had avowed in the confessional that they had poisoned their husbands with slow poisons. The Catholic clergy, who in general hold the secrets of the confessional so sacred, were shocked and alarmed at the extraordinary prevalence of the crime. Although they refrained from revealing the names of the penitents, they conceived themselves bound to apprise the head of the Church of the enormities that were practised. It was also the subject of general conversation in Rome that young widows were unusually abundant. It was remarked, too, that if any couple lived unhappily together, the husband soon took ill and died. The papal authorities, when once they began to enquire, soon learned that a society of young wives had been formed, and met nightly, for some mysterious purpose, at the house of an old woman named Hieronyma Spara. This hag was a reputed witch and fortune-teller, and acted as president of the young viragos, several of whom, it was afterwards ascertained, belonged to the first families of Rome.

In order to have positive evidence of the practices of this female conclave, a lady was employed by the Government to seek an interview with them. She dressed herself out in the most magnificent style; and having been amply provided with money, she found but little difficulty, when she had stated her object, of procuring an audience of La Spara and her sisterhood. She pretended to be in extreme distress of mind on account of the infidelities and ill-treatment of her husband, and implored La Spara to furnish her with a few drops of the wonderful elixir, the efficacy of which in sending cruel husbands to 'their last long sleep' was so much vaunted by the ladies of Rome. La Spara fell into the snare, and sold her some of her 'drops', at a price commensurate with the supposed wealth of the purchaser.

The liquor thus obtained was subjected to an analysis, and found to be, as was suspected, a slow poison — clear, tasteless, and limpid, like that spoken of by the Duke of Guise. Upon this evidence the house was surrounded by the police, and La Spara and her companions taken into custody. La Spara, who is described as having been a little, ugly, old woman, was put to the torture, but obstinately refused to confess her guilt. Another of the women, named La Gratiosa, had less firmness, and laid bare all the secrets of the infernal sisterhood. Taking a confession, extorted by anguish on the rack, at its true value (nothing at all), there is still sufficient evidence to warrant posterity in the belief of their guilt. They were found guilty, and condemned, according to their degrees of culpability, to various punishments. La Spara, Gratiosa, and three young women, who had poisoned their husbands, were hanged together at Rome. Upwards of thirty women were whipped publicly through the streets; and several, whose high rank screened them from more degrading punishment, were banished from the country, and mulcted in heavy fines. In a few months afterwards, nine women more were hanged for poisoning; and another bevy, including many young and beautiful girls, were whipped half naked through the streets of Rome.

This severity did not put a stop to the practice, and jealous women and avaricious men, anxious to step into the inheritance of fathers, uncles, or brothers, resorted to poison. As it was quite free from taste, colour, and smell, it was administered without exciting suspicion. The skilful vendors compounded it of different degrees of strength, so that the poisoners had only to say whether they wanted their victims to die in a week, a month, or six months, and they were suited with corresponding doses. The vendors were chiefly women, of whom the most celebrated was a hag, named Tophania, who was in this way accessory to the death of upwards of six hundred persons. This woman appears to have been a dealer in poisons from her girlhood, and resided first at Palermo and then at Naples. That entertaining traveller, Father Lebat, has given, in his Letters from Italy, many curious particulars relating to her. When he was at Civita Vecchia, in 1719, the Viceroy of Naples discovered that poison was extensively sold in the latter city, and that it went by the name of aqueta, or little-water. On making further enquiry, he ascertained that Tophania (who was by this time near seventy years of age, and who seems to have begun her evil courses very soon after the execution of La Spara) sent large quantities of it to all parts of Italy in small vials, with the inscription 'Manna of St Nicholas of Barri'.

The tomb of St Nicholas of Barri was celebrated throughout Italy. A miraculous oil was said to ooze from it, which cured nearly all the maladies that flesh is heir to, provided the recipient made use of it with the due degree of faith. La Tophania artfully gave this name to her poison to elude the vigilance of the custom-house officers, who, in common with everybody else, had a pious respect for St Nicholas de Barri and his wonderful oil.

The poison was similar to that manufactured by La Spara. Hahnemann the physician, and father of the homoeopathic doctrine, writing upon this subject, says it was compounded of arsenical neutral salts, occasioning in the victim a gradual loss of appetite, faintness, gnawing pains in the stomach, loss of strength, and wasting of the lungs. The Abbé Gagliardi says that a few drops of it were generally poured into tea, chocolate, or soup, and its effects were slow, and almost imperceptible. Garelli, physician to the Emperor of Austria, in a letter to Hoffmann, says it was crystallised arsenic, dissolved in a large quantity of water by decoction, with the addition (for some unexplained purpose) of the herb cymbalaria. The Neapolitans called it Aqua Toffnina; and it became notorious all over Europe under the name of Aqua Tophania.

Although this woman carried on her infamous traffic so extensively, it was extremely difficult to meet with her. She lived in continual dread of discovery. She constantly changed her name and residence; and pretending to be a person of great godliness, resided in monasteries for months together. Whenever she was more than usually apprehensive of detection, she sought ecclesiastical protection. She was soon apprised of the search made for her by the Viceroy of Naples, and, according to her practice, took refuge in a monastery. Either the search after her was not very rigid, or her measures were exceedingly well taken; for she contrived to elude the vigilance of the authorities for several years. What is still more extraordinary, as showing the ramifications of her system, her trade was still carried on to as great an extent as before. Lebat informs us that she had so great a sympathy for poor wives who hated their husbands and wanted to get rid of them, but could not afford to buy her wonderful aqua, that she made them presents of it.

She was not allowed, however, to play at this game for ever; she was at length discovered in a nunnery, and her retreat cut off. The Viceroy made several representations to the superior to deliver her up, but without effect. The abbess, supported by the archbishop of the diocese, constantly refused. The public curiosity was in consequence so much excited at the additional importance thus thrust upon the criminal, that thousands of persons visited the nunnery in order to catch a glimpse of her.

The patience of the Viceroy appears to have been exhausted by these delays. Being a man of sense, and not a very zealous Catholic, he determined that even the Church should not shield a criminal so atrocious. Setting the privileges of the nunnery at defiance, he sent a troop of soldiers, who broke over the walls and carried her away vi et armis. The Archbishop, Cardinal Pignatelli, was highly indignant, and threatened to excommunicate and lay the whole city under interdict. All the inferior clergy, animated by the esprit du corps, took up the question, and so worked upon the superstitious and bigoted people, that they were ready to rise in a mass to storm the palace of the Viceroy and rescue the prisoner.

These were serious difficulties; but the Viceroy was not a man to be daunted. Indeed, he seems to have acted throughout with a rare union of astuteness, coolness, and energy. To avoid the evil consequences of the threatened excommunication, he placed a guard round the palace of the Archbishop, judging that the latter would not be so foolish as to launch out an anathema which would cause the city to be starved, and himself in it. The marketpeople would not have dared to come to the city with provisions, so long as it remained under the ban. There would have been too much inconvenience to himself and his ghostly brethren in such a measure; and, as the Viceroy anticipated, the good Cardinal reserved his thunders for some other occasion.

Still there was the populace. To quiet their clamour and avert the impending insurrection, the agents of the government adroitly mingled with the people, and spread abroad a report that Tophania had poisoned all the wells and fountains of the city. This was enough. The popular feeling turned against her immediately. Those who, but a moment before, had looked upon her as a saint, now reviled her as a devil, and were as eager for her punishment as they had before been for her escape. Tophania was then put to the torture. She confessed the long catalogue of her crimes, and named all the persons who had employed her. She was shortly afterwards strangled, and her corpse thrown over the wall into the garden of the convent, from whence she had been taken. This appears to have been done to conciliate the clergy, by allowing them, at least, the burial of one who had taken refuge within their precincts.

After her death the mania for poisoning seems to have abated; but we have yet to see what hold it took upon the French people at a somewhat earlier period. So rooted had it become in France between the years 1670 and 1680, that Mme de Sévigné, in one of her letters, expresses her fear that Frenchman and poisoner would become synonymous terms.

As in Italy, the first notice the government received of the prevalence of this crime was given by the clergy, to whom females of high rank, and some among the middle and lower classes, had avowed in the confessional that they had poisoned their husbands. In consequence of these disclosures, two Italians, named Exili and Glaser, were arrested, and thrown into the Bastille, on the charge of compounding and selling the drugs used for these murders. Glaser died in prison, but Exili remained without trial for several months; and there, shortly afterwards, he made the acquaintance of another prisoner, named Sainte Croix, by whose example the crime was still further disseminated among the French people.

The most notorious of the poisoners that derived their pernicious knowledge from this man was Mme de Brinvilliers, a young woman connected both by birth and marriage with some of the noblest families of France. She seems, from her very earliest years, to have been heartless and depraved; and, if we may believe her own confession, was steeped in wickedness ere she had well entered her teens. She was, however, beautiful and accomplished; and, in the eye of the world, seemed exemplary and kind. Guyot de Pitaval, in the Causes Célèbres, and Mme de Sévigné, in her Letters, represent her as mild and agreeable in her manners, and offering no traces on her countenance of the evil soul within. She was married in 1651 to the Marquis de Brinvilliers, with whom she lived unhappily for some years. He was a loose, dissipated character, and was the means of introducing Sainte Croix to his wife, a man who cast a blight upon her life, and dragged her on from crime to crime till her offences became so great that the mind shudders to dwell upon them. For this man she conceived a guilty passion, to gratify which she plunged at once into the gulf of sin. She was drawn to its most loathsome depths ere retribution overtook her.

She had as yet shown a fair outside to the world, and found but little difficulty in effecting a legal separation from her husband, who had not the art to conceal his vices. The proceeding gave great offence to her family. She appears, after this, to have thrown off the mask completely, and carried on her intrigues so openly with her lover, Sainte Croix, that her father, M. D'Aubray, scandalised at her conduct, procured a lettre de cachet, and had him imprisoned in the Bastille for a twelvemonth.

Sainte Croix, who had been in Italy, was a dabbler in poisons. He knew something of the secrets of the detestable La Spara, and improved himself in them from the instructions of Exili, with whom he speedily contracted a sort of friendship. By him he was shown how to prepare, not only the liquid poisons employed in Italy, but that known as succession powder, which afterwards became so celebrated in France. Like his mistress, he appeared amiable, witty, and intelligent, and showed no signs to the world of the two fierce passions, revenge and avarice, which were gnawing at his heart. Both these passions were to be sated on the unfortunate family of D'Aubray; his revenge, because they had imprisoned him; and his avarice, because they were rich. Reckless and extravagant, he was always in want of money, and he had no one to supply him but Mme de Brinvilliers, whose own portion was far from sufficient to satisfy his need. Groaning to think that any impediment should stand between him and wealth, he conceived the horrid idea of poisoning M. D'Aubray her father, and her two brothers, that she might inherit the property. Three murders were nothing to such a villain. He communicated his plan to Mme de Brinvilliers; and she, without the slightest scruple, agreed to aid him: he undertook to compound the poisons, and she to administer them. The zeal and alacrity with which she set to work seem hardly credible. Sainte Croix found her an apt scholar; and she soon became as expert as himself in the manufacture of poisons. To try the strength of the first doses, she used to administer them to dogs, rabbits, and pigeons. Afterwards, wishing to be more certain of their effects, she went round to the hospitals, and administered them to the sick poor in the soups which she brought in apparent charity. None of the poisons were intended to kill at the first dose; so that she could try them once upon an individual without fear of murder. She tried the same atrocious experiment upon the guests at her father's table, by poisoning a pigeon-pie! To be more certain still, she next poisoned herself! When convinced by this desperate essay of the potency of the draught, she procured an antidote from Sainte Croix, and all doubts being removed, commenced operations upon her greyheaded father. She administered the first dose with her own hands, in his chocolate. The poison worked well. The old man was taken ill, and his daughter, apparently full of tenderness and anxiety, watched by his bedside. The next day she gave him some broth, which she recommended as highly nourishing. This also was poisoned. In this manner she gradually wore out his frame, and in less than ten days he was a corpse! His death seemed so much the result of disease, that no suspicions were excited.

When the two brothers arrived from the provinces to render the last sad duties to their sire, they found their sister as grieved, to all outward appearance, as even filial affection could desire: but the young men only came to perish. They stood between Sainte Croix and the already half-clutched gold, and their doom was sealed. A man, named La Chaussée, was hired by Sainte Croix to aid in administering the poisons; and, in less than six weeks' time, they had both gone to their long home.

Suspicion was now excited; but so cautiously had all been done, that it found no one upon whom to attach itself. The Marquise had a sister, and she was entitled, by the death of her relatives, to half the property. Less than the whole would not satisfy Sainte Croix, and he determined that she should die the same death as her father and brothers. She was too distrustful, however; and, by quitting Paris, she escaped the destruction that was lurking for her.

The Marquise had undertaken these murders to please her lover. She was now anxious to perpetrate another on her own account. She wished to marry Sainte Croix; but, though separated from her husband, she was not divorced. She thought it would be easier to poison him than to apply to the tribunals for a divorce, which might, perhaps, be refused. But Sainte Croix had no longer any love for his guilty instrument. Bad men do not admire others who are as bad as themselves. Though a villain himself, he had no desire to marry one, and was not at all anxious for the death of the Marquis. He seemed, however, to enter into the plot, and supplied her with poison for her husband: but he took care to provide a remedy. La Brinvilliers poisoned him one day, and Sainte Croix gave him an antidote the next. In this manner he was buffetted about between them for some time, and finally escaped with a ruined constitution and a broken heart.

But the day of retribution was at hand, and a terrible mischance brought the murders to light. The nature of the poisons compounded by Sainte Croix was so deadly, that, when working in his laboratory, he was obliged to wear a mask, to preserve himself from suffocation. One day, the mask slipped off, and the miserable wretch perished in his crimes. His corpse was found, on the following morning, in the obscure lodging where he had fitted up his laboratory. As he appeared to be without friends or relatives, the police took possession of his effects. Among other things was found a small box, to which was affixed the following singular document:

I humbly beg, that those into whose hands this box may fall, will do me the favour to deliver it into the hands only of the Marchioness de Brinvilliers, who resides in the Rue Neuve St Paul, as everything it contains concerns her, and belongs to her alone; and as, besides, there is nothing in it that can be of use to any person but her. In case she shall be dead before me, it is my wish that it be burned, with everything it contains, without opening or altering anything. In order that no one may plead ignorance, I swear by the God that I adore, and by all that is held most sacred, that I assert nothing but the truth: and if my intentions, just and reasonable as they are, be thwarted in this point by any persons, I charge their consciences with it, both in this world and that which is to come, in order that I may unload mine. I protest that this is my last will. Done at Paris, the 25th of May, 1672.

(Signed) Sainte Croix

This earnest solicitation, instead of insuring respect as was intended, excited curiosity. The box was opened, and found to contain some papers, and several vials and powders. The latter were handed to a chemist for analysis, and the documents were retained by the police, and opened. Among them was found a promissory note of the Marchioness de Brinvilliers, for thirty thousand francs, to the order of Sainte Croix. The other papers were of greater importance, as they implicated both her and her servant, La Chaussée, in the recent murders. As soon as she was informed of the death of Sainte Croix, she made an attempt to gain possession of his papers and the box; but, being refused, she saw that there was no time to be lost, and immediately quitted. Next morning the police were on her trail; but she succeeded in escaping to England. La Chaussée was not so fortunate. Altogether ignorant of the fatal mischance which had brought his villainies to light, he did not dream of danger. He was arrested and brought to trial: being put to the torture, he confessed that he had administered poison to the Messieurs d'Aubray, and that he had received a hundred pistoles, and the promise of an annuity for life, from Sainte Croix and Mme de Brinvilliers, for the job. He was condemned to be broken alive on the wheel, and the Marchioness was, by default, sentenced to be beheaded. He was executed accordingly, in March 1673, on the Place de Grève, in Paris.

La Brinvilliers appears to have resided for nearly three years in England. Early in 1676, thinking that the rigour of pursuit was over, and that she might venture to return to the Continent, she proceeded secretly to Liège. Notwithstanding her care, the French authorities were soon apprised of her return; and arrangements were promptly made with the municipality of that city, to permit the agents of the French police to arrest her within the limits of their jurisdiction. Desgrais, an officer of the Maréchausée, accordingly left Paris for that purpose. On his arrival in Liège, he found that she had sought shelter within the walls of a convent. Here the arm of the law, long as it is said to be, could not reach her: but Desgrais was not a man to be baffled, and he resorted to stratagem to accomplish what force could not. Having disguised himself as a priest, he sought admission to the convent, and obtained an interview with La Brinvilliers. He said, that being a Frenchman, and passing through Liège, he could not leave that city without paying a visit to a lady whose beauty and misfortunes were so celebrated. Her vanity was flattered by the compliment. Desgrais saw, to use a vulgar but forcible expression, 'that he had got on the blind side of her'; and he adroitly continued to pour out the language of love and admiration, till the deluded Marchioness was thrown completely off her guard. She agreed, without much solicitation, to meet him outside the walls of the convent, where their amorous intrigue might be carried on more conveniently than within. Faithful to her appointment with her supposed new lover, she came, and found herself, not in the embrace of a gallant, but in the custody of a policeman.

Her trial was not long delayed. The proofs against her were abundant. The dying declaration of La Chaussée would have been alone enough to convict her; but besides that, there were the mysterious document attached to the box of St Croix; her flight from France; and, stronger and more damning proof than all, a paper, in her own handwriting, found among the effects of St Croix, in which she detailed to him the misdeeds of her life, and spoke of the murder of her father and brothers, in terms that left no doubt of her guilt. During the trial, all Paris was in commotion. La Brinvilliers was the only subject of conversation. All the details of her crimes were published, and greedily devoured; and the idea of secret poisoning was first put into the heads of hundreds, who afterwards became guilty of it.

On the 16th of July 1676, the Superior Criminal Court of Paris pronounced a verdict of guilty against her, for the murder of her father and brothers, and the attempt upon the life of her sister. She was condemned to be drawn on a hurdle, with her feet bare, a rope about her neck, and a burning torch in her hand, to the great entrance of the cathedral of Notre Dame; where she was to make the amende honorable, in sight of all the people; to be taken from thence to the Place de Grève, and there to be beheaded. Her body was afterwards to be burned, and her ashes scattered to the winds.

After her sentence, she made a full confession of her guilt. She seems to have looked upon death without fear; but it was recklessness, not courage, that supported her. Mme de Sévigné says, that when on the hurdle, on her way to the scaffold, she entreated her confessor to exert his influence with the executioner to place himself next to her, that his body might hide from her view 'that scoundrel, Desgrais, who had entrapped her'. She also asked the ladies, who had been drawn to their windows to witness the procession, what they were looking at? adding, 'a pretty sight you have come to see, truly!' She laughed when on the scaffold, dying as she had lived, impenitent and heartless. On the morrow, the populace came in crowds to collect her ashes, to preserve them as relics. She was regarded as a martyred saint, and her ashes were supposed to be endowed, by Divine grace, with the power of curing all diseases. Popular folly has often canonised persons whose pretensions to sanctity were extremely equivocal; but the disgusting folly of the multitude, in this instance, has never been surpassed.

Before her death, proceedings were instituted against M. de Penautier, treasurer of the province of Languedoc, and Receiver-general for the clergy, who was accused by a lady, named St Laurent, of having poisoned her husband, the late Receiver-general, in order to obtain his appointment. The circumstances of this case were never divulged, and the greatest influence was exerted to prevent it from going to trial. He was known to have been intimate with Sainte Croix and Mme de Brinvilliers, and was thought to have procured his poisons from them. The latter, however, refused to say anything which might implicate him. The enquiry was eventually stifled, after Penautier had been several months in the Bastille.

The Cardinal de Bonzy was accused by the gossips of the day of being an accomplice of Penautier. The Cardinal's estates were burthened with the payment of several heavy annuities; but, about the time that poisoning became so fashionable, all the annuitants died off, one after the other. The Cardinal, in talking of these annuitants, afterwards used to say, 'Thanks to my star, I have outlived them all!' A wit, seeing him and Penautier riding in the same carriage, cried out, in allusion to this expression, 'There go the Cardinal de Bonzy and his star!'

It was now that the mania for poisoning began to take hold of the popular mind. From this time until the year 1682, the prisons of France teemed with persons accused of this crime; and it is very singular, that other offences decreased in a similar proportion. We have already seen the extent to which it was carried in Italy. It was, if possible, surpassed in France. The diabolical ease with which these murders could be effected, by means of these scentless and tasteless poisons, enticed the evil-minded. Jealousy, revenge, avarice, even petty spite, alike resorted to them. Those who would have been deterred, by fear of detection, from using the pistol or the dagger, or even strong doses of poison, which kill at once, employed slow poisons without dread. The corrupt Government of the day, although it could wink at the atrocities of a wealthy and influential courtier, like Penautier, was scandalised to see the crime spreading among the people. Disgrace was, in fact, entailed, in the eyes of Europe, upon the name of Frenchman. Louis XIV, to put a stop to the evil, instituted what was called the Chambre Ardente, or Burning Chamber, with extensive powers, for the trial and punishment of the prisoners.

Two women, especially, made themselves notorious at this time, and were instrumental to the deaths of hundreds of individuals. They both resided in Paris, and were named Lavoisin and Lavigoreux. Like Spars and Tophania, of whom they were imitators, they chiefly sold their poisons to women who wanted to get rid of their husbands; and, in some few instances, to husbands who wanted to get rid of their wives. Their ostensible occupation was that of midwives. They also pretended to be fortune-tellers, and were visited by persons of every class of society. The rich and poor thronged alike to their mansardes, to learn the secrets of the future. Their prophecies were principally of death. They foretold to women the approaching dissolution of husbands, and to needy heirs, the end of rich relatives, who had made them, as Byron expresses it, 'wait too, too long already'. They generally took care to be instrumental in fulfilling their own predictions. They used to tell their wretched employers, that some sign of the approaching death would take place in the house, such as the breaking of glass or china; and they paid servants considerable fees to cause a breakage, as if by accident, exactly at the appointed time. Their occupation as midwives made them acquainted with the secrets of many families, which they afterwards turned to dreadful account.

It is not known how long they had carried on this awful trade before they were discovered. Detection finally overtook them at the close of the year 1679. They were both tried, found guilty, and burned alive on the Place de Grève, on the 22nd of February, 1680, after their hands had been bored through with a red-hot iron, and then cut off. Their numerous accomplices in Paris and in the provinces were also discovered and brought to trial. According to some authors, thirty, and to others, fifty of them, chiefly women, were hanged in the principal cities.

Lavoisin kept a list of the visiters who came to her house to purchase poisons. This paper was seized by the police on her arrest, and examined by the tribunals. Among the names were found those of the Marshal de Luxembourg, the Countess de Soissons, and the Duchess de Bouillon. The Marshal seems only to have been guilty of a piece of discreditable folly in visiting a woman of this description, but the popular voice at the time imputed to him something more than folly. The author of the Memoirs of the Affairs of Europe since the Peace of Utrecht, says, 'The miserable gang who dealt in poison and prophecy alleged that he had sold himself to the devil, and that a young girl of the name of Dupin had been poisoned by his means. Among other stories, they said he had made a contract with the devil, in order to marry his son to the daughter of the Marquis of Louvois. To this atrocious and absurd accusation the Marshal, who had surrendered himself at the Bastille on the first accusation against him, replied with the mingled sentiment of pride and innocence, "When Mathieu de Montmorenci, my ancestor, married the widow of Louis le Gros, he did not have recourse to the devil, but to the States-General, in order to obtain for the minor king the support of the house of Montmorenci." This brave man was imprisoned in a cell six feet and a half long, and his trial, which was interrupted for several weeks, lasted altogether fourteen months. No judgement was pronounced upon him.'

The Countess of Soissons fled to Brussels, rather than undergo the risk of a trial; and was never able to clear herself from the stigma that attached to her, of having made an attempt to poison the Queen of Spain by doses of succession powder. The Duchess of Bouillon was arrested, and tried by the Chambre Ardente. It would appear, however, that she had nothing to do with the slow poisons, but had merely endeavoured to pry into the secrets of futurity, and gratify her curiosity with a sight of the devil. One of the presidents of the Chambre, La Reynie, an ugly little old man, very seriously asked her whether she had really seen the devil; to which the lady replied, looking him full in the face, 'Oh yes! I see him now. He is in the form of a little ugly old man, exceedingly ill-natured, and is dressed in the robes of a counsellor of State.' M. la Reynie prudently refrained from asking any more questions of a lady with so sharp and ready a tongue. The Duchess was imprisoned for several months in the Bastille; and nothing being proved against her, she was released at the intercession of her powerful friends. The severe punishment of criminals of this note might have helped to abate the fever of imitation among the vulgar; their comparative impunity had a contrary tendency. The escape of Penautier, and the wealthy Cardinal de Bonzy his employer, had the most pernicious effect. For two years longer the crime continued to rage, and was not finally suppressed till the stake had blazed, or the noose dangled, for upwards of a hundred individuals.[2]

注 释

〔1〕 The punishment for the contumacious was expressed by the words onere, frigore, et fame. By the first was meant that the culprit should be extended on his back on the ground, and weights placed over his body, gradually increased, until he expired. Sometimes the punishment was not extended to this length, and the victim, being allowed to recover, underwent the second portion, the frigore, which consisted in his standing naked in the open air, for a certain space, in the sight of all the people. The third, or fame, was more dreadful, the statute saying, 'That he was to be preserved with the coarsest bread that could be got, and water out of the next sink or puddle, to the place of execution; and that day he had water he should have no bread, and that day he had bread, he should have no water'; and in this torment he was to linger as long as nature would hold out.

〔2〕 Slow poisoning is a crime which has unhappily been revived in England within the last few years, and which has been carried to an extent sufficient to cast a stain upon the national character. The poisoners have been principally women of the lowest class, and their victims have been their husbands or their children. The motive for the crime has in most instances been the basest that can be imagined, the desire to obtain from burial-clubs to which they subscribed, the premium, or burial-money. A recent enactment, restricting the sale of arsenic and other poisons, will, it is to be hoped, check if it do not extirpate, this abominable crime (1851).

ON ART AND LIFE

艺术与人生

［英］约翰·罗斯金　著

华亭　译

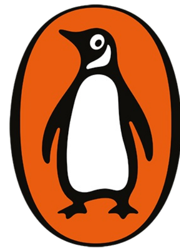
中国出版集团

中译出版社

艺术与人生

（英）约翰·罗斯金/著

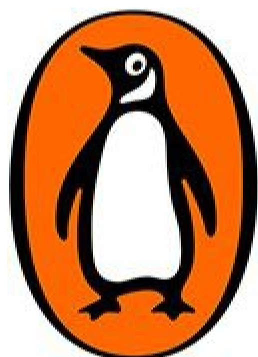
华亭/译



企鹅图书 | PENGUIN BOOKS

UK | USA | Canada | Ireland | Australia
New Zealand | India | South Africa | North Asia

Penguin Books is part of the Penguin Random House group of companies whose addresses can be found at:
global.penguinrandomhouse.com.



www. penguin. com.cn
‘The Nature of Gothic’ first published in The Stones of Venice, Vol. 2, 1853
‘The Work of Iron, in Nature, Art, and Policy’ fi rst published in The Two Paths 1859
This edition published in Penguin Books 2004
Taken from the Penguin Classic edition Unto This Last and Other Writings , edited and introduced by Clive Wilmer
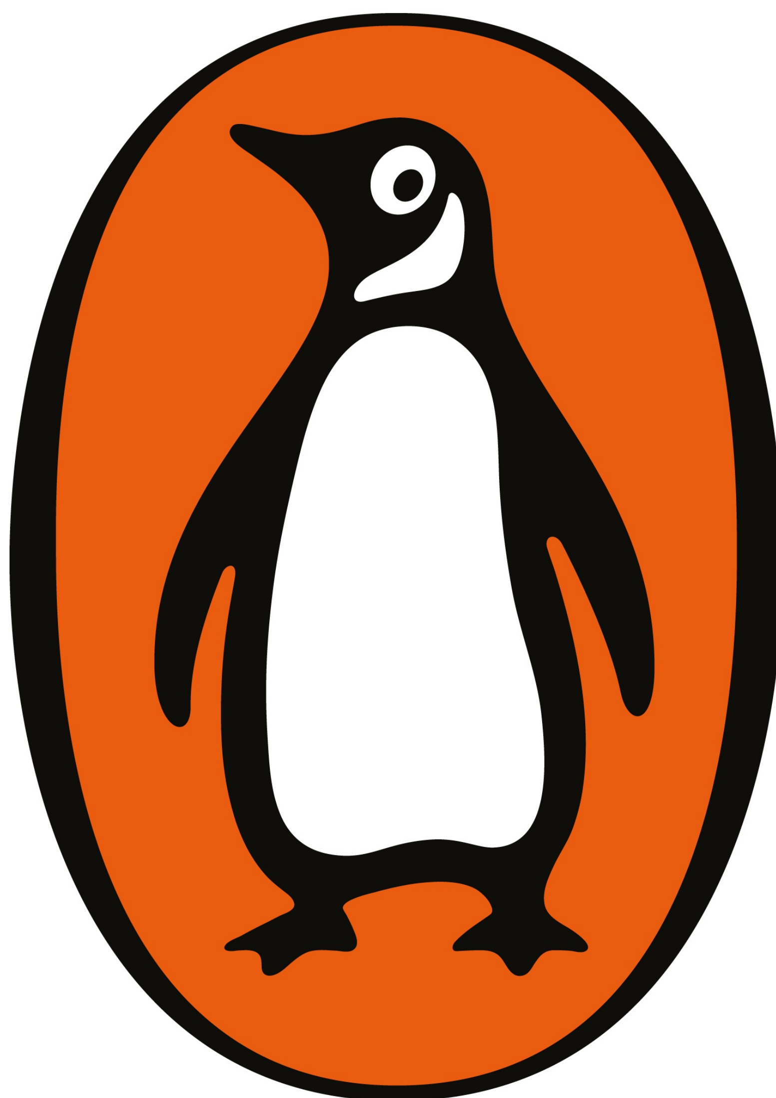
Set in Monotype Dante
Typeset by Rowland Phototypesetting Ltd, Bury St Edmunds, Suffolk

企鹅兰登电子书 | PENGUIN RANDOM HOUSE EBOOKS



目录

“伟大的思想”中文版序

企鹅“伟大的思想”系列丛书自2004年开始陆续面世，在英国、美国和德国均有出版。在英国出版品种最多，已付梓八十种，尚有二十种计划出版。该丛书在全球众多读者间，尤其是学生当中，普及了哲学和政治学，销量已远超二百万册。中文版“伟大的思想”的推出，是该系列的又一延续和发展，令人欢欣鼓舞。

推出这套丛书旨在让读者再次与一些伟大的非小说类经典著作面对面地交流。长久以来，此类书籍的出版都建立在这样一个假设之上——此类著作供学生课堂学习之用，因此需辅以导读、详尽的注释及参考书目等。此类版本无疑十分有用，但我想，如果某一版本能够重建托马斯·潘恩的《常识》或约翰·罗斯金的《艺术与人生》初版时的环境，为读者与作者营造更为亲密无间的氛围，使读者除了原作者及其自身的思考外没有其他参照，也许会更有吸引力。

但是，这一做法亦存在严重缺陷：每位作者的表述难免有难解或不可解之处，一些重要的背景知识或许也有所缺失。例如，读者对亨利·梭罗创作时的情形毫无头绪，也不了解该书的反响及影响。不过，这样做的优点也显而易见，最为显著的便是作者的初衷又一次受到重视——托马斯·潘恩的愤怒、查尔斯·达尔文的灵光、塞内加的隐逸。他们给许多国家的众多读者带来的生活影响难以估量，有的影响甚至长达几个世纪，几乎没有什么比阅读这些作家更令人拍案叫绝的了。倘若没有亚当·斯密或阿图尔·叔本华，将无法想象我们今天的世界。这些小书创作年代久远，但其中的话语彻底改变了我们的政治学、经济学、精神世界、社会规划和宗教信仰。

“伟大的思想”系列一直求新求变，地域不同，收录的作家亦不同。一些作家在中国或美国更受欢迎，而英国版“伟大的思想”收录的一些作家在其他国家和地区则鲜有人知。称其为“伟大的思想”，我们亦是慎之又慎。这些思想之所以伟大，在于其影响深远，但这并不意味着这些思想都是“好”思想，实际上一些书或可列入“坏”思想之列。丛书中收录的很多作家受到同样收录于该丛书的其他作家的巨大影响，例如，马塞尔·普鲁斯特承认受约翰·罗斯金影响很大，米歇尔·德·蒙田也承认深受塞内加影响。但也有些作家彼此憎恶，若发现彼此都被收录于同一丛书，一定会深感苦恼。至于他们思想的或“好”或“坏”，读者可自行判明。我们衷心希望，您可以享受阅读这些著作的乐趣。

“伟大的思想”出版者

西蒙·温德尔

导读

约翰·罗斯金（John Ruskin，1819—1900），生于英国伦敦，是英国著名的艺术评论家，也是维多利亚时代艺术美学的重要代表及实用艺术最积极的推动者。1843年，罗斯金凭借《现代画家》一书崭露头角，书中他高度赞扬了威廉·特纳的画作，主张艺术应当传达对自然的理解和欣赏。他的艺术评论代表了维多利亚时代艺术的欣赏趣味，并因此被誉为“美的使者”。同时，罗斯金还是一位文学家、思想家，其作品题材广泛而不拘泥于文体风格，语言优美凝练，内容深刻，对甘地、托尔斯泰和普鲁斯特都有较大影响。此外，作为工业设计思想的奠基者，罗斯金关注工业化生产成果的艺术质量，倡导通过工艺设计来找回人类被机械化生产和劳动分工所剥夺的创造性。这一主张唤醒了人们对工业革命之后艺术现状的反思，对“工艺美术”运动起到了巨大的推动作用。

罗斯金一生都在为“美”战斗，他坚决维护个人的艺术自由，反感维多利亚时代批量生产的艺术，其洞见深刻改变了社会对创意设计的理解，对当今的审美观仍有着极大的价值。本书选取的罗斯金的两篇文章“哥特式的性质”和“铁在自然、艺术和政治中的功用”，正是其艺术美学理念和人道主义思想的集中体现。

“哥特式的性质”选自罗斯金的《威尼斯的石头》一书，并且被他本人看作是“最重要的部分”。在这一章节中，罗斯金从外部和内部两方面论述了哥特式建筑的本质。首先，哥特式建筑普遍拥有尖拱和穹隆屋顶等的外在形式，而它的内在要素则是建造者精神趋向的表现，具有原始、多变、自然主义、怪诞、刚劲和冗余等六大特征。哥特式一词最初是用于表达对北方建筑原始野蛮的风格的贬抑，但罗斯金却在这种粗陋的建筑中找到了艺术最好的表现形式。哥特式建筑忠于自然主义，但那

并不是对自然的机械模仿，而是对自然的“阐述”和“解释”。不同于希腊建筑的精益求精，哥特式建筑是允许“不完美”的，它坦率地承认自己的粗陋，诚实地展现了建造者自由思考创造的成果。与此同时，哥特式学派还热衷于变化，他们不盲从现有的原则，而是孜孜不倦地追求创新，这份奇异的不安分给哥特式精神带来了无限的生机与活力。另外，在罗斯金看来，北方民族的韧性在哥特式作品中也是有迹可循的。他们对于坚强意志、独立个性及既定目标的坚定追求，对权威和命运的反抗铸就了哥特式精神，而正是这种精神，这种粗糙刚劲与质朴自然的特性，赋予了哥特式建筑生命的张力和永恒的魅力，也成就了它的伟大。

“铁在自然、艺术和政治中的功用”则是罗斯金的一篇演讲稿。在这部分内容中，作者用生动优美的语言讲述了铁在自然、艺术和政治中的用途。在罗斯金眼中，生锈的铁是因“呼吸”而鲜活的铁；铁氧化物是大自然的染料，让世界变得温暖鲜活，更具生机，这是铁在自然中所能呈现的最好的形态。另一方面，铁坚固而又易延展，这一特性使得铁在雕塑等类型的艺术创作中极富表现力和庄严性。最后，在讲到铁的政治用途时，罗斯金充满激情地批判了不劳而获、压迫民众的统治者。他通过犁、脚镣和刀剑三个与铁相关的意象来阐释国家的三个护身符，即劳动、法律和勇气。罗斯金认为，一个国家只有做到劳动合理分配、律法完善、注重军队建设和士气的培养，才能够维持和平，长久地生存下去。

哥特式的性质

1.读者如果回想一下第一卷第一章[1]关于主题的划分，就会发现，我们即将展开对威尼斯建筑学派的研究。这一学派不仅是拜占庭风格与哥特式风格的过渡，而且，我发现，要找出该学派与哥特式风格之间的联系并不困难。为了弄清楚这一变化过程中每一步的趋势，最好从一开始就试着形成关于最终结果的基本概念。我们已经洞悉拜占庭建筑的由来及其演变，我们还应当大致了解由它过渡到哥特式建筑的情况。因此，我力图在本章向读者提供一个宽泛而明确的概念，即关于真正意义上的哥特式建筑真实本质的概念。此概念所涉及的不仅仅是威尼斯的哥特式建筑，而且是全世界的哥特式建筑：这将会是我们随后的论述中最有趣的部分，即发现威尼斯建筑达到了何等普遍或完美的哥特式形态，以及它在何种程度上有所欠缺，或者采用外来的、独立的形式。

2.这样做的难度主要源于以下事实：在某个重要方面，哥特时期的每一座建筑都各不相同；而且，很多建筑拥有的特征，如果出现在其他建筑物上，根本不会被视为哥特式风格。因此，我们只能判断——请允许我这样表达——我们所观察的每一座建筑或多或少都是“哥特式”的。我想要界定的正是这种哥特式的性质，即，根据在一座建筑物上能够发现这种特性的多寡，使其或多或少表现“哥特式”风格的特性。就像是如果有人试图解释“红色”的本质，却找不到任何一样纯粹是红色的事物；即使能找到橙色或紫色的事物来指称，这毕竟还是不准确的。假设他有一朵石楠花和一片枯萎的橡树叶子，他可以说，将这片橡树叶子的黄色和这朵石楠花的蓝色混合在一起的颜色就是红色；但是，要将这一抽象概念说得明白易懂却十分困难；而要将哥特式特征这一抽象概念说得明白易懂却难上加难，因为这一特征本身是由很多混合的概念组成的，只能以合成的方式存在。也就是说，尖拱并不构成哥特式风格，穹隆屋顶

也不是，拱扶垛或怪异雕塑也不是，但是以上所有或部分事物，以及其他很多与之相关的表象组合在一起时就有了生命。

3.同时，在建议的定义中，我应该只努力分析我认为已经在读者脑海中存在的概念。关于哥特式这个术语的含义，我们都有一些自己的理解，大部分人的理解是确定无疑的，但我知道，很多人并不能为之下一个具体的定义。也就是说，他们只是泛泛地知道威斯敏斯特教堂是哥特式的，而圣保罗大教堂不是；斯特拉斯堡大教堂是哥特式的，而圣彼得大教堂不是；但对于它们彼此之间具象的差异，他们并不能说清楚。这种差异的陈述可以让我们知道威斯敏斯特教堂或斯特拉斯堡大教堂的工艺有多纯粹，或者一些缺乏特征的建筑，如圣詹姆斯宫或者温莎城堡，他们的哥特式元素有多么欠缺。我相信这种质询是愉快而有益的，而且追踪这幅灰暗的、朦胧的、峰峦迭起的哥特式精神的图像，并辨别出它与我们北方人的心灵之间存在怎样的亲近关系，会让我们感觉趣味无穷。另外，如果在进行质询的任何时候，我干扰到读者之前形成的概念，或者在某些他可能不认同的意义上使用哥特式这个术语，我并不要求他接受；我只是想研究和阐述我的观点，这对于理解接下的工作是必不可少的。

4.我们已经对哥特式特征进行了分析，就好像将粗糙的矿石交给化学家进行分析一样。在融合了很多其他种类的物质后，它自身也许就不再纯粹，或者仅能在瞬间显现出纯粹的形式，但是，无论表面上是如何错综复杂或杂乱无章，它依然有一个确定而独立的本质。现在我们看到，化学家将他的矿石分为两种不同的特征：它的晶体状态、硬度、光泽等是它的外部形态，它的原子组成的比例和本质是其内部元素。以同样的方式区分，我们发现哥特式建筑也有外部形态和内部元素。就内部元素而言，建造者的一些精神趋向被清晰地表现出来，如他们对新奇性、多样性、多元化的热爱等。它的外部形态是尖拱、穹隆屋顶等。除非内部元素和外部形态都存在，否则我们无法称之为哥特式风格。如果

它没有力量和生命，仅有形式是不够的，而如果没有形式，仅有力量也是不够的。因此，我们必须相继探究这两个特征，并确定两个恰当的称谓：什么是哥特式建筑的“精神表达”；什么是哥特式建筑的“物质形态”。

5.第一，精神力量的表达。我们要发现什么特征是“哥特式建造者”所热爱的，或者哪些特征自然而然地表现在他们的作品中，使其与其他建造者截然不同？

6.我们再回到化学领域。在用化学成分来定义一种矿物质的时候就会发现，这种矿物质并不是某种单一的元素构成的，而是所有元素的集合。比如，粉笔并不是由碳或者氧或者钙组成的，而是这三种化学元素以特定比例组合而成的。这三种元素都在与粉笔完全不同的物体里存在着，而且碳和氧本身与粉笔毫无相似之处，但是它们对于粉笔的存在仍然是至关重要的。

7.因此组成哥特式精神的各种心理特征，并不是某种单一的存在，而是以特定比例组合在一起的整体。每种特征都存在于哥特式建筑以外的许多建筑中。如果没有它们，或者没有以某种方式提供给它们位置的话，哥特式风格就无法存在。矿物的组成和建筑风格的形成有着极大的不同，如果我们从矿物中抽离其中一个元素，它的形态就会完全改变，而它作为这样一种矿物的存在也会被摧毁，但如果我们从哥特式风格中抽离其中一个精神元素，它只是比之前减弱了一点哥特式风格。两三个元素的组合足以彰显某种特定的哥特式特征。也就是说，如果我们增加元素，哥特式特征就会加强；如果我们减少元素，哥特式特征就会减弱。

8.我认为，按照重要性的顺序排列，哥特式特征或精神元素有以下几项：

（1）原始性

（2）多边性

（3）自然性

（4）怪异性

（5）严格性

（6）冗余性

9.以上特征用于建筑风格的表达，而对于建造者来说，以下描述更确切一些：（1）原始或粗野；（2）热爱变化；（3）热爱自然；（4）想象力混乱；（5）顽固；（6）慷慨。我再重复一遍，抽离一两个特征并不会立刻破坏一座建筑的哥特式特征，但是将大部分特征都抽离的话就会令其丧失哥特式风格。接下来我要一一阐释上述特征。

10.原始性。我不能肯定“哥特式”一词何时首次普遍应用于北方的建筑，但是我推测，不管何时首次运用，它都有指责的意味，同时表明这些建筑兴起的国度具有野蛮的特性。它从不意味着在字面上与哥特式是一脉相承的，也不意味着这类建筑是由哥特人自己最初建造的，但它确实表明哥特人及其建筑共同展现了一定程度的苛刻和粗野品性。与南方以及东方国家的特性相对比，它似乎是哥特人与罗马人初次遭遇时所形成反差的永久体现。在所谓的黑暗时代即将结束之时，衰落的罗马帝国穷奢极欲，傲慢无礼，成为开化的欧洲模仿的对象。自此，哥特式一词便成了十足的轻蔑称呼，而且混杂着人们的嫌恶。通过二十世纪古董商和建筑师的努力，哥特式建筑已沉冤昭雪；当我们欣赏其构造的壮丽科学及其所表达的神圣感时，或许我们有些人会渴望这种古老的轻蔑称呼被取消，而改用其他具有褒奖的词来取代它。事实上，没有可能也没有必要进行这种取代，只要这个词用于表达轻蔑的含义，它就属于错误使

用，但只要正确地理解，这个词并不带有耻辱的意味；相反，它包含深厚的真理，而人类仅凭本能就可不知不觉地辨认出来。的确，北方的建筑是粗陋而原始的，但因为这个原因我们就要责备它或轻视它，那就不对了。恰恰相反，我认为，正是这种特性才值得我们最深厚的敬意。

11.现代科学所绘制的世界航海图将大量知识投入狭窄的意义空间，但我还从来没有看到哪一幅图能够令观察者想象出北方和南方国度之间存在的实质性差异。我们知道细节上的差异，但我们没有充分感受到在视野和理解上的广泛差异。我们知道龙胆生于阿尔卑斯山脉，橄榄长在亚平宁山脉，但是，这不足以让我们设想出如同飞鸟在迁徙中所看到的世界表面的、斑驳的马赛克图景，或者像鹳鸟和燕子乘着热风远远看到龙胆和橄榄所生长地域的不同。我们暂且把自己提升到比鸟儿飞得更高的高度，想象地中海在我们下面宛如一片不规则的湖泊，所有古老的海角在阳光下沉睡。雷声四处响起，暴雨的灰色污点洒落在灼热的土地上。白色的火山烟雾如同固定的花环，被一圈灰烬所包围。在大部分宁静的光亮中，叙利亚和希腊，意大利和西班牙，好像一条条金色的大道探入蔚蓝的大海。当我们俯身靠近时，它们追逐着山脉历经风吹雨打的凸起部分，梯形花园发出柔和的光。花儿带着浓浓的乳香，混合着大量的月桂、柑橘和羽毛般棕榈叶的芬芳。它们灰绿色的阴影减弱了大理石的炽热，斑岩的突起部分斜斜地伸入明亮的沙滩。我们继续向北方进发，直到我们看到东方的色彩逐渐变为一片巨大的雨林，瑞士的牧场、法国的白杨木山谷、多瑙河与喀尔巴阡山脉的黑森林，从卢瓦尔河口延伸至伏尔加河口。透过雨云灰色漩涡的裂缝和小溪薄薄的雾纱，低低地向牧场土地延伸。继续往北可看到大地隆起，形成大片深灰色的岩石和荒野，边缘是一片广阔的深紫色荒原，那片田野和林地分裂为北方海域中不规则的、骇人的岛屿，经暴雨捶打，冰流冷冻，猛烈潮汐冲击，直到最后一片森林的根须在深山峡谷中枯萎，凌厉的北风将山峰啃得寸草不生。最后，钢铁般坚固的冰墙在极地曙光中用它苍白的牙齿死死地撕咬着我们。沉思默想中，我们已穿越广袤大地上成片的鸢尾花地块。我

们可以再靠近一点，观察动物带的平行变化。大量动作敏捷、色彩艳丽的生物在空中和海上匆匆掠过，或踩踏着南方地区的沙地，其中包括斑马、豹和蛇，以及紫色和猩红色的鸟儿。我们对比一下色彩的雅致和艳丽、行动的敏捷与北方部落被霜冻束缚的力量、邋里邋遢的遮蔽物和暗淡无光的华服吧；对比阿拉伯马与设德兰小种马，虎豹与狼熊，羚羊与麋鹿，天堂鸟与鱼鹰，然后发自内心的信服统领地球及其所载万物的伟大法则。对于人类在生养他的土地上的生存法则，我们不要责备而是颂扬。我们满怀敬意地看着他把闪闪发亮的宝石一字排开，用布艺装点碧玉的柱子，使它们不断反射出阳光，同时腾空而起，直达云霄。我们以同样的敬意站在他身边，看着他以粗暴的力量和仓促的举止，猛力击打岩石，释放出粗野的勃勃生气，这种生气他原本已在荒野苔藓中消耗殆尽。他在昏暗的空中筑起一道铁质拱壁和凹凸不平的墙，他的作品充满着与北方海域同样狂野、任性的想象力。这些外形笨拙、肢体僵硬、充满狼性的生物，像击打他们的狂风一样猛烈，像遮蔽他们的云团一样多变。

12.我再重复一下，这里没有贬抑和责备，而只有尊崇和颂扬。要是不能辨别北方现有建筑的本质特征，或者不承认这其实是一种可取的特征，那么我们就很可悲地错了，因为它可能是粗野的想法和粗糙的工艺，是大教堂和阿尔卑斯山之间高山仰止的体现，是由于触摸的手指被刺骨寒风冻僵、双眼被荒野的薄雾所模糊或为冰雹所蒙蔽而只能更积极地推进的强大力量的光华，是既没有从土地上获得丰硕果实也没有享受过慵懒和煦阳光的人的强烈精神的表达，他们只能劈山取食、伐木取火，即便是为了取乐，他们挥舞斧头、犁田耕地而锻炼出来的手臂和心灵，可见其生活艰难。

13.如果仅仅作为其源自北方国家的一种表述，哥特式建筑的原始性也许在某些方面可以被认为是一种高贵的特征，但当它被看作宗教信念而不是气候标志时，它甚至拥有更高贵的特性。

14.本作品第一卷第二十一章第十三和第十四段讲到了建筑装饰体系。确切地来说，此装饰体系可以被分为三类：（1）盲从装饰。卑微工匠的执行或权力完全服从于高层的意志。（2）合成装饰。工匠在一定程度上是独立执行，有自己的意志，但只能承认地位低下并服从于更高的权力。（3）创新装饰。绝不承认执行力低下。在这里我必须对上述分类的性质再多作一些解释。

15.盲从装饰的主要代表是希腊人、尼尼微人[2]和埃及人，但他们的盲从又各不相同。希腊的工匠领袖在知识和权力上都远比尼尼微人和埃及人先进。希腊人及其雇主都不能忍受在任何事情上的不完美表现。所以希腊人指定下属去作的装饰都只是由单纯的几何图形组成，如球形、山脉及完美对称的叶子，这些都通过线条和规则得以完全精确地执行，并且在完成后就和他自己的人物雕像一样完美。与之相反，尼尼微人和埃及人对任何精确的形式都没有那么多认知，他们满足于由低等工匠来完成自己的人物雕像，但将执行的方法降低到所有工匠都能达到的程度，然后加以非常严格的训练，使得工匠绝无达不到指定标准的可能。希腊人不会给次等工匠无法完美执行的任务，尼尼微人只给工匠不能完美执行的任务，但为他的不完美设定一个法定标准。在这两个体系中，工匠都是“奴隶”。

16.在中世纪，尤其在基督教的装饰体系中，这种奴性被彻底扫荡。基督教认识到，无论事物大小，每个灵魂都有其个人价值。它不仅意识到了这种价值，而且还承认它的不完美，承认无价值的尊严。这种对于丧失权力和堕落本性的承认，希腊人或尼尼微人感觉非常痛苦并且尽可能拒绝。基督教徒每时每刻都在无畏地思考，并最终倾向于上帝的更大荣耀。因此，被基督教召唤的每一个神灵都这样劝告：尽可能去做吧，同时要坦率地承认你做不了的事情。既不要因为害怕失败而减少你的努力，也不要因为出于羞愧而不敢忏悔。也许这就是哥特派建筑最令人钦佩之处，他们接受地位低下者的劳动成果，在充满缺陷的碎片里，

在每一次触碰中超越不完美，以宽容的心怀建立一个庄严而又无可指责的整体。

17.现代英国与希腊在思想上有很多共同之处，它们都强烈地渴望与本性的契合达到极致或完美。概括来说，这是一种高贵的特性。当它使我们忘记了本性自身的尊严，并且偏爱低级本性的完美胜过高级本性的不完美时，它就变得卑劣了。没有考虑到，如果按照这种规则来判断，所有野蛮的动物都比人类更好，因为它们在功能和种类上更完美，但动物总还是比人类要低等，同样，种类上更完美的人类作品，实际上比那些种类上有更多缺点和短处的作品要低等，因为，本质越美好，通过它的清澈就会显示越多瑕疵。“缺憾美”是这个世界的法则，最好的东西都几乎不是以最好的形态出现。野草生长茂盛，年复一年，而小麦由于本质更高贵而更容易得枯萎病。因此，即使我们在看到或做过的所有事情上都渴望完美，并且为之努力，我们仍然不能置成就微弱的低等事物于进步显著的高贵事物之上；不能尊崇稳定的细微进步而轻视遭到破坏的威严；不能偏爱平庸的成功而无视体面的失败；不能降低我们的目标，从而使我们可能更有把握享受成功的满足感。不过当我们面对其他人的灵魂时，我们要注意如何以严格的要求或慎重，来检查也许会导向一个非凡成果的努力。况且，我们还应注意如何保留对杰作的敬重，即使它们混入了粗糙的缺陷。目前，不管人们的手艺或本性有多么粗陋或简单，我们雇佣的人都有令其完善的力量。即使在最坏的情况下，他们也有一些迟缓的想象力、迟钝的情感和步履蹒跚的思想。在很多情况下，他们的迟缓或迟钝都是我们造成的，但他们不会变强，除非我们满足于他们软弱的状态，除非我们奖赏和尊崇他们的不完备，而不去重视最好的、最完美的手工技艺。这就是我们不得不对待所有劳动者的方式，在他们身上寻找思考的部分，并且发掘出来——不管我们会为此失去什么，不管我们会为此犯下什么过错。因为他们身上最好的部分不会自己显现，所以只能伴随着错误一起出现。要明确地理解这一点：你能够教会一个人画一条直线并切割它，描绘一条曲线并雕刻它；于是，他

就会用令人赞赏的速度和完美的精确度复制和雕刻出无数特定的线条或形状。你发现他的工作非常完美，但如果你叫他思考那些形式，思考他是否能用自己的头脑发现更好的方面，他就顿住了，他的行动变得犹豫不决。他思考的时候，十有八九是想错了；另外十有八九他作为思想者第一次接触他的作品时就犯了错，但你因而使他成为了人；他以前只是一个机器，一个会动的工具。

18.请注意，在这件事上你遇到了一个两难的选择。你要么把人变成工具，要么把他塑造成人，只能二选一。一方面，不能用工具的精确性去衡量人，不能要求他们所有的动作都精确而完美。如果你想要他们精确，让他们的手指像嵌齿轮那样测量角度，他们的手臂像圆规那样画曲线，那他们就不是人了。他们的全部精神力量应该用来制作他们自己的齿轮和圆规；他们所有的注意力和精力都应该用来完成有意义的活动。灵魂之眼必须专注于指尖，灵魂之力必须充满指导它的所有无形的神经。每天有十个小时，凭借严格的精确性，可能不会出错，但灵魂和眼界会变得很疲倦，整个人最终迷失，就像是一堆散乱的碎屑一样。就世界上的脑力工作而言，只要被心灵所拯救，就不能进入齿轮和圆规的形态，但十个小时之后才可以膨胀为火边的人。另一方面，如果你在工作中塑造了人，就不能把他当作工具。当他开始想象、思考，试着做任何值得做的事时，由动力转变而来的精确性就会立刻丧失。他所有的粗糙、迟钝和无能都会涌现出来，羞愧连着羞愧、失败连着失败、停顿连着停顿。同时，他的全部威严也相继出现。只有当我们看到云朵在他的头上停留时才知道它的高度。不管云朵是明亮还是灰暗，转变是不可避免的。

19.现在，请读者环顾你自己的英式房间，这是你经常为之自豪的地方，因为它的工艺是如此美妙和坚固，装饰如此精巧。再仔细观察所有精细的铸件，完美的磨光，风干的木头和回火的钢材，没有因任何偏差而进行调整。很多次你为之欢呼雀跃，并且想着英国是多么伟大，因

为最细微的工艺也制作得如此彻底。天啊！如果确切地加以解读，这些完美恰恰是我们英国的奴隶制存在的迹象，甚至要比受难的非洲人或受奴役的希腊人痛苦和可耻一千倍。人类可以被殴打、被禁锢、被拷问，像畜生一样被套上枷锁，像夏天的苍蝇一样被拍死，但在某种意义上依然是并且确确实实是自由的。这些使得他们的灵魂窒息，使得他们吸取人类智慧养分的根须枯萎和腐烂，使得经过蛆虫的作用之后呈现在上帝面前的血肉和肌肤，变成扼住机器的皮带，这实际上就是奴隶与主人的关系。英国可能有更多的自由——尽管封建主子轻轻的一句话都能要人的命，尽管哀伤百姓的鲜血滴落在田野的沟壑上，但是大批民众像燃料一样被送去燃烧工厂的烟囱，他们的精力每天都浪费在织物的纯度上，或者被线条的精确所折磨。

20.继续注视古老的大教堂正面吧，你曾经常常对着古老雕刻家的荒诞无知微笑。再看看那些丑陋的小精灵，形体不明的怪物，不苟言笑的雕像，无法剖析、一成不变。不要嘲笑它们，因为它们是雕刻石头的每一个工匠的生命和自由的象征。一种思想的自由，在存在的维度上名列前茅，没有法律、宪章或慈善机构为其提供保障，但必定是今天整个欧洲为子孙后代努力的首要目标。

21.我不想被看作是信口胡说、夸夸其谈，正是这种机械化操作的退化，比这个时代的其他所有罪恶更甚，引导世界各地的民众为了他们无法说明其性质的自由进行徒然的、不相干的毁灭性斗争。他们对财富、贵族的普遍抗议既不是来自饥荒的压力，也不是来自受辱的尊严。这种情形已经在历史上存在很久了，但是社会的基础还从未像今天这样被撼动。并不是人们吃不饱，而是他们赖以谋生的工作毫无乐趣，于是将财富视为快乐的唯一来源；并不是人们因为上层社会的轻蔑而痛苦，而是他们无法忍受自己的阶层，他们感觉不得不从事的劳动确实有失体面，使得他们人不像人。上层社会从未像今天这样同情下层、宽厚仁慈，而他们也从未被如此憎恨过，因为在以前，贵族和穷人的隔离只是

一堵法律的墙，但现在是名副其实的立场之分，在人性领域存在高等和低等的绝壁，底部弥漫着氤氲之气。我不知道理解合理自由本质的那一天是否会到来。届时，人们会明白，服从一个人，为他工作，向他或他的地位表示敬畏，这并不是奴役，而往往是最好的自由，由关怀而来的自由。一个人对另一个人说，走吧，于是他就走了，再对另一个人说，来吧，然后他就来了，在大多数情况下发令者比服从者要有更多的克制和困难。一个人的行动被肩上的重担所阻碍，另一个则被嘴上的笼头所限制。他们的重担没有办法减轻，但如果我们不咬住缰绳，就可以不必受制于人。向他人表示敬畏，让我们自己以及我们的同类任其处置，这并不是奴役，而其实是一个人在这个世上存在的最高贵的形态。确实有一种敬畏是低劣的，是不合理的或自私的，但也有高贵的敬畏，也就是合理的、关爱的敬畏。一个人表达这种敬畏的时候，是无比高贵的，即使感觉越过纯粹理性的界限，一个人也会因关爱而升华。事实上，大多数人的身上是有奴性的。比如，过去的爱尔兰农民躺在地上等待主人，他那火枪的枪口插入参差不齐的树篱；年老的山仆，两百年前在印威基辛为首领牺牲了他自己和七个儿子的生命。一个人倒下时会呼唤他的兄弟前仆后继，“为了赫克托再来一个！”在历代各国，人们彼此表达敬畏，作出牺牲，不仅毫无怨言而且满心欣喜，饥荒、险境、刀剑和所有罪恶、所有耻辱，都已经心甘情愿地奉献给主人和国王的事业。心灵的天赋使得给予者变得高贵，也使得接受者高贵起来。这些都是本性使然，而上帝给予了他们奖赏，但是，如果感觉到自己的灵魂逐渐泯灭，不知感恩，结果发现其整个存在坠入不可名状的深渊，被归为一堆以轮子来计数、以锤程来计重的机械，这样一来，本性不会激起——上帝也不会祝福——因此，人性无法持久。

22.关于分工的伟大文明创新，我们已经作了很多研究和完善，只不过我们给了它一个错误的名字。说实话，并不是工作被分割了，而是人被分割为个体生命的碎片和碎屑。于是留存在人身上的智慧小碎片不足以生产出一根针或一枚钉子，而只能将精力耗尽在生产针尖钉上。的

确，一天能生产出很多针既是好事也合乎理想；但是，如果我们只看到针头是用什么样的水晶砂来打磨——人类灵魂之砂，要放大很多倍才能辨别清楚，那么，我们应该想到其中也会有所损失。而我们所有制造业城市产生的巨大喧嚣，比炉子爆炸还要响，实际上都是为了这一点——我们制造出了人类以外的所有物品。我们漂白棉花、锤炼钢材、精选砂糖、塑造陶器，但是漂白、锤炼、精选或塑造一个活生生的灵魂，从来不是我们优先考虑的事项。而喧嚣迫使众生趋向所有罪恶的方式只有一种：不是通过教授或传道，因为教授是向他们彰显他们的苦难，而向他们传道则是一种嘲弄，如果我们只是在传道的话。这只能以一种所有阶层都正确理解的方式来达成，我们必须明白什么样的劳动对人有益，怎样才能提升他们，使他们快乐；我们坚决放弃那些以工人的退化为代价而达成的便利、美感或廉价；同样坚决对健康和有尊严的劳动产品表示需求。

23.现在问题来了，这些产品是被认可的吗？这种需求是有管制的吗？很简单，遵守以下三个广泛而又简单的规则就可以了。

24.一、决不鼓励生产任何不是绝对必需的物品，或进行任何没有创新的生产。

25.二、决不为了完成而完成，而只为特定的、实际的或高尚的目的而完成。

26.三、决不鼓励任何形式的模仿或抄袭，除非是为了保存伟大作品的记录。

27.第二条原则是唯一直接出于对当前主题的考虑，但我先来简要地解释一下第一条原则的意义和范围，第三条则在以后涉及。

28.一、决不鼓励生产任何不是绝对必需的物品，或进行任何没有

创新的生产。

29.比如，玻璃珠是完全不需要的，在制造中也没有运用到设计或理念。首先将玻璃拉成棒，再手工切成珠子大小的断片，然后将断片放在炉子里打造成圆形。切玻璃棒的工人整天坐着干活，他们的手随着持续不断、精确定时的痉挛颤动着，玻璃珠在他们的颤动下像冰雹一样坠落。他们以及那些拉出玻璃棒、熔化断片的人都几乎没有机会运用人类的才能，因此每一位购买玻璃珠的年轻女士就都被牵涉到奴隶交易中去，并且这是一种比我们长久努力去推翻的还要更残酷的交易。

30.玻璃杯和玻璃管是精致发明的主体，如果我们购买这些东西我们就报偿了发明，也就是说，报偿了美丽的外形、颜色或雕刻，这不仅仅是为了完工，我们是在为人性作贡献。

31.因此，在通常情况下，雕刻宝石几乎不需要运用智力，除了为了避免瑕疵的机智和判断等以外，没有什么涉及到全部心智。每个人只为了其价值而佩戴珠宝的人都是把人当奴隶驱使的人。

32.不过，金匠的工作以及各种分解整合珠宝和珐琅的设计工作可以成为最高贵的人类智慧的主体。因此，把钱花在购买精心设计的碟子，用心雕刻的花瓶、宝石或珐琅上，都对人性有贡献。在这种工艺下，珠宝可以用来提升光彩，而切割也是为了达到高贵目的而付出的代价，这是完全被容许的。

33.我会在别处更深入地推进这一法则，但我们目前主要关注第二条原则，即决不为了完成而完成，而只为高尚的目的而完成。请注意，我阐述哥特式的粗陋或任何其他种类的不完美，认为这是可取的，只是因为没有这些就不可能得到设计或想法。如果你想要得到一个粗鲁的、没有教养的人的想法，你必须以粗鲁和没有教养的方式得到。一个受过教育的人，一个可以用有教养的方式毫不费力地表达自己的人，就会优

雅地表达并且充满感激。要得到想法，而不要因为农民不能说很好的语法就不准他说话，或者直到你把语法教给他之后才让他说话。语法和精致是好的，两者都是，只是要保证优先考虑更好的事情。在艺术领域中，大师们的精细完工是可取的，也往往是由他们所赋予的。在某些地方，米开朗基罗、莱昂纳多·达芬奇、菲迪亚斯、佩鲁吉诺和特纳，他们都以最精细的关注完成作品，而他们的完工往往使得他们的高贵目标更好地实现，但略逊于他们的人则无法如此完工，因为作品的完美需要完善的知识，所以我们必须接受不是所有人都能拿出完美作品的事实。规则很简单，始终优先考虑创新，然后寻找有助于创新的执行方案，以及不费力就能完成的发明者，仅此而已。更重要的是，在没有思想的时候就不要求精细地执行，因为那是奴隶的工作，是没有被认可的。这时候，比起平滑的工艺，我们宁可选择粗糙的工艺，以此来满足实际的用途，我们也没有理由为任何用耐心和砂纸就能完成的事情而骄傲。

34.我只给出一个例子来向读者表明我的意图，也就是已经提及过的玻璃的制造。现代玻璃在质地上是相当清晰的，形状上很准确，切割也很精确。我们引以为豪。事实上，我们应该为此而感到惭愧。古代威尼斯的玻璃总的来说是模糊的，形状不准确，切割也很笨拙，但古代威尼斯人仍然为之而骄傲，因为在英国和威尼斯工匠之间存在着区别，前者只看重图案的精确匹配，曲线的极度准确，边缘的极度锋利，从而仅成为一台磨圆曲线和磨砺边缘的机器，而古代威尼斯人一点儿也不在乎边缘是否锋利，而是为制作的每一个玻璃制品发明新的设计，每铸造一个把手或边缘都有新的想象力。因此，尽管某些由笨拙和不善创造的工匠所制作的威尼斯玻璃非常丑陋和笨拙，而另一些威尼斯玻璃的形状却非常可爱，价格再高也值。而且，我们从未看到过两块一模一样的玻璃。完美的工艺和变化的形状，只能二选一。如果工匠在考虑线条，他就无法考虑设计，如果考虑了设计就无法考虑线条。你是选择可爱的外形或完美的工艺时，你也在选择是想要工匠成为人还是磨刀石。

35.不，读者打断我说："如果工匠能作出完美的设计，我不会把他关在锅炉房里。我会让他离开那儿并成为绅士，拥有工作室，在那儿设计他的玻璃，我也会请普通工匠来为他吹塑和切割玻璃，这样我就既拥有设计又有好的工艺了。"

36.所有此类想法都基于两个错误的推测：第一，一个人的想法可以或应该可以经由另一个人之手而实现；第二，被智力所支配的手工劳动是一种退化。

37.从广义上来说，在由线条和规则所决定的工艺里，一个人的想法应该由其他人的劳动来实现，这确实是可能和必须的。从这个意义上来说，我觉得最好的建筑出自儿童之手。从狭义上来讲，在设计不能被精确地定义的情况下，一个人的想法永远无法被另一个人所表达，而设计者与服从指令的人之间的思想差别，往往就是伟大作品和平庸作品之间的差别。原版作品和二手作品之间的距离有多大，这点我将在以后阐释。在这里，我们的目的不是去标记轻视智力所支配的手工是多么致命的过失，因为轻视智力支配下的手工与因其本身的缘故而重视它都属于致命的过失。我们一直在努力区分这两者，我们想要一个人总在思考，而另一个人总在操作，我们把一个称为绅士，另一个称为工人。实际上，在最好的层面上，工人应该也要思考，思考者也应该要工作，最好是两者都是绅士。既然如此，我们使得两者都不高贵，一个变得嫉妒，另一个总爱轻视。社会上的大多数人由病态的思想者和苦难的工人组成。现在思想只能因劳动而变得健康，而劳动也只能通过思考而变得快乐，两者不能被截然分开。要是我们所有人都是某些领域的优秀手工艺人，而手工劳动的不体面也一扫而光，这样即使贵族和普通人之间仍然存在着严格的种族区分，在后者中间也不会有严格的职业区分，诸如闲散的和工作的人，有文化的和没文化的职业。所有的职业都应该是有文化的，这样人们就不会为特定的职业而只为成就的卓越而骄傲。在每种职业里，能工巧匠不会骄傲得不肯去做最艰苦的工作。画家应该自己研

磨颜料，建筑师在泥瓦匠的庭院里和工人一起工作，制造业主比他厂里的所有工人都更懂生产技术，一个人和另一个人的差别只在于技术与经验，以及自然和公平地得到的权威和财富。

38.要是我继续追溯这个有趣的主题，我将会离题太远。我相信我已经说得够多了，已经向读者显示了哥特式这个术语在最开始被赋予的粗陋和不完美的含义，如果正确地加以理解，其实是基督教建筑里最高贵的特征之一，而且不仅仅是高贵，更是本质的特征。这似乎是奇异的矛盾，不过却是最重要的事实，即任何并非不完备的建筑都不会是真正高贵的建筑。这一点很容易被论证，因为我们假定建筑师能够将所有工艺都做到完美，但他不能凡事亲力亲为，他必须要么以古代希腊或现代英国的方式来使得他的工人成为奴隶，从而把他的工艺降低到奴隶的能力水平，也就是降格；要么他必须接受工人本来的样子，让他们显示自己的长处和短处，这样就会带来哥特式的不完美，但给整件作品保存了这个时代的智力所能达到的高贵特征。

39.不过这个原理还能更广泛地加以陈述。我已经将例证限制在建筑上，但我不能就这样算了，否则就会显得好像只对建筑有效。到目前为止，我使用不完美和完美这两个词，只是为了区别非常拙劣的工艺和平常精细的工艺。我已经说明，任何程度的拙劣都应被接受，这样工人的思想才会有机会表达。准确地说，并非所有好的工艺都是完美的，而对完美的奢求常常象征着对艺术目的的误解。

40.这是出于两个基于永恒法则的理由。第一，所有伟人都不会停止工作，直到他完全失败，也就是说，他的想法总是超前于他的执行能力，而后者会不时地让出道路来努力跟随前者。另外，他总是对次要的工作投注更少的注意力，由于他的伟大，他习惯于对所能达到的极致依然感到不满意，在对自己生气和厌倦疲乏的时刻他不会在意，但旁观者也不满意。我认为只有一个人不会承认这种必要性，并且总是努力达到

完美——莱奥纳多，他徒然努力的结果总是使他在一幅画上花费十年时间却依然未完成。因此，如果我们要让伟人工作，或让普通人做到最好，无论作品有多漂亮，它都是不完美的。对于人类工艺来说，只有坏的才可能是完美的，以它特有的坏的方式表现完美。[3]

41.第二，不完美在某些程度上对所有生命来说都是必不可少的。在凡人的身上这是一种生命的象征，也就是说，处于一个持续进步和变革的状态。没有任何活着的事物是，或可能是非常完美的。总有一部分在衰退；一部分在萌芽。比如毛地黄，三分之一是花蕾，三分之一已开败，还有三分之一完全盛开，这就是这个世界上的一种生命形态。所有生物都有特定的不规则和缺陷，这不仅是生命的迹象，同时也是美的来源。人类脸部的两侧线条也不是完全一致的，树叶的裂片并不完美，树枝也不对称。这些都意味着变化，因而必须承认这种不规则。摒弃不完美也就是毁灭表达，阻止发挥、麻痹活力。上帝创造的所有事物都因其不完美而变得更好、更可爱、更宜人。人类生命的法则可能是努力，而人类判断的法则却是仁慈。

42.请接受这样的普遍法则，即建筑以及人类的任何其他高贵工艺都不可能是好的，除非它是不完美的。我们准备好接受这个似乎有点奇怪的事实，我们进入文艺复兴时期后，将会清晰地看到，欧洲艺术衰落的首因是对完美的不懈追求，同样也是不能做到因对伟大的敬畏而沉默，因对单纯的谅解而变得温和。

43.这就是关于哥特式建筑的第一个精神元素“粗陋”，即“原始”。它也是很多其他合宜建筑中的元素，如拜占庭和罗马建筑，但没有了它，真正的哥特式建筑就不会存在。

44.前面提到的第二个精神元素是“多变性”，即“多样性”。

45.我已经强调了允许低等工匠独立操作，仅仅作为对他的一种职

责，并且通过赋予其更多基督教的色彩而使得建筑更显高贵。我们现在要考虑，履行了这一职责以后可以得到什么报偿，也就是建筑特征的永恒多样性。

46.只要是工匠被完全奴役的地方，建筑的各个部分必然是完全相似的，通过训练他只做一件事而不做其他事来实现完美的执行。因此，工匠被降格的程度可见一斑，只需观察建筑的各个部分是否相似，如果像希腊建筑那样，所有的柱头都相同，所有的模制都没有变化，那么降格是非常彻底的。如果像埃及和尼尼微的建筑，尽管实现特定形状的方式总是一样的，设计的顺序却一直在变化，那么降格就没有那么彻底。如果像哥特式建筑，在设计和执行上都有不断的变化，工匠就一定是自由的。

47.旁观者能从劳动者的自由上获得多少好处，这个问题可能是在英国提出的。在这里，几乎每一个人的头脑中最强大的本能之一就是对秩序的热爱。它使得我们渴望我们房子的窗户应该像四轮马车的马一样成双成对，并且使得我们毫不犹豫地屈从于我们的信念，即为任何事物设定形式并禁止变动的建筑理论。我不会非难这种对秩序的热爱，这是英国思想中最有用的元素之一，在商业以及所有纯粹实用的事物上，它会给我们帮助；并且在很多情况下，它还是道德的基石之一，只是我们不要以为，对秩序的热爱就是对艺术的热爱。秩序在最高层面上确实是艺术的必然性之一，就好像时间是音乐的必然性一样。对秩序的热爱和我们对建筑或绘画的欣赏，并没有什么关系，就好像对准时的热爱和欣赏歌剧并没有关系一样。经验告诉我们，那些很快领悟或拥有丰富的艺术创造力的人，在日常生活中几乎没有一丝不苟和有条不紊的习惯，然而，这两个天性之间没有什么不一致的地方，也没有什么阻碍我们在保留商业习惯的同时，充分容许和欣赏创新的高贵成果。在除了建筑以外的艺术领域及所有其他分支，我们已经这样做了。我们不这样做，只是因为我们被教导说这是错误的。我们的建筑严肃地告诉我们，正如算术

有四大法则一样，建筑也有五大秩序。我们单纯地认为这是合理的，并且对之深信不疑。这五大秩序也告诉我们，科林斯式柱、多利安式柱、爱奥尼亚式柱都有适当的形状。我们考虑到字母A、B和C也都有适当的形状，于是认为这也是合理的，然后接受了这个命题。我们要知道，所说的立柱只有一个形状是适当的，其他的都不是，因而，认真勤勉者害怕所有不适当性。我们允许建筑师向我们提供所说的立柱，以及适当的形状，适当的数量，并且保证合法的形状在所有其他的点也都被遵循。这些都做完了以后，我们不得不相信，我们的住房设计非常完美。

48.我们更高的本能却不会被蒙骗。我们在提供给我们的建筑里，无法得到像我们在新书或图画里得到的乐趣。我们可能会为它的规模而自豪，满足于它的正确性，并为其便利而高兴。在一间秩序井然的房间或一件技艺精巧的作品上，我们也可以从对称和工艺中得到乐趣。我们认为这些就是建筑所能给予的全部乐趣。我们从来没有想过可以像阅读弥尔顿和但丁那样阅读建筑，并且从石头上得到像诗节那样的快乐。这是因为，诗歌里确实有韵律，严格得就好像建筑的对称和节奏，但韵律之外的东西使它美丽一千倍。诗歌被创造出来，不是像柱头那样为了秩序或者为了相配，我们在它们那里可以得到适当感之外的乐趣。如果要撼动常识、放弃我们在过去两个世纪中被教导的所有东西，需要很大的努力，来使我们的感觉苏醒，这个事实很简单很确定也很新颖：伟大的艺术不管是以文字、颜色还是石头来表达，都不会一遍又一遍地重复表达同样的东西。建筑的价值，如同所有其他艺术形式一样，体现为它表达了崭新的、不同的东西。重复自己不是绘画杰作的特征，同样也不是大理石杰作的特征。我们可以在不违反任何好品味的法则的情况下，像要求一位小说家那样要求一位建筑师。建筑，不应该只是正确的，应该也是有趣的。

49.这些都是事实，不证自明，只是如同很多其他不证自明的事物一样，由于错误的教导而被遮蔽了。任何一件在生产中遵循规则或模型

的作品，都不是伟大的艺术作品。正如遵循已知的规则，基于给定模型的建筑都不是艺术品，而只是加工品。比起从提香的画里抄袭头和手然后自称画家的人，去菲迪亚斯的建筑中抄袭柱头和模制然后自称为建筑师的人，是更不合理的——因为这更容易。

50.我们要明白，变化或者说多样性，对于人类的心灵和头脑来说是一种必需品，在书本中和在建筑中是一样的。即使可以有一些偶然的应用，但总体来说，单调是没有价值的。我们不期望从一个装饰单一、柱式均等的建筑中得到乐趣或者益处，正如我们不期望从一个云朵形状单一、树木大小均等的宇宙得到乐趣一样。

51.这一点即使不用言语表达，我们实际上已经相信了。十九世纪的人从艺术中得到的所有愉悦，都是来自图画、雕塑、小件艺术品或者中世纪建筑，我们因其奇特有趣而欣赏不已。在现代建筑中我们得不到任何愉悦，我们发现所有拥有真实感觉的人都乐于从现代都市逃向自然风光：因此正如我将阐释的一样，对于风景的独特热爱是这个时代的特征。要是在所有其他事物中，我们都能够为了顺从既定法则而容忍我们不喜欢的东西，就像我们能够容忍建筑那样就好了。

52.如此贬抑的法则怎么会被建立起来，关于这点我们将会在描述文艺复兴学派的时候看到。在这里，我们只需注意作为哥特式精神的第二个最基本的元素，它打破了现有法则。它不仅敢于而且乐于违反每一条盲从原则，并且发明了一系列的形式，它们的价值不仅在于创新，而且在于有能力永久保持新颖。尖拱并不仅仅是圆拱的大胆变异，它本身还能产生成千上万的变化，因为尖拱的比例可以不断地变动，而圆拱总是一样的；成组的柱身并不仅仅是单个柱身的大胆变异，而是在组合的方式上有成千上万的变化。石制花饰的引入并不仅仅导致窗户光线令人吃惊的改变，而且在花饰条本身的组合上有着无穷的变化。因此，在所有现存的基督教建筑里都有着对多样性的热爱，而哥特式学派则以绝顶

的能量展示了这种热爱。它们的影响无论延伸到哪里，都会被追踪到这个特征上去。采纳哥特式形态的趋势总是首先显示为外在的不规则性和更丰富的变化，这远在尖拱或任何其他哥特式建筑的可辨别的外部特征出现之前就存在了。

53.如此，我们必须仔细地关注对于变化的健康和病态热爱之间的区别。哥特式建筑引发的对于变化的健康热爱，部分是对于变化的病态热爱的结果。为了更好地理解这一点，有必要考虑变化和单调在自然中的体现。两者都是有用的，就像黑暗和光明，如果缺少一个，另一个也无法被欣赏。漫长的单调之后的变化是多么可喜，正如眼睛闭上一段时间后再看到的光线是多么灿烂。

54.我相信单调和变化的真实关联可以简单地通过对音乐的观察来理解。我们首先要注意到，单调有一种快速或经常变动所没有的崇高和威严。自然界一向如此，大海的崇高大部分来自于它的单调，荒野和山色同样如此。尤其是动态的崇高，如一束光线安静不变地升起和落下。同样，在黑暗中也有在光明中所没有的崇高。

55.经过一段时间之后，或者超过一定程度，单调就会变得无趣或者无法忍受，音乐家不得不以一两种方式打破它，要么在曲调和段落被不断重复时，音节的加强与调和有所变化；或者在一定数量的重复段落后，接入一个崭新的段落，根据之前单调的长度，这样或多或少地增加了愉悦感。自然界不断地运用以上两种变化。大部分的海浪彼此相似，但是在微小的部分和曲线上则互不相同，这是第一种单调。广阔的平原被突兀的岩石或树丛所切断，这是第二种单调。

56.此外，为了在每种情形下都享受变化，需要听众或观众具有一定的耐心。在第一种情形下，他必须耐心忍受声音或形式的大量重复，然后在微小的细节里仔细地观察寻找乐趣。在第二种情形下，他必须耐心忍受某些时刻的单调痛苦，以便感受到变化所带来的全新体验。即使

在最短的音乐章节里，只要运用了单调的元素，情形莫不如此。在更威严的单调情形中，需要更多的耐心，有时候变成了一种痛苦，而这就是为了即将到来的愉悦所付出的代价。

57.重申一下，作曲家的才华不在于单调而在于变化，在某些地方或某种程度上，他可以借助单调来表达情感和品味，也就是说，借助各种各样的运用来实现不同的表达，但他的才华总是在新的安排和发明上体现出来，而不是通过一成不变的方式来体现。

58.最后，如果变化的愉悦重复的太多，它就不再是愉悦的了，因为这样一来，变化本身也就成为单调了。我们被迫在极端和奇异的层面上寻找乐趣，这就是之前提到的对于变化的病态热爱。

59.从以上事实我们可以大致地了解到，正如黑暗一样，单调就其本身来说是且应当是令我们痛苦的。一幢整体看来单调的建筑，是一幢黑暗或死寂的建筑，而那些热爱它的人们，实际上可能会这样说，“他们热爱黑暗而不是光明”。特定量的单调，会给变化带来价值，尤其是那种透明的单调。正如伟大画家画的影子，通过它看到并感受各种模糊的形状，可以在建筑中发挥其作用。对于健康的心灵而言，对单调的忍耐和对黑暗的忍耐一样。也就是说，一个强大的智者会对暴风雨和曙光的肃穆，以及闪烁其间的断裂而神秘的光心生愉悦，而不仅仅对光辉和闪耀心生愉悦，而一个轻佻的人会害怕阴影和风暴。一个伟人准备好忍受命运的黑暗，以便到达力量或幸福的更高处，而一个低等的人就不会付出这种代价。正像一个伟大的心灵会接受甚至享受单调，而对一个低等心智的人来说，单调是令人厌烦的，这是因为他没有准备好为了更大的愉悦而付出代价。在所有情形下，高贵的本性并不是热爱单调，正如它也不热爱黑暗或痛苦一样，但是它可以忍受，并在忍受和耐心中得到更高的愉悦，这是一种对世界的安宁来说必不可少的愉悦。那些不能接受暂时的雷同，迅速地从一个变化跳到另一个变化的人，最终也厌倦了

变化本身，并为整个世界带来无所遁逃的阴影和倦怠。

60.在世界经济中普遍运用各种变化的过程中，我们可以同时理解它在建筑中的运用和滥用。哥特式学派的变化是更健康、更美丽的，因为在很多情况下，它是完全自然而不造作的，其成果不是单纯地来源于对变化的热爱，而是来源于实际的需要。从这一点来说，哥特式不仅是最好的，而且也是唯一理性的建筑，因为它可以最方便地应用于各种服务，雅俗共赏。不确定的屋顶倾斜度、柱身高度、拱门宽度或平面图的安排，都使得它既可以收缩为角楼，也可以扩展为大厅；既可以卷曲成楼梯也可以弹升为尖塔，而其魅力不减，能量不耗。无论它在形式和功能上有什么变化，它总能在不损失一点儿完整性和威严性的情况下达成。它像暴烈的蛇一样敏锐和灵活，但总是听从于耍蛇人的声音。这是哥特式建造者最主要的品质之一，他们从不用外部的对称和一致去妨碍他们作品的真实用途和价值。如果他们想要一扇窗户，他们就开一扇；想要一间房间，就加一间；想要一面扶墙，就建一面。完全不管一切既定的关于外观的陈规陋习，因为他们知道（正如实际总是发生的那样）那些对于形式的大胆突破会带给对称性额外的益处而不是破坏，所以在哥特式风格的鼎盛时代，人们宁可为了制造惊奇而在一个意外的地方开一扇无用的窗户，也不要为了符合对称而开一扇有用的窗户。每一个被雇佣来实施伟大工程的继任建筑师，都以他自己的方式来设计，完全不管前任所采用的风格。如果两座塔楼在大教堂的正面矗立，名义上它们相符，但其中一座肯定与另一座不一样的，而且每一座从顶部到底部的风格也是不一的。

61.这些显著的变化只是一个永恒变化的伟大系统的一部分。经历了每一种哥特式设计，为旁观者查询建造者的想象力提供了无尽的空间。在最佳学派里，变化是微妙和精巧的，并且通过混合高贵的单调而变得更加愉悦；在更原始的学派里，变化则颇为怪诞和多余，但总体而言，变化是学派的生命力所必备的恒定条件。有时候变化是这种特征，

有时是另一种特征。变化可能体现在柱头、卷叶饰、壁龛或石制花饰上，或者全部都有所体现。总之，这样或那样的特征总会被找到。如果模制是固定的，那么表面雕塑就会有变化；如果柱头的设计是固定的，那么石制花饰就会有变化；如果石制花饰是单调的，那么柱头就会有变化。如果像在早期英国的一些建筑学派那样，模制、柱头和花饰的形态都几乎不变，那么变化就体现在摆放位置的不同，以及雕塑形象的差异。

62.在放弃这方面的考虑之前，我必须要参考《建筑学七灯》第三章的开头来谈谈哥特式建筑的第二个精神元素。此书对于集合者和管理者之间作了区分，同时也对从自然中接受乐趣和在其安排中行使权威或想象的权力之间作了区分。对于这两种精神元素来说，我们刚才分析的哥特式建筑和所有优秀建筑均属于此类。它们之所以值得赞美，主要是因为人类的作品以及人类一般力量的表达，胜过艺术的其他任何主题。一幅画或一首诗常常只不过是出于人类自己赞赏某事物的微弱表达，但是建筑更接近于他自己的创造，由他的需要而产生，并且表达了他的本性。同样，在整个种族的作品中，如果说图画或雕塑只是个体的创作，大多数情况下这一个体要比他的同类更有天赋。因此，我们期望优秀建筑的头两个元素应该表达一些属于整个种族的伟大真理，而且在他们在世界各地完成的所有作品中，都应该被理解或感受到。观察一下就会发现，它们是对于不完美的告白，是对于渴望变化的告白。小鸟和蜜蜂的建筑不需要表达这样的东西，它是完美的、不变的。正因为我们是比小鸟和蜜蜂更优等的生物，我们的建筑必须要承认我们还没有达到所能想象的完美程度，而且不能停留在我们已经达到的状态。如果我们假装已经达到了完美或者满足，我们就降低了我们自己和我们的作品。“上帝之工”，也许可以这样表达，但我们从未达到“一切所造的都甚好”的境界。再来观察一下，对于高贵来说多样性是必要的。这并不仅仅是给建筑提供了包含各种知识的书籍，或者宝贵思想的矿藏。至关重要的原则不是对于知识的热爱，而是对于变化的热爱。哥特式精神奇异的不安分

正是它的伟大之处。梦幻般思想的躁动，在壁龛四处游荡，在尖塔周围兴奋地闪烁，在墙壁和屋顶的复杂结构和阴影里忽隐忽现，却还不满足，也不会满足。希腊人可以待在他的竖条纹饰里，内心平静，但是富有哥特式心灵的作品是回纹细工，无法安于劳动或从劳动中得到安宁，必须不眠不休地继续下去，直到它对变化的热爱在变化中得到慰藉，就像如果他们沉睡了，就必须被唤醒一样。

63.哥特式精神的第三个组成元素被称为自然性。也就是说，热爱自然事物本身的样子，并且坦率地呈现，不受艺术法规的制约。

64.这个风格特征部分地遵循了之前阐述的两个特征。只要工匠可以自由地呈现他选择的物品，他一定会面向他周围的自然来寻找素材，并且努力呈现出他看到的样子，精确度视其掌握的技巧而定。这个过程带着很多玩笑的情绪，也很少有对法则的尊重，然而即使两者的工匠都是自由的，西方人和东方人的想象力还是有明显的不同。西方人或说哥特人乐于对事实的表现，而东方人（阿拉伯人、波斯人和中国人）则强调颜色和形式的和谐。每种处理方式都有其特定的错误和滥用形式。〔……〕

65.由此而产生的各种形式的伤害在这里就不谈了，读者可能已经有些厌烦这个引得我们偏离主题的陈述了，但我既然将“自然性”列为哥特式建筑的第三个最基本的特征，为了可以清晰地定义我使用这个词的含义，是需要离题的。我的意思是，哥特式建造者在我们刚刚作出的艺术家的分类里是居于中心或最伟大的级别。考虑到艺术家有的关注设计，有的关注事实，也有的两者都关注，哥特式建造者是属于两者都关注的范畴；考虑到艺术家有的是纯化论者，有的是自然主义者，也有的是感官主义者，哥特式建造者都是自然主义者。

66.我首先要说，哥特式建造者是将事实与设计融合的中心阶层，但他们自己尤其看重的是真实性。他们的艺术创造或者设置的力量并不

比罗马和拜占庭工匠更强大，他们由这些工匠传授设计原理，并从中取得模型，但在拜占庭对于装饰的感觉和丰富的热爱之上。哥特式建造者增添了一份对真实的热爱，而这种热爱在南方从不存在。希腊人和罗马人都在装饰上运用因袭的叶子，将一种并不是叶子的东西传承下去，结成奇怪的杯状的花蕾或花丛，长出无生命的杆而不是茎。哥特式雕刻家们一开始理所当然地接受了这些样式，但他们无法安心于此。他们认为它们没有真实性、没有知识、没有生命力。当他们可以为所欲为时，他们就忍不住更喜欢真实的叶子，他们每次一点点慎重地将自然加入到他的作品中，直到它最终完全变成真实的样子，却仍然保留原始的完美设计和有节制的规划中的珍贵特征。

67.哥特式工匠并不仅在外部和可见的主题上寻找真实，他们对于表现想象力的真实也一样坚定。也就是说，当一个想法被罗马人或拜占庭人以象征的手法来表现时，哥特人则将其最大可能地真实化。比如，炼狱之火在托切罗岛（罗马）的马赛克上被表现为红色的水流，像一条缎带一样纵向垂下，从基督的宝座上降下来，逐渐延伸以遮盖邪恶。只要我们被告知这样代表着什么，它也就达到目的了，但是哥特派发明者使得这个象征不需要解释，他尽可能把火做得逼真，在鲁昂的圣马克卢教堂的门廊上雕刻的火焰从地狱之门喷发而出，翻腾的石制舌头闪耀着穿过了壁龛的空隙，就好像整个教堂都着火了。这是一个极端的例子，但这既是两派艺术的性情和想法整体差别的精彩表现，也是对影响哥特式设计的真实性的强烈热爱。

68.我并不是说这种对真实性的热爱在应用上总是健康的。之前我已经注意到由于轻视设计而犯的错，在刚刚举的例子中还有一个显而易见的错误，即对真实的热爱太过轻率，以致只抓住了表面的而不是内在的真实。在表现地狱之火时，最需要表现的并不仅仅是火焰的形状，而是它的永不止歇，它的神圣命令和限制，以及它内在的凶猛，不是形体和物质上的凶猛，而是对上帝的愤怒的激烈表达，但这些事物是不能经

由模仿火焰从手杖中闪现来表达的。如果我们考虑一下他的象征，我们也许会发现，罗马建造者用血红色的水流在特定的岸间流动，流出上帝的宝座并仿佛有永恒的水流延伸到罪恶被抛弃的湖里，这比哥特式建造者用壁龛里闪烁的火炬表现得更为真实。这不是我们的直接目标，我此刻不是要强调在哥特时代的后期因对真实的热爱而导致的错误，而是在感觉本身，在于作为北方建造者的光荣而独有的特征。注意观察，即使在以上的例子中，导致错误的也不是对真实的热爱而是对思想的需求。对真实的热爱是好的，但当它被轻率所误导，或被虚荣心过分激励，就会抓住几乎没有价值的事实，或者把它们集中起来，只是为了可以夸耀其掌控力和理解力，这样它的工作就会变得乏味或者令人不快，然而我们不应指责对于真实的内在热爱，而应针对选择的不谨慎，以及陈述的不恰当。

69.其次，我认为，在参考所有艺术安排时，如纯粹主义、自然主义或感官主义的艺术，哥特式作品属于自然主义艺术。这个特征必然符合它对真实的极端热爱，并胜过了美的感觉，使其乐于创作每一种肖像画，表达人类面部表情和形态的各种特征，正如它表现树叶的多样性和树枝的参差不齐一样。这个趋势因与我们提到的哥特式作品的第一个特征所表达的同样的基督谦卑而得到加强，并变得高贵起来。由于谦卑因承认工匠的不完美而产生，这个自然主义肖像画因为这种谦卑而变得更加可信，因为它承认了这个主题的不完美。希腊雕刻家既不能忍受承认自己的低能，也不会坦白他所描绘的形状的错误，但是基督教工匠相信最终一切都会协同向善，因而能够坦承这两个方面，并且既不掩饰其作品的粗糙，也不掩饰其工艺主题的粗糙。这种坦率大部分是和在其他方向的深厚的宗教体验联合起来的，特别是和仁慈联系起来的。在最好的哥特式雕塑中有一种纯粹主义的倾向，所以它经常达到形式上的尊严和表达上的柔和，但在任何肖像画中决不会丧失肖像画的真实性：既不歌颂国王为半神，也不描绘圣人为天使长，而是充分表现出他们身上的王性和圣洁，混杂着他们应有的错误记录。这在很大程度上舍弃了像圣经

历史那样的强烈漠视，圣经历史以坚定的、不容置疑的果断，设定了提到的所有人的美德和错误，使得读者形成他自己的评价，而不管历史学家的评判。这种真实性由哥特式雕塑家在微观和宏观上体现出来，正如公正性由轮廓体现出来一样。因为他们的艺术不模仿圣人和国王的肖像，而是加入了最熟悉的场景以及最简单的主题，在圣经历史的背景上填充日常生活中最常见的事件，加以生动和奇特的表现，并且利用每一个场合，要么作为一种象征，要么作为一个场景或时间的解释，而工匠的眼睛所熟悉的事物可以被引进和加以叙述，所以哥特式雕塑和绘画不仅充满了伟人的珍贵肖像画，还有它繁荣时代的所有家庭风俗和低等艺术的丰富记录。[4]

70.然而哥特式工匠的自然主义倾向有一个方向是特别明显的，这个方向作为哥特派的特征甚至超过自然主义本身。我是指他们特别热衷于草木图案。在提供日常生活的各种情境时，埃及和尼尼微的雕塑与哥特式的一样直率和散漫。从国家的盛世到战争的胜利，一直到最琐碎的家庭艺术和娱乐，都对拥挤的戏剧性产生了恒久的兴趣。早期伦巴第和罗马雕塑对于熟悉的战争和狩猎场景的描绘同样很丰富，但在由这些国家的工匠所描绘的所有场景里，草木只是作为辅助说明而存在，加入芦苇是为了标记河流的路线，树木是为了标记野兽的隐蔽处或者敌人的埋伏点，而对草木图案的特殊兴趣从来没有强大到把它们作为单独的主题和精确的研究对象。再者，在那些仅仅延续设计艺术的国家，草木图案是贫乏和普通的，它们真正复杂的生命既没有被欣赏也没有被表达，但是对于哥特式工匠来说，草木是他们深爱的主题，他们努力以精确性及适应于设计的法则和材料的质地，来呈现它所有的特征，却不会为自己的热情所驱使，违背一方面或隐藏另一方面。

71.这里有一点特别重要，它象征比之前建筑所显示的文明更高，气质更温和。粗陋以及对于变化的热爱，这两个我们强调为哥特式的首要元素，也是所有建筑流派共有的元素。只是对于哥特式风格自身而

言，这里有一个更柔和的元素与之相混合。在处理人类形式时呈现出的粗陋或无知，还没有强大到阻止对路边植物的成功表现。而对于变化的热爱，在追随猎人的迅捷和角斗者的愤怒时，会变得病态和狂热，在它看到藤蔓的漫游、花朵的盛开时，立刻变得平静和满足。这并不是全部，精神兴趣的新方向标志了生活的习惯和手段上的无穷变化。一个主要的支持在于狩猎、主要的兴趣在于战争、主要的乐趣在于宴会的国家，不会关注树叶和花朵的形状，也不会注意庇护他们的森林树木的形状——表明可以用作最锋利的枪矛、最密闭的屋顶、最炽热的火焰的木头的特征除外。对于草木的魅力和外部特征的充满感情的观察，当然象征着一个更宁静、更温和的存在，由那片土地的馈赠所维系，因其光辉而愉悦。物种的仔细区分以及未受干扰的细致组织的丰富性，作为哥特式设计的特征，都有一个乡野和周到生活的历程，受惯常的亲切感的影响，致力于巧妙的询问。凿子每一次有差别的、细致的触碰，当它搓圆花瓣或者指引树枝时，这就成为自然科学主体发展的预言，以医学、文学的发现，以及家庭智慧和国家和平的最必要原则的确立为出发点。

72.我之前已经提及的奇怪和徒然的推想，即哥特式建筑的原始概念起源于植物，即起源于林荫道的对称和树枝的交错。这是一个在任何知晓早期哥特式风格的人的头脑里都不会产生的推想，但无论是多么无用的理论，它用来证明完美风格的特征还是有价值的，因为这个理论的反面是事实。因为哥特式建筑并不是从此而来的，而是发展自植物的相似性，所以这个相似性表明了建造者的性情。几乎没有可能去提议拱门的形状根据树枝的弯曲度而设计，但是对于自然美的逐步、持续的发现可以被越来越完美地转移到石头上，并且立即影响到人们的心灵和建筑形式。哥特式建筑以厚实的如大山般的力量出现，以斧头砍成，铁块绑成，石块堆着石块，以一种修士的热情和战士的力量震撼着人们。箍住和撑起如此可怕墙壁的重量仿佛可以将隐士埋葬于黑暗中，可以击退战争中最猛烈的进攻，在同样穿过阳光或者弓箭的狭窄通道里遭受折磨。渐渐地，当修士的热情变得更为深沉，战争的声响在修道院或城堡主楼

的门上变得越来越虚弱，石柱变得修长，穹隆屋顶变得光亮，直到他们自己被夏天的树木和死去的野花所遮盖，走过长长的血路，甜美的纪念碑塑像永远鲜活地立于庙宇的门廊下，或坟墓的檐蓬下。

73.它也不仅是一个更温和、更精致的思想符号，而且是这种趋向精致的最大可能的证据。哥特式风格表现出来的植物生命的倾向是值得赞赏的。《创世纪》里有句话，“我将青草赐给它们作为食物”，和书中其余的内容一样，这句话既有字面上的含义也有深刻的象征。它不仅是身体的营养，还是灵魂的食物。在大自然中，绿色植物对于人类健康的精神生活是最为关键的。我们大部分人不需要美好的风景，绝壁和山峰并不打算被所有人看到——也许他们的力量对那些尚未习惯他们的人来说是最强大的，但是树木、田野和花朵是为所有人准备的，对所有人而言也是必需的。上帝将攸关生计的工作和有益人心的欢乐联系起来，他把土地造得坚固，也把植物造得芬芳，花朵造得美丽。人类能够建造的最自豪的建筑与田野荒草的形象和记忆相比并不更加荣耀，因为这不过是他存在的形态和证明。当漂亮的建筑被雕刻成天堂之叶的样子时最为辉煌，而伟大的哥特式精神，当我们展示它不安中的高贵时，它在对本性的执着上是尊贵的。它确实如诺亚的鸽子，没有在水面上停歇，也像“鸽子嘴里叼着一片新拧下来的橄榄叶子”。

74.前面提到的哥特式精神的第四个要素是“怪异性”。要等到我们有机会研究文艺复兴学派的一个部分时，我才会对这个最古怪、最微妙的特征进行定义，因为这种怪异性病态地影响了这些学派。强调这一点也许不是很有必要，因为每个熟悉哥特式建筑的读者都一定会明白我的意思。我相信，他们也会毫不犹豫地承认，对于奇异和可笑的喜好，正如对于庄严的图像的喜好一样，这种倾向是哥特式想象力的一个普遍天性。

75.前面提到的第五个要素是“严格性”。这个特征我必须努力仔细地

加以定义，因为无论是我使用的这个词，还是我能想到的任何词，都无法精准地表达它的含义。我的意思不仅是稳定而且是积极的严格，这种给行动以张力、给反抗以限制的奇特能量，使得最猛烈的闪电变成叉状而不是变得曲线，使得最粗壮的橡树枝长出尖角而不是变得弯曲，在枪矛的震颤和冰柱的闪烁中同样可以见到。

76.我之前有机会注意到这种能量或曰稳固的显现，但在这里它必须经过更仔细地考虑，因为它在哥特式工艺的整个结构和装饰上都有表现。埃及和希腊建筑大部分依靠自己的重量和质量而挺立，一块石头顺从地依靠着另一块，但是在哥特式建筑的圆拱和石制花饰里有一种形同腿骨或树的纤维般的僵硬特征，这是从一个部分到另一个部分有弹性的张力和力量的传播，也是建筑的每条可见线条上的细致表现。同样，希腊和埃及装饰或者仅仅是表面雕刻，就好像墙面被印上了封条，或者它的线条是流动的、柔和的、丰富的，在每种情况下，装饰本身的框架里都没有能量的表达，但是哥特式装饰以敏感的独立性和冷淡的坚毅性凸显出来，伸入卷叶浮雕，固定为尖塔，在这里制作一个怪物，在那里萌发一朵花。很快，它又将编结为一条树枝，不停地变换着多刺、凸起和多毛的形态，或者扭曲为任何各种纠结的形式。即使在最优雅的状态下，从没有一个时刻是无精打采的，始终是树篱的形状，即便有错误，也只是出现在唐突无礼的情况下。

77.在作品中体现这一特征的工匠的感觉或习惯，要比迄今提过的任何雕塑表现更复杂和多样化。他有刻苦和快速工作的习惯，北方部落的勤勉因气候的寒冷不断加强，赋予其所有作品以犀利的表达。与南方部落的倦怠不同，不管在那个倦怠的心灵有多大的激情，即便是火山熔岩也是缓慢流动的。还有在寒冷的迹象里寻找乐趣的习惯，我相信，阿尔卑斯山脉以南国家的居民从来没有这种习惯。对他们来说，寒冷是一种不可饶恕的罪恶，是需要尽快经历并遗忘的。而北方的漫长冬季迫使想要快乐生活的哥特人（我是指英国人、法国人、丹麦人或德国人）在

坏天气里找到快乐的来源，在光秃的森林里像在成荫的森林里一样快乐。这些我们都全心全意地去做，在圣诞节的火炉旁得到像夏日阳光下那样的满足，在冬天的冰野上得到健康和力量——就像在春天的草地上一般。因此，对于我们的感觉来说，被寒冷抑制的窄小、僵硬的植物结构既没什么不好，也并不痛苦。南方雕塑家只寻求表现被柔和所滋养的柔软枝叶，贪图暖风和热光的富饶，而我们在植物的暴躁、乖张、怪僻的生机上得到愉悦，它们从天上和地上都没有得到过多少善意，但是，它们一季又一季地尽自己最大的努力生长着，即便它们被霜冻麻痹，最灿烂的花蕾埋藏在雪中，漂亮的树枝被暴雨砍去。

78.很多微妙的同情和感情被加入进来，从而加强哥特式精神对于主题的独特选择。当我们加入这些影响时，随之而来的必然是更粗糙原料的使用，迫使工匠寻求显著的效果，而不是改进质地或确定形状。对于北方和南方在概念上的很多不同之处，我们有直接和明显的原因，但是我们没有直接的原因来把握一个在哥特式心灵上更为重要的位置，尽管它们对设计的影响没有那么直接。意志的力量、个性的独立、目标的坚决、对于过分控制的不耐烦，以及树立个体理性对抗权威、个人行为对抗命运的普遍倾向，这使得北方部落在各个时期都在抗争无力的服从，而在南方出于对传统的考虑以及天命的目的，或多或少可在北方哥特式装饰的僵硬线条、强烈多样的色块以及大胆的设计和独立结构上找到它们的踪迹。相反的感觉同样清晰地在优雅、柔和的海浪和环绕的花纹中显现，这是南方装饰经常涉及的内容。在它丧失独立、融入投射其上的大块表面的倾向里，在处理这些大块的时候，经常表现为不可避免的需要或无精打采的静止而放弃他们的力量。

79.对于这些哥特式精神特征及其创造的风格来说，适量即美德，过量即有错。最好的建筑以及最好的调剂是将他们两者联合起来，因此哥特式心灵的第五个冲动是最需要慎于耽溺。它比其他几个都具有更明确的哥特式特征，但是最好的哥特式建筑，并不是最具哥特式特性的建

筑：它可以坦率地承认自己的粗陋，它变化丰富，忠实于自然主义。它可能太坚硬了，就像伟大的清教徒精神在极端的情形下因为各种轻浮或乖僻的目的而失去了自我。在后期也确实是如此，但是它有幸记得在它最高贵的时候，那些曾被认为最有害的趋向，那些依靠自己和不断追寻的新教精神在每一根线条里得以表达。从第一世纪到第十五世纪，每一座基督教的教会建筑都蕴含信念和渴望，但是在当今，英格兰所拥有的那种伟大归功于道德习惯——哲学研究的习惯，精确思考、家庭隔离和独立的习惯，严格自律和对于宗教真理的真诚探究的习惯。这些只可在哥特学派富有特色的建筑特征中找到踪迹，在有脉纹的叶子上，在多刺的回纹细工上，在朦胧的壁龛里，在拱壁的扶壁上，在精妙的尖塔和拥有顶饰的、极高的高楼上，如同一个“送向苍穹的困惑的疑问”。

80.由于是这个高贵学派的组合元素中最微不足道的一个元素是冗余，这是慷慨馈赠的劳动财富。确实有很多哥特式建筑，而且是在最佳时期的建筑里都鲜有这个元素的踪迹，它的影响几乎专门依靠简单设计的可爱和无关部分的魅力，然而在最有特色的建筑上，它们的特定影响依靠装饰的累积，并且很多对于人类心灵的最大影响是以这个单独的特征来实现的，尽管通过对这个学派的仔细研究有可能达到一个品位的高度。比起整个由回纹细工覆盖的正面，我们更满足于一些完美的线条，但是满足于这种品味的建筑并不是最好的建筑，因为正如我们在前面所看到的，哥特式建筑首先应该包容从最粗陋到最优雅的心灵的欣赏诉求。尽管这听起来有些矛盾，但哥特式作品的丰富性的确是它谦卑的一个部分。从来没有如此简单却又如此傲慢的建筑，只以一些清晰和强烈的线条来吸引眼球，只提供少得可怜的值得关注的事物，这也意味着，凡是提供的都是完美的。因其特征的复杂性或吸引力而不屑于阻碍我们的调查，或者使我们无意中流露出欢愉。那种谦卑，正是哥特学派的生命所在，并不仅仅在其不完美中显现，也在装饰的累积上表现出来。工匠的较次等级同样显示在他作品的丰富性和粗糙中。若想每双手都能够合作，每颗心都能被接受，我们就必须容许这种冗余——当它假装脆弱

者的失败时，却赢得疏忽者的关注。在哥特式的心灵里更为高贵的兴趣混合着对于装饰累积的原始之爱，这是一种巨大的热情，感觉好像它做什么都不足以实现其理想。这是一种无私的牺牲，仿佛宁可在祭坛前抛下无结果的劳动也不要在市场上虚度。一种对于物质世界的充足和财富的深厚同情从自然主义中产生，我们已经努力解释了它的运作过程。在森林的叶子上寻找模型的雕刻家很快深刻地意识到，复杂性不一定导致优雅的丧失，丰富性也不一定导致宁静的丧失。他花在研究大自然的微小和多样工艺上的时间，使得他更强烈地感受到人类缺乏最好的工艺。这也无须惊奇，当看到大自然大量涌现完美和精致的创造，且观念无法把握，数量无法统计时，他会认为吝啬自己粗陋的手艺是多么病态。在整个宇宙中，他看到一种无瑕的美丽在花团锦簇的田野和山间无边的空间蔓延，他怨恨自己将一块石头堆在另一块上的不完美的劳动，这些只是为了居住或者纪念。在他的任务完成之前，他已经丧失了大好年华，但是一代又一代人以不倦的热情前赴后继，大教堂的正面终于被花纹的装饰所覆盖，就像岩石掩映在春天繁茂的草木间一。

81.现在，我相信，关于构成哥特式建筑的内在精神的各种道德或想象元素，我们已经有了一个接近圆满的看法……

铁在自然、艺术和政治中的功用

1858年2月16日在塔布里奇威尔斯所作的演讲

1.当我刚刚得知你们想要我今晚作这个演讲的时候，我有一点疑惑，因为我不知道自己是否能找到一个可以引起你们足够兴趣的主题，值得你们在这样的一个冬夜从温暖的家中赶来听我演讲。当我冒险去讲述我自己对于艺术的特别感觉时，大部分时候都是面对艺术系的学生；在他们面前我可以允许自己乏味一点，只要我感觉自己还有点用，但是一次纯粹的关于艺术的演讲，特别是没有例子可以援引的时候（我也没有办法为这次演讲准备什么有用的插图），对于一般听众来说都是鲜有兴趣的。当我在考虑你们最可能容忍我谈论什么话题的时候，我很自然地想到了一个与你们所居住的这个城镇的起源和当前的繁荣相关联的主题，对我来说，在艺术的诸多分支中，唯有它可以引发普遍的兴趣。很久以前（我很怕去想有多久），塔布里奇威尔斯，就是瑞士。有一年夏天我被带到这儿，那时我还是一个非常活泼的孩子，因为可以攀爬砂岩——高得惊人的峭壁而高兴。我推想，与威尔斯的所有孩子的童年相比，那是我生命中的黑暗岁月。在波形瓦和镶边建筑风格充斥各处的不幸中，我唯一的慰藉是散步时在每一个转角观看泉水从大理石水池的橙色边缘喷涌而出。记忆中清澈的泉水，闪耀过橘黄色的污点，变成与这个地方相关的最强烈的景象。我想，今晚你们应该不会不愿意来稍微思考一下那个橘黄色污点的意义，以及其他的方式和功能，以及使这里许多人恢复生机和力量的铁的意义。它一直是那么重要，而且作为地球的珍贵馈赠会日复一日地越来越引人注目。

2.当然这个主题太广泛，只能点到为止，尽管我的提议不多，而且主要是以我自己工作的领域为出发点，然而我认为我应该有时间来指明

一些思考的过程。如你们感兴趣的话，这些想法可能以后自己也可以一探究竟。因此，我不会缩小我已向你们宣布的这个主题的范围，即“铁在自然、艺术和政治上的功用”。

3.开场白到此为止，下面我开始论述第一方面。

4.一、自然中的铁。你们想必都知道，往往被认为毁坏了泉水池的红褐色污点是铁生锈的状态。当你在其他地方看到生锈的铁时你通常会想，它不仅破坏了它沾染的地方，而且也毁坏了自己，生锈的铁是腐坏的铁。

5.对于铁的大多数的功用来说确实如此，因为一把生锈的厨刀或剃刀不如磨光的好使，我们就认定铁会生锈是它的一大缺陷。事实并非如此，相反，铁最完美和最有用的形态就是红褐色的污点，它被赋予了一个天生的性情来使得自己进入这种形态。铁容易生锈不是铁的过错，而是它的优点，因为在那种情形下它满足了它在宇宙中最重要的功能以及对人类最善意的职责。不，在某种意义上，而且几乎是在字面意义上，我们可以说生锈的铁是鲜活的，而它被磨光或者提炼后，则是死的。你们可能都知道，在我们呼吸的空气里最关键的成分被称为氧气，这个物质对所有动物来说都是至关重要的。以这个词语最精确的含义来说，是“生命的气息”。生命的力量是另一回事，但是如果没有呼吸的辅助元素，血液和生命都得不到滋养，这种辅助元素就是氧气。铁就是被氧化然后生锈的，它像我们一样贪婪地从空气中吸取氧气，尽管它的目的与我们不同。铁将吸收的养分都保存了起来，我们和其他的动物则只保存了部分，而铁完全保存了它从空气的馈赠中吸收到的养分。我们如此蔑视的红褐色的尘埃事实上比纯铁要高贵得多，因为它是铁和空气的结合。它不仅更高贵也更有用，因为正如我要向你们展示的一样，这个金属以及所有其他金属的主要功用，不是在制造厨刀和剪刀、拨火棒和平底锅，而是在制造我们赖以生存的土地，以及几乎所有对我们的生存所

必需的物质。这一切都只需金属和氧气——会呼吸的金属。沙子、石灰、粘土和土地的其他部分，钾碱和苏打，以及其他碱类，都是金属经过了氧化这一重大变化过程才形成的，并且已经通过与其本身呼吸的纯粹空气永久结合变得适合服务于人类。只有一种金属不会轻易生锈，从它迄今对人类的影响来看，已经导致了死亡而不是生命，除非它被用于铺设人行道，被踏在脚底下，否则它就不能算是被正确使用。[5]

6.在这个无生命的创造物所提供的类型或教训里难道没有引人注目的部分？你拥有坚硬、光亮、冰冷、无生命的金属，它们质地精良足以制作剑和剪刀，但不能用来制成食品。你认为，也许铁以一种纯粹的形式存在十分有用，但是你怎么可能会喜欢这个世界——如果你所有的草地长出了铁丝而不是青草，如果所有的耕地不是由沙和粘土组成而是忽然变成了平坦的钢面，如果整个地球不是绿色的灼热球体，长满了森林和花朵，而是变成可怕机车上的巨大熔炉的景象，一个黑暗的、无生命的、被撕去表皮的地球？它将会变成这个样子，也许它曾经就是这个样子。要不是它所构成的物质吮吸和呼吸了空气的精华，它确实会变成这个样子。当它呼吸的时候，它无情的坚硬被软化，变成了富有成效的有益的尘埃，再次聚集起来成为我们赖以生存的土地，以及我们用来建造的石头，并成为形成山脉的岩石和约束海洋的沙滩。

7.当你拿起脚边最不起眼的鹅卵石，你不可能看不出里面蕴含的教义。一开始你看着它，仿佛它只是土地，不，它回答："我不是土地，我是土地与空气的混合体，是你所热爱和渴望的蓝天的一部分，这是我全部的生命，没有它我就什么都不是了，也什么都不能了。要不是因为我在创造中的需要和地位，在我身上有一种灵魂，我将不能帮助你，也不能滋养你，我将会变成残忍和无用，但如今我在生命的循环中既有益又有用。"

8.同样的情况也适用于所有的土地，以及构成土地的所有金属，但

是那个染污了你泉边的大理石的红褐色的铁与之有着更深的关系并得到了更大的益处。它染污了大理石以外的很多东西，它染污了你在这片土地上看到的所有东西。它是被指定用来给地球染色的染色剂，也是用来服务于人类的。你看到山脉上覆盖着积雪，也许一开始你会欣赏它美丽的白色与松树林的黑色相对比，但是你有没有考虑过，你怎么会喜欢它们永远是白色的——不是纯白色，而是肮脏的白色——融雪的白色，有着雪的寒意，却没有它的光亮？那就是地球没有铁的时候会变成的颜色。那就是不仅这里或那里，而是所有地方所有时候都会变成的颜色。顺着这个思路，你在细节上会有所认知。首先，想象你在自家花园里漂亮的碎石路上散步，像黄色的花床之间的阳光一样美好；然后想象一下它们忽然全都变成灰烬的颜色，这就是如果没有红褐色铁的话它们会变成的样子。再想象你在公园里蜿蜒漫步，眼底温暖、足底干燥，然后想象一下它们全都忽然化为灰色的煤渣会是什么景象？然后穿过公园进入乡村，在你所看到的阳光下第一块遍布山间的耕地前停留，它深褐色的犁沟和赤热的山脊在耕地边上凸起，就好像手织天鹅绒斗篷的深深折痕一般。想象这些全都忽然变成在一片污泥地里的可怕的犁沟——这就是没有铁的话会变成的样子。继续在想象中前行，越过山丘和山谷，直到你到达弯曲的海岸线，走到吹着微风的海滩，观看白色的泡沫在琥珀色的海滩上飞溅，整片蓝色的大海在金色的沙滩里栖息，然后想象那些席卷海岸的小圈忽然变成了悲痛的堤坝，所有金色的沙子变成了灰色的烂泥，仙女们再也无法互相呼唤，“来这片黄色的沙滩吧”，而是说，“来这片褐色的沙滩吧”——这就是如果没有铁的话它们会变成的样子。

9.因此，在某些方面，铁是山水的阳光和光线——只要光线依赖着土地。它也是另一种阳光的来源，对我们如今生存的方式来说同样重要，它不是景观的阳光而是住所的。

10.在这个急速流动的时代，我可以断定，大部分听众都去过英格兰以外的地方，如去过苏格兰、法国或瑞士。不管他们对这些国家有什

么样的印象，在他们回到祖国的时候，面对她在其他方面的优势或劣势，他们只能感受到一件事情——她的城镇和乡村舒适的样子。外国的城镇往往是风景如画，非常美丽，但是他们从来没有那种温暖的自足和整体的宁静，就像我们的村庄被绿色的田野环抱的样子。如果你不辞辛劳地去研究这种印象的来源，你会发现，这种温暖和舒适外表很大部分来自砖瓦的深红色。它不属于整洁的建筑——每座整洁的建筑都有一个不舒适的样子——但是它属于暖色调的建筑。我们的村庄装扮着红色的瓦，就像我们的老妇人戴着红色的斗篷。不管斗篷有多温暖或者屋顶有多倾斜，只要它们上面没有洞，只要这个沉静的不会消减的颜色还在头巾的阴影里闪耀，还在山墙的绿色苔藓中燃烧。你觉得是什么染成了你们村舍屋瓦的颜色？不是油漆，是自然为你把可爱的朱红色放进粘土，而可爱的朱红色是铁的氧化物。然后想一想城镇的街道，其中一些已经很丑，但看上去依然很舒适，如果这些房子失去那个温暖的砖红色而变成了胡椒和盐的颜色，想象那时会变成什么样子。想想你们村庄的那个家常的深红色，那个象征了艰苦得来的和平颜色，就好像经历过艰苦战役后战士的红衣一样可爱。而如果所有的村舍屋顶全都变成未经烘烤的粘土的颜色，或者雨季里街道排水沟的颜色——这就是没有铁的话它们会变成的样子。

11.在我们英国的村镇里，颜色还有另外一个作用，也许你自己没有注意到，但是你一定大概听到过。它们不常是温暖的深红色，更多是温暖的紫色，一个更美丽的颜色。它们将这颜色归功于混合了我们威尔士屋顶上板岩的深灰色调或紫色调的朱红色，由空气的干扰而使得颜色变得更蓝。如果你检查一片刚切开的威尔士板岩，你会发现它的紫色是清晰和鲜艳的。尽管在长期暴露以后就不会如此鲜明了，但它总是保留了足够的色彩来提供丰富的搭配，将遥远的紫色与树林和田野的绿色作映照。不管色彩有什么光亮或力量，它总是完全归因于铁的氧化物。没有它，板岩会要么变成苍白石头的颜色，要么是冰冷的灰色或黑色。

12.以上我们只是考虑了铁在普通泥土里的作用和魅力。有三种泥土以混合的质量和普遍的数量，组成了这个世界，以日常语言来说，它们是粘土、石灰土和燧石土。很多其他元素以一定的比例与它们混合，但是地球的大框架和基本内容是由这三种泥土组成的，所以无论你站在坚实大地上的任何地方，在地球上的任何国度，在你脚下的主要物质要么是粘土，要么是石灰土，或者是燧石土与其他两种混合的。

13.这些是我们经常要面对的，自然看上去已经下定决心来尽可能使得这三种物质对我们来说既有趣又美丽。粘土作为一种柔软可变的物质，自然没有花费大力气就能把它烤干了——正如我们看到的一样。只有在获得一个永久的形状时它才会有颜色。自然以自己的方式来给自然状态下的石灰石和燧石上色，她给它们上色的目的就和给花朵上色一样，使得我们粗心和懒惰的人类观察自然，然后看到她在做些什么，她在为我们——她的孩子做好事。自然总是对石灰石和燧石做一些奇怪的事情，在海底安置它们的温床，从海里建造出岛屿，用神奇的珠宝来填充山的裂缝和脉络，硬化苔藓、树木还有贝壳。事实上，大自然做着地下和海底的所有这些事情，对我们来说，看着这一切进行是非常惬意的，我们从中得益并赖此为生。为了引导我们这样做，大自然为我们制作了石灰石和燧石的图画书，就像我们是幼稚的孩子那样诱惑我们，因为它们美丽的颜色而去看她的书。石灰石书的美丽颜色形成了斑驳的大理石，从史前开始，所有的人类都很乐于磨光并且用它来建造房屋。燧石书的美丽颜色形成了玛瑙、碧玉、红玉髓、血石、缟玛瑙、黑水晶、绿玉髓，从史前开始所有的人类都很乐于切割、磨光它们，然后将它们制成饰物。他们多像孩子一样，多喜欢看着图片而不是阅读文字，我怀疑在经过了六千年的切割和磨光后，在一百个人里是否有超过两三个人知道或者想知道，一粒玛瑙或一颗大理石是怎么做出来，又如何被上色的。

14.怎么做出来的？这不是很容易说明白，但是它是如何被上色的

就没有什么疑问了。所有西西里和西班牙的美丽大理石的紫色脉纹和斑驳，锡耶纳的大理石闪耀的橘色和琥珀色，紫罗红的深红褐色，所有丰富了意大利庙宇的珍贵碧玉的血红色，最后，所有苏格兰和莱茵河的鹅卵石色彩的可爱转变，形成了——尽管不是最宝贵的，但——迄今为止是我们现代珠宝匠的工作里最有趣的部分。所有这些都是自然只以一种物质的不同比例和应用来上色的，也就是染污了你们塔布里奇的泉水的铁氧化物。

15.这不是全部，也不是铁最好的功用。大自然出产那些美丽的石头是只供给负担得起采石和磨光的富人的。而大自然上色是为了全世界，无论是穷人还是富人，大自然装饰山脉最深处的岩石，诱惑你们去调查，或者纵情于奢侈。她更仔细地为山脉的外部上色，这是为了愉悦牧羊人和庄稼汉的眼睛。我刚才说到了我们村庄屋顶的紫色石板瓦的作用，但是如果石板哪怕在屋顶上排成扁平正规的一排也是美丽的，那么它们在本地山脉崎岖的山巅和侧面就会更好看了。你有没有想过，当我们讲到遥远的蓝色山丘时，是什么使得它们变成蓝色的？在一定程度上是距离，但是仅有距离是无法造成的，很多山丘不管离得多远，看上去都是白色的。我们威尔士和高地山脉可爱的深紫色并不仅仅是出于距离，而是因为它们的岩石。一些岩石的颜色确实太深了，黑色或者灰色，很不好看，这是由于不完美的多孔结构造成的。当你看到这种深色掺入了红褐色和蓝色，在绿色的蕨类植物里大量出现，呈现那样的紫色时，一开始你很难说清楚这是岩石还是石楠，这时你一定要感谢你的塔布里奇的老朋友，铁氧化物。

16.但这还不是全部。为了山丘的美丽景色，大自然应该不止为她柔软的岩石上色，也要为坚硬的岩石上色。她用同样的物质给它们上色，而且更漂亮。也许你会质疑为何我将紫色这个词如此频繁地运用于岩石上。在对紫色都有着极大尊重的希腊和罗马，很久以前就将紫色用在岩石上了。最宝贵的硬性大石头里，你们都听过斑岩。给予它那个高

贵名字的颜色，就像给予所有埃及蔷薇色的花岗岩以流溢的红色，是的，就像给予阿尔卑斯山脉最富蔷薇色的山巅，也还是要归功于同样的物质——你们认为卑下的铁氧化物。

17.最后，一个比所有这些都要更高贵的颜色，在这个地球上所见的最高贵的颜色，属于一种比埃及花岗岩更大的强度，比落日或玫瑰更美的颜色，依然与这个深色的铁的存在有着神秘的联系。我相信，虽然我们还没有探知血液的深红色到底依赖于什么，但是这个颜色一定与它的生命力有关联，而那个生命力则和铁作为其中一个组成元素的存在有关联。

18.这个严酷、坚固的金属竟然如此微妙地混合在我们人类的生命里，要是没有它我们甚至不能脸红，这个发现难道不神奇吗？想一想，我亲爱的文雅的听众，这个取舍有多可怕：有时你实际上没有选择，要么厚脸皮，要么铁面皮！

19.在这个对铁的一些功用的简短回顾里，你注意到我严格限制在它作为染色元素的活动上。要是我努力描绘它作为实质元素的作用，无论是分解岩石，还是加强岩石硬度、影响植物，我只会混淆你们对于事实的看法，因此我甚至没有提到铁在自然经济中更为重要的作用。但是我希望你们仔细听取的是，回想如果没有空气的话所有这些金属就都一无是处了。纯金属没有力量，而且在自然中也从来不会存在——除了在陨石中，它的坠落是无法预测的，而在坠落之后也就没有用处了。在这个世界上必需的物质里，铁总是和氧气结合在一起，而且一旦没有它的话，铁就失去作用也不再好看了。

20.二、艺术中的铁。现在，从铁在自然中的活动转到它在人类手中的作用。你一定记得在开始时，由无生命的金属展现给你的金属类型，是人类身体和灵魂一起行动的结果，在所有人类能量的活动中都有高贵的原型。所有配得上这个名字的艺术都是能量，既不是只有身体，

也不是只有精神，而是两者的结合，一个指导着另一个。好的手艺和手指的工作与好的情感和心灵的工作相互结合。

21.如果两者没有结合的话，就不可能产生好的艺术，也不可能进行艺术评判，然而我们总是试图将两者分离。业余艺术家不能被说服，他们认为：一方面，没有经过必要辛劳的苦工，仅凭幻想和敏感就能制造出美好的艺术。那是完全没有希望实现的。没有一定数量的劳动，事实上如果没有相当大数量的手工操作——正如学习其他手工技艺一样需要仔细和经常的练习——是不可能画画的。另一方面，工匠及其雇用者仍然试图以手工技巧或习惯来生产艺术品，而不用想象力或敏感来制造艺术。那也是没有希望实现的。心灵的情感如果没有混合着手的力量，艺术是不可能产生的。最高水平的艺术总是以最强烈的程度将两者结合起来：最灵巧的手工和最丰富的心灵。

22.因此，只有通过手的最微妙的触觉以及接收和保持这种触碰的材料，才能产生艺术的最大力量。这只手是宇宙中现有物质力量最完美的中介，它完全的精妙只在它施予的物质完全屈从时才会显现。一个完美的乐器和音会接收它，但是不完美的乐器不会。鹅毛笔柔软弯曲的笔尖以及缓缓融化的颜色可以接收它，但粉笔或钢笔就不会，钢头、凿子或大理石更不会。雕刻家的手的确会像画家的手一样灵巧，但是它的灵巧不是随处适用或表现的，提香、柯勒乔或特纳的风格，是紧张劳作之下的杰作，而非仅通过颜色来表达，或者像音乐中凭借对主旋律的表现来表达。用以加工的物质越不精妙，所需的执行力就越低，艺术性也就越低，这是所有工艺中的一个主要原则。另一个原则是，无论你选择什么物质来加工，如果你没有将这种物质的独特品质表现出来，那么你的艺术性就是低下的。

23.第二条原则的理由是，如果你不需要你所采用的物质的特质，你就应该去采用别的物质。你利用一种陌生的物质，可能只是因为做作

以及想要展现你的技艺的欲望，那么你的艺术就会变得低下。比如玻璃在本质上显然是透明的，如果你不想要这种透明，你就不要用玻璃。不要试图让一扇窗户看上去像一幅不透明的画，如果想要这种效果，你应该在一个不透明的基础物上做画。另外，大理石明显是结实、巨大的物质，除非你想要巨大和结实的特质，不然就不要用大理石。如果你想要轻巧，用木头；想要自由，用灰泥；想要延展，用玻璃。不要试图用大理石来雕刻羽毛、树木、网或者泡沫，请只用它来雕刻洁白的四肢和宽广的胸膛。

24.因此，我再次申明，铁明显是易延展的坚固的物质，比所有物质都坚固，比大部分物质都易于延展。如果你想要坚固以及复杂的形式，就用铁。很明显它是为此而存在的。它是作为大理石的同伴提供给雕刻家的，伴随着一个好像从地球母亲的嘴里随意说出来的讯息：“这是给你们雕刻用的，那是给你们敲打用的。塑造这个，扭曲那个。雕刻结实和简单的，敲打细薄和复杂的。我给你们所有的形式去产生愉悦，摆动的树叶和美好的身体，扭曲的四肢和舒展的额头。你可以通过敲打和扭曲来表现树叶和树枝，身体和额头则需要你细心的点缀，从而形成你所需要的样子。如果你选对了也做对了，你做的一切就应当是安全的。细长的树叶不会折断坚固的铁，尽管它们在铁的衰退期会有一点生锈。宽广的表面不会在纯洁的水晶般的大理石上磨损，它们不会腐朽。如果你用会在碰触中破裂的大理石雕刻，或者用会在锈或铜的污点中腐坏的金属铸造，这就是你的错而不是我的错。”

25.这些就是这一事项上的主要原则，就像在艺术中所有其他正确的原则一样，我们现代人总是乐于尽可能直接和专门地予以反驳。在展览会上我们不断地寻找并赞美以易碎的石头雕刻出来的面纱、蕾丝、细叶和所有尽可能地逼向不可能的事物，只是为了展现雕刻家的灵巧。[6]另一方面，我们将铁制成铁条，尽管有一寸厚但依然易碎，磨利它们的顶端，然后认为围墙和所有由此制成的东西都是可用作装饰的！我相信

单要计算我们英格兰的品位因为这种铁围墙而造成的伤害并非易事。如果有人要求我们用一个特征把乡村的住处分为两个大的分区，将一个分区的人们设定为简单、快乐、善良和诚实的；而另一分区的人们则是世故的、无情的、不自在的和无原则的。我认为有一个特征可以作为明确的评判标准：不自在和无原则的那部分人住在铁栏杆里，而自在和有原则的那部分人则没有铁栏杆的限制。你会说这是泛泛的概括，也许是有一点太宽泛了，但是只要我们足够严肃，就会发现它比你想象的还要正确。想一想其他种类的围墙或栏杆，你会发现它们总有一些优点，但是铁栏杆没有任何优点。首先，石头的城堡城墙，在围墙的范畴里似乎显得有点太宏伟了。其次，花园或公园的砖墙，从外面看上去确实总是一副不友善的样子，但其实它很谦逊。通常它并不意味着建造者想要把你关闭在花园景色之外，而只是想阻止你看到他本人，这是一个坦率的声明，他需要一定时间的独处，所以他需要留给自己一定的空间，当他卷起袖子在那儿锄地，或者和他放学的孩子玩跳蛙游戏，或者和他的妻子聊起旧日时光，在晚霞中漫步时，他不想被盯着看。另外，砖墙也有很好的实用性，为你遮蔽东风，催熟你的桃子和油桃，在秋天里像明媚的堤岸一样发光。再者，砖墙要是建造得宜的话，可以保持相当长的时间，当它变旧了，它庄重的紫红色布满绿色的青苔，就会非常好看。

26.紧靠着高贵的墙壁和围栏的是密密麻麻的木栅栏。它更令人反感，因为它通常意味着比人们想要的还要更大范围的围栏。不过对于舒适的公园和维护得很好的野外小道，牧鹿人和其他此类的贵族式田园生活来说，这依然是有意义的。在一个国家，这里或那里有它们恰当的位置，可以不带任何疑惑地通行。

27.紧接着木栅栏的是矮石堤、山墙，一瞥即可见原始的山野或者土壤下的石床。山篱对于所有的结合都感到愉悦，但更喜欢组成它的松散石头的各种陡峭形状。紧靠着矮石墙的是低地篱，在大片整齐的绿色线上，显示着伊丽莎白时代的老房子的舒适，有便于老年人腿脚的平稳

小路和适于年轻人的离奇迷宫。美丽的野蔷薇和未经使用的凉亭交错，沿着乡村的路边投掷其芳香。在美丽的山间，秋天给孩子可尽情采摘的大丛树莓，冬天给小鸟可供觅食的深红色山楂。最后，在围墙里最难分级的是扶手，它表达了很多的东西。它带着一个会意的邪恶表情，这时它是赛马场上的栏杆；有时是无辜的温和表情，这时它是乡村长满水芹的小溪上的小桥栏杆；有时是谨慎的防卫表情，这时它是阿尔卑斯山脉边线上的栏杆，那里它有花岗岩的标杆和松树的栅栏，护卫着悬崖的顶端和山洪的堤岸。所有这些围栏都有一些好的、愉悦的或者高贵的意义，但是铁栏杆有什么意义？要么你和很坏的人住在一起，你必须要用栏杆的力量把他们隔绝开来，要么你自己就是需要以同样的方式关在里面的人。铁栏杆总是意味着外面有小偷或者里面是疯人院。它只能是这个意思。如果外面的人是好的，只要一点围墙的暗示就足够了，但是因为他们是暴力的并且对你有敌意，你不得不在顶端安上密集的铁棒和长钉。去年夏天我暂居于乡下的一处村舍，在我低矮的窗户前面有雏菊的花床，还有一排鹅莓和醋栗的灌木，然后是一面大约三英尺高的矮墙，覆盖着岩芥菜。外面有一片麦田，绿色的麦穗在阳光下闪耀，有一条小径经过花园大门，穿过田野。我可以从窗户看到乡间的每一个农民经过，他们手上挎着篮子去赶集，或者肩上扛着铲子去种地。当我想要社交的时候我就靠在墙上，然后可以跟任何人说话；当我想要作科学研究的时候，可以沿着墙头作植物研究，光墙头上就长了四种岩芥菜；当我想要锻炼的时候，可以在墙上来来回回地跳。这就是基督教国家应该有的围墙，而不是那种你在里面走却好像是被囚禁的野兽，或者在早晨从窗口往外看却没想到晚上有人被钉在上面的围墙上。

28.此外，请注意铁栏杆是无用的围墙，它不能遮蔽什么，也不能援助什么，你不能把桃子钉在上面，也不能用它来保护花朵，或者从它代价高昂的暴政里生产出什么东西来。它不只是无用，还是粗野的，它公然地对每个经过的人说："也许你是一个诚实的人，但你也有可能是一个小偷，不管你是不是诚实，你都不能到这儿来，因为我是一个远比

你高尚的人，你只能看看我用了多大的一块地方来隔离你，看看这儿，然后谦卑地离去吧。”

29.这是当前文明通常的表述方式，而且在很多地区，铁栏杆很不幸是不可避免的，但是你是否有必要把它弄得那么丑呢，并且带着罪恶的意味呢？在伦敦你必须要在广场周围以及地区的边界上安上栏杆，但你需要安上这么丑的栏杆，以至于它们不变的景观足以中和这片国土上所有艺术院校的积极影响么？不需要这样！不仅远不需要，你甚至可以将所有铁栅栏的警力扭转为绘画大师的杰作及自然历史学家的记录。当然这样做会有一些困难，并且要付出一些代价，但你在这个世界上做任何值得做的事情都会遇到困难，而你想得到任何值得拥有的东西也都需要付出代价。主要的问题只在于什么是值得做的和值得拥有的，想一想，这件事是否值得。你的铁栏杆像一头无知的怪物，一个阴郁的管家，除了永恒的“禁止入内！”“走远些！”不会说其他的。难道不值得花一些力气和费用来把这个不雅的、残忍的门卫变成一个有教养的仆人？当他严厉禁止有恶意的人入内的同时，也学会对善良的人们表示善意。万一过路的向他提问，他会以和善的表情提供他掌握的一些有用的信息。

30.今晚我们没有时间来看铁很多制品的例子，而我碰巧有的例子也不一定是最好的，因为铁制品并不是我研究的专题，所以我只有一些备忘录，有些例子是在我准备其他内容的时候不经意收集的。另外，外用的铁制品要比其他种类的古代艺术还要难找到好作品，因为当它变得生锈和断裂，人们就断定它不再有用，然后把它送到旧铁铺里去，再拿回一个好的新铁器。因为这个原因，在意大利的伟大城市，旧铁几乎全部不在了，在露天里最好的遗存我记得是在布雷西亚，月桂般的叶子的铁制品喷出的神奇水柱从花园大门上升起，在维也纳有一些精妙的断片，围绕着斯卡拉坟墓有一些好的格子棚架，但是总体上，它们的风格并不纯粹。最有意思的作品可以在外省的城镇里找到，在那里人们不关

心铁制品或者无法作适当的改建。比如，在阿尔卑斯山以南、锡安以北的贝林佐纳小镇，在他们的阳台和葡萄园大门上呈现着铁制品的两个完整的学派。贝林佐纳是最好的，尽管不是很旧，我推想大部分是十七世纪的，它依然非常古雅和美丽。比如这里是两栋不同房子的两个阳台，一个是鲜红色的，檐帽是阳台的主要装饰，它的流苏是用愉悦的精细和自由锻造成的，即使在大片茂盛的花叶间也能很清晰地看到。这些流苏和串饰正是适合铁制品表现的主题，高贵的铁制品，在之前提到的地方，它们用大理石来表现的话可能就一点也不高贵了。夹竹桃在窗户前很愉快地丰富了整个建筑物的线条。

31.在同一条街上，一个看上去非常普通的房子的阳台，在细节上要更加有趣。去年夏天在横木上是并置的旋花植物，箭形的真叶混合了铁的叶子……它的中心是一朵大郁金香，然后是两朵头巾百合，然后是两朵抽象化的石竹花，然后是两朵水仙，然后是两朵难以名状的或至少是我不知道的花，然后是两个暗色的花蕾，以及一些叶子。我说暗色的花蕾是因为所有这些花朵都是以它们原初的状态来上色的。这个组合的规划相当简单，全部围绕着一个尖拱，大片的郁金香形成了顶点，每边都有一颗六层的星，然后是不对称的星，然后是五层的星，再然后是对称的星或玫瑰，最后是一个小花蕾，以便在整个组合里建立关联和节奏。整个轮廓非常自由和美好，阳台的上部围栏在效果上相当漂亮，一点儿也没有因为运用的方法极端简单而受到影响。一根细条的铁弯向方形的杆，在这个细条的边缘切了一系列的三角形的口，顶上最宽，放置突出的铁齿。每一个突出的小片均被榔头用力敲打过，向内打碎它的边缘，同时把它撕开一点，然后就完成了。

32.瑞士铁制品的普通形态要比意大利阳台的少一点自然，更多地依靠各种曲线的美丽组合，然而，在弗里堡有一个丰富的自然主义派别，在那儿还保存有铃型把手，由分成月桂和其他树叶的铁棒组成。在日内瓦，现代化改良已经没有留下什么了，但是在安锡还有一些好的作

品。特别是老市政厅的阳台，湖里的鳟鱼——大概是城镇的手臂——形成了它的中心装饰。

33.只要你能坐在这儿听，我可以整晚地细说关于必要主题的处理方法，或者有关老工匠的愉悦的奇思妙想的介绍。但是我们没有多少剩余时间了，我必须停止这个部分的主题，正如如果不进入曲线设计的全套理论，就不能向你们解释铁制品的内在价值一样。希望我留给你们这个清晰的论断，很多自然物品的离奇的美丽和特性，就像错综的树枝、草木、叶子（特别是多刺的树枝和叶子），也像很多动物，羽毛的、尖刺的、刚毛的，只能用铁来实现雕塑的表达，用铁就会达到最大程度的庄严和表现力。你使用的每一件金属品，如果正确加以对待的话，可能不只是极好的装饰，而且也是自然形式的极有价值的概括，它们和植物的画作的关系恰如人的画作和雕像的关系。对于从周围丰富的、扰乱了我们微弱注意力的环境抽象出来的形状极简单的事物，你很难得到一个优雅的、有意思的印象。每一丛植物都会提供五十个这样的组合，每一个组合都能轻易融入铁，（当然是与其作用相匹配的）并带来无限的庄严。

34.三、政治中的铁。我们已经掌握了一些铁在艺术中运用的概念，即依靠它的延展性，我当然不需要再阐述它在制造业和商业上的用处了。关于这些，我们都知道得足够多了，也许有点太多了。因此在最后我要来思考它在政治中的运用，这主要依靠它的坚韧性，也就是说，它能够承受拉扯、迎接刀锋的力量。这些力量使得它可以刺穿、约束和重击，使得它适合做成三种伟大的工具，它的政治行为可被简单地典型化，即犁、脚镣和剑。

35.我们对这三个工具的正确用途的理解，需要依靠我们作为国家的权力和作为个体的幸福感。

36.犁。首先，根据我们对于犁的正确运用的理解，为对我们的劳

动者公平起见，我们必须联系到女性的犁——针。对于一个国家幸福的首要要求是，了解这个世界上两个伟大工具的功能：一个幸福的国家可以被定义为丈夫的手扶着犁，妻子的手拿着针，这样到时候农民就能穿着漂亮的衣服来收获金色的果实；而一个不幸福的国家就是不承认犁或针的作用，最后一定会发现它的仓库空虚、面临饥荒，它的子民赤裸着胸膛受冻。

37.也许你认为这只不过是不言而喻的道理，我在这里重复只是浪费你们的时间。但愿如此。

38.在当下文明的欧洲，很大部分的苦难和罪恶是从不明白这个不言而喻的道理的人们那里产生的。他们不明白，农产品或财富是和天地法则永久地联系起来的，是由不懈的劳动而来的。他们希望以某些方式欺骗或废除这个生命的永恒法则，想在没有耕地的地方得到食物，想在没有编织的地方得到温暖。

39.我重复一下，几乎所有的苦难和罪恶都是从这种误解而来的。自然法则是，必须进行一定量的劳动才能产生一定量的物品，不管其种类如何。如果想要知识，就必须辛苦工作；如果想要食物，必须辛苦工作；想要欢乐，也必须辛苦工作。但是人们不承认这条法则，或者努力逃避它，希望不劳动就能获得知识、食物和欢乐。这样的话，他们要么什么也得不到，并且依然无知和痛苦，要么通过让他人为了自己的利益劳动，以期获得这些东西。这样，他们就成了暴君和强盗。是的，甚至比强盗更糟糕。我绝不是怀疑或争论本世纪在很多对人类有益的事情上的进步，但在我看来，存在着一个黑暗的迹象，即我们以如此的漠然来看待追求财富中的欺诈和残酷。在尼布甲尼撒的梦里，只有脚是半铁半土的，但是现在我们很多人变得如此贪婪和残酷，看上去我们的心好像也是半铁半土的。

40.从我对这个镇上的居民所了解到的情况来看，我不怀疑我可以

在这里被允许做一些在其他地方通常被认为很不恰当和荒唐的事，也就是，援引《圣经》中的一些语句来达到实际的效果。

41.你一定注意到了当人们在日常生活中寻求指导、安慰或帮助的时候，那些最可能被打开的篇章，也就是《诗篇》和《箴言》，这两部分提到了“欺压”穷人的罪行。注意，不是“忽视”他们，而是“压迫”他们：这个词很常见，也很奇怪。你打开这些篇章的任何部分，在某些页上会发现关于坏人企图压迫穷人的描述，比如：“他拉网，就把困苦人掳去。”（《诗篇》10：9）

“他在村庄埋伏等候，他的眼睛窥探无倚无靠的人。”（《诗篇》10：8）

“恶人在骄横中，把困苦人追得火急，他祝福贪财的，却轻慢耶和华。”（《诗篇》10：2）

“他满口是咒骂、诡诈、欺压，他在隐密处杀害无辜的人。作孽的没有知识吗？他们吞吃我的百姓如同吃饭一样？恶人已经弓上弦、刀出鞘，要打倒困苦穷乏的人。”（《诗篇》10：7）

“他们讥笑人，凭恶意说欺压人的话。”（《诗篇》73：8）

“所以骄傲如链子戴在他们的项上。强暴像衣裳遮住他们的身体。”（《诗篇》73：6）

“他们的毒气好像蛇的毒气。你们在地上秤出你们手所行的强暴。”（《诗篇》58）

42.是的，“你们在地上秤出你们手所行的强暴。”也请掂量这些话吧。我们通常最不会想到去掂量的就是圣经里的话。我们喜欢梦想和争论它们，却从来没有想过掂量它们，看看它们真实的内涵是什么。请掂

量一下，因为我已经故意拿来所有这些诗文，也许连起来读，要比分散在诗篇里更惊人，因为对于所有属于这个国家的教会的人们来说，这些诗篇是指定的功课，由他们的牧师分配给他们，每个月都要读一遍。大概无论我们会错过或遗忘圣经的什么部分，在所有情况下，这些诗篇都不断让我们奉行，并作为日常生活的实用性指导。现在，我们还要问自己这些段落的真实含义是什么，这些邪恶的人是谁，谁在"谋杀无辜的人"？你知道这是相当非凡的语言！第一次听到这样的语言，我们也许可以称它有力量。谋杀！谋杀无辜的人！不，甚至是一种同类相食。吃人，是的，而且是上帝的子民，吃我的人民好像他们是面包！弓已上弦，刀已出鞘，蛇毒已调好！手的暴力被掂量、衡量和贩卖，用如此多的货币！这些都发生在哪里？你以为这些都只发生在大卫的时代，除了犹太人没有别人谋杀穷人？如果是这样，不要咕哝着埋怨，与我们无关的日常教训一定是更明智的。如果它可能会有一丝与我们有关，而且如果《诗篇》里关于人类罪行的描述，正如关于人类悲伤的描述是普遍适用的，知道在我们周围犯下，或我们自己会犯下这个罪行，这难道不是明智的么？当我们以公理会的方式念着《圣经》里的话，确定我们只是想吟唱一首动人的关于别人的诗歌——我们不知道到底是给谁的——或者声明我们对负荷着我们自己和我们日常事务的真相的信念。如果你打定主意不再这样做了，并努力调查这件事情，你会发现这些奇怪的语句，并不只是发生在一些地方，而是几乎在《诗篇》《箴言》或《预言》交替的每一章，惊人地反复出现。这不是为一个国家或一个时代所写的，而是为了所有国家和语言，为了所有地方和所有时代。而且对于现在的坏人是如此，就像对于拿八或戴夫斯一样，"他的眼睛窥探无依无靠的人"。

43.请注意，是窥探无依无靠的人。不是将目光从穷人身上移开，也不是忽视或不看他们，而是窥探，也就是折磨和毁灭他们。这就是我想要让你们注意的要点。你经常会听到关于忽视或不关心穷人的布道，但是忽视和不关心完全不是要点。《圣经》几乎从不谈论对于穷人的忽

视，它总是在说对穷人的压迫。这是两件非常不同的事情。它并不仅仅在说从另一边经过，不缝合伤口，而是在说抽出剑然后把人击倒。在传染病隔离医院里，无所事事不开药不会被指控，但是在传染病隔离医院里忙忙碌碌开出很多毒药就会被指控。

44.就在今晚，经过考虑后我们再关注这件事，然后首先要问，这些穷人是谁？

45.没有他们的话，国家就不会存在也将不存在。也就是通常来说，这是一个其劳动只能提供生存、没有任何可观度量的财产积累的阶层。这个阶层有一定数量的人，我们不能很剧烈地去压迫，一个能干、聪明、稳重、诚实、勤劳的工人，总是会为他的工作要求一个合理的价格，积累了几年以后就有足够的财产使得他在劳动市场里好好地把握自己，但不是所有人都是能干的，或者聪明的、或者勤劳的，你不能指望他们都是。对我来说，没有比今天的人们谈论工人的道德方式更可笑和可悲的了。你对一个工人生活的希冀几乎一无所知，却一开始就擅自假定，以一小笔道德资产起始，他将拥有苏格拉底的美德、柏拉图的哲学，及伊巴密浓达的英雄行径。“请保证，我的好人”，你对他说，“如果你终生每天稳定地工作十个小时，如果你除了水别的什么都不喝，或者只喝最淡的啤酒，只吃最简单的食物，从不发脾气，每周日上教堂，始终满足于天命安排给你的位置，从不埋怨，或者咒骂，总是保持你的衣服整洁，起得很早，利用每个机会来改善自己，你会活得很好，永不去教区请求救济。”

46.所有这些都是完全正确的，但是在如此自信地给出建议之前，我们应该自己实际去试一下，花上一年的时间去从事艰难的体力劳动，而不以娱乐的姿态去感受。比如去犁地或耕地，只有相当少的啤酒，主餐只有面包和奶酪，早晨没有报纸也没有松饼，晚上没有沙发也没有杂志，一个小房间用作客厅和厨房，一大帮孩子总是在地板的中央玩耍。

如果我们觉得自己可以在这样的情况下扮演苏格拉底或伊巴密浓达，觉得我们完全满足了，那么我们才有理由要求我们的贫穷邻居有同样的表现。如果不能的话，我们的确应该考虑一下，在对于穷人的各种形式的压迫中，我们是否不应该以高人一等的姿态，来对他们期望太多。

47.但是先把这些放下，承认我们对于压迫稳重、勤劳、聪明、模范的工人从不感到内疚。世界上总有些既不聪明也不模范的人，我相信我们最后应该会发现大部分人都是不怎么聪明的。有些人喜欢闲散，偶尔在星期六的晚上喝醉。我们也必须准备好听到堕落的人在星期天早上喜欢九柱游戏胜过祷告，还有不近人情的父母把孩子送出去乞讨而不让他们去上学。

48.这些就是你可能去压迫的人们，你也确实压迫着他们，而且是故意的。你以更多的残忍和更大的伤害去压迫他们，而他们将自己置于你的权力之下，是他们本身的过错。你知道关于恶人的语句；“他拉网，就把困苦人掳去。”这样被掳去只不过是受难者的过错或愚蠢，是他们自己不注意或者懈怠了，但是他一旦在网里了，对于他的压迫，以及使得他百般苦恼的人，是我们。我们用来反对穷人的网，正是那些世俗的困窘，他们的无知或缺乏远见一定会在某些时候使得他们被俘获。然后就在我们应该赶快帮助他们、解救他们、教他们如何在未来更好地面对的时候，我们却忙着去掠夺他们，尽可能地在他们的逆境中压迫他们。我来举一个例子，请记住，不夸张地来说，这就是我们所做的。每当我们购买或者试图购买便宜的商品，那些价格无法偿付所付出的劳力的商品，每当我们购买这种商品时，请记住我们是在偷窃别人的劳动。我们不要矫揉造作，我以简单的英语来说，“偷窃”就是拿走一个人劳动所应得的报酬，然后放入我们自己的口袋。你很清楚地知道，这件商品不可能以那个价格卖给你，除非生产者迫于贫困而不得不出卖它。你利用了这种贫困，你尽可能地压迫他。中世纪的男爵通常用“拇指夹”来强取财产，我们现代人则更喜欢用饥饿或者家庭苦难，但是强取的实质是

一样的。无论我们是打他的肚子来抢夺财产还是夹他的手指，在解剖学上会有一些不同，但在道德上没有一点不同。我们使用拷问迫使他放弃财产，我们事实上利用了人们自身的焦虑而不是折磨、他挨饿的危险而不是指着头部的手枪。除此之外，我们与恶棍弗兰特·德·贝夫或者路匪迪克·特平的不同仅仅在于我们没有那么灵巧，同时我们更懦弱、更残忍。我说更残忍，因为残暴的男爵和可怕的强盗只是抢夺，至少更喜欢抢夺富人。我们购买自己的制服，给我们的祈祷书镀金，从孩子和病人的薪水里克扣金钱，这就在一定程度上证明了你也是窃贼，但你会通过精心分配来最大可能地消弭因盗窃而来的罪恶感。

49.这只是常见的压迫穷人的一种形式，只是把我们的手从犁头拿开，然后绑上别人的手而已。这样做的第一种方式是经济的方法，一种被谨慎和善良的人们所偏好的方法。大胆的方法是贪得的方法、投机的方法。我们正在思考一个国家自我毁灭的不同模式，其中就有不承认犁头和愉悦的永恒联系，试图不劳而获、免费得到愉悦。我说过最优先和最普通的方法是试着取走别人劳动的果实，然后自己享受，在他们贫困的时候贬低他们的劳动。然而第二种方法是观察市场的机会，投机的方法。当然也有一些投机是公正和诚实的，比如用我们自己的钱进行投机，我们的获利不涉及别人的成败。但是通常来说，现代投机涉及很多别人的风险，而获利的机会只留给我们自己，甚至在最好的情形下它也只是一种赌博或敛财。要么离开平稳的犁和平稳的生命朝圣之旅，寻找路旁的银矿，要么停留在名利场的骰子桌边，在牌落下的时候投注灵魂所有的思想和感情，宁愿等待运气的偶尔光顾，而不是辛苦劳作的平稳和累积的回报——这是非常具有破坏性的，至少对我们的和平与美德来说是如此。这破坏的通常还不只是我们的和平或美德。你有没有设想过估量大交易所的商人或大银行的失败必然导致的苦难、罪恶和死亡？作为最小可能的推测，以最少的量来计算，多少家庭的谋生被牵涉进这场灾难中来？然后，在破产的消息传出的早晨，让我们带着最诚挚的想法走进他们中间，让我们使用那个经常浪费在假想的不幸上的想象，去衡

量大面积贫困的可怕事实。敲开他们的房门，然后安静地融入家庭的悲惨中。看看老人，在生命的晚景，为了他们衰退的精力，保留剩余的休息，无助地退回到烦恼和拥挤中。看看中年人，他们活跃的精力忽然变得虚弱，希望被粉碎，好不容易挣来的报酬也在同一个瞬间被抢走。心立刻枯萎了，右臂突然断掉了。看看可怜的孩子，被精心养育的孩子，柔和的眼睛里充满了对父母的悲痛的好奇，很快也一定会被置于饥饿的阴影中。除此以外，尽管生活艰难困苦，还是渴望能活得超越不幸的长度，现在要么是在不可预期和缺乏经验的激烈尝试中进行，要么更痛苦地从头开始，然后再经历第二次苦难——承认珍贵希望的毁灭和逝去岁月的脆弱。因它所带来的内在情感的不断讽刺和嘲弄而受苦，不是因为特定情形的公平进程，而是悲惨的意外和荒唐的背叛而受苦。最后，透过这一层看看那些在尝试中迟疑的人的混乱命运，他们从新生沦落为绝望。然后想一想，是否将毒药倒入生命的泉水中的手比把毒药倒进杯子或者把匕首插入心脏的手沾染鲜血的罪恶要少一点？我们带着恐惧阅读博尔吉亚或者托法那的罪恶，但博尔吉亚从来没有像现在这样活在我们中间。残忍的女士菲拉拉只在情感的力量中减速，她只因为那些阻碍其目的或惹恼其灵魂的人而略微减速。当她严厉而突然减速时，就会使得她的受害者的命运受苦，没有毁灭的预兆，没有痛苦的延长，最后，她不是不带着悔恨或同情减速。但是我们没有感情的风暴，没有盲目的愤怒，我们以平静的、清晰的、不动心的自私，倾倒我们的毒药，不是只为了一些人，而是为了很多人；不是为了那些错怪或抵抗我们的人，而是为了那些信任和帮助我们的人。我们没有仁慈和无意识地死亡的天赋，而只有饥饿的、缓慢的消耗和失望与绝望的无聊折磨！最终我们实施谋杀，不是以同情的中止或者良心的焦虑，而是带着轻巧的、健忘的、心灵的平静。因此我们一天天自得地读着那些描述恶人的话，仿佛他们只是意味着除我们以外的人："他们嘴里有虺蛇的毒气，他们飞跑去杀人。"

50.也许你会想在这件事情上找很多借口，是因为这个罪孽是相当

无意识的，所以当这个罪孽没有被领会的时候就不是那么大。这样就使无心的杀害比自觉的杀害更可原谅。我认为这种感觉是完全错误的。事实上，在天堂的景观里，这种以生命的代价来追求自己利益的麻木和漠不关心，尽管没有明确地出于罪恶的目的，也是一种比不受约束的情感中最野蛮的越轨要更可憎、更绝望的精神状态。在最后的情况下，个性里可能会混合着一些好的和想要弥补的元素，但是在其他情况下，这种元素还很少甚至没有。在愤怒中杀了仇敌的人也许有希望，甚至在恐惧中背叛了朋友的人也有希望，但是以被疏忽的血来交易，将财富建立在毫无悔悟的背叛上的人就完全没有希望。

51.尽管可能是这样的，尽管你以公正约束自己以归罪于更大的罪孽，要确定问题只是责任之一，而不是事实。我们现代人匆忙致富的必然结果一定是而且经常是：每年由我们亲手谋杀一定数量的人。我没有时间细说，总体来说，我们造成穷人毁灭的最广泛、最可怕的方式，即奢侈和浪费的方式，不知节制地破坏了原本可以供养几千人的东西。如果你自己在家遵循节约，或者以后你决定这样做，今晚我努力在你面前呈现的才是对你有用的。你会发现，无论何时何地人们尽力匆忙地挣钱，而且尽力避开天命指定的体面收益的唯一来源——劳动，而且无论何时何地他们允许自己奢侈地花费，没有考虑到他们如何误导了别人的劳动，在这两种情况下，实际上他们都确实因为自己的利益或愉悦而导致了一定数目的年度死亡人数。因此，这世上每一个人所面临的选择，简单来说就是他会变成一个劳动者还是一名刺客，也就是他会把手放在犁的扶手上，就是把手放在匕首的柄上。

52.对我来说，今晚试图循着思路讲述铁在脚镣和剑上的伟大政治作用也是徒然的，我只在这两方面略述几句。

53.脚镣。正如犁是辛勤劳动的典型工具一样，脚镣对于一个国家来说是必需的束缚和征服的典型工具。要么从字面上理解是限制为恶

者；要么在既定的法律里、从比喻意义上理解，是限制为善者。你必须从比喻和字面的意义上进行选择，据此，你遵循的法律越多，你要经受的处罚就越少。对于一个高尚的国家来说，明智的法律和公正的约束不是锁链而是锁子甲，是力量和防御，尽管同时也是一种职责。请记住，对于人的体面来说，我们需要这种约束，就像需要劳动一样。你每天听到很多愚蠢的人谈论自由，好像它是一件异常体面的事情。事实远非如此，总体上而且在最广泛的意义上，它是一件不体面的事情，而且是低等生物的特性。不管多么伟大或强势的人，都不可能像鱼儿那么自由。总有一些是他必须去做或者决不能做的，而鱼可以做任何想做的事。地球上所有的王国拼起来都没有海洋的一半大，所有已有或将有的铁路和轮子，都没有鱼鳍那样安逸轻便。只要好好地想一想，你会发现人类的可敬之处是束缚而不是自由。而且，即使对于低等动物而言，束缚也是可敬的。蝴蝶要比蜜蜂自由得多，但是你更尊敬蜜蜂，就因为它服从一些适合蜜蜂社会的有序运作法则。在整个世界上，自由和束缚两个抽象的事物之中，束缚总是更可敬的。确实，在这些和所有其他的事情上，你从来无法从抽象中得出判断，因为当高尚地作出选择的时候，自由和束缚就都是好的，而当卑鄙地作出选择时就都是坏的。我重复一下，在这两者中，束缚才是高等生物的特征，而且也能使得低等生物变得更好。从天使长的照拂到昆虫的劳作，从行星的平衡到尘埃的引力，所有生物、所有物质的力量和光荣都存在于他们的服从里，而不是在他们的自由中。太阳没有自由，一片枯叶有很多自由。形成你的尘埃没有自由，但它的自由会到来——连同它的腐朽一起。

54.因此，尽管在英格兰这样说有点奇怪，我还是要公然宣称，一个国家的首要权力在于知道如何引导犁，第二项权力在于知道如何使用脚镣。

55.剑。这是它的第三个权力，知道如何挥舞宝剑而使国家变得完美。这样国家的三个护身符就可以用三个简短的词来表达：劳动、法律

和勇气。

56.我们至少拥有最后一个美德，所有不利于我们的宣称是说我们不够尊敬它。不是指尊敬它在服务上的意义，尽管有时候我们甚至连这个也怠慢了，但是我们像对战士的生活和精神始终如一的关注那样去尊敬它。你在最近的病亡报告里已经看到，我们是如何放纵地浪费了他们的生命，而其实只需很少的医护和科学知识就足以防止其发生，但是我们甚至更少关注他们的精神世界，把他们保持在无知和闲散的状态里，只把他们看作是战争的工具。关于维护一支正常军队的争论，经常只谈及在意外战争情况下的权宜之计，而维护一支军队的主要原因之一则是军事系统作为一种教育方式是有优势的。在下等和上等阶层里，最暴躁、最任性的同时也往往是最有天分、最慷慨的年轻人，总是有种将自己看作是士兵的倾向。其他公民能力虚弱、不堪服役的人，在偶然的机会下被诱惑或骗入军队。面对这种暴躁和粗鲁的材质，只有战士的纪律才能带来完整的价值和力量。即使现在，仅仅依靠命令和权威的力量，军队仍是拯救无数人的地方，在其他情况下会变得倦怠和散逸的人们，会因为一种能立刻振奋和引导其精力的服务而恢复高贵的生命。除此以外军事教育还能做什么，这点只有在你把它真正变成教育体制的时候才会发现。我们没有借口听任我们的士兵停留在如今无知而缺乏修养的水平上，因为我们常常发现，官员和士兵里最文雅和见多识广的，恰恰也是最英勇的。在今天的政治局势下，或者我相信在任何与之关联的、在这个世界上很多年后会变成可能的情形下，我们都没有借口缩减我们的军队。

57.我这样说你可能会感到吃惊，也许惊讶于我暗示战争本身可能是正确的，或者是必需的，甚至是高贵的。我不是说所有的战争都是必需的，或者所有的战争都是高贵的。和平与战争都是根据它们的种类和场合来区分高贵和无知的。没有人比我对不名誉战争的恐怖和罪恶有更深刻的感觉了。我亲眼看到它对国家的影响，对于精神和肉体的十足罪

恶，我与那些你在和平时期不断听到的高谈阔论的人一样抱有相同的同情和愤慨，但是和平可以通过两种方法找到，一个是犹太勇士基甸的方法，他在俄弗拉建立他的圣坛，命名为“上帝送来和平”，然后寻找他所热爱的和平。因为他是受命去寻找和平，然后和平就以上帝的方式送来了，“在基甸的时代这个国家和平了四十年。”另一个寻找和平的方法是米拿现的方法，他给亚述国王一千个银币，使得“他的手可以和他在一起”，也就是你要么可以赢得和平，要么买得和平。赢得，是凭借对罪恶的抵抗；买得，是对罪恶的妥协。你可以用沉默的良心来买到和平，可以用打破的誓约来买，用谎言来买，用卑下的纵容来买，用残杀的鲜血来买，用俘虏的哭喊来买，用迷失灵魂的沉默来买。越过地球的半球，当你笑着坐在宁静的火炉边，清晨黄昏默念着舒适的祷告，数着你漂亮的新教珠子（是扁平的、金子的，而不是像僧侣的那种圆的、乌木的），不断地喃喃自语，“和平，和平”，但其实并没有和平，对你和所有你不去拯救的人来说，只有囚禁和死亡，而你的世界要比他们的更黑暗。

在这件事情上我不会向你们发表看法，我们都看得太模糊了，然而我们伟大世界的职责是什么？没有人清楚，因此难以对其扩大的阴影进行概括，但是再考虑一下我说过的话，今晚你回到你安静的家时，反思一下，和平不是由你亲手赢得的，而是由很久以前为了你和他们的后代而牺牲了自己生命的人换来的。请记住，这个继承来的和平或其他形式的和平只有通过相同的危险才能得以维护。和平不可能通过借口或协议从命运中赢得；和平不是为了我们任何人而准备的，我们应该通过战胜耻辱或罪恶来赢得，通过战胜压迫的罪恶来赢得，通过战胜腐败来赢得。在未来的很多年里，每个正义国家都必须将剑锋磨利以实现拯救或征服。和平不是通过其他人对苦难的忍耐而赢得，而是通过你自己的奉献而赢得，因而你会接近地球上的铁经历重大变革的时代——人类将他们的剑锤炼成犁，将他们的矛锤炼成修枝刀的时代。此后他们也就不再需要了解战争了。

[1]原注：即《威尼斯之石》。

[2]译者注：尼尼微，西亚古城。意为“上帝面前最伟大的城市”，其址位于伊拉克的北部，底格里斯河的东岸，隔河与今天的摩苏尔城相望。圣经中曾提到尼尼微城名：“耶和华必伸手攻击北方，毁灭亚述，使尼尼微荒芜，干旱如旷野。”

[3]原注：很多人都认为英国不列颠博物馆所藏古希腊大理石雕刻是“完美”的。在最重要的部分它们确实接近完美，但也不过如此。帷幔没有完工，动物的毛发没有完工，整个檐壁的浮雕是粗制滥造的。

[4]原注：最好的艺术或者表现所处时代的事实，或者，如果是表现过去的事实，就以作品所产生的时代的附属品来表达。因而所有表现过去事件的好的艺术，都充满了最明显的时代错误，而且总是应该如此。画家没有必要成为文物研究者。我们不想要他的印象或想象去尊重过去的事物，我们要他清晰的断言来尊重现代的事物。

[5]原注：金

[6]原注：我并不是想要责备那些为了特定表现目的而以大理石来表现树叶的努力。蒙罗先生的晚期作品中某些最微妙的思想就依赖于对这种配件的精致和灵巧的运用。通常情况下，树叶雕刻是好的、令人赞赏的，如果它像在哥特作品里那样通过光与影的安排来呈现叶子的优雅和轻盈——通过底下石头的力量很好地支撑了主体。但是所有以细致为目的的雕刻，试图模仿稀薄和纤弱事物的纯粹细薄，就像很多现代的木雕作品那样，都是劣等的。一两年前，我在意大利看到过一个以鸟巢为主题的大理石雕塑。

John Ruskin

On Art and Life

PENGUIN BOOKS — GREAT IDEAS

Contents

The Nature of Gothic

1. IF the reader will look back to the division of our subject which was made in the first chapter of the first volume,[1] he will find that we are now about to enter upon the examination of that school of Venetian architecture which forms an intermediate step between the Byzantine and Gothic forms; but which I find may be conveniently considered in its connexion with the latter style. In order that we may discern the tendency of each step of this change, it will be wise in the outset to endeavour to form some general idea of its final result. We know already what the Byzantine architecture is from which the transition was made, but we ought to know something of the Gothic architecture into which it led. I shall endeavour therefore to give the reader in this chapter an idea, at once broad and definite, of the true nature of Gothic architecture, properly so called; not of that of Venice only, but of universal Gothic: for it will be one of the most interesting parts of our subsequent inquiry to find out how far Venetian architecture reached the universal or perfect type of Gothic, and how far it either fell short of it, or assumed foreign and independent forms.

2. The principal difficulty in doing this arises from the fact that every building of the Gothic period differs in some important respect from every other; and many include features which, if they occurred in other buildings, would not be considered Gothic at all; so that all we have to reason upon is merely, if I may be allowed so to express it, a greater or less degree of Gothicness in each building we examine. And it is this Gothicness, — the character which, according as it is found more or less in a building, makes it more or less Gothic, — of which I want to define the nature; and I feel the same kind of difficulty in doing so which would be encountered by any one who undertook to explain, for instance, the nature of Redness, without any actually red thing to point to, but only orange and purple things. Suppose he had only a piece of heather and a dead oak-leaf to do it with. He might say, the colour which is mixed with the yellow in this oak-leaf, and with the blue in this heather, would be red, if you had it separate; but it would be difficult, nevertheless, to make the abstraction perfectly intelligible; and it is so in a far greater degree to make the abstraction of the Gothic character intelligible, because that character itself is made up of many mingled ideas, and can consist only in their union. That is to say, pointed arches do not constitute Gothic, nor vaulted roofs, nor flying buttresses, nor grotesque sculptures; but all or some of these things, and many other things with them, when they come together so as to have life.

3. Observe also, that, in the definition proposed, I shall only endeavour to analyze the idea which I suppose already to exist in the reader's mind. We all have some notion, most of us a very determined one, of the meaning of the term Gothic, but I know that many persons have this idea in their minds without being able to define it: that is to say, understanding generally that Westminster Abbey is Gothic, and St Paul's is not, that Strasburg Cathedral is Gothic, and St Peter's is not, they have, nevertheless, no clear notion of what it is that they recognize in the one or miss in the other, such as would enable them to say how far the work at Westminster or Strasburg is good and pure of its kind; still less to say of any nondescript building, like St James's Palace or Windsor Castle, how much right Gothic element there is in it, and how much wanting. And I believe this inquiry to be a pleasant and profitable one; and that there will be found something more than usually interesting in tracing out this grey, shadowy, many-pinnacled image of the Gothic spirit within us; and discerning what fellowship there is between it and our Northern hearts. And if, at any point of the inquiry, I should interfere with any of the reader's previously formed conceptions, and use the term Gothic in any sense which he would not willingly attach to it, I do not ask him to accept, but only to examine and understand, my interpretation, as necessary to the intelligibility of what follows in the rest of the work.

4. We have, then, the Gothic character submitted to our analysis, just as the rough mineral is submitted to that of the chemist, entangled with many other foreign substances, itself perhaps in no place pure, or ever to be obtained or seen in purity for more than an instant; but nevertheless a thing of definite and separate nature, however inextricable or confused in appearance. Now observe: the chemist defines his mineral by two separate kinds of character; one external, its crystalline form, hardness, lustre, etc.; the other internal, the proportions and nature of its constituent atoms. Exactly in the same manner, we shall find that Gothic architecture has external forms and internal elements. Its elements are certain mental tendencies of the builders, legibly expressed in it; as fancifulness, love of variety, love of richness, and such others. Its external forms are pointed arches, vaulted roofs, etc. And unless both the elements and the forms are there, we have no right to call the style Gothic. It is not enough that it has the Form, if it have not also the power and life. It is not enough that it has the Power, if it have not the form. We must therefore inquire into each of these characters successively; and determine first, what is the Mental Expression, and secondly, what the Material Form of Gothic architecture, properly so called.

5. 1st Mental Power of Expression. What characters, we have to discover, did the Gothic builders love, or instinctively express in their work, as distinguished from all other builders?

6. Let us go back for a moment to our chemistry, and note that, in defining a mineral by its constituent parts, it is not one nor another of them, that can make up the mineral, but the union of all: for instance, it is neither in charcoal, nor in oxygen, nor in lime, that there is the making of chalk, but in the combination of all three in certain measures; they are all found in very different things from chalk, and there is nothing like chalk either in charcoal or in oxygen, but they are nevertheless necessary to its existence.

7. So in the various mental characters which make up the soul of Gothic. It is not one nor another that produces it; but their union in certain measures. Each one of them is found in many other architectures beside Gothic; but Gothic cannot exist where they are not found, or, at least, where their place is not in some way supplied. Only there is this great difference between the composition of the mineral and of the architectural style, that if we withdraw one of its elements from the stone, its form is utterly changed, and its existence as such and such a mineral is destroyed; but if we withdraw one of its mental elements from the Gothic style, it is only a little less Gothic than it was before, and the union of two or three of its elements is enough already to bestow a certain Gothicness of character, which gains in intensity as we add the others, and loses as we again withdraw them.

8. I believe, then, that the characteristic or moral elements of Gothic are the following, placed in the order of their importance:

1. Savageness.
2. Changefulness.
3. Naturalism.
4. Grotesqueness.
5. Rigidity.
6. Redundance.

9. These characters are here expressed as belonging to the building; as belonging to the builder, they would be expressed thus: — 1. Savageness or Rudeness. 2. Love of Change. 3. Love of Nature. 4. Disturbed Imagination. 5. Obstinacy. 6. Generosity. And I repeat, that the withdrawal of any one, or any two, will not at once destroy the Gothic character of a building, but the removal of a majority of them will. I shall proceed to examine them in their order.

10. SAVAGENESS. I am not sure when the word 'Gothic' was first generically applied to the architecture of the North; but I presume that, whatever the date of its original usage, it was intended to imply reproach, and express the barbaric character of the nations among whom that architecture arose. It never implied that they were literally of Gothic lineage, far less that their architecture had been originally invented by the Goths themselves; but it did imply that they and their buildings together exhibited a degree of sternness and rudeness, which, in contradistinction to the character of Southern and Eastern nations, appeared like a perpetual reflection of the contrast between the Goth and the Roman in their first encounter. And when that fallen Roman, in the utmost impotence of his luxury, and insolence of his guilt, became the model for the imitation of civilized Europe, at the close of the so-called Dark ages, the word Gothic became a term of unmitigated contempt, not unmixed with aversion. From that contempt, by the exertion of the antiquaries and architects of this century, Gothic architecture has been sufficiently vindicated; and perhaps some among us, in our admiration of the magnificent science of its structure, and sacredness of its expression, might desire that the term of ancient reproach should be withdrawn, and some other, of more apparent honourableness, adopted in its place. There is no chance, as there is no need, of such a substitution. As far as the epithet was used scornfully, it was used falsely; but there is no reproach in the word, rightly understood; on the contrary, there is a profound truth, which the instinct of mankind almost unconsciously recognizes. It is true, greatly and deeply true, that the architecture of the North is rude and wild; but it is not true, that, for this reason, we are to condemn it, or despise. Far otherwise: I believe it is in this very character that it deserves our profoundest reverence.

11. The charts of the world which have been drawn up by modern science have thrown into a narrow space the expression of a vast amount of knowledge, but I have never yet seen any one pictorial enough to enable the spectator to imagine the kind of contrast in physical character which exists between Northern and Southern countries. We know the differences in detail, but we have not that broad glance and grasp which would enable us to feel them in their fulness. We know that gentians grow on the Alps, and olives on the Apennines; but we do not enough conceive for ourselves that variegated mosaic of the world's surface which a bird sees in its migration, that difference between the district of the gentian and of the olive which the stork and the swallow see far off, as they lean upon the sirocco wind. Let us, for a moment, try to raise ourselves even above the level of their flight, and imagine the Mediterranean lying beneath us like an irregular lake, and all its ancient promontories sleeping in the sun: here and there an angry spot of thunder, a grey stain of storm, moving upon the burning field; and here and there a fixed wreath of white volcano smoke, surrounded by its circle of ashes; but for the most part a great peacefulness of light, Syria and Greece, Italy and Spain, laid like pieces of a golden pavement into the sea-blue, chased, as we stoop nearer to them, with bossy beaten work of mountain chains, and glowing softly with terraced gardens, and flowers heavy with frankincense, mixed among masses of laurel, and orange, and plumy palm, that abate with their grey-green shadows the burning of the marble rocks, and of the ledges of porphyry sloping under lucent sand. Then let us pass farther towards the north, until we see the orient colours change gradually into a vast belt of rainy green, where the pastures of Switzerland, and poplar valleys of France, and dark forests of the Danube and Carpathians stretch from the mouths of the Loire to those of the Volga, seen through clefts in grey swirls of rain-cloud and flaky veils of the mist of the brooks, spreading low along the pasture lands: and then, farther north still, to see the earth heave into mighty masses of leaden rock and heathy moor, bordering with a broad waste of gloomy purple that belt of field and wood, and splintering into irregular and grisly islands amidst the northern seas, beaten by storm, and chilled by ice-drift, and tormented by furious pulses of contending tide, until the roots of the last forests fail from among the hill ravines, and the hunger of the north wind bites their peaks into barrenness; and, at last, the wall of ice, durable like iron, sets, deathlike, its white teeth against us out of the polar twilight. And, having once traversed in thought this gradation of the zoned iris of the earth in all its material vastness, let us go down nearer to it, and watch the parallel change in the belt of animal life; the multitudes of swift and brilliant creatures that glance in the air and sea, or tread the sands of the southern zone; striped zebras and spotted leopards, glistening serpents, and birds arrayed in purple and scarlet. Let us contrast their delicacy and brilliancy of colour, and swiftness of motion, with the frost-cramped strength, and shaggy covering, and dusky plumage of the northern tribes; contrast the Arabian horse with the Shetland, the tiger and leopard with the wolf and bear, the antelope with the elk, the bird of paradise with the osprey; and then, submissively acknowledging the great laws by which the earth and all that it bears are ruled throughout their being, let us not condemn, but rejoice in the expression by man of his own rest in the statutes of the lands that gave him birth. Let us watch him with reverence as he sets side by side the burning gems, and smooths with soft sculpture the jasper pillars, that are to reflect a ceaseless sunshine, and rise into a cloudless sky: but not with less reverence let us stand by him, when, with rough strength and hurried stroke, he smites an uncouth animation out of the rocks which he has torn from among the moss of the moorland, and heaves into the darkened air the pile of iron buttress and rugged wall, instinct with work of an imagination as wild and wayward as the northern sea; creatures of ungainly shape and rigid limb, but full of wolfish life; fierce as the winds that beat, and changeful as the clouds that shade them.

12. There is, I repeat, no degradation, no reproach in this, but all dignity and honourableness: and we should err grievously in refusing either to recognize as an essential character of the existing architecture of the North, or to admit as a desirable character in that which it yet may be, this wildness of thought, and roughness of work; this look of mountain brotherhood between the cathedral and the Alp; this magnificence of sturdy power, put forth only the more energetically because the fine finger-touch was chilled away by the frosty wind, and the eye dimmed by the moor-mist, or blinded by the hail; this outspeaking of the strong spirit of men who may not gather redundant fruitage from the earth, nor bask in dreamy benignity of sunshine, but must break the rock for bread, and cleave the forest for fire, and show, even in what they did for their delight, some of the hard habits of the arm and heart that grew on them as they swung the axe or pressed the plough.

13. If, however, the savageness of Gothic architecture, merely as an expression of its origin among Northern nations, may be considered, in some sort, a noble character, it possesses a higher nobility still, when considered as an index, not of climate, but of religious principle.

14. In the 13th and 14th paragraphs of Chapter XXI of the first volume of this work, it was noticed that the systems of architectural ornament, properly so called, might be divided into three: — 1. Servile ornament, in which the execution or power of the inferior workman is entirely subjected to the intellect of the higher; — 2. Constitutional ornament, in which the executive inferior power is, to a certain point, emancipated and independent, having a will of its own, yet confessing its inferiority and rendering obedience to higher powers; — and 3. Revolutionary ornament, in which no executive inferiority is admitted at all. I must here explain the nature of these divisions at somewhat greater length.

15. Of Servile ornament, the principal schools are the Greek, Ninevite, and Egyptian; but their servility is of different kinds. The Greek master workman was far advanced in knowledge and power above the Assyrian or Egyptian. Neither he nor those for whom he worked could endure the appearance of imperfection in anything; and, therefore, what ornament he appointed to be done by those beneath him was composed of mere geometrical forms, — balls, ridges, and perfectly symmetrical foliage, — which could be executed with absolute precision by line and rule, and were as perfect in their way, when completed, as his own figure sculpture. The Assyrian and Egyptian, on the contrary, less cognisant of accurate form in anything, were content to allow their figure sculpture to be executed by inferior workmen, but lowered the method of its treatment to a standard which every workman could reach, and then trained him by discipline so rigid, that there was no chance of his falling beneath the standard appointed. The Greek gave to the lower workman no subject which he could not perfectly execute. The Assyrian gave him subjects which he could only execute imperfectly, but fixed a legal standard for his imperfection. The workman was, in both systems, a slave.

16. But in the mediæval, or especially Christian, system of ornament, this slavery is done away with altogether; Christianity having recognized, in small things as well as great, the individual value of every soul. But it not only recognizes its value; it confesses its imperfection, in only bestowing dignity upon the acknowledgment of unworthiness. That admission of lost power and fallen nature, which the Greek or Ninevite felt to be intensely painful, and, as far as might be, altogether refused, the Christian makes daily and hourly, contemplating the fact of it without fear, as tending, in the end, to God's greater glory. Therefore, to every spirit which Christianity summons to her service, her exhortation is: Do what you can, and confess frankly what you are unable to do; neither let your effort be shortened for fear of failure, nor your confession silenced for fear of shame. And it is, perhaps, the principal admirableness of the Gothic schools of architecture, that they thus receive the results of the labour of inferior minds; and out of fragments full of imperfection, and betraying that imperfection in every touch, indulgently raise up a stately and unaccusable whole.

17. But the modern English mind has this much in common with that of the Greek, that it intensely desires, in all things, the utmost completion or perfection compatible with their nature. This is a noble character in the abstract, but becomes ignoble when it causes us to forget the relative dignities of that nature itself, and to prefer the perfectness of the lower nature to the imperfection of the higher; not considering that as, judged by such a rule, all the brute animals would be preferable to man, because more perfect in their functions and kind, and yet are always held inferior to him, so also in the works of man, those which are more perfect in their kind are always inferior to those which are, in their nature, liable to more faults and shortcomings. For the finer the nature, the more flaws it will show through the clearness of it; and it is a law of this universe, that the best things shall be seldomest seen in their best form. The wild grass grows well and strongly, one year with another; but the wheat is, according to the greater nobleness of its nature, liable to the bitterer blight. And therefore, while in all things that we see or do, we are to desire perfection, and strive for it, we are nevertheless not to set the meaner thing, in its narrow accomplishment, above the nobler thing, in its mighty progress; not to esteem smooth minuteness above shattered majesty; not to prefer mean victory to honourable defeat; not to lower the level of our aim, that we may the more surely enjoy the complacency of success. But, above all, in our dealings with the souls of other men, we are to take care how we check, by severe requirement or narrow caution, efforts which might otherwise lead to a noble issue; and, still more, how we withhold our admiration from great excellencies, because they are mingled with rough faults. Now, in the make and nature of every man, however rude or simple, whom we employ in manual labour, there are some powers for better things; some tardy imagination, torpid capacity of emotion, tottering steps of thought, there are, even at the worst; and in most cases it is all our own fault that they are tardy or torpid. But they cannot be strengthened, unless we are content to take them in their feebleness, and unless we prize and honour them in their imperfection above the best and most perfect manual skill. And this is what we have to do with all our labourers; to look for the thoughtful part of them, and get that out of them, whatever we lose for it, whatever faults and errors we are obliged to take with it. For the best that is in them cannot manifest itself, but in company with much error. Understand this clearly: You can teach a man to draw a straight line, and to cut one; to strike a curved line, and to carve it; and to copy and carve any number of given lines or forms, with admirable speed and perfect precision; and you find his work perfect of its kind: but if you ask him to think about any of those forms, to consider if he cannot find any better in his own head, he stops; his execution becomes hesitating; he thinks, and ten to one he thinks wrong; ten to one he makes a mistake in the first touch he gives to his work as a thinking being. But you have made a man of him for all that. He was only a machine before, an animated tool.

18. And observe, you are put to stern choice in this matter. You must either make a tool of the creature, or a man of him. You cannot make both. Men were not intended to work with the accuracy of tools, to be precise and perfect in all their actions. If you will have that precision out of them, and make their fingers measure degrees like cog-wheels, and their arms strike curves like compasses, you must unhumanize them. All the energy of their spirits must be given to make cogs and compasses of themselves. All their attention and strength must go to the accomplishment of the mean act. The eye of the soul must be bent upon the finger-point, and the soul's force must fill all the invisible nerves that guide it, ten hours a day, that it may not err from its steely precision, and so soul and sight be worn away, and the whole human being be lost at last — a heap of sawdust, so far as its intellectual work in this world is concerned: saved only by its Heart, which cannot go into the form of cogs and compasses, but expands, after the ten hours are over, into fireside humanity. On the other hand, if you will make a man of the working creature, you cannot make a tool. Let him but begin to imagine, to think, to try to do anything worth doing; and the engine-turned precision is lost at once. Out come all his roughness, all his dulness, all his incapability; shame upon shame, failure upon failure, pause after pause: but out comes the whole majesty of him also; and we know the height of it only when we see the clouds settling upon him. And, whether the clouds be bright or dark, there will be transfiguration behind and within them.

19. And now, reader, look round this English room of yours, about which you have been proud so often, because the work of it was so good and strong, and the ornaments of it so finished. Examine again all those accurate mouldings, and perfect polishings, and unerring adjustments of the seasoned wood and tempered steel. Many a time you have exulted over them, and thought how great England was, because her slightest work was done so thoroughly. Alas! if read rightly, these perfectnesses are signs of a slavery in our England a thousand times more bitter and more degrading than that of the scourged African, or helot Greek. Men may be beaten, chained, tormented, yoked like cattle, slaughtered like summer flies, and yet remain in one sense, and the best sense, free. But to smother their souls with them, to blight and hew into rotting pollards the suckling branches of their human intelligence, to make the flesh and skin which, after the worm's work on it, is to see God, into leathern thongs to yoke machinery with, — this is to be slave-masters indeed; and there might be more freedom in England, though her feudal lords' lightest words were worth men's lives, and though the blood of the vexed husbandman dropped in the furrows of her fields, than there is while the animation of her multitudes is sent like fuel to feed the factory smoke, and the strength of them is given daily to be wasted into the fineness of a web, or racked into the exactness of a line.

20. And, on the other hand, go forth again to gaze upon the old cathedral front, where you have smiled so often at the fantastic ignorance of the old sculptors: examine once more those ugly goblins, and formless monsters, and stern statues, anatomiless and rigid; but do not mock at them, for they are signs of the life and liberty of every workman who struck the stone; a freedom of thought, and rank in scale of being, such as no laws, no charters, no charities can secure; but which it must be the first aim of all Europe at this day to regain for her children.

21. Let me not be thought to speak wildly or extravagantly. It is verily this degradation of the operative into a machine, which, more than any other evil of the times, is leading the mass of the nations everywhere into vain, incoherent, destructive struggling for a freedom of which they cannot explain the nature to themselves. Their universal outcry against wealth, and against nobility, is not forced from them either by the pressure of famine, or the sting of mortified pride. These do much, and have done much in all ages; but the foundations of society were never yet shaken as they are at this day. It is not that men are ill fed, but that they have no pleasure in the work by which they make their bread, and therefore look to wealth as the only means of pleasure. It is not that men are pained by the scorn of the upper classes, but they cannot endure their own; for they feel that the kind of labour to which they are condemned is verily a degrading one, and makes them less than men. Never had the upper classes so much sympathy with the lower, or charity for them, as they have at this day, and yet never were they so much hated by them: for, of old, the separation between the noble and the poor was merely a wall built by law; now it is a veritable difference in level of standing, a precipice between upper and lower grounds in the field of humanity, and there is pestilential air at the bottom of it. I know not if a day is ever to come when the nature of right freedom will be understood, and when men will see that to obey another man, to labour for him, yield reverence to him or to his place, is not slavery. It is often the best kind of liberty, — liberty from care. The man who says to one, Go, and he goeth, and to another, Come, and he cometh, has, in most cases, more sense of restraint and difficulty than the man who obeys him. The movements of the one are hindered by the burden on his shoulder; of the other by the bridle on his lips: there is no way by which the burden may be lightened; but we need not suffer from the bridle if we do not champ at it. To yield reverence to another, to hold ourselves and our likes at his disposal, is not slavery; often it is the noblest state in which a man can live in this world. There is, indeed, a reverence which is servile, that is to say, irrational or selfish: but there is also noble reverence, that is to say, reasonable and loving; and a man is never so noble as when he is reverent in this kind; nay, even if the feeling pass the bounds of mere reason, so that it be loving, a man is raised by it. Which had, in reality, most of the serf nature in him, — the Irish peasant who was lying in wait yesterday for his landlord, with his musket muzzle thrust through the ragged hedge; or that old mountain servant, who 200 years ago, at Inverkeithing, gave up his own life and the lives of his seven sons for his chief? — as each fell, calling forth his brother to the death, 'Another for Hector!' And therefore, in all ages and all countries, reverence has been paid and sacrifice made by men to each other, not only without complaint, but rejoicingly; and famine, and peril, and sword, and all evil, and all shame, have been borne willingly in the causes of masters and kings; for all these gifts of the heart ennobled the men who gave, not less than the men who received them, and nature prompted, and God rewarded the sacrifice. But to feel their souls withering within them, unthanked, to find their whole being sunk into an unrecognized abyss, to be counted off into a heap of mechanism numbered with its wheels, and weighed with its hammer strokes — this, nature bade not, — this, God blesses not, — this, humanity for no long time is able to endure.

22. We have much studied and much perfected, of late, the great civilized invention of the division of labour; only we give it a false name. It is not, truly speaking, the labour that is divided; but the men: — Divided into mere segments of men — broken into small fragments and crumbs of life; so that all the little piece of intelligence that is left in a man is not enough to make a pin, or a nail, but exhausts itself in making the point of a pin or the head of a nail. Now it is a good and desirable thing, truly, to make many pins in a day; but if we could only see with what crystal sand their points were polished, — sand of human soul, much to be magnified before it can be discerned for what it is — we should think there might be some loss in it also. And the great cry that rises from all our manufacturing cities, louder than their furnace blast, is all in very deed for this, — that we manufacture everything there except men; we blanch cotton, and strengthen steel, and refine sugar, and shape pottery; but to brighten, to strengthen, to refine, or to form a single living spirit, never enters into our estimate of advantages. And all the evil to which that cry is urging our myriads can be met only in one way: not by teaching nor preaching, for to teach them is but to show them their misery, and to preach to them, if we do nothing more than preach, is to mock at it. It can be met only by a right understanding, on the part of all classes, of what kinds of labour are good for men, raising them, and making them happy; by a determined sacrifice of such convenience, or beauty, or cheapness as is to be got only by the degradation of the workman; and by equally determined demand for the products and results of healthy and ennobling labour.

23. And how, it will be asked, are these products to be recognized, and this demand to be regulated? Easily: by the observance of three broad and simple rules:

24.1. Never encourage the manufacture of any article not absolutely necessary, in the production of which Invention has no share.

25.2. Never demand an exact finish for its own sake, but only for some practical or noble end.

26.3. Never encourage imitation or copying of any kind, except for the sake of preserving records of great works.

27. The second of these principles is the only one which directly rises out of the consideration of our immediate subject; but I shall briefly explain the meaning and extent of the first also, reserving the enforcement of the third for another place.

28.1. Never encourage the manufacture of anything not necessary, in the production of which invention has no share.

29. For instance. Glass beads are utterly unnecessary, and there is no design or thought employed in their manufacture. They are formed by first drawing out the glass into rods; these rods are chopped up into fragments of the size of beads by the human hand, and the fragments are then rounded in the furnace. The men who chop up the rods sit at their work all day, their hands vibrating with a perpetual and exquisitely timed palsy, and the beads dropping beneath their vibration like hail. Neither they, nor the men who draw out the rods or fuse the fragments, have the smallest occasion for the use of any single human faculty; and every young lady, therefore, who buys glass beads is engaged in the slave-trade, and in a much more cruel one than that which we have so long been endeavouring to put down.

30. But glass cups and vessels may become the subjects of exquisite invention; and if in buying these we pay for the invention, that is to say, for the beautiful form, or colour, or engraving, and not for mere finish of execution, we are doing good to humanity.

31. So, again, the cutting of precious stones, in all ordinary cases, requires little exertion of any mental faculty; some tact and judgment in avoiding flaws, and so on, but nothing to bring out the whole mind. Every person who wears cut jewels merely for the sake of their value is, therefore, a slave-driver.

32. But the working of the goldsmith, and the various designing of grouped jewellery and enamel-work, may become the subject of the most noble human intelligence. Therefore, money spent in the purchase of well-designed plate, of precious engraved vases, cameos, or enamels, does good to humanity; and, in work of this kind, jewels may be employed to heighten its splendour; and their cutting is then a price paid for the attainment of a noble end, and thus perfectly allowable.

33. I shall perhaps press this law farther elsewhere, but our immediate concern is chiefly with the second, namely, never to demand an exact finish, when it does not lead to a noble end. For observe, I have only dwelt upon the rudeness of Gothic, or any other kind of imperfectness, as admirable, where it was impossible to get design or thought without it. If you are to have the thought of a rough and untaught man, you must have it in a rough and untaught way; but from an educated man, who can without effort express his thoughts in an educated way, take the graceful expression, and be thankful. Only get the thought, and do not silence the peasant because he cannot speak good grammar, or until you have taught him his grammar. Grammar and refinement are good things, both, only be sure of the better thing first. And thus in art, delicate finish is desirable from the greatest masters, and is always given by them. In some places Michael Angelo, Leonardo, Phidias, Perugino, Turner, all finished with the most exquisite care; and the finish they give always leads to the fuller accomplishment of their noble purposes. But lower men than these cannot finish, for it requires consummate knowledge to finish consummately, and then we must take their thoughts as they are able to give them. So the rule is simple: Always look for invention first, and after that, for such execution as will help the invention, and as the inventor is capable of without painful effort, and no more. Above all, demand no refinement of execution where there is no thought, for that is slaves' work, unredeemed. Rather choose rough work than smooth work, so only that the practical purpose be answered, and never imagine there is reason to be proud of anything that may be accomplished by patience and sand-paper.

